vender or hawker. 13. Games. See seven-up. 14. Printing. The density of characters in a printed line, usually expressed as characters per inch. —phrasal verbs. pitch in. Informal. 1. To set to work vigorously. 2. To join forces with others; help or cooperate. pitch into. Informal. To attack verbally or physically; assault. pitch on (or pitch upon). Informal. To succeed in choosing or achieving, usually quickly: pitched on the ideal solution. [Middle English pichen, probably from Old English piccean*, causative of pīcian*, to prick.]

pitch accent (pĭch äk'sĕnt') n. Linguistics. See tonic accent.

pitch-black (pĭch'bläk') adj. Color. Extremely dark; black as pitch.

pitch-blende (pĭch'blĕnd') n. A massive variety of the mineral uraninite.

[Partial translation of German Pechblende: Pech, pitch + Blende, blende; see BLENDE.]

pitch-dark (pĭch'därk') adj. Extremely dark.

pitched battle (pĭcht bät'l) n. 1. An intense battle fought in close contact by troops arranged in a predetermined formation. 2. A fiercely waged battle or struggle between opposing forces.

pitch-er¹ (pĭch'ər) n. 1. One that pitches. 2. Baseball. The player who throws the ball from the mound to the batter. 3. Sports. A seven iron used in golf.

pitch-er² (pĭch'ər) n. 1. A container for liquids, usually having a handle and a lip or spout for pouring. 2. Botany. A pitcherlike part, such as the leaf of a pitcher plant. [Middle English picher, from Old French pichier, alteration of bichier, from Medieval Latin bicārium, drinking cup, probably from Greek bikos, jar, possibly from Egyptian bik, oil vessel.]

Pitch-er (pĭch'ər), Molly. See Mary Ludwig Hays McCauley.

pitcher plant (pĭch'ər plänt) n. Any of various insectivorous plants of the genera Sarracenia, Nepenthes, or Darlingtonia, having pitcherlike leaves that attract and trap insects.

pitch-fork (pĭch'fôrk') n. A large, long-handled fork with sharp, widely spaced prongs for lifting and pitching hay. — v. tr. pitch-forked, pitch-fork-ing, pitch-forks. To lift or toss with or as if with a pitchfork. [Alteration (influenced by pichen, to throw), of Middle English pikforke: pik, pick; see PICK² or pik, spike; see PIKE⁵ + forke, fork; see FORK.]

pitch-ing niblick (pĭch'ĭng nĭb'lik) n. Sports. An eight iron used in golf.

pitch-man (pĭch'mən) n. 1. A hawker of small wares, as on the streets or at a carnival. 2. One who makes aggressive selling or promotional efforts. 3. One who delivers commercials on radio or television.

pitch-out (pĭch'out') n. 1. Baseball. A pitch deliberately thrown high and away from the batter to make it easier for the catcher to throw out a base runner who is standing off a base or attempting to steal. 2. Football. A lateral pass from the back receiving the snap from the center to another back behind the line of scrimmage.

pitch pine (pĭch pīn) n. An eastern North American pine tree (Pinus rigida) that yields pitch or turpentine.

pitch pipe (pĭch pīp) n. Music. A small pipe that, when sounded, gives the standard pitch for a piece of music or for tuning an instrument.

pitch-stone (pĭch'stōn') n. Any of various volcanic glasses distinguished by their dull pitchlike luster. [Translation of German Pechstein.] pitch-y (pĭch'ē) adj. pitch-i-er, pitch-i-est. 1. Full of or covered with pitch.

2. Resembling pitch in consistency. 3. Extremely dark; black. —pitch/i-ness n.

pit·e·ous (pĭt'ē-əs) adj. 1. Demanding or arousing pity: a piteous appeal for help. See Synonyms at pathetic. 2. Archaic. Pitying; compassionate. [Middle English, from Old French piteus, from Late Latin pietōsus, pīetōsus, merciful, from Latin pietās, pīetās, compassion. See PIETY.] —pit'e-ous-ly adv.

—pit'e-ous-ness n.

Pi·teș·ti (pī-těsh'tī) A city of south-central Romania west-northwest of Bucharest. It is a commercial and manufacturing center. Population, 149,684.

pit·fall (pĭt'fôl') n. 1. An unapparent source of trouble or danger; a hidden hazard: “potential pitfalls stemming from their optimistic inflation assumptions” (New York Times). 2. A concealed hole in the ground that serves as a trap.

pith (pĭth) n. 1. Botany. The soft, spongelike, central cylinder of the stems of most flowering plants, composed mainly of parenchyma. 2. Zoology. The soft inner substance of a feather or hair. 3. The essential or central part; the heart or essence. See Synonyms at substance. 4. Strength; vigor; mettle.

5. Significance; importance. 6. Archaic. Spinal cord or bone marrow. — v. tr.

pithed, pith-ing, piths. 1. To remove the pith from (a plant stem). 2. To sever or destroy the spinal cord of, usually by means of a needle inserted into the vertebral canal. 3. To kill (cattle) by cutting the spinal cord. [Middle English, from Old English pitha.] pith·e·can·thro·pus (pĭth'ĭ-kăn'thrə-pəs, -kăn-thrō'pəs) n. An extinct primate postulated from bones found in Java in 1891 and originally designated Pithecanthropus erectus because it was thought to represent a species evolutionarily between apes and human beings. Pithecanthropus is now classified as Homo erectus. [New Latin, genus name : Greek pithēkos, ape + Greek anthrōpos, man.]

—pith'e-can-throp'ic (-kăn-thrōp'ĭk) adj. —pith'e-can'thro-pine (-kăn'thrə-pīn') adj.

pith·e·coid (pĭth'ĭ-koid', pī-thē'koid) adj. 1. Resembling or relating to the apes, especially the anthropoid apes. 2. Of or belonging to a genus (Pithecia) of small, slender South American monkeys related to the titi. [Greek pithēkos, ape + -OID.]

pith helmet (pĭth hēl'mĭt) n. A lightweight hat made from dried pith and worn in tropical countries for protection from the sun.

pith ray (pĭth rā) n. The parenchymatous tissue that extends between the vascular bundles of a stem or root.

pith-y (pĭth'ē) adj. pith-i-er, pith-i-est. 1. Precisely meaningful; forceful and brief: a pithy comment. 2. Consisting of or resembling pith. —pith/i-ly adv. —pith/i-ness n.

pit-i-a-ble (pĭt'ē-ə-bəl) adj. 1. Arousing or deserving of pity or compassion; lamentable. 2. Arousing disdainful pity. See Synonyms at pathetic. —pit/i-a-ble-ness n. —pit/i-a-bly adv.

pit-i-ful (pĭt'i-fəl) adj. 1. Inspiring or deserving pity. 2. Arousing contemptuous pity, as through ineptitude or inadequacy. See Synonyms at pathetic. 3. Archaic. Filled with pity or compassion. —pit/i-ful-ly adv. —pit/i-ful-ness n.

pit-i-less (pĭt'i-līs) adj. Having no pity; merciless. —pit/i-less-ly adv. —pit/i-less-ness n.

Pit-kin (pĭt'kĭn), Walter Broughton. 1878-1953. American journalist and educator who wrote the popular Life Begins at Forty (1932).

pit-man (pĭt'mən) n. 1. pl. pit-men (-mĕn). A worker employed inside a pit in various industrial operations, as in a coal mine. 2. pl. pit-mans (-mənz). See connecting rod.

Pit-man (pĭt'mən), Sir Isaac. 1813-1897. British educator and inventor (1837) of a system of shorthand.

Pit-ney (pĭt'nē), Mahlon. 1858-1924. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1912-1922).

pi-ton (pē'tōn') n. Sports. A metal spike fitted at one end with an eye for securing a rope and driven into rock or ice as a support in mountain climbing. [French, from Old French, nail.]

Pi-tot-stat-ic tube (pē'tō-stăt'ĭk tōōb, pē-tō'-) n. A device consisting of a Pitot tube and a static tube combined to measure simultaneously the total and static pressure in a fluid stream. It can be used in aircraft to determine relative wind speed.

Pi-tot tube (pē'tō tōōb, pē-tō') n. A device, essentially a tube set parallel to the direction of fluid-stream movement and attached to a manometer, used to measure the total pressure of the fluid stream. [After Henri Pitot (1695-1771), French physicist.]

Pit River¹ (pĭt rĭv'ər) n. See Achomawi (n., sense 1).

Pit River² (pĭt rĭv'ər) A river, about 322 km (200 mi) long, of northern California flowing south and west to the Sacramento River.

pit-saw also pit saw (pĭt'sô') n. A large headsaw for cutting logs, operated jointly by a person standing above the log and another in a pit underneath.

pit stop (pīt stöp) n. Sports. 1. A stop at a pit for refueling or service during an automobile race. 2. Informal. a. A brief stop for rest and refreshment, especially during an automobile trip. b. A place where such a stop is made.

Pitt¹ (pīt), William First Earl of Chatham. Known as “Pitt the Elder.” 1708-1778. British political leader and orator who directed his country’s military effort during the Seven Years’ War (1756-1763).

Pitt² (pīt), William Second Earl of Chatham. Known as “Pitt the Younger.” 1759-1806. British prime minister (1783-1801 and 1804-1806). He accomplished the Act of Union between Ireland and Britain (1800) but was unsuccessful in his efforts to achieve Catholic emancipation.

pit-ta (pīt’ə) n. Any of several brightly colored perching birds of the family Pittidae that live in forests of Asia, Australia, and Africa and have a strong bill, short tail, and long legs. [Telugu piṭṭa, bird.]

pit-tance (pīt’ns) n. 1. A meager monetary allowance, wage, or remuneration. 2. A very small amount: not a pittance of remorse. [Middle English pitance, from Old French, allowance of food to a monk or poor person, from Medieval Latin pīetantia, from pīetāns*, pīetant- present participle of ·pīetāre, to show compassion, from Latin pietās, pīetās, piety. See PITY.]

pit-ted (pīt’id) adj. 1. Marked by pits. 2. Having the pit removed: pitted dates.

pit-ter-pat-ter (pīt’ər-păt’ər) n. A rapid series of light, tapping sounds. — v. intr. pit-ter-pat-tered, pit-ter-pat-ter-ing, pit-ter-pat-ters. To make or move with a series of light, tapping sounds: rain pitter-pattering on the roof. [Imitative.]

pit-tos-po-rum (pī-tōs’pər-əm, pīt’ə-spōr’əm, -spōr’-) n. Any of various evergreen shrubs or plants of the genus Pittosporum, native to the warmer regions of the Old World and grown as ornamental or hedge plants in the southern United States and Pacific coastal states. [New Latin, genus name : Greek pissa, pitta, pitch + New Latin spora, spore; see SPORE.]

Pitts-burg (pīts’bûrg’) 1. A city of western California at the junction of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers northeast of Oakland. It is a manufacturing center in a fishing and farming region. Population, 47,564. 2. A city of southeast Kansas near the Missouri border. Founded in 1876 as a mining town, it now has diversified industries. Population, 17,775.

Pitts-burgh (pīts’bûrg’) A city of southwest Pennsylvania at the point where the confluence of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers forms the Ohio River. Fort Duquesne was built on the site by the French c. 1750 and fell to the British in 1758, when it was renamed Fort Pitt. The village surrounding the fort grew rapidly after the opening of the Northwest Territory. The city today is highly industrialized. Population, 369,879.

Pitts-field (pĭts'fĕld') A city of western Massachusetts northwest of Springfield near the New York border. It is a center of the Berkshire Hills resort area. Population, 48,622.

pi-tu-i-cyte (pĭ-tōō'ī-sīt', -tyōō'-) n. A small branching cell of the posterior lobe of the pituitary gland. [PITUI(TARY) + -CYTE.]

pi-tu-i-tar-y (pĭ-tōō'ī-tĕr'ē, -tyōō'-) n. pl. pi-tu-i-tar-ies. 1. The pituitary gland. 2. Medicine. An extract from the anterior or posterior lobes of the pituitary gland, prepared for therapeutic use. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the pituitary gland. 2. Of or secreting phlegm or mucus; mucous. [From Latin pītuītārius, of phlegm (from the early belief that it produced mucus), from pītuīta, phlegm. See peiə- in Appendix.]

pituitary gland (pĭ-tōō'ī-tĕr'ē glānd) n. A small, oval endocrine gland attached to the base of the vertebrate brain and consisting of an anterior and a posterior lobe, the secretions of which control the other endocrine glands and influence growth, metabolism, and maturation. Also called hypophysis, pituitary body.

pit viper (pĭt vī'pər) n. Any of various venomous snakes of the family Crotalidae, such as a copperhead, rattlesnake, or fer-de-lance, characterized by a small sensory pit below each eye.

pit-y (pĭt'ē) n. pl. pit-ies. 1. Sympathy and sorrow aroused by the misfortune or suffering of another. 2. A matter of regret: It's a pity she can't attend the reception. — v. pit-ied, pit-y-ing, pit-ies. — v. tr. To feel pity for. — v. intr. To feel pity. — idiom. have pity on (or take pity on). To show compassion for. [Middle English pite, from Old French, from Latin pietās, piety, compassion, from pius, dutiful.] — pit'y-ing-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: pity, compassion, commiseration, sympathy, condolence, empathy.

These nouns signify sympathetic, kindly concern aroused by the misfortune, affliction, or suffering of another. Pity often implies a feeling of sorrow that inclines one to help or to show mercy: "Pity is the feeling which arrests the mind in the presence of whatsoever is grave and constant in human sufferings and unites it with the human sufferer" (James Joyce). Compassion denotes deep awareness of the suffering of another and the wish to relieve it: "Compassion is not weakness, and concern for the unfortunate is not socialism" (Hubert H. Humphrey). Commiseration signifies the expression of pity or sorrow: "They not unfrequently wonder why, from being born blind, they should be held to be objects of commiseration" (Benjamin C. Brodie). Sympathy as it is compared here denotes the act of or capacity for sharing in the sorrows or troubles of another: "They had little sympathy to spare for their unfortunate enemies" (William Hickling Prescott). Condolence is a formal, conventional expression of pity, usually to relatives upon a death: We extended our condolences to the bereaved family. Empathy is a vicarious identification with and understanding of another's situation, feelings, and motives: Empathy for the criminal's childhood misery does not imply exoneration of the crimes he committed as an adult.

pit·y·ri·a·sis (pīt'ī-rī'ə-sīs) n. pl. pit·y·ri·a·ses (-sēz'). Any of various skin diseases of humans and animals, characterized by epidermal shedding of flaky scales. [Greek pituriasis, from pituron, grain husk, dandruff.]

più (pyōō) adv. Music. More. Used to qualify an adjective or another adverb in directions. [Italian, from Latin plūs. See pelə¹ in Appendix.]

Piu·ra (pyōōr'ə, pyōō'rā) A city of northwest Peru near the Pacific Ocean. Founded by Pizarro in 1532, it is the oldest Spanish settlement in Peru. Population 144,609.

Pi·us II (pī'əs), Originally Enea Silvio Piccolomini. 1405-1464. Pope (1458-1464) noted for his unsuccessful attempt to lead a crusade against the Turks.

Pi·us V (pī'əs), Saint Originally Antonio Ghislieri. 1504-1572. Pope (1566-1572). A leading figure of the Catholic Reformation, he excommunicated Elizabeth I of England.

Pi·us VII (pī'əs), Originally Barnaba Gregorio Chiaramonti. 1742-1823. Pope (1800-1823) who was forced to crown Napoleon emperor in 1804.

Pi·us IX (pī'əs), Originally Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti. 1792-1878. Pope (1846-1878) who summoned the First Vatican Council (1869-1870).

Pi·us X (pī'əs), Saint Originally Giuseppe Melchiorre Sarto. 1835-1914. Pope (1903-1914) who was strongly opposed to religious modernism.

Pi·us XI (pī'əs), Originally Ambrogio Damiano Achille Ratti. 1857-1939. Pope (1922-1939) who signed a treaty with Benito Mussolini granting papal sovereignty over Vatican City.

Pi·us XII (pī'əs), Originally Eugenio Pacelli. 1876-1958. Pope (1939-1958) who maintained neutrality during World War II. He was later severely criticized for not taking forceful measures to aid European Jews.

Pi·ute (pī'yōōt') n. Variant of Paiute.

piv·ot (pīv'ət) n. 1. A short rod or shaft on which a related part rotates or swings. 2. A person or thing on which something depends or turns; the central or crucial factor. 3. The act of turning on or as if on a pivot. — v. piv·ot·ed, piv·ot·ing, piv·ots. — v. tr. 1. To mount on, attach by, or provide with a pivot or pivots. 2. To cause to rotate, revolve, or turn. — v. intr. To turn on or as if on a pivot: "The plot... lacks direction, pivoting on Hamlet's incertitude" (G. Wilson Knight). [French, from Old French.] — piv'ot·a·ble adj.

piv·ot·al (pīv'ə-tl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or serving as a pivot. 2. Being of vital or central importance; crucial: "Its pivotal location has also exposed it to periodic invasions" (Henry A. Kissinger). — piv'ot·al·ly adv.

pivot joint (piv'ət joint) n. A joint in which a bone rotates around another; a joint permitting only rotating movement.

pix¹ (pīks) n. A plural of pic.

pix² (pīks) n. Ecclesiastical. Variant of pyx.

pix-el (pīk'səl, -səl') n. Computer Science. The smallest image-forming unit of a video display. [PIX¹ + EL(EMENT).]

pix-ie (pīk'sē) n. Variant of pixy.

pix-i-lat-ed or pix-il-lat-ed (pīk'sə-lā'tīd) adj. 1. Behaving as if mentally unbalanced; very eccentric. 2. Whimsical; prankish. 3. Slang. Intoxicated; drunk. [From PIXY.] — pix'i-la'tion n.

pix-y or pix-ie (pīk'sē) n. pl. pix-ies. A fairylike or elfin creature, especially one that is mischievous; a playful sprite. — adj. Playfully mischievous. [Origin unknown.] — pix'y-ish adj.

Pi-zar-ro (pī-zār'ō, pē-thär'ō, -sär'-), Francisco. 1475?-1541. Spanish explorer and conqueror of the Inca Empire of Peru (1531-1533). He founded the city of Lima in 1535.

pizz. abbr. Music. Pizzicato.

piz-za (pēt'sə) n. A baked pie of Italian origin consisting of a shallow breadlike crust covered with seasoned tomato sauce, cheese, and often other toppings, such as sausage or olives. [Italian, pie, tart, pizza.]

piz-zazz or piz-zaz (pī-zāz') n. Slang. 1. Dazzling style; flamboyance; flair. 2. Vigorous spirit; energy or excitement. [Origin unknown.]

piz-ze-ri-a (pēt'sə-rē'ə) n. A place where pizzas are made and sold. [Italian, from pizza, pizza, pie.]

piz-zi-ca-to (pīt'sī-kā'tō) Music. adj. Abbr. pizz. Played by plucking rather than bowing the strings. — n. pl. piz-zi-ca-ti (-tē). A pizzicato note or passage. [Italian, past participle of pizzicare, to pluck, from pizzare, to prick, from pizzo, point.] — piz'zi-ca'to adv.

piz-zle (pīz'əl) n. 1. The penis of an animal, especially a bull. 2. A whip made from a bull's penis. [Possibly from Low German pēsel, diminutive of Middle Low German pese, penis, tendon.]

PK abbr. Psychokinesis.

pk. abbr. 1. Pack. 2. Park. 3. Peak. 4. Peck.

pkg. abbr. Package.

pkt. abbr. Packet.

PKU abbr. Phenylketonuria.

pkwy abbr. Parkway.

pky abbr. Parkway.

pl. abbr. 1. Or Pl. Place. 2. Printing & Photography. Plate. 3. Plural.

PL/1 (pē'əl-wūn') n. Computer Science. A programming language designed for scientific and commercial uses at varying levels of complexity. [p(rogramming) l(anguage) 1.] plac·a·ble (plăk'ə-bəl, plā'kə-) adj. Easily calmed or pacified; tolerant. [Middle English, agreeable, from Old French, from Latin placābilis, from placāre, to calm. See plāk⁻¹ in Appendix.] — plac'a·bil'i·ty n. — plac'a·bly adv.

plac·ard (plăk'ărd', -ərd) n. 1. A sign or notice for display in a public place.

2. A small card or plaque, such as a nameplate on a door. — v. tr. plac·ard·ed, plac·ard·ing, plac·ards. 1. To announce or advertise by means of placards.

2. To post placards on or in. 3. To display as a placard. [Middle English, official document, from Old French, from plaquier, to plaster, piece together, from Middle Dutch placken, to patch.] — plac'ard'er n.

pla·cate (plā'kāt', plăk'ăt') v. tr. pla·cat·ed, pla·cat·ing, pla·cates. To allay the anger of, especially by making concessions; appease. See Synonyms at pacify. [Latin placāre, placāt-, to calm. See plāk⁻¹ in Appendix.] — pla'cat'er n.

— pla·ca'tion (plā-kā'shən) n. — pla'ca·to'ry (-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē), pla'ca'tive (-kā'tiv) adj.

place (plās) n. 1. a. An area with definite or indefinite boundaries; a portion of space. b. Room or space, especially adequate space: There is place for everyone at the back of the room. 2. a. The particular portion of space occupied by or allocated to a person or thing. b. A building or an area set aside for a specified purpose: a place of worship. 3. a. A dwelling; a house: bought a place on the lake. b. A business establishment or office. c. A locality, such as a town or a city: visited many places. 4. Often Place. Abbr. pl., Pl. A public square or street with houses in a town. 5. a. A space in which one person, such as a passenger or a spectator, can sit or stand. b. A setting for one person at a table. 6. A position regarded as belonging to someone or something else; stead: She was chosen in his place. 7. A particular point that one has reached, as in a book: I have lost my place. 8. A particular spot, as on the body: the place that hurts. 9. a. The proper or designated role or function: the place of the media in a free society. b. The proper or customary position or order: These books are out of place. c. A suitable setting or occasion: not the place to argue. d. The appropriate right or duty: not her place to criticize. 10. Social station: He overstepped his place. 11. A particular situation or circumstance: Put yourself in my place. 12. High rank or status. 13. A job, post, or position: found a place in the company. 14. Relative position in a series; standing. 15. Games. Second position for betting purposes, as in a horserace. 16. The specified stage in a list of points to be made, as in an argument: in the first place. 17. Mathematics. The position of a figure in a numeral or series. — v. placed, plac·ing, plac·es. — v. tr. 1. To put in or as if in a particular place or position; set. 2. To put in a specified relation or order: Place the words in alphabetical order. 3. To offer for consideration: placed the matter before the board. 4. To find accommodation or employment for. 5. To put into a particular condition: placed him under arrest. 6. To arrange for the publication or display of: place an advertisement in the newspaper. 7. To appoint to a post: placed her in a key position. 8. a. To rank in an order or a sequence: I'd place him second best. b. To estimate: placed the distance at 100 feet. 9. To identify or classify in a particular context: could not place that person's face. 10. a. To give an order for: place a bet. b. To apply or arrange for: place an order. 11. To adjust (one's voice) for the best possible effects. — v. intr. Sports & Games. To arrive among the first three finishers in a race, especially to finish second. — idioms. in place. 1. In the appropriate or usual position or order: With everything in place, she started the slide show. 2. In the same spot; without moving forwards or backwards: While marching in place, the band played a popular tune. in place of. Instead of. keep (one's) place (or know (one's) place). To recognize one's social position and act according to traditional decorum. put (someone) in his or her place. To lower the dignity of (someone); humble. place in the sun. A dominant or favorable position or situation. [Middle English, from Old English plæce, Old French, open space (from Medieval Latin placea, from Vulgar Latin plattea*) both from Latin platēa, broad street, from Greek plateia (hodos), broad (street), feminine of platus. See plat- in Appendix.] — place'a-ble adj. — plac'er n.

pla-ce-bo (plə-sē'bō) n. pl. pla-ce-bos or pla-ce-boes. 1. a. Medicine. A substance containing no medication and prescribed or given to reinforce a patient's expectation to get well. b. An inactive substance or preparation used as a control in an experiment or test to determine the effectiveness of a medicinal drug. 2. Something of no intrinsic remedial value that is used to appease or reassure another. 3. (plä-chä'bō) Roman Catholic Church. The service or office of vespers for the dead. [Middle English, from Late Latin placēbō, I shall please (the first word of the first antiphon of the service), first person sing. future tense of Latin placēre, to please. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

placebo effect (plə-sē'bō ĭ-fěkt') n. A beneficial effect in a patient following a particular treatment that arises from the patient's expectations concerning the treatment rather than from the treatment itself.

place-hold-er (plās'hōl'dər) n. 1. One who holds an office or a place, especially: a. One who acts as a deputy or a proxy. b. One who holds an appointed office in a government. 2. In a mathematical or logical expression, a symbol that may be replaced by the name of any element of a set. 3. In the decimal form of a number, a digit that is not significant.

place kick (plās kĭk) n. Football. A kick, as for a field goal, for which the ball is held or propped up in a fixed position on the ground. — place/kick' (plās'kĭk') v. — place/-kick'er n.

place·man (plās'mən) n. Chiefly British. One who has a political appointment in the government.

place mat (plās măt) n. A protective table mat for a single setting of dishes and flatware.

place·ment (plās'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of placing or arranging. b. The state of being placed or arranged. 2. a. The finding of suitable accommodation or employment for applicants. b. Assignment of students to appropriate classes or programs. 3. Football. a. The setting of the ball in position for a place kick. b. A place kick.

pla·cen·ta (plə-sən'tə) n. pl. pla·cen·tas or pla·cen·tae (-tē). 1. a. A membranous vascular organ that develops in female mammals during pregnancy, lining the uterine wall and partially enveloping the fetus, to which it is attached by the umbilical cord. Following birth, the placenta is expelled. b. An organ with similar functions in some nonmammalian animals, such as certain sharks and reptiles. 2. Botany. The part within the ovary of a flowering plant to which the ovules are attached. [New Latin, from Latin, flat cake, alteration of Greek plakoenta, from accusative of plakoeis, flat, from plax, plak-, flat land, surface. See plāk⁻¹ in Appendix.] —pla·cen'tal adj.

plac·en·ta·tion (plās'ən-tā'shən) n. 1. a. Formation of a placenta in the uterus. b. The type or structure of a placenta. 2. Botany. Arrangement of placentas within the ovary.

Pla·cen·tia (plə-sən'chə, -shə) A city of southern California east-northeast of Long Beach. It is a residential community with light industries. Population, 41,259.

Placentia Bay (plə-sən'chə bā) An inlet of the Atlantic Ocean in southeast Newfoundland, Canada. On August 14, 1941, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill signed the Atlantic Charter, setting forth the Allied aims for a postwar settlement, while aboard the British battleship Prince of Wales anchored in the bay.

plac·er (plās'ər) n. 1. A glacial or alluvial deposit of sand or gravel containing eroded particles of valuable minerals. 2. A place where a placer deposit is washed to extract its mineral content. [Spanish, shoal, placer, from Catalan placer, shoal, from plassa, place, from Medieval Latin placea. See PLACE.]

placer mining (plās'ər mī'nĭng) n. The obtaining of minerals from placers by washing or dredging. —placer miner n.

Plac·er·ville (plās'ər-vĭl') A city of east-central California east-northeast of Sacramento. It grew with the discovery of gold nearby in 1848 and is still a mining center. Population, 6,739.

place setting (plās sēt'ĭng) n. A table service for one person.

plac·id (plās'ĭd) adj. 1. Undisturbed by tumult or disorder; calm or quiet. See Synonyms at calm. 2. Satisfied; complacent. [Latin placidus, from placēre, to please. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.] —pla-cid/i-ty (plə-sīd'ī-tē), plac'id-ness (plās'īd-nīs) n. —plac'id-ly adv.

Plac'id (plās'īd), Lake. A lake of northeast New York in the Adirondack Mountains. It is a noted winter sports center.

plack-et (plāk'īt) n. 1. A slit in a dress, blouse, or skirt. 2. A pocket, especially in a woman's skirt. [Origin unknown.]

plac-oid (plāk'oid) adj. Platelike, as the hard toothlike scales of sharks, skates, and rays. [Greek plax, plak-, flat land, surface; see plāk-¹ in Appendix + -OID.]

pla-fond (plə-fōn', plā-fōN') n. A decorated ceiling. [French : plat, flat; see PLATE + fond, base, bottom; see FOND².]

pla-gal (plā'gəl) adj. Music. 1. Of or being a medieval mode having a range from the fourth below to the fifth above its final tone. 2. Of or being a cadence with the subdominant chord immediately preceding the tonic chord. [Medieval Latin plagālis, from plaga, plagal mode, from plagi-us, plagal, from Medieval Greek plagios (ēkhos), plagal (mode), from Greek, oblique, from plagos, side. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

plage (plāzh) n. 1. A sandy beach at a seaside resort. 2. A bright and intensely hot area in the sun's chromosphere, usually associated with a sunspot. [French, from Italian piaggia, ultimately from Greek plagia, neuter pl. of plagios, oblique, slanting. See PLAGAL.]

pla-gia-rism (plā'jə-rīz'əm) n. 1. The act of plagiarizing. 2. Something plagiarized. [From PLAGIARY.] —pla'gia-rist n. —pla'gia-ris'tic adj.

pla-gia-rize (plā'jə-rīz') v. pla-gia-rized, pla-gia-riz-ing, pla-gia-riz-es.
— v. tr. 1. To use and pass off as one's own (the ideas or writings of another). 2. To appropriate for use as one's own passages or ideas from (another). — v. intr. To put forth as original to oneself the ideas or words of another. —pla-gia-riz'er n.

pla-gia-ry (plā'jə-rē) n. pl. pla-gia-ries. 1. Plagiarism. 2. Archaic. One who plagiarizes. [Latin plagiārius, kidnapper, plagiarist, from plagium, kidnapping, from plaga, net. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

plagio- pref. Slanting; inclining: plagiotropism. [Greek, oblique, from plagios, from plagos, side. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

pla-gi-o-clase (plā'jē-ə-klās', -klāz', plāj'ē-) n. Any of a common rock-forming series of triclinic feldspars, consisting of mixtures of sodium and calcium aluminum silicates. Also called oligoclase [Greek plagio-, plagio- + Greek klasis, breaking (from klan, to break).]

pla-gi-ot-ro-pism (plā'jē-ōt'rə-pīz'əm) n. Botany. The tendency to grow at an oblique or horizontal angle. Used of roots, stems, or branches.

—pla'gi-o-tro'pic (-ə-trō'pīk, -trōp'īk) adj. —pla'gi-o-tro'pi-cal-ly adv.

plague (plāg) n. 1. A widespread affliction or calamity, especially one seen as divine retribution. 2. A sudden destructive influx or injurious outbreak: a plague of locusts; a plague of accidents. 3. A cause of annoyance; a nuisance: “the plague of social jabbering” (George Santayana). 4. A highly infectious, usually fatal, epidemic disease, especially bubonic plague. — v. tr. plagued, plagu-ing, plagues. 1. To pester or annoy persistently or incessantly. See Synonyms at harass. 2. To afflict with or as if with a disease or calamity: “Runaway inflation further plagued the wage- or salary-earner” (Edwin O. Reischauer). [Middle English plage, blow, calamity, plague, from Late Latin plāga, from Latin, blow, wound; see plāk-² in Appendix. V., Middle English plaghen from Middle Dutch, from plaghe, plague, from Late Latin plāga.] — plagu'er n.

pla-guy also pla-guey (plā'gē) adj. Vexatious; bothersome. — pla'guy, pla'gui-ly adv.

plai-ce (plās) n. pl. plai-ce or plai-es. 1. A large edible marine flatfish (Pleuronectes platessa) of western European waters. 2. Any of various flatfishes, such as Hippoglossoides platessoides of North American Atlantic waters, related to the plaice. [Middle English, from Old French plais, from Vulgar Latin platix*, alteration of Late Latin platessa, probably ultimately from Greek platus, broad. See plat- in Appendix.]

plaid (plād) n. 1. A rectangular woolen scarf of a tartan pattern worn over the left shoulder by Scottish Highlanders. 2. a. Cloth with a tartan or checked pattern. b. A pattern of this kind. [Scottish Gaelic plaidē.] — plaid adj.

plaid-ed (plād'id) adj. 1. Made of plaid or having a plaid pattern. 2. Wearing a plaid.

plain (plān) adj. plain-er, plain-est. Abbr. pln. 1. Free from obstructions; open; clear: in plain view. 2. Obvious to the mind; evident: make one's intention plain. See Synonyms at apparent. 3. Not elaborate or complicated; simple: plain food. 4. Straightforward; frank or candid: plain talk. 5. Not mixed with other substances; pure: plain water. 6. Common in rank or station; average; ordinary: a plain man. 7. Not pretentious; unaffected. 8. Marked by little or no ornamentation or decoration. 9. Not dyed, twilled, or patterned: a plain fabric. 10. Lacking beauty or distinction: a plain face. 11. Sheer; utter; unqualified: plain stupidity. 12. Archaic. Having no visible elevation or depression; flat; level. — n. Abbr. pln. 1. a. An extensive, level, usually treeless area of land. b. A broad, level expanse, as a part of the sea floor or a lunar mare. 2. Something free of ornamentation or extraneous matter. — adv. Informal. Clearly; simply: plain stubborn. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin plānus. See pelə-² in Appendix.] — plain'ly adv. — plain'ness n.

SYNONYMS: plain, modest, simple, unostentatious, unpretentious. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “not ornate, ostentatious, or showy”: a plain hair style; a modest cottage; a simple dark suit; an unostentatious office; an unpretentious country church.

ANTONYM: ornate

plain·chant (plān'chǎnt') n. Roman Catholic Church. See plainsong (n., sense 2). [French plain-chant (translation of Medieval Latin cantus plānus): plain, plain; see PLAIN + chant, song; see CHANT.]

plain·clothes man or plain·clothes·man (plān'klōz'mən, -klōthz'-) n. A member of a police force, especially a detective, who wears civilian clothes on duty.

Plain·field (plān'fēld') A city of northeast New Jersey southwest of Newark. Settled in 1684, it was formerly a residential town but has now become a trade and industrial center in a thickly populated area. Population, 46,567.

plain·Jane (plān'jān') adj. Lacking adornment or pretension; basic or simple.

plain·laid (plān'lād') adj. Made of three strands laid together with a right-hand twist. Used of a rope.

Plain People (plān pē'pəl) pl.n. Members of the Mennonites, Amish, or Dunkers, noted for their plain dress and simple style of life.

plain sailing (plān sāl'ing) n. Informal. Easy progress over a smooth and direct course: After the editing of the book had been finished, it was plain sailing to the end of the project. [Possibly variant of plane sailing, navigation as if on a plane surface, disregarding the curvature of the earth.]

Plains Indian (plānz ɪn'dē-ən) n. A member of any of the Native American peoples inhabiting the Great Plains of the United States and Canada. The Plains Indians spoke a variety of unrelated languages but shared certain cultural features such as nomadic buffalo hunting, the use of conical tepees, and a reliance on the horse in hunting and warfare.

plains·man (plānz'mən) n. An inhabitant or a settler of the plains, especially of the prairie regions of the United States.

plain·song (plān'sōng', -sōng') n. Roman Catholic Church. 1. a. A Gregorian chant. b. A melody to which contrapuntal voices are added in Gregorian chant. 2. Any medieval liturgical music without strict meter and traditionally sung without accompaniment. In this sense, also called plainchant [Translation of Medieval Latin cantus plānus.]

plain·spo·ken (plān'spō'kən) adj. Frank; straightforward; blunt.
—plain·spo·ken·ness n.

plaint (plānt) n. 1. A complaint. 2. An utterance of grief or sorrow; a lamentation. [Middle English, from Old French plainte, from Latin plānctus, lament, from past participle of plangere, to strike one's breast, lament. See plāk-² in Appendix.]

plain text or plain·text (plān'tĕkst') n. The original form of a message as opposed to the encrypted form.

plain-tiff (plān'tif) n. Abbr. plf. Law. The party that institutes a suit in a court. [Middle English plaintif, from Anglo-Norman pleintif, from Old French plaintif, aggrieved. See PLAINTIVE.]

plain-tive (plān'tiv) adj. Expressing sorrow; mournful or melancholy. [Middle English plaintif, from Old French, aggrieved, lamenting, from plaint, complaint. See PLAINT.] — plain'tive-ly adv. — plain'tive-ness n.

Plain-view (plān'vyōō') 1. An unincorporated community of southeast New York on western Long Island. It is mainly residential. Population, 26,207. 2. A city of northwest Texas south of Amarillo. The city has large meat-packing and meat-processing industries. Population, 21,700.

Plain-ville (plān'vil') A town of central Connecticut southwest of Hartford. It is a manufacturing center in a farming area. Population, 17,392.

plain weave (plān wēv) n. A weave in which the filling threads and the warp threads interlace alternately, forming a checkerboard pattern. Also called taffeta weave plain-wo-ven (plān'wō'vən) adj. Made in plain weave.

plait (plāt, plät) n. 1. A braid, especially of hair. 2. A pleat. — v. tr. plait-ed, plait-ing, plaits. 1. To braid. 2. To pleat. 3. To make by braiding. [Middle English pleit, fold, braid, possibly from pleiten, to fold, braid, alteration (influenced by Old French pleit, fold), of Old French plier, pleiir, from Latin plicāre, to fold. See plek- in Appendix.] — plait'er n.

plan (plān) n. 1. A scheme, program, or method worked out beforehand for the accomplishment of an objective: a plan of attack. 2. A proposed or tentative project or course of action: had no plans for the evening. 3. A systematic arrangement of important parts; an outline or a sketch: the plan of a story. 4. A drawing or diagram made to scale showing the structure or arrangement of something. 5. In perspective rendering, one of several imaginary planes perpendicular to the line of vision between the viewer and the object being depicted. — v. planned, plan-ning, plans. — v. tr. 1. To formulate a scheme or program for the accomplishment, enactment, or attainment of: plan a campaign. 2. To have as a specific aim or purpose; intend: They plan to buy a house. 3. To draw or make a graphic representation of. — v. intr. To make plans. [French, alteration (influenced by plan, flat surface); see PLAIN, of plant, ground plan, map (from planter, to plant, from Latin plantāre, from planta, sole of the foot). See plat- in Appendix.] — plan'ner n.

SYNONYMS: plan, blueprint, design, project, scheme, strategy. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a method or program in accordance with which something is to be done or accomplished”: has no vacation plans; a blueprint for the reorganization of the company; social conventions that are a product of human design; an urban-renewal project; a new scheme for power conservation; a strat- plan- pref. Variant of plano-.

pla·nar (plā'nār, -nār') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or situated in a plane. 2. Flat: a planar surface. 3. Having a two-dimensional characteristic. [Late Latin plānāris, flat, from Latin plānus. See PLAIN.] —pla·nar'i·ty (plā-nār'ī-tē) n.

pla·nar·i·an (plə-nār'ē-ən) n. Any of various small, chiefly freshwater turbellarian flatworms of the order Tricladida, having soft, broad, ciliated bodies, a three-branched digestive cavity, and the ability to regenerate body parts. [From New Latin Plānāria, genus name, from feminine of Late Latin plānārius, on level ground, from plānus, flat. See pelə⁻² in Appendix.]

pla·na·tion (plā-nā'shən) n. The process of erosion and deposition in which a nearly level surface is produced, as by streams, wind, or ocean currents. [Latin plānum, flat surface; see PLANE¹ + -ATION.]

planch·et (plān'chīt) n. 1. A flat disk of metal ready for stamping as a coin; a coin blank. 2. A small shallow metal container in which a radioactive substance is deposited for measurement of its activity. [Diminutive of planch, flat plate, slab, from Middle English plaunch, plank, from Old French planche, from Late Latin planca, from feminine of Latin plancus, flat. See plāk⁻¹ in Appendix.]

plan·chette (plān-shēt') n. A small triangular board supported by two casters and a vertical pencil which, when lightly touched by the fingertips, is said to spell out subconscious or supernatural messages. [French, from Old French, diminutive of planche, board. See PLANCHET.]

Planck (plängk), Max Karl Ernst Ludwig. 1858-1947. German physicist. He won a 1918 Nobel Prize for discoveries in connection with quantum theory.

Planck's constant (plängks kōn'stənt) n. Symbol h The constant of proportionality relating the energy of a photon to the frequency of that photon. Its value is approximately 6.626×10^{-34} joule-second. [After Max Karl Ernst Ludwig PLANCK.]

plane¹ (plān) n. 1. Mathematics. A surface containing all the straight lines that connect any two points on it. 2. A flat or level surface. 3. A level of development, existence, or achievement: scholarship on a high plane. 4. An airplane or a hydroplane. 5. A supporting surface of an airplane; an airfoil or a wing. — adj. 1. Mathematics. Of or being a figure lying in a plane: a plane curve. 2. Flat; level. See Synonyms at level. [Latin plānum, flat surface, from neuter of plānus, flat; see pelə⁻² in Appendix. N., sense 4, short for AEROPLANE.] —plane'ness n.

WORD HISTORY: The plane in which we fly is properly named for a very important element of its structure—the wing that keeps it in the air. But the story behind this name is slightly complicated. To begin with, plane in the sense “winged vehicle,” first recorded in April 1908, is a shortened form of aeroplane.

In June of that year plane appeared in a quotation from the London Times that mentioned Mr. Wright. Aeroplane, first recorded in 1866, is made up of the prefix aero-, “air, aviation,” and the word plane, referring to the structure designed to keep an air vehicle aloft. Originally the plane in such contexts was imagined as flat, hence the choice of the word plane; in practice this surface must curve slightly in order to work. The word aeroplane for the vehicle is first found in 1873. The first recorded appearance of the form airplane in our current sense, which uses air- instead of aero-, is found in 1907. An American flies in an airplane while a Briton still travels in an aeroplane, but both can catch a plane.

plane² (plān) n. 1. A carpenter’s tool with an adjustable blade for smoothing and leveling wood. 2. A trowel-shaped tool for smoothing the surface of clay, sand, or plaster in a mold. — v. planed, plan-ing, planes. — v. tr. 1. To smooth or finish with or as if with a plane. 2. To remove with a plane: plane off the rough edges on a board. — v. intr. 1. To work with a plane. 2. To act as a plane. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin plāna, from plānāre, to plane, from plānus, flat. See pelə⁻² in Appendix.]

plane³ (plān) v. intr. planed, plan-ing, planes. 1. To rise partly out of the water, as a hydroplane does at high speeds. 2. To soar or glide. 3. To travel by airplane. [Middle English planen, to glide, soar, from Old French planer, from plain, flat, level, from Latin plānus. See pelə⁻² in Appendix.]

plane⁴ (plān) n. The plane tree. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin platanus, from Greek platanos, perhaps from platus, broad. See plat- in Appendix.]

plane angle (plān ăng’gəl) n. Mathematics. An angle formed by two straight lines in the same plane.

plane geometry (plān jē-ŏm’ī-trē) n. Mathematics. The geometry of planar figures.

plane-load (plān’lōd’) n. The load that an airplane is capable of carrying.

plan-er (plā’nər) n. 1. One that planes, especially a machine tool that is used to smooth or finish the surfaces of wood or metal. 2. Printing. A smooth block of wood used to level a form of type.

pla-ner tree (plā’nər trē) n. A small, deciduous, elmlike swamp tree (Planera aquatica) of the southern United States, having small, ribbed, nutlike fruit. Also called water elm [After Johann Jacob Planer (1743-1789), German botanist.]

plane-side (plān’sīd’) n. The area adjacent to an airplane.

plan-et (plān’īt) n. 1. A nonluminous celestial body larger than an asteroid or a comet, illuminated by light from a star, such as the sun, around which it revolves. In the solar system there are nine known planets: Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. 2. One of the seven celestial bodies, Mercury, Venus, the moon, the sun, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, visible to the naked eye and thought by ancient astronomers to revolve in the heavens about a fixed Earth and among fixed stars. 3. One of the seven revolving astrological celestial bodies that in conjunction with the stars are believed to influence human affairs and personalities. [Middle English, from Old French planete, from Late Latin planēta, from Greek planētēs, variant of planēs, planēt-, from planasthai, to wander. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

plane table (plān tā' bəl) n. A portable surveying instrument consisting essentially of a drawing board and a ruler mounted on a tripod and used to sight and map topographical details.

plan·e·tar·i·um (plān'ī-tār'ē-əm) n. pl. plan·e·tar·i·ums or plan·e·tar·i·a (-ē-ə). 1. An apparatus or a model representing the solar system. 2. a. An optical device for projecting images of celestial bodies and other astronomical phenomena onto the inner surface of a hemispherical dome. b. A building or room containing a planetarium, with seats for an audience.

plan·e·tar·y (plān'ī-tēr'ē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling the physical or orbital characteristics of a planet or the planets. 2. a. Of or relating to the earth; terrestrial or earthly: measured the planetary tilt in degrees. b. Of or affecting the entire world; global: a planetary consensus. 3. Wandering; erratic: a planetary life. 4. Being or relating to a gear train consisting of a central gear with an internal ring gear and one or more pinions.

planetary nebula (plān'ī-tēr'ē nēb'yə-lə) n. A nebula, such as the Ring Nebula, consisting of a hot, blue-white, central star surrounded by an envelope of expanding gas.

plan·e·tes·i·mal (plān'ī-tēs'ə-məl) n. Any of innumerable small bodies thought to have orbited the sun during the formation of the planets. [PLANET + (INFINIT)ESIMAL.] —plan'e·tes'i·mal adj.

planetesimal hypothesis (plān'ī-tēs'ə-məl hī-pōth'ī-sīs) n. The hypothesis that the planets and satellites of the solar system were formed by gravitational aggregation of planetesimals.

plan·e·toid (plān'ī-toid') n. Astronomy. See asteroid (n., sense 1). —plan'e·toi'dal (-toid'l) adj.

plan·e·tol·o·gy (plān'ī-tōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of astronomy that deals with the planets, satellites, and meteors of the solar system. —plan'e·to·log'i·cal (plān'ī-tl-ōj'ī-kəl) adj. —plan'e·tol'o·gist n.

plane tree (plān trē) n. Any of several trees of the genus Platanus, having ball-shaped fruit clusters and, usually, outer bark that flakes off in patches.

planet wheel (plān'īt hwēl) n. One of the small gear wheels in an epicyclic train.

plan·gent (plān'jənt) adj. 1. Loud and resounding: plangent bells. 2. Expressing or suggesting sadness; plaintive: "From a doorway came the plangent sounds of a guitar" (Malcolm Lowry). [Latin plangēns, plangent- present participle of plangere, to strike, lament. See plāk-² in Appendix.] —plan'gen·cy n.

—plan'gent·ly adv.

plani- pref. Variant of plano-.

pla·nim·e·ter (plə-nīm'ī-tər, plā-) n. An instrument that measures the area of a plane figure as a mechanically coupled pointer traverses the perimeter of the figure. —pla'ni·met'ric (plā'nə-mět'rik), pla'ni·met'ri·cal (-rī-kəl) adj.

—pla'ni·met'ri·cal·ly adv. —pla·nim'e·try n.

plan·ish (plän'ish) v. tr. plan·ished, plan·ish·ing, plan·ish·es. To smooth (metal) by rolling or hammering. [Middle English planishen*, from Old French planir, planiss-, to make smooth, from plan, level, from Latin plānus. See pelə-² in Appendix.] —plan'ish·er n.

pla·ni·sphere (plā'nī-sfīr') n. 1. A representation of a sphere or part of a sphere on a plane surface. 2. Astronomy. A polar projection of half or more of the celestial sphere on a chart equipped with an adjustable overlay to show the stars visible at a particular time and place. —pla'ni·spher'ic (-sfīr'ik, -sfēr'-), pla'ni·spher'i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj.

plank (plängk) n. 1. a. A piece of lumber cut thicker than a board. b. Such pieces of lumber considered as a group; planking. 2. A foundation; a support. 3. One of the articles of a political platform: "Planks had been published by the subcommittees on farm policy, on education, on national defense" (Theodore H. White). — v. tr. planked, plank·ing, planks. 1. To furnish or cover with planks: plank a muddy pathway. 2. To bake or broil and serve (fish or meat) on a plank: "Boards specially made for planking food have grooves... to hold juices" (Springfield MA Daily News). 3. To put or set down emphatically or with force. [Middle English, from Old North French planke, from Late Latin planca, from plancus, flat. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

plank·ing (pläng'kīng) n. 1. Planks considered as a group. 2. An object or a structure made of planks.

plank·ter (plängk'tər) n. One of the minute organisms that collectively constitute plankton. [Greek planktēr, wanderer, from planktos, wandering. See PLANK·TON.]

plank·ton (plängk'tən) n. The collection of small or microscopic organisms, including algae and protozoans, that float or drift in great numbers in fresh or salt water, especially at or near the surface, and serve as food for fish and other larger organisms. [German, from Greek, neuter of planktos, wandering, from plazein, to turn aside. See plāk-² in Appendix.] —plank·ton'ic (-tön'ik) adj.

Planned Parenthood (pländ pār'ənt-hōd) A service mark used for an organization that provides family planning services.

Pla·no (plā'nō) A city of northeast Texas, a manufacturing suburb of Dallas. Population, 128,713.

plano- or plani- or plan- pref. Flat: planoconvex. [From Latin plānus, flat. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

plan·o·blast (plăn'ə-blăst') n. The medusa of certain hydrozoans. [Greek planos, wandering (from planasthai, to wander); see PLANET + -blast.]

pla·no·con·cave (plā'nō-kōn-kāv', -kōn'kāv') adj. Flat on one side and concave on the other: a planoconcave lens.

pla·no·con·vex (plā'nō-kōn-věks', -kōn'vēks') adj. Flat on one side and convex on the other: a planoconvex lens.

plan·o·gam·ete (plăn'ō-găm'ēt, -gə-mēt') n. A motile gamete, especially one having undulipodia. [Greek planos, wandering; see PLANOBLAST + GAMETE.]

pla·nog·ra·phy (plə-nōg'rə-fē, plā-) n. A process for printing from a smooth surface, as lithography or offset. — pla'no-graph'ic (plā'nə-grăf'ik) adj.
— pla'no-graph'i-cal-ly adv.

pla·nom·e·ter (plə-nōm'ī-tər, plā-) n. A flat metal plate for gauging the accuracy of a plane surface in precision metalworking. Also called surface plate
— pla·nom'e·try n.

plant (plănt) n. 1. Botany. a. Any of various photosynthetic, eukaryotic, multicellular organisms of the kingdom Plantae characteristically producing embryos, containing chloroplasts, having cellulose cell walls, and lacking the power of locomotion. b. A plant having no permanent woody stem; an herb. 2. a. A building or group of buildings for the manufacture of a product; a factory. b. The equipment, including machinery, tools, instruments, and fixtures and the buildings containing them, necessary for an industrial or manufacturing operation.

3. The buildings, equipment, and fixtures of an institution: the entire plant of a university. 4. A person or thing put into place in order to mislead or function secretly, especially: a. A person placed in a group of spectators to influence behavior. b. A person stationed in a given location as a spy or an observer. c. A misleading piece of evidence placed so as to be discovered. d. A remark or an action in a play or narrative that becomes important later. 5. Slang. A scheming trick; a swindle. — v. tr. plant·ed, plant·ing, plants. 1. a. To place or set (seeds, for example) in the ground to grow. b. To place seeds or young plants in (land); sow: plant a field in corn. 2. a. To place (spawn or young fish) in water or an underwater bed for cultivation: plant oysters. b. To stock with spawn or fish. 3. To introduce (an animal) into an area. 4. To set firmly in position; fix: planted both feet on the ground. 5. To establish; found: plant a colony. 6. To fix firmly in the mind; implant: "The right of revolution is planted in the heart of man" (Clarence Darrow). 7. a. To station (a person) for the purpose of functioning in secret, as by observing, spying, or influencing behavior: Detectives were planted all over the store. b. To place so as to be discovered and to mislead: planted a gun on the corpse to make the death look like suicide. 8. Slang. To conceal; hide. 9. Slang. To deliver (a blow or punch). [Middle English plante, from Old English, and Old French both from Latin planta, shoot, sole of the foot. See plat- in Appendix.] —plant/a·ble adj.

Plan-tag-e-net (plăn-tăj'ə-nīt) Family name of a line of English kings from Henry II to Richard III (1154-1485).

plan·tain¹ (plăn'tən) n. Any of various plants of the genus Plantago that produce dense spikes of small greenish flowers, especially either of two Eurasian weeds, P. major or P. lanceolata. Also called ribwort [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin plantāgō, plantāgin-, from planta, sole of the foot (from its broad leaves). See plat- in Appendix.]

plan·tain² (plăn'tən) n. 1. A large, tropical, treelike herb (Musa paradisiaca) of southeast Asia, resembling the banana and bearing similar fruit. 2. The fruit of this plant, used as a staple food in tropical regions. [Spanish plátano, plántano, plane tree, plantain, from Latin platanus. See PLANE⁴.]

plantain lily (plăn'tən līl'ē) n. Any of several eastern Asian plants of the genus Hosta, widely cultivated for their large white, blue, or lilac flowers that are borne in a terminal, scapose, one-sided raceme. Also called hosta plan·tar (plăn'tər, -tär') adj. Of, relating to, or occurring on the sole of the foot: plantar warts. [Latin plantāris, from planta, sole of the foot. See plat- in Appendix.]

plan·ta·tion (plăn-tā'shən) n. 1. An area under cultivation. 2. A group of cultivated trees or plants. 3. A large estate or farm on which crops are raised, often by resident workers. 4. A newly established settlement; a colony.

WORD HISTORY: It has probably seemed ironic to more than one reader that the same word plantation appears in the name Plimoth Plantation, a settlement of people seeking freedom of religion, albeit their particular form of religion, and also as the term for the estates of the pre-Civil War South with their beautiful mansions for the white elite and their hovels for the oppressed Black slaves. These two uses of the word plantation illustrate two sense developments of the word, which is first recorded in Middle English as plantacioun in a work probably written during the first quarter of the 15th century. Latin plantātiō, the source of our English word, originally meant “propagation of a plant, as from cuttings,” but in Medieval Latin developed other related senses, such as “planting,” “foundation, establishment,” and “nursery, or collection of growing plants that have been planted.” The two senses that were used in New England and in the South can thus be explained. The Plimoth sense is derived from the notion of a settlement or colony that has been established or planted in a new country. The Southern sense goes back to the notion of simply planting crops, in this case crops such as tobacco or cotton that are grown on estates or farms in subtropical or tropical climates and were at one time worked by slave labor.

Plan-ta-tion (plăn-tă'shən) A city of southeast Florida, a residential suburb of Fort Lauderdale. Population, 48,501.

plant bug (plănt bŭg) n. An insect of the order Hemiptera whose mouthparts are adapted for piercing plants and sucking their juices.

Plant City (plănt sīt'ē) A city of west-central Florida east of Tampa. It is a processing and shipping center in a farming region. Population, 22,754.

plant-er (plăn'tər) n. 1. a. One who plants: a planter of beautiful gardens. b. A machine or tool for planting seeds. 2. The owner or manager of a plantation: cotton and rice planters. 3. An early settler or colonist. 4. A decorative container for a plant or small tree.

plant-er's punch (plăn'tərz pŭnĉ) n. A drink of rum with lemon or lime juice, sugar syrup, water or soda, bitters, and grenadine.

plant hormone (plănt hŏr'mŏn') n. Any of various hormones produced by plants that control or regulate germination, growth, metabolism, or other physiological activities. Also called phytohormone plan-ti-grade (plăn'tī-grād') adj. Walking with the entire sole of the foot on the ground, as human beings, bears, raccoons, and rabbits do. — n. A plantigrade animal. [French : Latin planta, sole of the foot; see plat- in Appendix + Latin -gradus, going (from gradī, to walk, go); see ghredh- in Appendix.]

plant-let (plănt'līt) n. A young or small plant.

plant louse (plănt lous) n. See aphid.

plan-u-la (plăn'yə-lə) n. pl. plan-u-lae (-lē'). The flat, free-swimming, ciliated larva of a coelenterate. [New Latin, from Latin, feminine diminutive of plānus, flat (from its shape). See pelə-² in Appendix.] — plan'u-lar, plan'u-late' (-lāt') adj.

plaque (plăk) n. 1. A flat plate, slab, or disk that is ornamented or engraved for mounting, as on a wall for decoration or on a monument for information. 2. A small pin or brooch worn as an ornament or a badge of membership.

3. a. Pathology. A small disk-shaped formation or growth; a patch. b. A deposit of fatty material on the inner lining of an arterial wall, characteristic of atherosclerosis. c. A scaly patch formed on the skin by psoriasis. d. A film of mucus and bacteria on a tooth surface. e. A clear, often round patch of lysed cells in an otherwise opaque layer of a bacteria or cell culture. [French, from Old French, metal plate, perhaps from Middle Dutch placke, disk, patch.]

plash (plăsh) n. 1. A light splash. 2. The sound of a light splash. — v.

plashed, plash-ing, plash-es. — v. tr. To spatter (liquid) about; splash. — v. intr. To cause a light splash. [Possibly from Middle English plashes, pool of water, from Old English plæsc.]

-plasia or -plasy suff. Growth; development: achondroplasia. [New Latin, from Greek plasis, molding, from plassein, to mold. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

plasm (plăz'əm) n. 1. See germ plasm (n., sense 3). 2. Variant of plasma.

plasm- pref. Variant of plasm-.

-plasm suff. Material forming cells or tissue: cytoplasm. [From PLASMA.]

plas·ma (plāz'mə) also plasm (plāz'əm) n. 1. a. The clear, yellowish fluid portion of blood, lymph, or intramuscular fluid in which cells are suspended.

b. Blood plasma. 2. Medicine. Cell-free, sterilized blood plasma, used in transfusions. 3. Protoplasm or cytoplasm. 4. The fluid portion of milk from which the curd has been separated by coagulation; whey. 5. Physics. An electrically neutral, highly ionized gas composed of ions, electrons, and neutral particles. It is a phase of matter distinct from solids, liquids, and normal gases. [New Latin, from Late Latin, image, figure, from Greek, from plassein, to mold. See pelə-² in Appendix.] —plas·mat'ic (plāz-mät'ik), plas'mic (-mīk) adj.

plas·ma·blast (plāz'mə-blāst') n. The precursor or stem cell of a plasma cell.

plasma cell (plāz'mə sēl) n. An antibody-producing cell found in lymphoid tissue and derived from a B cell upon reaction with a specific antigen. Also called plasmacyte plas·ma·cyte (plāz'mə-sīt') n. See plasma cell.

plas·ma·gel (plāz'mə-jēl') n. A jellylike state of cytoplasm, characteristically occurring in the pseudopod of the amoeba.

plas·ma·gene (plāz'mə-jēn') n. A self-replicating hereditary structure thought to exist in cytoplasm and function in a manner analogous to, but independent of, chromosomal genes. —plas'ma·gen'ic (-jē'nīk, -jēn'ik) adj.

plas·ma·lem·ma (plāz'mə-lēm'mə) n. See cell membrane. [PLASMA + Greek lemma, husk; see LEMMA².]

plasma membrane (plāz'mə mēm'brān') n. See cell membrane.

plas·ma·pher·e·sis (plāz'mə-fēr'ī-sīs, -fə-rē'-) n. A process in which plasma is taken from donated blood and the remaining components, mostly red blood cells, are returned to the donor. [PLASM(A) + Greek aphairesis, removal; see APHAERESIS.]

plas·ma·sol (plāz'mə-sōl', -sōl', -sōl') n. A state of cytoplasm that is more liquid than plasmagel.

plas·mid (plāz'mīd) n. A circular, double-stranded unit of DNA that replicates within a cell independently of the chromosomal DNA. Plasmids are most often found in bacteria and are used in recombinant DNA research to transfer genes between cells.

plas·min (plāz'mīn) n. A proteolytic enzyme in plasma that dissolves fibrin and other blood clotting factors. Also called fibrinolysin plas·min·o·gen (plāz-mīn'-ə-jən) n. The inactive precursor to plasmin that is found in body fluids and blood plasma.

plasm- or plasm- pref. Plasma: plasmin. [From PLASMA.]

plas·mo·des·ma (plāz'mə-děz'mə) also plas·mo·desm (plāz'mə-děz'əm) n.

pl. plas·mo·des·ma·ta (-mə-tə) or plas·mo·des·mas also plas·mo·desms.

Botany. A strand of cytoplasm that passes through openings in cell walls and connects the protoplasts of adjacent living plant cells. [PLASMO- + Greek desma, bond (from dein, to bind).]

plasmoidal slime mold (plăz-mō'dē-əl slīm mōld) n. See slime mold (n., sense 2).

plas·mo·di·um (plăz-mō'dē-əm) n. pl. plas·mo·di·a (-dē-ə). 1. A multinucleate mass of cytoplasm formed by the aggregation of a number of amoeboid cells, as that characteristic of the vegetative phase of the slime molds. 2. A protozoan of the genus Plasmodium, which includes the parasites that cause malaria. [New Latin Plasmodium, genus name : PLASM(O)- + -odium, resembling (from Greek -ōdēs, variant of -oeidēs, -oid).] — plas·mo'di·al (-dē-əl) adj.

plas·mog·a·my (plăz-mōg'ə-mē) n. pl. plas·mog·a·mies. Fusion of two or more cells or protoplasts without fusion of the nuclei, as occurs in higher terrestrial fungi.

plas·mol·y·sis (plăz-mōl'ī-sis) n. pl. plas·mol·y·ses (-sēz'). Shrinkage or contraction of the protoplasm away from the wall of a living plant or bacterial cell, caused by loss of water through osmosis. — plas'mo·lyt'ic (plăz'mə-līt'ik) adj. — plas'mo·lyt'i·cal·ly adv.

plas·mo·lyze (plăz'mə-līz') v. plas·mo·lyzed, plas·mo·lyz·ing, plas·mo·lyz·es. — v. tr. To subject to plasmolysis. — v. intr. To undergo plasmolysis.

plas·mon (plăz'mōn') n. The aggregate of cytoplasmic or extranuclear genetic material in an organism. [German, from New Latin plasma, plasma. See PLASMA.]

-plast suff. A small body, structure, particle, or granule, especially of living matter; cell: chloroplast. [From Greek plastos, molded, from plassein, to mold. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

plas·ter (plăs'tər) n. 1. A mixture of lime or gypsum, sand, and water, sometimes with fiber added, that hardens to a smooth solid and is used for coating walls and ceilings. 2. Plaster of Paris. 3. A pastelike mixture applied to a part of the body for healing or cosmetic purposes. Also called sticking plaster. 4. Chiefly British. An adhesive bandage. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: plaster bandages; plaster walls. — v. plas·tered, plas·ter·ing, plas·ters. — v. tr. 1. To cover, coat, or repair with plaster. 2. To cover or hide with or as if with a coat of plaster: plastered over our differences. 3. To apply a plaster to: plaster an aching muscle. 4. a. To cover conspicuously, as with things pasted on; overspread: plaster the walls with advertising. b. To affix conspicuously, usually with a paste: plaster notices on all the doors. 5. To make smooth by applying a sticky substance: plaster one's hair with pomade. 6. To make adhere to another surface: "His hair was plastered to his forehead" (William Golding). 7. Informal. a. To inflict heavy damage or injury on. b. To defeat decisively. — v. intr. To apply plaster. [Middle English, from Old English, medical dressing, and from Old French plastre, cementing material both from Latin emplastrum, medical dressing, from Greek emplastron, from emplassein, to plaster on : en-, in, on; see EN-² + plassein, to mold; see pelə-² in Appendix.] —plas'ter-er n.

—plas'ter-y adj.

plas-ter-board (pläs'tər-bōrd', -bōrd') n. A rigid board made of layers of fiberboard or paper bonded to a gypsum plaster core, used instead of plaster or wood panels in construction to form walls. Also called gypsum board, wallboard.

plaster cast (pläs'tər kăst) n. 1. A sculptured mold or cast in plaster of Paris. 2. See cast (n., sense 11).

plas-tered (pläs'tərd) adj. Slang. Intoxicated; drunk.

plas-ter-ing (pläs'tər-ĭng) n. 1. A layer or coating of plaster. 2. Informal. A resounding defeat; a beating.

plaster of Paris (pläs'tər ïv pär'is) n. Any of a group of gypsum cements, essentially hemihydrated calcium sulfate, $\text{CaSO}_4 \cdot 2\text{H}_2\text{O}$, a white powder that forms a paste when mixed with water and hardens into a solid, used in making casts, molds, and sculpture. [Middle English, after Paris², France.]

plas-ter-work (pläs'tər-wûrk') n. Construction or ornamental work done with plaster.

plas-tic (pläs'tik) adj. 1. Capable of being shaped or formed: plastic material such as clay. See Synonyms at malleable. 2. Relating to or dealing with shaping or modeling: the plastic art of sculpture. 3. Having the qualities of sculpture; well-formed: "the astonishing plastic beauty of the chorus girls" (Frank Harris). 4. Giving form or shape to a substance: the plastic forces that create and wear down a mountain range. 5. Easily influenced; impressionable. 6. Made of a plastic or plastics: a plastic garden hose. 7. Physics. Capable of undergoing continuous deformation without rupture or relaxation. 8. Biology. Capable of building tissue; formative. 9. Marked by artificiality or superficiality; synthetic: a TV host's plastic smile; a plastic world of fad, hype, and sensation. 10. Informal. Of or obtained by means of credit cards: plastic money. — n. 1. Any of various organic compounds produced by polymerization, capable of being molded, extruded, cast into various shapes and films, or drawn into filaments used as textile fibers. 2. Objects made of plastic. 3. Informal. A credit card or credit cards: would accept cash or plastic in payment. [Latin plasticus, from Greek plastikos, from plastos, molded, from plassein, to mold. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

—plas'ti-cal-ly adv. —plas-tic'i-ty (pläs-tis'ĭ-tē) n.

-plastic suff. Forming; growing; changing; developing: metaplastic. [Greek plastikos, fit for molding. See PLASTIC.]

plastic explosive (pläs'tik ĭk-splō'sĭv) n. A versatile explosive substance in the form of a moldable doughlike solid, used in bombs detonated by fuse or electrical impulse. Also called plastique

- plas-ti-cize (pläs'tī-sīz') v. tr. intr. plas-ti-cized, plas-ti-ciz-ing, plas-ti-ciz-es. To make or become plastic. — plas'ti-ci-za'tion (-sī-zā'shən) n.
- plas-ti-ciz-er (pläs'tī-sī'zər) n. Any of various substances added to plastics or other materials to make or keep them soft or pliable.
- plastic surgery (pläs'tīk sūr'jə-rē) n. Surgery to remodel, repair, or restore body parts, especially by the transfer of tissue. — plastic surgeon n.
- plas-tid (pläs'tīd) n. Any of several pigmented cytoplasmic organelles found in plant cells and other organisms, having various physiological functions, such as the synthesis and storage of food. [From Greek plastis, plastid- feminine of plastēs, molder, from plastos, molded. See PLASTIC.] — plas-tid/i-al (pläs-tīd'ē-əl) adj.
- plas-tique (plä-stēk') n. See plastic explosive. [French, from Latin plasticus, plastic, of modeling. See PLASTIC.]
- plas-tron (pläs'trən) n. 1. A metal breastplate worn under a coat of mail. 2. A quilted pad worn by fencers to protect the torso and side. 3. A trimming on the front of a bodice. 4. The front of a man's dress shirt. 5. Zoology. The ventral part of the shell of a turtle or tortoise. [French, from Old French, from Old Italian piastrone, augmentative of piastra, thin metal plate. See PIASTER.] — plas'tral (-trəl) adj.
- plasty suff. Molding or forming surgically; plastic surgery: dermatoplasty. [Greek -plastia, from plastos, molded, from plassein, to mold. See pelə-² in Appendix.]
- plasy suff. Variant of -plasia.
- plat¹ (plät) v. tr. plat-ted, plat-ting, plats. To plait or braid. — n. A braid. [Middle English platen, alteration of plaiten, to fold, braid. See PLAIT.]
- plat² (plät) n. 1. A piece of land; a plot. 2. A map showing actual or planned features, such as streets and building lots. — v. tr. plat-ted, plat-ting, plats. To make a plat of: plat a new town. [Middle English, probably alteration (influenced by plat, something flat), of plot. See PLOT.]
- plat. abbr. 1. Plateau. 2. Platform. 3. Platoon.
- Pla-ta (plä'tə, -tä), Río de la. A wide estuary of southeast South America between Argentina and Uruguay formed by the Paraná and Uruguay rivers and opening on the Atlantic Ocean. It was explored by Magellan in 1520 and Sebastian Cabot from 1526 to 1529.
- Pla-tae-a (plə-tē'ə) An ancient city of central Greece southwest of Thebes. It was the site of a major Greek victory over the Persians in 479 B.C.
- plat du jour (plä' də zhōōr') n. pl. plats du jour (plä' də zhōōr'). A featured dish of the day at a restaurant. [French : plat, plate + du, of the + jour, day.]
- plate (plät) n. 1. A smooth, flat, relatively thin, rigid body of uniform thickness. 2. a. A sheet of hammered, rolled, or cast metal. b. A very thin applied or deposited coat of metal. 3. a. A flat piece of metal forming part of a machine: a boiler plate. b. A flat piece of metal on which something is engraved. 4. a. A thin piece of metal used for armor. b. Armor made of such pieces. 5. Abbr. pl. Printing. a. A sheet of metal, plastic, rubber, paperboard, or other material prepared for use as a printing surface, such as an electrotype or a stereotype. b. A print of a woodcut, lithograph, or other engraved material, especially when reproduced in a book. c. A full-page book illustration, often in color and printed on paper different from that used on the text pages. 6. Abbr. pl. Photography. A light-sensitive sheet of glass or metal on which a photographic image can be recorded. 7. Dentistry. A thin metallic or plastic support fitted to the gums to anchor artificial teeth. 8. Architecture. In wood-frame construction, a horizontal member, capping the exterior wall studs, upon which the roof rafters rest. 9. Baseball. Home plate. 10. a. A shallow dish in which food is served or from which it is eaten. b. The contents of such a dish: ate a plate of spaghetti. c. A whole course served on such a dish. 11. Service and food for one person at a meal: dinner at a set price per plate. 12. Household articles, such as hollowware, covered with a precious metal, such as silver or gold. 13. A dish passed among the members of a group or congregation for the collection of offerings. 14. Sports. a. A dish, cup, or other article of silver or gold offered as a prize. b. A contest, especially a horserace, offering such a prize. 15. A thin cut of beef from the brisket. 16. Anatomy & Zoology. a. A thin, flat layer or scale, as that of a fish. b. A platelike part, organ, or structure, such as that covering some reptiles. 17. Electricity. a. An electrode, as in a storage battery or capacitor. b. The anode in an electron tube. 18. Geology. In the theory of plate tectonics, one of the sections into which the earth's crust is divided and that is in constant motion relative to other plates, which are also in motion. — v. tr. plat-ed, plat-ing, plates.***

1. To coat or cover with a thin layer of metal. 2. To cover with armor plate: plate a warship. 3. Printing. To make a stereotype or electrotype from. 4. To give a glossy finish to (paper) by pressing between metal sheets or rollers. [Middle English, from Old French, from feminine of plat, flat, from Vulgar Latin plattus*, from Greek platus. See plat- in Appendix.] — plat'er n.

pla-teau (plă-tō') n. pl. pla-teaus or pla-teaux (-tōz'). 1. Abbr. plat. An elevated, comparatively level expanse of land; a tableland. 2. A relatively stable level, period, or state: Mortgage rates declined, then reached a plateau. — v. intr. pla-teaued, pla-teau-ing, pla-teaus. To reach a stable level; level off: "The tension seemed to grow by degrees, then it plateaued" (Tom Clancy). [French, from Old French platel, platter, from plat, flat. See PLATE.]

plat-ed (plā'tīd) adj. 1. Coated with a thin adherent layer of metal. Often used in combination: a gold-plated ceramic bowl; a silver-plated pen. 2. Covered with protective plates or sheets of metal. Often used in combination: an armor-plated truck; a steel-plated safe. 3. Knitted with two kinds of yarn, one on the face and one on the back.

plate-ful (plāt'fōōl') n. pl. plate-fuls. 1. The amount that a plate can hold.

2. A generous portion of food.

plate glass (plāt glās) n. A strong rolled and polished glass containing few impurities, used for mirrors and large windows.

plate-let (plāt'līt) n. A minute, disklike cytoplasmic body found in the blood plasma of mammals that promotes blood clotting. Also called blood platelet, thrombocyte.

plat-en (plāt'n) n. 1. The roller in a typewriter that serves as the backing for the paper against which the type bars strike. 2. Computer Science. The roller in a computer printer against which the print head strikes. 3. A flat plate or rolling cylinder in a printing press that positions the paper and holds it against the inked type. [Middle English plateine, paten, from Old French platine, metal plate, from plat, flat. See PLATE.]

plate proof (plāt prōof) n. Printing. A proof taken from a master plate.

plate tectonics (plāt tēk-tōn'iks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). A theory of global dynamics having to do with the movement of a small number of semirigid sections of the earth's crust, with seismic activity and volcanism occurring primarily at the margins of these sections. This movement has resulted in continental drift and changes in the shape and size of ocean basins and continents. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The dynamics of plate movement. —plate'-tec-ton'ic (plāt'tēk-tōn'ik) adj.

plat-form (plāt'fōrm') n. Abbr. plat. 1. a. A horizontal surface raised above the level of the adjacent area, as a stage for public speaking or a landing alongside railroad tracks. b. A vessel, such as a submarine or an aircraft carrier, from which weapons can be deployed. c. An oil platform. 2. A place, a means, or an opportunity for public expression of opinion: a journal that served as a platform for radical views. 3. A vestibule at the end of a railway car. 4. A formal declaration of the principles on which a group, such as a political party, makes its appeal to the public. 5. a. A thick layer, as of leather or cork, between the inner and outer soles of a shoe, giving added height. b. A shoe having such a construction. [French plate-forme, diagram, from Old French : plat, flat; see PLATE + forme, form (from Latin forma).]

platform bed (plāt'fōrm' bēd) n. A bed consisting of a mattress on a platform supported off the floor by legs, with the floor space beneath the platform used for living space or storage.

platform scale (plāt'fōrm' skāl) n. An industrial weighing instrument consisting of a platform coupled to an automatic system of levers and adjustable weights, used to weigh large or heavy objects.

platform tennis (plāt'fōrm' tēn'is) n. Sports. An outdoor court game played with paddles and a rubber ball on a raised and fenced wooden floor that is smaller than a tennis court.

Plath (plăth), Sylvia. 1932-1963. American writer. Her poems, collected in Colossus (1960) and Ariel (1965), are noted for their technical excellence and their disturbing images of alienation. Plath's other works include the semiautobiographical novel The Bell Jar (1963).

platin- pref. Variant of platino-.

pla-ti-na (plə-tē'nə) n. Platinum, especially as found naturally in impure form. [Spanish, diminutive of plata, silver, plate, from Vulgar Latin plattus*. See PLATE.]

plat-ing (plā'tīng) n. 1. A thin layer of metal, such as gold or silver, deposited on or applied to a surface. 2. A coating of metal sheets or plates.

platini- pref. Variant of platino-.

pla-tin-ic (plə-tīn'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or containing platinum, especially with valence 4.

plat-i-nize (plăt'n-īz') v. tr. plat-i-nized, plat-i-niz-ing, plat-i-niz-es. To electroplate with platinum.

platino- or platini- or platin- pref. Platinum: platinotype. [From PLATINUM.]

plat-i-no-cy-a-nide (plăt'n-ō-sī'ə-nīd') n. A double salt of platinous cyanide and another cyanide.

plat-i-noid (plăt'n-oid') adj. Resembling platinum. — n. 1. An alloy of copper, nickel, tungsten, and zinc, formerly used in electric coils. 2. A metal chemically resembling platinum, especially osmium, iridium, or palladium.

plat-i-no-type (plăt'n-ō-tīp') n. 1. A process formerly used for making photographic prints, using a finely precipitated platinum salt and an iron salt in the sensitizing solution to produce prints in platinum black. 2. A print produced by platinotype.

plat-i-nous (plăt'n-əs) adj. Of, relating to, or containing platinum, especially with valence 2.

plat-i-num (plăt'n-əm) n. 1. Symbol Pt A silver-white metallic element occurring worldwide, usually mixed with other metals such as iridium, osmium, or nickel. It is ductile and malleable, does not oxidize in air, and is used as a catalyst and in electrical components, jewelry, dentistry, and electroplating. Atomic number 78; atomic weight 195.09; melting point 1,772°C; boiling point 3,827°C; specific gravity 21.45; valence 2, 3, 4. 2. Color. A medium to light gray. [New Latin, from Spanish platina, platinum. See PLATINA.]

platinum black (plăt'n-əm blăk) n. A fine black powder of metallic platinum, used as a catalyst and as a gas absorbent.

platinum blond (plăt'n-əm blönd) n. 1. A very light silver-blond hair color, especially when artificially produced. 2. A person having hair of this color.

plat-i-tude (plăt'i-tōod', -tyōod') n. 1. A trite or banal remark or statement, especially one expressed as if it were original or significant. See Synonyms at cli-ché. 2. Lack of originality; triteness. [French, from plat, flat, from Old French.]

See PLATE.] —plat'·i·tu·di·nous (-tōōd'n-əs, -tyōōd'-), plat'·i·tu·di·nal (-tōōd'n-əl, -tyōōd'-) adj. —plat'·i·tu·di·nous·ly adv.

plat'·i·tu·di·nar·i·an (plăt'ī-tōōd'n-âr'ē-ən, -tyōōd'-) n. One who habitually uses platitudes. [PLATITUDIN(OUS) + -ARIAN.]

plat'·i·tu·di·nize (plăt'ī-tōōd'n-īz', -tyōōd'-) v. intr. plat'·i·tu·di·nized, plat'·i·tu·di·niz·ing, plat'·i·tu·di·niz·es. To use platitudes in speaking or writing.

Pla·to (plā'tō), 427?-347? B.C. Greek philosopher. A follower of Socrates, he founded the Academy (386), where he taught and wrote for much of the rest of his life. Plato presented his ideas in the form of dramatic dialogues, as in The Republic.

Pla·ton·ic (plə-tŏn'ik, plā-) adj. 1. Often Pla·ton·i·cal (-i-kəl). Of, relating to, or characteristic of Plato or his philosophy: Platonic dialogues; Platonic ontology. 2. Often platonic. Transcending physical desire and tending toward the purely spiritual or ideal: platonic love. 3. Often platonic. Speculative or theoretical. [After PLATO.] —Pla·ton'·i·cal·ly adv.

WORD HISTORY: Plato did not invent the term or the concept that bears his name, but he did see sexual desire as the germ for higher loves. Marsilio Ficino, a Renaissance follower of Plato, used the terms amor socraticus and amor platonicus interchangeably for a love between two human beings that was preparatory for the love of God. From Ficino's usage Platonic (already present in English as an adjective to describe what related to Plato and first recorded in 1533) came to be used for a spiritual love between persons of opposite sexes. In our own century Platonic has been used of relationships between members of the same sex. Though the concept is an elevated one, the term has perhaps more often been applied in ways that led Samuel Richardson to have one of his characters in Pamela say, "I am convinced, and always was, that Platonic love is Platonic nonsense."

Pla·to·nism (plăt'n-īz'əm) n. Philosophy. The philosophy of Plato, especially insofar as it asserts ideal forms as an absolute and eternal reality of which the phenomena of the world are an imperfect and transitory reflection. —Pla'to·nist n. —Pla'to·nis'tic adj.

pla·toon (plə-tōōn') n. 1. Abbr. plat. A subdivision of a company of troops consisting of two or more sections and usually commanded by a lieutenant. 2. A group of people working, traveling, or assembled together: a platoon of firefighters; buses carrying platoons of tourists. 3. Sports. A group of players within a team, especially a football team, that is trained and sent into or withdrawn from play as a unit: the defensive platoon. — v. pla·toon·ed, pla·toon·ing, pla·toon·s. Sports. — v. tr. To play (a player) in alternation with another player in the same position: platoon·ed the two catchers. — v. intr. 1. To use alternate players at the same position. 2. To take turns playing a position with another player. [French peloton, from Old French, diminutive of pelote, ball. See PELLET.]

platoon sergeant (plə-tōōn' sār'jənt) n. The senior noncommissioned officer in an army platoon or comparable unit.

Platt (plät), Orville Hitchcock. 1827-1905. American legislator. As a U.S. senator from Connecticut (1879-1905) he sponsored the Platt Amendment (1901), which increased American control over Cuban affairs.

Platt-deutsch (plät'doich') n. See Low German (n., sense 1). [German (partial translation of Dutch Platduits, Low German) : Dutch plat, low, flat (from Middle Dutch, from Old French); see PLATE + German Deutsch, German (from Middle High German diutsch, from Old High German diutisc, of the people); see teutā- in Appendix.]

Platte (plät) A river, about 499 km (310 mi) long, of central Nebraska formed by the confluence of the North Platte and South Platte rivers and flowing eastward to the Missouri River at the Iowa border below Omaha.

plat-ter (plät'ər) n. 1. A large shallow dish or plate, used especially for serving food. 2. A meal or course served on a platter. 3. Slang. A phonograph record. —idiom. on a platter. Without exertion; effortlessly: always got what they wanted on a platter. [Middle English plater, from Anglo-Norman, from Old French plate, plate. See PLATE.]

Platts-burgh (pläts'bürg') A city of extreme northeast New York on Lake Champlain northwest of Burlington, Vermont. During the War of 1812 an American fleet decisively defeated the British in a naval battle here on September 11, 1814. Population, 21,255.

plat-y¹ (plä'tē) adj. plat-i-er, plat-i-est. Designating soil or minerals occurring in flaky layers.

plat-y² (plät'ē) n. pl. plat-ys or plat-ies. Any of several small freshwater live-bearing fishes of the genus Xiphophorus of southern North America, especially X. maculatus and X. variatus, popular in aquariums for their bright and variable colors. Also called platyfish [Short for New Latin Platypoecilus, former genus name : PLATY- + Greek poikilos, many-colored; see peig- in Appendix.]

platy- pref. Flat: platyhelminth. [Greek platu-, from platus. See plat- in Appendix.]

plat-y-fish (plät'ē-fish') n. pl. platyfish or plat-y-fish-es. See platy².

plat-y-hel-minth (plät'ī-hěl'mīnth) n. See flatworm. [From New Latin Platyhelminthes, phylum name : PLATY- + Greek hēlmis, helminth-, parasitic worm; see wel² in Appendix.] —plat'y-hel-min'thic adj.

plat-y-pus (plät'ī-pəs) n. pl. plat-y-pus-es. A semiaquatic egg-laying mammal (Ornithorhynchus anatinus) of Australia and Tasmania, having a broad flat tail, webbed feet, and a snout resembling a duck's bill. Also called duckbill, duck-billed platypus. [New Latin, from Greek platupous, flat-footed : platu-, platy- + pous, foot; see ped- in Appendix.]

plat-yr-rhine (plăt'î-rîn') also plat-yr-rhin-i-an (plăt'î-rîn'ē-ən) adj.

1. Having a broad, flat nose. 2. Of or designating the New World monkeys, distinguished from the Old World monkeys by widely separated nostrils that generally open to the side. — n. 1. A platyrrhine person. 2. A platyrrhine monkey.

[New Latin Platyrrhina, group name, from Greek platurrhis, broad-nosed : platu-, platy- + rhis, rhin-, nose.] — plat'yr-rhi'ny (-rî'nē) n.

plau-dit (plô'dīt) n. Enthusiastic expression of praise or approval: a new play that opened to the plaudits of the critics. [Short for Latin plaudite, pl. imperative of plaudere, to applaud.]

Plau-en (plou'ən) A city of east-central Germany south-southwest of Leipzig. Founded by Slavs in the 12th century, it passed to Bohemia in 1327 and to Saxony in 1466 and became a textile-milling center in the 15th century. Population, 78,797.

plau-si-ble (plô'zə-bəl) adj. 1. Seemingly or apparently valid, likely, or acceptable; credible: a plausible excuse. 2. Giving a deceptive impression of truth, acceptability, or reliability; specious: the plausible talk of a crafty salesperson. [Latin plausibilis, deserving applause, from plausus, past participle of plaudere, to applaud.] — plau'si-bil'i-ty, plau'si-ble-ness n. — plau'si-bly adv.

SYNONYMS: plausible, believable, colorable, credible. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “appearing to merit belief or acceptance”: a plausible pretext; a believable excuse; a colorable explanation; a credible assertion.

ANTONYM: implausible

plau-sive (plô'zīv, -sīv) adj. 1. Showing or expressing praise or approbation; applauding. 2. Obsolete. Plausible. [From Latin plaudere, plaus-, to applaud.]

Plau-tus (plô'təs), Titus Maccius. 254?-184 B.C. Roman comic playwright whose works influenced Shakespeare and Molière.

play (plā) v. played, play-ing, plays. — v. intr. 1. To occupy oneself in amusement, sport, or other recreation: children playing with toys. 2. a. Games. To take part in a game: No minors are eligible to play. b. To participate in betting; gamble. 3. To act in jest or sport: They're not quarreling in earnest, they're just playing. 4. To deal or behave carelessly or indifferently; toy. See Synonyms at flirt. 5. To behave or converse in a sportive or playful way. 6. To act or conduct oneself in a specified way: play fair; an investor who plays cautiously. 7. To act, especially in a dramatic production. 8. Music. a. To perform on an instrument: play on an accordion. b. To emit sound or be sounded in performance: The band is playing. 9. To be performed, as in a theater or on television: A good movie is playing tonight. 10. To be received or accepted: a speech that played poorly with the voters. 11. To move or seem to move quickly, lightly, or irregularly: The breeze played on the water. 12. To function or discharge uninterruptedly: The fountains played in the courtyard. 13. To move or operate freely within a bounded space, as machine parts do. — v. tr. 1. a. To perform or act (a role or part) in a dramatic performance. b. To assume the role of; act as: played the peacemaker at the conference. 2. To perform (a theatrical work) on or as if on the stage. 3. To present a theatrical performance in (a given place): The company played Detroit last week. 4. To pretend to be; mimic the activities of: played cowboy; played the star. 5. Sports & Games. a. To engage in (a game or sport): play hockey; play chess. b. To compete against in a game or sport. c. To occupy or work at (a position) in a game: Lou Gehrig played first base. d. To employ (a player) in a game or position: Let's play her at first base. e. To use or move (a card, piece, or ball) in a game or sport: play the queen of hearts. f. To make (a shot or stroke), as in tennis: played a strong backhand. 6. Games. a. To bet; wager: played five dollars on the roan horse. b. To make bets on: play the races. 7. To perform or put into effect, especially as a jest or deception: play a joke on a friend. 8. To handle; manage: played the matter quietly. 9. To use or manipulate, especially for one's own interests: He played his two opponents against each other. 10. Music. a. To perform on (an instrument): play the guitar. b. To perform (a piece) on instruments or an instrument. 11. To cause (a record or phonograph, for example) to emit recorded sounds. 12. To discharge or direct in or as if in a continuous stream: play a hose on a fire. 13. To cause to move rapidly, lightly, or irregularly: play lights over the dance floor. 14. To exhaust (a hooked fish) by allowing it to pull on the line. — n. 1. a. A literary work written for performance on the stage; a drama. b. The performance of such a work. 2. Activity engaged in for enjoyment or recreation. 3. Fun or jesting: It was all done in play. 4. Sports & Games. a. The act or manner of engaging in a game or sport: After a time-out, play resumed. The golf tournament featured expert play. b. The act or manner of using a card, piece, or ball in a game or sport: my partner's play of the last trump; his clumsy play of the rebound. c. A move or an action in a game: It's your play. The runner was thrown out in a close play. 5. Games. Participation in betting; gambling. 6. Manner of dealing with others; conduct: fair play. 7. An attempt to obtain something; a bid: a play for sympathy. 8. a. Action, motion, or use: the play of the imagination. b. Freedom or occasion for action; scope: give full play to an artist's talents. See Synonyms at room. 9. Movement or space for movement, as of mechanical parts. 10. Quick, often irregular movement or action, especially of light or color: the play of color on iridescent feathers.

—phrasal verbs. play along. Informal. To cooperate or pretend to cooperate: decided to play along with the robbers for a while. play at. 2. To participate in; engage in. 3. To do or take part in half-heartedly. play back. To replay (a recently recorded tape, for example). play down. To minimize the importance of; make little of: played down the defect to protect the troops' morale. play off.

6. Sports. a. To establish the winner of (a tie) by playing in an additional game or series of games. b. To participate in a playoff. 7. To set (one individual or party) in opposition to another so as to advance one's own interests: a parent who played off one child against another. play on (or play upon). To take advantage of middle. To set opposing parties or interests against one another so as to advance one's own goals. play fast and loose. To behave in a recklessly irresponsible or deceitful manner: played fast and loose with the facts. play for time. To use delaying tactics; temporize. play games. Slang. To be evasive or deceptive: Quit playing games and tell me what you want. play in Peoria. Slang. To be acceptable to average constituents or consumers: an elitist political campaign that could never play in Peoria. play into the hands of. To act or behave so as to give an advantage to (an opponent). play (one's) cards. Informal. To use the resources or strategies at one's disposal: played her cards right and got promoted. play pos- sum. To pretend to be sleeping or dead. play the field. To date more than one person. play the game. Informal. To behave according to the accepted customs or standards. play up to. To curry favor with. play with fire. To take part in a dangerous or risky undertaking. play with (oneself). Vulgar Slang. To masturbate. [Middle English playen, from Old English plegian.] —play'a-bil/i-ty n.

(another's attitudes or feelings) for one's own interests: demagogues who play on popular fears. play out. To use up; exhaust: Our strength was played out early in the contest. play up. To emphasize or publicize: She played up her experience during the employment interview. —idioms. in play. 1. Sports. In a position to be legally or feasibly played: The ball is now in play. 2. In a position, or rumored to be in a position of possible corporate takeover: The company's stock rose in price when news stories stated that it was in play. out of play. Sports. Not in a position to be legally or feasibly played. play ball. Slang. To cooperate: The opposing attorneys refused to play ball with us. play both ends against the

—play'a-ble adj.

pla·ya (plī'ə) n. A nearly level area at the bottom of an undrained desert basin, sometimes temporarily covered with water. [Spanish, from Late Latin plagia, hillside, shoreline, probably from Greek, sides, from neuter pl. of plagios, oblique, sideways, from plagos, side. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

play-act (plā'ăkt') v. intr. play--act-ed, play--act-ing, play--acts. 1. To play a role in a dramatic performance. 2. To play a pretended role; make believe. 3. To behave in an overdramatic or artificial manner.

play-back (plā'băk') n. 1. The act or process of replaying a newly made record or tape. 2. A method of or an apparatus for reproducing sound recordings: "switches on the playback of a telephone-answering machine" (Vanity Fair).

play-bill (plā'bīl') n. A poster announcing a theatrical performance.

Play-bill (plā'bil') A trademark used for a program of a theatrical performance. This trademark often occurs in lowercase in print: "The typical hot, humid night... had most of the audience fanning themselves with their playbills" (Washington Times). "The playbill somehow listed the movement headings for the wrong Beethoven symphony" (Los Angeles Times).

play-book (plā'book') n. 1. A book containing the scripts of dramatic plays. 2. Sports. A notebook containing descriptions and diagrams of the plays of a team, especially a football team.

play-boy (plā'boi') n. A man who is devoted to the pursuit of pleasurable activities.

play-by-play (plā'bī-plā') adj. Being or giving a detailed running account of the action of an event, especially a sports event, as it occurs. — n. A detailed commentary of an event as it unfolds.

play-er (plā'ər) n. 1. One that plays, especially: a. Sports & Games. One who participates in a game or sport. b. A gambler. c. One who performs in theatrical roles. d. Music. One who plays an instrument. 2. An active participant: a major player in world affairs. 3. Music. The mechanism actuating a player piano. 4. A phonograph.

Play-er (plā'ər), Gary. Born 1935. South African-born American golfer. He is one of the few athletes to have captured all four titles in the Grand Slam of golf.

player piano (plā'ər pē-än'ō) n. Music. A mechanically operated piano that uses a perforated paper roll to actuate the keys.

play-ful (plā'fəl) adj. 1. Full of fun and high spirits; frolicsome or sportive: a playful kitten. 2. Humorous; jesting: "He meant to be conversationally playful but his voice had no tone" (Saul Bellow). —play'ful-ly adv. —play'ful-ness n.

SYNONYMS: playful, mischievous, impish, waggish, frolicsome. These adjectives mean inclined to or marked by lighthearted fun. Playful, the most general, suggests high spirits, gaiety, and often lively humor: "the playful children just let loose from school" (Oliver Goldsmith). Mischievous usually implies naughty and sometimes annoying or embarrassing playfulness: "A mischievous excitability is the most obvious expression of [his face]. If he were a horse, nobody would buy him; with that eye no one could answer for his temper" (Walter Bagehot). Impish suggests an appealingly bold and devilish or rascally quality: "teasing and worrying with impish laughter half suppressed" (Thomas Hardy). Waggish stresses wittiness or jocularly: "Muskrat Castle, as the house had been facetiously named by some waggish officer" (James Fenimore Cooper). Frolicsome suggests high-spirited, carefree, and uninhibited merriment: Frolicsome students celebrated their graduation with parties and practical jokes.

play-girl (plā'gûrl') n. A woman devoted to the pursuit of pleasurable activities.

play-go-er (plā'gō'ər) n. One who attends the theater. —play/go'ing n.

play-ground (plā'ground') n. 1. An outdoor area set aside for recreation and play, especially one containing equipment such as seesaws and swings. 2. A field or sphere of unrestricted pleasurable activity: "Foreign affairs had been T.R.'s personal playground during his Presidency" (John Dos Passos).

play-house (plā'hous') n. pl. play-hous-es (-hou'zīz, -sīz). 1. A theater. 2. A small house for children to play in. 3. A child's toy house; a dollhouse.

playing card (plā'īng kărd) n. Games. A card marked with its rank and suit and belonging to any of several decks used in playing various games.

playing field (plā'īng fēld) n. Sports. A field for games such as football and soccer.

play-let (plā'līt) n. A short play.

play-mak-er (plā'mā'kər) n. Sports. A player, especially a guard in basketball, who calls the signals for and initiates offensive plays. —play/mak'ing n.

play-mate (plā'māt') n. A companion in play or recreation.

play-off also play-off (plā'ôf', -ôf') n. Sports. 1. A final game or series of games played to break a tie. 2. A series of games played to determine a championship.

play-pen (plā'pĕn') n. A portable enclosure in which a baby or young child can be safely left to play.

play-room (plā'rōom', -rōom') n. A room designed or set aside for recreation or playing.

play-suit (plā'sōot') n. A woman's or child's play outfit consisting of shorts and a blouse, sometimes in one piece.

play therapy (plā'thĕr'ə-pĕ) n. A form of psychotherapy used with children to help them express or act out their experiences, feelings, and problems by playing with dolls, toys, and other play material, under the guidance or observation of a therapist. —play therapist n.

play-thing (plā'thīng') n. 1. Something to play with; a toy. 2. One treated as a toy: a plaything of fate.

play-wear (plā'wâr') n. Garments suitable for recreational activities.

play-wright (plā'rīt') n. One who writes plays; a dramatist.

pla-za (plā'zə, plāz'ə) n. 1. A public square or similar open area in a town or city. 2. a. A widened roadway forming the approach to tollbooths on a highway. b. A parking or service area next to a highway. 3. A shopping center. [Spanish, from Vulgar Latin plattea*, from Latin platea, broad street. See PLACE.]

plea (plē) n. 1. An earnest request; an appeal: spoke out in a plea for greater tolerance. 2. An excuse; a pretext: "necessity, /The Tyrant's plea" (John Milton).

3. Law. a. An allegation offered in pleading a case. b. A defendant's answer to the declaration made by the plaintiff in a civil action. c. The answer of the accused to a criminal charge or indictment: entered a plea of not guilty. d. A special answer depending on or demonstrating one or more reasons why a suit should be delayed, dismissed, or barred in equity law. e. An action or a suit. [Middle English plai, lawsuit, from Old French plai, plaid, from Late Latin placitum, decree, from Latin, from neuter past participle of placēre, to please. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.]

plea-bar·gain (plē'bär'gən) v. intr. plea-bar·gained, plea-bar·gain·ing, plea-bar·gains. Law. To make an agreement in which a defendant pleads guilty to a lesser charge and the prosecutor in return drops more serious charges.

—plea'-bar·gain·ing n.

pleach (plēch, plāch) v. tr. pleached, pleach·ing, pleach·es. 1. To plait or interlace (branches or vines, for example), especially in making a hedge or an arbor. 2. To shade or border with interlaced branches or vines. [Middle English plechen, from Old North French plechier, probably from Latin plectere. See plek- in Appendix.]

plead (plēd) v. plead·ed or pled (plēd), plead·ing, pleads. — v. intr. 1. To appeal earnestly; beg: plead for more time. 2. To offer reasons for or against something; argue earnestly: plead against a bill. 3. To provide an argument or appeal: Your youth and simplicity plead for you in this instance. 4. Law. a. To put forward a plea of a specific nature in court: plead guilty. b. To make or answer an allegation in a legal proceeding. c. To address a court as a lawyer or an advocate. — v. tr. 1. To assert as defense, vindication, or excuse; claim as a plea: plead illness. 2. Law. a. To present as an answer to a charge, an indictment, or a declaration made against one. b. To argue or present (a case) in a court or similar tribunal. [Middle English pleden, plaiden, from Old French plaidier, from Medieval Latin placitāre, to appeal to the law, from Late Latin placitum, decree, opinion. See PLEA.] —plead'a·ble adj. —plead'er n. —plead'ing·ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: In strict legal usage, one is said to plead guilty or plead not guilty but not to plead innocent. In nonlegal contexts, however, plead innocent is well established.

plead·ing (plē'dīng) n. 1. A plea; an entreaty. 2. Law. Advocacy of causes in court. 3. Law. a. A formal statement, generally written, propounding the cause of action or the defense in a case. b. pleadings. The consecutive statements, allegations, and counterallegations made in turn by plaintiff and defendant, or prosecutor and accused, in a legal proceeding.

pleas·ance (plēz'əns) n. 1. A secluded garden or landscaped area. 2. Archaic. Pleasure or a source of pleasure.

pleas-ant (plēz'ənt) adj. pleas-ant-er, pleas-ant-est. 1. Giving or affording pleasure or enjoyment; agreeable: a pleasant scene; pleasant sensations.

2. Pleasing in manner, behavior, or appearance. See Synonyms at amiable.

3. Fair and comfortable: pleasant weather. 4. Merry; lively. [Middle English ple-saunt, from Old French plaisant, present participle of plaisir, to please, from Latin placēre. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.] —pleas'ant-ly adv. —pleas'ant-ness n.

Pleasant Hill (plēz'ənt hīl) A city of western California northeast of Berkeley. It is mainly residential. Population, 31,585.

Pleasant Island (plēz'ənt ī'lənd) See Nauru.

Pleasanton (plēz'ən-tən) A city of western California southeast of Oakland. It is a residential and processing center in a grape-growing region. Population, 50,553.

pleas-ant-ry (plēz'ən-trē) n. pl. pleas-ant-ries. 1. A humorous remark or act; a jest. 2. A polite social utterance; a civility: exchanged pleasantries before getting down to business. 3. A good-humored or playful manner in conversation or social relations. [French plaisanterie, from Old French plesanterie, from plaisant, pleasant. See PLEASANT.]

please (plēz) v. pleased, pleas-ing, pleas-es. — v. tr. 1. To give enjoyment, pleasure, or satisfaction to; make glad or contented. 2. To be the will or desire of: May it please the court to admit this firearm as evidence. — v. intr. 1. To give satisfaction or pleasure; be agreeable: waiters who try hard to please. 2. To have the will or desire; wish: Do as you please. Sit down, if you please. — adv. 1. If it is your desire or pleasure; if you please. Used in polite requests: Please stand back. Pay attention, please. 2. Yes. Used in polite affirmative replies to offers: May I help you? Please. [Middle English plesen, from Old French plaisir, from Latin placēre. See plāk-¹ in Appendix.] —pleas'er n.

SYNONYMS: please, delight, gladden, gratify, tickle. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to give pleasure to”: was pleased by their success; a gift that would delight any child; praise that gladdens the spirit; progress that gratified all concerned; compliments that tickle their vanity.

ANTONYM: displease

pleas-ing (plē'zɪŋ) adj. Giving pleasure or enjoyment; agreeable.
—pleas'ing-ly adv. —pleas'ing-ness n.

pleas-ur-a-ble (plēzh'ər-ə-bəl) adj. Agreeable; gratifying.

—pleas'ur-a-bil'i-ty, pleas'ur-a-ble-ness n. —pleas'ur-a-bly adv.

pleas-ure (plēzh'ər) n. 1. The state or feeling of being pleased or gratified.

2. A source of enjoyment or delight: The graceful skaters were a pleasure to watch.

3. Amusement, diversion, or worldly enjoyment: “Pleasure... is a safer guide than either right or duty” (Samuel Butler). 4. Sensual gratification or indulgence.

5. One's preference or wish: What is your pleasure? — v. pleas-ured, pleas-ur-ing, pleas-ures. — v. tr. To give pleasure or enjoyment to; gratify: Our host pleased us with his company. — v. intr. 1. To take pleasure; delight: The hiker paused, pleasuring in the sounds of the forest. 2. To go in search of pleasure or enjoyment. [Middle English, from Old French plaisir, from plaisir, to please. See PLEASE.] — pleas'ure-less adj.

SYNONYMS: pleasure, enjoyment, delight, delectation, joy. These nouns denote a pleasant feeling, as of happiness or personal satisfaction, evoked by something that is to one's liking. Pleasure is the least specific: "One of the greatest pleasures of life is conversation" (Sydney Smith). "Pleasure without joy is as hollow as passion without tenderness" (Alan Jay Lerner). Enjoyment suggests pleasure, often abiding pleasure, arising from something gratifying or beneficial: Books are her major source of enjoyment. "Was it [ornament] done with enjoyment—was the carver happy while he was about it?" (John Ruskin). Delight and delectation imply keen but sometimes transitory pleasure: "There is delight in singing" (Walter Savage Landor). "Certified 'masterpieces' by dead composers, manipulated by charismatic star performers for the delectation of an increasingly passive and uninquisitive audience" (Will Crutchfield). Joy suggests an intense and especially an ecstatic or exultant state; the word is often associated with sharing, self-realization, or high-mindedness: "The deep joy we take in the company of people with whom we have just recently fallen in love is undisguisable" (John Cheever). "The rule of joy and the law of duty seem to me all one" (Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.).

pleasure principle (plēzh'ər prīn'sə-pəl) n. In psychoanalysis, the tendency or drive to achieve pleasure and avoid pain as the chief motivating force in behavior.

Pleas-ure Ridge Park (plēzh'ər rīj pārk) An unincorporated community of north-central Kentucky, a residential suburb of Louisville. Population, 25,131.

pleat (plēt) n. A fold in cloth made by doubling the material upon itself and then pressing or stitching it into place. — v. tr. pleat-ed, pleat-ing, pleats. To press or arrange in pleats: pleat a skirt; pleat curtains. [Middle English plet, variant of plait, pleat, fold. See PLAIT.] — pleat'er n.

pleb (plēb) n. 1. A commoner; a plebeian. 2. A freshman; a plebe. [Short for PLEBEIAN, or perhaps from PLEBS (taken as pl.).]

plebe (plēb) also pleb (plēb) n. A first-year student at the U.S. Military Academy or the U.S. Naval Academy. [Probably short for PLEBEIAN.]

ple-be-ian (plī-bē'ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to the common people of ancient Rome: a plebeian magistrate. 2. Of, belonging to, or characteristic of commoners. 3. Unrefined or coarse in nature or manner; common or vulgar: plebeian tastes. — n. 1. One of the common people of ancient Rome. 2. A member of the lower classes. 3. A vulgar or coarse person. [From Latin plēbius, from plēbs, plēb-, the common people. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.] —ple-be'ian-ism n.

—ple-be'ian-ly adv.

ple-bes (plē'bēz) n. Plural of plebs.

pleb-i-scite (plēb'ī-sīt', -sīt) n. 1. A direct vote in which the entire electorate is invited to accept or refuse a proposal: “a new constitution, which his people dutifully ratified in a plebiscite” (New York Times). 2. A vote in which a population exercises the right of national self-determination. [French plébiscite, from Latin plēbiscītum : plēbis, genitive of plēbs, the people; see pelə-¹ in Appendix + scītum, decree, from neuter past participle of scīscere, to vote for inchoative of scīre, to know; see skei- in Appendix.] —ple-bis'ci-tar'y (plə-bīs'ī-tēr'ē, plēb'ī-sīt'ə-rē) adj.

plebs (plēbz) n. pl. ple-bes (plē'bēz). 1. The common people of ancient Rome: the plebs and the patricians. 2. The common people; the populace. [Latin plēbs. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

ple-cop-ter-an (plī-köp'tər-ən) n. See stonefly. [From New Latin Plecoptera, order name : Greek plekein, to plait, twist; see plek- in Appendix + Greek pteron, wing; see pet- in Appendix.] —ple-cop'ter-an adj.

plec-tog-nath (plēk'tōg-nāth') n. Any of various tropical marine fishes of the order Tetraodontiformes or Plectognathi, which includes the triggerfishes, puffers, and trunkfishes. [From New Latin Plectognathī, order name : Greek plektos, twisted; see plek- in Appendix + Greek gnathos, jaw; see -GNATHOUS.] —plec'tog-nath' adj.

plec-trum (plēk'trəm) n. pl. plec-trums or plec-tra (-trə). Music. A small, thin piece of metal, plastic, bone, or similar material, used to pluck the strings of certain instruments, such as the guitar or lute. [Latin plēctrum, from Greek plēktron, from plēssein, plēg-, to strike. See plāk-² in Appendix.]

pled (plēd) v. A past tense and a past participle of plead.

pledge (plēj) n. 1. A solemn binding promise to do, give, or refrain from doing something: signed a pledge never to reveal the secret; a pledge of money to a charity. 2. a. Something given or held as security to guarantee payment of a debt or fulfillment of an obligation. b. The condition of something thus given or held: put an article in pledge. 3. Law. a. Delivery of goods or personal property as security for a debt or an obligation: a loan that required a pledge of property. b. The contract by which such delivery is made. 4. A token or sign: “fair pledges of a fruitful tree” (Robert Herrick). 5. A person who has been accepted for membership in a fraternity or similar organization and has promised to join but has not yet been initiated. 6. The act of drinking in honor of someone; a toast. 7. A vow to abstain from alcoholic liquor: ex-drinkers who have taken the pledge. — v.

pledged, pledg-ing, pledg-es. — v. tr. 1. To offer or guarantee by a solemn binding promise: pledge loyalty to a nation; pledged their cooperation. See Synonyms at devote. 2. See Synonyms at promise. 3. To bind or secure by or as if by a pledge: pledged themselves to the cause. 4. To deposit as security; pawn. 5. a. To promise to join (a fraternity or similar organization). b. To accept as a prospective member of such an organization. 6. To drink a toast to. — v. intr. 1. To make a solemn binding promise; swear. 2. To drink a toast. [Middle English, from Old French plege, probably from Late Latin plevium, a security, of Germanic origin.]

pledg·ee (plĕj-ē') n. 1. A person to whom something is pledged. 2. A person with whom something is deposited as a pledge.

pledge·or (plĕj'ər, plĕj-ôr') n. Law. Variant of pledgor.

pledg·er (plĕj'ər) n. One who makes or gives a pledge.

pled·get (plĕj'ĭt) n. A small, flat absorbent pad used to medicate, drain, or protect a wound or sore. [Origin unknown.]

pledg·or also pledge·or (plĕj'ər, plĕj-ôr') n. Law. A person who deposits property as a pledge.

-plegia suff. Paralysis: monoplegia. [Greek -plēgia, from plēgē, a blow, from plēssein, plēg-, to strike. See plāk-2 in Appendix.]

Ple·iad (plē'əd, -äd', plī'-) n. pl. Ple·ia·des (plē'ə-dēz', plī'-). 1. One of the Pleiades. 2. Often pleiad. A group of seven illustrious persons. [Back-formation from PLEIADES.]

Ple·ia·des (plē'ə-dēz', plī'-) pl.n. 1. Greek Mythology. The seven daughters of Atlas (Maia, Electra, Celaeno, Taygeta, Merope, Alcyone, and Sterope), who were metamorphosed into stars. 2. An open star cluster in the constellation Taurus, consisting of several hundred stars, of which six are visible to the naked eye.

[Middle English Pliades, from Latin Plēiades, from Greek Pleiades.]

pleio- pref. Variant of pleo-.

plei·o·tax·y (plī'ə-tăk'sē) n. Botany. An increase in the number of whorls in an inflorescence. [Greek pleiōn, more; see pelə-1 in Appendix + -TAXY.]

plei·ot·ro·pism (plī-öt'rə-pīz'əm) also plei·ot·ro·py (-pē) n. The control by a single gene of several distinct and seemingly unrelated phenotypic effects.

[Greek pleiōn, more; see pelə-1 in Appendix + -TROPISM.] — plei'·o·tro'pic

(plī'ə-trō'pĭk, -trōp'ĭk) adj. — plei'·o·tro'pi·cal·ly adv.

Pleis·to·cene (plī'stə-sēn') adj. Of, belonging to, or designating the geologic time, rock series, and sedimentary deposits of the earlier of the two epochs of the Quaternary Period, characterized by the alternate appearance and recession of northern glaciation and the appearance of the progenitors of human beings. — n. The Pleistocene Epoch or system of deposits. [Greek pleistos, most; see pelə-1 in Appendix + -CENE.]

Ple·kha·nov (plī-kă'nôf', -KHă'nəf), Georgi Valentinovich. 1857-1918.

Russian revolutionary and political philosopher. The founder of the Marxist movement in Russia, he was also a leading Menshevik.

ple·na (plē'nə, plēn'ə) n. A plural of plenum.

ple·na·ry (plē'nə-rē, plēn'ə-) adj. 1. Complete in all respects; unlimited or full: a diplomat with plenary powers. 2. Fully attended by all qualified members: a plenary session of the council. [Late Latin plēnārius, from Latin plēnus, full. See pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.] —ple'na·ri·ly adv. —ple'na·ri·ness n.

plenary indulgence (plē'nə-rē in-dūl'jəns) n. Roman Catholic Church. An indulgence that remits the full temporal punishment incurred by a sinner.

plen·i·po·ten·ti·ar·y (plēn'ə-pə-tēn'shē-ēr'ē, -shə-rē) adj. Invested with or conferring full powers: a plenipotentiary deputy. — n. pl.

plen·i·po·ten·ti·ar·ies. A diplomatic agent, such as an ambassador, fully authorized to represent his or her government. [Medieval Latin plēnipotentiārius, from Late Latin plēnipotēns, plēnipotent-, invested with full power : Latin plēnus, full; see pelə⁻¹ in Appendix + Latin potēns, powerful; see POTENT.]

plen·i·tude (plēn'i-tōod', -tyōod') n. 1. An ample amount or quantity; an abundance: this midsummer plenitude of fruits and vegetables. 2. The condition of being full, ample, or complete: granaries filled to plenitude. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin plēnitūdō, from plēnus, full. See pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.] —plen'i·tu'di·nous (-tōod'n-əs, -tyōod'-) adj.

plen·te·ous (plēn'tē-əs) adj. 1. Abundant; copious. 2. Producing or yielding in abundance. See Synonyms at plentiful. [Middle English, alteration of plentivous, from Old French plentiveus, from plentif, from plente, plenty. See PLENTY.] —plen'te·ous·ly adv. —plen'te·ous·ness n.

plen·ti·ful (plēn'tī-fəl) adj. 1. Existing in great quantity or ample supply. 2. Providing or producing an abundance: a plentiful harvest. —plen'ti·ful·ly adv. —plen'ti·ful·ness n.

SYNONYMS: plentiful, abundant, ample, copious, plenteous. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “being fully as much as one needs or desires”: a plentiful supply of stationery; her abundant talent; ample space; copious provisions; a plenteous crop of wheat.

ANTONYM: scant

plen·ty (plēn'tē) n. 1. A full or completely adequate amount or supply: plenty of time. 2. A large quantity or amount; an abundance: “Awards and honors came to her in plenty” (Joyce Carol Oates). 3. A condition of general abundance or prosperity: “fruitful regions gladdened by plenty and lulled by peace!” (Samuel Johnson). — adj. Plentiful; abundant: “Ships were then not so plenty in those waters as now” (Herman Melville). — adv. Informal. Sufficiently; very: It's plenty hot. [Middle English, from Old French plente, from Latin plēnitās, from plēnus, full. See pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

ple-num (plē'nəm, plēn'əm) n. pl. ple-nums or ple-na (plē'nə, plēn'ə). 1. An assembly or a meeting with all members present. 2. A condition, space, or enclosure in which air or other gas is at a pressure greater than that of the outside atmosphere. 3. The condition of being full; fullness. 4. A space completely filled with matter. [Latin plēnum (spatium), full (space), neuter of plēnus. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

pleo- or pleio- or plio- pref. More: pleopod. [From Greek pleiōn, pleōn, more. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

ple-och-ro-ism (plē-ōk'rō-iz'əm) n. The property possessed by some crystals of exhibiting different colors, especially three different colors, when viewed along different axes. [PLEO- + Greek khros, color + -ISM.] —ple'o-chro'ic (plē'ə-krō'ik) adj.

ple-o-mor-phism (plē'ə-mōr'fiz'əm) n. 1. Chemistry. See polymorphism (n., sense 2). 2. Biology. The occurrence of two or more structural forms during a life cycle, especially of certain plants. —ple'o-mor'phic adj.

ple-o-nasm (plē'ə-nāz'əm) n. 1. a. The use of more words than are required to express an idea; redundancy. b. An instance of pleonasm. 2. A superfluous word or phrase. [Late Latin pleonasmus, from Greek pleonasmos, from pleonazein, to be excessive, from pleōn, more. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.] —ple'o-nas'tic (-nās'tik) adj. —ple'o-nas'ti-cal-ly adv.

ple-o-pod (plē'ə-pōd') n. See swimmeret.

ple-ro-cer-coid (plīr'ō-sūr'koid') n. The infective larva of some tapeworms, characterized by its solid elongated body. [Greek plērēs, full, infected; see pelə-¹ in Appendix + kerkos, tail + -OID.]

ple-si-o-saur (plē'sē-ə-sōr', plē'zē-) also ple-si-o-sau-rus (plē'sē-ə-sōr'əs, plē'zē-) n. pl. ple-si-o-saurs also ple-si-o-saur-i (-sōr'ī). Paleontology. A large extinct marine reptile having paddlelike limbs that was common in Europe and North America during the Mesozoic Era. [New Latin Plesiosaurus, type genus : Greek plēsios, near; see pel-⁵ in Appendix + New Latin saurus, lizard; see SAURIAN.]

ples-sim-e-ter (plē-sim'i-tər) n. See pleximeter. [Greek plēssein, to strike; see PLEXOR + -METER.]

ples-sor (plēs'ər) n. Variant of plexor.

pleth-o-ra (plēth'ər-ə) n. 1. A superabundance; an excess. 2. An excess of blood in the circulatory system or in one organ or area. [Late Latin plēthōra, from Greek, from plēthein, to be full. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

ple-thor-ic (plē-thōr'ik, -thōr'-, plēth'ə-rīk) adj. 1. a. Excessive in quantity; superabundant: "this successful industry of England, with its plethoric wealth" (Thomas Carlyle). b. Excessive in style; turgid: plethoric prose. 2. Characterized by an overabundance of blood. —ple-thor'i-cal-ly adv.

ple·thys·mo·gram (plē-thīz'mə-grām', plə-) n. A record or tracing produced by a plethysmograph.

ple·thys·mo·graph (plē-thīz'mə-grāf', plə-) n. An instrument that measures variations in the size of an organ or body part on the basis of the amount of blood passing through or present in the part. [Greek plēthusmos, increase (from plēthunein, to increase, from plēthus, quantity, from plēthein, to be full); see pelə¹ in Appendix + -GRAPH.] —ple·thys'mo·graph'ic adj. —ple·thys'mo·graph'i·cal·ly adv. —pleth'ys·mog'ra·phy (plēth'iz-môg'rə-fē) n.

pleur- pref. Variant of pleuro-.

pleu·ra¹ (plöör'ə) n. pl. pleu·rae (plöör'ē). A thin serous membrane in mammals that envelops each lung and folds back to make a lining for the chest cavity. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin, from Greek, side, rib.] —pleu'ral adj.

pleu·ra² (plöör'ə) n. Plural of pleuron.

pleu·rae (plöör'ē) n. Plural of pleura¹.

pleu·ri·sy (plöör'ī-sē) n. Inflammation of the pleura, usually occurring as a complication of a disease such as pneumonia, accompanied by accumulation of fluid in the pleural cavity, chills, fever, and painful breathing and coughing. [Middle English pluresy, from Old French pleuresie, from Late Latin pleurisy, alteration of Latin pleuritis, from Greek pleuritis : pleura, side + -itis, -itis.] —pleu·rit'ic (plöör-rit'ik) adj.

pleurisy root (plöör'ī-sē rōot) n. See butterfly weed.

pleuro- or pleur- pref. 1. Side; lateral: pleurodont. 2. Pleura; pleural: pleurotomy. [Greek, from pleura, side, rib.]

pleu·ro·dont (plöör'ə-dönt') adj. Having the teeth attached by their sides to the inner side of the jaw, as in some lizards. — n. A lizard with pleurodont teeth.

pleu·ro·dyn·i·a (plöör'ə-dīn'ē-ə) n. 1. Paroxysmal pain and soreness of the muscles between the ribs. 2. An epidemic disease caused by a coxsackievirus, characterized by paroxysmal pain in the lower chest and accompanied by fever, headache, and malaise. [New Latin : PLEUR(O)- + Greek odunē, pain; see ed- in Appendix + -IA¹.]

pleu·ron (plöör'ön') n. pl. pleu·ra (plöör'ə). An external, lateral part of the body segments of arthropods. [New Latin, from Greek, side, rib.]

pleu·ro·pneu·mo·nia (plöör'ō-nöō-mōn'yə, -nyöō-) n. 1. Inflammation of the pleura and lungs; pneumonia aggravated by pleurisy. 2. An infectious febrile disease of cattle, caused by a mycoplasma and characterized by inflammation of the pleura and lungs.

pleu·ro·pneu·mo·nia·like organism (plöör'ō-nöō-mōn'yə-līk' ôr'gə-nīz'əm, -nyöō-) n. Abbr. PPLO See mycoplasma.

pleu·rot·o·my (plöör-röt'ə-mē) n. pl. pleu·rot·o·mies. Surgical incision of the pleura.

pleus-ton (plōō'stən, -stōn') n. Plants that float on the surface of bodies of fresh water. [Greek pleusis, sailing; see pleu- in Appendix + (PLANK)TON.]

—pleus-ton'ic (plōō-stōn'ik) adj.

Plev-en (plēv'ən, -ən) or Plev-na (-nə, -nä) A city of northern Bulgaria north-east of Sofia. Settled by Thracians, it was ruled by Turkey from the 15th to the 19th century. Population, 144,000.

plex-i-form (plēk'sə-fōrm') adj. Similar to or having the form of a plexus: the plexiform layers of the retina. [PLEX(US) + -FORM.]

Plex-i-glas (plēk'sī-glās') A trademark used for a light, transparent, weather-resistant thermoplastic. This trademark, which often occurs in attributive contexts, also occurs in many instances lowercased and spelled plexiglass: “The emergency room receptionist laments the construction of a Plexiglas divider at her counter” (New York Times). “The display pieces are double sealed inside plexiglass cases” (Los Angeles Times). “The tower was operating with interim lighting, no ceiling and a pane of plexiglass” (Aviation Week & Space Technology).

plex-im-e-ter (plēk-sim'ī-tər) n. A small, thin plate held against the body and struck with a plexor in diagnosis by percussion. Also called plessimeter [Greek plēxis, a blow; see PLEXOR + -METER.] —plex'i-met'ric (plēk'sə-mēt'rik) adj.
—plex-im'e-try n.

plex-or (plēk'sər) also ples-sor (plēs'ər) n. A small, rubber-headed hammer used in examination or diagnosis by percussion. [From Greek plēxis, a blow, from plēssein, plēg-, to strike. See plāk-² in Appendix.]

plex-us (plēk'səs) n. pl. plexus or plex-us-es. 1. A structure in the form of a network, especially of nerves, blood vessels, or lymphatics: the cardiac plexus; the pelvic plexus. 2. A combination of interlaced parts; a network. [New Latin, from Latin, braid, from past participle of plectere, to plait. See plek- in Appendix.]

plf. abbr. Law. Plaintiff.

pli-a-ble (plī'ə-bəl) adj. 1. Easily bent or shaped. See Synonyms at malleable. 2. Receptive to change; adaptable: pliable attitudes. 3. Easily influenced, persuaded, or swayed; tractable. [Middle English, from Old French, from plier, to bend. See PLIANT.] —pli'a-bil'i-ty, pli'a-ble-ness n. —pli'a-bly adv.

pli-ant (plī'ənt) adj. 1. Easily bent or flexed; pliable. See Synonyms at malleable. 2. Easily altered or modified to fit conditions; adaptable. 3. Yielding readily to influence or domination; compliant. [Middle English, from Old French, present participle of plier, to fold, bend, from Latin plicāre. See plek- in Appendix.] —pli'an-cy, pli'ant-ness n. —pli'ant-ly adv.

pli-ca (plī'kə) n. pl. pli-cae (plī'sē, -kē). A fold or ridge, as of skin, membrane, or shell. [Medieval Latin, fold, from Latin plicāre, to fold. See plek- in Appendix.] —pli'cal adj.

pli·cate (plī'kāt') also pli·cat·ed (-kā'tid) adj. Arranged in folds like those of a fan; pleated. [Latin plicātus, past participle of plicāre, to fold. See plek- in Appendix.] —pli'cate'ly adv. —pli'cate'ness n.

pli·ca·tion (plī-kā'shən) also plic·a·ture (plīk'ə-chōōr') n. 1. a. The act or process of folding. b. The state of being folded. 2. A fold.

pli·é (plē-ā') n. A movement in ballet performance and exercise, in which the knees are bent while the back is held straight. [French, from past participle of plier, to fold, bend, from Old French. See PLIANT.]

plied¹ (plīd) v. Past tense and past participle of ply¹.

plied² (plīd) v. Past tense and past participle of ply².

pli·er also ply·er (plī'ər) n. 1. One who plies a trade. 2. pliers. A variously shaped hand tool having a pair of pivoted jaws, used for holding, bending, or cutting.

plies¹ (plīz) v. Third person singular present tense of ply¹. — n. Plural of ply¹.

plies² (plīz) v. Third person singular present tense of ply².

plight¹ (plīt) n. A situation, especially a bad or unfortunate one. See Synonyms at predicament. [Middle English, alteration (influenced by plight, risky promise or pledge), of plīt, fold, wrinkle, situation, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin plīctum, neuter past participle of plicāre, to fold. See plek- in Appendix.]

plight² (plīt) v. tr. plight·ed, plight·ing, plights. 1. To promise or bind by a solemn pledge, especially to betroth. See Synonyms at promise. 2. To give or pledge (one's word or oath, for example). — n. A solemn pledge, as of faith. —idiom. plight (one's) troth. 1. To become engaged to marry. 2. To give one's solemn oath. [Middle English plighten, from Old English plihtan, to endanger, put at risk, from pliht, danger, risk.] —plight'er n.

Plimp·ton (plīmp'tən), George Ames. Born 1927. American writer and editor known for participating in various sports with professional athletes and writing about his experiences.

plim·soll (plīm'səl, -sōl') also plim·sol or plim·sole (-sōl') n. Chiefly British. A rubber-soled cloth shoe; a sneaker. [Probably from the resemblance of its mudguard to a PLIMSOLL MARK.]

Plim·soll (plīm'səl, -sōl'), Samuel. 1824-1898. British merchant and shipping reformer. He introduced the Merchant Shipping Act of 1876, establishing safe load limits for cargo ships.

Plimsoll mark (plīm'səl mārĕk) n. Nautical. Any of a set of lines on the hull of a merchant ship that indicate the depth to which it may be legally loaded under specified conditions. Also called load line, Plimsoll line. [After Samuel PLIMSOLL.]

plink (plɪŋk) v. plinked, plink-ing, plinks. — v. tr. 1. To cause to make a soft, sharp, metallic sound; clink. 2. To shoot at casually. — v. intr. 1. To make a soft, sharp, metallic sound. 2. To shoot casually at random targets. [Imitative.]

plinth (plɪnθ) n. 1. Architecture. A block or slab on which a pedestal, column, or statue is placed. 2. The base block at the intersection of the baseboard and the vertical trim around an opening. 3. A continuous course of stones supporting a wall. Also called plinth course 4. A square base, as for a vase. [French plinthe, from Latin plinthus, from Greek plinthos, tile, plinth.]

Plin-y¹ (plɪn'ē), Known as “the Elder.” A.D. 23-79. Roman scholar and naturalist. He wrote the 37-volume Historia Naturalis.

Plin-y² (plɪn'ē), Known as “the Younger.” A.D. 62?-113?. Roman consul and writer, the nephew of Pliny the Elder. His letters provide valuable information about Roman life.

plio- pref. Variant of pleo-.

Pli-o-cene (plɪ'ə-sēn') Geology. adj. Of, belonging to, or designating the geologic time, rock series, and sedimentary deposits of the last of the five epochs of the Tertiary Period, characterized by the appearance of distinctly modern animals. — n. The Pliocene Epoch or its system of deposits. [Greek pleiōn, more; see pelə⁻¹ in Appendix + -CENE.]

Pli-o-film (plɪ'ə-fɪlm') A trademark used for a pliant, transparent rubber compound employed in making waterproof fabrics and packaging materials.

plis-sé also plis-se (plɪ-sā') n. 1. A puckered finish given to fabric by treating it with a caustic soda. 2. Fabric having such a finish. [French, from past participle of plisser, to pleat, from Old French, from pli, fold, from plier, to fold, from Latin plīcāre. See plek- in Appendix.]

pln. abbr. Plain.

PLO abbr. Palestine Liberation Organization.

Plock (pwôtsk) A city of central Poland on the Vistula River west-southwest of Warsaw. Known since the tenth century, it passed to Prussia in 1793 and to Russia in 1815. It reverted to Poland after World War I. Population, 114,500.

plod (plöd) v. plod-ded, plod-ding, plods. — v. intr. 1. To move or walk heavily or laboriously; trudge: “donkeys that plodded wearily in a circle round a gin” (D.H. Lawrence). 2. To work or act perseveringly or monotonously; drudge: plodding through a mountain of paperwork. — v. tr. To trudge along or over. — n. 1. The act of moving or walking heavily and slowly. 2. The sound made by a heavy step. [Perhaps imitative.] — plod/der n. — plod/ding-ly adv.

Plo-eș-ti (plô-yēsht', -yēsh'tē) See Ploiești.

-ploid suff. Having a number of chromosomes that has a specified relationship to, or is a multiple of, the basic number of chromosomes of a group: heteroploid. [From DIPLOID, and HAPLOID.]

ploi-dy (ploɪ'dē) n. A multiple of the basic number of chromosomes in a cell.
[From DIPLOIDY, and HAPLOIDY.]

Plo-ieș-ti or Plo-eș-ti (plō-yěsh't', -yěsh'tē) A city of southeast-central Romania north of Bucharest. Founded in 1596, it is the center of a major oil-producing region. Population, 229,915.

plonk¹ (plɒŋk, plʊŋk) v., n. & adv. Variant of plunk.

plonk² (plɒŋk) n. Chiefly British. Cheap or inferior wine. [Short for earlier plink-plonk, perhaps alteration of French vin blanc, white wine : vin, wine (from Old French); see VINEGAR + blanc, white (from Old French); see BLANK.]

plop (plɒp) v. plopped, plop-ping, plops. — v. intr. 1. To fall with a sound like that of an object falling into water without splashing. 2. To let the body drop heavily: Exhausted, I plopped into the armchair. — v. tr. To drop or set heavily, with or as if with a plopping sound. — n. A plopping sound or movement.
[Imitative.] — plop adv.

plo-sion (plō'zhən) n. Linguistics. 1. The articulation of a plosive sound.

2. The sudden release of occluded air characteristically occurring in the articulation of certain stop consonants. Also called explosion [From EXPLOSION.]

plo-sive (plō'siv, -ziv) Linguistics. adj. Of, relating to, or being a speech sound produced by complete closure of the oral passage and subsequent release accompanied by a burst of air, as in the sound (p) in pit or (d) in dog. — n. A plosive speech sound. Also called stop [From EXPLOSIVE.]

plot (plɒt) n. 1. a. A small piece of ground, generally used for a specific purpose: a garden plot; a cemetery plot. b. A measured area of land; a lot. 2. A ground plan, as for a building; a diagram. 3. See graph¹ (n., sense 1). 4. The plan of events or main story in a narrative or drama. 5. A secret plan to accomplish a hostile or illegal purpose; a scheme. See Synonyms at conspiracy. — v. plot-ted, plot-ting, plots. — v. tr. 1. To represent graphically, as on a chart: plot a ship's course. 2. Mathematics. a. To locate (points or other figures) on a graph by means of coordinates. b. To draw (a curve) connecting points on a graph. 3. To conceive and arrange the action and incidents of: "I began plotting novels at about the time I learned to read" (James Baldwin). 4. To form a plot for; prearrange secretly or deviously: plot an assassination. — v. intr. 1. To be located by means of coordinates, as on a chart or with data. 2. To form or take part in a plot; scheme. [Middle English, from Old English.] — plot/less-ness n.

Plo-ti-nus (plō-tī'nəs), A.D. 205-270. Egyptian-born Roman philosopher who founded Neo-Platonism. His writings are collected in The Enneads.

plot line or plot-line (plɒt'lin') n. 1. A literary or dramatic plot; a story line. 2. Often plot lines. Dialogue essential to the development of a plot in a drama.

plot-tage (plɒt'ij) n. The area of land in a plot or group of plots.

plot-ter (plöt'ər) n. Computer Science. A computer output device that draws graphs or pictures, usually by moving a pen. Also called plotting board, plotting table.

plot-ting board (plöt'ɪŋg bôrd) n. Computer Science. See plotter.

plotting table (plöt'ɪŋg tã'bəl) n. Computer Science. See plotter.

plough (plou) n. & v. Variant of plow.

Plov-div (plôv'dif') A city of south-central Bulgaria on the Maritsa River southeast of Sofia. Originally built by Thracians, it fell to Macedonia in 341 B.C. and to Rome in 46. The city changed hands frequently in the Middle Ages and was controlled by Russia from 1877 to 1885. Population, 378,000.

plow-er (plüv'ər, plô'vər) n. pl. plover or plow-ers. 1. Any of various widely distributed wading birds of the family Charadriidae, having rounded bodies, short tails, and short bills. 2. Any of various similar or related birds. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Vulgar Latin pluviārius*, from Latin pluvia, rain. See PLUVIAL.]

plow also plough (plou) n. 1. A farm implement consisting of a heavy blade at the end of a beam, usually hitched to a draft team or motor vehicle and used for breaking up soil and cutting furrows in preparation for sowing. 2. An implement of similar function, such as a snowplow. — v. plowed also ploughed, plow-ing also plough-ing, plows also ploughs. — v. tr. 1. a. To break and turn over (earth) with a plow. b. To form (a furrow, for example) with a plow. c. To form furrows in with or as if with a plow: plow a field. 2. To make or form with driving force: I plowed my way through the crowd. 3. To cut through (water): plow the high seas. — v. intr. 1. To break and turn up earth with a plow. 2. To admit of plowing: Rocky earth plows poorly. 3. To move or progress with driving force: The attackers formed a wedge and plowed through the enemy line. 4. To proceed laboriously; plod: plowed through the backlog of work. — phrasal verbs. plow back. To reinvest (earnings or profits) in one's business. plow into. Informal. 2. To strike with force. 3. To undertake (a task, for example) with eagerness and vigor. plow under. 4. To cause to vanish under something piled up. 5. To overwhelm, as with burdens. [Middle English plough, plouw, from Old English plōh, plōg, plow, plowland.] — plow'a-ble adj. — plow'er n.

Plow (plou) n. See Big Dipper.

plow-back (plou'băk') n. 1. Reinvestment of profits in the business that earned them. 2. An amount of profits thus reinvested.

plow-boy (plou'boi') n. 1. A boy who leads or guides a team of animals in plowing. 2. A country boy.

plow-man (plou'mən) n. 1. A man who plows. 2. A farmer or rustic.

plow-share (plou'shâr') n. The cutting blade of a plow; a share.

plow steel (plou stēl) n. A high-strength steel having a carbon content of 0.5 to 0.95 percent and used primarily to make wire rope.

ploy (ploi) n. An action calculated to frustrate an opponent or gain an advantage indirectly or deviously; a maneuver: “A typical ploy is to feign illness, procure medicine, then sell it on the black market” (Jill Smolowe). [Perhaps from EMPLOY, employment (obsolete).]

PLSS abbr. Portable life-support system.

plu. abbr. Plural.

pluck (plūk) v. plucked, pluck-ing, plucks. — v. tr. 1. To remove or detach by grasping and pulling abruptly with the fingers; pick: pluck a flower; pluck feathers from a chicken; plucked a rabbit from the hat. 2. To pull out the hair or feathers of: pluck a chicken. 3. To remove abruptly or forcibly: plucked the child from school in midterm. 4. To give an abrupt pull to; tug at: pluck a sleeve.

5. Music. To sound (the strings of an instrument) by pulling and releasing them with the fingers or a plectrum. — v. intr. To give an abrupt pull; tug. — n.

1. The act or an instance of plucking. 2. Resourceful courage and daring in the face of difficulties; spirit. 3. The heart, liver, windpipe, and lungs of a slaughtered animal. [Middle English plukken, from Old English pluccian, probably from Vulgar Latin piluccāre*, ultimately from Latin pilāre, from pilus, hair.]

—pluck'er n.

pluck-y (plūk'ē) adj. pluck-i-er, pluck-i-est. Having or showing courage and spirit in trying circumstances. See Synonyms at brave. —pluck'i-ly adv.

—pluck'i-ness n.

plug (plūg) n. 1. An object, such as a cork or a wad of cloth, used to fill a hole tightly; a stopper. 2. A dense mass of material that obstructs a passage. 3. A usually cylindrical or conic piece cut from something larger, often as a sample.

4. Electricity. a. A fitting, commonly with two metal prongs for insertion in a fixed socket, used to connect an appliance to a power supply. b. A spark plug.

5. A hydrant. 6. a. A flat cake of pressed or twisted tobacco. b. A piece of chewing tobacco. 7. Geology. A mass of igneous rock filling the vent of a volcano.

8. Informal. A favorable public mention of a commercial product, business, or performance, especially when broadcast. 9. Slang. Something inferior, useless, or defective, especially an old, worn-out horse. 10. Slang. A gunshot or bullet: a plug in the back. 11. Sports. A lure to which hooks are attached, used especially in angling. — v. plugged, plug-ging, plugs. — v. tr. 1. To fill (a hole) tightly with or as if with a plug; stop up. 2. To insert (something) as a plug: plugged a cork in the bottle. 3. Slang. a. To hit with a bullet; shoot. b. To hit with the fist; punch. 4. Informal. To publicize (a product, for example) favorably, as by mentioning on a broadcast: authors who plug their latest books on TV talk shows. —

v. intr. 1. To become stopped up or obstructed: alveoli that plug up with phlegm.

2. Informal. To work doggedly and persistently: “You may plug along fifty years” before you get anywhere” (Saul Bellow). —phrasal verbs. plug in. 1. To connect (an appliance) to an electrical outlet. 2. To function by being connected to an electrical outlet: a power drill that plugs in. plug into. 3. To connect or be connected to in the manner of an electrical appliance: The local system is plugged into the national telephone network. This computer plugs into a data bank.

4. Slang. To cause to be closely attuned or responsive to: connoisseurs who are plugged into the current art scene. [Dutch, from Middle Dutch plugge.]

—plug’ger n.

plug board (plŭg bōrd) n. 1. A control panel or wiring panel. 2. Computer Science. A removable panel in a computing device that may be rewired at will to sort data by a prescribed pattern.

plug-com·pat·i·ble (plŭg’kəm-păt’ə-bəl) adj. Computer Science. Capable of being connected peripherally to a computer without modification. Used of hardware.

plug-in (plŭg’in’) adj. Designed to be plugged in to an electric circuit: a plug-in game.

plug-ug-ly (plŭg’ŭg’lē) n. pl. plug-ug-lies. Slang. A gangster or ruffian.

[From the Plug Uglies, a gang active in several East Coast cities in the 1850’s.]

plum¹ (plŭm) n. 1. a. Any of several shrubs or small trees of the genus Prunus, bearing smooth-skinned, fleshy, edible fruit with a single hard-shelled stone that encloses the seed. b. The fruit of any of these trees. 2. a. Any of several trees bearing plumlike fruit. b. The fruit of such a tree. 3. A raisin, when added to a pudding or cake. 4. A sugarplum. 5. Color. A dark purple to deep reddish purple. 6. An especially desirable position, assignment, or reward: an ambassadorship granted as a political plum. [Middle English, from Old English plūme, from Vulgar Latin prūna*, from neuter pl. of Latin prūnum.]

plum² (plŭm) Informal. adv. Variant of plumb (adv., sense 3). — adj. Variant of plumb (adj., sense 2).

Plum (plŭm) A borough of southwest Pennsylvania, a suburb of Pittsburgh. Population, 25,609.

plum-age (plōō’mīj) n. 1. The covering of feathers on a bird. 2. Feathers used ornamentally. 3. Elaborate dress; finery. [Middle English, from Old French, from plume, plume, from Latin plūma.] —plum’aged adj.

plu·mate (plōō’māt’) adj. Resembling a plume or feather. [Latin plūmātus, feathered, from plūma, feather.]

plumb (plŭm) n. 1. A weight on the end of a line, used to determine water depth. 2. A weight on the end of a line, used especially by masons and carpenters to establish a true vertical. — adv. 1. In a vertical or perpendicular line.

2. Informal. Directly; squarely: fell plumb in the middle of the puddle. 3. Also plum. Informal. Utterly; completely: plumb worn out. — adj. 1. Exactly vertical. See Synonyms at vertical. 2. Also plum. Informal. Utter; absolute; sheer: a plumb fool. — v. plumbed, plumb-ing, plumbs. — v. tr. 1. To determine the depth of with a plumb; sound. 2. To test the verticality or alignment of with a plumb. 3. To straighten or make perpendicular: plumb up the wall. 4. To examine closely or deeply; probe: “Shallow ideas are plumbed and discarded” (Gilbert Highet). 5. To seal with lead. — v. intr. To work as a plumber. — idiom. out of plumb (or off plumb). Not vertical. [Middle English, lead, a plumb, from Old French plomb, from Latin plumbum, lead.] — plumb’able adj.

plum-ba-go (plüm-bā’gō) n. pl. plum-ba-gos. 1. See graphite. 2. Any of various plants of the genus Plumbago; leadwort. [Latin plumbāgō, lead ore, from plumbum, lead.]

plumb bob (plüm böb) n. A usually conical metal weight attached to the end of a plumb line.

plumb-er (plüm’ər) n. 1. One that installs and repairs pipes and plumbing. 2. Slang. An employee assigned to investigate and stop leaks of sensitive information: “The plumbers pushed the departments to investigate with interviews and polygraph tests” (Richard M. Nixon). [Middle English plummer, from Old French plomier, from Latin plumbārius, lead worker, from Latin plumbum, lead.]

plumb-er’s helper (plüm’ərz hěl’pər) n. See plunger (n., sense 2).

plumber’s snake (plüm’ərz snāk) n. See snake (n., sense 3).

plumb-er-y (plüm’ə-rē) n. pl. plumb-er-ies. 1. A plumber’s workshop or place of business. 2. A plumber’s work; plumbing.

plum-bif-er-ous (plüm-bif’ər-əs) adj. Containing lead. [Latin plumbum, lead + -FEROUS.]

plumb-ing (plüm’ing) n. 1. The pipes, fixtures, and other apparatus of a water, gas, or sewage system in a building. 2. The work or trade of a plumber.

plum-bism (plüm’biz’əm) n. Chronic lead poisoning. [From Latin plumbum, lead.]

plumb line (plüm līn) n. 1. A line from which a weight is suspended to determine verticality or depth. 2. A line regarded as directed exactly toward the earth’s center of gravity.

plumb rule (plüm rōol) n. A narrow strip of wood with a plumb line and bob attached, used to test verticality.

plume (plōom) n. 1. A feather, especially a large and showy one: the long plumes of a heron in the breeding season. 2. A large feather or cluster of feathers worn as an ornament or symbol of rank, as on a helmet. 3. A token of honor or achievement. 4. A structure or form that is like a long feather: a plume of smoke. 5. Ecology. A space in air, water, or soil containing pollutants released from a point source. 6. Geology. An upwelling of molten material from the earth’s mantle. — v. tr. plumed, plum-ing, plumes. 1. To decorate, cover, or supply with or as if with plumes. 2. To smooth (feathers); preen. 3. To congratulate plume·let (plōōm'lit) n. A small plume.

(oneself) in a self-satisfied way: plumed himself on his victory. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin plūma.]

plum·met (plūm'it) n. 1. A plumb bob. 2. Something that weighs down or oppresses; a burden. — v. intr. plum·met·ed, plum·met·ing, plum·mets.

1. To fall straight down; plunge. 2. To decline suddenly and steeply: Stock prices plummeted. [Middle English plomet, from Old French, ball of lead, diminutive of plom, plomb, sounding lead, from Latin plumbum.]

plum·my (plūm'ē) adj. plum·mi·er, plum·mi·est. 1. a. Filled with plums. b. Smelling or tasting of plums. 2. Choice; desirable: a plummy leading role; a plummy job. 3. Exceedingly or affectedly mellow and rich: a radio announcer's plummy voice.

plu·mose (plōō'mōs') adj. 1. Having feathers or featherlike growths; feathered. 2. Resembling a plume; feathery. [Latin plūmōsus, from plūma, feather.]

—plu'mose'ly adv. —plu·mos'i·ty (-mōs'ī-tē) n.

plump¹ (plūmp) adj. plump·er, plump·est. 1. Well-rounded and full in form; chubby. See Synonyms at fat. 2. Abundant; ample: a plump reward. — v. plumped, plump·ing, plumps. — v. tr. To make well-rounded or full in form: plumped up the pillows. — v. intr. To become well-rounded, chubby, or full in form. [Middle English, dull, probably from Middle Low German plomp, blunt, thick.] —plump'ish adj. —plump'ly adv. —plump'ness n.

plump² (plūmp) v. plumped, plump·ing, plumps. — v. intr. 1. To drop abruptly or heavily: plumped into the easy chair. 2. To give full support or praise: plumped for the candidate throughout the state. — v. tr. To throw down or drop (something) abruptly or heavily: plumped the books onto the table. — n. 1. A heavy or abrupt fall or collision. 2. The sound of a heavy fall or collision. — adj. Blunt; direct. — adv. 1. With a heavy or abrupt drop: We dropped the rock plump into the water. 2. Straight down: The anchor fell plump into the sea. 3. Without qualification; bluntly: spoke out plump for the tax bill. [Middle English plumpen, to immerse quickly, perhaps from Middle Low German, probably of imitative origin.]

plum pudding (plūm pōōd'ing) n. A rich boiled or steamed pudding made with flour, suet, raisins, currants, citron, and spices.

plum tomato (plūm tə-mā'tō) n. A form of the cherry tomato, having somewhat oblong fruit.

plu·mule (plōōm'yōōl) n. 1. A down feather. 2. Botany. The rudimentary bud of a plant embryo. [Latin plūmula, diminutive of plūma, feather.]

—plu'mu·lose' (plōōm'yə-lōs') adj.

plum·y (plōō'mē) adj. plum·i·er, plum·i·est. 1. Consisting of or covered with feathers. 2. Resembling a feather or plume.

plun·der (plün'dər) v. plun·dered, plun·der·ing, plun·ders. — v. tr.

1. To rob of goods by force, especially in time of war; pillage. 2. To seize wrongfully or by force; steal. — v. intr. To take booty; rob. — n. 1. The act or practice of plundering. 2. Property stolen by fraud or force; booty. [German plündern, from Middle High German plundern, from Middle Low German plunder, household goods.] — plun'der·a·ble adj. — plun'der·er n.

— plun'der·ous adj.

plunge (plŭnj) v. plunged, plung·ing, plung·es. — v. tr. 1. To thrust or throw forcefully into a substance or place: “Plunge the lobsters, head first, into a large pot of rapidly boiling salted water” (Craig Claiborne). 2. To cast suddenly, violently, or deeply into a given state or situation: “The street was plunged in cool shadow” (Richard Wright). — v. intr. 1. To fall or throw oneself into a substance or place: We plunged into the icy mountain lake. 2. To throw oneself earnestly or wholeheartedly into an activity or a situation: The students plunged into their examinations. 3. To enter or move headlong through something: The hunting dogs plunged into the forest in pursuit of game. 4. To descend steeply; fall precipitously: a cliff that plunges to the sea. 5. To move forward and downward violently: The disabled aircraft plunged to the ground and burst into flames. 6. To speculate or gamble extravagantly. — n. 1. The act or an instance of plunging. 2. a. A place or an area, such as a swimming pool, for diving or plunging. b. A swim; a dip. — idiom. take the plunge. Informal. To begin an unfamiliar venture, especially after hesitating: After a three-year engagement, they're finally taking the plunge. [Middle English plungen, from Old French plongier, from Vulgar Latin plumbicāre*, to heave a sounding lead, from Latin plumbum, lead.]

plung·er (plŭn'jər) n. 1. One who plunges or dives. 2. A device consisting of a rubber suction cup attached to the end of a stick, used to clean out clogged drains and pipes. Also called plumber's helper 3. A machine part, such as a piston, that operates with a thrusting or plunging movement.

plunk (plŭngk) also plonk (plŏngk, plŭngk) v. plunked also plonked, plunk·ing also plonk·ing, plunks also plonks. — v. tr. 1. To throw or place heavily or abruptly: plunked the money down on the counter. 2. Music. To strum or pluck (a stringed instrument). — v. intr. 1. To drop or fall abruptly or heavily; plump: plunked into the armchair with a sigh of relief. 2. To emit a hollow, twanging sound. — n. 1. Informal. A heavy blow or stroke. 2. A short, hollow, twanging sound. — adv. Informal. 1. With a short, hollow thud. 2. Exactly; precisely: The dart landed plunk in the center of the target. [Imitative.] — plunk'er n. — plunk'y adj.

plu·per·fect (ploō-pŭr'fikt) adj. 1. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a verb tense used to express action completed before a specified or implied past time. 2. More than perfect; supremely accomplished; ideal: “He has won a reputation as [a] pluperfect bureaucrat” (New York Times). — n. Grammar. 1. The pluperfect tense, formed in English with the past participle of a verb and the auxiliary had, as had learned in the sentence He had learned to type by the time the semester was over. Also called past perfect 2. A verb or form in the pluperfect tense. [Middle English pluperfyth, alteration of Latin plūs quam perfectum, more than perfect : plūs, more; see pelə⁻¹ in Appendix + quam, than + perfectum, neuter past participle of perficere, to complete; see PERFECT.]

plu·ral (plōōr'əl) adj. 1. Relating to or composed of more than one member, set, or kind: the plural societies of the world. 2. Abbr. pl., plu. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a grammatical form that designates more than one of the things specified. — n. Abbr. pl., plu. Grammar. 1. The plural number or form. 2. A word or term in the plural form. [Middle English plurel, from Old French, from Latin plūrālis, from plūs, plūr-, more. See pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.]
—plu'ral·ly adv.

plu·ral·ism (plōōr'ə-līz'əm) n. 1. The condition of being plural. 2. A condition of society in which numerous distinct ethnic, religious, or cultural groups coexist within one nation. 3. Ecclesiastical. The holding by one person of two or more positions or offices, especially two or more ecclesiastical benefices, at the same time. 4. Philosophy. a. The doctrine that reality is composed of many ultimate substances. b. The belief that no single explanatory system or view of reality can account for all the phenomena of life.

plu·ral·ist (plōōr'ə-līst) n. 1. Ecclesiastical. A person who holds two or more offices, especially two or more benefices, at the same time. 2. Philosophy. One who adheres to pluralism. —plu'ral·is'tic adj. —plu'ral·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

plu·ral·i·ty (plōō-rāl'i-tē) n. pl. plu·ral·i·ties. 1. The state or fact of being plural. 2. A large number or amount; a multitude. 3. Ecclesiastical. a. Pluralism. b. The offices or benefices held by a pluralist. 4. a. In a contest of more than two choices, the number of votes cast for the winning choice if this number is not more than one half of the total votes cast. b. The number by which the vote of the winning choice in such a contest exceeds that of the closest opponent. 5. The larger or greater part.

plu·ral·ize (plōōr'ə-līz') v. plu·ral·ized, plu·ral·iz·ing, plu·ral·iz·es. — v. tr. 1. To make plural. 2. Grammar. To express in the plural. — v. intr. 1. To become plural. 2. Ecclesiastical. To hold more than one position or benefice at one time. —plu'ral·i·za'tion (plōōr'ə-lī-zā'shən) n.

plural marriage (plōōr'əl mār'ij) n. See polygamy (n., sense 1).

plus (plūs) conj. 1. Mathematics. Increased by the addition of: Two plus two is four. 2. Added to; along with: Their strength plus their spirit makes them formidable. Intelligence plus wit makes for an interesting person. 3. Usage Problem. And: “[He] is a committed man, plus he has imagination, vitality and national stature” (Merv Griffin). — adj. 1. Positive or on the positive part of a scale: a plus value; a temperature of plus five degrees. 2. Added or extra: a plus benefit.

3. Informal. Increased to a further degree or number: “At 70 plus, [he] is old enough to be metaphysical” (Anatole Broyard). 4. Ranking on the higher end of a designated scale: a grade of C plus. 5. Physics. Positive. — n. pl. plus-es or plus-ses. 1. Mathematics. The plus sign (+). 2. A positive quantity. 3. A favorable condition or factor: The clear weather was a plus for the golf tournament. [Latin plūs, more. See pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Philosophers of mathematics have long debated the proper analysis of the relation denoted by the + sign in equations such as $2 + 2 = 4$, so it is not surprising that the syntactic status of its natural language equivalent, the word plus, should be similarly problematic—though to be sure, the questions are primarily of theoretical interest. When mathematical equations are pronounced as English sentences, the verb is usually in the singular: Two plus two is (or equals) four. By the same token, subjects containing two noun phrases joined by plus are usually construed as singular: The construction slowdown plus the bad weather has made for a weak market. This observation has suggested to some that plus should be regarded as a preposition in these uses, on the model of expressions such as together with or in addition to. But the phrases introduced by plus do not behave like prepositional phrases in other respects. They cannot be moved to the beginning of the sentence, for example. We do not say Plus the bad weather, the construction slowdown has made for a weak market (contrast the acceptable sentence beginning with Together with the bad weather). What is more, subjects containing two noun phrases connected by plus are usually singular even when the first noun phrase is plural: Our contacts plus their capital makes (more common than make) for a formidable marketing organization (compare Two cows plus two cows makes four cows). This situation suggests that plus in these uses should be regarded as a particular kind of conjunction, which joins two elements that are taken together as a single entity, the way the conjunction and does in a sentence such as Peas and carrots is Sophie’s favorite combination. • The usage of plus in The construction industry has been hurt by the rise in rates. Plus which, bad weather has affected housing starts is not well established in formal writing, nor is the use of plus introducing an independent clause, as in She has a great deal of talent, plus she is willing to work hard.

plus fours (plūs fōrz) pl.n. Loose knickers bagging below the knees, worn formerly for sports. [From the fact that they were four inches longer than ordinary knickers.]

plush (plūsh) n. A fabric of silk, rayon, cotton, or other material, having a thick, deep pile. — adj. plush-er, plush-est. 1. Made of or covered with plush. 2. Luxurious. [French pluche, variant of peluche, from pelucher, to become fluffy, shed, from Old French peluchier, to pluck, probably from Vulgar Latin piluccāre*.

See PLUCK.] —plush/ly adv. —plush/ness n.

plush·y (plʊsh/ē) adj. plush·i·er, plush·i·est. 1. Resembling plush in texture.

2. Informal. Ostentatiously luxurious: a plushy office. —plush/i·ly adv.

—plush/i·ness n.

plus sign (plʊs sīn) n. Mathematics. The symbol (+), as in $2 + 2 = 4$, that is used to indicate addition or a positive quantity.

Plu·tarch (plōō/tärk'), A.D. 46?-120?. Greek biographer and philosopher. He wrote Parallel Lives, a collection of biographies that Shakespeare used in his Roman plays. —Plu·tarch/an (-tär/kən), Plu·tarch/i·an (-tär/kē-ən) adj.

Plu·to (plōō/tō) n. 1. Roman Mythology. The god of the dead and the ruler of the underworld. 2. The ninth and usually farthest planet from the sun, having a sidereal period of revolution about the sun of 248.4 years, 4.5 billion kilometers or 2.8 billion miles distant at perihelion and 7.4 billion kilometers or 4.6 billion miles at aphelion, and a diameter less than half that of Earth. [Latin Plūtō, Plūtōn-, from Greek Ploutōn, from ploutos, wealth. See pleu- in Appendix.]

plu·toc·ra·cy (plōō-tōk/rə-sē) n. pl. plu·toc·ra·cies. 1. Government by the wealthy. 2. A wealthy class that controls a government. 3. A government or state in which the wealthy rule. [Greek ploutokratia : ploutos, wealth; see pleu- in Appendix + -kratia, -crazy.] —plu/to·crat' (plōō/tə-krät') n. —plu/to·crat'ic, plu/to·crat'i·cal adj. —plu/to·crat'i·cal·ly adv.

plu·tog·ra·phy (plōō-tōg/rə-fē) n. Depiction of the lives of the very rich, as in writing, in dramatic productions, or on television: “It is the age of plutography, where the acts of the rich turn them into great stars” (Tom Wolfe). [Greek ploutos, wealth; see pleu- in Appendix + -GRAPHY.] —plu/to·graph'ic (-tə-gräf'ik) adj.

plu·ton (plōō/tōn') n. A body of igneous rock formed beneath the surface of the earth by consolidation of magma. [German, back-formation from plutonisch, plutonic, from Latin Plūtō, Plūtōn-, Pluto. See PLUTO.]

Plu·to·ni·an (plōō-tō'nē-ən) also Plu·ton·ic (-tōn'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to the god Pluto or the underworld; infernal. 2. Of or relating to the planet Pluto.

plu·ton·ic (plōō-tōn'ik) adj. Of deep igneous or magmatic origin: plutonic rocks. [From Latin Plūtō, Plūtōn-, Pluto. See PLUTO.]

Plu·ton·ic (plōō-tōn'ik) adj. Variant of Plutonian.

plu·to·ni·um (plōō-tō'nē-əm) n. Symbol Pu A naturally radioactive, silvery, metallic transuranic element, occurring in uranium ores and produced artificially by neutron bombardment of uranium. Its longest-lived isotope is Pu 244 with a half-life of 76 million years. It is a radiological poison, specifically absorbed by bone marrow, and is used, especially the highly fissionable isotope Pu 239, as a reactor fuel and in nuclear weapons. Atomic number 94; melting point 640°C; boiling point 3,235°C; specific gravity 19.84; valence 3, 4, 5, 6. [After the planet PLUTO (from the fact that it follows neptunium in the periodic table).]

plu-vi-al (plōō'vē-əl) adj. 1. Of or relating to rain; rainy. 2. Geology. Caused by rain. [Latin pluviālis, from pluvia, rain. See PLUVIOUS.]

plu-vi-om-e-ter (plōō'vē-ōm'ī-tər) n. See rain gauge. [Probably from French pluviomètre: Latin pluvia, rain; see PLUVIOUS + -mètre, -meter.]

—plu'vi-o-met'ric (-ə-mět'rik), plu'vi-o-met'ri-cal (-rī-kəl) adj.

—plu'vi-o-met'ri-cal-ly adv. —plu'vi-om'e-try n.

plu-vi-ous (plōō'vē-əs) also plu-vi-ose (-ōs') adj. Characterized by heavy rainfall; rainy. [Middle English, from Old French pluvieus, from Latin pluviōsus, from (aqua) pluvia, rain (water), feminine of pluvius, of rain, from pluere, to rain. See pleu- in Appendix.] —plu'vi-os'i-ty (-ōs'ī-tē) n.

ply¹ (plī) v. tr. plied (plīd), ply-ing, plies (plīz). 1. To join together, as by molding or twisting. 2. To double over (cloth, for example). — n. pl. plies (plīz). 1. A layer, as of doubled-over cloth or of paperboard. 2. One of the sheets of wood glued together to form plywood. 3. One of the strands twisted together to make yarn, rope, or thread. Often used in combination: three-ply cord. 4. A bias; an inclination. [Middle English plien, from Old French plier, alteration of pleier, from Latin plicāre, to fold. See plek- in Appendix.]

ply² (plī) v. plied (plīd), ply-ing, plies (plīz). — v. tr. 1. To use diligently; wield: plies a needle. 2. To engage in diligently; practice: plies the carpenter's trade. See Synonyms at handle. 3. To traverse or sail over regularly: Trading ships plied the routes between coastal ports. 4. To continue supplying or offering to: plied their guests with excellent food. 5. To assail vigorously. — v. intr. 1. To traverse a route or course regularly: The boat plies between the islands on a weekly schedule. 2. To perform or work diligently or regularly: a person who had plied at the weaver's trade for 20 years. 3. Nautical. To work against the wind by a zigzag course; tack. [Middle English plien, from applien, to apply. See APPLY.]

ply-er (plī'er) n. Variant of plier.

Plym-outh (plīm'əth) 1. A borough of southwest England on Plymouth Sound, an inlet of the English Channel. A major port, it was the embarkation point for the fleet that fought the Spanish Armada (1588) and for Drake, Raleigh, and several other early explorers. Population, 250,300. 2. A town of southeast Massachusetts on Plymouth Bay, an inlet of the Atlantic Ocean, southeast of Boston. Founded in 1620 by Pilgrims, who supposedly set foot on Plymouth Rock when disembarking from the Mayflower, it was the center of Plymouth Colony. The colony was governed under precepts laid down in the Mayflower Compact until 1691, when it was absorbed by the royal colony of Massachusetts. Population, 45,608. 3. A city of southeast Minnesota, a suburb of Minneapolis-St. Paul. Population, 50,889.

Plymouth Rock (plīm'əth rök) n. Any of an American breed of medium-sized domestic fowl raised for both meat and eggs. [After Plymouth Rock, legendary landing place of the Pilgrims in 1620.]

ply-wood (plī'wōōd') n. A structural material made of layers of wood glued together, usually with the grains of adjoining layers at right angles to each other. [PLY¹ + WOOD¹.]

Plzeň (pəl'zēn', -zēn'yə) A city of western Czech Republic west-southwest of Prague. Famed for its beer, it was part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire until its inclusion in newly formed Czechoslovakia in 1918. Population, 174,555.

pm also p-m abbr. Phase modulation.

Pm The symbol for the element promethium.

PM or P.M. abbr. 1. Past master. 2. Police magistrate. 3. a. Postmaster. b. Postmistress. 4. Prime minister. 5. Provost marshal.

pm. abbr. Premium.

p.m. also P.M. abbr. Postmortem.

P.M. also p.m. or P.M. abbr. Post meridiem. See Usage Note at ante meridiem.

P-mark-er (pē'mär'kər) n. Grammar. A phrase marker.

P.M.G. abbr. Postmaster general.

pmk. abbr. Postmark.

PMS abbr. Premenstrual syndrome.

pmt. abbr. Payment.

p.n. or P/N abbr. Promissory note.

pneum. abbr. Pneumatic; pneumatics.

pneum- pref. Variant of pneumo-.

pneu-ma (nōō'mə, nyōō'-) n. The soul or vital spirit. [Greek. See pneu- in Appendix.]

pneumat- pref. Variant of pneumato-.

pneu-mat-ic (nōō-măt'ĭk, nyōō-) also pneu-mat-i-cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. Abbr.

pneum. 1. Of or relating to air or other gases. 2. Of or relating to pneumatics. 3. a. Run by or using compressed air: a pneumatic drill. b. Filled with air, especially compressed air: a pneumatic tire. 4. Zoology. Having cavities filled with air, as the bones of certain birds. 5. Theology. Of or relating to the pneuma; spiritual. [French pneumatique, from Latin pneumaticus, from Greek pneumatikos, from pneuma, pneumat-, wind. See pneu- in Appendix.] —pneu-mat'i-cal-ly adv. —pneu'ma-tic'i-ty (nōō'mə-tĭs'ĭ-tē, nyōō'-) n.

pneu-mat-ics (nōō-măt'ĭks, nyōō-) n. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. pneum. The study of the mechanical properties of air and other gases.

pneumato- or pneumat- pref. 1. Air; gas: pneumatolysis. 2. Breath; respiration: pneumatometer. [From Greek pneuma, pneumat-, wind, breath. See pneu- in Appendix.]

pneu-mat-o-graph (nōō-măt'ə-grăf', nyōō-) n. Variant of pneumograph.

pneu-ma-tol-o-gy (nōō'mə-tōl'ə-jē, nyōō'-) n. 1. The doctrine or study of spiritual beings and phenomena, especially the belief in spirits intervening between human beings and God. 2. The Christian doctrine of the Holy Ghost.

—pneu'ma-to-log'ic (-tə-lɔj'ik), pneu'ma-to-log'i-cal (-i-kəl) adj.

—pneu'ma-tol'o-gist n.

pneu-ma-tol-y-sis (nōō'mə-tɔl'ī-sis, nyōō'-) n. A process of rock alteration or mineral formation brought about by the action of gases emitted from solidifying magma. —pneu'ma-to-lyt'ic (-tə-lit'ik) adj.

pneu-ma-tom-e-ter (nōō'mə-tɔm'ī-tər, nyōō'-) n. An instrument for measuring the force or volume of inspiration or expiration in the lungs.

—pneu'ma-tom'e-try n.

pneu-mat-o-phore (nōō-măt'ə-fôr', -fôr', nyōō-, nōō'mə-tə-, nyōō'-) n.

1. A gas-filled sac serving as a float in some colonial marine hydrozoans, such as the Portuguese man-of-war. 2. Botany. A specialized respiratory root structure in certain aquatic plants, such as the bald cypress. —pneu-mat'o-phor'ic (-fôr'ik, -fôr'-) adj.

pneu-mec-to-my (nōō-mĕk'tə-mē, nyōō-) n. Variant of pneumonectomy.

pneumo- or pneum- pref. 1. Air; gas: pneumothorax. 2. Lung; pulmonary: pneumoconiosis. 3. Respiration: pneumograph. 4. Pneumonia: pneumococcus. [From Greek pneuma, wind, breath; see pneu- in Appendix, and from Greek pneumōn alteration (influenced by pneuma), of pleumōn, lung. See pleu- in Appendix.]

pneu-mo-ba-cil-lus (nōō'mō-bə-sil'əs, nyōō'-) n. pl. pneu-mo-ba-cil-li (-sɪl'i'). A nonmotile, gram-negative bacterium (Klebsiella pneumoniae) that causes a severe form of pneumonia and is associated with other respiratory infections.

pneu-mo-coc-cus (nōō'mə-kɔk'əs, nyōō'-) n. pl. pneu-mo-coc-ci (-kɔk'si', -kɔk'i'). A nonmotile, gram-positive bacterium (Streptococcus pneumoniae) that is the most common cause of bacterial pneumonia, associated with meningitis and other infectious diseases. —pneu'mo-coc'cal (-kɔk'əl) adj.

pneu-mo-co-ni-o-sis (nōō'mō-kō'nē-ō'sis, nyōō'-) n. A disease of the lungs, such as asbestosis or silicosis, caused by long-continued inhalation of dusts, especially mineral or metallic dusts. [PNEUMO- + Greek konis, konia, dust + -OSIS.]

—pneu'mo-co'ni-ot'ic (-ōt'ik) adj. & n.

pneu-mo-cys-tis (nōō'mə-sis'tis, nyōō'-) n. A severe lung infection caused by the parasitic protozoan Pneumocystis pneumonia and affecting primarily individuals with an immunodeficiency disease, such as AIDS. Also called pneumocystis pneumonia [From New Latin Pneumocystis, genus name : PNEUMO- + New Latin cystis, cyst; see CYST.]

pneu-mo-gas-tric (nōō'mō-gās'trɪk, nyōō'-) adj. Of, relating to, or involving the lungs and the stomach.

pneumogastric nerve (nōō'mō-gās'trɪk nûrv) n. See vagus nerve.

pneu·mo·graph (nōō'mə-grăf', nyōō'-) also pneu·mat·o·graph (nōō-măt'ə-grăf', nyōō-) n. A device for recording the force and speed of chest movements during respiration. —pneu'mo·graph'ic adj.

pneu·mo·nec·to·my (nōō'mə-nĕk'tə-mē, nyōō'-) also pneu·mec·to·my (nōō-mĕk'tə-mē, nyōō-) n. pl. pneu·mo·nec·to·mies. Surgical removal of all or part of a lung. [Greek pneumōn, lung; see PNEUMONIC + -ECTOMY.]

pneu·mo·nia (nōō-mōn'yə, nyōō-) n. An acute or chronic disease marked by inflammation of the lungs and caused by viruses, bacteria, or other microorganisms and sometimes by physical and chemical irritants. [New Latin, from Greek, lung disease, alteration (influenced by pneuma, breath), of pleumonia, from pleumōn, lung. See pleu- in Appendix.]

pneu·mon·ic (nōō-mōn'ĭk, nyōō-) adj. 1. Of, affecting, or relating to the lungs; pulmonary. 2. Relating to, affected by, or similar to pneumonia. [New Latin pneumonicus, from Greek pneumonikos, of the lungs, from pneumōn, lung. See pleu- in Appendix.]

pneu·mo·ni·tis (nōō'mə-nī'tĭs, nyōō'-) n. Inflammation of lung tissue. [Greek pneumōn, lung; see PNEUMONIC + -ITIS.]

pneu·mo·stome (nōō'mə-stōm', nyōō'-) n. A small opening in the mantle of a gastropod through which air passes. [From New Latin pneumostoma : PNEUMO- + STOMA.]

pneu·mo·tach·o·gram (nōō'mə-tăk'ə-grăm', nyōō'-) n. A record produced by a pneumotachograph.

pneu·mo·tach·o·graph (nōō'mə-tăk'ə-grăf', nyōō'-) n. An apparatus for recording the rate of airflow to and from the lungs. [PNEUMO- + Greek takhos, speed + -GRAPH.] —pneu'mo·tach'o·graph'ic adj.

—pneu'mo·ta·chog'ra·phy (-tə-kōg'rə-fē) n.

pneu·mo·tho·rax (nōō'mō-thōr'ăks', -thōr'-, nyōō'-) n. Accumulation of air or gas in the pleural cavity, occurring as a result of disease or injury, or sometimes induced to collapse the lung in the treatment of tuberculosis and other lung diseases.

po or p.o. abbr. Baseball. Putout.

Po¹ (pō) A river of northern Italy flowing about 652 km (405 mi) generally eastward to the Adriatic Sea. The Po Valley is a major industrial and agricultural area.

Po² The symbol for the element polonium.

PO or P.O. abbr. 1. Personnel officer. 2. Petty officer. 3. Postal order. 4. Also p.o.. Post office.

poach¹ (pōch) v. tr. poached, poach·ing, poach·es. To cook in a boiling or simmering liquid: Poach the fish in wine. [Back-formation from Middle English poched, poached, from poche, dish of poached eggs, from Old French, from past participle of pochier, to poach eggs, from poche, pocket, bag (from their appearance), of Germanic origin.] —poach'a·ble adj.

poach² (pōch) v. poached, poach-ing, poach-es. — v. intr. 1. To trespass on another's property in order to take fish or game. 2. To take fish or game in a forbidden area. 3. To become muddy or broken up from being trampled. Used of land. 4. To sink into soft earth when walking. 5. a. To take or appropriate something unfairly or illegally. b. Sports. To play a ball out of turn or in another's territory, as in doubles tennis. — v. tr. 1. To trespass on (another's property) for fishing or hunting. 2. To take (fish or game) illegally. 3. To make (land) muddy or broken up by trampling. 4. a. To take or appropriate unfairly or illegally. b. Sports. To play (a ball) out of turn or in another's territory. [Obsolete French pocher, to poke, thrust, intrude, from Old French pochier, to poke, gouge, of Germanic origin.] —poach'a-ble adj.

poach-er¹ (pō'chər) n. A vessel or dish designed for the poaching of food, such as eggs or fish.

poach-er² (pō'chər) n. 1. One who hunts or fishes illegally on the property of another. 2. Any of various elongated marine fishes of the family Agonidae, chiefly of northern Pacific waters, having an external covering of bony plates.

Po-be-da Peak (pō-běd'ə pēk, pə-byě'də) A mountain, 7,443.8 m (24,406 ft) high, of the Tien Shan on the border between eastern Kirghiz and western China. It is the highest elevation in the range.

po-bla-no pepper (pō-blä'nō pēp'ər) n. A mild or fairly pungent dark green pepper with a thick, leathery skin. [American Spanish, of the village, from pueblo, people, village. See PUEBLO.]

Po-ca-hon-tas (pō'kə-hōn'təs), 1595?-1617. Powhatan princess who befriended the English colonists at Jamestown and is said to have saved Capt. John Smith from execution by her people.

Po-ca-tel-lo (pō'kə-těl'ō, -těl'ə) A city of southeast Idaho south-southwest of Idaho Falls. It has been a railroad junction since 1882 and is the seat of Idaho State University (founded 1901). Population, 46,080.

po-chard (pō'chərd) n. Any of various diving ducks of the genus Aythya, especially A. ferina of Europe and Asia, which has gray and black plumage and a reddish head. [Origin unknown.]

pock (pۆk) n. 1. A pustule caused by smallpox or a similar eruptive disease. 2. A mark or scar left in the skin by such a pustule; a pockmark. — v. tr. pocked, pock-ing, pocks. To mark with pocks; pit. [Middle English pokke, from Old English pocc.] —pock'y adj.

pock-et (pۆk'it) n. 1. A small baglike attachment forming part of a garment and used to carry small articles, as a flat pouch sewn inside a pair of pants or a piece of material sewn on its sides and bottom to the outside of a shirt. 2. A small sack or bag. 3. A receptacle, a cavity, or an opening. See Synonyms at hole.

4. Financial means; money supply: The cost of the trip must come out of your own pocket. 5. a. A small cavity in the earth, especially one containing ore. b. A small body or accumulation of ore. 6. A pouch in an animal body, such as the cheek pouch of a rodent or the abdominal pouch of a marsupial. 7. Games. One of the pouchlike receptacles at the corners and sides of a billiard or pool table. 8. Sports. A racing position in which a contestant has no room to pass a group of contestants immediately to his or her front or side. 9. A small, isolated, or protected area or group. 10. An air pocket. 11. A bin for storing ore, grain, or other materials. — adj. 1. Suitable for or capable of being carried in one's pocket: a pocket handkerchief; a pocket edition of a dictionary. 2. Small; miniature: a pocket backyard; a pocket museum. — v. tr. pock-et-ed, pock-et-ing, pock-ets. 1. To place in or as if in a pocket. 2. To take possession of for oneself, especially dishonestly: pocketed the receipts from the charity dance. 3. a. To accept or tolerate (an insult, for example). b. To conceal or suppress: I pocketed my pride and asked for a raise. 4. To prevent (a bill) from becoming law by failing to sign until the adjournment of the legislature. 5. Sports. To hem in (a competitor) in a race. 6. Games. To hit (a ball) into a pocket of a pool or billiard table. — idioms. in (one's) pocket. In one's power, influence, or possession: The defendant had the jury in his pocket. in pocket. 2. Having funds. 3. Having gained or retained funds of a specified amount: was a hundred dollars in pocket after a day at the races. line (one's) pockets. To make a profit, especially by illegitimate means. [Middle English, pouch, small bag, from Anglo-Norman pokete, diminutive of Old North French poke, bag, of Germanic origin.] — pock'et-a-ble adj. — pock'et-less adj.

pocket billiards (pök'it bīl'yərdz) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Games. See pool² (n., sense 7).

pock-et-book (pök'it-bōök') n. 1. A pocket-sized folder or case used to hold money and papers; a billfold. 2. A purse; a handbag. 3. Financial resources; money supply: prices to fit your pocketbook. 4. Often pocket book. A pocket-sized, usually paperbound book. In this sense, also called pocket edition

WORD HISTORY: The link between the senses “billfold, purse,” and “pocket-sized book” of the word pocketbook can be clarified with a little historical information. The compound is first recorded in 1617 in the sense of “a small book designed to be carried in a pocket.” It is only recently that such books have looked like the paperbound books we are familiar with; these early paperbacks were bound like any book but were smaller in size. The next recorded use of pocketbook (1685) is again for a book designed to fit in the pocket but this time used for notes or memoranda. The same word was then applied to a case that was shaped like a book and in which money or papers could be kept. Finally, the word pocketbook was transferred to yet another container for keeping things, a purse or handbag, rarely fitting in the pocket and not necessarily shaped like a book.

pocket borough (pök'it bū'r'ō) n. A borough in England, before the parliamentary reform of 1832, whose representation was controlled by a single person or family.

pocket bread (pök'it brəd) n. See pita¹.

pocket calculator (pök'it käl'kyə-lā'tər) n. A small calculator designed to be carried in a pocket.

pocket edition (pök'it i-dīsh'ən) n. See pocketbook (n., sense 4).

pock·et·ful (pök'it-fōöl') n. pl. pock-et·fuls or pock-ets·ful (pök'its-fōöl').

The amount that a pocket can hold.

pocket gopher (pök'it gō'fər) n. See gopher (n., sense 1).

pock·et·knife (pök'it-nīf') n. A small knife with blades or a blade that can fold into the handle when not in use.

pocket money (pök'it mūn'ē) n. Money for incidental or minor expenses.

pocket mouse (pök'it mous) n. Any of various small, nocturnal North American burrowing rodents of the genus Perognathus, related to the kangaroo rat and having fur-lined external cheek pouches, small ears, and a very long tail.

pocket park (pök'it pärk) n. See minipark.

pock·ets·ful (pök'its-fōöl') n. A plural of pocketful.

pock·et·sized (pök'it-sīzd') or pock·et·size (-sīz') adj. 1. Of a size suitable to be carried in a pocket: a pocket-sized radio. 2. Small: “a pocket-sized riot in the Lower House” (Terence Smith).

pocket veto (pök'it vē'tō) n. 1. The President's indirect veto of a bill that has been presented to him within ten days of adjournment, by the retention of the bill unsigned until Congress adjourns. 2. A similar action exercised by a state governor or other chief executive. —pock'et-ve'to (pök'it-vē'tō) v.

pock·mark (pök'märk') n. 1. A pitlike scar left on the skin by smallpox or another eruptive disease. 2. A small pit on a surface: The gophers left the lawn covered with pockmarks. — v. tr. pock·marked, pock·mark·ing, pock·marks. To cover with pockmarks; pit. —pock'marked' adj.

po·co (pō'kō) adv. Music. To a slight degree or amount; somewhat. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, from Latin paucus. See pau- in Appendix.]

po·co a po·co (pō'kō ä pō'kō) adv. Music. Little by little; gradually. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian : poco, little + a, by + poco, little.]

po·co·cu·ran·te (pō'kō-kōō-rän'tē, -rän'tě) adj. Indifferent; apathetic. — n. One who does not care. [Italian : poco, little; see POCO + curante, present participle of curare, to care for (from Latin cūrāre, from cūra, care).]

—po'co·cu·ran'tism n.

Po·co·no Mountains (pō'kə-nō' moun'tənz) A range of the Appalachian system in northeast Pennsylvania rising to about 488 m (1,600 ft). The Poconos are a popular year-round resort area.

po·co·sin (pə-kō'sīn) n. Chiefly South Atlantic U.S. A swamp in an upland coastal region. Regional. Also called dismal [Possibly of Virginia Algonquian origin.]

REGIONAL NOTE: In coastal Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, and the Carolinas, a swamp or marsh can be called a pocosin or a dismal, the second term illustrated in the name of the Dismal Swamp on the border of North Carolina and Virginia. The word pocosin possibly comes from Virginia Algonquian. The early settlers used pocosin as a designation for low, swampy ground, especially a wooded swamp.

pod¹ (pōd) n. 1. Botany. a. A dehiscent fruit of a leguminous plant such as the pea. b. A dry, several-seeded, dehiscent fruit. Also called seedpod 2. Zoology. A protective covering that encases the eggs of some insects and fish. 3. A casing or housing forming part of a vehicle, as: a. A streamlined external housing that encloses engines, machine guns, or fuel. b. Aerospace. A detachable compartment on a spacecraft for carrying personnel or instrumentation. 4. Something resembling a pod, as in compactness. — v. pod-ded, pod-ding, pods. — v. intr. 1. To bear or produce pods. 2. To expand or swell like a pod. — v. tr. To remove (seeds) from a pod. [Origin unknown.]

pod² (pōd) n. A school of marine mammals, such as seals, whales, or dolphins. See Synonyms at flock¹. [Origin unknown.]

pod³ (pōd) n. 1. The lengthwise groove in certain boring tools such as augers. 2. The socket for holding the bit in a boring tool. [Origin unknown.]

-pod or -pode suff. Foot; footlike part: pleopod. [From New Latin -podium (from Greek podion); see PODIUM, and from New Latin -poda (from Greek, pl. of pous, pod-, foot); see ped- in Appendix.]

po·dag·ra (pə-däg'rə) n. Gout, especially of the big toe. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek : pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix + agra, trap, seizing; see ag- in Appendix.] — po-dag'ral, po-dag'ric adj.

-pode suff. Variant of -pod.

po·des·ta (pō-dēs'tə, pō'dē-stā') n. The chief magistrate in any of the republics of medieval Italy. [Italian podestà, from Old Italian podestate, from Latin potestās, power, from potis, powerful, able. See poti- in Appendix.]

po·de·ti·um (pə-dē'shē-əm, -shəm) n. pl. po·de·ti·a (-shē-ə, -shə). 1. A stalk-like outgrowth of the thallus of certain lichens, bearing the apothecium. 2. A stalklike growth or process. [New Latin, from Greek pous, pod-, foot. See -POD.]

Pod·gor·ny (pōd-gôr'nē), Nikolai Viktorovich. 1903-1983. Soviet politician who was president of the U.S.S.R. from 1965 to 1977, when he was displaced by Leonid Brezhnev.

po·di·a (pō'dē-ə) n. A plural of podium.

po·di·a·try (pə-dī'ə-trē) n. The branch of medicine that deals with the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of diseases of the human foot. Also called chiro-pody [Greek pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix + -IATRY.] —po'di-at'ric (pō'dē-ăt'rik) adj. —po·di/a·trist n.

pod·ite (pŏd'it') n. A segment of the limb of an arthropod. [Greek pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix + *-ITE*¹.] —po·dit'ic (pə-dīt'ik) adj.

po·di·um (pō'dē-əm) n. pl. po·di·a (-dē-ə) or po·di·ums. 1. An elevated platform, as for an orchestra conductor or a public speaker. 2. A stand for holding the notes of a public speaker; a lectern. 3. Architecture. a. A low wall serving as a foundation. b. A wall circling the arena of an ancient amphitheater.

4. Biology. A structure resembling or functioning as a foot. [Latin, from Greek podion, base, diminutive of pous, pod-, foot. See ped- in Appendix.]

Po·dolsk (pə-dŏlsk') A city of west-central Russia south of Moscow. It was a frequent meeting place for Lenin and his followers prior to the Bolshevik Revolution. Population, 208,000.

pod·o·phyl·lin (pŏd'ə-fil'in) n. A bitter-tasting resin obtained from the dried root of the May apple and used in medicine as a cathartic and caustic. [From New Latin Podophyllum, genus name : Greek pous, pod-, foot; see ped- in Appendix + Greek phullon, leaf; see bhel-³ in Appendix.]

-podous suff. Having a specified kind or number of feet or footlike parts: poly-podous.

pod·sol (pŏd'sŏl') n. Variant of podzol.

pod·sol·i·za·tion (pŏd'sŏ-lī-zā'shən) n. Variant of podzolization.

Po·dunk (pō'dŭngk') n. Slang. A small isolated town, region, or place that is regarded as unimportant. [After Podunk, name of two New England towns, of southern New England Algonquian origin.]

pod·zol (pŏd'zŏl') also pod·sol (-sŏl') n. A leached soil formed mainly in cool, humid climates. [Russian : pod, under; see ped- in Appendix + zola, ashes; see ghel-² in Appendix.] —pod·zol'ic adj.

pod·zol·i·za·tion (pŏd'zŏ-lī-zā'shən) also pod·sol·i·za·tion (pŏd'sŏ-) n.

1. The process by which soils are depleted of bases and become acidic. 2. The development of a podzol.

Poe (pō), Edgar Allan. 1809-1849. American writer known especially for his macabre poems, such as "The Raven" (1845), and short stories, including "The Fall of the House of Usher" (1839).

POE or P.O.E. abbr. Port of entry.

po·em (pō'əm) n. 1. A verbal composition designed to convey experiences, ideas, or emotions in a vivid and imaginative way, characterized by the use of condensed language chosen for its sound and suggestive power and by the use of literary techniques such as meter, metaphor, and rhyme. 2. A composition in verse rather than in prose. 3. A literary composition written with an intensity or beauty of language more characteristic of poetry than of prose. 4. A creation, an object, or an experience having beauty suggestive of poetry. [French poème, from Old French, from Latin poēma, from Greek poiēma, from poiein, to create. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

poe·nol·ogy (pē-nōl'ə-jē) n. Variant of penology.

po·e·sy (pō'ī-zē, -sē) n. pl. po·e·sies. 1. Poetical works; poetry. 2. The art or practice of composing poems. 3. The inspiration involved in composing poetry. [Middle English poesie, from Old French, from Latin poēsis, from Greek poiēsis, from poiein, to create. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

po·et (pō'īt) n. 1. A writer of poems. 2. One who demonstrates great imaginative power, insight, or beauty of expression: a poet of the classical ballet. [Middle English, from Old French poete, from Latin poēta, from Greek poiētēs, maker, composer, from poiein, to create. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: poet, bard, versifier, rhymers, rhymester, poetaster. These nouns denote persons who write verse. Poet is the most inclusive but usually applies to one who writes poetry of merit, as in being eloquent in expression, imaginative, and creative: “Every man, that writes in verse is not a Poet” (Ben Jonson). Bard in its original meaning denoted a Celtic poet who composed and sang verses dealing with legendary heroes or events; now the term applies especially to a lyric poet: In reading their verse aloud, few bards can compare to Dylan Thomas. Versifier, rhymers, and rhymester refer principally to minor or inferior poets: He dismissed her work as that of a mere versifier. How could the critics praise such a rhymers? This rhymester has written mainly doggerel. Poetaster, the most pejorative of these terms, applies to a writer of insignificant, meretricious, or shoddy verse: His verse has the sing-song rhythm of a poetaster.

poet. abbr. Poetic; poetical; poetry.

po·et·as·ter (pō'īt-ās'tər) n. A writer of insignificant, meretricious, or shoddy poetry. See Synonyms at poet. [New Latin : Latin poēta, poet; see POET + Latin -aster, pejorative suff.]

po·et·ess (pō'ī-tīs) n. A woman who writes poems.

po·et·ic (pō-ēt'ik) adj. Abbr. poet. 1. Of or relating to poetry: poetic works. 2. Having a quality or style characteristic of poetry: poetic diction. 3. Suitable as a subject for poetry: a poetic romance. 4. Of, relating to, or befitting a poet: poetic insight. 5. Characterized by romantic imagery: “Turner’s vision of the rainbow... was poetic, and he knew it” (Lawrence Gowing). — n. The theory or practice of writing poetry; poetics. [Latin poēticus, from Greek poiētikos, inventive, from poiein, to make. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

po·et·i·cal (pō-ět'ī-kəl) adj. Abbr. poet. 1. Poetic. 2. Fancifully depicted or embellished; idealized: a poetical description of the jungle. —po·et'·i·cal·ly adv. —po·et'·i·cal·ness, po·et'·i·cal'·i·ty (-kāl'ī-tē) n.

po·et·i·cism (pō-ět'ī-sīz'əm) n. A poetic expression that is hackneyed, archaic, or excessively artificial.

po·et·i·cize (pō-ět'ī-sīz') v. po·et·i·cized, po·et·i·ciz·ing, po·et·i·ciz·es. — v. tr. To describe or express in poetry or in a poetic manner. — v. intr. To write poetry.

poetic justice (pō-ět'īk jüs'tīs) n. An outcome in which virtue is rewarded and vice punished, often in an especially appropriate or ironic manner.

poetic license (pō-ět'īk lī'səns) n. The liberty taken by an artist or a writer in deviating from conventional form or fact to achieve a desired effect.

po·et·ics (pō-ět'īks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. Literary criticism that deals with the nature, forms, and laws of poetry. 2. A treatise on or study of poetry or aesthetics. 3. The practice of writing poetry; poetic composition.

po·et·ize (pō'ī-tīz') v. po·et·ized, po·et·iz·ing, po·et·iz·es. — v. tr. To describe or express in poetry or a poetic manner. — v. intr. To write poetry. —po'et·iz'er n.

poet laureate (pō'īt lôr'ē-īt) n. pl. poets laureate or poet laureates.

1. A poet appointed for life by a British monarch as a member of the royal household and formerly expected to write poems celebrating occasions of national importance and honoring the royal family. 2. A poet appointed to a similar honorary position or honored for artistic excellence. 3. A poet acclaimed as the most excellent or most representative of a locality or group.

po·et·ry (pō'ī-trē) n. Abbr. poet. 1. The art or work of a poet. 2. a. Poems regarded as forming a division of literature. b. The poetic works of a given author, group, nation, or kind. 3. A piece of literature written in meter; verse. 4. Prose that resembles a poem in some respect, as in form or sound. 5. The essence or characteristic quality of a poem. 6. The quality of a poem, as possessed by an object, act, or experience: the poetry of the dance movements. [Middle English poetrie, from Old French, from Medieval Latin poētria, from Latin poēta, poet. See POET.]

po·go·ni·a (pə-gō'nē-ə, -gōn'yə) n. Any of various small terrestrial orchids of the genus Pogonia, of the North Temperate Zone, having pink or whitish flowers. [New Latin Pōgōnia, genus name, from Greek pōgōn, beard.]

pog·o·nip (pŏg'ə-nīp') n. See ice fog. [Shoshone pakenappēh.] po·go·noph·o·ran (pō'gə-nŏf'ər-ən) also po·gon·o·phore (pō-gŏn'ə-fŏr', -fŏr') n. Any of various wormlike marine invertebrates of the phylum Pogonophora that grow in upright chitin tubes, usually at depths greater than 100 meters (330 feet), have tentacles attached to the head region, and lack a digestive system. [From New Latin Pōgōnophora, phylum name : Greek pōgōn, beard + Greek - phora, neuter pl. of -phoros, -phore.] —po'go-noph'o-ran, po'go-noph'o-rous adj.

po-go stick (pō'gō stīk) n. Sports & Games. A strong stick with footrests and a heavy spring set into the bottom end, used to propel oneself along the ground by hopping. [From Pogo, a former trademark.]

po-grom (pə-grōm', pō'grəm) n. An organized, often officially encouraged massacre or persecution of a minority group, especially one conducted against Jews. [Russian, outrage, havoc, from pogromit', to wreak havoc : po-, adverbial pref. (from po, next to); see apo- in Appendix + gromit', to outrage, wreak havoc (from grom, thunder).] —po-grom' v.

po-gy (pō'gē) n. pl. pogy or po-gies. See menhaden. [Alteration of dialectal poghaden, perhaps of Eastern Abenaki origin.]

Po Hai (bō' hī') See Bo Hai.

Po-hang (pō'häng') A city of southeast South Korea on an inlet of the Sea of Japan north-northeast of Pusan. It is a processing center with heavy industries. Population, 200,500.

poi (poi) n. A Hawaiian food made from taro corm that is cooked, pounded to a paste, and fermented. [Hawaiian.]

-poiesis suff. Production; creation; formation: hematopoiesis. [From Greek poiēsis, creation, from poiein, to make. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

-poietic suff. Productive; formative: galactopoietic. [From Greek poiētikos, creative, from poiētēs, maker, from poiein, to make. See k^wei-2 in Appendix.]

poign-ant (poin'yənt) adj. 1. a. Physically painful: "Keen, poignant agonies seemed to shoot from his neck downward" (Ambrose Bierce). b. Keenly distressing to the mind or feelings: poignant anxiety. c. Profoundly moving; touching: a poignant memory. See Synonyms at moving. 2. Piercing; incisive: poignant criticism. 3. a. Neat, skillful, and to the point: poignant illustrations supplementing the text. b. Astute and pertinent; relevant: poignant suggestions. 4. Agreeably intense or stimulating: poignant delight. 5. Archaic. a. Sharp or sour to the taste; piquant. b. Sharp or pungent to the smell. [Middle English poinaunt, from Old French poignant, present participle of poindre, to prick, from Latin pungere. See peuk- in Appendix.] —poign'ance, poign'an-cy n. —poign'ant-ly adv.

poi-kil-o-therm (poi-kīl'ə-thûrm') n. An organism, such as a fish or reptile, having a body temperature that varies with the temperature of its surroundings; an ectotherm. [Greek poikilos, spotted, various; see peig- in Appendix + THERM.] poi-ki-lo-ther-mic (poi'kə-lō-thûr'mīk) also poi-ki-lo-ther-mal (-məl) also poi-ki-lo-ther-mous (-məs) adj. Of or relating to an organism having a body temperature that varies with the temperature of its surroundings; cold-blooded. —poi'ki-lo-ther'mi-a, poi'ki-lo-ther'mism n.

poi-lu (pwä-lü') n. Slang. A French soldier, especially in World War I. [French, hairy, tough, poilu, from Old French pelu, hairy, from Vulgar Latin pilutus*, from Latin pilus, hair.]

Poin-ca-ré (pwän-kä-rä'), Jules Henri. 1854-1912. French mathematician and physicist who made a number of contributions to the field of celestial mechanics.

Poin-ca-ré (pwän-kä-rä'), Raymond. 1860-1934. French politician who served as president (1913-1920) and premier (1912-1913, 1922-1923, and 1926-1929).

poin-ci-an-a (poin'sē-än'ə, -ä'nə) n. See royal poinciana. [New Latin Poinciana, genus name, after M. De Poinci, 17th-century governor of French West Indies.]

Poin-sett (poin'sět', -sīt), Joel Roberts. 1779-1851. American diplomat who served as minister to Mexico (1825-1829) and U.S. secretary of war (1837-1841).

poin-set-ti-a (poin-sět'ē-ə, -sět'ə) n. A tropical American shrub (Euphorbia pulcherrima) that has showy, usually scarlet bracts beneath the small yellow flowerlike inflorescences. [New Latin, after Joel Roberts POINSETT.]

point (point) n. Abbr. pt. 1. A sharp or tapered end: the point of a knife; the point of the antenna. 2. An object having a sharp or tapered end: a stone projectile point. 3. A tapering extension of land projecting into water; a peninsula, cape, or promontory. 4. A mark formed by or as if by a sharp end. 5. A mark or dot used in printing or writing for punctuation, especially a period. 6. A decimal point. 7. Linguistics. A vowel point. 8. One of the protruding marks used in certain methods of writing and printing for the sightless. 9. Mathematics. A dimensionless geometric object having no properties except location. 10. a. A place or locality considered with regard to its position: connections to Chicago and points west. b. A narrowly particularized and localized position or place; a spot: The troops halted at a point roughly 1,000 yards from the river. 11. A specified degree, condition, or limit, as in a scale or course: the melting point of a substance. 12. a. Any of the 32 equal divisions marked at the circumference of a mariner's compass card that indicate direction. b. The interval of 11°15' between any two adjacent markings. 13. a. A distinct condition or degree: finally reached the point of exhaustion. b. The interval of time immediately before a given occurrence; the verge: on the point of resignation; at the point of death. 14. A specific moment in time: At this point, we are ready to proceed. 15. An objective or a purpose to be reached or achieved, or one that is worth reaching or achieving: What is the point of discussing this issue further? 16. The major idea or essential part of a concept or narrative: You have missed the whole point of the novel. 17. A significant, outstanding, or effective idea, argument, or suggestion: Your point is well taken. 18. A separate, distinguishing item or element; a detail: Diplomacy is certainly not one of his strong points. Your weak point is your constant need for approval. 19. A quality or characteristic that is important or distinctive, especially a standard characteristic used to judge an animal. 20. A single unit, as in counting, rating, or measuring. 21. a. A unit of academic credit usually equal to one hour of class work per week during one semester. b. A numerical unit of academic achievement equal to a letter grade. 22. Sports & Games. A unit of scoring or counting. 23. a. A unit equal to one dollar, used to quote or state variations in the current prices of stocks or commodities. b. A unit equal to one percent, used to quote or state interest rates or shares in gross profits. 24. One percent of the total principal of a loan, paid up front to the lender and considered separately from the interest. 25. Music. A phrase, such as a fugue subject, in contrapuntal music. 26. Printing. A unit of type size equal to 0.01384 inch, or approximately 72 of an inch. 27. A jeweler's unit of weight equal to 2 milligrams or 0.01 carat. 28. a. The act or an instance of pointing. b. The stiff and attentive stance taken by a hunting dog. 29. a. Needlepoint. b. See bobbin lace. 30. a. A reconnaissance or patrol unit that moves ahead of an advance party or guard, or that follows a rear guard. b. The position occupied by such a unit or guard: A team of Rangers were walking point at the outset of the operation. 31. a. An electrical contact, especially one in the distributor of an automobile engine. b. Chiefly British. An electrical socket or outlet. 32. points. The extremities of an animal, such as a horse or dog. 33. a. A movable rail, tapered at the end, such as that used in a railroad switch. b. The vertex of the angle created by the intersection of rails in a frog or switch. 34. A ribbon or cord with a metal tag at the end, used to fasten clothing in the 16th and 17th centuries. — v. point-ed, point-ing, points. — v. tr. 1. To direct or aim: point a weapon. See Synonyms at aim. 2. To bring (something) to notice: pointed out an error in their reasoning. 3. To indicate the position or direction of: pointed out the oldest buildings on the skyline. 4. To sharpen (a pencil, for example); provide with a point. 5. To separate with decimal points: pointing off the hundredths place in a column of figures. 6. To mark (text) with points; punctuate. 7. Linguistics. To mark (a consonant) with a vowel point. 8. To give emphasis to; stress: comments that simply point up flawed reasoning. 9. To indicate the presence and position of (game) by standing immobile and directing the muzzle toward it. Used of a hunting dog. 10. To fill and finish the joints of (masonry) with cement or mortar. — v. intr. 1. To direct attention or indicate position with or as if with the finger. 2. To turn the mind or thought in a particular direction or to a particular conclusion: All indications point to an early spring. 3. To be turned or faced in a given direction; aim. 4. To indicate the presence and position of game. Used of a hunting dog. 5. Nautical. To sail close to the wind. — idioms. beside the point. Irrelevant to the matter at hand. in point. Having relevance or pertinence. in point of. With reference to; in the matter of: In point of fact, I never lived at the address stated on the form. make a point of. To consider or treat (an action or activity) as indispensable: made a point of visiting their niece on the way home.

stretch a point. To make an exception. to the point. Concerning or with relevance to the matter at hand: remarks that were to the point; rambled and would not speak to the point. [Middle English, partly from Old French point, prick, mark, moment (from Vulgar Latin punctum*, from Latin pūnctum, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick), and partly from Old French pointe, sharp end (from Vulgar Latin puncta*, from Latin pūncta, feminine past participle of pungere, to prick); see peuk- in Appendix.]

point-and-shoot (point'ən-shōōt') adj. Of, relating to, or being a camera that adjusts settings such as focus and exposure automatically.

point-blank (point'blǎngk') adj. 1. Aimed straight at the mark or target without allowing for the drop in a projectile's course. 2. a. So close to a target that a weapon may be aimed directly at it: point-blank range. b. Close enough so that missing the target is unlikely or impossible: a point-blank shot.

3. Straightforward; blunt: a point-blank accusation. — adv. 1. With a straight aim; directly: fired point-blank at the intruder. 2. Without hesitation, deliberation, or equivocation: answered point-blank. [Perhaps from French point (de tir), (firing) point or point (visé), (aiming) point (from Old French); see POINT + French blanc, bullseye, target (from Old French, white); see BLANK.]

point defect (point dē'fēkt') n. A departure from symmetry in the alignment of atoms in a crystal that affects only one or two lattice sites.

point-de-vice (point'dī-vīs') adj. Scrupulously correct or neat; precise or meticulous. [Middle English at point devis, probably from Old French a point devis* : a, to + point, point, moment + devis, fixed, arranged.] —point'-de-vice' adv.

pointe (pwǎnt) n. In ballet, dancing that is performed on the tips of the toes. [From French pointe (des pieds), point (of the feet), tiptoe. See POINT.]

Pointe aux Trem-bles (pwǎnt ō trǎn'blə) A city of southern Quebec, Canada, a residential suburb of Montreal on northeast Montreal Island. Population, 36,270.

Pointe Claire (point' klār', pwǎnt) A city of southern Quebec, Canada, a suburb of Montreal on southwest Montreal Island. It is mainly residential. Population, 24,571.

point-ed (poin'tid) adj. 1. Having an end coming to a point: a pointed stick. 2. Sharp; cutting: a pointed critique. 3. Obviously directed at or making reference to a particular person or thing: a pointed comment. 4. Clearly evident or conspicuous; marked: a pointed lack of interest. 5. Characterized by the use of a pointed crown, as in Gothic architecture: a pointed arch. —point'ed-ly adv. —point'ed-ness n.

point-er (poin'tər) n. 1. One that directs, indicates, or points. 2. A scale indicator on a watch, balance, or other measuring instrument. 3. A long, tapered stick for indicating objects, as on a chart or blackboard. 4. Any of a breed of hunting dogs that points game, typically having a smooth, short-haired coat that is usually white with black or brownish spots. 5. a. A piece of advice; a suggestion. b. A piece of indicative information: interest rates and other pointers in the economic forecast. 6. Computer Science. A word that gives the address of a core storage location. 7. Either of the two stars in the Big Dipper that are aligned so as to point to Polaris.

pointillism (pwǎn'tē-iz'əm, point'l-iz'-) n. A postimpressionist school of painting exemplified by Georges Seurat and his followers in late 19th-century France, characterized by the application of paint in small dots and brush strokes. [French pointillisme, from pointiller, to paint small dots, stipple, from Old French pointille*, engraved with small dots, from point, point, from Latin pūnctum, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See peuk- in Appendix.]

—point'til·list adj. & n.

pointillistic (pwǎn'tē-īs'tik, point'l-īs'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to pointillism. 2. Minutely particularized: a pointillistic short story; pointillistic piano music.

point lace (point lās) n. See needlepoint (n., sense 2).

pointless (point'līs) adj. 1. Lacking meaning; senseless. See Synonyms at meaningless. 2. Ineffectual: pointless attempts to rescue the victims of the raging fire. —point'less·ly adv. —point'less·ness n.

point man (point mǎn) n. 1. A soldier who is assigned to a position some distance ahead of a patrol as a lookout. 2. A man who has a crucial, often hazardous role in the forefront of an enterprise: “[He] has traditionally been the administration's point man on affirmative-action issues, making frequent public appearances to present and clarify the administration's views” (Christian Science Monitor).

point mutation (point myōō-tā'shən) n. A mutation that affects only one or a few nucleotides in a gene.

point of accumulation (point ūv ə-kyōōm'yə-lā'shən) n. Mathematics. See limit (n., sense 6).

point of honor (point ūv ɔn'ər) n. pl. points of honor. A matter that affects one's honor or reputation.

point of no return (point ūv nō rī-tûrn') n. 1. The point in a course of action beyond which reversal is not possible. 2. The point in the flight of an aircraft beyond which there is insufficient fuel for return to the starting point.

point of order (point ūv ɔr'dər) n. pl. points of order. A question as to whether the present proceedings are in order or allowed by the rules of parliamentary procedure.

point-of-sale (point'əv-sāl') adj. Abbr. POS Of, relating to, or being the physical place where an item or service is purchased: a point-of-sale questionnaire.

point of view (point ūv vyōō) n. pl. points of view. 1. A manner of viewing things; an attitude. 2. a. A position from which something is observed or considered; a standpoint. b. The attitude or outlook of a narrator or character in a piece of literature, a movie, or another art form.

Point Pleasant (point plēz'ənt) A borough of eastern New Jersey near the Atlantic Ocean south of Asbury Park. It is a residential and resort community. Population, 18,177.

point source (point sôrs) n. A source, especially of pollution or radiation, occupying a very small area and having a concentrated output.

Point Success (point sək-sēs') A peak, 4,318.2 m (14,158 ft) high, in the Cascade Range of west-central Washington near Mount Rainier.

point system (point sīs'təm) n. 1. A system of evaluating academic achievement based on grade points. 2. Any of various systems of printing or writing for sightless people, as Braille, that uses an alphabet of raised symbols or dots that correspond to letters. 3. Printing. A system of graduating sizes of type in multiples of the point. 4. A system of penalizing drivers of motor vehicles for traffic violations by assigning points for each type of violation and revoking the driver's license if a certain number of points are accrued.

point woman (point wōm'ən) n. A woman who has a crucial, often hazardous role in the forefront of an enterprise: "They are the point men and women in the industry's drive to sell wine" (New York Times).

point-y (poin'tē) adj. point-i-er, point-i-est. Having an end tapering to a point.

point-y-head (poin'tē-hēd') n. Slang. An intellectual. —point'y-head'ed adj.

poise¹ (poiz) v. poised, pois-ing, pois-es. — v. tr. To carry or hold in equilibrium; balance. — v. intr. To be balanced or held in suspension; hover. — n. 1. A state of balance or equilibrium; stability. See Synonyms at balance. 2. Freedom from affectation or embarrassment; composure. 3. The bearing or deportment of the head or body; mien. 4. A state or condition of hovering or being suspended. [Middle English poisen, to balance, weigh, from Old French peser, pois-, from Vulgar Latin pēsāre*, from Latin pēnsāre. See (s)pen- in Appendix.]

poise² (poiz) n. A centimeter-gram-second unit of dynamic viscosity equal to one dyne-second per square centimeter. [French, after Jean Louis Marie Poiseuille (1799-1869), French physician and physiologist.]

poi-son (poi'zən) n. 1. A substance that causes injury, illness, or death, especially by chemical means. 2. Something destructive or fatal. 3. Chemistry & Physics. A substance that inhibits another substance or a reaction: a catalyst poi-son. — v. tr. poi-soned, poi-son-ing, poi-sons. 1. To kill or harm with poison. 2. To put poison on or into: poisoning arrows; poisoned the drink. 3. a. To pollute: Noxious fumes poison the air. See Synonyms at contaminate. b. To have a harmful influence on; corrupt: Jealousy poisoned their friendship.

4. Chemistry & Physics. To inhibit (a substance or reaction). — adj. Poisonous. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pōtiō, pōtiōn-, drink. See pō(i)- in Appendix.] — poi'son-er n.

WORD HISTORY: The phrase poison potion besides being alliterative also consists of doublets, that is, two words that go back ultimately to the same source in another language. The source for both words is Latin pōtiō, which meant “the act of drinking, a drink, or a liquid dose, as of a medicine or poison.” Our word potion retains the form of the Latin word (actually the form of the stem pōtiōn-) and the “dose” sense, although it passed through Old French (pocion) on its way to Middle English (pocion), first recorded in a work composed around 1300. In Old French pocion is a learned borrowing, one that was deliberately taken from Latin in a form corresponding to the Latin form. But the Latin word had also passed through Vulgar Latin into Old French in the different form poison. This word meant “beverage,” “liquid dose,” and also “poison beverage, poison.” The word poison is first recorded in Middle English in a work composed around 1200.

poison elder (poi'zən ɛl'dər) n. See poison sumac.

poison gas (poi'zən gās) n. A gas or vapor used especially in chemical warfare to injure, disable, or kill upon inhalation or contact.

poison hemlock (poi'zən hɛm'lɒk') n. A deadly poisonous European plant (Conium maculatum) widely naturalized in North America, having bipinnately compound leaves and compound umbels of small, white flowers.

poison ivy (poi'zən i'vɛ) n. A North American shrub or vine (Rhus radicans) that has compound leaves with three leaflets, small green flowers, and whitish berries and that causes a rash on contact. Also called poison oak poison oak (poi'zən ōk) n. 1. Either of two shrubs, Rhus toxicodendron of the southeast United States or R. diversiloba of western North America, related to poison ivy and causing a rash on contact. 2. See poison ivy.

poi-son-ous (poi'zə-nəs) adj. 1. Having the capability of harming or killing by or as if by poison; toxic or venomous. 2. Containing a poison. 3. Marked by apparent ill will: “poisonous hate... in his eyes” (Ernest Hemingway). — poi-son-ous-ly adv. — poi'son-ous-ness n.

SYNONYMS: poisonous, mephitic, pestilent, pestilential, toxic, venomous, virulent. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “having the destructive or fatal effect of a poison”: a poisonous snake; a mephitic vapor; a pestilent agitator; pestilential jungle mists; toxic fumes; venomous jealousy; a virulent form of cancer.

poi-son-pen letter (poi'zən-pɛn' lɛt'ər) n. A usually anonymous letter or note containing abusive or malicious statements or accusations about the recipient or a third party.

poison pill (poi'zən pīl) n. Informal. A plan or tactic intended to make a hostile corporate takeover prohibitively expensive, as one in which a company's stockholders are offered shares of stock at a bargain price in the event that a single suitor acquires a high percentage of the stock.

poison sumac (poi'zən sōō'măk) n. A swamp shrub (Rhus vernix) of the southeast United States, having compound leaves and greenish-white berries and causing an itching rash on contact with the skin. Also called poison elder poi-son-wood (poi'zən-wōōd') n. A poisonous dioecious tree (Metopium toxiferum) of southern Florida and the West Indies, having pinnately compound leaves, yellow-green flowers clustered in axillary panicles, and yellow-orange drupes. It causes a rash on contact.

Pois-son distribution (pwā-sōN' dīs'trə-byōō'shən) n. A probability distribution that can be applied to distributions that are not continuous. [After Siméon Denis Poisson (1781-1840), French mathematician.]

Poi-tier (pwā'tyā), Sidney. Born 1927. American actor and director whose film credits include The Defiant Ones (1958) and Lilies of the Field (1963).

Poi-tiers (pwā-tyā') A city of west-central France east-southeast of Nantes. Settled by a Gallic people, it was an early Christian center with important monasteries. Nearby, Edward the Black Prince defeated and captured John II of France on September 19, 1356. Population, 79,350.

Poi-tou (pwā-tōō') A historical region of west-central France bordering on the Bay of Biscay. A part of the Roman province of Aquitania, it fell to the Visigoths (A.D. 418) and the Franks (507) and was frequently contested by France and England until the end of the Hundred Years' War, when it was incorporated into the French crown lands.

poke¹ (pōk) v. poked, pok-ing, pokes. — v. tr. 1. To push or jab at, as with a finger or an arm; prod. 2. To make (a hole or pathway, for example) by or as if by prodding, elbowing, or jabbing: I poked my way to the front of the crowd. 3. To push; thrust: A seal poked its head out of the water. 4. To stir (a fire) by prodding the wood or coal with a poker or stick. 5. Slang. To strike; punch. — v. intr.

1. To make thrusts or jabs, as with a stick or poker. 2. To pry or meddle; intrude: poking into another's business. 3. To search or look curiously in a desultory manner: poked about in the desk. 4. To proceed in a slow or lazy manner; putter: just poked along all morning. 5. To thrust forward; appear: The child's head poked from under the blankets. — n. 1. A push, thrust, or jab. 2. Slang. A punch or blow with the fist: a poke in the jaw. 3. One who moves slowly or aimlessly; a dawdler. — idiom. poke fun at. To ridicule in a mischievous manner; tease.

[Middle English poken, probably from Middle Low German, or Middle Dutch.]

poke² (pōk) n. 1. A projecting brim at the front of a bonnet. 2. A large bonnet having a projecting brim. [From POKE¹.]

poke³ (pōk) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. A sack; a bag. [Middle English, probably from Old North French. See POCKET.]

REGIONAL NOTE: A pig in a poke is concealed in a sack from the buyer. The noun poke—meaning a bag or sack—dates from the 14th century in English. In many parts of Scotland poke means a little paper bag for carrying purchases or a cone-shaped piece of paper for an ice-cream cone. The Oxford English Dictionary gives similar forms in other languages: Icelandic poki, Gaelic poc or poca, and French poche. Pouch and pocket are undoubtedly cognates.

poke⁴ (pōk) n. Pokeweed. [Short for dialectal pocan, of Virginia Algonquian origin akin to puccon.]

poke-ber-ry (pōk'bēr'ē) n. 1. The blackish-red berry of the pokeweed. 2. See pokeweed.

pok-er¹ (pō'kər) n. One that pokes, especially a metal rod used to stir a fire.

pok-er² (pō'kər) n. Games. Any of various card games played by two or more players who bet on the value of their hands. [Origin unknown.]

poker face (pō'kər fās) n. A face lacking any interpretable expression, as that of an expert poker player. —pok'er-faced' (pō'kər-fāst') adj.

poke-root (pōk'rōt', -rōt') n. See pokeweed.

poke sal-lit (pōk sāl'it) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. Greens of the wild pokeweed eaten boiled. [Variant of poke salad.]

poke-weed (pōk'wēd') n. A tall North American plant (Phytolacca americana) having small white flowers, blackish-red berries clustered on long, drooping racemes, and a poisonous root. Also called pokeberry, pokeroot. [POKE⁴ + WEED¹.]

po-key¹ also po-ky (pō'kē) n. pl. po-keys also po-kies. Slang. A jail or prison. [Origin unknown.]

poke-y² (pō'kē) adj. Informal. Variant of poky¹.

pok-y¹ also poke-y (pō'kē) adj. pok-i-er, pok-i-est. Informal. 1. Dawdling; slow: a lazy, poky person. 2. Frumpish; shabby: always wearing those poky old clothes. 3. Small and cramped: a poky apartment. [From POKE¹.] —pok'i-ly adv. —pok'i-ness n.

po-ky² (pō'kē) n. Slang. Variant of pokey¹.

pol (pōl) n. Informal. A politician.

pol. abbr. Political; politics.

Pol. abbr. Poland; Polish.

Po-lack (pō'lōk', -lāk') n. 1. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a person of Polish birth or descent. 2. Obsolete. A native of Poland; a Pole. [Polish Polak, from Slavic polje, field. See pelə⁻² in Appendix.]

Po-land (pō'lənd) Abbr. Pol. A country of central Europe bordering on the Baltic Sea. Unified as a kingdom in the 10th century, it was a major power in the 15th and 16th centuries but was carved up among other states in three partitions (1772, 1793, and 1795) and then disappeared as a geographic entity until its reconstitution as a republic in 1918. Its present boundaries date from the end of World War II. Warsaw is the capital and the largest city. Population, 37,063,000.

Poland China (pō'lənd chī'nə) n. Any of a breed of large black-and-white hogs developed in North America.

Po·lan·yi (pə-lăn'ē), John C. Born 1929. Canadian chemist. He shared a 1986 Nobel Prize for developing methods of tracking chemical reactions.

po·lar (pō'lər) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to a pole. b. Measured from or referred to a pole: polar distance; polar diameter. 2. Relating to, connected with, or located near the North Pole or South Pole. 3. a. Passing over a planet's north and south poles: a polar orbit. b. Traveling in an orbit that passes over a planet's north and south poles. 4. Serving as a guide, as a polestar or a pole of the earth. 5. Occupying or characterized by opposite extremes: "In creative territory [they] make a strange yet ineluctable couple, more complementary, even polar, than twin-like" (Josh Rubins). 6. Central or pivotal. 7. Chemistry. Having to do with or characterized by a dipole: a polar molecule.

polar angle (pō'lər äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. The angle formed by the polar axis and the radius vector in a polar coordinate system.

polar axis (pō'lər äk'sis) n. Mathematics. The fixed reference axis from which the polar angle is measured in a polar coordinate system.

polar bear (pō'lər bâr) n. A large, white-furred bear (Ursus maritimus or Thal-arctos maritimus) living in Arctic regions. Also called white bear polar body (pō'lər böd'ē) n. A minute cell produced and ultimately discarded in the development of an oocyte, containing little or no cytoplasm but having one of the nuclei derived from the first or second meiotic division.

polar cap (pō'lər kăp) n. 1. a. Either of the regions around the poles of the earth that are permanently covered with ice. b. A high-altitude icecap.

2. Astronomy. Either of the regions around the poles of Mars that are covered with frozen carbon dioxide and water.

polar circle (pō'lər sûr'kəl) n. 1. The Arctic Circle. 2. The Antarctic Circle.

polar coordinate (pō'lər kō-ôr'dn-āt') n. Mathematics. Either of two coordinates, the radius vector or the polar angle, that together specify the position of a point in a plane.

po·lar·im·e·ter (pō'lə-rīm'ī-tər) n. An instrument used to measure the rotation of the plane of polarization of polarized light passing through an optical structure or sample. —po'lar-i-met'ric (-lər-ə-mět'rĭk) adj.

—po'lar-im'e-try n.

Po·lar·is (pə-lăr'is) n. A star of the second magnitude, at the end of the handle of the Little Dipper and almost at the north celestial pole. Also called North Star, polar star, polestar. [New Latin (Stella) Polāris, polar (star), from Latin polus, pole. See POLE¹.]

po·lar·i·scope (pō-lār'ī-skōp') n. An instrument for ascertaining, measuring, or exhibiting the properties of polarized light or for studying the interactions of polarized light with optically transparent media.

po·lar·i·ty (pō-lār'ī-tē, pə-) n. pl. po·lar·i·ties. 1. Intrinsic polar separation, alignment, or orientation, especially of a physical property: magnetic polarity; ionic polarity. 2. An indicated polar extreme: an electric terminal with positive polarity. 3. The possession or manifestation of two opposing attributes, tendencies, or principles: political polarity.

po·lar·i·za·tion (pō'lār-ī-zā'shən) n. 1. The production or condition of polarity, as: a. A process or state in which rays of light exhibit different properties in different directions, especially the state in which all the vibration takes place in one plane. b. Chemistry & Physics. The partial or complete polar separation of positive and negative electric charge in a nuclear, atomic, molecular, or chemical system. 2. A concentration, as of groups, forces, or interests, about two conflicting or contrasting positions.

po·lar·ize (pō'lār-rīz') v. po·lar·ized, po·lar·iz·ing, po·lar·iz·es. — v. tr. 1. To induce polarization in; impart polarity to. 2. To cause to concentrate about two conflicting or contrasting positions. — v. intr. 1. To acquire polarity. 2. To cause polarization of light. —po·lar·iz'·a·ble adj. —po·lar·iz'er n.

po·lar·iz·ing microscope (pō'lār-rī'zīng mī'krə-skōp') n. A microscope in which the object viewed is illuminated by polarized light.

polar nucleus (pō'lār nōō'klē-əs) n. Botany. Either of two nuclei located centrally in a flowering plant embryo sac that eventually fuse to form the endosperm nucleus.

po·lar·og·ra·phy (pō'lār-rōg'rə-fē) n. Chemistry. An electrochemical method of quantitative or qualitative analysis based on the relationship between an increasing current passing through the solution being analyzed and the increasing voltage used to produce the current. [POLAR(IZATION) + -GRAPHY.]

—po·lar'·o·graph'ic (-lār'ə-grāf'ik) adj. —po·lar'·o·graph'·i·cal·ly adv.

Po·lar·oid (pō'lār-roid') 1. A trademark used for a specially treated, transparent plastic capable of polarizing light passing through it, used in glare-reducing optical devices. 2. A trademark used for a camera and film that produce instant photographs.

Po·lar Regions (pō'lār rē'jənz) The various lands and waters surrounding the North Pole and the South Pole, known respectively as the North Polar Region and the South Polar Region.

polar star (pō'lār stār) n. See Polaris.

pol-der (pōl'dər) n. An area of low-lying land, especially in the Netherlands, that has been reclaimed from a body of water and is protected by dikes. [Dutch, from Middle Dutch.]

pole¹ (pōl) n. Abbr. p. 1. Either extremity of an axis through a sphere.

2. Geography. Either of the regions contiguous to the extremities of the earth's rotational axis, the North Pole or the South Pole. 3. Physics. A magnetic pole.

4. Either of two oppositely charged terminals, as in an electric cell or battery.

5. Astronomy. A celestial pole. 6. Biology. a. Either extremity of the main axis of a nucleus, a cell, or an organism. b. Either end of the spindle formed in a cell during mitosis. c. The point on a nerve cell where a process originates. 7. Either of two antithetical ideas, propensities, forces, or positions: "the moral poles of modern medicine: on the one hand, a tinkering with procreation with at best ambiguous, at worst monstrous moral possibilities. On the other hand, scientific skill and cunning unambiguously in the service of hope" (Charles Krauthammer). 8. A fixed point of reference. 9. Mathematics. The origin in a polar coordinate system; the vertex of a polar angle. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin polus, from Greek polos, axis, sky. See k^wel-1 in Appendix.]

pole² (pōl) n. 1. A long, relatively slender, generally rounded piece of wood or other material. 2. The long, tapering wooden shaft extending up from the front axle of a vehicle to the collars of the animals drawing it; a tongue. 3. a. See rod (n., sense 6a). b. A unit of area equal to a square rod. 4. Nautical. A small or light spar. 5. Sports. The inside position on the starting line of a racetrack: qualified in the time trials to start on the pole. — v. poled, pol-ing, poles. — v. tr.

1. a. Nautical. To propel with a pole: boatmen poling barges up a placid river.

b. To propel (oneself) or make (one's way) by the use of ski poles: "We ski through the glades on corn snow, then pole our way over a long one-hour runout to a road" (Frederick Selby). 2. To support (plants) with a pole. 3. To strike, poke, or stir with a pole. — v. intr. 1. Nautical. To propel a boat or raft with a pole.

2. Sports. To use ski poles to maintain or gain speed. [Middle English, from Old English pāl, from Latin pālus, stake. See pag- in Appendix.]

Pole (pōl) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Poland. 2. A person of Polish descent.

Pole (pōl), Reginald. 1500-1558. English prelate. The last Roman Catholic archbishop of Canterbury (1556), he was a leading figure in the Counter Reformation.

pole-ax or pole-axe (pōl'āks') n. 1. An ax having a hammer face opposite the blade, used to slaughter cattle. 2. A battle-ax used in the Middle Ages consisting of a long shaft ending in an ax or a combination of an ax, a hammer, and a pick. — v. tr. pole-axed, pole-ax-ing, pole-ax-es. To strike or fell with or as if with a poleax: "When a gang of doves circled above the flowing water and swooped in to feed, he poleaxed the leader with a clean head shot" (William Hoffman).

[Middle English, alteration (influenced by pole, long piece of wood), of pollax : poll, head; see POLL + ax, ax; see AX.]

pole bean (pōl bēn) n. Any of various cultivated climbing beans that grow on poles or supports.

pole-cat (pōl'kāt') n. 1. a. A chiefly nocturnal European carnivorous mammal (Mustela putorius) of the weasel family that ejects a malodorous fluid to mark its territory and ward off enemies. Also called fitch b. Any of various related mammals of Asia, especially Mustela eversmanni of central Asia. 2. See skunk (n., sense 1a). [Middle English polcat : possibly Old French poll, poule, fowl, hen; see PULLET + cat, cat; see CAT.]

pole horse (pōl hōrs) n. A horse harnessed to the pole of a vehicle.

po-leis (pō'lās') n. Plural of polis.

pole jump (pōl jūmp) n. Sports. See pole vault (n., sense 1). —pole'-jump' (pōl'jūmp') v. —pole'-jump'er n.

pole lamp (pōl lāmp) n. A lighting unit consisting of a usually spring-loaded pole extending from the ceiling to the floor and having attached lamp fixtures.

po-lem-ic (pə-lēm'ik) n. 1. A controversial argument, especially one refuting or attacking a specific opinion or doctrine. 2. A person engaged in or inclined to controversy, argument, or refutation. — adj. also po-lem-i-cal (-ī-kəl) Of or relating to a controversy, an argument, or a refutation. [French polémique, from Greek polemikos, hostile, from polemos, war.] —po-lem'i-cal-ly adv.

po-lem-i-cist (pə-lēm'ī-sist) also po-lem-ist (pə-lēm'ist, pōl'ə-mīst) n. A person skilled or involved in polemics.

po-lem-i-cize (pə-lēm'ī-sīz') v. intr. po-lem-i-cized, po-lem-i-ciz-ing, po-lem-i-ciz-es. To write or deliver an argument; engage in disputation or controversy.

po-lem-ics (pə-lēm'iks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. The art or practice of argumentation or controversy. 2. The practice of theological controversy to refute errors of doctrine.

po-lem-ist (pə-lēm'ist, pōl'ə-mīst) n. Variant of polemicist.

po-len-ta (pō-lēn'tə) n. A thick mush made of cornmeal boiled in water or stock. [Italian, from Latin, crushed grain, barley meal.]

pol-er (pō'lər) n. 1. One that propels, supports, conveys, or strikes with a pole. 2. A pole horse.

pole-star (pōl'stär') n. 1. See Polaris. 2. A guiding principle.

pole vault (pōl vōlt) n. Sports. 1. A field event in which the contestant jumps or vaults over a high crossbar with the aid of a long pole. Also called pole jump

2. A vault made with the aid of a long pole. —pole'-vault' (pōl'vōlt') v.

—pole'-vault'er n.

po-lice (pə-lēs') n. pl. police. 1. The governmental department charged with the regulation and control of the affairs of a community, now chiefly the department established to maintain order, enforce the law, and prevent and detect crime. 2. a. A body of persons making up such a department, trained in methods of law enforcement and crime prevention and detection and given the authority to maintain the peace, safety, and order of the community. b. A body of persons having similar organization and function: campus police. Also called police force 3. (used with a pl. verb). Police officers considered as a group.

4. Regulation and control of the affairs of a community, especially with respect to maintenance of order, law, health, morals, safety, and other matters affecting the public welfare. 5. a. The cleaning of a military base or other military area: Police of the barracks must be completed before inspection can take place. b. The soldier or soldiers assigned to a specified maintenance duty. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: police uniforms; the police department. — v. tr.

po·liced, po·lic-ing, po·lic-es. 1. To regulate, control, or keep in order with or as if with a law enforcement agency. 2. To make (a military area, for example) neat in appearance: policed the barracks; policing up one's room. [French, from Old French policie, civil organization, from Late Latin polītīa, from Latin, the State, from Greek politeia, from politēs, citizen, from polis, city. See polē-³ in Appendix.] — po·lice/a·ble adj. — po·lic'er n.

police action (pə-lēs' äk'shən) n. A localized military action undertaken without a formal declaration of war.

police court (pə-lēs' kôrt) n. Law. An inferior court having the power to prosecute minor criminal offenses and to hold for trial persons charged with more serious offenses.

police dog (pə-lēs' dôg) n. 1. A dog trained to aid the police, as in tracking criminals or detecting controlled substances. 2. See German shepherd.

police force (pə-lēs' fôrs) n. See police (n., sense 2).

po·lice·man (pə-lēs'mən) n. A man who is a member of a police force.

police officer (pə-lēs' ô'fī-sər) n. A policeman or policewoman.

police power (pə-lēs' pou'ər) n. The inherent authority of a government to impose restrictions on private rights for the sake of public welfare, order, and security.

police procedural (pə-lēs' prə-sē'jər-əl) n. A story or drama about the investigation of a crime by the police.

police reporter (pə-lēs' rī-pôr'tər) n. A newspaper reporter whose assignment is to obtain and cover news in a local police department.

police state (pə-lēs' stāt) n. A state in which the government exercises rigid and repressive controls over the social, economic, and political life of the people, especially by means of a secret police force.

police station (pə-lēs' stā'shən) n. The headquarters of a unit of a police force, where those under arrest are first charged.

po·lice·wom·an (pə-lēs'wōm'ən) n. A woman who is a member of a police force.

pol-i-clin-ic (pŏl'ē-klīn'ik) n. The department of a hospital or health care facility that treats outpatients. [German Poliklinik : Greek polis, city; see pelə-³ in Appendix + Klinik, clinic (from Greek klinikos, of a bed); see CLINIC.]

pol-i-cy¹ (pŏl'ī-sē) n. pl. pol-i-cies. 1. A plan or course of action, as of a government, political party, or business, intended to influence and determine decisions, actions, and other matters: American foreign policy; the company's personnel policy. 2. a. A course of action, guiding principle, or procedure considered expedient, prudent, or advantageous: Honesty is the best policy. b. Prudence, shrewdness, or sagacity in practical matters. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: policy statements; policy issues. [Middle English policie, art of government, civil organization, from Old French. See POLICE.]

pol-i-cy² (pŏl'ī-sē) n. pl. pol-i-cies. 1. A written contract or certificate of insurance. 2. A numbers game. [Obsolete police, from French, contract, bill of lading, from Old French, from Old Italian polizza, alteration of Medieval Latin apodixa, receipt, from Medieval Greek apodeixis, from Greek, proof, from apodeiknunai, to prove : apo-, intensive pref.; see APO- + deiknunai, to show; see deik- in Appendix.] pol-i-cy·hol·der (pŏl'ī-sē-hŏl'dər) n. One that holds an insurance contract or policy.

pol-i-cy·mak·ing or pol-i-cy·mak·ing (pŏl'ī-sē-mā'kīŋ) n. High-level development of policy, especially official government policy. — adj. Of, relating to, or involving the making of high-level policy: policymaking committees; policymaking decisions. — pol'i-cy·mak'er n.

po·li·o (pŏ'lē-ō') n. Poliomyelitis.

po·li·o·my·e·li·tis (pŏ'lē-ō-mī'ə-lī'tīs) n. A highly infectious viral disease that chiefly affects children and, in its acute forms, causes inflammation of motor neurons of the spinal cord and brainstem, leading to paralysis, muscular atrophy, and often deformity. Through vaccination, the disease is preventable. Also called infantile paralysis [New Latin : Greek polios, gray; see pel-¹ in Appendix + MYELITIS.] — po'li·o·my'e·lit'ic (-līt'ik) adj.

po·li·o·vi·rus (pŏ'lē-ō-vī'rəs) n. pl. po·li·o·vi·rus·es. An enterovirus, separable into three serotypes, that is the causative agent of poliomyelitis.

po·lis (pŏ'līs) n. pl. po·leis (-lās'). A city-state of ancient Greece. [Greek. See pelə-³ in Appendix.]

pol-ish (pŏl'ish) v. pol-ished, pol-ish-ing, pol-ish-es. — v. tr. 1. To make smooth and shiny by rubbing or chemical action: polished the silver and the brass. 2. To remove the outer layers from (grains of rice) by rotation in drums. 3. To free from coarseness; refine: Four years of prep school should polish those children. 4. To remove flaws from; perfect or complete: polishing one's piano technique; polished up the lyrics. — v. intr. 1. To become smooth or shiny by or as if by being rubbed: The surface on our dining table polishes easily. 2. To become perfect or refined. — n. 1. Smoothness or shininess of surface or finish: satın with a polish. 2. A substance containing chemical agents or abrasive particles and applied to smooth or shine a surface. 3. The act or process of polishing.

4. Elegance of style or manner. See Synonyms at elegance. —phrasal verb. polish off. Informal. To finish or dispose of quickly and easily. [Middle English polisshen, from Old French polir, poliss-, from Latin polīre. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.] —pol/ish-er n.

Pol-ish (pōl'lish) adj. Abbr. Pol. Of or relating to Poland or its people, their language, or culture. — n. The Slavic language of the Poles.

Polish Corridor (pōl'ish kōr'ī-dər) A former strip of land between the German territories of Pomerania and East Prussia awarded to Poland by the Treaty of Versailles (1919) to afford access to the Baltic Sea. Friction over control of the area was an immediate cause of the German invasion of Poland (September 1, 1939) that marked the beginning of World War II.

pol-ish-ed (pōl'isht) adj. 1. a. Made shiny and smooth by or as if by rubbing or chemical action. b. Naturally shiny and smooth. 2. Having the husk or outer layers removed. Used of grains of rice. 3. Refined; cultured: a polished manner. 4. Having no imperfections or errors; flawless: a polished oration.

polit. abbr. Political; politics.

pol-it-bu-ro (pōl'it-byōr'ō, pə-lit'-) n. pl. pol-it-bu-ros. The chief political and executive committee of a Communist party. [Russian, contraction of Polit(icheskoe) Buro, political bureau.]

po-lite (pə-lit') adj. po-lit-er, po-lit-est. 1. Marked by or showing consideration for others, tact, and observance of accepted social usage. 2. Refined; elegant: polite society. [Middle English polit, polished, from Latin polītus, past participle of polīre, to polish. See POLISH.] —po-lite/ly adv. —po-lite/ness n.

SYNONYMS: polite, mannerly, civil, courteous, genteel. All these adjectives mean mindful of, conforming to, or marked by good manners. Polite and mannerly imply consideration for others and the adherence to conventional social standards expected of a well-bred person: “The English are busy; they don’t have time to be polite” (Montesquieu). “It costs nothing to be polite” (Winston S. Churchill). The child was scolded by his grandmother for not being more mannerly. Civil suggests only the barest observance of accepted social usages; it often means merely neither polite nor rude: “Always be civil to the girls, you never know who they may marry” is an aphorism which has saved many an English spinster from being treated like an Indian widow” (Nancy Mitford). Courteous implies courtliness and dignity: “If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers, it shows he is a citizen of the world” (Francis Bacon). Genteel, which originally meant well-bred and refined, now usually suggests excessive and affected refinement: “A man, indeed, is not genteel when he gets drunk; but most vices may be committed very genteelly” (James Boswell).

pol-i-tesse (pŏl'ī-tēs', pŏ'lē-) n. Courteous formality; politeness: “the soul of uptown refinement and... politesse” (Russell Baker). [French, from Old French, cleanliness, from Italian pulitezza, politezza, from pulire, to polish, clean, from Latin polīre. See POLITE.]

Po-li-tian (pə-līsh'ən, pō-), 1454-1494. Italian scholar and poet who translated Homer's Iliad into Latin and wrote Orfeo (1475), the first play in Italian.

pol-i-tic (pŏl'ī-tik) adj. 1. Using or marked by prudence, expedience, and shrewdness; artful. See Synonyms at suave. 2. Using, displaying, or proceeding from policy; judicious: a politic decision. 3. Crafty; cunning. [Middle English politik, from Old French politique, from Latin polīticus, political, from Greek politikos, from politēs, citizen, from polis, city. See pelə-³ in Appendix.]

—pol'i-tic-ly adv.

po-lit-i-cal (pə-līt'ī-kəl) adj. Abbr. pol., polit. 1. Of, relating to, or dealing with the structure or affairs of government, politics, or the state. 2. Relating to, involving, or characteristic of politics, parties, or politicians: “Calling a meeting is a political act in itself” (Daniel Goleman). 3. Having or marked by a definite or organized policy or structure with regard to government: the union's political machine; political pressure. 4. Relating to or involving acts regarded as damaging to a government or state: political crimes. —po-lit'i-cal-i-za'tion (-īzā'shən) n. —po-lit'i-cal-ize' (-kə-līz') v. —po-lit'i-cal-ly adv.

political action committee (pə-līt'ī-kəl ăk'shən kə-mīt'ē) n. A committee formed by business, labor, or other special-interest groups to raise money and make contributions to the campaigns of political candidates whom they support.

political economy (pə-līt'ī-kəl ī-kŏn'ə-mē) n. 1. The social science that deals with political science and economics as a unified subject; the study of the interrelationships between political and economic processes. 2. The early science of economics through the 19th century.

politically correct (pə-līt'ī-kəl kə-rĕkt') adj. Abbr. PC, p.c. 1. Of, relating to, or supporting a program of broad social, political, and educational change, especially to redress historical injustices in matters such as race, class, gender, and sexual orientation. 2. Being or perceived as being overconcerned with this program, often to the exclusion of other matters. —political correctness n.

political science (pə-līt'ī-kəl sī'əns) n. The study of the processes, principles, and structure of government and of political institutions; politics.

political terrorism (pə-līt'ī-kəl tĕr'ə-rīz'əm) n. 1. Violent acts, such as kidnappings, arson, bombings, or assassinations, undertaken for political reasons especially by a person, group, or state seeking the overthrow of a government.

2. Informal. Intimidation or verbal abuse used by a politician to frighten another politician or other politicians. —political terrorist n.

pol-i-ti-cian (pɒl'ɪ-tɪʃ'ən) n. 1. a. One who is actively involved in politics, especially party politics. b. One who holds or seeks a political office. 2. One who seeks personal or partisan gain, often by scheming and maneuvering: “Mothers may still want their favorite sons to grow up to be President, but... they do not want them to become politicians in the process” (John F. Kennedy). 3. One who is skilled or experienced in the science or administration of government.

po-lit-i-cize (pə-lɪt'ɪ-sɪz') v. po-lit-i-cized, po-lit-i-ciz-ing, po-lit-i-ciz-es. — v. intr. To engage in or discuss politics. — v. tr. To make political: “The mayor was given authority to appoint police commissioners and by virtue of that power was able to politicize the department” (Connie Paige). —po-lit'i-ci-za'-tion (-sɪ-zā'shən) n.

pol-i-tick (pɒl'ɪ-tɪk) v. intr. pol-i-ticked, pol-i-tick-ing, pol-i-ticks. To engage in or discuss politics. —pol'i-tick'er n.

po-lit-i-co (pə-lɪt'ɪ-kō') n. pl. po-lit-i-cos. A politician. [From Italian, or from Spanish político both from Latin politicus, political. See POLITIC.] pol-i-tics (pɒl'ɪ-tɪks) n. Abbr. pol., polit. 1. (used with a sing. verb). a. The art or science of government or governing, especially the governing of a political entity, such as a nation, and the administration and control of its internal and external affairs. b. Political science. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). a. The activities or affairs engaged in by a government, politician, or political party: “All politics is local” (Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.). “Politics have appealed to me since I was at Oxford because they are exciting morning, noon, and night” (Jeffrey Archer). b. The methods or tactics involved in managing a state or government: “The politics of the former regime were rejected by the new government leadership. If the politics of the conservative government now borders on the repressive, what can be expected when the economy falters?” 3. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Political life: “studied law with a view to going into politics; felt that politics was a worthwhile career.” 4. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Intrigue or maneuvering within a political unit or a group in order to gain control or power: “Partisan politics is often an obstruction to good government. Office politics are often debilitating and counter-productive.” 5. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Political attitudes and positions: “His politics on that issue is his own business. Your politics are clearly more liberal than mine.” 6. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The often internally conflicting interrelationships among people in a society.

USAGE NOTE: Politics, although etymologically plural, takes a singular verb when used to refer to the art or science of governing or to political science: “Politics has been a concern of philosophers since Plato.” But in its other senses politics can take either a singular or plural verb. Many other nouns that end in -ics behave similarly, and the user is advised to consult specific entries for precise information.

pol-i-ty (pŏl'ī-tē) n. pl. pol-i-ties. 1. The form of government of a nation, a state, a church, or an organization. 2. An organized society, such as a nation, having a specific form of government: "His alien philosophy found no roots in the American polity" (New York Times). [Obsolete French politie, from Old French, from Late Latin politia, the Roman government. See POLICE.]

Polk (pŏk), James Knox. 1795-1849. The 11th President of the United States (1845-1849), whose term was marked by the establishment of the 49th parallel as the country's northern border (1846).

pol-ka (pŏl'kə, pŏ'kə) n. 1. A lively round dance originating in Bohemia and performed by couples. 2. Music for this dance, having duple meter. — v. intr. pol-kaed, pol-ka-ing, pol-kas. To dance the polka. [Czech, probably from Polish, from Polka, Polish woman, feminine of Polak, Pole, from Slavic polje, field. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

pol-ka dot (pŏ'kə dŏt) n. 1. One of a number of dots or round spots forming a pattern, as on cloth. 2. A pattern or fabric with such dots.

poll (pŏl) n. 1. The casting and registering of votes in an election. 2. The number of votes cast or recorded. 3. Often polls. The place where votes are cast and registered. Used with the. 4. A survey of the public or of a sample of public opinion to acquire information. 5. The head, especially the top of the head where hair grows. 6. The blunt or broad end of a tool such as a hammer or an ax. — v.

polled, poll-ing, polls. — v. tr. 1. To receive (a given number of votes). 2. To receive or record the votes of: polling a jury. 3. To cast (a vote or ballot). 4. To question in a survey; canvass. 5. To cut off or trim (hair, horns, or wool, for example); clip. 6. To trim or cut off the hair, wool, branches, or horns of: polled the sheep; polled the trees. — v. intr. To vote at the polls in an election. [Middle English pol, head, from Middle Low German, or Middle Dutch.] — poll'er n.

pol-lack also pol-lock (pŏl'ək) n. pl. pollack or pol-lacks also pollock or pol-locks. A marine food fish (Pollachius virens) of northern Atlantic waters, related to the cod. [Alteration of Scots podlok.]

pol-lard (pŏl'ərd) n. 1. A tree whose top branches have been cut back to the trunk so that it may produce a dense growth of new shoots. 2. An animal, such as an ox, a goat, or a sheep, that no longer has its horns. — v. tr. pol-lard-ed, pol-lard-ing, pol-lards. To convert or make into a pollard. [From POLL.]

polled (pŏld) adj. Having no horns; hornless.

pol-len (pŏl'ən) n. The fine, powderlike material consisting of pollen grains that is produced by the anthers of seed plants. [Latin, fine flour.]

pol-len-ate (pŏl'ə-nāt') v. Variant of pollinate.

pollen count (pɒl'ən kount) n. The average number of pollen grains, usually of ragweed, in a cubic yard or other standard volume of air over a 24-hour period at a specified time and place.

pollen grain (pɒl'ən grān) n. A microspore of seed plants, containing a male gametophyte.

pol·len·if·er·ous (pɒl'ə-nɪf'ər-əs) adj. Variant of polliniferous.

pollen mother cell (pɒl'ən mʊth'ər sɛl) n. The microspore mother cell of a seed plant.

pol·len·o·sis (pɒl'ə-nō'sɪs) n. Variant of pollinosis.

pollen sac (pɒl'ən sæk) n. The microsporangium of a seed plant in which pollen is produced.

pollen tube (pɒl'ən tōōb) n. The slender tube formed by the pollen grain that penetrates an ovule and releases the male gametes.

pol·lex (pɒl'ɛks') n. pl. pol·li·ces (pɒl'i-sēz'). See thumb (n., sense 1). [Latin, thumb, big toe.]

pollin- pref. Variant of pollini-.

pol·li·nate also pol·len·ate (pɒl'ə-nāt') v. tr. pol·li·nat·ed also pol·len·at·ed, pol·li·nat·ing also pol·len·at·ing, pol·li·nates also pol·len·ates. To transfer pollen from an anther to the stigma of (a flower).

[New Latin pollen, pollin-, pollen (from Latin, fine flour) + -ATE¹.] —pol'li·na' tion n. —pol'li·na'tor n.

pollini- or pollin- pref. Pollen: polliniferous. [From New Latin pollen, pollin-, pollen. See POLLINATE.]

pol·lin·i·a (pɒ-lɪn'ē-ə) n. Plural of pollinium.

pol·li·nif·er·ous also pol·len·if·er·ous (pɒl'ə-nɪf'ər-əs) adj. 1. Producing or yielding pollen. 2. Adapted for carrying pollen.

pol·lin·i·um (pɒ-lɪn'ē-əm) n. pl. pol·lin·i·a (-ē-ə). A mass of coherent pollen grains, found in the flowers of orchids and milkweeds. [New Latin, from pollen, pollin-, pollen. See POLLINATE.]

pol·li·nize (pɒl'ə-nīz') v. tr. pol·li·nized, pol·li·niz·ing, pol·li·niz·es. To pollinate. —pol'li·ni·za'tion (-nī-zā'shən) n. —pol'li·niz'er n.

pol·li·no·sis also pol·len·o·sis (pɒl'ə-nō'sɪs) n. See hay fever.

pol·li·wog also pol·ly·wog (pɒl'ē-wɔg', -wɔg') n. See tadpole. [Variant of polliwig, from Middle English polwigle : pol, head; see POLL + wiglen, to wiggle; see WIGGLE.]

pol·lock (pɒl'ək) n. Variant of pollack.

Pol·lock (pɒl'ək), Jackson. 1912-1956. American artist. Using his drip technique of painting, he became a leader of abstract expressionism in America.

poll·ster (pɒl'stər) n. One that takes public-opinion surveys. Also called poll-taker

WORD HISTORY: An understanding of the history of the -ster in pollster may perhaps raise more questions than it answers. In the first place a pollster does not have to be a woman, despite the fact that the suffix -ster, originally -estre in Old English, was used to form feminine agent nouns. Hoppester, for example, meant “female dancer.” But in Old English -estre was occasionally applied to men, although perhaps largely or completely in the case of translations of Latin masculine nouns denoting occupations that were held by women in Anglo-Saxon society. An example is bæcester, “baker,” glossing Latin pistor; it survives as the Modern English name Baxter. In Middle English the suffix was still largely feminine in the south of England but masculine and feminine in the north, a tendency that became general in English starting with the 16th century. As an example of this tendency seamster was remade into the feminine seamstress. In Modern English the suffix is usually derogatory. This use probably arose from the occurrence of the suffix with ambiguous verbs, such as game, “to play at sports, to play at sex,” or with pejorative verbs, such as rime or rhyme. In some modern formations on neutral words -ster is not derogatory, as in youngster (1589), but in most cases, as with pollster (1939), -ster has pejorative force.

poll·tak·er (pōl'tā'kər) n. See pollster.

poll tax (pōl tāk) n. A tax levied on people rather than on property, often as a requirement for voting.

pol·lut·ant (pə-lōōt'nt) n. Something that pollutes, especially a waste material that contaminates air, soil, or water.

pol·lute (pə-lōōt') v. tr. pol·lut·ed, pol·lut·ing, pol·lutes. 1. To make unfit for or harmful to living things, especially by the addition of waste matter. See Synonyms at contaminate. 2. To make less suitable for an activity, especially by the introduction of unwanted factors: The stadium lights polluted the sky around the observatory. 3. To render impure or morally harmful; corrupt. 4. To make ceremonially impure; profane: “Churches and altars were polluted by atrocious murders” (Edward Gibbon). [Middle English polluten, from Latin polluere, pollūt-.] —pol·lut'er n.

pol·lu·tion (pə-lōō'shən) n. 1. The act or process of polluting or the state of being polluted, especially the contamination of soil, water, or the atmosphere by the discharge of harmful substances. 2. Something that pollutes; a pollutant or a group of pollutants: Pollution in the air reduced the visibility near the airport.

Pol·lux (pōl'əks) n. Greek Mythology. 1. One of the Dioscuri. 2. A bright star in the constellation Gemini. [Latin, from Greek Poludeukēs.]

Pol·ly·an·na (pōl'ē-ān'ə) n. A person regarded as being foolishly or blindly optimistic. [After the heroine of the novel Pollyanna, by Eleanor Hodgman Porter (1868-1920), American writer.]

pol-ly-wog (pɒl'ē-wɔg', -wɔg') n. Variant of polliwog.

po-lo (pō'lō) n. Sports. 1. A game played by two teams of three or four players on horseback who are equipped with long-handled mallets for driving a small wooden ball through the opponents' goal. 2. Water polo. [Anglo-Indian polo, of Tibeto-Burman origin.] —po/lo-ist n.

Po-lo (pō'lō), Marco. 1254-1324. Venetian traveler who explored Asia from 1271 to 1295. His Travels of Marco Polo was the only account of the Far East available to Europeans until the 17th century.

polo coat (pɒ'lō kōt) n. A loose-fitting, tailored overcoat made from camel's hair or a similar material.

pol-o-naise (pɒl'ə-nāz', pɒ'lə-) n. 1. A stately, marchlike Polish dance, primarily a promenade by couples. 2. Music for or in the style of this dance, having triple meter. 3. A woman's dress of the 18th century, having a fitted bodice and draped cutaway skirt, worn over an elaborate underskirt. [French, from feminine of polonais, Polish, from Medieval Latin Polōnia, Poland.]

po-lo-ni-um (pə-lō'nē-əm) n. Symbol Po A naturally radioactive metallic element, occurring in minute quantities as a product of radium disintegration and produced by bombarding bismuth or lead with neutrons. It has 27 isotopes ranging in mass number from 192 to 218, of which Po 210, with a half-life of 138.39 days, is the most readily available. Atomic number 84; melting point 254°C; boiling point 962°C; specific gravity 9.32; valence 2, 4. [From Medieval Latin Polōnia, Poland.]

polo shirt (pō'lō shîrt) n. A pullover sport shirt of knitted cotton.

Pol Pot (pɒl pɒt'), Born 1928. Cambodian political leader whose Khmer Rouge movement overthrew the Cambodian government in 1975. Under his regime executions and famine killed an estimated three million people. He fled the capital in 1979 when Vietnamese forces overthrew his government.

Pol-ta-va (pəl-tä'və) A city of central Ukraine west-southwest of Kharkov. Probably settled by Slavic peoples in the 8th or 9th century, it was a Cossack stronghold in the 17th century. Population, 302,000.

pol-ter-geist (pɒl'tər-gēst') n. A ghost that manifests itself by noises, rappings, and the creation of disorder. [German : poltern, to make noises (from Middle High German boldern) + Geist, ghost (from Middle High German, from Old High German).]

pol-troon (pɒl-trōon') n. A base coward: "Every moment of the fashion industry's misery is richly deserved by the designers... and magazine poltroons who perpetuate this absurd creation" (Nina Totenberg). [French poltron, from Old Italian poltrone, coward, idler, perhaps augmentative of poltro, unbroken colt (from Vulgar Latin pulliter*, from Latin pullus, young animal); see pau- in Appendix, or from poltro, bed, lazy.] —pol-troon'er-y n.

pol-y (pɒl'ē) n. 1. Polyester. 2. Polyethylene.

poly- pref. 1. More than one; many; much: polyatomic. 2. More than usual; excessive; abnormal: polydipsia. 3. Polymer; polymeric: polyethylene. [Greek polu-, from polus, much, many. See pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

pol·y·a·cryl·a·mide (pŏl'ē-ə-krīl'ə-mīd') n. A white polyamide, (=CH₂CHCONH₂=), related to acrylic acid. [POLY- + ACRYL(IC ACID) + AMIDE.]

polyacrylamide gel (pŏl'ē-ə-krīl'ə-mīd' jĕl) n. A hydrated polyacrylamide of stiff consistency used as a medium for electrophoresis because of its white coloring and thickening action in water-based solutions.

pol·y·ad·e·nyl·ic acid (pŏl'ē-ād'n-īl'īk əs'īd) n. A polymer of adenylic acid attached to messenger RNA that stabilizes the molecule before transport from the nucleus into the cytoplasm.

pol·y·al·co·hol (pŏl'ē-əl'kə-hŏl', -hŏl') n. An alcohol, such as glycerol, containing more than two hydroxy groups.

pol·y·am·ide (pŏl'ē-əm'īd') n. A polymer containing repeated amide groups, as in various kinds of nylon.

pol·y·a·mine (pŏl'ē-ə-mĕn', -əm'ĕn) n. Any of a group of organic compounds that contain two or more amino groups.

pol·y·an·drous (pŏl'ē-ăn'drəs) adj. 1. Relating to, characterized by, or practicing polyandry. 2. Botany. Having an indefinite number of stamens.

pol·y·an·dry (pŏl'ē-ăn'drĕ) n. 1. The condition or practice of having more than one husband at one time. 2. Zoology. A mating pattern in which a female mates with more than one male in a single breeding season. 3. Botany. The condition of being polyandrous. —pol·y·an'dric adj.

pol·y·an·thus (pŏl'ē-ăn'thəs) n. pl. pol·y·an·thus·es. Any of a group of hybrid garden primroses having clusters of variously colored flowers. [New Latin, from Greek poluanthos, having many flowers : polu-, poly- + anthos, flower.]

polyanthus narcissus (pŏl'ē-ăn'thəs năr-sīs'əs) n. A bulbous Mediterranean plant (Narcissus tazetta) having clusters of fragrant flowers with white perianths and yellow coronas.

pol·y·a·tom·ic (pŏl'ē-ə-tŏm'īk) adj. Of or relating to a molecule that has three or more atoms as constituents.

pol·y·ba·sic (pŏl'ē-bā'sīk) adj. Of or relating to an acid that has two or more hydrogen atoms that can be replaced by basic atoms or radicals.

pol·y·ba·site (pŏl'ē-bā'sīt') n. A black mineral with a metallic luster, essentially (Ag,Cu)₁₆Sb₂S₁₁, that is an ore of silver. [POLY- + BAS(IS) + -ITE¹.]

Po·lyb·i·us (pə-līb'ē-əs), 200?-118? B.C. Greek historian. Only five books of his 40-volume history of Rome are extant.

pol·y·car·bon·ate (pŏl'ē-kār'bə-nāt') n. Any of a family of thermoplastics characterized by a high-impact strength, used in making unbreakable windows.

Pol·y·carp (pŏl'ē-kärp'), Saint. A.D. 69?-155?. Christian martyr. A student of the Apostle John, he was burned at the stake during a period of persecution of Christians in Smyrna.

pol·y·car·pel·lar·y (pŏl'ē-kär'pə-lër'ē) adj. Botany. Having or consisting of many carpels.

pol·y·car·pous (pŏl'ē-kär'pəs) also po·ly·car·pic (-pĭk) adj. Botany. Having fruit or pistils with two or more carpels. — pol·y·car·py n.

pol·y·cen·tric (pŏl'ē-sĕn'trĭk) adj. 1. Having many centers, especially of authority or control: the shift from Soviet-American hegemony to a polycentric world. 2. Having several central parts, such as centrosomes or chromatids. — n. A polycentric chromosome. — pol·y·cen'trism n.

pol·y·chete also pol·y·chaete (pŏl'ĭ-kĕt') n. Any of various annelid worms of the class Polychaeta, including mostly marine worms such as the lugworm, and characterized by fleshy paired appendages tipped with bristles on each body segment. [New Latin Polychaeta, class name, from Greek polukhaitēs, with much hair : polu-, poly- + khaitē, long hair.] — pol·y·chete', pol·y·che'tous adj.

pol·y·chlo·rin·at·ed biphenyl (pŏl'ē-klŏr'ə-nā'tĭd bĭ-fĕn'əl, -klŏr'-) n. PCB.

pol·y·chro·mat·ic (pŏl'ē-krŏ-măt'ĭk) also pol·y·chro·mic (-krŏ'mĭk) or pol·y·chro·mous (-krŏ'məs) adj. 1. Having or exhibiting many colors. 2. Of or composed of radiation of more than one wavelength: polychromatic light.

pol·y·chro·mat·o·phil·i·a (pŏl'ē-krŏ-măt'ə-fĭl'ē-ə) also pol·y·chro·mo·phil·i·a (-krŏ'mə-fĭl'ē-ə) n. Affinity for more than one type of stain, especially for both basic and acidic stains. — pol·y·chro·mat'o·phil'ic (-fĭl'ĭk), pol·y·chro·mat'o·phile' adj.

pol·y·chrome (pŏl'ē-krŏm') adj. 1. Having many or various colors; polychromatic. 2. Made or decorated in many or various colors: polychrome tiles. — n. An object or a work composed of or decorated in many colors.

pol·y·chro·mic (pŏl'ē-krŏ'mĭk) or pol·y·chro·mous (-məs) adj. Variants of polychromatic.

pol·y·chro·mo·phil·i·a (pŏl'ē-krŏ'mə-fĭl'ē-ə) n. Variant of polychromatophilia.

pol·y·chro·my (pŏl'ē-krŏ'mē) n. The use of many colors in decoration, especially in architecture and sculpture.

Pol·y·clei·tus (pŏl'ĭ-klĭ'təs) See Polyclitus.

pol·y·clin·ic (pŏl'ē-klĭn'ĭk) n. A clinic, hospital, or health care facility that treats various types of diseases and injuries. [Alteration of POLICLINIC.]

Pol·y·cli·tus or Pol·y·clei·tus (pŏl'ĭ-klĭ'təs), fl. fifth century B.C. Greek sculptor and architect known for his bronze and marble statues of athletes.

pol·y·clone (pɒl'ē-klōn') n. A clone descended from one or more small groups of cells, especially ones of genetically different origins. —pol'y·clo'nal adj.

—pol'y·clo'nal·ly adv.

pol·y·con·ic projection (pɒl'ē-kɒn'ɪk prə-jɛk'shən) n. A conic map projection having distances between meridians along every parallel equal to those distances on a globe. The central geographic meridian is a straight line, whereas the others are curved and the parallels are arcs of circles.

pol·y·cot·y·le·don (pɒl'ē-kɒt'l-ēd'n) also pol·y·cot (-kɒt') n. A plant whose seed contains more than two cotyledons. —pol'y·cot'y·le'don·ous adj.

pol·y·cy·cl·ic (pɒl'ī-sī'klɪk, -sɪk'ɪk) adj. Chemistry. Having two or more atomic rings in a molecule.

pol·y·cys·tic (pɒl'ē-sɪs'tɪk) adj. Having or containing many cysts: polycystic kidney disease.

pol·y·cy·the·mi·a (pɒl'ē-sī-thē'mē-ə) n. A condition marked by an abnormally large number of red blood cells in the circulatory system.

pol·y·dac·tyl (pɒl'ē-dāk'təl) also pol·y·dac·ty·lous (-tə-ləs) Biology. adj.

Having more than the normal number of digits. — n. A person or an animal having more than the normal number of digits. —pol'y·dac'tyl·ism, pol'y·dac'tyl·y n.

pol·y·dem·ic (pɒl'ē-dēm'ɪk) adj. Occurring in or inhabiting two or more regions: polydemic species. [POLY- + (EN)DEMIC.]

pol·y·dip·si·a (pɒl'ē-dɪp'sē-ə) n. Excessive or abnormal thirst. [POLY- + Greek dipsa, thirst + -IA¹.] —pol'y·dip'sic adj.

pol·y·e·lec·tro·lyte (pɒl'ē-ɪ-lɛk'trə-lɪt') n. An electrolyte, such as a protein or polysaccharide, having a high molecular weight.

pol·y·em·bry·o·ny (pɒl'ē-ēm'brē-ə-nē, -ēm-brɪ'-) n. Development of more than one embryo from a single egg or ovule. —pol'y·em'bry·on'ic (-brē-ɒn'ɪk) adj.

pol·y·ene (pɒl'ē-ēn') n. An organic compound containing many double bonds.

pol·y·es·ter (pɒl'ē-ēs'tər, pɒl'ē-ēs'tər) n. 1. Any of numerous synthetic polymers produced chiefly by reaction of dibasic acids with dihydric alcohols and used primarily as light, strong, weather-resistant resins in boat hulls, swimming pools, textile fibers, adhesives, and molded parts. 2. A wrinkle-resistant fabric of fibers made from any of these resins. —pol'y·es'ter adj.

—pol'y·es'ter·i·fi·ca'tion (-ə-fɪ-kā'shən) n.

pol·y·es·trous (pɒl'ē-ēs'trəs) adj. 1. Having several estrous cycles during a single breeding season. 2. Ovulating more than once a year.

pol·y·e·ther (pɒl'ē-ē'thər) n. A polymer in which the repeating unit contains two carbon atoms linked by an oxygen atom.

pol·y·eth·yl·ene (pŏl'ē-ĕth'ə-lĕn') n. A polymerized ethylene resin, used especially for containers, kitchenware, and tubing, or in the form of films and sheets for packaging.

polyethylene glycol (pŏl'ē-ĕth'ə-lĕn' glī'kŏl') n. Any of a family of colorless liquids with high molecular weight that are soluble in water and in many organic solvents and are used in detergents and as emulsifiers and plasticizers.

po·lyg·a·la (pə-līg'ə-lə) n. Any of various plants of the genus Polygala, which constitutes the milkworts. [New Latin Polygala, genus name, from Greek polugalon, milkwort : polu-, poly- + gala, milk; see melg- in Appendix.]

po·lyg·a·mist (pə-līg'ə-mīst) n. One who practices polygamy.

po·lyg·a·mous (pə-līg'ə-məs) adj. 1. Relating to, characterized by, or practicing polygamy. 2. Botany. Having both hermaphroditic and unisexual flowers on the same plant or on separate plants of the same species. —po·lyg'·a·mous·ly adv.

po·lyg·a·my (pə-līg'ə-mē) n. 1. The condition or practice of having more than one spouse at one time. Also called plural marriage 2. Zoology. A mating pattern in which a single individual mates with more than one individual of the opposite sex. [French polygamie, from Late Latin polygamia, from Greek polugamia : polu-, poly- + -gamia, -gamy.]

pol·y·gene (pŏl'ē-jĕn') n. Any of a group of nonallelic genes, each having a small quantitative effect, that together produce a wide range of phenotypic variation. Also called multiple factor, quantitative gene.

pol·y·gen·e·sis (pŏl'ē-jĕn'ī-sīs) n. Derivation of a species or type from more than one ancestor or germ cell. —pol'y·gen'e·sist n.

pol·y·gen·et·ic (pŏl'ē-jə-nĕt'īk) adj. 1. Of or relating to polygenesis; phylogenetic. 2. Having more than one source or origin.

pol·y·gen·ic (pŏl'ē-jĕn'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or determined by polygenes: polygenic inheritance. —pol'y·gen'i·cal·ly adv.

pol·y·glot (pŏl'ē-glŏt') adj. Speaking, writing, written in, or composed of several languages. — n. 1. A person having a speaking, reading, or writing knowledge of several languages. 2. A book, especially a Bible, containing several versions of the same text in different languages. 3. A mixture or confusion of languages. [French polyglotte, from Greek poluglōttos : polu-, poly- + glōtta, tongue, language.] —pol'y·glot'ism, pol'y·glot'tism n.

pol·y·gon (pŏl'ē-gŏn') n. A closed plane figure bounded by three or more line segments. —po·lyg'o·nal (pə-līg'ə-nəl) adj. —po·lyg'o·nal·ly adv.

po·lyg·o·num (pə-līg'ə-nəm) n. Any of numerous plants of the widely distributed genus Polygonum, characterized by stems with knotlike joints and conspicuous sheathlike stipules. [New Latin Polygonum, genus name, from Greek polugonon, knotgrass : polu-, poly- + gonu, knee; see genu-¹ in Appendix.]

pol-y-graph (pŏl'ē-grāf') n. An instrument that simultaneously records changes in physiological processes such as heartbeat, blood pressure, and respiration, often used as a lie detector. — v. tr. pol-y-graphed, pol-y-graph-ing, pol-y-graphs. To test (a criminal suspect, for example) with a polygraph. — po-lyg'ra-pher (pə-līg'rə-fər), po-lyg'ra-phet (-fist) n. — pol'y-graph'ic adj.

po-lyg-y-ny (pə-līj'ə-nē) n. 1. The condition or practice of having more than one wife at one time. 2. Zoology. A mating pattern in which a male mates with more than one female in a single breeding season. — po-lyg'y-nous adj.

pol-y-he-dra (pŏl'ē-hē'drə) n. A plural of polyhedron.

polyhedral angle (pŏl'ē-hē'drəl äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. A shape formed by three or more planes intersecting at a common point.

pol-y-he-dron (pŏl'ē-hē'drən) n. pl. pol-y-he-drons or pol-y-he-dra (-drə). A solid bounded by polygons. — pol'y-he'dral adj.

pol-y-he-dro-sis (pŏl'ē-hē-drō'sis) n. pl. pol-y-he-dro-ses (-sēz). Any of several diseases of insect larvae, caused by infestation with polyhedral virus particles.

pol-y-his-tor (pŏl'ē-hīs'tər) n. A person with broad knowledge. [Latin Poly-histōr, from Greek poluistōr, very learned : polu-, poly- + histōr, learned; see weid- in Appendix.] — pol'y-his-tor'ic (-hī-stōr'ik, -stōr'-) adj.

pol-y-hy-dric (pŏl'ē-hī'drik) adj. Chemistry. Containing at least two hydroxyl groups.

Pol-y-hym-ni-a (pŏl'ē-hīm'nē-ə) also Po-lym-ni-a (pə-līm'nē-ə) n. Greek Mythology. The Muse of sacred song and oratory.

pol-y I:C (pŏl'ē ī'sē') n. A synthetic chemical that resembles the RNA of infectious viruses and is used to stimulate the production of interferon by the immune system. [POLY- + i(nosinic acid) (Greek inos, genitive of is, sinew; see inositol + *INE*² + -IC) + c(ytidylic acid) (CYTIDINE + -YL + -IC).]

pol-y-im-ide (pŏl'ē-īm'id') n. A synthetic polymeric resin of a class resistant to high temperatures, wear, and corrosion, used primarily as a coating or film on a substrate substance.

pol-y-math (pŏl'ē-mäth') n. A person of great or varied learning. [Greek polumathēs : polu-, poly- + manthanein, math-, to learn; see mendh- in Appendix.] — pol'y-math', pol'y-math'ic adj. — po-ly'ma-thy (pə-līm'ə-thē) n.

pol-y-mer (pŏl'ə-mər) n. Any of numerous natural and synthetic compounds of usually high molecular weight consisting of up to millions of repeated linked units, each a relatively light and simple molecule.

pol-y-mer-ase (pŏl'ə-mə-rās', -rāz') n. Any of various enzymes that catalyze the formation of polynucleotides of DNA or RNA using an existing strand of DNA or RNA as a template.

polymerase chain reaction (pŏl'ə-mə-rās' chān rē-āk'shən) n. A laboratory technique in which trace amounts of DNA can be amplified into large quantities by repeatedly separating paired DNA strands and using each strand as a template for a new DNA segment.

pol·y·mer·ic (pŏl'ə-mēr'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or consisting of a polymer.

—pol'y·mer'i·cal·ly adv. —po·lym'er·ism (pə-līm'ə-rīz'əm, pŏl'ə-mə-) n.

po·lym·er·i·za·tion (pə-līm'ər-ī-zā'shən, pŏl'ə-mər-) n. 1. The bonding of two or more monomers to form a polymer. 2. A chemical process that effects this bonding.

pol·y·mer·ize (pŏl'ə-mə-rīz', pə-līm'ə-) v. intr. tr. pol·y·mer·ized, pol·y·mer·iz·ing, pol·y·mer·iz·es. To undergo or subject to polymerization.

po·lym·er·ous (pə-līm'ər-əs) adj. Biology. Consisting of numerous parts, members, or segments.

Po·lym·ni·a (pə-līm'nē-ə) n. Greek Mythology. Variant of Polyhymnia.

pol·y·morph (pŏl'ē-môrf') n. 1. Biology. An organism characterized by polymorphism. 2. Chemistry. A specific crystalline form of a compound that can crystallize in different forms.

pol·y·mor·phism (pŏl'ē-môrf'fīz'əm) n. 1. Biology. The occurrence of different forms, stages, or types in individual organisms or in organisms of the same species, independent of sexual variations. 2. Chemistry. Crystallization of a compound in at least two distinct forms. In this sense, also called pleomorphism —pol'y·mor'phic, pol'y·mor'phous adj. —pol'y·mor'phous·ly adv.

pol·y·mor·pho·nu·cle·ar (pŏl'ē-môrf'fə-nōō'klē-ər, -nyōō'-) adj. Having a lobed nucleus. Used especially of neutrophil white blood cells. — n. A polymorphonuclear cell.

polymorphous perverse (pŏl'ē-môrf'əs pər-vûrs') adj. Characterized by or displaying sexual tendencies that have no specific direction, as in an infant or a young child, but that may evolve into acts that are regarded as perversions in adults.

pol·y·myx·in (pŏl'ē-mīk'sīn) n. Any of various mainly toxic antibiotics derived from strains of the soil bacterium Bacillus polymyxa and used to treat various infections with gram-negative bacteria. [New Latin polymyxa, species name (POLY- + Greek muxa, slime) + -IN.]

Pol·y·ne·sia (pŏl'ə-nē'zhə, -shə) A division of Oceania including scattered islands of the central and southern Pacific Ocean roughly between New Zealand, Hawaii, and Easter Island. The larger islands are volcanic, the smaller ones generally coral formations.

Pol·y·ne·sian (pŏl'ə-nē'zhən, -shən) adj. Of or relating to Polynesia or its peoples, languages, or cultures. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Polynesia. 2. A subfamily of the Austronesian language family spoken in Polynesia.

pol·y·neu·ri·tis (pɒl'ē-nōō-rī'tīs, -nyōō-) n. See multiple neuritis.

—pol'y·neu·rit'ic (-rit'ik) adj.

Pol·y·ni·ces (pɒl'ē-nī'sēz) n. Greek Mythology. A son of Oedipus for whom an expedition against Thebes was raised.

pol·y·no·mi·al (pɒl'ē-nō'mē-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or consisting of more than two names or terms. — n. 1. A taxonomic designation consisting of more than two terms. 2. Mathematics. a. An algebraic expression consisting of one or more summed terms, each term consisting of a constant multiplier and one or more variables raised to integral powers. For example, $x^2 - 5x + 6$ and $2p^3q + y$ are polynomials. Also called multinomial b. An expression of two or more terms.

[POLY- + (BI)NOMIAL.]

pol·y·nu·cle·o·tide (pɒl'ē-nōō'klē-ə-tīd', -nyōō'-) n. A polymeric compound consisting of a number of nucleotides.

po·lyn·ya (pɒl'ən-yä', pə-līn'yə) n. An area of open water surrounded by sea ice. [Russian polyn'ya, from polyi, open, hollow. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

pol·y·o·ma (pɒl'ē-ō'mə) n. A small form of the papovavirus that contains DNA and is associated with the formation of various tumors in rodents. Also called polyoma virus pol·yp (pɒl'ip) n. 1. A coelenterate, such as a hydra or coral, having a cylindrical body and an oral opening usually surrounded by tentacles. 2. A usually nonmalignant growth or tumor protruding from the mucous lining of an organ such as the nose, bladder, or intestine, often causing obstruction. [Middle English polip, nasal tumor, from Old French polipe, from Latin pōlypus, cuttlefish, nasal tumor, from Greek polupous (probably by folk etymology from polus, many; see poly-, and pous, foot). See ped- in Appendix.] —pol'yp·oid' adj.

pol·y·par·y (pɒl'ə-pēr'ē) also pol·y·par·i·um (pɒl'ə-pār'ē-əm) n. pl.

pol·y·par·ies also pol·y·par·i·a (-ē-ə). The common supporting framework of a colony of polyps, especially of coral.

pol·y·pep·tide (pɒl'ē-pěp'tīd') n. A peptide containing many molecules of amino acids, typically between 10 and 100.

pol·y·pet·al·ous (pɒl'ē-pět'l-əs) adj. Having separate petals, as on the corolla of a rose or carnation.

pol·y·pha·gi·a (pɒl'ē-fā'jē-ə, -jə) also po·lyph·a·gy (pə-līf'ə-jē) n. 1. An excessive or pathological desire to eat. 2. Zoology. The habit of feeding on many different kinds of food. —pol'y·pha'gi·an adj.

po·lyph·a·gous (pə-līf'ə-gəs) adj. Feeding on many different kinds of food: polyphagous insects or birds.

Pol·y·phe·mus (pɒl'ə-fē'məs) n. Greek Mythology. The Cyclops who confined Odysseus and his companions in a cave until Odysseus blinded him and escaped. [Latin, from Greek Poluphēmos.]

pol·y·phe·mus moth (pɒl'ə-fē'məs mōth) n. A large North American silkworm moth (Antheraea polyphemus) having an eyelike spot on each hind wing. [After POLYPHEMUS, from the ocellus on its hind wings.]

pol·y·phone (pɒl'ē-fōn') n. Linguistics. A written character or combination of characters having two or more phonetic values, such as the English letter a.

pol·y·phon·ic (pɒl'ē-fōn'ik) adj. 1. Music. Of, relating to, or characterized by polyphony. 2. Linguistics. Having two or more phonetic values.

—pol'y·phon'i·cal·ly adv.

po·lyph·o·ny (pə-līf'ə-nē) n. pl. po·lyph·o·nies. Music. Music with two or more independent melodic parts sounded together. —po·lyph'o·nous adj.

—po·lyph'o·nous·ly adv.

pol·y·phy·let·ic (pɒl'ē-fī-lēt'ik) adj. Relating to or characterized by development from more than one ancestral type. —pol'y·phy·let'i·cal·ly adv.

pol·y·ploid (pɒl'ē-ploid') Genetics. adj. Having one or more extra sets of chromosomes: a polyploid species; a polyploid cell. — n. An organism with more than two sets of chromosomes. —pol'y·ploi'dy n.

pol·yp·ne·a (pɒl'ip-nē'ə) n. Very rapid breathing; panting. [New Latin : POLY- + Greek pnoia, pnoē, breath, breathing (from pnein, to breathe); see pneu- in Appendix.] —pol'yp·ne'ic (-nē'ik) adj.

pol·y·pod (pɒl'ē-pɒd') also po·lyp·o·dous (pə-līp'ə-dəs) adj. Biology. Having numerous feet.

pol·y·po·dy (pɒl'ē-pō'dē) n. pl. pol·y·po·dies. Any of various ferns of the widely distributed genus Polypodium, having simple or compound fronds, round sori arranged in one or more rows along the midrib, and creeping rootstocks. [Middle English polypodie, from Latin polypodium, from Greek polupodion, from diminutive of polupous, many-footed : polu-, poly- + pous, pod-, foot; see -POD.]

pol·y·pore (pɒl'ē-pôr', -pōr') n. See pore fungus.

pol·yp·o·sis (pɒl'ə-pō'sis) n. pl. pol·yp·o·ses (-sēz). A hereditary disease in which numerous polyps erupt in a part of the body, especially on the lining of the colon and rectum, and often become malignant.

pol·y·pro·pyl·ene (pɒl'ē-prō'pə-lēn') n. 1. Any of various thermoplastic resins that are polymers of propylene. They are hard and tough, and are used to make molded articles and fibers. 2. A fabric of fibers made from any of these resins. —pol'y·pro·pyl·ene' adj.

pol·y·pro·tic (pɒl'ē-prō'tik) adj. 1. Of or relating to an acid that can donate more than one proton to a base. 2. Of or relating to a base that can accept more than one proton. [POLY- + PROT(ON) + -IC.]

pol·yp·tych (pɒl'ip-tik') n. A work consisting of four or more painted or carved panels that are hinged together. [From Late Latin polyptycha, registers, account books, from Greek poluptukha, from neuter pl. of poluptukhos, having many folds : polu-, poly- + ptukhē, fold; see DIPTYCH.]

pol·y·rhythm (pŏl'ē-rĭth'əm) n. Music. The use or an instance of simultaneous contrasting rhythms. — pol·y·rhyth'mic adj.

pol·y·ri·bo·nu·cle·o·tide (pŏl'ē-rĭ'bō-nōō'klē-ə-tĭd', -nyōō'-) n. A polynucleotide consisting of a number of ribonucleotides.

pol·y·ri·bo·some (pŏl'ē-rĭ'bə-sōm') n. A cluster of ribosomes connected by a strand of messenger RNA and functioning as a unit in protein synthesis. Also called polysome pol·y·sac·cha·ride (pŏl'ē-sāk'ə-rĭd') also pol·y·sac·cha·rid (-rĭd) or pol·y·sac·cha·rose (-rōs', -rōz') n. Any of a class of carbohydrates, such as starch and cellulose, consisting of a number of monosaccharides joined by glycosidic bonds.

pol·y·se·mous (pŏl'ē-sē'məs) adj. Linguistics. Having or characterized by many meanings. [From Late Latin polysēmus, from Greek polusēmos : polu-, poly- + sēma, sign.] — pol·y·se'my (pŏl'ē-sē'mē, pə-lĭs'ə-) n.

pol·y·sep·al·ous (pŏl'ē-sĕp'ə-ləs) adj. Botany. Having separate sepals.

pol·y·some (pŏl'ē-sōm') n. See polyribosome.

pol·y·so·mic (pŏl'ē-sō'mĭk) Genetics. adj. Having an extra copy of one or more chromosomes: a polysomic individual; a polysomic cell. — n. A polysomic organism or cell. [POLY- + (CHROMO)SOM(E) + -IC.]

pol·y·sor·bate (pŏl'ē-sôr'bāt') n. Any of a class of emulsifiers used in food preparation and in some pharmaceuticals. [POLY- + sorbate, salt or ester of sorbitol (SORB(ITOL) + -ATE²).]

pol·y·sper·my (pŏl'ē-spŭr'mē) n. The entry of several sperm into one ovum during fertilization. — pol·y·sper'mic adj.

po·ly·ti·chous (pə-lĭs'tĭ-kəs) adj. Botany. Arranged in two or more series or rows. [Greek polustikhos, of many lines : polu-, poly- + from stikhos, row; see STICH.]

pol·y·sty·rene (pŏl'ē-stĭ'rĕn) n. A rigid, clear thermoplastic polymer that can be molded into objects or made into a foam that is used to insulate refrigerators. — pol·y·sty'rene adj.

pol·y·sul·fide (pŏl'ē-sŭl'fĭd) n. A sulfide compound containing at least two sulfur atoms per molecule.

pol·y·syl·lab·ic (pŏl'ē-sĭ-lăb'ĭk) adj. Linguistics. 1. Having more than three syllables. 2. Characterized by words having more than three syllables. — pol·y·syl·lab'i·cal·ly adv.

pol·y·syl·la·ble (pŏl'ē-sĭl'ə-bəl) n. Linguistics. A word of more than three syllables.

pol·y·syn·ap·tic (pŏl'ē-sĭ-năp'tĭk) adj. Of or involving two or more synapses in the nervous system: a polysynaptic reflex.

pol·y·syn·de·ton (pŏl'ē-sĭn'dĭ-tŏn') n. The repetition of conjunctions in close succession for rhetorical effect, as in the phrase here and there and every- where. [Late Greek polusundeton, neuter of polusundetos, using many connectives : Greek polu-, poly- + Greek sundetos, bound together; see SYNETIC.]

pol-y-syn-thet-ic (pŏl'ē-sīn-thĕt'īk) adj. Linguistics. Of or relating to a language such as Eskimo or Mohawk, characterized by long, morphologically complex words with a large number of affixes that express syntactic relationships and meanings usually expressed as phrases or sentences in other languages.

pol-y-tech-nic (pŏl'ē-tĕk'nīk) adj. Offering, receiving, or dealing with instruction in many industrial arts and applied sciences: a polytechnic institute.
— n. A school specializing in the teaching of industrial arts and applied sciences.

pol-y-tene (pŏl'ē-tĕn') adj. Relating to or having large, multistranded chromosomes whose corresponding chromomeres are in contact. [POLY- + Latin taenia, band (from Greek tainia, ribbon); see ten- in Appendix.] —pol'y-te'nic adj.
—pol'y-te'ny n.

pol-y-tet-ra-fluor-o-eth-yl-ene (pŏl'ē-tĕt'rə-flŏŏr'ō-ĕth'ə-lĕn', -flŏr' -, -flŏr'-) n. A thermoplastic resin, (C₂F₄)_n, that is resistant to heat and chemicals, has an extremely low coefficient of friction, and is used as a coating on cookware, gaskets, seals, and hoses.

pol-y-the-ism (pŏl'ē-thĕ-īz'əm, pŏl'ē-thĕ'īz-əm) n. The worship of or belief in more than one god. [French polythéisme, from Greek polutheos, polytheistic : polu-, poly- + theos, god; see dhēs- in Appendix.] —pol'y-the'ist n.
—pol'y-the-is'tic adj.

pol-y-thene (pŏl'ə-thĕn') n. Chiefly British. Variant of polyethylene.

pol-lyt-o-cous (pə-līt'ə-kəs) adj. Producing many offspring in a single birth. [Greek polutokos, bearing many offspring : polu-, poly- + tokos, offspring, birth; see tek- in Appendix.]

pol-y-to-nal-i-ty (pŏl'ē-tō-nāl'ī-tĕ) n. Music. Simultaneous use of two or more tonalities in a composition. —pol'y-to'nal (-tŏ'nəl) adj.
—pol'y-to'nal-ly adv.

pol-y-tro-phic (pŏl'ē-trŏf'īk, -trŏf'īk) adj. Subsisting on various types of organic material. Used of certain bacteria.

pol-y-typ-ic (pŏl'ē-tīp'īk) also pol-y-typ-i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Having several variant forms, especially subspecies or varieties. [POLY- + TYP(E) + -IC.]

pol-y-un-sat-u-rat-ed (pŏl'ē-ŭn-säch'ə-rā'tīd) adj. Of or relating to long-chain carbon compounds, especially fats, having many unsaturated bonds.

pol-y-ur-e-thane (pŏl'ē-yŏŏr'ə-thān') n. Any of various resins, widely varying in flexibility, used in tough chemical-resistant coatings, adhesives, and foams.
—pol'y-ur'e-thane' adj.

pol-y-u-ri-a (pŏl'ē-yŏŏr'ē-ə) n. Excessive passage of urine, as in diabetes.
—pol'y-u'ric adj.

pol-y-val-ent (pŏl'ē-vāl'ənt) adj. 1. Acting against or interacting with more than one kind of antigen, antibody, toxin, or microorganism. 2. Chemistry.

a. Having more than one valence. b. Having a valence of 3 or higher.

—pol'y·va'lence, pol'y·va'len·cy n.

pol·y·vi·nyl (pɒl'ē-vī'nəl) adj. Abbr. PV Designating any of a group of polymerized thermoplastic vinyls, such as polyvinyl chloride.

polyvinyl chloride (pɒl'ē-vī'nəl klɔr'ɪd') n. PVC.

pol·y·zo·an (pɒl'ē-zō'ən) n. See bryozoan. [From New Latin Polyzoa, phylum name : POLY- + -zoa, pl. of -zoon; see -ZOON.] —pol'y·zo'an adj.

pol·y·zo·ar·i·um (pɒl'ē-zō-âr'ē-əm) also pol·y·zo·a·ry (-zō'ə-rē) n. pl.

pol·y·zo·ar·i·a (-âr'ē-ə) also pol·y·zo·a·ries. A bryozoan colony or its supporting skeletal structure. [New Latin : Polyzoa, phylum name; see POLYZOAN + -ARIUM.]

pol·y·zo·ic (pɒl'ē-zō'ɪk) adj. Biology. 1. Forming or consisting of a colony of zooids. 2. Containing numerous sporezoites.

pom·ace (pʊm'ɪs, pɒm'-) n. 1. The pulpy material remaining after the juice has been pressed from fruit, such as apples. 2. Pulpy material remaining after the extraction of oil from nuts, seeds, or fish. [Middle English pomis, from Medieval Latin pōmācium, cider, from Vulgar Latin pōma*, apple, fruit. See POME.]

pomace fly (pʊm'ɪs flī) n. See fruit fly (n., sense 1).

po·ma·ceous (pō-mā'shəs) adj. Of, relating to, bearing, or characteristic of apples or pomes. [From New Latin pōmāceus, from Late Latin pōmum, apple, fruit. See POME.]

po·made (pō-mād', -mād', pɒ-) n. A perfumed ointment, especially one used to groom the hair. — v. tr. po·mad·ed, po·mad·ing, po·mades. To anoint with pomade. [French pommade, from Italian pomata, from pomo, apple, from Late Latin pōmum. See POME.]

po·man·der (pō'măn'dər, pō-măn'-) n. 1. A mixture of aromatic substances enclosed in a bag or box as a protection against odor or infection, formerly worn on one's person but now usually placed in a dresser drawer or closet. 2. A case, box, or bag for holding this mixture. [Middle English pomendambre, alteration of Old French pome d'embre, apple of amber, from Medieval Latin pōmum dē ambrā : pōmum, apple, ball (from Latin, fruit) + Latin dē, of; see DE- + ambrā, ablative of ambra, amber; see AMBER.]

pome (pōm) n. A fleshy fruit, such as an apple, a pear, or a quince, having several seed chambers and an outer fleshy part largely derived from the hypanthium. Also called false fruit [Middle English, from Old French, apple, fruit, from Vulgar Latin pōma*, from neuter pl. of Late Latin pōmum, from Latin, fruit.]

pome·gran·ate (pɒm'grăn'ɪt, pɒm'ɪ-, pʊm'-, pʊm'ɪ-) n. 1. A deciduous shrub or small tree (Punica granatum) native to Asia and widely cultivated for its edible fruit. 2. The fruit of this tree, having a tough reddish rind, and containing many seeds, each enclosed in a juicy, mildly acidic, red pulp. [Middle English pome granate, from Old French pome grenate : pome, apple; see POME + grenate, having many seeds (from Latin grānātus, from grānum, grain, seed); see grə-no- in Appendix.]

pom·e·lo (pŏm'ə-lō') n. pl. pom·e·los. See shaddock. [Alteration of POMPELMOUS.]

Pom·er·a·ni·a (pŏm'ə-rā'nē-ə, -rān'yə) A historical region of north-central Europe bordering on the Baltic Sea in present-day northwest Poland and north-east Germany. It was inhabited by Slavic tribes in the 10th century and conquered by Poland in the 12th century. The territory was later split up and controlled by various powers, including the Holy Roman Empire, Prussia, Sweden, Denmark, and Germany.

Pom·er·a·ni·an (pŏm'ə-rā'nē-ən, -rān'yən) adj. Of or relating to Pomerania or its people. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Pomerania. 2. Any of a breed of small dogs having long, silky hair, a foxlike face, pointed ears, and a hairy tail curling over the back.

po·mi·cul·ture (pŏ'mī-kŭl'chər) n. The cultivation of fruit. [Latin pŏmum, fruit + CULTURE.]

po·mif·er·ous (pŏ-mīf'ər-əs) adj. Bearing pomes. [Latin pŏmifer, fruit-bearing (pŏmum, fruit + -fer, -fer) + -OUS.]

pom·mel (pŭm'əl, pŏm'-) v. tr. pom·meled also pom·melled, pom·mel·ing also pom·mel·ling, pom·mels also pom·mels. To beat; pummel. — n. 1. The upper front part of a saddle; a saddlebow. 2. A knob on the hilt of a sword or similar weapon. [From Middle English pomel, a pommel, from Old French, diminutive of pom, ball, fruit, from Latin pŏmum, fruit.]

pom·my or pom·mie (pŏm'yē) n. pl. pom·mies. Australian & New Zealand. Used as a disparaging term for a British person, especially a recent immigrant. [Short for pomegranate, alteration of Pummy Grant, probably alteration of immigrant.]

Po·mo (pŏ'mō) n. pl. Pomo or Po·mos. 1. a. A group of Native American peoples inhabiting an area of the Coast Ranges of northern California. b. A member of this group. 2. Any of the seven languages of the Pomo.

po·mol·o·gy (pŏ-mŏl'ə-jē) n. The scientific study and cultivation of fruit. [Latin pŏmum, fruit + -LOGY.] —po'mo·log'i·cal (pŏ'mə-lŏj'ī-kəl) adj. —po'mo·log'i·cal·ly adv. —po·mol'o·gist n.

Po·mo·na (pə-mŏ'nə) A city of southern California, a residential and industrial suburb of Los Angeles. Population, 131,723.

pomp (pŏmp) n. 1. Dignified or magnificent display; splendor: the solemn pomp of a military funeral. 2. Vain or ostentatious display. See Synonyms at display. [Middle English, from Old French pompe, from Latin pompa, pomp, procession, from Greek pompē, procession, from pempein, to send.]

pom·pa·dour (pŏm'pə-dŏr', -dŏr') n. 1. A woman's hairstyle formed by sweeping the hair up from the forehead. 2. A man's hairstyle formed by brushing the hair up from the forehead. [After the Marquise de. POMPADOUR.]

Pom·pa·dour (pŏm'pə-dŏr', -dŏr', -dŏŏr', pŏN-pä-dŏŏr'), Marquise de Title of Jeanne Antoinette Poisson. 1721-1764. The lover of Louis XV of France. She was blamed for establishing France's alliance with Austria, which led to the Seven Years' War (1756-1763).

pom·pa·no (pŏm'pə-nŏ') n. pl. pompano or pom·pa·nos. Any of several marine food fishes of the genus Trachinotus, especially T. carolinus, of tropical and temperate Atlantic waters, having a flattened, oblong body with a bluish back and a yellowish breast. [American Spanish pámpano, any of several kinds of fish, from Spanish, vine tendril, a kind of fish with golden markings, from Latin pampinus, vine tendril.]

Pom·pa·no Beach (pŏm'pə-nŏ' bĕch) A city of southeast Florida on the Atlantic coast north of Miami. It is a resort community in a citrus and vegetable area. Population, 72,411.

Pompeian red (pŏm-pā'ən rĕd) n. Color. A grayish to moderate red. [From its similarity to the color found on house walls at Pompeii.]

Pom·pe·ii (pŏm-pā', -pā'ē) An ancient city of southern Italy southeast of Naples. Founded in the sixth or early fifth century B.C., it was a Roman colony by 80 B.C. and became a prosperous port and resort with many noted villas, temples, theaters, and baths. Pompeii was destroyed by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in A.D. 79. The incredibly well-preserved ruins were rediscovered in 1748 and have been extensively excavated. —Pom·pe'ian, Pom·pei'ian adj. & n.

pom·pel·mous (pŏm'pəl-mŏŏs') n. See shaddock. [Dutch pompelmoes (influenced by pompoen, gourd, and Portuguese limoes, lemon), probably ultimately from Tamil pampalimāsu.]

Pom·pey (pŏm'pē), Known as "the Great." 106-48 B.C. Roman general and political leader. With Caesar and Crassus he formed a ruling triumvirate (60-50) but was later defeated by Caesar and murdered in Egypt.

Pom·pi·dou (pŏm'pī-dŏŏ', pŏN-pē-dŏŏ'), Georges Jean Raymond. 1911-1974. French politician who served as premier (1962-1968) and president (1969-1974), continuing the policies of Charles de Gaulle.

pom·pon or pom·pon (pŏm'pŏn') also pom·pom or pom·pom (pŏm'pŏm') n. 1. A tuft or ball of wool, feathers, or other material used as a decoration, especially on shoes, caps, and curtains. 2. A small buttonlike flower of some chrysanthemums and dahlias. [French.]

pom·pous (pŏm'pəs) adj. 1. Characterized by excessive self-esteem or exaggerated dignity; pretentious: pompous officials who enjoy giving orders. 2. Full of high-sounding phrases; bombastic: a pompous proclamation. 3. Characterized by pomp or stately display; ceremonious: a pompous occasion. [Middle English, from Old French pompeux, from Late Latin pompōsus, from Latin pompa, pomp. See POMP.] —pom·pos/i·ty (-pɔs'ī-tē), pom'pous·ness (-pəs-nīs) n.

—pom'pous·ly adv.

Pon·ca (pɔŋg'kə) n. pl. Ponca or Pon·cas. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting northeast Nebraska near the Niobrara River, with present-day populations in Oklahoma and Nebraska. The Ponca are closely related to the Omaha in language and history. b. A member of this people. 2. The Siouan language of the Ponca, dialectally related to Omaha.

Ponca City (pɔŋg'kə sīt'ē) A city of northern Oklahoma on the Arkansas River north-northeast of Oklahoma City. It was founded in 1893 after the opening of the Cherokee Strip. Population, 26,359.

Pon·ce (pôn'sā, -sē) A city of southern Puerto Rico southwest of San Juan. It is an agricultural trade and distribution center. Population, 161,739.

Ponce de Le·ón (pɔns' də lē'ən, lē-ōn', pôn'thē thē lē-ōn', pôn'sē), Juan. 1460-1521. Spanish explorer who sailed with Columbus on his second voyage (1493-1494) and explored Florida (1513) while looking for the legendary Fountain of Youth.

Pon·chiel·li (pông-kyəl'lē), Amilcare. 1834-1886. Italian composer. Among his works are the ballet Clarina (1873) and the opera La Gioconda (1876).

pon·cho (pɔn'chō) n. pl. pon·chos. 1. A blanketlike cloak having a hole in the center for the head. 2. A similar garment having a hood used as a raincoat. [American Spanish, from Spanish, cape, perhaps variant of pocho, faded, discolored.]

pond (pɔnd) n. A still body of water smaller than a lake, often of artificial origin. [Middle English ponde, from Old English pund-, enclosure.]

pond apple (pɔnd əp'əl) n. An evergreen tree (Annona glabra) of Florida and tropical America, having yellow flowers with red markings and ovoid yellow fruit.

pond cypress (pɔnd sī'prīs) n. A small variety of the bald cypress (Taxodium distichum var. nutans) native to the southeast United States.

pon·der (pɔn'dər) v. pon·dered, pon·der·ing, pon·ders. — v. tr. To weigh in the mind with thoroughness and care. — v. intr. To reflect or consider with thoroughness and care. [Middle English ponderen, from Old French ponderer, from Latin ponderāre. See (s)pen- in Appendix.] —pon'der·er n.

SYNONYMS: ponder, meditate, deliberate, ruminare, mull, muse. These verbs mean to consider something carefully and at length. To ponder is to weigh in the mind with painstaking thoroughness and care: “He and the council had already pondered the list of members returned to the parliament” (John Morley). “The Doctor had been pondering, and had made up his mind to a certain course” (Henry Kingsley). Meditate implies serious consideration, as of undertaking a course of action or of implementing a plan; the term can also denote engagement in deep reflection: “The King struck the blow he had for some time meditated” (William E.H. Lecky). “He quitted her presence to meditate upon revenge” (Frederick Marryat). To deliberate is to think attentively and usually slowly, as about a choice or decision to be made: The jury deliberated for two days before returning a verdict. Ruminate and mull imply turning a matter over and over again in the mind: “The old warrior king was... ruminating on his gloomy fortunes” (Washington Irving). I sat mulling over my problem without finding a solution. To muse is to be absorbed in one’s thoughts; the word often connotes an abstracted quality: “And musing there an hour alone, I dreamed that Greece might still be free” (Byron).

pon·der·a·ble (pŏn’dər-ə-bəl) adj. Considerable enough to be weighed or assessed; appreciable: ponderable results; ponderable issues.

—pon’dər·a·bil’i·ty n.

pon·der·o·sa pine (pŏn’də-rō’sə pīn) n. A tall timber tree (Pinus ponderosa) of western North America, having long, dark green needles grouped in fascicles of three. [Translation of New Latin Pīnus ponderōsa : Latin pīnus, pine-tree + Latin ponderōsa, feminine of ponderōsus, heavy; see PONDEROUS.]

pon·der·ous (pŏn’dər-əs) adj. 1. Having great weight. 2. Unwieldy from weight or bulk. 3. Lacking grace or fluency; labored and dull: a ponderous speech. See Synonyms at heavy. [Middle English, from Old French pondereux, from Latin ponderōsus, from pondus, ponder-, weight. See (s)pen- in Appendix.]

—pon’dər·ous·ly adv. —pon’dər·ous·ness, pon’dər·os’i·ty (-ŏs’i-tē) n.

Pon·di·cher·ry (pŏn’dī-chĕr’ē, -shĕr’ē) A city of southeast India on the Bay of Bengal south-southwest of Madras. It consists of four former French coastal settlements whose administration was transferred to India in 1954. Population, 162,636.

pond lily (pŏnd līl’ē) n. See water lily.

pond scum (pŏnd skŭm) n. Any of various freshwater algae that form a usually greenish film on the surface of stagnant water.

pond-weed (pŏnd’wĕd’) n. Any of various submerged or floating aquatic plants of the genus Potamogeton having inconspicuous flowers borne in small spikes.

pone (pŏn) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See johnnycake. See Regional note at johnnycake. [Virginia Algonquian poan, appoans, cornbread.]

REGIONAL NOTE: A staple of the early American colonies from New England southward to Virginia was pone, a bread made by Native Americans from flat cakes of cornmeal dough baked in ashes. Derived from an Algonquian word meaning “to roast” or “to bake,” pone is one of several Virginia Algonquian words (including hominy and tomahawk) borrowed into the English of the Atlantic seaboard. The word pone, usually in the compound cornpone, is now used mainly in the South, where it means cakes of cornbread baked on a griddle or in hot ashes—as the Native Americans originally cooked it.

- pon·gee (pǒn-jē', pǒn'jē) n. A soft, thin cloth woven from Chinese or Indian raw silk or an imitation thereof. [Chinese (Mandarin) bě zhī: běn, one's own + zhī, to weave, spin.]
- pon·gid (pǒn'jǐd) n. An anthropoid ape of the family Pongidae, which includes the chimpanzee, gorilla, and orangutan. — adj. Of or belonging to the family Pongidae. [From New Latin Pongidae, family name, from Pongo, type genus, of African origin.]
- pon·iard (pǒn'γærd) n. A dagger typically having a slender square or triangular blade. — v. tr. pon·iard·ed, pon·iard·ing, pon·iards. To stab with such a dagger. [French poignard, from poing, fist, from Old French, from Latin pugnus. See peuk- in Appendix.]
- pons (pǒnz) n. pl. pon·tes (pǒn'tēz). 1. A slender tissue joining two parts of an organ. 2. The pons Varolii. [Latin pōns, bridge. See pent- in Appendix.]
- Pons (pǒnz, pōns), Lily. 1904-1976. French-born American operatic soprano. She was a principal soprano with the Metropolitan Opera from 1931 to 1961.
- pons as·i·no·rum (pǒnz' əs'ə-nōr'əm, -nōr'əm) n. A problem that severely tests the ability of an inexperienced person. [New Latin pōns asinōrum: Latin pōns, bridge + Latin asinōrum, genitive pl. of asinus, ass, fool.]
- Pon·selle (pǒn-sěl'), Rosa Melba. 1897-1981. American soprano who was a leading performer with the Metropolitan Opera in the 1920's and 1930's.
- pons Va·ro·li·i (pǒnz' və-rō'lē-ī') n. A band of nerve fibers on the ventral surface of the brain stem that links the medulla oblongata and the cerebellum with upper portions of the brain. [New Latin pōns Varoliū, bridge of Varoli, after Costanzo Varolio (1543?-1575), Italian anatomist.]
- Pon·ta Del·ga·da (pǒn'tə dēl-gä'də, pōn'-) A city of southwest Sao Miguel Island in the Azores. It is the chief commercial city of the island group. Population, 21,187.
- Ponta Gros·sa (pǒn'tə grō'sä) A city of southern Brazil west-northwest of Curitiba. It is a processing center in a farming and lumbering region. Population, 171,810.
- Pont·char·train (pǒn'chər-trān'), Lake. A lake of southeast Louisiana north of New Orleans. A causeway links New Orleans with the region north of the lake.
- pon·tes (pǒn'tēz) n. Plural of pons.
- Pon·ti·ac¹ (pǒn'tē-äk'), 1720?-1769. Ottawa leader who led a large Native American revolt against the British in the Great Lakes region (1763-1766).
- Pon·ti·ac² (pǒn'tē-äk') A city of southeast Michigan northwest of Detroit. Its carriage-making industry of the 1880's was replaced by automobile manufacturing in the early 20th century. Population, 71,166.

Pon-ti-a-nak (pŏn'tē-ä'näk) A city of western Borneo, Indonesia, at the northern edge of the Kapuas River delta. Capital of a sultanate founded in 1772, it later became a major gold-exporting center. Population, 304,778.

pon-ti-fex (pŏn'tə-fěks') n. pl. pon-tif-i-ces (pŏn-tif'i-sēz'). A man on the highest council of priests in ancient Rome. [Latin. See pent- in Appendix.]

pon-tiff (pŏn'tif) n. 1. a. The pope. b. A bishop. 2. A pontifex. [French pontife, from Old French pontif, from Latin pontifex, pontifex. See pent- in Appendix.]

pon-tif-i-cal (pŏn-tif'i-kəl) adj. 1. Relating to, characteristic of, or suitable for a pope or a bishop. 2. Having the dignity, pomp, or authority of a pontiff or a bishop. 3. Pompously dogmatic or self-important; pretentious. — n.

1. pontificals. The vestments and insignia of a pontiff or a bishop. 2. A book of forms for ceremonies performed by a bishop. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pontificālis, of a pontifex, from pontifex, pontific-, pontifex. See PONTIFEX.] — pon-tif'i-cal-ly adv.

Pon-tif-i-cal Mass (pŏn-tif'i-kəl məs) n. Ecclesiastical. A celebration of the Eucharist performed by a bishop in all Roman Catholic churches, many Anglican churches, and some Lutheran churches.

pon-tif-i-cate (pŏn-tif'i-kīt, -kāt') n. The office or term of office of a pontiff. — v. intr. pon-tif-i-cat-ed, pon-tif-i-cat-ing, pon-tif-i-cates (-kāt'). 1. To express opinions or judgments in a dogmatic way. 2. To administer the office of a pontiff. [Latin pontificātus, from pontifex, pontific-, pontifex; see PONTIFEX. V., from Medieval Latin pontificāre, pontificāt-, to act as an ecclesiastic from Latin pontifex, pontifex.] — pon-tif'i-ca'tion n. — pon-tif'i-ca'tor n.

pon-tif-i-ces (pŏn-tif'i-sēz') n. Plural of pontifex.

pon-til (pŏn'til) n. See punty. [French, possibly from Italian puntello, diminutive of punto, point, from Latin punctum, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See peuk- in Appendix.]

pon-tine (pŏn'tin', -tēn') adj. 1. Of or relating to bridges. 2. Of or relating to a pons, especially the pons Varolii. [Latin pōns, pont-, bridge; see pent- in Appendix + -INE¹.]

Pon-tine Marshes (pŏn'tēn mārsh'īz, -tīn) An area of central Italy between the Tyrrhenian Sea and the Apennine foothills. Formerly a malarial breeding ground, the land was drained during the 1930's to produce fertile farmland.

Pon-tius Pi-late (pŏn'chəs pī'lət) See Pontius Pilate.

Pont l'É-vêque (pŏnt' lə-věk', pŏn' lā-věk') n. A mild, soft-centered French cheese made of whole milk. [After Pont l'Évêque, a town of northwest France.]

pon-to-nier (pŏn'tə-nîr') n. One who is in charge of pontoons or is engaged in the construction of pontoon bridges. [French pontonier, from Old French, from ponton, pontoon. See PONTOON.] pon·toon (pŏn-tōōn') n. 1. A floating structure, such as a flat-bottomed boat, that is used to support a bridge. 2. A floating structure serving as a dock. 3. A float on a seaplane. [French ponton, from Old French, from Latin pontō, pontōn-, floating bridge, from pōns, pont-, bridge. See pent- in Appendix.]

pontoon bridge (pŏn-tōōn' brīj) n. A temporary floating bridge that uses pontoons for support. Also called bateau bridge Pon·top·pi·dan (pŏn-tŏp'ī-dān', -dān'), Henrik. 1857-1943. Danish writer known for his three-novel series The Promised Land (1891-1895). He shared the 1917 Nobel Prize for literature.

Pon·tus (pŏn'təs) An ancient country of northeast Asia Minor along the southern coast of the Black Sea. Established in the fourth century B.C., it flourished under Mithridates VI until his defeat by Pompey of Rome in 66. —Pon'tic (-tīk) adj.

Pon·ty·pool (pŏn'tə-pōōl') An urban district of southeast Wales north-northeast of Cardiff. Its iron and tin industries began in the late 16th century. Population, 90,300.

po·ny (pŏ'nē) n. pl. po·nies. 1. Any of several types or breeds of horses that are small in size when full grown, such as the Shetland pony. 2. a. Informal. A racehorse. b. Sports. A polo horse. 3. Something small for its kind, especially a small glass for beer or liqueur. 4. A word-for-word translation of a foreign language text, especially one used secretly by students as an aid in studying or test-taking. Also called crib, trot. 5. Chiefly British. The sum of 25 pounds. — v. tr. intr.

po·nied, po·ny·ing, po·nies. To study with the aid of a pony: pony a lesson; ponied all night before the exam. —phrasal verb. pony up. Slang. To pay (money owed or due). [Probably from obsolete French poulenet, diminutive of poulain, colt, from Late Latin pullāmen, young of an animal, from Latin pullus. See pau- in Appendix.]

pony express (pŏ'nē ĭk-sprēs') n. A system of rapid mail transportation by relays of horses that operated from St. Joseph, Missouri, to Sacramento, California, in 1860-1861.

po·ny·tail (pŏ'nē-tāl') n. A hairstyle in which the hair is held back so as to hang down like a pony's tail. —po'ny-tailed' adj.

Pon·zi scheme (pŏn'zē skēm) n. An investment swindle in which high profits are promised from fictitious sources and early investors are paid off with funds raised from later ones. [After Charles Ponzi (1882?-1949), Italian-born speculator who organized such a scheme (1919-1920).]

pooch (pōōch) n. Slang. A dog. [Origin unknown.]

pood (pōōd) n. A Russian unit of weight equivalent to about 16.4 kilograms (36.1 pounds) avoirdupois. [Russian pud, from Old Norse pund, pound, ultimately from Latin pondō. See POUND¹.]

poo-dle (pōōd'1) n. Any of a breed of dogs originally developed in Europe as hunting dogs, having thick, curly hair of varying color, and classified by shoulder height into standard, miniature, and toy varieties. [German Pudel, short for Pudelhund: Low German pudeln, to splash about (from pudel, puddle) + Hund, dog; see DACHSHUND.]

pooh (pōō) interj. Used to express disdain or disbelief.

Pooh-Bah or pooh-bah (pōō'bä') n. 1. A pompous, ostentatious official, especially one who, holding many offices, fulfills none of them. 2. A person who holds high office. [After Pooh-Bah, Lord-High-Everything-Else, a character in The Mikado by W.S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan.]

pooh-pooh (pōō'pōō') v. tr. pooh--poohed, pooh--pooh-ing, pooh-poohs. Informal. To express contempt for or impatience about; make light of: "British actors have long pooh-poohed the Method" (Stephen Schiff). [Reduplication of POOH.]

pool¹ (pōōl) n. 1. A small body of still water. 2. An accumulation of standing liquid; a puddle: a pool of blood. 3. A deep or still place in a stream. 4. A swimming pool. 5. An underground accumulation of petroleum or gas in porous sedimentary rock. — v. intr. pooled, pool-ing, pools. 1. To form pools or a pool: The receding tide pooled in hollows along the shore. 2. To accumulate in a body part: preventing blood from pooling in the limbs. [Middle English, from Old English pōl.]

pool² (pōōl) n. 1. Games. a. A game of chance, resembling a lottery, in which the contestants put staked money into a common fund that is later paid to the winner. b. A fund containing all the money bet in a game of chance or on the outcome of an event. 2. A grouping of resources for the common advantage of the participants: a pool of implements for the use of all the workers on the estate; forming a pool of our talents. 3. An available supply, the use of which is shared by a group. 4. A group of journalists who cover an event and then by agreement share their reports with participating news media: the White House press pool. 5. a. A mutual fund established by a group of stockholders for speculating in or manipulating prices of securities. b. The persons or parties participating in such a fund. 6. An agreement between competing business concerns to establish controls over production, market, and prices for common profit. 7. Any of several games played on a six-pocket billiard table usually with 15 object balls and a cue ball. In this sense, also called pocket billiards — v. pooled, pool-ing, pools. — v. tr. To put into a fund for use by all: Let's pool our resources to finish the project quickly. — v. intr. To join or form a pool. [French poule, hen, stakes, booty, from Old French, hen, young chicken, from Latin pullus, young of an animal. See pau- in Appendix.] — pool'er n.

Poole (pōōl) A municipal borough of southern England west-southwest of Southampton on Poole Bay, an inlet of the English Channel. Chartered in pool·room (pōol/'rōom', -rōom') n. Games. A commercial establishment or room for the playing of pool or billiards.

1248, Poole is a port and shipbuilding center with varied industries. Population, 120,000.

pool·side (pōol/'sid') n. The area next to or around a swimming pool. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: poolside furniture; a poolside party.

pool table (pōol tā/'bəl) n. Games. A six-pocket billiards table on which pool is played.

poon (pōon) n. Any of several trees of the genus Calophyllum, of southern Asia, having light, hard wood used for masts and spars. [Singhalese pūna, perhaps of Dravidian origin.]

Poo·na (pōō'nə) A city of west-central India east-southeast of Bombay. It was a Maratha capital in the 17th and 18th centuries and passed to the British in 1818. Population, 1,203,351.

poop¹ (pōop) Nautical. n. 1. A superstructure at the stern of a ship. 2. A poop deck. — v. tr. pooped, poop·ing, poops. 1. To break over the stern of (a ship). 2. To take (a wave) over the stern. [Middle English poupe, from Old French, from Latin puppis.]

poop² (pōop) v. tr. pooped, poop·ing, poops. Slang. To cause to become fatigued; tire: “Many people stop here, pooped by the short, steep climb” (Sierra Club Guides to the National Parks). — phrasal verb. poop out. Slang. 1. To quit because of exhaustion: poop out of a race. 2. To decide not to participate, especially at the last moment. [Origin unknown.]

poop³ (pōop) n. Slang. Inside information: She gave me all the poop on the company party. [Origin unknown.]

poop⁴ (pōop) n. Slang. A person regarded as very disagreeable. [Perhaps short for NINCOMPOOP.]

poop⁵ (pōop) Slang. n. Excrement. — v. intr. pooped, poop·ing, poops. To defecate. [Possibly from obsolete poop, to break wind, from Middle English poupen, to blow a horn, toot, of imitative origin.]

poop deck (pōop dĕk) n. Nautical. An exposed, partial deck on the stern superstructure of a ship.

poop·er·scoop·er (pōō'pər skōō'pər) n. A scoop for picking up and removing the feces of a dog or other pet. [From POOP⁵ + SCOOP.]

poor (pōor) adj. poor·er, poor·est. 1. Having little or no wealth and few or no possessions. 2. Lacking in a specified resource or quality: an area poor in timber and coal; a diet poor in calcium. 3. Not adequate in quality; inferior: a poor performance. 4. a. Lacking in value; insufficient: poor wages. b. Lacking in quantity: poor attendance. 5. Lacking fertility: poor soil. 6. Undernourished; lean. 7. Humble: a poor spirit. 8. Eliciting or deserving pity; pitiable: couldn't rescue the poor fellow. — n. (used with a pl. verb). People with little or no wealth and possessions considered as a group: The urban poor are in need of homes. [Middle English poure, from Old French povre, from Latin pauper. See pau- in Appendix.] — poor/ness n.

SYNONYMS: poor, indigent, needy, impecunious, penniless, impoverished, poverty-stricken, destitute. These adjectives mean lacking the money or the means requisite to an adequate or comfortable life. Poor is the most general: “Resolve not to be poor: whatever you have, spend less. Poverty is a great enemy to human happiness” (Samuel Johnson). Indigent and needy refer to one in need or want: The town government is responsible for assistance to indigent people. Local politicians used to distribute Thanksgiving turkeys to needy families. Impecunious and penniless mean having little or no money: “Certainly an impecunious Subaltern was not a catch” (Rudyard Kipling). If the breadwinner deserts the family, it will be left penniless. One who is impoverished has been reduced to poverty: The dictator, whose greed and excesses had produced an impoverished citizenry, fled the country. Poverty-stricken means suffering from poverty and miserably poor: “The poverty-stricken exiles contributed far more, in proportion... than the wealthy merchants” (John Lathrop Motley). Destitute means lacking any means of subsistence: Some nations have no middle class; one group is rich, while the other is destitute.

USAGE NOTE: In informal speech poor is sometimes used as an adverb, as in They never played poorer. In formal usage more poorly would be required in this example.

poor box (pōor böks) n. A box, such as one to be found in a church, used for collecting alms.

poor boy (pōor boi) n. New Orleans. See submarine (n., sense 2). See Regional note at submarine.

poor farm (pōor färm) n. A farm that houses, supports, and employs the poor at public expense.

poor-house (pōor'hous') n. An establishment maintained at public expense as housing for the homeless.

poo·ri also pu·ri (pōor'ē) n. pl. poo·ris. A light, flat wheat cake of Pakistan and northern India, usually fried in deep fat. [Hindi puri, from Sanskrit pūrah, cake. See pelə¹ in Appendix.]

poor-ish (pōor'ish) adj. Somewhat poor.

poor law (pōor lô) n. A law or system of laws providing for public relief and support of the poor.

poor-ly (pōor'lē) adv. In a poor manner. See Usage Note at poor. — adj. Chiefly Southern U.S. In poor health; ill: feeling poorly. See Usage Note at bad¹.

poor-mouth (pōor'mouth', -mouth') v. poor-mouthed, poor-mouth-ing, poor-mouths. — v. tr. To speak ill of. — v. intr. To claim poverty as an excuse or a defense: always poormouths when asked to donate to charity. — n. An exaggerated assertion of poverty.

poor white (pōor hwīt) n. Offensive. Used as a disparaging term for a member of a class of low-income white farmers and laborers, especially in the southern United States.

pop¹ (pɒp) v. popped, pop-ping, pops. — v. intr. 1. To make a short, sharp, explosive sound. 2. To burst open with a short, sharp, explosive sound. 3. To move quickly or unexpectedly; appear abruptly: At last the cottage popped into view. 4. To open wide suddenly: The child's eyes popped with astonishment. 5. Baseball. To hit a short high fly ball, especially one that can be caught by an infielder: popped out to shortstop. 6. To shoot a firearm, such as a pistol. — v. tr. 1. To cause to make a sharp bursting sound. 2. To cause to explode with a sharp bursting sound: popped the balloon. 3. To put or thrust suddenly or unexpectedly: "popping a crisp plump shrimp into her mouth" (Kathleen Winsor). 4. a. To discharge (a firearm). b. To fire at; shoot. 5. To hit or strike: popped me on the head. 6. Baseball. To hit (a ball) high in the air but not far. 7. Slang. a. To take (drugs), especially orally: "To calm a case of the jitters... the bride popped Valium" (People). b. To have (a drink): popped a few beers after work. — n. 1. A sudden sharp, explosive sound. 2. A shot with a firearm. 3. Chiefly Midwestern U.S. See soft drink. See Regional note at tonic. 4. Baseball. A pop fly. — adv. 1. With a popping sound. 2. Abruptly or unexpectedly. 3. Slang. Apiece; each: Tickets to the benefit were $50 a pop. — phrasal verb. pop off. Informal. 1. To leave abruptly or hurriedly. 2. To die suddenly. 3. To speak thoughtlessly in a burst of released anger. — idiom. pop the question. Informal. To propose marriage. [Middle English poppen, from pop, a blow, stroke, of imitative origin.]

pop² (pɒp) n. Informal. Father. [Short for PAPA.]

pop³ (pɒp) Informal. adj. 1. Of or for the general public; popular or popularized: pop culture; pop psychology. 2. Of, relating to, or specializing in popular music: a pop singer. 3. Of or suggestive of pop art: a pop style. — n. 1. Popular music. 2. Pop art.

POP abbr. Proof of purchase.

pop. abbr. 1. Popular. 2. Population.

pop art (pɒp ɑrt) n. A form of art that depicts objects or scenes from everyday life and employs techniques of commercial art and popular illustration.

Po-pa-yán (pō'pə-yän', pō'pä-) A city of southwest Colombia south of Cali. Founded c. 1536, it was a prosperous trade center during the colonial era. Population, 140,839.

pop-corn (pɒp'kɔrn') n. 1. a. A variety of corn, Zea mays everta, having hard kernels that burst to form white, irregularly shaped puffs when heated. b. The edible, popped kernels of this variety of corn. 2. A small piece, as of polystyrene, used in quantity to protect items during packaging and shipment. [Contraction of popped corn.]

WORD HISTORY: Popcorn is very much an American institution. Particularly enjoyed by people in the United States, it is grown as a native product and denoted by a word that is an Americanism, a word or expression that was first used in English in the United States. Popcorn, from the verb pop and the noun corn, fits these criteria because the first recorded use of the word is found in Memorable Days in America, an account written by the British traveler William Faux and published in London in 1823: "I crossed the Big Wabash... at La Valette's ferry, where is beautiful land... and two lonely families of naked-legged French settlers from whom I received two curious ears of poss corn." Notice that either Faux misunderstood the term or the French settlers mispronounced it. This type of corn, introduced to the settlers by Native Americans, was long grown by them, little knowing that their benefaction would one day be consumed by countless moviegoers while watching Westerns.

popcorn flower (pɒp'kɔrn' flou'ər) n. Any of several plants of the genus Plagiobothrys, of western North America, having cymose clusters of small flowers with a white salverform corolla.

pope (pɒp) n. 1. Often Pope. Roman Catholic Church. The bishop of Rome and head of the Roman Catholic Church on earth. 2. Eastern Orthodox Church. The patriarch of Alexandria. 3. The Coptic patriarch of Alexandria. 4. The male head of some non-Christian religions: the Taoist pope. 5. A person considered to have unquestioned authority: the pope of surrealism. [Middle English, from Old English pāpa, from Late Latin, from Latin, father (title of bishops), from Greek pappas. See papa in Appendix.]

Pope (pɒp), Alexander. 1688-1744. English writer best remembered for his satirical mock-epic poems The Rape of the Lock (1712) and The Dunciad (1728).

Pope (pɒp), John. 1822-1892. American Union general in the Civil War who was defeated by Gen. Robert E. Lee at the Second Battle of Bull Run (1862).

pope-dom (pɒp'dəm) n. The office, jurisdiction, or tenure of a pope; the papacy.

pop-er-y (pɒ'pə-rē) n. Offensive. The doctrines, practices, and rituals of the Roman Catholic Church.

pope's nose (pɒps nɔz) n. Informal. The tail of a cooked fowl. Also called parson's nose pop-eyed (pɒp'ɪd') adj. 1. Having bulging eyes. 2. Amazed; astonished:

pop-eyed with wonder.

pop fly (pɒp flī) n. Baseball. A short high fly ball. Also called pop-up pop-gun (pɒp'gʌn') n. A toy gun that makes a popping noise.

pop-in-jay (pɒp'ɪn-jā') n. A vain, talkative person. [Middle English, parrot, from Old French papegai, from Spanish papagayo, or Old Provençal papagai both from Arabic babgā', babaḡā', from Persian babbaghā.] pop-ish (pɒp'ɪʃ) adj. Offensive. Of or relating to the popes or the Roman Catholic Church. —pop'ish-ly adv. —pop'ish-ness n.

pop-lar (pɒp'lər) n. 1. a. Any of several fast-growing deciduous trees of the genus Populus having unisexual flowers borne in catkins. b. The wood of these trees. 2. See tulip tree (n., sense 1). [Middle English popler, from Old French poplier, from pouple, from Latin pōpulus.]

Pop-lar Bluff (pɒp'lər blʌf) A city of southeast Missouri near the Arkansas border south of St. Louis. It is a trade, shipping, and manufacturing center in a farming area. Population, 16,996.

pop-lin (pɒp'lɪn) n. A ribbed fabric of silk, rayon, wool, or cotton, used in making clothing and upholstery. [Obsolete French papelino, perhaps from Provençal papalino, feminine of papalin, papal (so called because it was first made at the papal town of Avignon), from Medieval Latin pāpālis, from Late Latin pāpa, pope. See POPE.]

pop-lit-e-al (pɒp-lɪt'ē-əl, pɒp'lɪ-tē'əl) adj. Of or relating to the hollow part of the leg behind the knee joint. [From New Latin popliteus, from Latin poples, poplit-, ham of the knee.]

Po-po-ca-té-petl (pō'pə-kāt'ə-pēt'l, pō'pō-kā-tē'pēt'l) A volcano, 5,455.5 m (17,887 ft) high, in central Mexico west of Puebla. It has been dormant since 1702 but occasionally emits large puffs of steam.

pop-o-ver (pɒp'ɒ'vər) n. A very light, hollow muffin made with eggs, milk, and flour.

pop-pa (pə'pə) n. Variant of papa.

pop-per (pɒp'ər) n. 1. One that pops. 2. A container or pan for making popcorn. 3. Slang. An ampoule of amyl nitrite or butyl nitrite used as a stimulant drug.

Pop-per (pɒp'ər), Sir Karl Raimund. 1902-1994. British philosopher known for his contributions to the understanding of scientific reasoning and his attacks on historicism. His works include The Logic of Scientific Discovery (1931) and The Open Society and Its Enemies (1945).

pop-pet (pɒp'ɪt) n. 1. A poppet valve. 2. Nautical. a. A small wooden strip on a gunwale that forms or supports an oarlock. b. One of the beams of a launching cradle supporting a ship's hull. 3. Chiefly British. A darling. [Middle English popet, small child, doll, puppet. See PUPPET.]

poppet valve (pɒp'ɪt vɔlv) n. An intake or exhaust valve, operated by springs and cams, that plugs and unplugs its opening by axial motion.

pop-ple¹ (pɒp'əl) v. intr. pop-pled, pop-pling, pop-ples. To move in a tossing, bubbling, or rippling manner, as choppy water. — n. 1. Choppy water.

2. The motion or sound of boiling liquid. [Middle English poplen, probably of Middle Dutch origin.]

pop-ple² (pɒp'əl) n. Informal. A poplar. [Middle English popel (perhaps from Old English popul-), from Latin pōpulus.]

pop-py (pɒp'ē) n. pl. pop-pies. 1. Any of numerous plants of the genus Papaver, having nodding buds with four crumpled petals, showy red, orange, or white flowers, a milky juice, and capsules that dehisce through terminal pores.

2. Any of several similar or related plants, such as the California poppy. 3. An extract from the sap of unripe poppy seedpods, used in medicine and narcotics.

4. Color. A vivid red to reddish orange. [Middle English popi, from Old English popig, probably alteration of Vulgar Latin papāvum*, alteration of Latin papāver.]

pop-py-cock (pɒp'ē-kɒk') n. Senseless talk; nonsense. [Dutch dialectal pappekak : pap, pap (from Middle Dutch pappe, perhaps from Latin pappa, food) + kak, dung (from kakken, to defecate, from Middle Dutch kacken, from Latin cacāre); see kakka- in Appendix.]

Pop-sicle (pɒp'sɪ-kəl, -sɪk'əl) A trademark used for a colored, flavored ice confection with one or two flat sticks for a handle. This trademark sometimes occurs in lowercase in print: “The roast duck... is best avoided; it is the color of an orange popsicle and flabby” (Washington Post). It occurs in the plural: “The neighborhood children cavorted in the street buying snow cones and Popsicles” (Chicago Tribune). The trademark also occurs in figurative contexts: “[He] likes blue and lavender lighting and finds lots of excuses to use it in the neon Popsicle landscape whose unreality he celebrates” (Boston Globe).

pop-top (pɒp'tɒp') n. 1. The tab of a container that can be pulled off to make an opening. 2. A container having such a tab. — adj. Having a tab that can be pulled up or off to make an opening in a container: pop-top beer cans.

pop-u-lace (pɒp'yə-lɪs) n. 1. The general public; the masses. 2. A population. [French, from Italian popolaccio, rabble, from popolo, the people, from Latin populus. See POPULAR.]

pop-u-lar (pɒp'yə-lər) adj. Abbr. pop. 1. Widely liked or appreciated: a popular resort. 2. Liked by acquaintances; sought after for company: “Beware of over-great pleasure in being popular or even beloved” (Margaret Fuller). 3. Of, representing, or carried on by the people at large: the popular vote. 4. Fit for, adapted to, or reflecting the taste of the people at large: popular entertainment; popular science. 5. Accepted by or prevalent among the people in general: a popular misunderstanding of the issue. 6. Suited to or within the means of ordinary people: popular prices. 7. Originating among the people: popular legend. [Middle popular front (pöp'yə-lər frünt) n. A political coalition of leftist parties against fascism, such as that formed among European countries during the 1930's.

English populer, from Old French populaire, from Latin populāris, of the people, from populus, the people, of Etruscan origin.] —pop'·u·lar·ly adv.

pop·u·lar·i·ty (pöp'yə-lär'ī-tē) n. The quality or state of being popular, especially the state of being widely admired, accepted, or sought after.

pop·u·lar·ize (pöp'yə-lə-rīz') v. tr. pop·u·lar·ized, pop·u·lar·iz·ing, pop·u·lar·iz·es. 1. To make popular: A famous dancer popularized the new hairstyle. 2. To present in a widely understandable or acceptable form: popularize technical material for a general audience. —pop'·u·lar·i·za'tion (-lər-ī-zā'shən)

n. —pop'·u·lar·iz'er n.

pop·u·late (pöp'yə-lāt') v. tr. pop·u·lat·ed, pop·u·lat·ing, pop·u·lates.

1. To supply with inhabitants, as by colonization; people. 2. To live in; inhabit: creatures that populate the ocean depths. [Medieval Latin populāre, populāt-, from Latin populus, the people. See POPULAR.] pop·u·la·tion (pöp'yə-lā'shən) n. Abbr. pop., p. 1. a. All of the people inhabiting a specified area. b. The total number of such people. 2. The total number of inhabitants constituting a particular race, class, or group in a specified area. 3. The act or process of furnishing with inhabitants. 4. Ecology. All the organisms that constitute a specific group or occur in a specified habitat. 5. Statistics. The set of individuals, items, or data from which a statistical sample is taken. In this sense, also called universe population control (pöp'yə-lā'shən kən-trōl') n. A government program to limit or slow population growth, as by birth control education, the wide availability of contraceptives, and economic incentives.

population explosion (pöp'yə-lā'shən ɪk-splō'zhən) n. The geometric expansion of a biological population, especially the unchecked growth in human population resulting from a decrease in infant mortality and an increase in longevity.

population genetics (pöp'yə-lā'shən jə-nēt'ɪks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of genetics that deals with the genetic makeup of populations.

pop·u·lism (pöp'yə-līz'əm) n. 1. a. A political philosophy supporting the rights and power of the people in their struggle against the privileged elite. b. The movement organized around this philosophy. 2. Populism. The philosophy of the Populist Party.

pop·u·list (pöp'yə-līst) n. 1. A supporter of the rights and power of the people. 2. Populist. A supporter of the Populist Party. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of populism or its advocates: a populist aversion to business monopolies. 2. Populist. Of or relating to the Populist Party.

Populist Party (pɒp'jə-lɪst pɑr'tē) n. A U.S. political party that sought to represent the interests of farmers and laborers in the 1890's, advocating increased currency issue, free coinage of gold and silver, public ownership of railroads, and a graduated federal income tax. Also called People's Party pop·u·lous (pɒp'jə-ləs) adj. Containing many people or inhabitants; having a large population. [Middle English, from Latin populōsus, from populus, the people. See POPULAR.] —pop'u-lous-ly adv. —pop'u-lous-ness n.

pop-up (pɒp'ʊp') adj. 1. Emerging quickly from a recessed or concealed position when activated: pop-up gun emplacements. 2. Rising to form a three-dimensional structure when a page is opened: pop-up illustrations in a children's book.

— n. 1. A device or an illustration that pops up. 2. Baseball. See pop fly.

pop wine (pɒp wɪn) n. A sweet, often fruit-flavored, inexpensive wine.

por. abbr. Portrait.

por·bea·gle (pɔr'bē'gəl) n. A mackerel shark (Lamna nasus) of temperate Atlantic waters. [Cornish porbugel.]

por·ce·lain (pɔr'sə-lɪn, pɔr'-, pɔrs'lɪn, pɔrs'-) n. 1. A hard, white, translucent ceramic made by firing a pure clay and then glazing it with variously colored fusible materials; china. 2. An object made of this substance. — n. attributive.

Often used to modify another noun: porcelain teacups; a doll with a porcelain face. [French porcelaine, cowry shell, porcelain, from Old French, from Old Italian porcellana, from feminine of porcellano, of a young sow (from the shell's resemblance to a pig's back), from porcella, young sow, diminutive of porca, sow, from Latin, feminine of porcus, pig. See porko- in Appendix.]

—por'ce-la'ne-ous (-lā'nē-əs) adj.

porcelain enamel (pɔr'sə-lɪn ɪ-nəm'əl) n. A glass coating fired on metal. Also called vitreous enamel porcelain flower (pɔr'sə-lɪn flou'ər) n. See hoya.

porch (pɔrch, pɔrch) n. 1. A covered platform, usually having a separate roof, at an entrance to a building. 2. An open or enclosed gallery or room attached to the outside of a building; a verandah. 3. Obsolete. A portico or covered walk. [Middle English porche, from Old French, from Latin porticus, portico, from porta, gate. See per-² in Appendix.]

por·cine (pɔr'sɪn') adj. Of or resembling swine or a pig: “a bald porcine old man” (Vladimir Nabokov). [Middle English, from Old French porcin, from Latin porcīnus, from porcus, pig. See porko- in Appendix.]

por·cu·pine (pɔr'kyə-pɪn') n. Any of various rodents of the Old World family Hystricidae or the New World family Erethizontidae, having long, sharp, erectile quills interspersed with coarse hair. [Middle English porke despine, from Old French porc espin: Latin porcus, pig; see porko- in Appendix + Latin spīna, thorn, spine.]

porcupine fish (pôr'kyə-pīn' fish) n. Any of various tropical marine fishes of the family Diodontidae, having strong, sharp spines on the body and capable of inflating themselves when attacked.

Por-cu-pine River (pôr'kyə-pīn' rĭv'ər) A river, about 721 km (448 mi) long, rising in northwest Yukon Territory, Canada, and flowing north then west to the Yukon River in northeast Alaska. It was discovered in 1842.

Por-de-no-ne (pôr'dn-ō'nē, -dē-nô'nĕ) A city of northeast Italy north-northeast of Venice. Controlled by Venice after 1508, it became part of Italy in 1866. Population, 51,369.

pore¹ (pôr, pōr) v. intr. pored, por-ing, pores. 1. To read or study carefully and attentively: pored over the classified ads in search of a new job. 2. To gaze intently; stare. 3. To meditate deeply; ponder: pored on the matter. [Middle English pouren.] pore² (pôr, pōr) n. 1. A minute opening in tissue, as in the skin of an animal, serving as an outlet for perspiration, or in a plant leaf or stem, serving as a means of absorption and transpiration. 2. A space in rock, soil, or unconsolidated sediment that is not occupied by mineral matter and that allows the passage or absorption of fluids: Water seeped into the pores of the rock. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin porus, passage, from Greek poros. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

pore fungus (pôr fŭng'gəs) n. Any of various basidiomycetous fungi of the families Boletaceae and Polyporaceae, whose basidia line the inside of tubes that lead to exterior pores. Also called polypore por-gy (pôr'gē) n. pl. porgy or por-gies. 1. Any of various deep-bodied marine food fishes of the family Sparidae, especially a common species Pagrus pagrus of Mediterranean and Atlantic waters. 2. Any of several fishes similar to the porgy. [Alteration of Spanish, and Portuguese pargo both alteration of Latin phager, a kind of fish, from Greek phagros, sea bream.]

Po-ri (pôr'ē) A city of southwest Finland on an inlet of the Gulf of Bothnia northwest of Helsinki. Chartered in 1564, it was initially dominated by the Hanseatic League. Population, 78,933.

po-rif-er-an (pə-rĭf'ər-ən) n. Any of various members of the phylum Porifera constituting the sponges. [From New Latin Porifera, phylum name : Latin porus, passage; see PORE² + Latin -fera, neuter pl. of -fer, -fer.] —po-rif'er-al, po-rif'er-an adj.

po-rif'er-ous (pə-rĭf'ər-əs) adj. 1. Having pores. 2. Of or relating to the poriferans. [Latin porus, passage; see PORE² + -ferous.]

pork (pôrk, pōrk) n. 1. The flesh of a pig or hog used as food. 2. Slang. Government funds, appointments, or benefits dispensed or enacted by politicians to gain favor with their constituents. [Middle English, from Old French porc, pig, from Latin porcus. See porko- in Appendix.]

pork barrel (pôrk bǎr'əl) n. Slang. A government project or appropriation that yields jobs or other benefits to a specific locale and patronage opportunities to its political representative.

pork belly (pôrk bĕl'ē) n. A side of fresh pork.

pork-er (pôr'kər, pōr'-) n. A fattened young pig.

pork-pie (pôrk'pī', pōrk'-) n. A man's hat having a low, flat crown and a flexible brim. Also called porkpie hat por-ky (pôr'kē, pōr'-) n. pl. por-kies. Informal. A porcupine. [Shortening and alteration of PORCUPINE.]

porn (pôrn) also por-no (pôrn'ō) Slang. n. Pornography. — adj. Pornographic. — porn'y adj.

por-nog-ra-phy (pôr-nŏg'rə-fē) n. 1. Pictures, writing, or other material that is sexually explicit and sometimes equates sex with power and violence. 2. The presentation or production of this material. [French pornographie, from pornographe, pornographer, from Late Greek pornographos, writing about prostitutes : pornē, prostitute; see per⁻⁵ in Appendix + graphein, to write; see -GRAPHY.]

—por-nog'ra-pher n. —por'no-graph'ic (pôr'nə-grăf'ik) adj.

—por'no-graph'i-cal-ly adv.

po-ro-mer-ic (pôr'ə-mĕr'ik, pōr'-) n. Any of several tough, porous leather substitutes. [Greek poros, passage; see per⁻² in Appendix + (POLY)MERIC.]

po-ros-i-ty (pə-rŏs'ī-tē, pō-) n. pl. po-ros-i-ties. 1. The state or property of being porous. 2. A structure or part that is porous. 3. The ratio of the volume of all the pores in a material to the volume of the whole. [Middle English porosite, from Old French, from Medieval Latin porositās, from porōsus, porous. See POROUS.]

po-rous (pôr'əs, pōr'-) adj. 1. Full of or having pores. 2. Admitting the passage of gas or liquid through pores or interstices. 3. Easily crossed or penetrated. [Middle English, from Old French poroux, poros, from Medieval Latin porōsus, from Latin porus, passage. See PORE².] —po'rous-ly adv. —po'rous-ness n.

por-phy-r-i-a (pôr-fîr'ē-ə) n. Any of several disorders of porphyrin metabolism, usually hereditary, characterized by the presence of large amounts of porphyrins in the blood and urine. [New Latin : PORPHYR(IN) + -IA¹.]

—por-phyr'ic adj.

por-phy-rin (pôr'fə-rĭn) n. Any of various nitrogen-containing organic compounds, derived from pyrrole, occurring universally in protoplasm and providing the foundation structure for hemoglobin, chlorophyll, and certain enzymes.

[Greek porphura, purple; see PURPLE + -IN.]

por-phy-rit-ic (pôr'fə-rĭt'ik) also por-phy-rit-i-cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of or containing porphyry. 2. Containing relatively large isolated crystals in a mass of fine texture.

por-phy-roid (pôr'fə-roid') n. Metamorphic rock having porphyritic texture.

por-phy-rop-sin (pôr'fə-röp'sin) n. A purple pigment similar to rhodopsin, found in the rods of the retinas of freshwater fishes and certain frogs. [Greek porphura, purple + OPSIN.]

por-phy-ry (pôr'fə-rē) n. pl. por-phy-ries. Rock containing relatively large conspicuous crystals, especially feldspar, in a fine-grained igneous matrix. [Middle English porphiri, porfurie, from Old French porfire, from Italian porfiro, from Medieval Latin porphyrium, from Latin porphyritēs, from Greek porphuritēs, from porphura, purple (from its color). See PURPLE.]

por-poise (pôr'pəs) n. pl. porpoise or por-pois-es. 1. Any of several gregarious toothed whales of the genus Phocaena and related genera, of oceanic waters, characteristically having a blunt snout and a triangular dorsal fin. Also called sea hog 2. Any of several related aquatic mammals, such as the dolphin. [Middle English porpeis, from Old French (probably translation of a Germanic compound meaning sea-pig) : porc, pig (from Latin porcus); see porko- in Appendix + peis, fish (from Latin piscis.)] por-rect (pə-rĕkt', pō-) adj. Zoology. Stretched out or forth; extended, especially forward: porrect mandibles. [Latin porrēctus, past participle of porrigere, to stretch out : por-, forward, out; see per¹ in Appendix + regere, to direct, rule; see DIRECT.]

por-ridge (pôr'ij, pör'-) n. A soft food made by boiling oatmeal or another meal in water or milk. [Alteration of POTTAGE (influenced by obsolete porray, vegetable soup, from Middle English porreie, from Old French poree, leek soup, from por, leek, from Latin porrum).] — por'ridg-y adj.

por-rin-ger (pôr'in-jər, pör'-) n. A shallow cup or bowl with a handle. [Middle English, alteration of potinger, potager, from Old French potager, from potage, soup. See POTTAGE.]

port¹ (pōrt, pōrt) n. Abbr. pt. 1. a. A place on a waterway with facilities for loading and unloading ships. b. A city or town on a waterway with such facilities. c. The waterfront district of a city. 2. A place along a coast that gives ships and boats protection from storms and rough water; a harbor. 3. A port of entry. 4. Computer Science. a. An entrance to or exit for a data network. b. A connection point for a peripheral device. [Middle English, from Old English, from Latin portus. See per-² in Appendix.]

port² (pōrt, pōrt) Nautical. n. The left-hand side of a ship or aircraft facing forward. Also called larboard — adj. Of, relating to, or on the port. — v. tr. intr.

port-ed, port-ing, ports. To turn (a craft) or make a shift to the port side: port the helm; ported sharply to avoid a shoal. [Probably from port side, from PORT¹.]

port³ (pōrt, pōrt) n. 1. Nautical. a. A porthole. b. Archaic. A cover for a porthole. 2. An opening, as in a cylinder or valve face, for the passage of steam or fluid. 3. A hole in an armored vehicle or a fortified structure for viewing or for firing weapons. 4. Scots. A gateway or portal, as to a town. [Middle English, gate, porthole, from Old French porte, gate, from Latin porta. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

port⁴ also Port (pôrt, pōrt) n. A rich sweet fortified wine. [After Oporto.]

port⁵ (pôrt, pōrt) v. tr. port-ed, port-ing, ports. To carry (a weapon) diagonally across the body, with the muzzle or blade near the left shoulder. — n.

1. The position of a rifle or other weapon when ported. 2. The manner in which one carries oneself; bearing. [French porter, to carry, from Old French, from Latin portāre; see per⁻² in Appendix. N., Middle English porte from Old French port, from porter, to carry.]

Port. abbr. Portugal; Portuguese.

port-a-ble (pôrt'ə-bəl, pōr'-) adj. 1. Carried or moved with ease: a portable typewriter; a portable generator. 2. Obsolete. Bearable; enduring. — n. Something, such as a light or small typewriter, that can be carried or moved with ease. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin portābilis, from Latin portāre, to carry. See per⁻² in Appendix.] — port'a-bil'i-ty, port'a-ble-ness n.

— port'a-bly adv.

port-age (pôrt'tij, pōr'-, pôr-tāzh') n. 1. a. The act or an instance of carrying. b. A charge for carrying. 2. Nautical. a. The carrying of boats and supplies overland between two waterways or around an obstacle to navigation. b. A track or route used for such carrying. — v. tr. intr. port-aged, port-ag-ing, port-ag-es. Nautical. To transport or travel by portage: canoed and portaged the goods; portaging around the rapids. [Middle English, from Old French, from porter, to carry, from Latin portāre. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

Port-age (pôrt'tij, pōr'-) 1. A city of northwest Indiana, an industrial suburb of Gary on Lake Michigan. Population, 29,060. 2. A city of southwest Michigan south of Kalamazoo. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 41,042.

por-tal (pôrt'tl, pōr'-) n. 1. A doorway, an entrance, or a gate, especially one that is large and imposing. 2. An entrance or a means of entrance: the local library, a portal of knowledge. 3. The portal vein. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the portal vein or the portal system. 2. Of or relating to a point of entrance to an organ, especially the transverse fissure of the liver, through which the blood vessels enter. [Middle English, from Old French, from Medieval Latin portāle, city gate, from neuter of portālis, of a gate, from Latin porta, gate; see per⁻² in Appendix. N., sense 3 and adj., from New Latin porta (hepatis), transverse fissure (of the liver) from Latin, gate.]

Port Al-ber-ni (pôrt əl-bûr'nē) A city of southwest British Columbia, Canada, on southeast-central Vancouver Island. It is a fishing port with wood-products industries. Population, 19,892.

portal system (pôrt'tl sīs'təm) n. A system of blood vessels that begins and ends in capillaries.

por-tal-to-por-tal (pôr'tl-tə-pôr'tl, pôr'tl-tə-pôr'tl) adj. Of or based on the time a worker spends on the employer's property, calculated from the moment of arrival to that of departure: portal-to-portal pay.

portal vein (pôr'tl vān) n. A vein that conducts blood from the digestive organs, spleen, pancreas, and gallbladder to the liver.

por-ta-men-to (pôr'tə-mèn'tō, pôr'-) n. pl. por-ta-men-ti (-tē) or por-ta-men-tos. Musical. A smooth, uninterrupted glide in passing from one tone to another, especially with the voice or a bowed stringed instrument. [Italian, from portare, to carry, from Latin portāre. See per-2 in Appendix.]

Port An-ge-les (pôrt ănjə-līs) A city of northwest Washington on the Strait of Juan de Fuca south of Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. It is a port of entry, a boating and fishing center, and a resort. Population, 17,710.

Port A-pra (pôrt ä'prə) See Apra Harbor.

Port Ar-thur (pôrt är'thər) A city of extreme southeast Texas on Sabine Lake near the Louisiana border. It is a major deep-water port connected by channel with the Gulf of Mexico. Population, 58,724.

por-ta-tive (pôr'tə-tīv, pôr'-) adj. 1. Portable. 2. Capable of or used in carrying. [Middle English portatif, from Old French, from Latin portāre, to carry. See per-2 in Appendix.]

Port-au-Prince (pôrt'ō-prīns', pôrt'-, pôr'tō-prāns') The capital and largest city of Haiti, in the southwest part of the country on an arm of the Caribbean Sea. Founded by French sugar planters in 1749, it became the colonial capital in 1770 and the capital of independent Haiti in 1804. Population, 684,284.

Port Char-lotte (pôrt shär'lət) An unincorporated community of southwest Florida on an inlet of the Gulf of Mexico northwest of Fort Myers. It is a planned residential community. Population, 41,535.

Port Ches-ter (pôrt chēs'tər) A village of southeast New York on Long Island Sound near the Connecticut border. It is an industrial and residential community. Population, 24,728.

Port Col-borne (pôrt kōl'būrn') A city of southeast Ontario, Canada, on Lake Erie at the southern end of the Welland Ship Canal west of Buffalo, New York. It is a manufacturing and transshipment center. Population, 19,225.

Port Co-quit-lam (pôrt kō-kwīt'ləm) A city of southwest British Columbia, Canada, on the Fraser River east of Vancouver. It is a trade center in a stone-quarrying and farming region. Population, 27,535.

port-cul-lis (pôrt-kūl'īs, pôrt-) n. A grating of iron or wooden bars or slats, suspended in the gateway of a fortified place and lowered to block passage. [Middle English port-colice, from Old French porte coleice, sliding gate : porte, gate (from Latin porta); see per-2 in Appendix + coleice, feminine of coleis, sliding (from Vulgar Latin cōlātīcius*, from Latin cōlātus, past participle of cōlāre, to filter, strain, from cōlum, sieve).]

Port du Sa-lut (pôrt' də sə-lōō', pōrt', pōr' dü sə-lü') n. Variant of Port Salut.

Porte (pôrt, pōrt) n. The government of the Ottoman Empire. [French, short for la Sublime Porte, the High Gate, from Old French porte, gate. See PORT³.]

porte bouquet (pôrt bō-kā', pōrt) n. See bouquetier. [French : porter, to carry, hold + bouquet, bouquet.]

porte-co-chère or porte-co-chere (pôrt'kō-shâr', pōrt'-) n. 1. A carriage entrance leading through a building or wall into an enclosed courtyard. 2. An enclosure over a driveway at the entrance of a building to provide shelter. [French porte cochère : porte, door + cochère, for coaches.]

Port E-liz-a-beth (pôrt ĭ-lĭz'ə-bəth) A city of southeast South Africa on an inlet of the Indian Ocean. It grew rapidly after the completion of the railroad to Kimberley in 1873. Population, 281,600.

por-tend (pôr-tënd', pōr-) v. tr. por-tend-ed, por-tend-ing, por-tends.

- 1. To serve as an omen or a warning of; presage: black clouds that portend a storm.
- 2. To indicate by prediction; forecast: leading economic indicators that portend a recession. [Middle English portenden, from Latin portendere. See ten- in Appendix.]

por-tent (pôr'tënt', pōr'-) n. 1. An indication of something important or calamitous about to occur; an omen. 2. Prophetic or threatening significance: signs full of portent. 3. Something amazing or marvelous; a prodigy. [Latin portentum, from neuter past participle of portendere, to portend. See PORTEND.]

por-ten-tous (pôr-tĕn'təs, pōr-) adj. 1. Of the nature of or constituting a portent; foreboding: "The present aspect of society is portentous of great change" (Edward Bellamy). 2. Full of unspecifiable significance; exciting wonder and awe: "Such a portentous and mysterious monster roused all my curiosity" (Herman Melville). 3. Marked by pompousness; pretentiously weighty. —por-ten-tous-ly adv. —por-ten-tous-ness n.

por-ter¹ (pôr'tər, pōr'-) n. 1. A person employed to carry burdens, especially an attendant who carries travelers' baggage at a hotel or transportation station. 2. A railroad employee who waits on passengers in a sleeping car or parlor car. 3. A maintenance worker for a building or an institution. [Middle English portour, from Anglo-Norman, from Late Latin portātor, from Latin portāre, to carry. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

por-ter² (pôr'tər, pōr'-) n. Chiefly British. One in charge of a gate or door. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Late Latin portārius, from Latin porta, gate. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

por-ter³ (pôr'tər, pōr'-) n. A dark beer resembling light stout, made from malt browned or charred by drying at a high temperature. [Short for porter's ale.]

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), Cole Albert. 1891?-1964. American composer and lyricist remembered for his witty and sophisticated Broadway scores.

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), David. 1780-1843. American naval officer who was court-martialed for unauthorized military activities in Puerto Rico. He later commanded the Mexican navy (1826-1829). His son David Dixon Porter (1813-1891) was a Union naval officer during the Civil War.

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), Sir George. Born 1920. British chemist. He shared a 1967 Nobel Prize for research on high-speed chemical reactions.

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), Katherine Anne. 1890-1980. American writer known for her carefully crafted short stories as well as her novel Ship of Fools (1962).

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), Rodney Robert. Born 1917. British biochemist. He shared a 1972 Nobel Prize for research on the chemical structure and nature of antibodies.

Por-ter (pôr'tər, pōr'-), William Sydney. Pen name O. Henry. 1862-1910. American writer whose short stories are collected in a number of volumes, including Cabbages and Kings (1904) and The Four Million (1906).

por-ter-age (pôr'tər-ij, pōr'-) n. 1. The carrying of burdens or goods as done by porters. 2. The charge for this activity.

por-ter-ess (pôr'tər-īs, pōr'-) n. Variant of portress.

por-ter-house (pôr'tər-hous', pōr'-) n. 1. A cut of beef taken from the thick end of the short loin, having a T-bone and a sizable piece of tenderloin. Also called porterhouse steak 2. Archaic. An alehouse or a chophouse.

Por-ter-ville (pôr'tər-vīl', pōr'-) A city of south-central California north of Bakersfield. Founded in 1859 on the Los Angeles-San Francisco stage route, it is chiefly residential. Population, 29,563.

port-fo-li-o (pôrt-fô'lē-ō', pōrt-) n. pl. port-fo-li-os. 1. a. A portable case for holding material, such as loose papers, photographs, or drawings. b. The materials collected in such a case, especially when representative of a person's work: a photographer's portfolio; an artist's portfolio of drawings. 2. The office or post of a cabinet member or minister of state. 3. A group of investments. [Italian portafoglio : porta, imperative sing. of portare, to carry (from Latin portāre); see per⁻² in Appendix + foglio, sheet (from Latin folium, leaf); see bhel⁻³ in Appendix.]

Port Har-court (pôrt här'kərt) A city of southern Nigeria in the Niger River delta southeast of Ibadan. Laid out by the British in 1912, it is a rail terminus and manufacturing center. Population, 288,900.

port-hole (pôrt'hōl', pōrt'-) n. 1. Nautical. A small, usually circular window in a ship's side. 2. An opening in a fortified wall; an embrasure.

Port Hue-ne-me (pôrt wī-nē'mē) A town of southern California west of Los Angeles. It was a naval training base during World War II. Population, 20,319.

Port Hu-ron (pôrt hyōōr'ən, -ōn') A city of southeast Michigan on Lake Huron at the mouth of the St. Clair River north-northeast of Detroit. First settled as a French fort in 1686, it grew as a lumbering town in the 19th century and is now a port of entry with diversified industries. Population, 33,694.

Por-ti-ci (pôrt' tē-chē') A city of south-central Italy, a residential and resort suburb of Naples on the Bay of Naples. Population, 79,259.

por-ti-co (pôrt' tī-kō', pōrt'-) n. pl. por-ti-coes or por-ti-cos. A porch or walkway with a roof supported by columns, often leading to the entrance of a building. [Italian, from Latin porticus, from porta, gate. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

—por'ti-coed' adj.

por-tière or por-tiere (pôrt-tyâr', pōr-) n. A heavy curtain hung across a doorway. [French, feminine of portier, porter, from Old French, from Late Latin portarius, from Latin porta, gate. See per⁻² in Appendix.]

por-tion (pôrt'shən, pōrt'-) n. 1. A section or quantity within a larger thing; a part of a whole. 2. A part separated from a whole. 3. A part that is allotted to a person or group, as: a. A helping of food. b. The part of an estate received by an heir. c. A woman's dowry. 4. A person's lot or fate. See Synonyms at fate. — v. tr. por-portioned, por-portioning, por-portions. 1. To divide into parts or shares for distribution; parcel. 2. To provide with a share, an inheritance, or a dowry.

[Middle English, from Old French, from Latin portiō, portiōn-. See per⁻² in Appendix.] —por'tion-a-ble adj. —por'tion-er n. —por'tion-less adj.

Port-land (pôrt'lænd, pōrt'-) 1. A city of southwest Maine on an arm of the Gulf of Maine south of Lewiston. Settled c. 1632, it became a commercial center in the 17th century and was state capital from 1820 to 1832. It is the largest city in the state. Population, 64,348. 2. The largest city of Oregon, in the northwest part of the state on the Willamette River near its junction with the Columbia River. Founded in 1845, it grew as a lumber-exporting port and supply point for the California and Alaska goldfields. Population, 437,319. —Port'land-er n.

Portland cement or port-land cement (pôrt'lænd sī-měnt', pōrt'-) n. A hydraulic cement made by heating a mixture of limestone and clay in a kiln and pulverizing the resulting material. [After Portland, an urban district of southern England.]

Port Lou-is (pôrt lōō'is, lōō'ē, lōō-ē') The capital and largest city of Mauritius, in the northwest part of the island on the Indian Ocean. It was founded c. 1735. Population, 136,812.

port-ly (pôrt'lē, pōrt'-) adj. port-li-er, port-li-est. 1. Comfortably stout; corpulent. See Synonyms at fat. 2. Archaic. Stately; majestic; imposing. [From PORT⁵.] —port'li-ness n.

port-man-teau (pôrt-măntō', pōrt-, pôrt'măntō', pōrt'-) n. pl.

port-man-teaus or port-man-teaux (-tōz, -tōz'). A large leather suitcase that opens into two hinged compartments. [French portemanteau: porte, imperative of porter, to carry (from Old French); see PORT⁵ + manteau, cloak (from Old French mantel, from Latin mantellum).]

portmanteau word (pôrt-măn'tō wûrd) n. A word formed by merging the sounds and meanings of two different words; for example, slithy, from lithe and slimy; chortle, from chuckle and snort.

Port Moresby (pôrt môrz'bē, môrz'-) The capital and largest city of Papua New Guinea, on southeast New Guinea and the Gulf of Papua. It was named for the British explorer Capt. John Moresby (1830-1922), who landed here in 1873, and occupied by the British after 1888. Population, 123,624.

Por-to or Pôr-to (pôr'tō) See Oporto.

Pôrto A-le-gre (ə-lě'grə ə-lě'grə) A city of southeast Brazil at the northern end of a large lagoon near the Atlantic Ocean. It was founded c. 1742 by emigrants from the Azores. Population, 1,125,477.

port of call (pôrt ũv kôl) n. pl. ports of call. A port where ships dock in the course of voyages to load or unload cargo, obtain supplies, or undergo repairs.

port of entry (pôrt ũv ěn'trē) n. pl. ports of entry. Abbr. POE, P.O.E. A place where travelers or goods may enter or leave a country under official supervision.

Por-to-fi-no (pôr'tə-fē'nō, pōr'-, pôr'tô-fē'nô) A town of northwest Italy on the coast of the Ligurian Sea east of Genoa. It is a popular tourist resort. Population, 742.

Port of Spain (pôrt ũv spān) or Port-of-Spain (pôrt'əv-spān', pōrt'-) The capital of Trinidad and Tobago, on the northwest coast of Trinidad on an arm of the Atlantic Ocean. It is a commercial center and major port. Population, 65,906.

Por-to-lá (pôr-tō-lă'), Gaspar de. 1723?-1784?. Spanish explorer and colonial administrator in America who founded (1769) San Diego and Monterey.

Por-to-No-vo (pôr'tō-nō'vō, pōr'-) The capital of Benin, in the southeast part of the country on an inlet of the Gulf of Guinea. Probably founded in the 16th century, it was settled as a slave-trading center by the Portuguese in the 17th century. Population, 123,000.

Port Or-ange (pôrt ôr'ɪnj, ôr'-) A city of northeast Florida on the Atlantic coast south-southeast of Daytona Beach. It is in a citrus-growing area. Population, 35,317.

Port Or-ford cedar (pôrt ôr'fôrd sē'dær) n. A tall evergreen coniferous tree (Chamaecyparis lawsoniana) native to southwest Oregon and northwest California, having drooping, flattened branches and opposite, scalelike leaves with white markings. [After Port Orford, a town of southwest Oregon.]

Pôrto Vel-ho (ə-lě'grə vĕl'yō) A city of northwest Brazil on the Madeira River near the Bolivian border. Its economy is based on rubber and Brazil nuts. Population, 101,162.

Por-to-vie-jo (pôr'tō-vyā'hō, -vyĕ'-) A city of western Ecuador north-northwest of Guayaquil. Founded c. 1535 near the Atlantic coast, it was moved to its present site in the 17th century. Population, 102,628.

Port Philip Bay (pôrt fîl'əp bā) A large deep-water inlet of Bass Strait on the southeast coast of Australia. It was first explored in 1835.

por-trait (pôr'trîit, -trāt', pōr'-) n. 1. Abbr. por. A likeness of a person, especially one showing the face, that is created by a painter or photographer, for example. 2. A verbal picture or description, especially of a person. [French, from Old French, image, from past participle of portraire, to portray. See POR-TRAY.]

por-trait-ist (pôr'trə-tîst, pōr-) n. A person who makes portraits, especially a painter or photographer.

por-trai-ture (pôr'trî-chōōr', pōr'-) n. 1. The art or practice of making portraits. 2. A portrait. 3. Portraits considered as a group.

por-tray (pôr-trā', pōr-) v. tr. por-trayed, por-tray-ing, por-trays. 1. To depict or represent pictorially; make a picture of. 2. To depict or describe in words. 3. To represent dramatically, as on the stage. See Synonyms at represent. [Middle English portraien, from Old French portraire : por-, forth (from Latin prō-, forth); see PRO-¹ + traire, to draw (from Latin trahere, to drag).]

—por-tray'a-ble adj. —por-tray'er n.

por-tray-al (pôr-trā'əl, pōr-) n. 1. The act or process of depicting or portraying. 2. A representation or description.

por-tress (pôr'trîs, pōr'-) also por-ter-ess (-tər-îs) n. A woman doorkeeper or porter, especially in a convent.

Port Roy-al (pôrt roi'əl) See Annapolis Royal.

Port Sa-id (pôrt sâ-ēd') A city of northeast Egypt on the Mediterranean Sea at the northern entrance to the Suez Canal. It was founded in 1859 by the builders of the canal and was once an important coaling station. Population, 374,000.

Port Sa-lut (pôr' sǎ-lōō', -lū') also Port du Sa-lut (pôrt' də sǎ-lōō', pōrt', pôr dü sǎ-lü') n. A semihard fermented cheese, made originally by Trappist monks in France. [After Notre Dame de Port-du-Salut, a Trappist abbey in northwest France.]

port-side (pôrt'sîd', pōrt'-) adv. & adj. 1. On the waterfront of a port: taking a stroll portside; a portside restaurant. 2. Nautical. On the port side of a ship or boat: skirting a lighthouse portside; the portside oar.

Ports-mouth (pôrt'sməth, pōrt'-) 1. A borough of southern England on the English Channel opposite the Isle of Wight. Chartered in 1194, it is a major naval base. Population, 187,900. 2. A city of southeast New Hampshire on the Atlantic Ocean. The Treaty of Portsmouth, ending the Russo-Japanese War, was signed at the naval base here in 1905. Population, 25,925. 3. A city of southern Ohio on the Ohio River south of Columbus. An important industrial and rail center, it has prehistoric mounds and earthworks nearby. Population, 22,676. 4. A city of southeast Virginia opposite Norfolk. It has been a major naval base since pre-Revolutionary times. Population, 103,907.

Port Stan·ley (pôrt stăn'lē) See Stanley.

Port Su·dan (pôrt sō-dăn') A city of northeast Sudan on the Red Sea northeast of Khartoum. It was established after 1905 as a railroad terminus. Population, 206,727.

Port Tal·bot (pôrt tōl'bət, tăl'-) A borough of southern Wales on an inlet of the Bristol Channel west-northwest of Cardiff. It is a port and has large iron and steel works. Population, 54,600.

Por·tu·gal (pôr'chə-gəl, pōr'-) Abbr. Port. A country of southwest Europe on the western Iberian Peninsula. It includes the Madeira Islands and the Azores in the northern Atlantic Ocean. Originally inhabited by a Celtic people, the mainland area was conquered by the Romans in the 2nd century B.C. and subsequently held by the Visigoths and Moors. An independent kingdom was recognized in 1143 and soon flourished as a maritime and colonial power with holdings stretching from Africa to the Far East and Brazil in the New World. Much of its empire was lost to the British and the Dutch in the 17th and 18th centuries, and the remaining colonies in Africa became independent in the 20th century. Lisbon is the capital and the largest city. Population, 9,933,000.

Por·tu·ga·le·te (pôr'tə-gə-lă'tē, pōr'-, pôr'tōō-gä-lě'tē) A city of northern Spain, a suburb of Bilbao on the Bay of Biscay. Population, 59,307.

Por·tu·guese (pôr'chə-gēz', -gēs', pōr'-) adj. Abbr. Pg., Port. Of or relating to Portugal or its people, language, or culture. — n. pl. Portuguese. Abbr.

Pg., Port. 1. a. A native or inhabitant of Portugal. b. A person of Portuguese descent. 2. The Romance language of Portugal and Brazil. [Portuguese português, from Vulgar Latin portugalensis*, ultimately from Late Latin Portus Cale, the ancient port of Gaya (Oporto).]

Portuguese man-of-war (pôr'chə-gēz' măn'ə-wôr') n. A complex colonial siphonophore of the genus Physalia, of warm seas, having a bluish, bladder-like float with a broad saillike crest from which hang numerous long stinging tentacles.

Portuguese water dog (pôr'chə-gēz' wô'tər dōg) n. Any of a breed of strong, medium-sized dog developed in Portugal that is able to swim long distances and is characterized by webbed feet and a curved tail.

por·tu·lac·a (pôr'chə-lăk'ə, pōr'-) n. Any of various fleshy plants of the genus Portulaca, especially P. grandiflora of South America, cultivated for its showy, colorful flowers that open only in sunlight. Also called rose moss [Middle English, from Latin portulāca, purslane, from portula, diminutive of porta, gate (from the gatelike covering of the seed capsule). See per-² in Appendix.]

Port Wash·ing·ton (pôrt wōsh'ing-tən, wōsh'-) An unincorporated community of southeast New York on the northern shore of western Long Island. It is a residential suburb and a resort. Population, 15,387.

POS abbr. Point-of-sale.

pos. abbr. 1. Position. 2. Positive.

po·sa·da (pō-sä'də, pô-sä'thä) n. A Christmas festival originating in Latin America that dramatizes the search of Joseph and Mary for lodging. [American Spanish, from Spanish, lodging, from posar, to lodge, rest, from Late Latin pausāre, to rest, from Latin pausa, pause. See PAUSE.]

Po·sa·das (pə-sä'dəs, pô-sä'thäs) A city of northeast Argentina on the Paraná River and the Paraguayan border. It is a trade and processing center. Population, 143,889.

pose¹ (pōz) v. posed, pos·ing, pos·es. — v. intr. 1. To assume or hold a particular position or posture, as in sitting for a portrait. 2. To affect a particular mental attitude. 3. To represent oneself falsely; pretend to be other than what one is. — v. tr. 1. To place (a model, for example) in a specific position. 2. To set forth in words; propound: pose a question. 3. To put forward; present: pose a threat. See Synonyms at propose. — n. 1. A bodily attitude or position, especially one assumed for an artist or a photographer. See Synonyms at posture. 2. A studied attitude assumed for effect. See Synonyms at affectation. [Middle English posen, to place, from Old French poser, from Vulgar Latin pausāre*, from Late Latin pausāre, to rest, from Latin pausa, pause. See PAUSE.] — pos'a·ble adj.

pose² (pōz) v. tr. posed, pos·ing, pos·es. To puzzle, confuse, or baffle. [Short for appose, to examine closely (from Middle English apposen, alteration of opposen); see OPPOSE, and from French poser, to assume (obsolete) (from Old French); see POSE¹.]

Po·sei·don (pō-sīd'n, pə-) n. Greek Mythology. The god of the waters, earthquakes, and horses, and brother of Zeus.

pos·er¹ (pō'zər) n. One who poses.

pos·er² (pō'zər) n. A baffling question or problem.

po·seur (pō-zœr') n. One who affects a particular attitude, character, or manner to impress others. [French, from poser, to pose, from Old French. See POSE¹.]

posh (pōsh) adj. Smart and fashionable. See Synonyms at fashionable. [Perhaps posh, halfpenny, money, dandy, from Romany pāsh.] — posh'ly adv.

— posh'ness n.

WORD HISTORY: “Oh yes, Mater, we had a posh time of it down there.” So in Punch for September 25, 1918, do we find the first recorded instance of that mysterious word posh, meaning “smart and fashionable,” although in a 1903 book by P.G. Wodehouse, Tales of St. Austin's, there is a mention of a waistcoat that was “push.” The latter may be a different word, but in either case the dates of occurrence are important because they are part of the objection to deriving posh from the initials of “Port Out, Starboard Home.” This was the cooler, and thus more expensive, side of ships traveling between England and India in the mid-19th century, and the acronym POSH was supposedly stamped on the tickets of first-class passengers traveling on that side of ships owned by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. No evidence is definitely known to exist for this theory, however. The Oxford English Dictionary Supplement may have found a possible source or sources for posh. Another word posh was 19th- and early 20th-century British slang for “money,” specifically “a halfpenny, cash of small value.” This word is borrowed from the common Romany word pāšh, “half,” which was used in combinations such as pāšhera, “halfpenny.” Posh, also meaning “a dandy,” is recorded in two dictionaries of slang published in 1890 and 1902, although this particular posh may be still another word. This word or these words, however, are much more likely to be the source of posh than “Port Out, Starboard Home,” although the latter source certainly has caught the public’s etymological fancy.

pos-i-grade (pöz'ī-grād') adj. Of, relating to, or being an auxiliary rocket on a multistage spacecraft that is fired in the direction of the spacecraft’s motion to separate the sections. [POSI(TIVE) + (RETRO)GRADE.]

pos-it (pöz'it) v. tr. pos-it-ed, pos-it-ing, pos-its. 1. To affirm or assume the existence of; postulate. See Synonyms at presume. 2. To put forward, as for consideration or study; suggest: “If a book is hard going, it ought to be good. If it posits a complex moral situation, it ought to be even better” (Anthony Burgess). 3. To place firmly in position. [From Latin positus, past participle of pōnere, to place. See POSITION.]

po-si-tion (pə-zīsh'ən) n. Abbr. pos. 1. A place or location. 2. a. The right or appropriate place: The bands were in position for the start of the parade. b. An area occupied by members of a force for a strategic purpose: The troops took up positions along the main road. 3. a. The way in which something is placed: the position of the hands on the clock. b. The arrangement of body parts; posture: a standing position. 4. An advantageous place or location: jockeys maneuvering for position. 5. A situation as it relates to the surrounding circumstances: in a position to bargain. 6. A point of view or attitude on a certain question: the senator’s position on arms control. 7. Social standing or status; rank. 8. A post of employment; a job. 9. a. Sports. The area for which a particular player is responsible. b. Games. The arrangement of the pieces at any particular time in a game such as chess, checkers, or backgammon. 10. a. The act or process of positing. b. A principle or proposition posited. 11. a. A commitment to buy or sell a given amount of securities or commodities. b. The amount of securities or commodities held by a person, firm, or institution. c. The ownership status of a person’s or an institution’s investments. — v. tr. po-si-tioned, po-si-tion-ing, po-si-tions. 1. To put in place or position. 2. To determine the position of; locate. [Middle English posicioun, from Old French posicion, from Latin positiō, positiōn-, from positus, past participle of pōnere, to place. See apo- in Appendix.] —po-si'tion-al adj. —po-si'tion-al-ly adv. —po-si'tion-er n.

positional notation (pə-zîsh'ə-nəl nō-tā'shən) n. A system of writing numbers in which the position of a digit affects its value.

position effect (pə-zîsh'ən ĭ-fĕkt') n. Variation in the expression of a gene resulting from changes in its position along a chromosome.

position paper (pə-zîsh'ən pā'pər) n. 1. A detailed policy report that usually explains, justifies, or recommends a particular course of action. 2. See aide-mémoire (n., sense 1).

pos-i-tive (pŏz'ĭ-tĭv) adj. Abbr. pos. 1. Characterized by or displaying certainty, acceptance, or affirmation: a positive answer; positive criticism. 2. Measured or moving forward or in a direction of increase or progress. 3. Explicitly or openly expressed or laid down: a positive demand. 4. Admitting of no doubt; irrefutable: positive proof. 5. a. Very sure; confident: I'm positive he's right. See Synonyms at sure. b. Overconfident; dogmatic. 6. Formally or arbitrarily determined; prescribed. 7. Concerned with practical rather than theoretical matters. 8. Composed of or characterized by the presence of particular qualities or attributes; real. 9. Philosophy. a. Of or relating to positivism. b. Of or relating to laws imposed by human authority rather than by nature or reason alone: "the glaring discrepancy between American positive law and natural rights" (David Brion Davis). c. Of or relating to religion based on revelation rather than on nature or reason alone. 10. Informal. Utter; absolute: a positive darling. 11. Mathematics. a. Relating to or designating a quantity greater than zero. b. Relating to or designating the sign (+). c. Relating to or designating a quantity, number, angle, or direction opposite to another designated as negative. 12. Physics. Relating to or designating electric charge of a sign opposite to that of an electron. 13. Medicine. Indicating the presence of a particular disease, condition, or organism: a positive test for pregnancy. 14. Biology. Indicating or characterized by response or motion toward the source of a stimulus, such as light: positive tropism. 15. Having the areas of light and dark in their original and normal relationship, as in a photographic print made from a negative. 16. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being the simple uncomparative degree of an adjective or adverb, as opposed to either the comparative or superlative. 17. Driven by or generating power directly through intermediate machine parts having little or no play: positive drive. — n. 1. An affirmative element or characteristic. 2. Philosophy. Something perceptible to the senses. 3. Mathematics. A quantity greater than zero. 4. Physics. A positive electric charge. 5. A photographic image in which the lights and darks appear as they do in nature. 6. Grammar. a. The uncomparative degree of an adjective or adverb. b. A word in this degree. 7. Music. A division of some pipe organs, similar in sound to the great but smaller and less powerful. [Middle English, having a specified quality, from Old French positif, from Latin positivus, formally laid down, from positus, past participle of pōnere, to place. See apo- in Appendix.] — pos'i-tive-ly adv. — pos'i-tive-ness, pos'i-tiv'i-ty n.

positive prescription (pöz'î-tīv prī-skrīp'shən) n. Law. See prescription (n., sense 4).

pos·i·tiv·ism (pöz'î-tī-vīz'əm) n. 1. Philosophy. a. A doctrine contending that sense perceptions are the only admissible basis of human knowledge and precise thought. b. The application of this doctrine in logic, epistemology, and ethics. c. The system of Auguste Comte designed to supersede theology and metaphysics and depending on a hierarchy of the sciences, beginning with mathematics and culminating in sociology. d. Any of several doctrines or viewpoints, often similar to Comte's, that stress attention to actual practice over consideration of what is ideal: "Positivism became the 'scientific' base for authoritarian politics, especially in Mexico and Brazil" (Raymond Carr). 2. The state or quality of being positive. —pos'i-tiv-ist, pos'i-tiv-is'tic adj. —pos'i-tiv-ist n.

pos·i·tron (pöz'î-trōn') n. The antiparticle of the electron. Also called antielectron [POSI(TIVE) + (ELEC)TRON.]

positron emission tomography (pöz'î-trōn' î-mīsh'ən tō-mög'rə-fē) n. Abbr. PET Tomography in which a computer-generated image of a biological activity within the body is produced through the detection of gamma rays that are emitted when introduced radionuclides decay and release positrons.

pos·i·tro·ni·um (pöz'î-trō'nē-əm) n. A short-lived association of an electron and a positron bound together in a configuration resembling the hydrogen atom.

po·sol·o·gy (pə-sōl'ə-jē, pō-) n. The medical or pharmacological study of the dosages of medicines and drugs. [Greek posos, what quantity + -LOGY.]

poss. abbr. 1. Possession. 2. Possessive. 3. Possible.

pos·se (pös'ē) n. 1. A group of people summoned by a sheriff to aid in law enforcement. 2. A search party. 3. A Jamaican gang involved in crimes such as running guns and illegal narcotics trafficking. [Short for posse comitatūs: Medieval Latin posse, power, body of men (from Latin, to be able); see POTENT + comitātūs, genitive of comitātus, county.]

pos·sess (pə-zēs') v. tr. pos-sessed, pos-sess-ing, pos-sess-es. 1. To have as property; own. 2. To have as a quality, characteristic, or other attribute: possessed great tact. 3. To acquire mastery of or have knowledge of: possess valuable data. 4. a. To gain or exert influence or control over; dominate: Fury possessed me. b. To control or maintain (one's nature) in a particular condition: I possessed my temper despite the insult. 5. To cause to own, hold, or master something, such as property or knowledge: She possessed herself of the unclaimed goods. 6. To cause to be influenced or controlled, as by an idea or emotion: The thought of getting rich possessed him. 7. Obsolete. To gain or seize. [Middle English possessen, from Old French possessor, from Latin possidēre, possess-: pos-, as master; see poti- in Appendix + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.] —pos-ses'sor n.

pos-sessed (pə-zēs't') adj. 1. Owning or mastering something. Used with of: He is possessed of great wealth. 2. Controlled by or as if by a spirit or other force; obsessed: She is by love possessed. 3. Calm; collected: a strong person who was able to remain possessed even in times of great trial.

USAGE NOTE: Possessed is often followed by the prepositions of, by, or with. Mere possession of a thing or an attribute is indicated by of: possessed of property; possessed of a sharp tongue. When the term indicates obsession or lack of self-control, by and with are more often used: possessed by (or with) an urge to kill.

pos-ses-sion (pə-zěsh'ən) n. Abbr. poss. 1. a. The act or fact of possessing. b. The state of being possessed. 2. Something owned or possessed. 3. possessions. Wealth or property. 4. Law. Actual holding or occupancy with or without rightful ownership. 5. A territory subject to foreign control. 6. Self-control. 7. The state of being dominated by or as if by evil spirits or by an obsession. 8. Sports. a. Physical control of the ball or puck by a player or team. b. The condition of being on offense: The home team was in possession during most of the fourth quarter. —pos-ses'sion-al adj.

pos-ses-sive (pə-zěs'iv) adj. Abbr. poss. 1. Of or relating to ownership or possession. 2. Having or manifesting a desire to control or dominate: a possessive parent. 3. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a noun or pronoun case that indicates possession. — n. Abbr. poss. Grammar. 1. The possessive case. 2. A possessive form or construction. —pos-ses'sive-ly adv. —pos-ses'sive-ness n.

possessive adjective (pə-zěs'iv əj'ik-tiv) n. Grammar. A pronominal adjective expressing possession.

possessive pronoun (pə-zěs'iv prō'noun') n. Grammar. One of several pronouns designating possession and capable of substituting for noun phrases.

pos-ses-so-ry (pə-zěs'ə-rē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or having possession. 2. Law. Depending on or arising from possession: possessory interest.

pos-set (pɒs'it) n. A spiced drink of hot sweetened milk curdled with wine or ale. [Middle English poshet, possot : perhaps Old French posce* (Latin pōsca, drink of vinegar and water from potāre, to drink; see potable + Latin esca, food from edere, to eat); see EDIBLE + Middle English hot, hot; see HOT.]

pos-si-bil-i-ty (pɒs'ə-bil'ɪ-tē) n. pl. pos-si-bil-i-ties. 1. The fact or state of being possible. 2. Something that is possible. 3. possibilities. Potentiality for favorable or interesting results: The idea has tremendous possibilities.

pos-si-ble (pɒs'ə-bəl) Abbr. poss. adj. Abbr. poss. 1. Capable of happening, existing, or being true without contradicting proven facts, laws, or circumstances. 2. Capable of occurring or being done without offense to character, nature, or custom. 3. Capable of favorable development; potential: a possible site for the new capital. 4. Of uncertain likelihood. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin possibilis, from posse, to be able. See poti- in Appendix.] —pos'si-bly adv.

SYNONYMS: possible, workable, practicable, feasible, viable. These adjectives signify capable of occurring or of being done. Possible indicates that something may happen, exist, be true, or be realizable: “I beseech you... think it possible you may be mistaken” (Oliver Cromwell). “Only the initiated know and honor those [scientists] whose patient integrity and devotion to exact observation have made the last step possible” (Hans Zinsser). Workable is used of something that can be put into effective operation: Assuming that the scheme is workable, how will you begin to implement it? Something that is practicable is capable of being effected, done, or put into practice: “As soon as it was practicable, he would wind up his business” (George Eliot). Feasible refers to what can be accomplished, brought about, or carried out: Making cars by hand is possible but not economically feasible. Something viable is both practicable and workable; the term often implies capacity for continuing effectiveness or success: “How viable are the ancient legends as vehicles for modern literary themes?” (Richard Kain).

POSSLQ abbr. Person of the opposite sex sharing living quarters.

pos·sum (pɒs'ʌm) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. An opossum. [Short for OPOSSUM.]

REGIONAL NOTE: Since English is a language that stresses some syllables and not others, weakly stressed syllables, especially those preceding strong stresses, are dropped at times. This process, called apharesis when it occurs at the beginning of a word, is more common in regional American dialects than in the more conservative Standard English, which tends to retain in pronunciation anything reflected in spelling. Although many American dialects feature apharesis, it is most famous in the dialects of the South, where it yields pronunciations such as count of for (on) account of, tater for potato, possum for opossum, and skeeter for mosquito.

possum haw (pɒs'ʌm hɔ) n. 1. A deciduous holly (Ilex decidua) of the southeast United States, having bright red fruit and dull green toothed leaves. 2. A deciduous shrub (Viburnum nudum) of the eastern United States, having white or yellowish flowers and bluish-black fruit. 3. See dockmackie.

post¹ (pɒst) n. 1. A long piece of wood or other material set upright into the ground to serve as a marker or support. 2. A similar vertical support or structure, as: a. A support for a beam in the framework of a building. b. A terminal of a battery. 3. Sports. A goal post. 4. The starting point at a racetrack. 5. An earring attached by a short bar or stud that passes through the ear and fits into a cap in the back. — v. tr. post-ed, post-ing, posts. 1. a. To display (an announcement) in a place of public view. b. To cover (a wall, for example) with posters. 2. To announce by or as if by posters: post banns. 3. To put up signs on (property) warning against trespassing. 4. To denounce publicly: post a man as a thief. 5. To publish (a name) on a list. 6. Games. To gain (points or a point) in a game or contest; score. [Middle English, from Old English, from Latin postis. See stā- in Appendix.]

post² (pōst) n. 1. a. A military base. b. The grounds and buildings of a military base. 2. A local organization of military veterans. 3. Either of two bugle calls in the British Army, sounded in the evening as a signal to retire to quarters. 4. An assigned position or station, as of a guard or sentry. 5. A position of employment, especially an appointed public office. 6. A place to which someone is assigned for duty. 7. A trading post. — v. tr. post-ed, post-ing, posts. 1. To assign to a specific position or station: post a sentry at the gate. 2. To appoint to a naval or military command. 3. To put forward; present: post bail. [French poste, from Italian posto, from Old Italian, from Vulgar Latin postum*, from Latin positum, neuter past participle of pōnere, to place. See apo- in Appendix.]

post³ (pōst) n. 1. a. A delivery of mail. b. The mail delivered. 2. Chiefly British. a. A governmental system for transporting and delivering the mail. b. A post office. 3. a. Archaic. One of a series of relay stations along a fixed route, furnishing fresh riders and horses for the delivery of mail on horseback. b. Obsolete. A rider on such a mail route; a courier. — v. post-ed, post-ing, posts. — v. tr. 1. To mail (a letter or package). 2. To send by mail in a system of relays on horseback. 3. To inform of the latest news: Keep us posted. 4. a. To transfer (an item) to a ledger in bookkeeping. b. To make the necessary entries in (a ledger). 5. Computer Science. To enter (a unit of information) on a record or into a section of storage. — v. intr. 1. To travel in stages or relays. 2. To travel with speed or in haste. 3. To bob up and down in the saddle in rhythm with a horse's trotting gait. — adv. 1. By mail. 2. With great speed; rapidly. 3. By post horse. [French poste, from Old French, relay station for horses, from Old Italian posta, from Vulgar Latin posta*, station, from Latin posita, feminine past participle of pōnere, to place. See apo- in Appendix.]

Post (pōst), Charles William. 1854-1914. American manufacturer of breakfast cereals and the coffee-substitute Postum.

Post (pōst), Emily Price. 1872-1960. American etiquette authority. She wrote Etiquette: The Blue Book of Social Usage (1922) and a popular syndicated newspaper column.

Post (pōst), Wiley. 1899-1935. American aviator who made the first solo flight around the world (1933).

post- pref. 1. After; later: postmillennial. 2. Behind; posterior to: postaxial. [Latin, from post, behind, after. See apo- in Appendix.]

post-age (pō'stīj) n. 1. The charge for mailing an item. 2. The stamps, labels, or printing placed on an item to be mailed as evidence of payment of this charge.

postage meter (pō'stīj mē'tər) n. A machine used in bulk mailing to print the correct amount of postage for each piece of mail, either directly on the piece or on a label to be put on the piece.

postage stamp (pō'stīj stämp) n. A small, usually adhesive label issued by a government and sold in various denominations to be affixed to items of mail as evidence of the payment of postage.

post-age-stamp (pō'stīj-stämp') adj. Very small: postage-stamp villages; a postage-stamp farm.

post-al (pō'stəl) adj. Of or relating to a post office or mail service.

—post'al-ly adv.

postal card (pō'stəl käd) n. An unadorned card printed with the image of a postage stamp, issued by a government and used for sending messages. Also called post card postal order (pō'stəl ôr'där) n. Abbr. PO, P.O. Chiefly British. A money order.

postal service (pō'stəl sîr'vîs) n. See post office (n., sense 1).

post-ax-i-al (pōst-äk'sē-əl) adj. Anatomy. Located behind an axis of the body, as the lateral aspect of the lower leg or the medial aspect of the upper arm.

—post-ax'i-al-ly adv.

post-bel-lum (pōst-běl'əm) adj. Belonging to the period after a war, especially the U.S. Civil War: postbellum houses; postbellum governments. [Latin post, after + bellum, war.]

post-boost phase (pōst'bōöst' fāz) n. The period during which warheads and decoys are released from the last stage of a ballistic missile.

post-box also post box (pōst'böks') n. See mailbox (n., sense 1).

post card also post-card (pōst'käd') n. Abbr. p.c. 1. A commercially printed card with space on one side for an address and a postage stamp, used for sending a short message through the mail. 2. See postal card.

post-ca-va (pōst-kā'və) n. A large vein that returns blood to the heart from the lower half of the body; the inferior vena cava. —post-ca'val adj.

post chaise (pōst shāz) n. A closed, four-wheeled, horse-drawn carriage, formerly used to transport mail and passengers.

post-clas-si-cal (pōst-kläs'ī-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or being a time following a classical period, as in art or literature.

post-co-lo-ni-al (pōst'kə-lō'nē-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or being the time following the establishment of independence in a colony: postcolonial economics.

post-cra-ni-al (pōst-krā'nē-əl) adj. 1. Situated behind the cranium.

2. Consisting of the parts or structures behind the cranium: the postcranial skeleton of an animal. —post-cra'ni-al-ly adv.

post-date (pōst-dāt', pōst'-) v. tr. post-dat-ed, post-dat-ing, post-dates.

1. To put a date on (a check, for example) that is later than the actual date. 2. To occur later than; follow in time.

post-di-lu-vi-an (pōst'dī-lō'vē-ən) also post-di-lu-vi-al (-əl) Bible. adj.

Existing or occurring after the Flood. — n. A person or thing living after the Flood. [POST- + Latin diluvium, flood; see DILUVIAL + -AN¹.]

post-doc-tor-al (pōst-dōk'tər-əl) also post-doc-tor-ate (-īt) adj. Of, relating to, or engaged in academic study beyond the level of a doctoral degree.

post-em-bry-on-ic (pōst'ēm-brē-ōn'ik) adj. Following the embryonic stage of development.

post-er¹ (pō'stər) n. 1. a. A large, usually printed placard, bill, or announcement, often illustrated, that is posted to advertise or publicize something. b. An artistic work, often a reproduction of an original painting or photograph, printed on a large sheet of paper. 2. One that posts bills or notices.

post-er² (pō'stər) n. Archaic. One that travels in speed or with haste.

poster color (pō'stər kŭl'ər) n. See tempera (n., sense 1).

poste res-tante (pōst' rě-stānt') n. A notation written on a letter indicating that the letter should be held at the post office until claimed by the addressee.

[French : poste, mail + restante, feminine present participle of rester, to remain.]

pos-te-ri-or (pō-stīr'ē-ər, pō-) adj. 1. Located behind a part or toward the rear of a structure. 2. Relating to the caudal end of the body in quadrupeds or the dorsal side in human beings and other primates. 3. Botany. Next to or facing the main stem or axis. 4. Coming after in order; following. 5. Following in time; subsequent. — n. The buttocks. [Latin, comparative of posterus, coming after, from post, afterward. See apo- in Appendix.] —pos-te'ri-or-ly adv.

pos-te-ri-or-i-ty (pō-stīr'ē-ōr'ī-tē, -ōr'-, pō-) n. The condition of being posterior in location or time.

pos-ter-i-ty (pō-stēr'ī-tē) n. 1. Future generations: “Everything he writes is consigned to posterity” (Joyce Carol Oates). 2. All of a person’s descendants. [Middle English posterite, from Old French, from Latin posteritās, from posterus, coming after. See POSTERIOR.]

pos-tern (pō'stərn, pös'tərn) n. A small rear gate, especially one in a fort or castle. — adj. Situated in the back or at the side. [Middle English posterne, from Old French, alteration of posterle, from Late Latin posterula, diminutive of Latin posterus, behind. See POSTERIOR.]

poster paint (pō'stər pānt) n. See tempera (n., sense 1).

Post Exchange (pōst iks-chānj') A service mark used for a store on a military base that sells goods to military personnel and their families or to authorized civilians. This service mark often occurs in lowercase in print: “A chateau in southern France, a cabaret in Land Hesse, a post exchange—all of these have a taste and smell” (Christian Science Monitor).

post-ex-il-ic (pōst'ĕg-zil'ik, -ĕk-sil'-) also post-ex-il-i-an (-ĕg-zil'ē-ən, -zil'yən, -ĕk-sil'ē-ən, -sil'yən) adj. Of or relating to the period of Jewish history following the Babylonian captivity (after 586 B.C.).

post-fix (pōst-fiks') Linguistics. v. tr. post-fixed, post-fix-ing, post-fix-es. To suffix. — n. (pōst'fiks') A suffix. —post-fix'al, post-fix'i-al adj.

post-fron-tal (pōst-frūn'tl) adj. 1. At the back of the frontal bone; behind the forehead: a postfrontal suture. 2. Toward the rear of the frontal lobe.

post-gan-gli-on-ic (pōst'gāng-glē-ōn'ik) adj. Located posterior or distal to a ganglion.

post-gla-cial (pōst-glā'shəl) adj. Relating to or occurring during the time following a glacial period.

post-grad-u-ate (pōst-grāj'ōō-īt, -āt') adj. Abbr. P.G. Of, relating to, or pursuing advanced study after graduation from high school or college. — n. Abbr. P.G. One who is engaged in postgraduate study.

post-haste (pōst'hāst') adv. With great speed; rapidly. — n. Archaic. Great speed; rapidity. [From the phrase haste, post, haste, a direction on letters.]

post hoc (pōst hōk, hōk) adv. & adj. In or of the form of an argument in which one event is asserted to be the cause of a later event simply by virtue of having happened earlier: coming to conclusions post hoc; post hoc reasoning. [Latin, after this : post, after + hoc, this.]

post-hole (pōst'hōl') n. A hole dug in the ground to hold a fence post.

post-hu-mous (pōs'chə-məs) adj. 1. Occurring or continuing after one's death: a posthumous award. 2. Published after the writer's death: a posthumous book. 3. Born after the death of the father: a posthumous child. [Middle English posthumus, from Late Latin, alteration (perhaps influenced by Latin humus, earth, or humāre, to bury), of postumus, superlative of posterus, coming after. See POSTERIOR.] — post'hu-mous-ly adv. — post'hu-mous-ness n.

WORD HISTORY: The word posthumous is associated with death, both in meaning and in form. Our word goes back to the Latin word postumus, meaning “last born, born after the death of one’s father, born after the making of a will,” and “last, final.” Postumus was largely used with respect to events occurring after death but not exclusively so, since the word was simply one of the superlative forms of the adverb post, “subsequently, afterward.” Because of its use in connection with death, however, later Latin writers decided that the last part of the word must have to do with humus, “earth,” or humāre, “to bury,” and began spelling the word posthumus. This form of the Latin word was borrowed into English, being first recorded in a work composed before 1464. Perhaps the most telling use of the word appears in the poet Robert Southey’s comment on the rewards of an author: “It was well we should be contented with posthumous fame, but impossible to be so with posthumous bread and cheese.”

post-hyp-not-ic suggestion (pōst'hīp-nōt'ik səg-jēs'chən) n. A suggestion made to a hypnotized person that specifies an action to be performed after awakening, often in response to a cue.

pos-tiche (pō-stēsh', pō-) n. 1. Something false; a sham. 2. A small hairpiece; a toupee. [French, from Italian posticcio, from posto, added (from Latin positus, past participle of pōnere, to place), or from Vulgar Latin appostīcius* (alteration of Latin appositus, past participle of appōnere, to place by, to add : ad-, ad- + pōnere, to place); see apo- in Appendix.]

pos-til-ion also pos-til-lion (pō-stīl'yən, pō-) n. One who rides the near horse of the leaders to guide the horses drawing a coach. [French postillon, from Italian postiglione, from posta, mail, from Old Italian, mail station. See POST³.]

post-im-pres-sion-ism (pōst'im-prēsh'ə-nīz'əm) n. A school of painting in France in the late 19th century that rejected the objective naturalism of impressionism and used form and color in more personally expressive ways.

—post'im-pres'sion-ist n. —post'im-pres'sion-is'tic adj.

post-in-dus-tri-al (pōst'īn-dūs'trē-əl) adj. Of or relating to a period in the development of an economy or a nation in which the relative importance of manufacturing lessens and that of services, information, and research grows.

post-lude (pōst'lōōd') n. 1. Music. a. An organ voluntary played at the end of a church service. b. A concluding piece. 2. A final chapter or phase. [POST- + (PRE)LUDE.]

post-man (pōst'mən) n. See mailman.

post-mark (pōst'märk') n. Abbr. pmk. An official mark printed over a postage stamp, especially one that cancels the stamp and records the date and place of mailing. — v. tr. post-marked, post-mark-ing, post-marks. To stamp with such a mark.

post-mas-ter (pōst'mäs'tər) n. Abbr. PM, P.M. A man who is in charge of the operations of a local post office. —post'mas'ter-ship n.

postmaster general (pōst'mäs'tər jěn'ər-əl) n. pl. postmasters general. Abbr. P.M.G. The executive head of a national postal service.

post-men-o-paus-al (pōst'měn-ə-pô'zəl) adj. Of or occurring in the time following menopause.

post-men-stru-al (pōst-měn'strōō-əl) adj. Of or occurring in the time following menstruation.

post-me-rid-i-an (pōst'mə-rīd'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or taking place in the afternoon.

post me-rid-i-em (pōst mə-rīd'ē-əm) adv. & adj. Abbr. P.M., p.m. After noon. Used chiefly in the abbreviated form to specify the hour: 10:30 P.M.; a P.M. appointment. See Usage Note at ante meridiem. [Latin post merīdiem : post, after + merīdiem, accusative of merīdiēs, midday.]

post-mil-le-nar-i-an (pōst'mīl-ə-nār'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to postmillennialism. — n. One who believes in postmillennialism.

post-mil-le-nar-i-an-ism (pōst'mīl-ə-nār'ē-ə-nīz'əm) n. Postmillennialism.

post·mil·len·ni·al (pōst'mə-lĕn'ē-əl) also post·mil·len·ni·an (-ən) adj.

Happening or existing after the millennium.

post·mil·len·ni·al·ism (pōst'mə-lĕn'ē-ə-lĭz'əm) n. The doctrine that Jesus's Second Coming will follow the millennium. —post'mil·len'ni·al·ist n.

post·mis·tress (pōst'mĭs'trĭs) n. Abbr. PM, P.M. A woman who is in charge of the operations of a local post office.

post·mod·ern or post-mod·ern (pōst-mōd'ərn) adj. Of or relating to art, architecture, or literature that reacts against earlier modernist principles, as by reintroducing traditional or classical elements of style or by carrying modernist styles or practices to extremes: “the post-modern mode of tapering the tops of buildings” (Jane Holtz Kay). —post·mod'ern·ism n. —post·mod'ern·ist adj.

post·mor·tem (pōst-mōr'təm) adj. Abbr. p.m., P.M. 1. Occurring or done after death. 2. Of or relating to a medical examination of a dead body. — n. 1. Abbr. p.m., P.M. See autopsy (n., sense 1). 2. Informal. An analysis or review of a completed event. [Latin post mortem : post, afterward; see POST- + mortem, accusative of mors, death; see mer- in Appendix.] —post mor'tem adv.

postmortem examination (pōst-mōr'təm ĭg-zām'ə-nā'shən) n. See autopsy (n., sense 1).

post·na·sal (pōst-nā'zəl) adj. Located or occurring posterior to the nose.

postnasal drip (pōst-nā'zəl drĭp) n. The chronic secretion of mucus from the posterior nasal cavities, often caused by a cold or an allergy.

post·na·tal (pōst-nāt'l) adj. Of or occurring after birth, especially during the period immediately after birth. —post·na'tal·ly adv.

post·nup·tial (pōst-nŭp'shəl, -chəl) adj. Belonging to the period after marriage. —post·nup'tial·ly adv.

post office (pōst ô'fĭs) n. Abbr. PO, P.O., p.o. 1. The public department responsible for the transportation and delivery of the mails. Also called postal service 2. A local office where mail is received, sorted, and delivered, and where stamps and other postal materials are sold. 3. A game in which kisses are exchanged for pretended letters.

post office box (pōst ô'fĭs bۆks) n. A container, such as a pigeonhole, at a central mailing location, in which a patron's incoming mail is held until picked up by the patron.

post·op·er·a·tive (pōst-öp'ər-ə-tĭv, -öp'rə-, -öp'ə-rā'-) adj. Happening or done after a surgical operation. —post·op'er·a·tive·ly adv.

post·or·bi·tal (pōst-ōr'bĭ-tl) adj. Situated behind the socket of the eye: a postorbital bone.

post·o·vu·la·to·ry (pōst-ō'vyə-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē, -ōv'yə-) adj. Of or occurring in the period shortly after ovulation.

post-paid (pōst'pād') adj. Abbr. p.p., P.P., ppd. With the postage having been paid in advance.

post-par-tum (pōst-pär'təm) adj. Of or occurring in the period shortly after childbirth: postpartum complications. [Latin post partum : post, after; see POST- + partum, accusative of partus, birth from past participle of parere, to beget; see perə-¹ in Appendix.]

post-po-li-o syndrome (pōst-pō'lē-ō' sīn'drōm') n. A condition affecting poliomyelitis patients several decades after the initial attack, characterized by fatigue, muscular deterioration, pain in the joints, and respiratory problems.

post-pone (pōst-pōn', pōs-pōn') v. tr. post-poned, post-pon-ing, post-pones. 1. To delay until a future time; put off. See Synonyms at defer¹. 2. To place after in importance; subordinate. [Latin postponere : post-, post- + pōnere, to put; see POST².] —post-pon'a-ble adj. —post-pone'ment n. —post-pon'er n.

post-pose (pōst-pōz') v. post-posed, post-pos-ing, post-pos-es. Linguistics. — v. tr. To place (a word or phrasal constituent) after other constituents in a sentence, as the direct object noun phrase all the interesting places he had visited in the sentence He described to them all the interesting places he had visited. — v. intr. To become postposed. [Back-formation from POSTPOSITION.]

post-po-si-tion (pōst'pə-zīsh'ən) n. Linguistics. 1. The placing of a word or suffixed element after the word to which it is grammatically related. 2. A word or element placed postpositionally, as a preposition placed after its object. —post'po-si'tion-al adj. —post'po-si'tion-al-ly adv.

post-pos-i-tive (pōst-pōz'i-tīv) Linguistics. adj. Placed after or suffixed to another word. — n. An appended or suffixed word or word element; a postposition. [Late Latin postpositivus, from Latin postpositus, past participle of postpōnere, to put after. See POSTPONE.] —post-pos'i-tive-ly adv.

post-pran-di-al (pōst-prän'dē-əl) adj. Following a meal, especially dinner: took a postprandial walk through the woods. —post-pran'di-al-ly adv.

post-pro-duc-tion (pōst'prə-dŭk'shən) n. A final stage in the production of a film or a television program, occurring after the action has been filmed or videotaped and typically involving editing and the addition of soundtracks.

post-script (pōst'skrīpt', pōs'skrīpt') n. Abbr. P.S., p.s., PS 1. A message appended at the end of a letter after the writer's signature. 2. Additional information appended to the manuscript, as of a book or an article. [Medieval Latin postscriptum*, from neuter past participle of Latin postscribere, to write after : post-, post- + scribere, to write; see skribh- in Appendix.]

post-sea-son (pōst'sē'zən) adv. & adj. Sports. In, of, or relating to games played after the regular season: ran great defense post-season; a poor post-season record.

post·syn·ap·tic (pōst'sī-năp'tik) adj. Situated behind or occurring after a synapse: postsynaptic neurons. —post·syn·ap·ti·cal·ly adv.

post·test (pōst'tĕst') n. A test given after a unit of instruction to ascertain what the students have learned. Results of a posttest are typically compared with those of a pretest.

post time (pōst tīm) n. Sports. The time set immediately before the official start of a race after which point no further betting is allowed.

post·tran·scrip·tion·al (pōst'trăn-skrip'shə-nəl) adj. Occurring or formed after genetic transcription.

post·trans·fu·sion (pōst'trăns-fyōō'zhən) adj. Occurring after or as a consequence of blood transfusion.

post·trans·la·tion·al (pōst'trăns-lā'shə-nəl, -trănz-) adj. Occurring or formed after genetic translation: a posttranslational amino acid.

post·trau·matic (pōst'trou-măt'ik, -trô-) adj. Following injury or resulting from it: posttraumatic amnesia.

posttraumatic stress disorder (pōst'trou-măt'ik strĕs dīs-ôr'dər) n.

Abbr. PTSD A psychological disorder affecting individuals who have experienced profound emotional trauma, such as torture or rape, characterized by recurrent flashbacks of the traumatic event, nightmares, eating disorders, anxiety, fatigue, forgetfulness, and social withdrawal.

pos·tu·lant (pōs'chə-lənt) n. 1. A person submitting a request or application; a petitioner. 2. A candidate for admission into a religious order. [French, from Old French, from Latin postulāns, postulant- present participle of postulāre, to request. See POSTULATE.] —pos'tu·lan·cy, pos'tu·lant·ship' n.

pos·tu·late (pōs'chə-lāt') v. tr. pos·tu·lat·ed, pos·tu·lat·ing, pos·tu·lates.

1. To make claim for; demand. 2. To assume or assert the truth, reality, or necessity of, especially as a basis of an argument. 3. To assume as a premise or axiom; take for granted. See Synonyms at presume. — n. (pōs'chōō-līt, -lāt')

1. Something assumed without proof as being self-evident or generally accepted, especially when used as a basis for an argument: “the postulate that there is little moral difference between the superpowers” (Henry A. Kissinger). 2. A fundamental element; a basic principle. 3. Mathematics. An axiom. 4. A requirement; a prerequisite. [Medieval Latin postulāre, postulāt-, to nominate to a bishopric, to assume, from Latin, to request. See prek- in Appendix.] —pos'tu·la'tion n.

pos·tu·la·tor (pōs'chə-lā'tər) n. 1. One who postulates. 2. Roman Catholic Church. A church official who presents a plea for canonization or beatification.

pos·ture (pōs'chər) n. 1. a. A position of the body or of body parts: a sitting posture. b. An attitude; a pose: assumed a posture of angry defiance. 2. A characteristic way of bearing one's body; carriage: stood with good posture. 3. Relative placement or arrangement: the posture of the buildings on the land. 4. A stance or disposition with regard to something: “Those bases are essential to our military posture in the Middle East" (Gerard Smith). 5. A frame of mind affecting one's thoughts or behavior; an overall attitude. — v. pos-tured, pos-tur-ing, pos-tures. — v. intr. 1. To assume an exaggerated or unnatural pose or mental attitude; attitudinize. 2. To assume a pose. — v. tr. To put into a specific posture; pose. [French, from Italian postura, from Latin positūra, position, from positus, past participle of pōnere, to place. See apo- in Appendix.] — pos'tur-al adj. — pos'tur-er, pos'tur-ist n.

SYNONYMS: posture, attitude, carriage, pose, stance. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "a position of the body and limbs": erect posture; an attitude of prayer; dignified carriage; a defiant pose; the alert stance of a batter in baseball.

post-ver-te-bral (pōst-vûr'tə-brəl, pōst'vær-tē'-) adj. Situated behind the vertebrae: postvertebral muscles.

post-vo-cal-ic (pōst'vō-kāl'ĭk) adj. Linguistics. 1. Designating a consonant or consonantal sound directly following a vowel. 2. Of, relating to, or being a form of a linguistic element, such as a suffix or word, that occurs only after vowels.

post-war (pōst'wôr') adj. Belonging to the period after a war: postwar resettlement; a postwar house.

po-sy (pō'zē) n. pl. po-sies. 1. A flower or bunch of flowers; a nosegay. See Synonyms at bouquet. 2. Archaic. A brief verse or sentimental phrase, especially one inscribed on a trinket. [Alteration of POESY, motto or line of verse (archaic).]

pot¹ (pōt) n. 1. Any of various usually domestic containers made of pottery, metal, or glass, as: a. A round, fairly deep cooking vessel with a handle and often a lid. b. A short, round container for storing or serving food: a jam pot; a mustard pot. c. A coffeepot. d. A teapot. 2. a. Such a container and its contents: a pot of stew; brewed a pot of coffee. b. A potful. 3. a. A large drinking cup; a tankard. b. A drink of liquor contained in such a cup. 4. An artistic or decorative ceramic vessel of any shape. 5. A flowerpot. 6. Something, such as a chimney pot or a chamber pot, that resembles a round cooking vessel in appearance or function. 7. A trap for eels, other fish, or crustaceans, typically consisting of a wicker or wire basket or cage. 8. Games. a. The total amount staked by all the players in one hand at cards. See Synonyms at bet. b. The area on a card table where stakes are placed. c. A shot in billiards or related games intended to send a ball into a pocket. 9. Informal. A common fund to which members of a group contribute. 10. Often pots. Informal. A large amount: made pots of money on their investment. 11. Computer Science. A section of storage reserved for storing accumulated data. 12. Informal. A potshot. 13. Informal. A potbelly. 14. Informal. A potty or toilet. 15. See potentiometer (n., sense 2). — v.

pot-ted, pot-ting, pots. — v. tr. 1. To place or plant in a pot: pot a geranium. 2. To preserve (food) in a pot. 3. To cook in a pot. 4. To shoot (game) for food rather than for sport. 5. Informal. To shoot with a potshot. 6. Informal. To win or capture; bag. 7. Games. To hit (a ball) into a pocket. — v. intr. Informal. To take a potshot. [Middle English, from Old English pott, from Vulgar Latin pottus*.]

pot² (pöt) n. Slang. Marijuana. [Origin unknown.]

pot. abbr. Potential.

po-ta-ble (pō'tə-bəl) adj. Fit to drink. — n. A beverage, especially an alcoholic beverage: wine and other potables. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin pōtābilis, from Latin pōtāre, to drink, from pōtus, a drink. See pō(i)- in Appendix.] — po'ta-bil'i-ty, po'ta-ble-ness n.

po-tage (pō-tāzh') n. A thick, often creamy soup. [French, from Old French. See POTTAGE.]

pot-a-mo-plank-ton (pöt'ə-mō-plāngk'tən) n. The plankton of rivers or streams. [Greek potamos, river; see HIPPOPOTAMUS + PLANKTON.]

Po-ta-ro (pə-tär'ō, pō-tä'rō) A river, about 161 km (100 mi) long, of central Guyana. It has gold deposits and is known for its Kaieteur Falls.

pot-ash (pöt'āsh') n. 1. See potassium carbonate. 2. See potassium hydroxide. 3. Any of several compounds containing potassium, especially soluble compounds such as potassium oxide, potassium chloride, and various potassium sulfates, used chiefly in fertilizers. [Sing. of obsolete pot ashes, translated from obsolete Dutch potaschen (from the fact that this substance was originally obtained by leaching wood ashes and evaporating the leach in a pot).]

potash feldspar (pöt'āsh' fēld'spär') n. See orthoclase.

potash mu-ri-ate (pöt'āsh' myōōr'ē-īt, -āt') n. See potassium chloride.

po-tas-si-um (pə-tās'ē-əm) n. Symbol K A soft, silver-white, highly or explosively reactive metallic element that occurs in nature only in compounds. It is obtained by electrolysis of its common hydroxide and found in, or converted to, a wide variety of salts used especially in fertilizers and soaps. Atomic number 19; atomic weight 39.102; melting point 63.65°C; boiling point 774°C; specific gravity 0.862; valence 1. [From POTASH (from which it was first obtained).]

—po-tas'sic adj.

po-tas-si-um-ar-gon (pə-tās'ē-əm-är'gōn') adj. Of, relating to, or being a geologic dating method relying on the percentage of potassium in a specimen that has radioactively decayed to argon.

potassium bicarbonate (pə-tās'ē-əm bī-kär'bə-nāt') n. A compound, KHCO_3 , in the form of a white powder or colorless crystals, used in baking powder and as an antacid medicine.

- potassium bitartrate (pə-tās'ē-əm bī-tār'trāt') n. A white, acid, crystalline solid or powder, $\text{KHC}_4\text{H}_4\text{O}_6$, used in baking powder, in the tinning of metals, and as a component of laxatives. Also called cream of tartar
- potassium bromide (pə-tās'ē-əm brō'mīd') n. A white crystalline solid or powder, KBr , used as a sedative, in photographic emulsion, and in lithography.
- potassium carbonate (pə-tās'ē-əm kār'bə-nāt') n. A transparent, white, deliquescent, granular powder, K_2CO_3 , used in making glass, enamels, and soaps. Also called potash
- potassium chlorate (pə-tās'ē-əm klôr'āt') n. A poisonous crystalline compound, KClO_3 , used as an oxidizing agent, a bleach, and a disinfectant and in making explosives, matches, and fireworks.
- potassium chloride (pə-tās'ē-əm klôr'īd') n. A colorless crystalline solid or powder, KCl , used widely in fertilizers and in the preparation of most potassium compounds. Also called potash muriate, potassium muriate.
- potassium cyanide (pə-tās'ē-əm sī'ə-nīd') n. An extremely poisonous white compound, KCN , used in the extraction of gold and silver from ores, electroplating, and photography, and as a fumigant and insecticide.
- potassium dichromate (pə-tās'ē-əm dī-krō'māt') n. A bright yellowish-red crystalline compound, $\text{K}_2\text{Cr}_2\text{O}_7$, used as an oxidizing agent, and in pyrotechnics, explosives, and safety matches.
- potassium hydroxide (pə-tās'ē-əm hī-drōk'sīd') n. A caustic white solid, KOH , used as a bleach and in the manufacture of soaps, dyes, alkaline batteries, and many potassium compounds. Also called caustic potash, lye, potash.
- potassium iodide (pə-tās'ē-əm ī'ə-dīd') n. A white crystalline compound, KI , used in photography and medicine and as an analytical reagent.
- potassium mu·ri·ate (pə-tās'ē-əm myōōr'ē-īt, -āt') n. See potassium chloride.
- potassium nitrate (pə-tās'ē-əm nī'trāt') n. A transparent white crystalline compound, KNO_3 , used to pickle meat and in the manufacture of pyrotechnics, explosives, matches, rocket propellants, and fertilizers. Also called saltpeter
- potassium permanganate (pə-tās'ē-əm pər-māng'gə-nāt') n. A dark purple crystalline compound, KMnO_4 , used as an oxidizing agent and disinfectant and in deodorizers and dyes.
- potassium sodium tartrate (pə-tās'ē-əm sō'dē-əm tār'trāt') n. A colorless efflorescent crystalline compound, $\text{KNaC}_4\text{H}_4\text{O}_6 \cdot 4\text{H}_2\text{O}$, used in making mirrors, in electronics, and as a laxative. Also called Rochelle salt
- potassium sulfate (pə-tās'ē-əm sül'fāt') n. A colorless or white crystalline compound, K_2SO_4 , used in glassmaking and fertilizers and as a reagent in analytical chemistry.
- po·ta·tion (pō-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of drinking. 2. A drink, especially of an alcoholic beverage. [Middle English potacion, from Old French, from Latin pōtātīō, pōtātīōn-, a drinking party, from pōtātus, past participle of pōtāre, to drink, from pōtus, a drink. See pō(i)- in Appendix.]

po-ta-to (pə-tā'tō) n. pl. po-ta-toes. 1. A South American plant (Solanum tuberosum) widely cultivated for its starchy, edible tubers. 2. A tuber of this plant. 3. A sweet potato. See Regional note at possum. [Spanish patata, alteration (probably influenced by Quechua papa, white potato), of Taino batata, sweet potato.]

potato beetle (pə-tā'tō bēt'l) n. The Colorado potato beetle.

potato blight (pə-tā'tō blīt) n. Any of various highly destructive fungus diseases of the potato.

potato bug (pə-tā'tō bŭg) n. The Colorado potato beetle.

potato chip (pə-tā'tō čīp) n. A thin slice of potato fried in deep fat until crisp and then salted. Often used in the plural.

po-ta-to-ry (pō'tə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, or given to drinking. [Late Latin pōtātōrius, from Latin pōtātus, past participle of pōtāre, to drink, from pōtus, a drink. See pō(i)- in Appendix.]

potato skin (pə-tā'tō skīn) n. An appetizer made with a slice of baked potato skin, spread with a topping such as cheese or meat, and usually broiled or baked. Often used in the plural.

potato yam (pə-tā'tō yām) n. See air potato.

pot-au-feu (pō-tō-fœ') n. pl. pot-au-feu. A French dish of boiled meats and vegetables. [French : pot, pot + au, on the + feu, fire.]

Pot-a-wat-o-mi (pōt'ə-wōt'ə-mē) n. pl. Potawatomi or Pot-a-wat-o-mis.

1. a. A Native American people variously located in Michigan, Wisconsin, northern Illinois, and northern Indiana in the 17th to the 19th century, with present-day populations in Oklahoma, Kansas, Michigan, and Ontario. b. A member of this people. 2. The Algonquian language of the Potawatomi.

pot-bel-ied stove (pōt'běl'ēd stōv) n. See potbelly stove.

pot-bel-ly (pōt'běl'ē) n. pl. pot-bel-lies. 1. A protruding abdominal region. 2. A potbelly stove. —pot'bel'ied adj.

potbelly stove (pōt'běl'ē stōv) n. A short rounded stove in which wood or coal is burned. Also called potbellied stove pot-boil (pōt'boil') v. intr. pot-boiled, pot-boiling, pot-boils. To produce potboilers. [Back-formation from POTBOILER.]

pot-boil-er (pōt'boi'lər) n. A literary or artistic work of poor quality, produced quickly for profit. [From the phrase boil the pot, to provide one's livelihood.]

pot-bound (pōt'bound') adj. Having grown too large for its container, resulting in matting or tangling of the roots. Used of a potted plant.

pot-boy (pōt'boi') n. Chiefly British. A boy or man who works in an inn or a public house serving customers and doing chores.

pot cheese (pōt čhēz) n. See cottage cheese.

po·teen (pō-tēn′) n. Unlawfully distilled Irish whiskey. [Irish Gaelic poitín, small pot, poteen, from pota, pot, from POT¹.]

Po·tem·kin (pō-tēm′kĭn, pə-, pə-tyôm′-), Grigori Aleksandrovich. 1739-1791. Russian army officer and politician. The lover of Catherine II, he helped her seize power in 1762.

Potemkin village (pō-tēm′kĭn vĭl′ij) n. Something that appears elaborate and impressive but in actual fact lacks substance: “the Potemkin village of this country’s borrowed prosperity” (Lewis H. Lapham). [After Grigori Aleksandrovich POTEKIN, who had elaborate fake villages constructed for Catherine the Great’s tours of the Ukraine and the Crimea.]

po·tence (pōt′ns) n. Potency.

po·ten·cy (pōt′n-sē) n. pl. po·ten·cies. 1. The quality or condition of being potent. 2. Inherent capacity for growth and development; potentiality.

po·tent (pōt′nt) adj. 1. Possessing inner or physical strength; powerful.

2. a. Exerting or capable of exerting strong physiological or chemical effects: potent liquor; a potent toxin. b. Exerting or capable of exerting strong influence; cogent: potent arguments. 3. Having great control or authority: “The police were potent only so long as they were feared” (Thomas Burke). 4. Able to perform sexual intercourse. Used of a male. [Middle English, from Latin potēns, potent- present participle of posse, to be able. See poti- in Appendix.] —po’tent·ly adv. —po’tent·ness n.

po·ten·tate (pōt′n-tāt′) n. 1. One who has the power and position to rule over others; a monarch. 2. One who dominates or leads a group or an endeavor: industrial potentates. [Middle English potentat, from Old French, from Late Latin potentātus, from Latin, power, from potēns, present participle of posse, to be able. See POTENT.]

po·ten·tial (pə-tēn′shəl) adj. Abbr. pot. 1. Capable of being but not yet in existence; latent: a potential problem. 2. Having possibility, capability, or power. 3. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a verbal construction with auxiliaries such as may or can; for example, it may snow. — n. Abbr. pot. 1. The inherent ability or capacity for growth, development, or coming into being. 2. Something possessing the capacity for growth or development. 3. Grammar. A potential verb form. 4. Physics. The work required to bring a unit electric charge, magnetic pole, or mass from an infinitely distant position to a designated point in a static electric, magnetic, or gravitational field, respectively. 5. Symbol V Electricity. The potential energy of a unit charge at any point in an electric circuit measured with respect to a specified reference point in the circuit or to ground; voltage. [Middle English potencial, from Old French potenciel, from Late Latin potentiālis, powerful, from Latin potentia, power, from potēns, potent- present participle of posse, to be able. See POTENT.] —po·ten’tial·ly adv.

potential energy (pə-těn/'shəl ěn/'ər-jē) n. The energy of a particle or system of particles derived from position, or condition, rather than motion. A raised weight, coiled spring, or charged battery has potential energy.

po·ten·ti·al·i·ty (pə-těn/'shē-ăl/'i-tē) n. pl. po·ten·ti·al·i·ties. 1. The state of being potential. 2. a. Inherent capacity for growth, development, or coming into existence. b. Something possessing such capacity.

po·ten·ti·ate (pə-těn/'shē-āt') v. tr. po·ten·ti·at·ed, po·ten·ti·at·ing, po·ten·ti·ates. 1. To make potent or powerful. 2. To enhance or increase the effect of (a drug). 3. To promote or strengthen (a biochemical or physiological action or effect). [From Latin potentia, power. See POTENTIAL.]

—po·ten'ti·a'tion n.

po·ten·til·la (pōt'n-tīl'ə) n. Any of numerous herbs or shrubs of the genus Potentilla, of the North Temperate Zone, having pinnately or palmately compound leaves and yellow, white, or red flowers with many pistils. [Medieval Latin, garden valerian, from Latin potēns, potent- present participle of posse, to be able. See POTENT.]

po·ten·ti·om·e·ter (pə-těn/'shē-ōm/'i-tər) n. 1. An instrument for measuring an unknown voltage by comparison to a standard voltage. 2. A three-terminal resistor with an adjustable center connection, widely used for volume control in radio and television receivers. In this sense, also called *pot*¹ [POTENTI(AL) + -METER.] —po·ten'ti·o·met'ric (-ə-mět/'rīk) adj.

Po·ten·za (pə-těn/'zə, pō-těn/'tsä) A city of southern Italy in the Apennines east-southeast of Naples. Founded by Romans in the second century B.C., it was ruled by numerous feudal overlords during the Middle Ages. Population, 65,388.

pot·ful (pōt'fōōl') n. 1. The amount that a pot can hold. 2. Informal. A large amount: made a potful of money on the horses.

pot·head (pōt'hěd') n. Slang. One who habitually smokes marijuana.

poth·er (pōth'ər) n. 1. A commotion; a disturbance. 2. A state of nervous activity; a fuss. 3. A cloud of smoke or dust that chokes or smothers. — v. poth·ered, poth·er·ing, poth·ers. — v. tr. To make confused; trouble; worry. — v. intr. To be overly concerned with trifles; fuss. [Origin unknown.]

pot·herb (pōt'ûrb', -hûrb') n. A plant whose leaves, stems, or flowers are cooked and eaten or used as seasoning.

pot·hold·er (pōt'hōl'dər) n. A small fabric pad used to handle hot cooking utensils.

pot·hole (pōt'hōl') n. 1. A hole or pit, especially one in a road surface. Also called chuckhole 2. A deep, round hole worn in rock by loose stones whirling in strong rapids or waterfalls. 3. Western U.S. A place filled with mud or quicksand that is a hazard to cattle. —pot'holed' adj.

pot·hook (pōt'hōōk') n. 1. A bent or hooked piece of iron for hanging a pot or kettle over a fire. 2. A curved iron rod with a hooked end used for lifting hot pots, irons, or stove lids. 3. A curved, S-shaped mark made in writing. 4. Often pothooks. a. Illegible handwriting or aimless scribbling. b. Informal. Stenographic writing.

pot-house (pɒt'hus') n. Chiefly British. A tavern.

pot-hunt-er (pɒt'hʌn'tər) n. 1. One who hunts game for food, ignoring the rules of sport. 2. One who participates in contests simply to win prizes. 3. A nonprofessional archaeologist. —pot/hunt'ing n.

po-tiche (pô-tēsh') n. A vase or jar with a round or polygonal body tapering at the neck and having a removable cover. [French, from pot, pot, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin pottus*.]

Pot-i-dae-a (pɒt'i-dē'ə) An ancient city of northeast Greece in Macedonia. Founded as a Corinthian colony in 609 B.C., it revolted against Athens in 432 but was reconquered in 429 after a two-year siege. Philip of Macedon destroyed the city in 356.

po-tion (pō'shən) n. A liquid dose, especially one of medicinal, magic, or poisonous content. [Middle English pocion, from Old French, from Latin pōtiō, pōtiōn-. See pō(i)- in Appendix.]

pot-latch (pɒt'læch') n. A ceremonial feast among certain Native American peoples of the northwest Pacific coast, as in celebration of a marriage or an accession, at which the host distributes gifts according to each guest's rank or status. Between rival groups the potlatch could involve extravagant or competitive giving and destruction by the host of valued items as a display of superior wealth. [Chinook Jargon, from Nootka p'achitl, to make a potlatch gift.]

pot-luck (pɒt'lʌk') n. 1. Whatever food happens to be available for a meal, especially when offered to a guest: Having arrived unannounced for supper, we had to take potluck. 2. A meal at which each guest brings food that is then shared by all. Also called potluck supper 3. Whatever is available at a particular time: The scheduled flight was canceled and passengers had to take potluck on the other airlines.

pot marigold (pɒt mɑr'i-gɔld') n. See calendula.

pot marjoram (pɒt mɑr'jər-əm) n. Marjoram.

Po-to-mac (pə-tō'mæk) A community of central Maryland, a residential suburb of Washington, D.C. Population, 22,800.

Potomac River (pə-tō'mæk rɪv'ər) A river of the east-central United States rising in northeast West Virginia and flowing about 459 km (285 mi) along the Virginia-Maryland border to Chesapeake Bay. It is navigable for large ships to Washington, D.C.

Po-to-sí (pō-tə-sē', pō-tô-) A city of south-central Bolivia southwest of Sucre in the Andes at an altitude of about 4,203 m (13,780 ft). It was founded after silver was discovered in 1545 and during its early days was a fabled source of riches. Population, 113,380.

pot-pie (põt'pī') n. 1. A mixture of meat or poultry and vegetables covered with a pastry crust and baked in a deep dish. 2. A meat or poultry stew with dumplings.

pot-pour-ri (pō'pōō-rē') n. pl. pot-pour-ris. 1. A combination of incongruous things: "In the minds of many, the real and imagined causes for Russia's defeats quickly mingled into a potpourri of terrible fears" (W. Bruce Lincoln). 2. A miscellaneous anthology or collection: a potpourri of short stories and humorous verse. 3. A mixture of dried flower petals and spices used to scent the air. [French pot pourri (translation of Spanish olla podrida); see OLLA PODRIDA : pot, pot; see POTICHE + pourri, past participle of pourrir, to rot (from Old French purir, from Vulgar Latin putrīre*, from Latin putrēscere); see PUTRID.]

pot roast (põt rōst) n. A cut of beef that is browned and then cooked until tender, often with vegetables, in a covered pot.

Pots-dam (pōts'dām') A city of northeast Germany on the Havel River near Berlin. First mentioned in the 10th century, it became in the 18th century a favorite residence of Frederick the Great, who built the rococo palace of Sans Souci here (1745-1747). The city was the site of the Potsdam Conference (July-August 1945), at which American, British, and Soviet leaders drew up preliminary plans for the postwar administration of Germany and assigned various captured territories to Poland. Population, 135,922.

pot-sherd (põt'shûrd') also pot-shard (-shârd') n. A fragment of broken pottery, especially one found in an archaeological excavation.

pot-shot also pot shot (põt'shōt') n. 1. A random or easy shot. 2. A criticism made without careful thought and aimed at a handy target for attack: reporters taking potshots at the mayor. [So called because such a shot is fired by a hunter whose main purpose is to get food for the pot.]

pot-stone (põt'stōn') n. A variety of steatite once used to make cooking vessels.

pot-tage (põt'īj) n. 1. A thick soup or stew of vegetables and sometimes meat. 2. Archaic. Porridge. [Middle English potage, from Old French, from pot, pot. See POTICHE.]

pot-ted (põt'ïd) adj. 1. a. Placed in a pot. b. Grown in a pot: many potted plants in the study. 2. Preserved in a pot, can, or jar. 3. Slang. a. Intoxicated; drunk. b. Under the influence of a hallucinogenic drug.

pot-ter¹ (põt'ər) n. One who makes pottery.

pot-ter² (põt'ər) v. Chiefly British. Variant of putter².

Pot-ter (põt'ər), Beatrix. 1866-1943. British writer and illustrator. Her animal stories include The Tale of Peter Rabbit (1900) and The Tailor of Gloucester (1902).

Pot-ter (põt'ər), Paul or Paulus. 1625-1654. Dutch painter noted for his landscapes and animal paintings, such as Horses at Pasture (1649).

Pot-ter-ies (pŏt'ə-rēz) A district of west-central England in the Trent River valley. It has been a center of the manufacture of china and earthenware since the 16th century. Josiah Wedgwood and Josiah Spode were among the noted potters who worked in the area.

pot-ter's clay (pŏt'ərz klā) n. A clay free of iron, suitable for making pottery or for modeling. Also called potter's earth potter's field (pŏt'ərz fēld) n. A place for the burial of unknown or indigent persons. [From the potter's field mentioned in Matthew 27:7.]

potter's wheel (pŏt'ərz hwēl) n. A revolving, often treadle-operated horizontal disk on which clay is shaped manually.

potter wasp (pŏt'ər wŏsp) n. Any of various small black and yellow solitary wasps of the genus Eumenes, characteristically building pot-shaped nests of clay. Regional. Also called dirt dauber, mud wasp.

pot-ter-y (pŏt'ə-rē) n. pl. pot-ter-ies. 1. Ware, such as vases, pots, bowls, or plates, shaped from moist clay and hardened by heat. 2. The craft or occupation of a potter. 3. The place where a potter works. [French poterie, from Old French, from potier, potter, from pot, pot. See POTICHE.]

pot-tle (pŏt'l) n. 1. A pot or drinking vessel with a capacity of 2.0 quarts (1.9 liters). 2. The liquid contained in this type of pot or drinking vessel. 3. An old English liquid measure equal to 2.0 quarts (1.9 liters). [Middle English potel, from Old French, from pot, pot. See POTICHE.]

pot-to (pŏt'ō) n. pl. pot-tos. Any of several small nocturnal African primates of the genera Perodicticus and Arctocebus, having a pointed snout, large eyes and ears, and a stumplike index finger and tail. [Of Niger-Congo origin perhaps akin to Wolof pata, a tailless monkey or Akan (Twi) apɔsɔ, a fierce monkeylike animal.]

Pott's disease (pŏts dī-zēz') n. Partial destruction of the vertebral bones, usually caused by a tuberculous infection and often producing curvature of the spine. [After Percival Pott (1714-1788), British surgeon.]

Potts-town (pŏts'toun') A borough of southeast Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill River east-southeast of Reading. Its first ironworks were established in 1715. Population, 21,831.

Potts-ville (pŏts'vīl') A city of east-central Pennsylvania west-northwest of Allentown. Once a coal-mining town, it is now a trade and industrial center. Population, 16,603.

pot-ty¹ (pŏt'ē) adj. pot-ti-er, pot-ti-est. Chiefly British. 1. Of little importance; trivial. 2. Slightly intoxicated. 3. Somewhat silly or crazy; addlebrained. [Possibly from POT¹.]

pot-ty² (pŏt'ē) n. pl. pot-ties. A small pot for use as a toilet by an infant or young child.

pot-ty-chair (põt'ē-châr') n. A small chair with an opening in the seat and a receptacle beneath, used for toilet-training young children.

pouch (pouch) n. 1. A small bag often closing with a drawstring and used especially for carrying loose items in one's pocket. 2. A bag or sack used to carry mail or diplomatic dispatches. 3. A leather bag or case for carrying powder or small-arms ammunition. 4. A sealed plastic or foil container used in packaging frozen or dehydrated food. 5. Something resembling a bag in shape: one's pouches under one's eyes. 6. Zoology. A saclike structure, such as the cheek pockets of the gopher or the external abdominal pocket in which marsupials carry their young.

7. Anatomy. A pocketlike space in the body: the pharyngeal pouch. 8. Scots. A pocket. 9. Archaic. A purse for small coins. — v. pouched, pouch-ing, pouch-es. — v. tr. 1. To place in or as if in a pouch; pocket. 2. To cause to resemble a pouch. 3. To swallow. Used of certain birds or fishes. — v. intr. To assume the form of a pouch or pouchlike cavity. [Middle English, from Old French, of Germanic origin.] — pouch'y adj.

pouched (poucht) adj. Having a pouch, as a gopher, pelican, or marsupial.

pouf (pōof) n. 1. A woman's hairstyle popular in the 18th century, characterized by high rolled puffs. 2. A part of a garment, such as a dress, that is gathered into a puff. 3. A rounded ottoman. [French, from Old French, interjection used for a fall, of imitative origin.] — pouf'fy adj.

Pough-keep-sie (pə-kîp'sē, pō-) A city of southeast New York on the Hudson River north of New York City. Settled by the Dutch in 1687, Poughkeepsie is the seat of Vassar College (chartered 1861). Population, 28,844.

pouil-ly-fuis-sé (pō-yē'fwē-sā') n. A dry white Burgundy wine. [After Solutré-Pouilly and Fuissé, villages of east-central France.]

pou-lard also pou-larde (pō-lärd') n. A young hen that has been spayed for fattening. [French poularde, from poule, hen, from Old French, from Latin pulla, feminine of pullus, young of an animal, chicken. See pau- in Appendix.]

Pou-lenc (pō-länk'), Francis. 1899-1963. French composer and pianist whose works include the piano piece Trois Mouvements Perpétuels (1918) and the ballet Les Biches (1924).

poult (pōlt) n. A young fowl, especially a turkey, chicken, or pheasant. [Middle English pult, short for polet, from Old French poulet, diminutive of poule, polle, hen. See POULARD.] poul-ter's measure (pōl'tərz mēzh'ər) n. A metrical pattern employing couplets in which the first line is in iambic hexameter and the second is in iambic heptameter. [From obsolete poulter, a poultry dealer (from the practice of giving a few extra eggs in the dozen), from Middle English pulter, from Old French pouletier, from poulet, pullet. See PULLET.] poul-tice (pōl'tis) n. A soft, moist mass of bread, meal, clay, or other adhesive substance, usually heated, spread on cloth, and applied to warm, moisten, or stimulate an aching or inflamed part of the body. Also called cataplasma — v. tr. poul-ticed, poul-tic-ing, poul-tic-es. To apply a poultice to. [Middle English pultes, from Medieval Latin pultēs, thick paste, from Latin, pl. of puls, pult-, potage. See PULSE².]

poul-try (pōl'trē) n. Domestic fowls, such as chickens, turkeys, ducks, or geese, raised for meat or eggs. [Middle English pultrie, from Old French pouletrie, from pouletier, poulterer. See POULTER'S MEASURE.]

pounce¹ (pouns) v. pounced, pounc-ing, pounc-es. — v. intr. 1. To spring or swoop with intent to seize someone or something: a cat that pounced on a mouse; watched the falcon pounce on the baby rabbit. 2. To attack suddenly: irregular troops who pounced on the convoy at a narrow pass; a colleague who pounced on me because of a mistake in my report. 3. To seize something swiftly and eagerly: pounce on an opportunity. — v. tr. To seize with or as if with talons. — n. 1. The act or an instance of pouncing. 2. The talon or claw of a bird of prey. [From Middle English, pointed tool, talon of a hawk, perhaps variant of ponson, pointed tool. See PUNCHEON¹.] —pounc'er n.

pounce² (pouns) n. 1. A fine powder formerly used to smooth and finish writing paper and soak up ink. 2. A fine powder, such as pulverized charcoal, dusted over a stencil to transfer a design to an underlying surface. — v. tr. pounced, pounc-ing, pounc-es. 1. To sprinkle, smooth, or treat with pounce. 2. To transfer (a stenciled design) with pounce. [French ponce, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin pōmex*, pōmic-, from Latin pūmex, pumice.] —pounc'er n.

pounce³ (pouns) v. tr. pounced, pounc-ing, pounc-es. To ornament (metal, for example) by perforating from the back with a pointed implement. [Middle English pouncen, probably from Old French poinssonner, from poinson, pointed tool. See PUNCHEON¹.]

pounce box (pouns bōks) n. A small box with a perforated top, formerly used to sprinkle sand or pounce on writing paper to dry the ink.

poun-cet box (poun'sit bōks) n. A small perfume box with a perforated top. [Perhaps alteration of pounced-box*, from POUNCE³.]

pound¹ (pound) n. pl. pound or pounds. 1. Abbr. lb. a. A unit of weight equal to 16 ounces (453.592 grams). b. A unit of apothecary weight equal to 12 ounces (373.242 grams). See Table at measurement. 2. A unit of weight differing in various countries and times. 3. A British unit of force equal to the weight of a standard one-pound mass where the local acceleration of gravity is 9.817 meters (32.174 feet) per second per second. 4. a. The basic monetary unit of the United Kingdom, worth 20 shillings or 240 old pence before the decimalization of 1971. Also called pound sterling b. A basic unit of currency in Cyprus, Egypt, Ireland, Lebanon, Sudan, Syria, and United Kingdom. See Table at currency. 5. A monetary unit of Scotland before the Act of Union (1707). In this sense, also called pound scots [Middle English, from Old English pund, from West

Germanic punda-*, from Latin (libra) pondō, (a pound) by weight. See (s)pen- in Appendix.]

pound² (pound) v. pound-ed, pound-ing, pounds. — v. tr. 1. To strike repeatedly and forcefully. See Synonyms at beat. 2. To beat to a powder or pulp; pulverize or crush. 3. To instill by persistent, emphatic repetition: pounded knowledge into the students' heads. 4. To assault with heavy gunfire. — v. intr. 1. To strike vigorous, repeated blows: He pounded on the table. 2. To move along heavily and noisily: The children pounded up the stairs. 3. To pulsate rapidly and heavily; throb: Her heart pounded. 4. To move or work laboriously: a ship that pounded through heavy seas. — n. 1. A heavy blow. 2. The sound of a heavy blow; a thump. 3. The act of pounding. — idiom. pound the pavement. Slang. To travel the streets on foot, especially in search of work. [Middle English pounden, alteration of pounen, from Old English pūnian.] — pound'er n.

pound³ (pound) n. 1. A public enclosure for the confinement of stray dogs or livestock. 2. A place in which impounded property is held until redeemed. 3. An enclosure in which animals or fish are trapped or kept. 4. A place of confinement for lawbreakers. — v. tr. pound-ed, pound-ing, pounds. To confine in or as if in a pound; impound. [Middle English, from Old English pund-, enclosure, as in pundfald, pen.]

Pound (pound), Ezra Loomis. 1885-1972. American writer who exerted great influence on the development of modern literature through his poetic works, such as the unfinished Cantos (1925-1960), his critical works, including ABC of Reading (1934), his voluminous contributions to literary magazines, and his tutelage of writers such as T.S. Eliot, James Joyce, and Ernest Hemingway.

Pound (pound), Roscoe. 1870-1964. American jurist who was dean of Harvard Law School (1916-1936) and wrote several influential books, including The Spirit of the Common Law (1921).

pound-age¹ (poun'dĭj) n. 1. A tax or commission based on value per pound sterling. 2. A rate or charge based on weight in pounds. 3. Weight measured in pounds.

pound-age² (poun'dĭj) n. 1. Confinement of animals in a pound. 2. A fee charged for the redemption of impounded animals or other property.

pound-al (poun'dl) n. A unit of force in the foot-pound-second system of measurement, equal to the force required to accelerate a standard one-pound mass one foot per second per second (approximately 0.138 newton). [POUND¹ + al (as in QUINTAL).]

pound cake (pound kāk) n. A rich, finely textured yellow cake containing a large proportion of eggs, flour, butter, and sugar. [From the original recipe, calling for a pound each of butter, sugar, and flour.]

pound-fool-ish (pound'fōō'lish) adj. Unwise in dealing with large sums of money or large matters. [From the phrase penny-wise, pound-foolish.]

pound of flesh (pound ʊv flĕsh) n. pl. pounds of flesh. A debt harshly insisted upon. [From Antonio's debt to Shylock in The Merchant of Venice by Shakespeare.]

pound scots (pound skōts) n. See pound¹ (n., sense 5).

pound sterling (pound stūr'liŋg) n. See pound¹ (n., sense 4a).

pour (pôr, pōr) v. poured, pour-ing, pours. — v. tr. 1. To make (a liquid or granular solid) stream or flow, as from a container. 2. To send forth, produce, express, or utter copiously, as if in a stream or flood: poured money into the project; poured out my inner thoughts. — v. intr. 1. To stream or flow continuously or profusely. 2. To rain hard or heavily. 3. To pass or proceed in large numbers or quantity: Students poured into the auditorium. 4. To serve a beverage, such as tea or coffee, to a gathering: We need someone to pour. — n. A pouring or flowing forth, especially a downpour of rain. [Middle English pouren, probably from Old North French purer, to sift, pour out, from Latin pūrāre, to purify, from pūrus, pure. See peuə- in Appendix.] — pour'er n.

pour-boire (pōor-bwār') n. Money given as a gratuity; a tip. [French, from pour boire, for drinking : pour, for (from Old French, from Latin prō); see PRO-¹ + boire, to drink (from Old French boivre, from Latin bibere); see BEVERAGE.]

pour-parler (pōor'pär-lā') n. Conversation or discussion preliminary to negotiation. [French, from Old French, to discuss with the aim of reaching agreement, conversation preliminary to an agreement : pour, for, before (from Old French, from Latin prō); see PRO-¹ + parler, to talk; see PARLEY.]

pour point (pôr point) n. The lowest temperature at which an oil or other liquid will pour under given conditions.

pousse-café (pōos'kă-fā') n. 1. A drink consisting of several liqueurs of different densities, poured to form differently colored layers. 2. A brandy or liqueur served after dinner with coffee. [French : pousse, third person sing. present tense of pousser, to push (from Old French); see POUSSETTE + café, coffee; see CAFÉ.]

pous-sette (pōō-sĕt') n. A country-dance figure in which couples or a couple join hands and swing around the floor. [French, pushpin, diminutive of obsolete pousse, a push, from pousser, to push, from Old French poulsar, pousser, to push, from Latin pulsāre, frequentative of pellere, to push. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.]

Pous-sin (pōō-săn'), Nicolas. 1594-1665. French painter whose landscapes and historical and religious paintings, such as Holy Family on the Steps (1648), are among the greatest examples of the classical style.

pout¹ (pout) v. pout-ed, pout-ing, pouts. — v. intr. 1. To exhibit displeasure or disappointment; sulk. 2. To protrude the lips in an expression of displeasure or sulkiness. 3. To project or protrude. — v. tr. 1. To push out or protrude (the lips). 2. To utter or express with a pout. — n. 1. A protrusion of the lips, especially as an expression of sullen discontent. 2. Often pouts. A fit of petulant sulkiness. Often used with the. [Middle English pouten, perhaps of Scandinavian origin.] —pout'y adj.

pout² (pout) n. pl. pout or pouts. Any of various freshwater or marine fishes, especially an eelpout or hornpout. [Middle English poute*, from Old English -pūte, as in ǣlepūte, eelpout.]

pout·er (pou'tər) n. 1. One that pouts. 2. One of a breed of pigeons capable of distending the crop until the breast becomes puffed out.

pov·er·ty (pöv'ər-tē) n. 1. The state of being poor; lack of the means of providing material needs or comforts. 2. Deficiency in amount; scantiness: “the poverty of feeling that reduced her soul” (Scott Turow). 3. Unproductiveness; infertility: the poverty of the soil. 4. Renunciation made by a member of a religious order of the right to own property. [Middle English povertē, from Old French, from Latin paupertās, from pauper, poor. See pau- in Appendix.]

poverty grass (pöv'ər-tē grās) n. Any of several North American grasses that grow in poor or sandy soil.

poverty level (pöv'ər-tē lěv'əl) n. A minimum income level below which a person is officially considered to lack adequate subsistence and to be living in poverty. Also called poverty line pov·er·ty·strick·en (pöv'ər-tē-strīk'ən) adj. Suffering from poverty; miserably poor. See Synonyms at poor.

POW (pē'ō-düb'əl-yōō, -yōō) n. pl. POW's also POWs. A prisoner of war.

Pow·ay (pou'ā) A community of southern California north of San Diego. It is near a large naval air base. Population, 43,516.

pow·der (pou'dər) n. 1. A substance consisting of ground, pulverized, or otherwise finely dispersed solid particles. 2. Any of various preparations in the form of powder, as certain cosmetics and medicines. 3. An explosive mixture, such as gunpowder. 4. Light, dry snow. — v. pow·dered, pow·der·ing, pow·ders. — v. tr. 1. To reduce to powder; pulverize. 2. To dust or cover with or as if with powder. 3. Slang. To defeat handily or decisively. — v. intr. 1. To become pulverized; turn into powder. 2. To use powder as a cosmetic. — idioms. keep (one's) powder dry. To be ready for a challenge with little warning. take a powder. To make a quick departure; run away. [Middle English poudre, from Old French, from Latin pulvis, pulver-.] —pow'der·er n.

powder blue (pou'dər blōō) n. Color. A moderate to pale blue or purplish blue. [From the color of powdered smalt.]

powder horn (pou'dər hōrn) n. An animal's horn capped at the open end, used to carry gunpowder.

powder keg (pou'dər kĕg) n. 1. A small cask for holding gunpowder or other explosives. 2. A potentially explosive situation or thing.

Pow-der-ly (pou'dər-lē), Terence Vincent. 1849-1924. American labor leader who directed the Knights of Labor, a secret organization that disavowed strikes, during its period of greatest influence (1879-1893).

powder metallurgy (pou'dər mět'l-ûr'jē) n. The technology of powdered metals, especially the production and utilization of metallic powders for fabricating massive materials and shaped objects.

powder monkey (pou'dər mŭng'kē) n. Slang. One who carries or sets explosives.

powder puff (pou'dər pŭf) n. A soft pad for applying powder to the skin.

pow-der-puff (pou'dər-pŭf') adj. Of, relating to, or being a usually competitive activity in which only women take part: powder-puff baseball.

Pow-der River (pou'dər rĭv'ər) 1. A river, about 241 km (150 mi) long, of northeast Oregon flowing generally north and southeast to the Snake River on the Idaho border. 2. A river rising in several branches in the Bighorn Mountains of central Wyoming and flowing about 782 km (486 mi) generally northeast into southern Montana.

powder room (pou'dər rōm) n. 1. A lavatory for women. 2. A lavatory for guests in a private home.

pow-der-y (pou'də-rē) adj. 1. Composed of or similar to powder. 2. Dusted or covered with or as if with powder. 3. Easily made into powder; friable.

powdery mildew (pou'də-rē mĭl'dōō') n. 1. Any of various fungi, especially of the family Erysiphaceae, that produce powdery conidia on the host surface. 2. A plant disease caused by any of these fungi.

Pow-ell (pou'əl), Adam Clayton, Jr. 1908-1972. American politician. A U.S. representative from New York (1945-1967 and 1969-1971), he was an outspoken advocate of civil rights.

Pow-ell (pou'əl), Anthony. Born 1905. British writer best known for A Dance to the Music of Time (1951-1975), a cycle of 12 satirical novels.

Pow-ell (pou'əl), Cecil Frank. 1903-1969. British physicist. He won a 1950 Nobel Prize for discovering methods of photographing atomic nuclei and for his study of mesons.

Pow-ell (pou'əl), John Wesley. 1834-1902. American geologist and ethnologist who directed the U.S. Geological Survey (1881-1894) and classified many Native American languages.

Pow-ell (pou'əl), Lewis Franklin, Jr. Born 1907. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1971-1987).

pow-er (pou'ər) n. Abbr. pwr. 1. The ability or capacity to perform or act effectively. 2. Often powers. A specific capacity, faculty, or aptitude: her powers of concentration. 3. Strength or force exerted or capable of being exerted; might. See Synonyms at strength. 4. The ability or official capacity to exercise control; authority. 5. A person, group, or nation having great influence or control over others: the western powers. 6. The might of a nation, political organization, or similar group. 7. Forcefulness; effectiveness: a novel of unusual power. 8. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. A large number or amount. See Regional note at powerful. 9. a. The energy or motive force by which a physical system or machine is operated: turbines turned by steam power; a sailing ship driven by wind power. b. The capacity of a system or machine to operate: a vehicle that runs under its own power. c. Electrical or mechanical energy, especially as used to assist or replace human energy. d. Electricity supplied to a home, building, or community: a storm that cut off power to the whole region. 10. Physics. The rate at which work is done, expressed as the amount of work per unit time and commonly measured in units such as the watt and horsepower. 11. Electricity. a. The product of applied potential difference and current in a direct-current circuit. b. The product of the effective values of the voltage and current with the cosine of the phase angle between current and voltage in an alternating-current circuit. 12. Mathematics. a. See exponent (n., sense 3). b. The number of elements in a finite set. 13. Statistics. The probability of rejecting the null hypothesis where it is false. 14. A measure of the magnification of an optical instrument, such as a microscope or telescope. 15. powers. Theology. The sixth of the nine orders of angels. 16. Archaic. An armed force. — adj. 1. Of or relating to political, social, or economic control: a power struggle; a power base. 2. Operated with mechanical or electrical energy in place of bodily exertion: a power tool; power car windows. 3. Of or relating to the generation or transmission of electricity: power companies; power lines. 4. Informal. Of or relating to influential business or professional practices: a pinstriped suit with a power tie; met with high-level executives at a power breakfast. — v. tr. pow-ered, pow-er-ing, pow-ers. To supply with power, especially mechanical power. —idiom. powers that be. Those who hold effective power in a system or situation: a plan vetoed by the powers that be. [Middle English, from Old French poeir, to be able, power, from Vulgar Latin potēre*, to be able, from potis, able, powerful. See poti- in Appendix.]

pow-er-boat (pou'ər-bōt') n. See motorboat.

power brake (pou'ər brāk) n. A motor vehicle brake assisted by a power mechanism operated by the engine that amplifies pressure applied to the brake pedal.

power broker or pow-er-brok-er (pou'ər-brō'kər) n. A person who exerts strong political or economic influence, especially by virtue of the individuals and votes he or she controls: "A power broker is someone who can assemble a number of favors due from a coterie of powerful people and then use that agglomeration of... favors to work a deal" (William H. Hallahan).

power dive (pou'ər dīv) n. A downward plunge of an aircraft accelerated by both gravity and engine power. —pow'er-dive' (pou'ər-dīv') v.

power drill (pou'ər drīl) n. 1. A portable electric drill. 2. A large drilling machine having a vertical, motorized drill set in a table stand.

pow·er·ful (pou'ər-fəl) adj. 1. Having or capable of exerting power.

2. Effective or potent: a powerful drug. 3. Computer Science. Fast, versatile, or able to handle large tasks. Used of hardware or software. 4. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. Great: The storm did a powerful lot of harm. — adv. Chiefly Upper Southern U.S. Very: It was powerful humid. — pow'er-ful-ly adv.

—pow'er-ful-ness n.

REGIONAL NOTE: In the upper southern United States the words powerful and mighty are intensives used frequently like the adverb very: Your boy's grown powerful big. The new baby is mighty purty. Powerful is used as an adjective in some expressions: The storm did a powerful lot of harm. In the same dialect region the noun power has, in addition to its standard meaning, the sense of "a large number or amount." This sense appears in the Oxford English Dictionary as common in dialectal British English of the 18th and 19th centuries: "It has done a power of work" (Charles Dickens). All these derivative senses of power and might take advantage of the notion of strength inherent in these nouns, making them natural intensives. Colloquial English is always on the lookout for ways to make language more vivid with new intensives. We think of the upper southern part of the United States as linguistically conservative, but in fact it has preserved uses of power, powerful, and mighty that were innovative in their time.

pow·er·house (pou'ər-hous') n. 1. See power plant (n., sense 2). 2. One that possesses great force or energy: She is an editorial powerhouse.

pow·er·less (pou'ər-līs) adj. 1. Lacking strength or power; helpless and totally ineffectual. 2. Lacking legal or other authority. —pow'er-less-ly adv.

—pow'er-less-ness n.

pow·er·lift·ing (pou'ər-lif'tīng) n. Sports. A weightlifting competition in which participants compete in the squat, dead lift, and bench press.

power mower (pou'ər mou'ər) n. A lawn mower that is powered by a gasoline or electric motor.

power of appointment (pou'ər ʊv ə-point'mənt) n. pl. powers of appointment. Law. Authority granted to one person by another to transfer property upon the death of the latter.

power of attorney (pou'ər ʊv ə-tūr'nē) n. pl. powers of attorney. Abbr. P.A., P/A Law. A legal instrument authorizing one to act as another's attorney or agent.

power pack (pou'ər pāk) n. A usually compact, portable device that converts supply current to direct or alternating current as required by specific equipment.

power plant (pou'ər plānt) n. 1. All the equipment, including structural members, that constitutes a unit power source: the power plant of a truck. 2. A complex of structures, machinery, and associated equipment for generating electric energy from another source of energy, such as nuclear reactions or a hydroelectric dam. In this sense, also called powerhouse, power station.

power play (pou'ər plā) n. 1. Sports. a. An offensive maneuver in a team game, especially in football, in which a massive concentration of players is applied in a certain area. b. A situation in ice hockey in which one team has a temporary numerical advantage because the other team has one or more players in the penalty box. 2. A strategic maneuver, as in politics, diplomacy, or business, based on the use or threatened use of power as a means of coercion.

power politics (pou'ər pŏl'i-tiks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). International diplomacy in which each nation uses or threatens to use military or economic power to further its own interests: "The Cold War undermined the Wilsonian dream of a world beyond power politics" (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.). [Translation of German Machtpolitik.]

Powers (pou'ərz), Hiram. 1805-1873. American sculptor whose important works, all in the neoclassical style, include Greek Slave (1843) and busts of American leaders.

power series (pou'ər sîr'ēz) n. Mathematics. A sum of successively higher integral powers of a variable or combination of variables, each multiplied by a constant coefficient.

power shovel (pou'ər shŭv'əl) n. A large, usually mobile earthmoving machine having a boom and a hinged bucket for excavating. Also called steam shovel power station (pou'ər stā'shən) n. See power plant (n., sense 2).

power steering (pou'ər stîr'ing) n. A device driven by the engine of a vehicle that facilitates the turning of the steering wheel by the driver.

power structure (pou'ər strŭk'chər) n. 1. An elite group constituted by people holding influential positions within a government, a society, or an organization. 2. A hierarchy of managerial authority: sought to advance within the company's power structure.

power takeoff (pou'ər tāk'ɔf') n. Abbr. PTO A mechanism attached to a motor vehicle engine that supplies power to a nonvehicular device, such as a pump or pneumatic hammer.

power train (pou'ər trān) n. An assembly of gears and associated parts by which power is transmitted from an engine to a driving axle.

power trip (pou'ər trīp) n. Slang. An action undertaken chiefly for the gratification associated with the exercise of power over another or others: "He was giving orders, and people were taking them. He was on a power trip" (Nelson DeMille).

—pow'er-trīp' (pou'ər-trīp') v. —power tripper n.

Pow·er·Walk·ing (pou'ər-wô'kĭŋ) n. Sports. See race walking.

Pow·ha·tan¹ (pou'ə-tăŋ', pou-hăt'n), Originally Wahunsonacock. 1550?-1618. Algonquian leader who founded the Powhatan confederacy and maintained peaceful relations with English colonists after the marriage of his daughter Pocahontas to John Rolfe (1614).

Pow·ha·tan² (pou'ə-tăŋ', pou-hăt'n) n. pl. Powhatan or Pow·ha·tans.

1. a. A confederacy of Native American peoples of eastern Virginia in the 16th and 17th centuries, with present-day descendants in the same area. b. A member of this confederacy. 2. The Algonquian language of the Powhatan, a dialect of Virginia Algonquian. [After POWHATAN¹.]

pow·wow (pou'wou') n. 1. A council or meeting with or of Native Americans. 2. a. A Native American shaman. b. A ceremony conducted by a shaman, as in the performance of healing or hunting rituals. 3. Informal. A conference or gathering. — v. intr. pow-wowed, pow-wow-ing, pow-wows. Informal. To hold a powwow. [Narragansett powwaw, shaman.]

WORD HISTORY: Because trances were so important to the Native American shaman as a means of getting in touch with spiritual forces beyond the ken of the normal person, the title powwaw, literally meaning “one who has visions,” was accorded him. One of the occurrences of this word in an early piece of propaganda designed to bring more settlers to New England represents fairly well the Puritan attitudes to the religion of the native inhabitants of the New World: “The office and dutie of the Powah is to be exercised principally in calling upon the Devil; and curing diseases of the sick or wounded.” The word whose spelling was eventually settled in English as powwow was also used as the name for ceremonies and councils, probably because of the important role played by the shaman in both. After the native peoples had been dealt with and the fear of devil worship was somewhat diminished, the newcomers decided that they could have powwows too, the first reference to one of these being recorded in the Salem, Massachusetts, Gazette of 1812: “The Warriors of the Democratic Tribe will hold a powwow at Agawam on Tuesday next.” The verb powwow, “to confer,” was recorded even earlier, in 1780.

Pow·ys (pō'is) Family of British writers, comprising the brothers John Cowper Powys (1872-1963), whose novels, such as Wolf Solent (1929), glorify nature; Theodore Francis Powys (1875-1953), who lived reclusively and wrote allegorical novels, such as Mr. Weston's Good Wine (1927); and Llewelyn Powys (1884-1939), known primarily for his essays.

pox (pöks) n. 1. A disease such as chickenpox or smallpox, characterized by purulent skin eruptions that may leave pockmarks. 2. Syphilis. 3. Archaic. Misfortune and calamity. [Alteration of pocks, from Middle English, pl. of pocke, pokke. See POCK.]

POX-VI-RUS (pöks/vī'rəs) n. pl. POX-VI-RUS-ES. Any of a group of DNA-containing viruses, including those that cause smallpox, cowpox, and other poxlike diseases in vertebrates.

Po-yang (pō'yäng') A lake of eastern China southeast of Wuhan. It is connected to the Yangtze River (Chang Jiang) by canal.

Po-za Ri-ca de Hi-dal-go (pō'zə rē'kə dā hī-däl'gō, pō'sä rē'kä thě ē-thäl'gō) A city of east-central Mexico south of Tampico near the Bay of Campeche. Population, 166,799.

Poz-nań (pōz'nän', -nän', pōz'nän'yə) A city of west-central Poland west of Warsaw. Dating from before the tenth century, it passed to Prussia in 1793 and reverted to Poland after World War I. Population, 579,100.

POZ-ZUO-LA-NA (pöt'swə-lä'nə) also POZ-ZO-LA-NA (pöt'sə-) n. 1. A siliceous volcanic ash used to produce hydraulic cement. 2. Any of various artificially produced substances resembling pozzuolana ash. [Italian pozzolana, after Poz-zuoli.] —POZ-ZUO-LA'NIC adj.

Poz-zuo-li (pôt-swô'lē) A city of southern Italy west of Naples on the Bay of Pozzuoli, a section of the Bay of Naples. The city was founded by Greek exiles c. 529 B.C. and was an important commercial center during the Roman Empire. Population, 61,300.

pp or pp. abbr. Music. Pianissimo.

pp. abbr. 1. Pages. 2. Or PP. Prepaid.

p.p.¹ abbr. Latin. Per procurationem (by proxy).

p.p.² or P.P. abbr. 1. Parcel post. 2. Parish priest. 3. Or pp. Past participle. 4. Postpaid.

PPA abbr. Phenylpropanolamine.

p.p.a. abbr. Law. Per power of attorney.

ppb abbr. Parts per billion.

ppd. abbr. 1. Postpaid. 2. Prepaid.

pph. abbr. Pamphlet.

PPLO abbr. Pleuropneumonia-like organism.

ppm abbr. Parts per million.

PPO abbr. Preferred provider organization.

P.P.S. also p.p.s. abbr. Latin. Post postscriptum (additional postscript).

ppt abbr. 1. Parts per thousand. 2. Parts per trillion. 3. Or ppt. Precipitate.

pptn. abbr. Precipitation.

PQ abbr. Quebec.

p.q. or P.Q. abbr. Previous question.

Pr¹ The symbol for the element praseodymium.

Pr² abbr. 1. Propyl. 2. Bible. Proverbs.

PR abbr. 1. Payroll. 2. Also P.R. or p.r. Public relations. 3. Or P.R. Puerto Rico.

pr. abbr. 1. Pair. 2. Grammar. Present. 3. Price. 4. a. Printed. b. Printing. 5. Grammar. Pronoun.

Pr. abbr. 1. Priest. 2. Prince.

P.R. abbr. Proportional representation.

praam (präm) n. New England & Chiefly British & Nautical. Variant of pram².

prac-ti-ca-ble (prāk'tī-kə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of being effected, done, or put into practice; feasible. See Synonyms at possible. 2. Usable for a specified purpose: a practicable way of entry. [Medieval Latin practicabilis, capable of being used, from practicāre, to practice, from prāctica, practice, from Late Latin prācticē, practical as against contemplative life, from Greek praktikē, feminine of praktikos, practical. See PRACTICA.] —prac'ti-ca-bil'i-ty n. —prac'ti-ca-bly adv.

USAGE NOTE: Practicable means “feasible” as well as “usable” and hence overlaps in meaning to some extent with practical, which can mean “useful.” However, practicable does not share any other senses with practical.

prac-ti-cal (prāk'tī-kəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, governed by, or acquired through practice or action, rather than theory, speculation, or ideals: gained practical experience of sailing as a deck hand. 2. Manifested in or involving practice: practical applications of calculus. 3. Actually engaged in a specified occupation or a certain kind of work; practicing. 4. Capable of being used or put into effect; useful: practical knowledge of Japanese. See Usage Note at practicable.

5. Intended to serve a purpose without elaboration: practical low-heeled shoes.

6. Concerned with the production or operation of something useful: Woodworking is a practical art. 7. Level-headed, efficient, and unspeculative. 8. Being actually so in almost every respect; virtual: a practical disaster. [Middle English practicale, from Medieval Latin practicālis, from Late Latin prācticus, from Greek praktikos, from prassein, to make, do.] —prac'ti-cal'i-ty (-kāl'ī-tē), prac'ti-cal-ness n.

practical joke (prāk'tī-kəl jōk) n. A mischievous trick played on a person, especially one that causes the victim to experience embarrassment, indignity, or discomfort. —practical joker n.

prac-ti-cal-ly (prāk'tīk-lē) adv. 1. In a way that is practical. 2. For all practical purposes; virtually. 3. All but; nearly; almost.

USAGE NOTE: Practically is used unexceptionally in its primary sense of “in a way that is practical.” Its use in the sense “for all practical purposes” is perfectly acceptable. Thus, a person whose liabilities exceed his or her assets may be said to be practically bankrupt, even though that person has not been legally declared insolvent. By a slight extension of this meaning, however, practically is often used to mean “all but” or “nearly”: He had practically finished his meal when I arrived. This use of practically, sometimes considered informal, is widely encountered in reputable writing.

practical nurse (prăk'tī-kəl nûrs) n. 1. A licensed practical nurse. 2. A person who has had practical experience in nursing care but who is not a graduate of a degree program in nursing.

prac-tice (prăk'tīs) v. prac-ticed, prac-tic-ing, prac-tic-es. — v. tr. 1. To do or perform habitually or customarily; make a habit of: She practiced restraint in her friendships. 2. To do or perform (something) repeatedly in order to acquire or polish a skill: practice a dance step. 3. To give lessons or repeated instructions to; drill: practiced the students in handwriting. 4. To work at, especially as a profession: practice law. 5. To carry out in action; observe: She practices her religion piously. 6. Obsolete. To plot (something evil). — v. intr. 1. To do or perform something habitually or repeatedly. 2. To do something repeatedly in order to acquire or polish a skill. 3. To work at a profession. 4. Archaic. To intrigue or plot. — n. 1. A habitual or customary action or way of doing something: makes a practice of being punctual. 2. a. Repeated performance of an activity in order to learn or perfect a skill: Practice will make you a good musician. b. Archaic. The skill so learned or perfected. c. The condition of being skilled through repeated exercise: out of practice. 3. The act or process of doing something; performance or action: a theory that is difficult to put into practice. 4. Exercise of an occupation or a profession: the practice of law. 5. The business of a professional person: an obstetrician with her own practice. 6. A habitual or customary action or act. Often used in the plural: That company engages in questionable business practices. Facial tattooing is a standard practice among certain peoples. 7. Law. The methods of procedure used in a court of law. 8. Archaic. a. The act of tricking or scheming, especially with malicious intent. b. A trick, a scheme, or an intrigue. [Middle English practisen, from Old French practiser, alteration of practiquer, from pratique, practice, from Late Latin practicē, practical. See PRACTICABLE.] —prac'tic-er n.

SYNONYMS: practice, drill, exercise, rehearse. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to do or cause to do again and again in order to acquire proficiency”: practice the shot put; drill pupils in the multiplication tables; exercising one's wits; an actor rehearsing a role. See also Synonyms at habit prac-ticed (prāk'tĭst) adj. 1. Skilled or expert; proficient: He is practiced in the art of design. She is a practiced lecturer. 2. Acquired or brought to perfection by practice: greeted the guests with practiced courtesies.

practice teacher (prāk'tĭs tē'chər) n. See student teacher. —prac'tice-teach' (prāk'tĭs-tēch') v. —practice teaching n.

prac-tic-ing (prāk'tĭ-sĭng) adj. Actively working in, engaged in, or observing, especially a particular profession or religion: a practicing attorney; a practicing Catholic.

prac-ti-cum (prāk'tĭ-kəm) n. A school or college course, especially one in a specialized field of study, that is designed to give students supervised practical application of previously studied theory: advanced practicums in teaching reading. [German Praktikum, from Late Latin prācticum, neuter of prācticus, practical. See PRACTICAL.]

prac-tise (prāk'tĭs) v. & n. Chiefly British. Variant of practice. —prac'tis-er n.

prac-ti-tion-er (prāk-tĭsh'ə-nər) n. 1. One who practices something, especially an occupation, a profession, or a technique. 2. Christian Science. A person engaged in the public ministry of spiritual healing. [Alteration of practician, from Old French practicien, from practiser, to practice. See PRACTICE.]

prae-di-al also pre-di-al (prē'dē-əl) adj. 1. Relating to, containing, or possessing land; landed. 2. Attached to, bound to, or arising from the land: praedial serfs. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin praediālis, of an estate, from Latin praedium, estate, from praes, praed-, surety, bondsman : prae-, pre- + vas-, guarantor.]

prae-mu-ni-re (prē'myōō-nī'rē) n. Law. 1. The offense under English law of appealing to or obeying a foreign court or authority, thus challenging the supremacy of the Crown. 2. The writ charging this offense. 3. The penalty for this offense. [Short for Middle English premunire facias, from Medieval Latin praemūnīre faciās : praemūnīre, to warn (from Latin, to fortify : prae-, pre- + mūnīre, to defend) + Latin faciās, that you cause, second person sing. present subjunctive of facere, to do (words used in the writ).]

prae-no-men (prē-nō'mən) n. pl. prae-no-mens or prae-nom-i-na (-nōm'ə-nə, -nō'mə-). 1. A first or given name. 2. The first name of a citizen of ancient Rome, as Gaius in Gaius Julius Caesar. [Latin praenōmen : prae-, pre- + nōmen, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.] —prae-nom'i-nal (-nōm'ə-nəl) adj.

prae-tor also pre-tor (prē'tər) n. An annually elected magistrate of the ancient Roman Republic, ranking below but having approximately the same functions as a consul. [Middle English pretor, from Old French, from Latin praetor, perhaps from praeīre, to go before : prae-, pre- + īre, to go; see ei- in Appendix.]

—prae-to'ri-al (prē-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) adj. —prae'tor-ship' n.

prae-to-ri-an also pre-to-ri-an (prē-tôr'ē-ən, -tôr'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to a praetor or the praetorship. 2. Praetorian. Of or belonging to the Praetorian Guard. 3. Venal; corruptible: “A large praetorian bureaucracy, filled with ambitious, possessive... and often sycophantic people, makes work and makes trouble” (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.). — n. 1. A praetor or an ex-praetor.

2. Praetorian. A member of the Praetorian Guard.

Praetorian Guard (prē-tôr'ē-ən gärd) n. 1. The elite bodyguard of a Roman emperor, approximately the size of a legion. 2. A member of this bodyguard. [Originally the bodyguard of a praetor or a general.]

prag-mat-ic (präg-măt'ik) adj. 1. Dealing or concerned with facts or actual occurrences; practical. 2. Philosophy. Of or relating to pragmatism. 3. Relating to or being the study of cause and effect in historical or political events with emphasis on the practical lessons to be learned from them. 4. Archaic. a. Active; busy. b. Active in an officious or meddlesome way. c. Dogmatic; dictatorial. — n. 1. A pragmatic sanction. 2. Archaic. A meddler; a busybody. [Latin prāgmaticus, skilled in business, from Greek pragmatikos, from pragma, pragmat-, deed, from prassein, to do.] — prag-mat'i-cal adj. — prag-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

prag-mat-ics (präg-măt'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Linguistics. The study of language as it is used in a social context and affects the interlocutors and their behavior.

pragmatic sanction (präg-măt'ik sāngk'shən) n. An edict or a decree issued by a sovereign that becomes part of the fundamental law of the land. [Translation of Late Latin pragmatica sanctiō, imperial decree referring to the affairs of a community : Latin pragmatica, relating to civil affairs + Latin sanctiō, ordinance.]

prag-ma-tism (präg'mə-tiz'əm) n. 1. Philosophy. A movement consisting of varying but associated theories, originally developed by Charles S. Peirce and William James and distinguished by the doctrine that the meaning of an idea or a proposition lies in its observable practical consequences. 2. A practical, matter-of-fact way of approaching or assessing situations or of solving problems.

— prag'ma-tist n. — prag'ma-tis'tic adj.

Prague (präg) The capital and largest city of Czech Republic, in the western part of the country on the Vltava River. Known since the 9th century, it was a leading cultural and commercial center by the 14th century and came under Hapsburg rule in 1526. In 1618 citizens of Prague expressed their dissatisfaction of Hapsburg rule by throwing several royal officials out of the windows of the Hradčany Castle in the so-called Defenestration of Prague. The city became the capital of newly formed Czechoslovakia in 1918. Population, 1,189,828.

pra-hu (prä'ō) n. Nautical. Variant of proa.

Prai-a (prī'ə) The capital of Cape Verde, on the southeast coast of São Tiago Island. Population, 37,480.

prairie (prâr'ē) n. An extensive area of flat or rolling, predominantly treeless grassland, especially the large tract or plain of central North America. [French, from Old French prairie, from Latin prāta, meadow.]

prairie chicken (prâr'ē chik'ən) n. Either of two birds (Tympanuchus cupido or T. pallidicinctus) of the grouse family, found in western North America and having deep-chested bodies and mottled brownish plumage.

prairie dog (prâr'ē dôg) n. Any of several burrowing rodents of the genus Cynomys in the squirrel family, having light brown fur and a warning call that sounds similar to a dog's bark. The prairie dog lives in large colonies, chiefly in the Great Plains of North America.

prairie falcon (prâr'ē fâl'kən) n. A large, square-headed falcon (Falco mexicanus) of western North America, having dark brown back feathers with pale edges and faintly spotted whitish underparts.

prairie oyster (prâr'ē oi'stər) n. 1. Slang. A drink made from a whole raw egg yolk, Worcestershire sauce, hot sauce, salt, and pepper that is taken as a palliative for a hangover or as a cure for hiccups. 2. Regional. The testis of a calf, cooked and served as food.

prairie potato (prâr'ē pə-tā'tō) n. See breadroot.

Prairie Provinces (prâr'ē pröv'in-siz) The Canadian provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.

prairie schooner (prâr'ē skōō'nər) n. A covered wagon, drawn by horses or oxen, that was used by pioneers in crossing the North American prairies and plains.

Prairie Village (prâr'ē vil'ij) A city of northeast Kansas, a suburb of Kansas City. Population, 23,186.

prairie wolf (prâr'ē wōōlf) n. See coyote (n., sense 1).

praise (prāz) n. 1. Expression of approval, commendation, or admiration.

2. The extolling or exaltation of a deity, ruler, or hero. 3. Archaic. A reason for praise; merit. — v. tr. praised, prais-ing, prais-es. 1. To express warm approbation of, commendation for, or admiration for. 2. To extol or exalt; worship. [Middle English preise, from preisen, to praise, from Old French preisier, from Late Latin pretiāre, to prize, from Latin pretium, price. See per-⁵ in Appendix.] — prais'er n.

SYNONYMS: praise, acclaim, commend, extol, laud. These verbs mean to express approval or admiration. To praise is to voice approbation, commendation, or esteem: "I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him" (Shakespeare). "She was enthusiastically praising the beauties of Gothic architecture" (Francis Marion Crawford). Acclaim usually implies hearty approbation warmly and publicly expressed: The restoration of the frescoes is being widely but not universally acclaimed by art historians. Commend suggests moderate or restrained approval, as that accorded by a superior: The judge commended the jury for their patience and hard work. To extol is to praise highly; the term suggests exaltation or glorification: “that sign of old age, extolling the past at the expense of the present” (Sydney Smith). Laud connotes respectful or lofty, often inordinate praise: “aspirations which are lauded up to the skies” (Charles Kingsley).

praise-wor-thy (prāz'wûr'thē) adj. praise-wor-thi-er, praise-wor-thi-est. Meriting praise; highly commendable. —praise'wor'thi-ly adv. —praise'-wor'thi-ness n.

Pra-ja-dhi-pok (prə-chä'tī-pök') See Rama VII.

Pra-krit (prä'krīt) n. 1. Any of the vernacular and literary Indic languages recorded from the third century B.C. to the fourth century A.D., as opposed to Sanskrit. 2. Any of the modern Indic languages. [Sanskrit prākṛtam, prākṛta-, natural, vulgar, vernacular : pra-, before, forward; see per¹ in Appendix + karoti, it makes; see SANSKRIT.] —Pra-krit'ic adj.

pra-line (prä'lēn', prā'-) n. A confection made of nut kernels, especially almonds or pecans, stirred in boiling sugar syrup until crisp and brown. [French, after César de Choiseul, Comte du Plessis-Praslin (1598-1675), French army officer.]

prall-tril-ler (präl'trīl'ər) n. Music. A trill consisting of alternation between a written note and the note immediately above it. Also called inverted mordent [German : prallen, to rebound (alteration of Middle High German prellen) + Triller, trill (from Italian trillo, from trillare, to trill, probably of imitative origin).]

pram¹ (präm) n. Chiefly British. A baby carriage. [Shortening and alteration of PERAMBULATOR.] pram² also praam (präm) n. 1. New England & Chiefly British. A small dinghy having a flat, snub-nosed bow. 2. Nautical. A flat-bottomed boat used chiefly in the Baltic Sea as a barge. [Dutch praam, flat-bottomed boat, from Middle Dutch praem, from Czech prám. See per¹ in Appendix.]

prance (präns) v. pranced, pranc-ing, pranc-es. — v. intr. 1. a. To spring forward on the hind legs. Used of a horse. b. To spring or bound forward in a manner reminiscent of a spirited horse. 2. To ride a horse moving in such a fashion. 3. To walk or move about in a spirited manner; strut. — v. tr. To cause (a horse) to prance. — n. The act or an instance of prancing. [Middle English prauncen.] —pranc'er n. —pranc'ing-ly adv.

pran-di-al (prän'dē-əl) adj. Of or relating to a meal. [From Latin prandium, late breakfast. See ed- in Appendix.] —pran'di-al-ly adv.

prang (präng) v. tr. pranged, prang-ing, prangs. Chiefly British. 1. To crash (an airplane, for example). 2. To damage by colliding with (a car, for example). 3. To bomb from the air. [Origin unknown.]

prank¹ (prǎngk) n. A mischievous trick or practical joke. [Origin unknown.]

prank² (prǎngk) v. pranked, prank-ing, pranks. — v. tr. To decorate or dress ostentatiously or gaudily. — v. intr. To make an ostentatious display. [From Middle English pranken, to show off, perhaps from Middle Dutch pronken (from pronk, show, display), and from Middle Low German prunken (from prank, display).]

prank-ish (prǎng'k'ish) adj. Given to or characterized by impishness or playfulness; mischievous. — prank'ish-ly adv. — prank'ish-ness n.

prank-ster (prǎngk'stər) n. One who plays tricks or pranks.

prase (prāz) n. A light green or light grayish-green variety of translucent chalcody. [French, from Latin prasius, from Greek prasios. See PRASEODYMIUM.]

pra-se-o-dym-i-um (prā'zē-ō-dīm'ē-əm, prā'sē-) n. Symbol Pr A soft, silvery, malleable, ductile rare-earth element that develops a characteristic green tarnish in air. It occurs naturally with other rare earths in monazite and is used to color glass and ceramics yellow, as a core material for carbon arcs, and in metallic alloys. Atomic number 59; atomic weight 140.907; melting point 935°C; boiling point 3,127°C; specific gravity 6.8; valence 3, 4. [New Latin : from Greek prasios, leek-green (from prason, leek) + (DI)DYMIUM.]

prat (prät) n. Slang. The buttocks. [Origin unknown.]

prate (prāt) v. prat-ed, prat-ing, prates. — v. intr. To talk idly and at length; chatter. — v. tr. To utter idly or to little purpose. — n. Empty, foolish, or trivial talk; idle chatter. [Middle English praten, from Middle Dutch prāten.] — prat'er n. — prat'ing-ly adv.

prat-fall (prät'fôl') n. 1. A fall on the buttocks. 2. A humiliating error, failure, or defeat: “His characters not only survive their snarled problems and pratfalls but learn from their experiences” (Joyce Carol Oates).

prat-in-cole (prät'n-kôl', prät'-, prät'ing-, prät'ting-) n. Any of several Old World shore birds of the genus Glareola, having brown and black plumage, long pointed wings, a forked tail, and a tapered bill. [New Latin prātincola : Latin prātum, meadow + Latin incola, inhabitant; see k^wel-1 in Appendix.]

pra-tique (pră-tēk') n. Nautical. Clearance granted to a ship to proceed into port after compliance with health regulations or quarantine. [French, from Old French practique, from Medieval Latin prāctica, ultimately from Greek praktikē, from feminine of praktikos, practical. See PRACTICAL.]

Pra-to (pră'tō) A city of central Italy northwest of Florence. It has been a textile center since the 13th century. Population, 158,797.

Pratt (prät), Edwin John. 1883-1964. Canadian poet whose works often concern the sea or the building of the Canadian transcontinental railroad.

prat-tle (prät'l) v. prat-tled, prat-tling, prat-tles. — v. intr. To talk or chatter idly or meaninglessly; babble or prate. — v. tr. To utter or express by chattering foolishly or babbling. — n. 1. Idle or meaningless chatter; babble.

2. A sound suggestive of such chattering; a babbling noise. [Frequentative of PRATE.] —prat'tler n. —prat'tling-ly adv.

Pratt-ville (prät'vil', -vəl) A city of central Alabama, an industrial suburb of Montgomery. Population, 19,587.

prau (prou) n. Nautical. Variant of proa.

prawn (prôn) n. Any of various edible crustaceans similar to but larger than the shrimps. — v. intr. prawned, prawn-ing, prawns. To fish for prawns.

[Middle English praine, prane.] —prawn'er n.

prax·e·ol·o·gy also prax·i·ol·o·gy (präk'sē-öl'ə-jē) n. The study of human conduct. [PRAX(IS) + -LOGY.] —prax'e·o·log'i·cal adj.

prax·is (präk'sis) n. pl. prax·es (präk'sēz'). 1. Practical application or exercise of a branch of learning. 2. Habitual or established practice; custom. [Medieval Latin prāxis, from Greek praxis, from prassein, to do.]

Prax·it·e·les (präk'sit'1-ēz'), fl. fourth century B.C. Greek sculptor whose few surviving works include Hermes Carrying Dionysius, discovered at Olympia (1877).

pray (prā) v. prayed, pray-ing, prays. — v. intr. 1. To utter or address a prayer or prayers to God, a god, or another object of worship. 2. To make a fervent request or an entreaty. — v. tr. 1. To utter or say a prayer or prayers to; address by prayer. 2. To ask (someone) imploringly; beseech. Now often used elliptically for I pray you to introduce a request or an entreaty: Pray be careful. 3. To make a devout or earnest request for: I pray your permission to speak. 4. To move or bring by prayer or entreaty. [Middle English preien, from Old French preier, from Latin precārī, from prex*, prayer. See prek- in Appendix.]

prayer¹ (prâr) n. 1. a. A reverent petition made to God, a god, or another object of worship. b. The act of making a reverent petition to God, a god, or another object of worship. 2. An act of communion with God, a god, or another object of worship, such as in devotion, confession, praise, or thanksgiving: One evening a week, the family would join together in prayer. 3. A specially worded form used to address God, a god, or another object of worship. 4. prayers. A religious observance in which praying predominates: morning prayers. 5. a. A fervent request: Her prayer for rain was granted at last. b. The thing requested: His safe arrival was their only prayer. 6. The slightest chance or hope: In a storm the mountain climbers won't have a prayer. 7. Law. a. The request of a complainant, as stated in a complaint or in equity, that the court grant the aid or relief solicited. b. The section of the complaint or bill that contains this request.

[Middle English preiere, from Old French, from Medieval Latin precāria, from feminine of Latin precārius, obtained by entreaty, from precārī, to entreat, from prex*, prayer. See prek- in Appendix.]

pray·er² (prā'ər) n. One who prays.

prayer beads (prâr bēdz) pl.n. A string of beads for keeping count of the prayers one is saying; a rosary.

prayer book (prâr böök) n. Abbr. P.B. 1. A book containing religious prayers.

2. Prayer Book. The Book of Common Prayer.

prayer-ful (prâr'fəl) adj. 1. Inclined or given to praying frequently; devout.

2. Typical or indicative of prayer, as a mannerism, gesture, or facial expression.

—prayer'ful-ly adv. —prayer'ful-ness n.

prayer meeting (prâr mē'ting) n. An evangelical service, especially one held on a weekday evening, in which the laypersons participate by singing, praying, or testifying their faith.

prayer rug (prâr rüg) n. A small rug used by Muslims to kneel and prostrate themselves upon during devotions.

prayer shawl (prâr shôl) n. Judaism. See tallith.

prayer wheel (prâr hwēl) n. A cylinder containing or inscribed with prayers or litanies that is revolved on its axis in devotions, especially by Tibetan Buddhists.

pray-ing mantis (prā'ing măn'tis) n. A green or brownish predatory insect (Mantis religiosa) that while at rest folds its front legs as if in prayer.

pra-zo-sin (prā'zō-sin) n. A crystalline vasodilator, C₁₉H₂₁N₅O₄, used in the form of its hydrochloride to treat hypertension. [By shortening and rearrangement of the chemical name aminodimethoxyquinazolinylfuranylcarbonylpiperazine.] pre- pref. 1. a. Earlier; before; prior to: prehistoric. b. Preparatory; preliminary: premedical. c. In advance: prepay. 2. Anterior; in front of: preaxial. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prae-, from prae, before, in front. See per¹ in Appendix.]

preach (prēch) v. preached, preach-ing, preach-es. — v. tr. 1. To proclaim or put forth in a sermon: preached the gospel. 2. To advocate, especially to urge acceptance of or compliance with: preached tolerance and peaceful coexistence. 3. To deliver (a sermon). — v. intr. 1. To deliver a sermon. 2. To give religious or moral instruction, especially in a tedious manner. [Middle English prechen, from Old French preechier, from Late Latin praedicāre, from Latin, to proclaim : prae-, pre- + dicāre, to proclaim; see deik- in Appendix.]

—preach'ing-ly adv.

preach-er (prē'chər) n. 1. One who preaches, especially one who publicly proclaims the gospel for an occupation. 2. Alaska. A fallen tree or log submerged in a river and creating a hazard for boats.

REGIONAL NOTE: River navigation in America has its own lexicon, including words for hazards encountered in riverboat travel. Large uprooted trees that had drifted down the river and become stuck in the riverbed were sometimes known by their peculiar and dangerous characteristics. John McPhee writes for the New Yorker: “One kind... known as a sawyer, sawed up and down with the vagaries of the current... In the Yukon River, such logs—eternally bowing—are known as preachers. In the Mississippi... they were all snags.”

preach·i·fy (prē'chə-fī') v. intr. preach·i·fied, preach·i·fy·ing, preach·i·fies. Informal. To preach tediously and didactically.

—preach'·i·fi·ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

preach·ment (prēch'mənt) n. 1. The act of preaching. 2. A tiresome or unwelcome moral lecture or discourse; tedious sermonizing.

preach·y (prē'chē) adj. preach·i·er, preach·i·est. Inclined or given to tedious and excessive moralizing; didactic. —preach'·i·ly adv. —preach'·i·ness n.

pre·ad·ap·ta·tion (prē'äd-äp-tā'shən, -əp-) n. A characteristic evolved by an ancestral species or population that serves an adaptive though different function in a descendant species or population.

pre·ad·o·les·cence (prē'äd-l-ēs'əns) n. The period between childhood and the onset of puberty, often designated as between the ages of 10 and 12 in girls and 11 and 13 in boys. —pre'ad·o·les'cent adj. & n.

pre·a·dult (prē'ə-dült') adj. Of or relating to the period preceding adulthood or the adult stage of the life cycle: preadult anxieties; the preadult morph.

pre·ag·ri·cul·tur·al (prē'äg-rī-kül'chər-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or being a society or population before the advent of agriculture as a means of subsistence.

pre·am·ble (prē'äm'bəl, prē-äm'-) n. 1. A preliminary statement, especially the introduction to a formal document that serves to explain its purpose. 2. An introductory occurrence or fact; a preliminary. [Middle English, from Old French preambule, from Medieval Latin preambulum, from neuter of praeambulus, walking in front : prae-, pre- + ambulāre, to walk; see AMBULATE.]

—pre·am'bu·lar'y (-byə-lēr'ē) adj.

pre·amp (prē'ämp) n. Informal. A preamplifier.

pre·am·pli·fi·er (prē-äm'plə-fī'ər) n. An electronic circuit or device that detects and strengthens weak signals, as from a radio receiver, for subsequent, more powerful amplification stages.

pre·ar·range (prē'ə-rānj') v. tr. pre·ar·ranged, pre·ar·rang·ing, pre·ar·rang·es. To arrange in advance. —pre'ar·range'ment n.

pre·a·tom·ic (prē'ə-tōm'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or being the time preceding the use of, existence of, or capability for atomic energy or weapons.

pre·ax·i·al (prē-äk'sē-əl) adj. Anatomy. Situated in front of or superior to the median axis of the body or a body part. —pre·ax'i·al·ly adv.

preb·end (prēb'ənd) n. 1. A stipend drawn from the endowment or revenues of an Anglican cathedral or church by a presiding member of the clergy; a cathedral or church benefice. 2. The property or tithe providing the endowment for such a stipend. 3. A prebendary. [Middle English prebende, from Old French, from Medieval Latin praebenda, from Late Latin, state allowance, from Latin, neuter pl. gerundive of praebēre, to grant, from praehibēre: prae-, pre- + habēre, to hold; see ghabh- in Appendix.] —pre-ben'dal (prĭ-bĕn'dl, prĕb'ən-dəl) adj.

preb-en-dar-y (prĕb'ən-dĕr'ē) n. pl. preb-en-dar-ies. 1. An Anglican cleric holding the honorary title of prebend without a stipend. 2. A member of the Anglican clergy who is the holder of a cathedral or church benefice; a prebend.

pre-bi-o-log-i-cal (prĕ'bĭ-ə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or being the time before the appearance of living things: prebiological organic chemicals.

—pre'bi-ol'o-gist (-ŏl'ə-jĭst) n. —pre'bi-ol'o-gy n.

pre-bi-ot-ic (prĕ'bĭ-ŏt'ĭk) adj. Prebiological.

Preb-le (prĕb'əl), Edward. 1761-1807. American naval officer who commanded a squadron (1803-1804) in the Tripolitan War and ordered the blockade of Tripoli.

pre-built (prĕ'bĭlt') adj. Of, relating to, or constituting a structure or a portion of a structure that is constructed or assembled before being transported to its site of installation; prefabricated: a prebuilt home.

prec. abbr. Preceding.

pre-cal-cu-lus (prĕ-kāl'kyə-ləs) n. Mathematics. A course of study taken as a prerequisite for the study of calculus. —pre-cal'cu-lus adj.

Pre-cam-bri-an (prĕ-kām'brĕ-ən) adj. Of, belonging to, or being the largest division of geologic time, preceding the Cambrian Period, often subdivided into the Archeozoic and Proterozoic eras, and characterized by the appearance of primitive forms of life. — n. The Precambrian Era.

pre-can-cel (prĕ-kăn'səl) v. tr. pre-can-celed or pre-can-celled, pre-can-cel-ing or pre-can-cel-ling, pre-can-cels or pre-can-cels. To cancel (a postage stamp, as on an envelope) before mailing. — n. A precanceled stamp or envelope. —pre'can-cel-la'tion n.

pre-can-cer (prĕ'kăn'sər) n. A precancerous condition.

pre-can-cer-ous (prĕ-kăn'sər-əs) adj. Of, relating to, or being a condition that typically precedes or develops into a cancer: a precancerous growth.

pre-car-i-ous (prĭ-kâr'ē-əs) adj. 1. Dangerously lacking in security or stability: a precarious posture; precarious footing on the ladder. 2. Subject to chance or unknown conditions: "His kingdom was still precarious; the Danes far from subdued" (Christopher Brooke). 3. Based on uncertain, unwarranted, or unproved premises: a precarious solution to a difficult problem. 4. Archaic. Dependent on the will or favor of another. [From Latin precārius, obtained by entreaty, uncertain, from precārī, to entreat, from prex*, prayer. See prek- in Appendix.]

—pre-car'i-ous-ly adv. —pre-car'i-ous-ness n.

pre-cast (prē-kāst') adj. Relating to or being a structural member, especially of concrete, that has been cast into form before being transported to its site of installation. — pre-cast' v.

pre-a-to-ry (prĕk'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) also pre-a-tive (-tīv) adj. Relating to or expressing entreaty or supplication. [Late Latin precātōrius, from Latin precārī, to entreat. See PRECARIOUS.]

pre-cau-tion (prī-kō'shən) n. 1. An action taken in advance to protect against possible danger or failure; a safeguard: He took every precaution but still got a bad deal on that used car. 2. Caution practiced in advance; forethought or circumspection: Precaution was impossible in those dire circumstances. [Late Latin praecautiō, praecautiōn-, from praecautus, past participle of Latin praecavēre, to guard against : prae-, pre- + cavēre, to beware.]

pre-cau-tion-ar-y (prī-kō'shə-nēr'ē) also pre-cau-tion-al (-shə-nəl) adj. Of, relating to, or constituting a precaution: taking precautionary measures; gave precautionary advice.

pre-ca-va (prē-kā'və, -kā'-) n. pl. pre-ca-vae (-vē). The superior vena cava. [PRE- + (VENA) CAVA.] — pre-ca'val adj.

pre-cede (prī-sēd') v. pre-ced-ed, pre-ced-ing, pre-cedes. — v. tr. 1. To come, exist, or occur before in time. 2. To come before in order or rank; surpass or outrank. 3. To be in a position in front of; go in advance of. 4. To preface; introduce: He preceded his lecture with a humorous anecdote. — v. intr. To come or go before in time, order, rank, or position. [Middle English preceden, from Old French preceder, from Latin praecēdere : prae-, pre- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

pre-ced-ence (prĕs'ī-dəns, prī-sēd'ns) also pre-ced-ent-ry (prĕs'ī-dən-sē, prī-sēd'n-sē) n. 1. The fact, state, or right of preceding; priority: Those applications arriving first will receive precedence. 2. Priority claimed or received because of preeminence or superiority: Our company will continue to assert its precedence as the world's leading manufacturer of pharmaceuticals. 3. A ceremonial order of rank or preference, especially as observed on formal occasions: Recipients of military honors were called in order of precedence—highest ranking officers first.

pre-ced-ent (prĕs'ī-dənt) n. 1. a. An act or instance that may be used as an example in dealing with subsequent similar instances. b. Law. A judicial decision that may be used as a standard in subsequent similar cases: a landmark decision that set a legal precedent. 2. Convention or custom arising from long practice: The President followed historical precedent in forming the Cabinet. — adj. (prī-sēd'nt, prĕs'ī-dənt) Preceding. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praecēdēns, praecēdent- present participle of praecēdere, to go before. See PRECEDE.]

pre-ced-ent-ial (prĕs'ī-dĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or constituting a precedent. 2. Having precedence.

pre-ced-ing (prī-sē'dīŋ) adj. Abbr. prec. Existing or coming before another or others in time, place, rank, or sequence; previous.

pre-cen-tor (prī-sēn'tər) n. A cleric who directs the choral services of a church or cathedral. [Latin praecentor, from praecentus, past participle of praecinere, to sing before : prae-, pre- + canere, to sing; see kan- in Appendix.]

—pre'cen-to'ri-al (prē'sēn-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj.

pre-cept (prē'sēpt') n. 1. A rule or principle prescribing a particular course of action or conduct. 2. Law. An authorized direction or order; a writ. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praeceptum, from neuter past participle of praecipere, to advise, teach : prae-, pre- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.]

pre-cep-tive (prī-sēp'tiv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or expressing a rule or principle that prescribes a particular course of action or conduct. 2. Instructive; didactic. —pre-cep'tive-ly adv.

pre-cep-tor (prī-sēp'tər, prē'sēp'tər) n. 1. A teacher; an instructor. 2. An expert or a specialist, such as a physician, who gives practical experience and training to a student, especially of medicine or nursing. 3. The head of a preceptory. [Middle English, from Latin praceptor, from praecipere, to teach. See PRECEPT.]

—pre'cep-to'ri-al (prē'sēp-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. —pre'cep-to'ri-al-ly adv.

pre-cep-tor-ship (prī-sēp'tər-shīp') n. A period of practical experience and training for a student, especially of medicine or nursing, that is supervised by an expert or a specialist in a particular field.

pre-cep-to-ry (prī-sēp'tə-rē, prē'sēp-) n. pl. pre-cep-to-ries. A community of medieval Knights Templars located on a provincial estate and subordinate to the main temples at Paris and London.

pre-cess (prē-sēs', prē'sēs') v. intr. pre-cessed, pre-cess-ing, pre-cess-es.

Physics & Astronomy. To move in or be subjected to precession. [Back-formation from PRECESSION.]

pre-ces-sion (prē-sēs'hən) n. 1. The act or state of preceding; precedence.

2. Physics. The motion of the axis of a spinning body, such as the wobble of a spinning top, when there is an external force acting on the axis. 3. Astronomy.

a. Precession of the equinoxes. b. A slow gyration of Earth's axis around the pole of the ecliptic, caused mainly by the gravitational pull of the sun, moon, and other planets on Earth's equatorial bulge. [Late Latin praecessiō, praecessiōn-, from Latin praecessus, past participle of praecēdere, to go before. See PRECEDE.]

—pre-ces'sion-al adj.

precession of the equinoxes (prē-sēs'hən ÷v thē ē'kwə-nōk'sīz) n.

Astronomy. A slow westward shift of the equinoxes along the plane of the ecliptic, resulting from precession of Earth's axis of rotation, and causing the equinoxes to occur earlier each sidereal year. The precession of the equinoxes occurs at a rate of 50.27 seconds of arc a year; a complete precession requires 25,800 years.

pre-Chris-tian (prē-krisʹchən) adj. Of, relating to, or being the time before the beginning of the Christian era.

pre-cinct (prēʹsɪŋktʹ) n. 1. a. A subdivision or district of a city or town under the jurisdiction of or patrolled by a specific unit of its police force. b. The police station situated in and having jurisdiction over such a district. 2. An election district of a city or town. 3. Often precincts. a. A place or an enclosure marked off by definite limits, such as walls: the mysterious precincts of the old monastery. b. A boundary: Hunting is not allowed within the precincts of the estate.

4. precincts. The neighborhood or surrounding area; the environs.

5. precincts. An area of thought or action; a province or domain: “It was in these spacious precincts that Dryden’s imagination was most at home” (Mark Van Doren). [Middle English precincte, a defined district or area, from Medieval Latin praecinctum, from Latin, neuter past participle of praecingere, to encircle : prae-, pre- + cingere, to gird; see kenk- in Appendix.]

pre-ci-os-i-ty (prëshʹē-ösʹi-tē, prəsʹ-) n. pl. pre-ci-os-i-ties. 1. Extreme meticulousness or overrefinement, as in language, taste, or style. 2. An instance of extreme meticulousness or overrefinement. [Middle English preciousite, preciousness, from Old French preciosite, from Latin pretiōsītās, from pretiōsus, precious, from pretium, price. See PRECIOUS.]

pre-cious (prëshʹəs) adj. 1. Of high cost or worth; valuable. 2. Highly esteemed; cherished. See Synonyms at costly. 3. Dear; beloved. 4. Affectedly dainty or overrefined: precious mannerisms. 5. Informal. Thoroughgoing; unmitigated: a precious mess. — n. One who is dear or beloved; a darling. — adv. Used as an intensive: “He had precious little right to complain” (James Agee). [Middle English, from Old French precios, from Latin pretiōsus, from pretium, price. See per⁵ in Appendix.] —preʹcious-ly adv. —preʹcious-ness n.

precious stone (prëshʹəs stōn) n. Any of several gems, including the diamond, emerald, ruby, and sapphire, that have high economic value because of their rarity or appearance.

prec-i-pice (prëshʹə-pīs) n. 1. An overhanging or extremely steep mass of rock, such as a crag or the face of a cliff. 2. The brink of a dangerous or disastrous situation: on the precipice of defeat. [French précipice, from Latin praecipitium, from praeceps, praecipit-, headlong. See PRECIPITATE.]

pre-cip-i-ta-ble (prī-sĭpʹi-tə-bəl) adj. Chemistry. Capable of being precipitated.

pre-cip-i-tan-cy (prī-sĭpʹi-tən-sē) also pre-cip-i-tance (-təns) n. 1. The quality of being precipitant. 2. Action or thought marked by impulsiveness or rash haste.

pre-cip-i-tant (prī-sĭpʹi-tənt) adj. 1. Rushing or falling headlong. 2. Acting with or marked by impulsiveness in thought or action; rash. See Usage Note at precipitate. 3. Abrupt or unexpected; sudden. — n. Chemistry. A substance that causes a precipitate to form when it is added to a solution. [Latin praecipitāns, praecipitant- present participle of praecipitāre, to throw headlong. See PRECIPITATE.] —pre-cip'i-tant-ly adv.

pre-cip-i-tate (prĭ-sĭp'ĭ-tāt') v. pre-cip-i-tat-ed, pre-cip-i-tat-ing, pre-cip-i-tates. — v. tr. 1. To throw from or as if from a great height; hurl downward: “The finest bridge in all Peru broke and precipitated five travelers into the gulf below” (Thornton Wilder). 2. To cause to happen, especially suddenly or prematurely. See Synonyms at speed. 3. Meteorology. To cause (water vapor) to condense and fall from the air as rain, snow, sleet, or hail. 4. Chemistry. To cause (a solid substance) to be separated from a solution. — v. intr. 1. Meteorology. To condense and fall from the air as rain, snow, sleet, or hail. 2. Chemistry. To be separated from a solution as a solid. 3. To fall or be thrown headlong: An already ailing economy precipitated into ruin despite foreign intervention. — adj. (-tĭt) 1. Moving rapidly and heedlessly; speeding headlong. 2. Acting with or marked by excessive haste and lack of due deliberation. See Synonyms at impetuous. See Synonyms at reckless. 3. Occurring suddenly or unexpectedly. — n. (-tāt', -tĭt) Abbr. ppt, ppt. 1. Chemistry. A solid or solid phase separated from a solution. 2. A product resulting from a process, an event, or a course of action. [Latin praecipitāre, praecipitāt-, to throw headlong, from praiceps, praecipit-, headlong : prae-, pre- + caput, capit-, head; see kaput- in Appendix.] —pre-cip'i-tate-ly (-tĭt-lē) adv. —pre-cip'i-tate-ness n. —pre-cip'i-ta'tive adj. —pre-cip'i-ta'tor n.

USAGE NOTE: The adjective precipitate and the adverb precipitately were once applied to physical steepness but are now used primarily of rash, headlong actions: They made a precipitate decision. He withdrew precipitately from the race. Precipitous currently means “steep” in both literal and figurative senses: the precipitous rapids of the upper river; a precipitous drop in commodity prices. But precipitous and precipitously are also frequently used to mean “abrupt, hasty,” which takes them into territory that would ordinarily belong to precipitate and precipitately: their precipitous decision to leave. This usage is a natural extension of the use of precipitous to describe a rise or fall in a quantity over time: a precipitous increase in reports of measles is also an abrupt or sudden event. Though this extended use of precipitous is well attested in the work of reputable writers, it is still widely regarded as an error.

pre-cip-i-ta-tion (prĭ-sĭp'ĭ-tā'shən) n. 1. A headlong fall or rush. 2. Abrupt or impulsive haste. 3. A hastening or an acceleration, especially one that is sudden or unexpected: He is responsible for the precipitation of his own demise. 4. Abbr. pptn. Meteorology. a. Any form of water, such as rain, snow, sleet, or hail, that falls to the earth's surface. b. The quantity of such water falling in a specific area within a specific period. 5. Chemistry. The process of separating a substance from a solution as a solid.

pre-cip-i-tin (prī-sĭp'ĭ-tĭn) n. An antibody that reacts with a specific soluble antigen to produce a precipitate. [PRECIPIT(ATE) + -IN.]

pre-cip-i-tin-o-gen (prī-sĭp'ĭ-tĭn'ə-jən) n. An antigen that induces the production of a precipitin.

pre-cip-i-tous (prī-sĭp'ĭ-təs) adj. 1. Resembling a precipice; extremely steep. See Synonyms at steep¹. 2. Having several precipices: a precipitous bluff.

3. Usage Problem. Extremely rapid, hasty, or abrupt; precipitate: “The change has included a precipitous collapse of Communist authority” (New York Times). See Usage Note at precipitate. [Probably from precipitous, from Latin praecipitium, precipice. See PRECIPICE.]

—pre-cip'i-tous-ly adv. —pre-cip'i-tous-ness n.

pré-cis (prā'sē, prā-sē') n. pl. pré-cis (prā'sēz, prā-sēz'). A concise summary of a book, an article, or another text; an abstract. — v. tr. pré-cised, pré-cis-ing, pré-cis-es. To make a précis of. [French, from Old French precis, condensed. See PRECISE.]

pre-cise (prī-sīs') adj. 1. Clearly expressed or delineated; definite: The victim was able to give a precise description of the suspect. 2. Exact, as in performance, execution, or amount; accurate or correct: a precise measurement; a precise instrument. 3. Strictly distinguished from others; very: at that precise moment.

4. Distinct and correct in sound or meaning: precise pronunciation; precise prose.

5. Conforming strictly to rule or proper form: “The setting up of this Maypole was a lamentable spectacle to the precise separatists that lived at New Plymouth” (Thomas Morton). [Middle English, exact, from Old French precis, condensed, precisely fixed, from Latin praecĭsus, past participle of praecĭdere, to shorten : prae-, pre- + caedere, to cut; see kaə-id- in Appendix.] —pre-cise'ness n.

pre-cise-ly (prī-sīs'/lē) adv. 1. In a precise manner. 2. Used as an intensive: Inferior equipment was precisely the reason some hikers refused to continue the climb.

pre-ci-sian (prī-sĭzh'ən) n. 1. One who is strict and precise in adherence to established rules, forms, or standards, especially with regard to religious observance or moral behavior. 2. A Puritan. [From PRECISE.] —pre-ci'sian-ism n.

pre-ci-sion (prī-sĭzh'ən) n. 1. The state or quality of being precise; exactness. 2. Mathematics. The exactness with which a number is specified; the number of significant digits with which a number is expressed. — adj. 1. Used or intended for accurate or exact measurement: a precision tool. 2. Made so as to vary minimally from a set standard: precision components. 3. Of or characterized by accurate action: precision bombing. [Latin praecĭsiō, praecĭsiōn-, a cutting off, from praecĭsus, past participle of praecĭdere, to cut off. See PRECISE.]

pre-ci-sion-ism also Pre-ci-sion-ism (prī-sīzh'ə-nīz'əm) n. A style of early 20th-century painting in which depicted scenes or objects are reduced or simplified to elemental structural forms and rendered by a combination of abstractionism and realism.

pre-ci-sion-ist (prī-sīzh'ə-nīst) n. 1. One who values precision; a purist. 2. Often Precisionist. A painter whose work is marked by precisionism.

pre-clin-i-cal (prē-klīn'ī-kəl) adj. Of or relating to the period of a disease before the appearance of symptoms.

pre-clude (prī-klōōd') v. tr. pre-clud-ed, pre-clud-ing, pre-cludes. 1. To make impossible, as by action taken in advance; prevent. See Synonyms at pre-vent. 2. To exclude or prevent (someone) from a given condition or activity: Modesty precludes me from accepting the honor. [Latin praeclūdere: prae-, pre- + claudere, to close.] —pre-clu'sion (-klōō'zhən) n. —pre-clu'sive (-klōō'siv, -zīv) adj. —pre-clu'sive-ly adv.

pre-co-cial (prī-kō'shəl) adj. Covered with down and capable of moving about when hatched. Used of wading birds and domestic fowl. [From New Latin Praecocēs, precocial birds, from Latin, pl. of praecox, premature. See PRECOCIOUS.]

pre-co-cious (prī-kō'shəs) adj. 1. Manifesting or characterized by unusually early development or maturity, especially in mental aptitude. 2. Botany. Blossoming before the appearance of leaves. [From Latin praecox, praecoc-, premature, from praecoquere, to boil before, ripen fully: prae-, pre- + coquere, to cook, ripen; see pek^W- in Appendix.] —pre-co'cious-ly adv. —pre-coc'ity (-kōs'ītē), pre-co'cious-ness n.

pre-cog-ni-tion (prē'kōg-nīsh'ən) n. Knowledge of something in advance of its occurrence, especially by extrasensory perception; clairvoyance. —pre-cog'ni-tive adj.

pre-co-lo-ni-al or pre-co-lo-ni-al (prē'kə-lō'nē-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or being the period of time before colonization of a region or territory.

pre-Co-lum-bi-an (prē'kə-lūm'bē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or originating in the Americas before the arrival of Columbus: pre-Columbian art.

pre-con-ceive (prē'kən-sēv') v. tr. pre-con-ceived, pre-con-ceive-ing, pre-con-ceives. To form (an opinion, for example) before possessing full or adequate knowledge or experience.

pre-con-cep-tion (prē'kən-sēp'shən) n. An opinion or a conception formed in advance of full or adequate knowledge or experience; a prejudice or bias: "His vision, unobstructed by ideological preconception, was continually reformed by experience" (Doris Kearns Goodwin).

pre-con-cert (prē'kən-sûrt') v. tr. pre-con-cert-ed, pre-con-cert-ing, pre-con-certs. To agree on, settle, or arrange in advance.

pre-con-di-tion (prē'kən-dīsh'ən) n. A condition that must exist or be established before something can occur or be considered; a prerequisite. — v. tr.

pre-con-di-tioned, pre-con-di-tion-ing, pre-con-di-tions. To condition, train, or accustom in advance.

pre-con-scious (prē-kōn'shəs) n. The memories or feelings that are not part of one's immediate awareness but that can be recalled through conscious effort. —pre-con'scious adj. —pre-con'scious-ly adv.

pre-con-tract (prē-kōn'trākt) n. An existing contract that obviates the making of another contract of the same kind: a precontract of marriage. —pre'-con-tract' (-kən-trākt') v.

pre-cook (prē-kōök') v. tr. pre-cooked, pre-cook-ing, pre-cooks. To cook in advance or partially.

pre-cool (prē-kōōl') v. tr. pre-cooled, pre-cool-ing, pre-cools. To reduce the temperature of (produce or meat, for example) by artificial means before packaging or shipping.

pre-crit-i-cal (prē-krīt'ī-kəl) adj. Coming before a critical state or phase.

pre-cur-sive (prī-kûr'siv) adj. Precursory.

pre-cur-sor (prī-kûr'sər, prē'kûr'sər) n. 1. One that precedes and indicates, suggests, or announces someone or something to come: Opposition by colonists to unfair taxation by the British was a precursor of the Revolution. 2. One that precedes another; a forerunner or predecessor: Her precursor as school principal was an eminent educator. 3. A biochemical substance, such as an intermediate compound in a chain of enzymatic reactions, that gives rise to a more stable or definitive product: a precursor of insulin. [Middle English precursoure, from Old French precurseur, from Latin praecursor, from praecursus, past participle of praecurrere, to run before : prae-, pre- + currere, to run; see kers- in Appendix.]

pre-cur-so-ry (prī-kûr'sə-rē) adj. 1. Preceding or preliminary; introductory: a precursory statement. 2. Suggesting or indicating something to follow.

pre-cut (prē'küt') adj. Cut into size or shape before being marketed, assembled, or used: precut fillet of fish; precut construction materials. — v. tr. pre-cut, pre-cut-ting, pre-cuts (prē-küt'). To cut into size or shape before marketing, assembling, or using.

pred. abbr. Grammar & Logic. Predicate.

pre-da-cious also pre-da-ceous (prī-dā'shəs) adj. 1. Living by seizing or taking prey; predatory. 2. Given to victimizing, plundering, or destroying for one's own gain: "the most vicious, predacious, esurient and desperate elements of this society" (Claude Brown). [From Latin praedārī, to plunder. See PREDATORY.] —pre-da'cious-ness, pre-da'ceous-ness, pre-dac'i-ty (-dās'ī-tē) n.

pre-date (prē-dāt') v. tr. pre-dat-ed, pre-dat-ing, pre-dates. 1. To mark or designate with a date earlier than the actual one: predated the check. 2. To precede in time; antedate.

pre-da-tion (prī-dā'shən) n. 1. The act or practice of plundering or marauding. 2. The capturing of prey as a means of maintaining life. [Middle English predacion, from Latin praedātiō, praedātiōn-, from praedātus, past participle of praedārī, to plunder. See PREDATORY.]

pred·a·tor (prĕd'ə-tər, -tôr') n. 1. An organism that lives by preying on other organisms. 2. One that victimizes, plunders, or destroys, especially for one's own gain. [Latin praedātor, pillager, from praedārī, to plunder. See PREDATORY.]

pred·a·to·ry (prĕd'ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Living by preying on other organisms: a predatory bird; a predatory mammal; a predatory insect. 2. a. Of, relating to, or characterized by plundering, pillaging, or marauding. b. Living by or given to victimizing or destroying others for one's own gain. [Latin praedātōrius, plundering, from praedārī, to plunder, from praeda, booty. See ghend- in Appendix.]

—pred'a-to'ri-ly adv. —pred'a-to'ri-ness n.

pre-dawn (prĕ'dôn') n. The time just before dawn. —pre'dawn' adj.

pre-de-cease (prĕ'dī-sēs') v. tr. pre-de-ceased, pre-de-ceas-ing, pre-de-ceas-es. To die before (another person).

pre-de-ces-sor (prĕd'ī-sēs'ər, prĕ'dī-) n. 1. One who precedes another in time, especially in holding an office or a position. 2. Something that has been succeeded by another: The new building is more spacious than its predecessor. 3. Archaic. An ancestor; a forebear. [Middle English predecessoure, from Old French predecesseur, from Late Latin praedecessor: Latin prae-, pre- + Latin dēcessor, a retiring magistrate (from dēcessus, past participle of dēcēdere, to depart : dē-, away; see de- + cēdere, to go); see ked- in Appendix.]

pre-des-ig-nate (prĕ-dĕz'īg-nāt') v. tr. pre-des-ig-nat-ed, pre-des-ig-nat-ing, pre-des-ig-nates. To designate in advance. —pre'des-ig-na'tion n.

pre-des-ti-nar-i-an (prĕ-dĕs'tə-nâr'ē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to predestination. 2. Believing in or based on the doctrine of predestination. — n. One who believes in the doctrine of predestination. —pre-des'ti-nar'i-an-ism n.

pre-des-ti-nate (prĕ-dĕs'tə-nāt') v. tr. pre-des-ti-nat-ed, pre-des-ti-nat-ing, pre-des-ti-nates. 1. Theology. To predestine. 2. Archaic. To destine or determine in advance; foreordain. — adj. (-nĭt, -nāt') Foreordained; predestined. [Middle English predestinaten, from Late Latin praedēstināre, praedēstināt-. See PREDESTINE.]

pre-des-ti-na-tion (prĕ-dĕs'tə-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of predestining or the condition of being predestined. 2. Theology. a. The doctrine that God has foreordained all things, especially that God has elected certain souls to eternal salvation. b. The divine decree foreordaining all souls to either salvation or damnation. c. The act of God foreordaining all things gone before and to come. 3. Destiny; fate.

pre-des-tine (prĕ-dĕs'tĭn) v. tr. pre-des-tined, pre-des-tin-ing, pre-des-tines. 1. To fix upon, decide, or decree in advance; foreordain. 2. Theology. To foreordain or elect by divine will or decree. [Middle English pre- destinen, from Old French predestiner, from Late Latin praedēstināre : Latin prae-, pre- + Latin dēstināre, to determine; see DESTINE.]

pre-de-ter-mine (prē'dī-tûr'mĭn) v. pre-de-ter-mined, pre-de-ter-min-ing, pre-de-ter-mines. — v. tr. 1. To determine, decide, or establish in advance: “These factors predetermine to a large extent the outcome” (Jessica Mitford). 2. To influence or sway toward an action or opinion; predispose. — v. intr. To determine or decide something in advance.

—pre'de-ter'mi-nate (-mə-nĭt) adj. —pre'de-ter'mi-na'tion n.

pre-de-ter-min-er (prē'dī-tûr'mə-nər) n. Linguistics. An adjectival word that can stand before an article, a possessive pronoun, or another determiner, as all in all the flowers or both in both his children.

pre-di-a-be-tes (prē'dī-ə-bē'tĭs, -tēz) n. The condition of having a hereditary tendency or high probability for developing diabetes mellitus, although neither symptoms nor test results confirm the presence of the disease.

—pre-di'a-bet'ic (-bēt'ĭk) adj. & n.

pre-di-al (prē'dē-əl) adj. Variant of praedial.

pred-i-ca-ble (prĕd'ĭ-kə-bəl) adj. That can be stated or predicated: a predicable conclusion. — n. 1. Something, such as a general quality or attribute, that can be predicated. 2. Logic. One of five general attributes of a subject or class, traditionally including genus, species, property, differentia, and accident. [Late Latin praedicābilis, from Late Latin praedicāre, to proclaim publicly, preach, predicate. See PREACH.] —pred'ĭ-ca-bil'ĭ-ty, pred'ĭ-ca-ble-ness n.

pre-dic-a-ment (prĭ-dĭk'ə-mənt) n. 1. A situation, especially an unpleasant, troublesome, or trying one, from which extrication is difficult. See Usage Note at dilemma. 2. Logic. One of the basic states or classifications described by Aristotle into which all things can be placed; a category. [Middle English, class, category, from Old French, from Late Latin praedicāmentum (translation of Greek katēgoria), from Latin praedicāre, to proclaim publicly, predicate. See PREACH.]

—pre-dic'a-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj. —pre-dic'a-men'tal-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: predicament, plight, quandary, jam, fix, pickle. These nouns all refer to a situation from which it is difficult to free oneself. A predicament is a problematic situation about which one does not know what to do: “Werner finds himself suddenly in a most awkward predicament” (Thomas Carlyle). A plight is a bad or unfortunate situation: The reporter wrote an article about the woeful plight of homeless people. A quandary is a state of uncertainty or perplexity, especially about what course of action to take: “Having captured our men, we were in a quandary how to keep them” (Theodore Roosevelt). Jam and fix both refer to trying predicaments from which disengagement presents a problem: The boys who broke the window are in a jam with the school authorities. “If we get left on this wreck we are in a fix” (Mark Twain). A pickle is a disagreeable, embarrassing, or troublesome predicament: “I could see no way out of the pickle I was in” (Robert Louis Stevenson).

pred·i·cate (prĕd'ĭ-kāt') v. pred·i·cat·ed, pred·i·cat·ing, pred·i·cates. — v. tr. 1. To base or establish (a statement or an action, for example): He predicates his argument on the facts. 2. To state or affirm as an attribute or a quality of something: The sermon predicated the perfectibility of humankind. 3. To carry the connotation of; imply. 4. Logic. To make (a term or an expression) the predicate of a proposition. 5. To proclaim or assert; declare. — v. intr. To make a statement or an assertion. — n. (-kīt) Abbr. pred. 1. Grammar. One of the two main constituents of a sentence, modifying the subject and including the verb, objects, or phrases governed by the verb, as opened the door in Jane opened the door or is very sleepy in The child is very sleepy. 2. Logic. That part of a proposition that is affirmed or denied about the subject. For example, in the proposition We are mortal, mortal is the predicate. — adj. (-kīt) 1. Grammar. Of or belonging to the predicate of a sentence or clause. 2. Stated or asserted; predicated. [Late Latin praedicāre, praedicāt-, from Latin, to proclaim : prae-, pre- + dicāre, to proclaim; see deik- in Appendix.] — pred'ĭ-ca'tion n. — pred'ĭ-ca'tion·al adj. — pred'ĭ-ca'tive adj. — pred'ĭ-ca'tive·ly adv.

predicate calculus (prĕd'ĭ-kāt' käl'kyə-ləs) n. Logic. The branch of symbolic logic that deals not only with relations between propositions as a whole but also with their internal structure, especially the relation between subject and predicate. Symbols are used to represent the subject and predicate of the proposition, and the existential or universal quantifier is used to denote whether the proposition is universal or particular in its application.

predicate nominative (prĕd'ĭ-kāt' nŏm'ə-nā'tĭv) n. Grammar. A noun or pronoun that follows a linking verb and refers to the same person or thing as the subject of the verb.

pred·i·ca·to·ry (prĕd'ĭ-kə-tŏr'ē, -tŏr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of preaching or a preacher. [Late Latin praedicātŏrius, praising, from Latin praedicātor, one who makes known, from praedicāre, to proclaim. See PREACH.] pre·dict (prĭ-dĭkt') v. pre·dict·ed, pre·dict·ing, pre·dicts. — v. tr. To state, tell about, or make known in advance, especially on the basis of special knowledge. — v. intr. To foretell something; prophesy. [Latin praedĭcere, praedict- : prae-, pre- + dĭcere, to say; see deik- in Appendix.] — pre·dict'a·bil'ĭ·ty n. — pre·dict'a·ble adj. — pre·dict'a·bly adv. — pre·dic'tive adj. — pre·dic'tive·ly adv. — pre·dic'tive·ness n. — pre·dic'tor n.

SYNONYMS: predict, call, forecast, foretell, prognosticate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to tell about something in advance of its occurrence by means of special knowledge or inference”: predict an eclipse; couldn't call the out- come of the game; forecasting the weather; foretold the collapse of the government; prognosticating a rebellion.

pre-dic-tion (prī-dīk'shən) n. 1. The act of predicting. 2. Something foretold or predicted; a prophecy.

pre-di-gest (prē'dī-jĕst', -dī-) v. tr. pre-di-gest-ed, pre-di-gest-ing, pre-di-gests. 1. To subject (food) to partial digestion, usually through an enzymatic or chemical process, before ingestion. 2. To render in a simpler style or form. —pre'di-ges'tion n.

pred-i-lec-tion (prĕd'lĕk'shən, prĕd'-) n. A partiality or disposition in favor of something; a preference. [French prédilection, from Old French, from Medieval Latin predilectus, past participle of prediligere, to prefer : Latin prae-, pre- + Latin diligere, to love; see DILIGENT.]

SYNONYMS: predilection, bias, leaning, partiality, penchant, prejudice, proclivity, propensity. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a predisposition to favor a particular person, thing, point of view, or course of action”: a predilection for classical composers; a pro-American bias; conservative leanings; a partiality for liberal-minded friends; a penchant for exotic foods; a prejudice in favor of the underprivileged; a proclivity for self-assertiveness; a propensity for exaggeration.

pre-dis-pose (prē'dī-spōz') v. tr. pre-dis-posed, pre-dis-pos-ing, pre-dis-pos-es. 1. a. To make (someone) inclined to something in advance: His good manners predispose people in his favor. See Synonyms at incline. b. To make susceptible or liable: conditions that predispose miners to lung disease.

2. Archaic. To settle or dispose of in advance.

pre-dis-po-si-tion (prē'dis-pə-zīsh'ən) n. The state of being predisposed; tendency, inclination, or susceptibility.

pred-nis-o-lone (prĕd-nīs'ə-lōn') n. A synthetic steroid, C₂₁H₂₈O₅, similar to hydrocortisone and used in various compounds as an anti-inflammatory, immunosuppressive, antiallergic, and anticancer drug. [Alteration of PREDNISONE.]

pred-ni-sone (prĕd'nī-sōn', -zōn') n. A synthetic steroid, C₂₁H₂₆O₅, similar to cortisone that is used as an antiallergic, immunosuppressive, and anticancer drug and as an anti-inflammatory agent in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. [pre(gnane), a derivative of cholesterol + D(I-)¹ + -(E)N(E) + (CORT)ISONE.]

pre-doc-tor-al (prē-dŏk'tər-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or engaged in advanced academic study in preparation for a doctorate: predoctoral coursework; a predoctoral student.

pre-dom-i-nance (prī-dŏm'ə-nəns) also pre-dom-i-nan-cy (-nən-sē) n. The state or quality of being predominant; preponderance.

pre-dom-i-nant (prĭ-dŏm'ə-nənt) adj. 1. Having greatest ascendancy, importance, influence, authority, or force. See Synonyms at dominant. 2. Most common or conspicuous; main or prevalent: the predominant color in a design. [Medieval Latin praedomināns, praedominant- present participle of praedominārī, to predominate. See PREDOMINATE.] —pre-dom'i-nant-ly adv.

pre-dom-i-nate (prĭ-dŏm'ə-nāt') v. pre-dom-i-nat-ed, pre-dom-i-nat-ing, pre-dom-i-nates. — v. intr. 1. To have or gain controlling power or influence; prevail: Good predominates over evil in many works of literature. 2. To be of or have greater quantity or importance; preponderate: French-speaking people predominate in Quebec. — v. tr. To dominate or prevail over. [Medieval Latin prēdominārī, praedomināt- : Latin prae-, pre- + Latin dominārī, to rule (from dominus, master); see dem- in Appendix.] —pre-dom'i-nate-ly (-nīt-lē) adv. —pre-dom'i-nat'ing-ly adv. —pre-dom'i-na'tion n. —pre-dom'i-na'tor n.

pre-e-clamp-si-a (prē'ī-klāmp'sē-ə) n. A condition of hypertension occurring in pregnancy, typically accompanied by edema and proteinuria. —pre'e-clamp'tic (-tĭk) adj.

pre-em-bryo (prē-ēm'brē-ō') n. pl. pre-em-bry-os. A fertilized ovum up to 14 days old, before it becomes implanted in the uterus. —pre-em'bry-on'ic (-ŏn'ĭk) adj.

pree-mie also pre-mie (prē'mē) n. Informal. A prematurely born infant. [Shortening and alteration of PREMATURE.]

pre-em-i-nent or pre-em-i-nent (prē-ēm'ə-nənt) adj. Superior to or notable above all others; outstanding. See Synonyms at dominant. See Synonyms at noted. [Middle English, from Latin praeēminēns, present participle of praeēminēre, to excel : prae-, pre- + eminēre, to stand out; see EMINENT.] —pre-em'i-nence n. —pre-em'i-nent-ly adv.

pre-empt or pre-empt (prē-ēmp't') v. pre-empt-ed, pre-empt-ing, pre-empt-s. — v. tr. 1. To appropriate, seize, or take for oneself before others. See Synonyms at appropriate. 2. a. To take the place of; displace: A special news program preempted the scheduled shows. b. To have precedence or predominance over: Discussion of the water shortage will preempt the other topics on this week's agenda. 3. To gain possession of by prior right or opportunity, especially to settle on (public land) so as to obtain the right to buy before others. — v. intr. Games. To make a preemptive bid in bridge. [Back-formation from PREEMPTION.] —pre-emp'tor' (-ēmp'tôr') n. —pre-emp'to-ry (-ēmp'tə-rē) adj.

pre-emp-tion or pre-emp-tion (prē-ēmp'shən) n. 1. a. The right to purchase something before others, especially the right to purchase public land that is granted to one who has settled on that land. b. A purchase made by such a right. 2. Prior seizure of, appropriation of, or claim to something, such as property.

[PRE- + Latin ēemptiō, ēemptiōn-, buying (from ēemptus, past participle of Latin emere, to buy); see em- in Appendix.]

pre-emp-tive or pre-emp-tive (prē-ĕmp'tiv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of preemption. 2. Having or granted by the right of preemption. 3. a. Relating to or constituting a military strike made so as to gain the advantage when an enemy strike is believed to be imminent: a preemptive nuclear attack. b. Undertaken or initiated to deter or prevent an anticipated, usually unpleasant situation or occurrence: The two companies organized a preemptive alliance against a possible takeover by another firm. 4. Having or marked by the power to preempt or take precedence: a preemptive business offer; preemptive authority. 5. Games. Relating to or being a bid in bridge that is unnecessarily high and is intended to prevent the opposing players from bidding. —pre-emp'tive-ly adv.

preemptive right (prē-ĕmp'tiv rīt) n. The right of certain stockholders to maintain ownership of a constant percentage of a firm's stock. Such stockholders have the first opportunity to purchase new stock in the firm proportionate to the percentage of shares already held.

preen (prēn) v. preened, preen-ing, preens. — v. tr. 1. a. To smooth or clean (feathers) with the beak or bill. b. To trim or clean (fur) with the tongue, as cats do. 2. To dress or groom (oneself) with elaborate care; primp. 3. To take pride or satisfaction in (oneself); gloat. — v. intr. 1. To dress up; primp. 2. To swell with pride; gloat or exult. [Middle English proinen, preinen, blend of Old French proignier, to prune; see PRUNE², Old French poroindre, to anoint before (por-, before from Latin prō-; see pro-¹ + oindre, to anoint from Latin unguere).] —preen'er n.

pre-en-gi-neered or pre-en-gi-neered (prē'ĕn-jə-nīrd') adj. Built of or using prefabricated sections or parts: a preengineered building.

pre-es-tab-lish or pre-es-tab-lish (prē'ĭ-stăb'lĭsh) v. tr. pre-es-tab-lished, pre-es-tab-lish-ing, pre-es-tab-lish-es. To establish beforehand.

pre-ex-il-i-an or pre-ex-il-i-an (prē'ĕg-zĭl'ĕ-ən, -zĭl'yən, -ĕk-sĭl'ĕ-ən, -sĭl'yən) also pre-ex-il-ic or pre-ex-il-ic (-ĕg-zĭl'ĭk, -ĕk-sĭl'-) adj. Relating to the history of the Jews before their exile in Babylonia in the sixth century B.C.

pre-ex-ist or pre-ex-ist (prē'ĭg-zĭst') v. pre-ex-ist-ed, pre-ex-ist-ing, pre-ex-ists. — v. tr. To exist before (something); precede: Dinosaurs preexisted human beings. — v. intr. To exist beforehand. —pre'ex-is'tence n. —pre'ex-is'tent adj.

pref. abbr. 1. Preface. 2. Prefatory. 3. Preference. 4. Preferred. 5. Prefix.

pre-fab (prē'făb') Informal. adj. Prefabricated. — n. Something prefabricated, especially a building or section of a building. —pre'fab' v.

pre-fab-ri-cate (prē-făb'rĭ-kăt') v. tr. pre-fab-ri-cat-ed, pre-fab-ri-cat-ing, pre-fab-ri-cates. 1. To manufacture (a building or section of a building, for example) in advance, especially in standard sections that can be easily shipped and assembled. 2. To make up, construct, or develop in an artificial, unoriginal, or stereotypic manner. —pre-fab'ri-ca'tion n. —pre-fab'ri-ca'tor n.

pref-ace (prĕf'ĭs) n. Abbr. pref. 1. a. A preliminary statement or essay introducing a book that explains its scope, intention, or background and is usually written by the author. b. An introductory section, as of a speech. 2. Something introductory; a preliminary: An informal brunch served as a preface to the three-day conference. 3. Often Preface. The words introducing the central part of the Eucharist in several Christian churches. — v. tr. pref-aced, pref-ac-ing, pref-ac-es. 1. To introduce by or provide with a preliminary statement or essay. 2. To serve as an introduction to. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praefātiō, praefātiōn-, from praefātus, past participle of praefārī, to say before : prae-, pre- + fārī, to speak; see bhā-² in Appendix.] —pref'ac-er n.

pre-fad-ed (prĕ-fā'dĭd) adj. Given a faded, weathered, or aged appearance by artificial means. Used of clothing or fabric: prefaded jeans.

pref-a-to-ry (prĕf'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Abbr. pref. Of, relating to, or constituting a preface; introductory. See Synonyms at preliminary. [From Latin praefātus, past participle of praefārī, to say before. See PREFACE.] —pref'a-to'ri-ly adv.

pre-fect (prĕ'fĕkt') n. 1. A high administrative official or chief officer, as: a. Any of several high military or civil officials in ancient Rome. b. The chief of police of Paris, France. c. A chief administrative official of a department of France. d. The administrator in charge of discipline at a Jesuit school. 2. A student monitor or officer, especially in a private school. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praefectus, from past participle of praeficere, to place at the head of : prae-, pre- + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.]

prefect apostolic (prĕ'fĕkt' əp'ə-stōl'ĭk) n. pl. prefects apostolic. Roman Catholic Church. A priest with broad jurisdiction in a missionary territory.

pre-fec-ture (prĕ'fĕk'tʃər) n. 1. The district administered or governed by a prefect. 2. The office or authority of a prefect. 3. The residence or housing of a prefect. —pre-fec'tur-al (prĭ-fĕk'tʃər-əl) adj.

pre-fer (prĭ-fŭr') v. tr. pre-ferred, pre-fer-ring, pre-fers. 1. To choose or be in the habit of choosing as more desirable or as having more value: prefers coffee to tea. 2. Law. a. To give priority or precedence to (a creditor). b. To file, prosecute, or offer for consideration or resolution before a magistrate, court, or other legal authority: preferred the suit in a higher court. 3. Archaic. To recommend for advancement or appointment; promote. [Middle English preferren, from Old French preferer, from Latin praeferre : prae-, pre- + ferre, to carry; see bher-¹ in Appendix.] —pre-fer'rer n.

pref-er-a-ble (prĕf'ər-ə-bəl, prĕf'rə-) adj. More desirable or worthy than another; preferred: Coffee is preferable to tea, I think. —pref'er-a-bil/i-ty, pref'er-a-ble-ness n. —pref'er-a-bly adv.

pref-er-ence (prĕf'ər-əns, prĕf'rəns) n. Abbr. pref. 1. a. The selecting of someone or something over another or others. b. The right or chance to so choose. c. Someone or something so chosen. See Synonyms at choice. 2. The state of being preferred. 3. Law. a. A priority of payment given to one or more creditors by an insolvent debtor. b. The right of a creditor to priority of payment. 4. The granting of precedence or advantage to one country or group of countries in levying duties or in other matters of international trade. [Middle English preferraunce, preferment, from Old French preference, from preferer, to prefer. See PREFER.] pref-er-en-tial (prĕf'ə-rĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or giving advantage or preference: preferential treatment. 2. Manifesting or originating from partiality or preference: preferential tariff rates. —pref'er-en'tial-ism n. —pref'er-en'tial-ist n. —pref'er-en'tial-ly adv.

preferential shop (prĕf'ə-rĕn'shəl shōp) n. A shop whose management gives priority or advantage to union members in hiring, promoting, or laying off.

preferential voting (prĕf'ə-rĕn'shəl vō'tɪŋ) n. A system of voting in which the voter ranks candidates in order of preference.

pre-fer-ment (prĭ-fūr'mənt) n. 1. The act of advancing to a higher position or office; promotion. 2. A position, an appointment, or a rank giving advancement, as of profit or prestige. 3. The act of preferring or the state of being preferred.

pre-ferred provider organization (prĭ-fūr'd' prə-vī'dər ôr'gə-nĭ-zā'shən) n. Abbr. PPO A medical insurance plan in which members receive more coverage if they choose health care providers approved by or affiliated with the plan.

preferred stock (prĭ-fūr'd' stōk) n. Stock having priority over a corporation's commonly held stock in the distribution of dividends and often of assets.

pre-fig-u-ra-tion (prĕ-fĭg'yə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act of representing, suggesting, or imagining in advance. 2. Something that prefigures; a foreshadowing.

pre-figure (prĕ-fĭg'yər) v. tr. pre-fig-ured, pre-fig-ur-ing, pre-fig-ures.

1. To suggest, indicate, or represent by an antecedent form or model; presage or foreshadow: The paintings of Paul Cézanne prefigured the rise of cubism in the early 20th century. 2. To imagine or picture to oneself in advance. [Middle English prefiguren, from Old French prefigurer, from Late Latin praefigurāre: Latin prae-, pre- + Latin figūrāre, to shape (from figūra, shape); see dheigh- in Appendix.] —pre-fig'ur-a-tive (-fĭg'yər-ə-tĭv) adj. —pre-fig'ur-a-tive-ly adv. —pre-fig'ur-a-tive-ness n. —pre-fig'ure-ment n.

pre-fin-ished (prĕ-fĭn'isht) adj. Coated or treated before being sold or distributed: prefinished wood paneling.

pre-fix (prē'fiks') v. tr. pre-fixed, pre-fix-ing, pre-fix-es. 1. To put or attach before or in front of. 2. (prē-fiks') To settle or arrange in advance. 3. Grammar. a. To add as a prefix. b. To add a prefix to. — n. Abbr. pref. 1. Grammar. An affix, such as dis- in disbelieve, put before a word to produce a derivative word or an inflected form. 2. A title placed before a person's name. [Middle English pre-fixen, from Old French prefixer : pre-, before (from Latin prae-); see PRE- + fixer, to place (from Latin fīxus, past participle of fīgere, to fasten). N., from New Latin praefixum from neuter sing. of Latin praefixus, past participle of praefigere, to fix in front : prae-, pre- + fīgere, to fasten; see dhīg^w- in Appendix.] —pre'fix'al adj. —pre'fix'al-ly adv.

pre-flight (prē'flīt') adj. Preparing for or occurring before flight. — v. tr. pre-flight-ed, pre-flight-ing, pre-flights. To check (an aircraft) for airworthiness before flight. —pre'flight' n.

pre-form (prē'fōrm') v. tr. pre-formed, pre-form-ing, pre-forms. 1. To shape or form beforehand. 2. To determine the shape or form of beforehand. — n. An object that has been subjected to preliminary, usually incomplete shaping or molding before undergoing complete or final processing.

pre-for-ma-tion (prē'fōr-mā'shən) n. 1. The act of shaping or forming in advance; prior formation. 2. A theory popular in the 18th century that all parts of an organism exist completely formed in the germ cell and develop only by increasing in size.

pre-fron-tal (prē-frŭn'tl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or situated in the anterior part of the frontal lobe. 2. Situated anterior to the frontal bone.

prefrontal lobotomy (prē-frŭn'tl lə-bōt'ə-mē) n. A lobotomy in which the white fibers that connect the thalamus to the prefrontal and frontal lobes of the brain are severed, performed as a treatment for intense anxiety or violent behavior.

pre-gan-gli-on-ic (prē-gäng'glē-ŏn'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or being the nerve fibers that supply a ganglion, especially a ganglion of the autonomic nervous system.

Pre-gl (prā'gəl), Fritz. 1869-1930. Austrian chemist. He won a 1923 Nobel Prize for developing a method of analyzing organic substances weighing one milligram or less.

preg-na-ble (prĕg'nə-bəl) adj. Being such that attack, seizure, or capture is possible; vulnerable or assailable: a pregnable fortress. [Middle English preign-able, pregnabul, from Old French pregnauble, from prendre, pregn-, to grasp, from Latin prehendere. See ghend- in Appendix.] —preg'na-bil'i-ty n.

preg-nan-cy (prĕg'nən-sē) n. pl. preg-nan-cies. 1. a. The condition of being pregnant: a test for pregnancy. b. An instance of being pregnant: Her second pregnancy was easy. c. The period during which one is pregnant: the first trimes- ter of pregnancy. 2. The quality or condition of being rich in significance, import, or implication. 3. Creativity; inventiveness.

preg·nant¹ (prĕg'nənt) adj. 1. Carrying developing offspring within the body. 2. a. Weighty or significant; full of meaning: a conversation occasionally punctuated by pregnant pauses. b. Of great or potentially great import, implication, or moment: "It was a politically pregnant time in Poland" (New York). 3. Filled or fraught; replete: "This was, from the Party's point of view, both deplorable in itself and pregnant with danger for the future" (Robert Conquest). 4. Having a profusion of ideas; creative or inventive. 5. Producing results; fruitful: a pregnant decision. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praegnāns, praegnant-, variant of praegnās. See genə- in Appendix.] —preg'nant-ly adv.

preg·nant² (prĕg'nənt) adj. Archaic. Convincing; cogent. Used of an argument or a proof. [Middle English, probably from Old French preignant, present participle of prembre, to press, from Latin premere. See per⁴ in Appendix.]

pre·heat (prĕ-hĕt') v. tr. pre·heat·ed, pre·heat·ing, pre·heats. To heat (an oven, for example) beforehand. —pre·heat'er n.

pre·hen·sile (prĕ-hĕn'səl, -sĭl') adj. 1. Adapted for seizing, grasping, or holding, especially by wrapping around an object: a monkey's prehensile tail.

2. Having keen intellect; insightful. 3. Greedy; grasping. [French préhensile, from Latin prehēnsus, past participle of prehendere, to grasp. See ghend- in Appendix.] —pre'hen-sil'i-ty (-sĭl'ĭ-tē) n.

pre·hen·sion (prĕ-hĕn'shən) n. 1. The act of grasping or seizing.

2. a. Apprehension by the senses. b. Understanding. [Latin prehēnsiō, prehēnsiōn-, from prehēnsus, past participle of prehendere, to seize. See ghend- in Appendix.]

pre·his·tor·ic (prĕ'hĭ-stôr'ĭk, -stôr'-) also pre·his·tor·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or belonging to the era before recorded history. 2. Of or relating to a language before it is first recorded in writing. —pre'his-tor'i-cal-ly adv.

pre·his·to·ry (prĕ-hĭs'tə-rĕ) n. pl. pre·his·to·ries. 1. History of humankind in the period before recorded history. 2. The circumstances or developments leading up to or surrounding a current situation, event, or development; background: "[He] then told me the curious prehistory of his obsessive interest in the seduction theory" (Janet Malcolm). —pre'his-tor'i-an (-hĭ-stôr'ĕ-ən, -stôr'-) n.

pre·hom·i·nid (prĕ-hŏm'ə-nĭd) n. Any of several extinct primates regarded as an immediate ancestor of the hominids. — adj. Of or relating to these extinct primates.

pre·ig·ni·tion (prĕ'ĭg-nĭsh'ən) n. The ignition of fuel in an internal-combustion engine before the spark passes through the fuel, resulting from a hot spot in the cylinder or from too great a compression ratio for the fuel.

pre-in-dus-tri-al (prē'īn-dūs'trē-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or being a society or an economic system that is not or has not yet become industrialized.

pre-judge (prē-jūj') v. tr. pre-judged, pre-judg-ing, pre-judg-es. To judge beforehand without possessing adequate evidence. —pre-judg'er n.

—pre-judg'ment, pre-judge'ment n.

prej-u-dice (prēj'ə-dīs) n. 1. a. An adverse judgment or opinion formed beforehand or without knowledge or examination of the facts. See Synonyms at predilection. b. A preconceived preference or idea. 2. The act or state of holding unreasonable preconceived judgments or convictions. 3. Irrational suspicion or hatred of a particular group, race, or religion. 4. Detriment or injury caused to a person by the preconceived, unfavorable conviction of another or others. — v. tr. prej-u-diced, prej-u-dic-ing, prej-u-dic-es. 1. To cause (someone) to judge prematurely and irrationally. 2. To affect injuriously or detrimentally by a judgment or an act. See Synonyms at bias. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praeiūdicium: prae-, pre- + iūdicium, judgment (from iūdex, iūdic-, judge); see deik- in Appendix.]

prej-u-di-cial (prēj'ə-dīsh'əl) adj. 1. Detrimental; injurious. 2. Causing or tending to preconceived judgment or convictions: Reporters were expelled from the courtroom after it was decided that their coverage had resulted in prejudicial publicity for the defendant. —prej'u-di/cial-ly adv. —prej'u-di/cial-ness n.

prej-u-di-cious (prēj'ə-dīsh'əs) adj. Prejudicial. —prej'u-di/cious-ly adv.

prel-a-cy (prēl'ə-sē) n. pl. prel-a-cies. 1. a. The office or station of a prelate. b. Prelates considered as a group. Also called prelature 2. Church government administrated by prelates.

pre-lap-sar-i-an (prē'lāp-sār'ē-ən) adj. Theology. Of or relating to the period before the fall of Adam and Eve. [PRE- + Latin lapsus, fall; see LAPSE + -ARIAN.]

pre-l-ate (prēl'īt) n. A high-ranking member of the clergy, especially a bishop. [Middle English prelat, from Old French, from Medieval Latin praelātus, from Latin, past participle of praeferre, to carry before, to prefer: prae-, pre- + lātus, brought; see telə- in Appendix.] —pre-lat'ic (prī-lāt'ik) adj.

prelate nul-li-us (prēl'īt nō-lē'əs) n. pl. prelates nullius. Roman Catholic Church. A prelate, usually a titular bishop, who has jurisdiction over a territory not in a diocese but subject directly to the Holy See. [PRELATE + New Latin nullius (dioecēsis), of no (diocese) (from Latin, genitive sing. of nullus, none).]

pre-l-a-ture (prēl'ə-chər, -chōōr') n. See prelacy (n., sense 1).

pre-launch (prē'lōnch', -lōnch') adj. Preparatory or preliminary to launch, especially of a spacecraft or missile.

pre-law (prē'lôl') adj. Law. Of, relating to, or being the studies that prepare one for the study of law.

pre-lect (prī-lĕktʹ) v. intr. pre-lect-ed, pre-lect-ing, pre-lects. To lecture or discourse in public. [Latin praelegere, praelect- : prae-, pre- + legere, to read; see leg- in Appendix.] —pre-lect'ion n. —pre-lect'tor n.

pre-li·ba·tion (prĕ'li-bā'shən) n. A foretaste. [Latin praelibātiō, praelibātiōn-, from praelibātus, past participle of praelibāre, to taste beforehand : prae-, pre- + libāre, pour out, to taste.]

pre-lim (prĕ'līm', prī-līm') n. Sports. A preliminary: Several top players were unexpectedly eliminated in the prelims.

pre-lim-i·nar·y (prī-līm'ə-nĕr'ĕ) adj. Prior to or preparing for the main matter, action, or business; introductory or prefatory. — n. pl. pre-lim-i·nar·ies.

1. Something that precedes, prepares for, or introduces the main matter, action, or business. 2. An academic test or examination that is preparatory to one that is longer, more complex, or more important. 3. Sports. A contest to determine the finalists in a competition. 4. Sports. An event that precedes the main event of a particular program, especially in boxing or wrestling. 5. Often preliminaries. Printing. The front matter of a book. [From New Latin praelimināris : Latin prae-, pre- + Latin līmen, līmin-, threshold.] —pre-lim'i·nar'i·ly (-nār'ə-lĕ) adv.

SYNONYMS: preliminary, introductory, prefatory, preparatory. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “going before and preparing the way for something else”: a preliminary investigation; introductory remarks; an author's prefatory notes; preparatory steps.

pre-lit·er·ate (prĕ-lit'ər-ĭt) adj. Of, relating to, or being a culture not having a written language. — n. A person belonging to such a culture.

Pre-log (prĕ'lŏg'), Vladimir. Born 1906. Yugoslavian-born Swiss chemist. He shared a 1975 Nobel Prize for research on the structure of biological molecules.

pre-lude (prĕl'yŏod', prā'lŏod', prĕ'-) n. 1. An introductory performance, event, or action preceding a more important one; a preliminary or preface. 2. Music. An independent piece written for piano and usually based on a single, short thematic motif. 3. Music. A piece or movement serving as an introduction to another section or composition, especially: a. An independent, relatively long piece that precedes a fugue. b. The first or opening section of a suite. c. The overture to an oratorio, opera, or act of an opera. d. A piece played before a church service; an introductory voluntary. e. A relatively short composition of the 15th and early 16th centuries written in a free style, usually for piano. — v. pre-lud-ed, pre-lud-ing, pre-ludes. — v. tr. 1. To serve as a prelude to. 2. To introduce with or as if with a prelude. — v. intr. To serve as a prelude or an introduction. [Medieval Latin praelūdium, from Latin praelūdere, to play beforehand : prae-, pre- + lūdere, to play (from lūdus, game); see leid- in Appendix.] —pre-lud'er n. —pre-lu'di·al (prī-lŏ'dĕ-əl) adj.

pre-lu-sion (prĭ-lōō'zhən) n. A prelude or an introduction. [Latin praelūsiō, praelūsiōn-, from praelūsus, past participle of praelūdere, to play beforehand. See PRELUDE.]

pre-lu-sive (prĭ-lōō'siv) adj. Of or serving as a prelude; introductory.

—pre-lu/sive-ly adv.

prem. abbr. Premium.

pre-ma-lig-nant (prē'mə-lĭg'nənt) adj. Precancerous.

pre-mar-i-tal (prē-mār'ī-tl) adj. Taking place or existing before marriage.

—pre-mar'ī-tal-ly adv.

pre-ma-ture (prē'mə-tyōōr', -tōōr', -chōōr') adj. 1. Occurring, growing, or existing before the customary, correct, or assigned time; uncommonly or unexpectedly early: a premature end. 2. Born after a gestation period of less than the normal time: a premature infant. [Middle English, ripe, from Latin praemātūrus, ripe too early : prae-, pre- + mātūrus, ripe; see mā¹ in Appendix.]

—pre'ma-ture'ly adv. —pre'ma-ture'ness, pre'ma-tu'ri-ty n.

pre-max-il-la (prē'māk-sĭl'ə) n. pl. pre-max-il-lae (-māk-sĭl'ē). Either of two bones located in front of and between the maxillary bones in the upper jaw of vertebrates. —pre-max'il-lar'y (-māk'sə-lĕr'ē) adj.

pre-med (prē'mĕd') Informal. adj. Premedical. — n. 1. A premedical student. 2. A premedical program of study.

pre-med-i-cal (prē-mĕd'ī-kəl) adj. Preparing for or relating to the studies that prepare one for the study of medicine: a premedical student; premedical courses.

pre-med-i-tate (prē-mĕd'ī-tāt') v. pre-med-i-tat-ed, pre-med-i-tat-ing, pre-med-i-tates. — v. tr. To plan, arrange, or plot (a crime, for example) in advance. — v. intr. To reflect, ponder, or deliberate beforehand.

—pre-med'ī-ta'tive adj. —pre-med'ī-ta'tor n.

pre-med-i-tat-ed (prē-mĕd'ī-tā'tĭd) adj. Characterized by deliberate purpose, previous consideration, and some degree of planning: a premeditated crime.

—pre-med'ī-tat'ed-ly adv.

pre-med-i-ta-tion (prē-mĕd'ī-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of speculating, arranging, or plotting in advance. 2. Law. The contemplation of a crime well enough in advance to show deliberate intent to commit the crime; forethought.

pre-me-no-paus-al (prē'mĕn-ə-pô'zəl) adj. Of or relating to the years or the stage of life immediately before the onset of menopause.

pre-men-stru-al (prē-mĕn'strōō-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or occurring in the period just before menstruation. —pre-men'stru-al-ly adv.

premenstrual syndrome (prē-mĕn'strōō-əl sĭn'drōm') n. Abbr. PMS A group of incapacitating symptoms, including abdominal bloating, breast tenderness, headache, fatigue, irritability, and depression, that occur in many women from 2 to 14 days before the onset of menstruation.

pre-mie (prē'mē) n. Informal. Variant of preemie.

pre-mier (přī-mîr', -myîr', prē'mîr) adj. 1. First in status or importance; principal or chief: an architect of premier rank. 2. First to occur or exist; earliest. — n. (přī-mîr') 1. A prime minister. 2. A chief administrative officer, as of a Canadian province. [Middle English primier, from Old French, from Latin prīmārius, from prīmus, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] —pre-mier'ship' n.

pre-mier dan-seur (prə-myā' dāN-sœr') n. pl. pre-miers dan-seurs (prə-myā' dāN-sœr'). A man who is the principal dancer in a ballet company. [French : premier, first + danseur, dancer.]

pre-miere or pre-mière (přī-mîr', -myâr') n. The first public performance, as of a movie or play. — v. pre-miered or pre-mièred, pre-mier-ing or pre-mièr-ing, pre-mieres or pre-mières. — v. tr. To present the first public performance of. — v. intr. 1. To have the first public performance. 2. To make a first appearance in a public performance. — adj. First or paramount; premier. [French, from feminine of premier, first. See PREMIER.]

USAGE NOTE: In entertainment contexts the verb premiere has by now become the standard way of saying “to introduce to the public,” at least partly because of its ubiquitous use on television. Over the past 20 years this use has won the sometimes grudging acceptance of the Usage Panel. The example The Philharmonic will premiere works by two young Americans was acceptable to 51 percent of the Panelists in the most recent survey, up from 14 percent in 1969. But only 10 percent of the Panelists in the most recent survey accepted extension of the verb to non-entertainment contexts, as in Last fall the school premiered new degree programs in word processing and accounting.

pre-mière dan-seuse (přī-mîr' dāN-sœz', -myâr') n. pl. pre-mières dan-seuses (přī-myâr' dāN-sœz'). A woman who is the principal dancer in a ballet company. [French : première, feminine of premier + danseuse, feminine of danseur, dancer.]

pre-mil-le-nar-i-an (prē-mil'ə-nâr'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to premillennialism. — n. A person who believes in premillennialism. —pre-mil'le-nar'i-an-ism n.

pre-mil-len-ni-al (prē'mī-lěN'ē-əl) adj. Of or happening in the time before the millennium. —pre'mil-len/ni-al-ly adv.

pre-mil-len-ni-al-ism (prē'mī-lěN'ē-əl-iz'əm) n. The belief that the Second Coming of Jesus will immediately precede the millennium. —pre'mil-len/ni-al-ist n.

Prem-in-ger (prēm'in-jər), Otto Ludwig. 1906-1986. Austrian-born American film producer and director whose works include Laura (1944) and Anatomy of a Murder (1959).

premise (prēm'is) n. also premiss (prēm'is) 1. A proposition upon which an argument is based or from which a conclusion is drawn. 2. Logic. a. One of the propositions in a deductive argument. b. Either the major or the minor proposition of a syllogism, from which the conclusion is drawn. 3. premises. Law. The preliminary or explanatory statements or facts of a document, as in a deed. 4. premises. a. Land and the buildings on it. b. A building or part of a building. — v. pre-mised, pre-mis-ing, pre-mis-es. — v. tr. 1. To state in advance as an introduction or explanation. 2. To state or assume as a proposition in an argument. — v. intr. To make a premise. [Middle English premiss, from Old French, from Medieval Latin praemissa (propositiō), (the proposition) put before, premise, from Latin, feminine past participle of praemittere, to set in front : prae-, pre- + mittere, to send.]

WORD HISTORY: Why do we call a single building the premises? To answer this question, we must go back to the Middle Ages. But first, let it be noted that pre-mises comes from the past participle praemissa, which is both a feminine singular and a neuter plural form of the Latin verb praemittere, “to send in advance, utter by way of preface, place in front, prefix.” In Medieval Latin the feminine form praemissa was used as a term in logic, for which we still use the term premise descended from the Medieval Latin word (first recorded in a work composed before 1380). Medieval Latin praemissa in the plural meant “things mentioned before” and was used in legal documents, almost always in the plural, a use that was followed in Old French and Middle English, both of which borrowed the word from Latin. A more specific legal sense in Middle English, “that property, collectively, which is specified in the beginning of a legal document and which is conveyed, as by grant,” was also always in the plural in Middle English and later Modern English. And so it remained when this sense was extended to mean “a house or building with its grounds or appurtenances,” a usage first recorded before 1730.

pre-mi-um (prē'mē-əm) n. Abbr. pm., prem. 1. A prize or an award. 2. Something offered free or at a reduced price as an inducement to buy something else. 3. A sum of money or bonus paid in addition to a regular price, salary, or other amount. 4. The amount paid, often in addition to the interest, to obtain a loan. See Synonyms at bonus. 5. The amount paid or payable, often in installments, for an insurance policy. 6. The amount at which something is valued above its par or nominal value, as money or securities. 7. The amount at which a securities option is bought or sold. 8. Payment for training in a trade or profession. 9. An unusual or high value: Employers put a premium on honesty and hard work. — adj. Of superior quality or value: premium gasoline. — idiom. at a premium. More valuable than usual, as from scarcity: Fresh water was at a pre- mium after the reservoir was contaminated. [Latin praemium, inducement, reward : prae-, pre- + emere, to take, buy; see em- in Appendix.]

pre-mix (prē'mīks') n. Something that is mixed or blended from two or more ingredients or elements before being marketed, used, or mixed further: a premix of the dry ingredients in cake batter; a premix of a multitrack recording. — v. tr.

pre-mixed, pre-mix-ing, pre-mix-es. To mix or blend beforehand.

pre-mod-ern (prē-mōd'ərn) adj. Existing or coming before a modern period or time: the feudal system of premodern Japan; a premodern assembly line.

pre-mo-lar (prē-mō'lər) n. One of eight bicuspid teeth located in pairs on each side of the upper and lower jaws behind the canines and in front of the molars.

—pre-mo'lar adj.

pre-mo-ni-tion (prē'mə-nīsh'ən, prēm'ə-) n. 1. A presentiment of the future; a foreboding. 2. A warning in advance; a forewarning. [Late Latin praemonitiō, praemonitiōn-, from Latin praemonitus, past participle of praemonēre, to forewarn : prae-, pre- + monēre, to warn; see men-¹ in Appendix.]

—pre-mon'i-to'ri-ly (-mōn'ī-tōr'ə-lē, -tōr'-) adv. —pre-mon'i-to'ry adj.

pre-morse (prī-mōrs') adj. Abruptly truncated, as though bitten or broken off: a premorse leaf. [Latin praemorsus, past participle of praemordēre, to bite off in front : prae-, pre- + mordēre, to bite; see mer- in Appendix.]

pre-mu-ni-tion (prē'myōō-nīsh'ən) n. Relative immunity to severe infection by a particular pathogen as a result of a chronic low-grade infection induced earlier by the same pathogen. [French prémunition, from Latin praemūnitiō, praemūnitiōn-, fortification beforehand, from praemūnītus, past participle of praemūnīre, to fortify in advance : prae-, pre- + mūnīre, to fortify (from moene, moenia, defensive walls of a town).] —pre-mune' (prē-myōōn') adj.

pre-name (prē'nām') n. A forename.

pre-na-tal (prē-nāt'l) adj. Existing or occurring before birth: prenatal medical care. —pre-na'tal-ly adv.

pre-n-tice (prēn'tīs) n. Archaic. An apprentice.

pre-nup-tial (prē-nŭp'shəl, -chəl) adj. Before marriage or a wedding: a prenuptial celebration.

pre-oc-cu-pan-cy (prē-ōk'yə-pən-sē) n. 1. The act or right of occupying a place beforehand or in advance. 2. The state of being preoccupied or engrossed; preoccupation.

pre-oc-cu-pa-tion (prē-ōk'yə-pā'shən) n. 1. The state of being preoccupied; absorption of the attention or intellect. 2. Something that preoccupies or engrosses the mind: Money was their chief preoccupation. 3. Occupation of a place in advance; preoccupation.

pre-oc-cu-pied (prē-ōk'yə-pīd') adj. 1. a. Absorbed in thought; engrossed. b. Excessively concerned with something; distracted. 2. Formerly or already occupied. 3. Already used and therefore unavailable for further use. Used of taxonomic names.

pre-oc-cu-py (prē-ōk'yə-pī') v. tr. pre-oc-cu-pied, pre-oc-cu-py-ing, pre-oc-cu-pies. 1. To occupy completely the mind or attention of; engross. See Synonyms at monopolize. 2. To occupy or take possession of in advance or before another.

pre-op-er-a-tive (prē-ōp'ər-ə-tīv, -ōp'rə-, -ōp'ə-rā'-) adj. Occurring before surgery: preoperative preparations. — pre-op'er-a-tive-ly adv.

pre-o-ral (prē-ōr'əl, -ōr'-) adj. Situated in front of the mouth.

pre-or-bit-al (prē-ōr'bī-tl) adj. Aerospace. Occurring before orbit has been established.

pre-or-dain (prē'ōr-dān') v. tr. pre-or-dained, pre-or-dain-ing, pre-or-dains. To appoint, decree, or ordain in advance; foreordain.

— pre'or-dain/ment n. — pre-or'di-na'tion (-ōr'dn-ā'shən) n.

pre-owned (prē-ōnd') adj. Previously owned or used; secondhand: a pre-owned car.

prep (prĕp) adj. Informal. Preparatory: a college prep course; did extensive prep work for the interview. — n. 1. Informal. A preparatory school. 2. Informal. Preparation: Daily practices are the best prep for the upcoming track meet.

3. Chiefly British. The preparing of lessons; homework. 4. Informal. A preppie. — v. prepped, prep-ping, preps. Informal. — v. intr. 1. To be enrolled in and attend a preparatory school. 2. To study or train in preparation for something. — v. tr. 1. To prepare (someone) for a medical examination or surgical procedure. 2. To prepare or prime: prep a surface for painting.

prep. abbr. 1. Preparation. 2. Preparatory. 3. Prepare. 4. Grammar. Preposition.

pre-pack-age (prē-pāk'ij) v. tr. pre-pack-aged, pre-pack-ag-ing, pre-pack-ag-es. To wrap or package (a product) before marketing.

prep-a-ra-tion (prĕp'ə-rā'shən) n. Abbr. prep., prepn. 1. The act or process of preparing. 2. The state of having been made ready beforehand; readiness.

3. A preliminary measure that serves to make ready for something. Often used in the plural: preparations for the wedding. 4. A substance, such as a medicine, prepared for a particular purpose. 5. Music. a. The anticipation of a dissonant tone by means of its introduction as a consonant tone in the preceding chord. b. The dissonant tone so anticipated.

pre-par-a-tive (prī-pār'ə-tīv, -pār'-) adj. Serving or tending to prepare or make ready; preliminary. — n. Something that prepares for or acts as a preliminary to something following. — pre-par'a-tive-ly adv.

pre-par-a-tor (prī-pār'ə-tər, -pār'-) n. One who prepares specimens or exhibits for scientific study or display, as in a museum.

pre-par-a-to-ry (prĭ-pär'ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē, -pâr'-, prĕp'ər-ə-) adj. Abbr. prep.

1. Serving to make ready or prepare; introductory. See Synonyms at preliminary. 2. Relating to or engaged in study or training that serves as preparation for advanced education: a preparatory course; preparatory students. — adv. In preparation for. Used with to: A thorough cleaning of the house took place preparatory to our departure. — pre-par'a-to'ri-ly adv.

preparatory school (prĭ-pär'ə-tôr'ē skōōl) n. 1. A usually private secondary school that prepares students for college. 2. A usually private elementary school in Great Britain that prepares students for public school.

pre-pare (prĭ-pâr') v. pre-pared, pre-par-ing, pre-pares. Abbr. prep. — v. tr. 1. To make ready beforehand for a specific purpose, as for an event or occasion: The teacher prepared the students for the exams. 2. To put together or make by combining various elements or ingredients; manufacture or compound: prepared a meal; prepared the lecture. 3. To fit out; equip: prepared the ship for an arctic expedition. 4. Music. To lead up to and soften (a dissonance or its impact) by means of preparation. — v. intr. 1. To make things or oneself ready. 2. To study or complete a course of study at a preparatory school. [Middle English preparen, from Old French preparer, from Latin praeparāre: prae-, pre- + parāre, prepare, equip; see perə⁻¹ in Appendix.] — pre-par'ed-ly (-pâr'id-lē) adv.
— pre-par'er n.

pre-par-ed-ness (prĭ-pâr'id-nĭs) n. The state of being prepared, especially military readiness for combat.

pre-pay (prĕ-pā') v. tr. pre-paid, pre-pay-ing, pre-pays. To pay or pay for beforehand. — pre-pay'ment n.

prepd. abbr. Prepared.

pre-pense (prĭ-pĕns') adj. Contemplated or arranged in advance; premeditated: malice prepense. [From Middle English, past participle of purpensen, to premeditate, from Anglo-Norman purpenser: pur-, before (from Latin pro-); see PRO⁻¹ + penser, to think (from Latin pĕnsāre); see (s)pen- in Appendix.] — pre-pense'ly adv.

prepn. abbr. Preparation.

pre-pon-der-ance (prĭ-pŏn'dər-əns) also pre-pon-der-an-cy (-ən-sē) n. Superiority in weight, force, importance, or influence.

pre-pon-der-ant (prĭ-pŏn'dər-ənt) adj. Having superior weight, force, importance, or influence. See Synonyms at dominant. — pre-pon'der-ant-ly adv.

pre-pon-der-ate (prĭ-pŏn'də-rāt') v. intr. pre-pon-der-at-ed, pre-pon-der-at-ing, pre-pon-der-ates. 1. To exceed something else in weight. 2. To be greater than something else, as in power, force, quantity, or importance; predominate: "In balancing his faults with his perfections, the latter seemed rather to preponderate" (Henry Fielding). — adj. (-dər-ĭt) Preponderant. [Latin praeponderāre, praeponderāt- : prae-, pre- + ponderāre, to weigh; see (s)pen- in Appendix.] —pre-pon'der-ate-ly adv. —pre-pon'der-a'tion n.

prep-o-si-tion¹ (prĕp'ə-zīsh'ən) n. Abbr. prep. Grammar. 1. In some languages, a word placed before a substantive and indicating the relation of that substantive to a verb, an adjective, or another substantive, as English at, by, in, to, from, and with. 2. A word or construction similar in function to a preposition, such as in regard to or concerning. [Middle English preposicioun, from Old French preposicion, from Latin praepositiō, praepositiōn-, a putting before, preposition (translation of Greek prothesis), from praepositus, past participle of praepōnere, to put in front : prae-, pre- + pōnere, to put; see apo- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The doctrine that a preposition may not be used to end a sentence was first promulgated by Dryden, probably on the basis of a specious analogy to Latin, and was subsequently refined by 18th-century grammarians. The rule has since become one of the most venerated maxims of schoolroom grammatical lore. But sentences ending with prepositions can be found in the works of most of the great writers since the Renaissance. In fact, English syntax allows and sometimes requires final placement of the preposition. Such placement is the only possible one in sentences such as We have much to be thankful for or That depends on what you believe in. Efforts to rewrite such sentences to place the preposition elsewhere will have comically stilted results; for example: We have much for which to be thankful or That depends on that in which you believe. • Even sticklers for the traditional rule can have no grounds for criticizing sentences such as I don't know where she will end up or It's the most curious book I've ever run across. In these examples, up and across are used as adverbs, not prepositions, as demonstrated by the ungrammaticality of sentences such as I don't know up where she will end and It's the most curious book across which I have ever run.

pre-po-si-tion² also pre-po-si-tion (prĕ'pə-zīsh'ən) v. tr. pre-po-si-tioned, pre-po-si-tion-ing, pre-po-si-tions. To position or place in position in advance: artillery that was prepositioned at strategic points in the desert.

prep-o-si-tion-al (prĕp'ə-zīsh'ə-nəl) adj. Grammar. Relating to, composed of, or used as a preposition. —prep'o-si'tion-al-ly adv.

prepositional phrase (prĕp'ə-zīsh'ə-nəl frāz) n. Grammar. A phrase that consists of a preposition and its object and has adjectival or adverbial value, such as in the house in the people in the house or by him in The book was written by him.

pre-pos-i-tive (prĭ-pōz'ī-tĭv) Grammar. adj. Put before; prefixed. — n. A word or particle put before another word. [Late Latin praepositivus, from Latin praepositus, past participle of praepōnere, to put in front. See PREPOSITION¹.]

—pre-pos'i-tive-ly adv.

pre-pos-sess (prē'pə-zēs') v. tr. pre-pos-sessed, pre-pos-sess-ing, pre-pos-sess-es. 1. To preoccupy the mind of to the exclusion of other thoughts or feelings. 2. a. To influence beforehand against or in favor of someone or something; prejudice. b. To impress favorably in advance.

pre-pos-sess-ing (prē'pə-zēs'ing) adj. 1. Serving to impress favorably; pleasing: a prepossessing appearance. 2. Archaic. Causing prejudice. —pre'-pos-sess'ing-ly adv. —pre'pos-sess'ing-ness n.

pre-pos-ses-sion (prē'pə-zēsh'ən) n. 1. A preconception or prejudice. 2. The state of being preoccupied with thoughts, opinions, or feelings.

pre-pos-ter-ous (prī-pōs'tər-əs) adj. Contrary to nature, reason, or common sense; absurd. See Synonyms at foolish. [From Latin praeposterus, inverted, unseasonable : prae-, pre- + posterus, coming behind (from post, behind); see apo- in Appendix.] —pre-pos'ter-ous-ly adv. —pre-pos'ter-ous-ness n.

pre-po-ten-cy (prē-pōt'n-sē) n. 1. The condition of being greater in power, influence, or force than another or others; predominance. 2. Genetics. The ability of one parent, variety, or strain to transmit individual traits to an offspring, apparently to the exclusion of the other parent, variety, or strain.

pre-po-tent (prē-pōt'nt) adj. 1. Greater in power, influence, or force than another or others; predominant. 2. Genetics. Of, having, or exhibiting prepotency. [Middle English, from Latin praepotēns, praepotent- present participle of praeposse, to be more powerful : prae-, pre- + posse, to be able or powerful; see poti- in Appendix.] —pre-po'tent-ly adv.

prep-py or prep-pie (prēp'ē) n. pl. prep-pies. Informal. 1. A student or former student of a preparatory school. 2. A person whose manner and dress are deemed typical of traditional preparatory schools. —prep'pi-ly adv. —prep'pi-ness n. —prep'py, prep'pie adj.

pre-pran-di-al also pre-pran-di-al (prē-prän'dē-əl) adj. Before a meal, especially dinner: took a preprandial walk in the woods.

pre-pri-mar-y (prē-prī'mēr'ē, -mər-ē) adj. Relating to or taking place in the time before a primary election: preprimary conventions; preprimary support.

pre-print (prē'prīnt') n. Something printed and often distributed in partial or preliminary form in advance of official publication: a preprint of a scientific article. — v. tr. pre-print-ed, pre-print-ing, pre-prints (prē-prīnt'). To print in advance.

pre-proc-ess (prē-prōs'ēs', -prō'sēs') v. tr. pre-proc-essed, pre-proc-ess-ing, pre-proc-ess-es. Computer Science. To perform conversion, formatting, or other functions on (data) before further processing. —pre-proc'es-sor n.

pre-pro-duc-tion (prē'prə-dūk'shən) adj. 1. Taking place or existing before production: preproduction planning. 2. Of, relating to, or being a prototype: preproduction models of next year's automobiles. — n. The preliminary arrangements, as concerning financing or personnel, that are made upon the inception of a project: a movie in preproduction.

pre-pro-fes-sion-al (prē'prə-fēsh'ə-nəl) adj. Preparatory to the practice of a profession or to its specialized field of study.

pre-pro-gram (prē-prō'grām', -grəm) v. tr. pre-pro-grammed or pre-pro-gramed, pre-pro-gram-ming or pre-pro-gram-ing, pre-pro-grams or pre-pro-grams. To program in advance; preset.

prep school (prĕp skōōl) n. Informal. A preparatory school.

pre-pu-ber-ty (prē-pyōō'bər-tē) n. The period of life immediately before puberty, often marked by accelerated physical growth. —pre-pu'ber-tal, pre-pu'ber-al (-bər-əl) adj.

pre-pu-bes-cence (prē'pyōō-bēs'əns) n. Prepuberty.

pre-pu-bes-cent (prē'pyōō-bēs'ənt) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of prepuberty. — n. A prepubescent child.

pre-pub-li-ca-tion (prē-pūb'li-kā'shən) adj. Of or relating to the time just before a publication date, especially of a book: The marketing department was amazed by the number of prepublication orders.

pre-puce (prē'pyōōs') n. 1. See foreskin. 2. A loose fold of skin covering the glans clitoridis. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praepūtium : possibly prae-, pre- + pūtos*, penis.] —pre-pu'tial (-pyōō'shəl) adj.

pre-punch (prē-pūnch') v. tr. pre-punched, pre-punch-ing, pre-punch-es. Computer Science. To punch computer data cards or tape before an anticipated use.

pre-pu-pa (prē-pyōō'pə) n. pl. pre-pu-pae (-pē) or pre-pu-pas. 1. An inactive stage just before the pupa in the development of certain insects. 2. The form of an insect in this stage. —pre-pu'pal adj.

pre-quel (prē'kwəl) n. 1. A literary, cinematic, or dramatic work taking place in or concerned with a time before the action of a preexisting work: a prequel that featured the characters of the famous novel in their youth. 2. A literary, cinematic, or dramatic work that precedes, introduces, or leads up to a later work: "The sequel takes up right where the prequel left off" (Washington Post). [PRE- + (SE)QUEL.]

Pre-Raph-a-el-ite also pre-Raph-a-el-ite (prē-răf'ē-ə-līt', -ră'fē-) n. A painter or writer belonging to or influenced by the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, a society founded in England in 1848 to advance the style and spirit of Italian painting before Raphael. — adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the Pre-Raphaelites. —Pre-Raph'a-el-it-ism n.

pre-re-cord (prē'rī-kôrd') v. tr. pre-re-cord-ed, pre-re-cord-ing, pre-re-cords. To record (a television program, for example) at an earlier time for later presentation or use.

pre-reg-is-ter (prē-rěj'ī-stər) v. intr. pre-reg-is-tered, pre-reg-is-ter-ing, pre-reg-is-ters. To take part in preregistration.

pre-reg-is-tra-tion (prē'rěj-ī-strā'shən) n. An early registration, as for returning college students, that takes place before general registration.

pre-re-lease (prē'rī-lēs') n. Something released before an official or scheduled date. — adj. Of or relating to an interval preceding an official or scheduled release: a prerelease demonstration of a product; a prison prerelease program.

pre-req-ui-site (prē-rěk'wī-zīt) adj. Required or necessary as a prior condition: Competence is prerequisite to promotion. — n. Something that is prerequisite.

pre-re-tire-ment (prē'rī-tūr'mənt) adj. Of or relating to the period preceding retirement: workers of preretirement age; preretirement planning. — pre're-tire-ment n.

pre-rog-a-tive (prī-rög'ə-tīv) n. 1. An exclusive right or privilege held by a person or group, especially a hereditary or official right. See Synonyms at right. 2. The exclusive right and power to command, decide, rule, or judge: the principal's prerogative to suspend a student. 3. A natural gift or advantage that confers superiority. 4. Characteristic superiority; preeminence. — adj. Of, arising from, or exercising a prerogative. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praerogātiva, feminine of praerogātivus, asked first, from praerogātus, past participle of praerogāre, to ask before : prae-, pre- + rogāre, to ask; see reg- in Appendix.] — pre-rog'a-tived adj.

pres. abbr. 1. Grammar. Present. 2. Also Pres.. President.

pres-age (prēs'ij) n. 1. An indication or a warning of a future occurrence; an omen. 2. A feeling or an intuition of what is going to occur; a presentiment. 3. Prophetic significance or meaning. 4. Archaic. A prediction. — v.

pre-saged, pre-sag-ing, pre-sag-es (prī-sāj', prēs'ij). — v. tr. 1. To indicate or warn of in advance; portend. 2. To have a presentiment of. 3. To foretell or predict. — v. intr. To make or utter a prediction. [Middle English, from Latin praesāgium, from praesāgīre, to perceive beforehand : prae-, pre- + sāgīre, to perceive; see sāg- in Appendix.] — pre-sage'ful (prī-sāj'fəl) adj.

pre-sale (prē'sāl') n. 1. The period before something, such as a work of art, is available for sale to the public. 2. An exclusive or private sale held before an advertised sale. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: presale estimates; presale exhibitions.

Presb. abbr. Presbyterian.

Presby. abbr. Presbyterian.

pres-by-ope (prěz'bē-ōp', prēs'-) n. A person affected with presbyopia.

pres-by-o-pi-a (prěz'bē-ō'pē-ə, prēs'-) n. Inability of the eye to focus sharply on nearby objects, resulting from loss of elasticity of the crystalline lens with advancing age. [New Latin : Greek presbus, old man; see per¹ in Appendix + -ΟΡΙΑ.] —pres'by-op'ic (-ōp'ĭk, -ō'pĭk) adj.

pres-by-ter (prĕz'bĭ-tər, prĕs'-) n. 1. A priest in various hierarchical churches. 2. a. A teaching elder in the Presbyterian Church. b. A ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church. 3. An elder of the congregation in the early Christian church. [Late Latin, from Greek presbuteros, from comparative of presbus, old man. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pres-byt-er-ate (prĕz-bĭt'ər-ĭt, -ə-rāt', prĕs-) n. 1. The office of a presbyter. 2. A body or an order of presbyters.

pres-by-te-ri-al (prĕz'bĭ-tĭr'ĕ-əl, prĕs'-) adj. Of or relating to a presbyter or the presbytery. —pres'by-te'ri-al-ly adv.

pres-by-te-ri-an (prĕz'bĭ-tĭr'ĕ-ən, prĕs'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to ecclesiastical government by presbyters. 2. Presbyterian. Abbr. Presb., Presby. Of or relating to a Presbyterian Church. — n. also Presbyterian Abbr. Presb., Presby. A member or an adherent of a Presbyterian Church. —pres'by-te'ri-an-ism n.

Presbyterian Church (prĕz'bĭ-tĭr'ĕ-ən chŭrch) n. Any of various Protestant churches governed by presbyters and traditionally Calvinist in doctrine.

pres-by-ter-y (prĕz'bĭ-tĕr'ĕ, prĕs'-) n. pl. pres-by-ter-ies. 1. a. A court composed of Presbyterian Church ministers and representative elders of a particular locality. b. The district represented by this court. 2. Presbyters considered as a group. 3. Government of a church by presbyters. 4. The section of a church reserved for the clergy. 5. Roman Catholic Church. The residence of a priest. [Middle English presbetory, priests' bench, from Late Latin presbyterium, council of elders, from Greek presbuterion, from presbuteros, elder. See PRESBYTER.] pre-school (prĕ'skōōl') adj. Of, relating to, intended for, or being the early years of childhood that precede the beginning of elementary school. — n. (prĕ'skōōl') A school for children who are not old enough to attend kindergarten; a nursery school.

pre-school-er (prĕ'skōō'lər) n. 1. A child who is not old enough to attend kindergarten. 2. A child who is enrolled in a preschool.

pre-school-ing (prĕ'skōō'lĭng) n. Early childhood education, especially when received at a preschool.

pre-sci-ence (prĕ'shĕ-əns, -shəns, prĕsh'ĕ-əns, prĕsh'əns) n. Knowledge of actions or events before they occur; foresight.

pre-sci-ent (prĕ'shĕ-ənt, -shənt, prĕsh'ĕ-ənt, prĕsh'ənt) adj. 1. Of or relating to prescience. 2. Possessing prescience. [French prescient, from Old French, from Latin praesciēns, praescient- present participle of praescire, to know beforehand : prae-, pre- + scire, to know; see skei- in Appendix.] —pre'sci-ent-ly adv.

pre-sci-en-tif-ic (prĕ-sĭ'ən-tĭf'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or occurring at a time before the advent of modern science and the application of its methods.

pre-scind (prĭ-sĭndʹ) v. pre-scind-ed, pre-scind-ing, pre-scinds. — v. tr. To separate or divide in thought; consider individually. — v. intr. To withdraw one's attention. [Latin praescindere, to cut off in front : prae-, pre- + scindere, to cut off, split; see skei- in Appendix.]

Prescott (prĕsʹkət, -kötʹ) A city of central Arizona north-northwest of Phoenix. It was territorial capital from 1864 to 1867 and from 1877 to 1889 and is now a trade center and health resort. Population, 26,455.

Prescott (prĕsʹkət, -kötʹ), Samuel. 1751-1777?. American Revolutionary patriot who on April 18, 1775, joined Paul Revere and William Dawes on their ride to spread the news of the British advance on Concord, Massachusetts. Because Revere was captured and Dawes was forced to retreat, only Prescott was able to warn the militias of Lincoln and Concord.

Prescott (prĕsʹkət, -kötʹ), William. 1726-1795. American Revolutionary commander who led the defense of Breed's Hill during the Battle of Bunker Hill (June 17, 1775).

Prescott (prĕsʹkət, -kötʹ), William Hickling. 1796-1859. American historian noted for his lively studies of the conquistadors, including History of the Conquest of Mexico (1843).

pre-screen (prĕ-skrĕnʹ) v. tr. pre-screened, pre-screen-ing, pre-screens.
1. To view (a movie) before release for public showing. 2. To examine or interview before further selection processes occur: prescreen applicants for interviews.

pre-scribe (prĭ-skrĭbʹ) v. pre-scribed, pre-scrib-ing, pre-scribes. — v. tr.
1. To set down as a rule or guide; enjoin. See Synonyms at dictate. 2. To order the use of (a medicine or other treatment). — v. intr. 1. To establish rules, laws, or directions. 2. To order a medicine or other treatment. 3. Law. a. To assert a right or title to something on the grounds of prescription. b. To become invalidated or unenforceable by the process of prescription. [Middle English prescriben, from Latin praescribere : prae-, pre- + scribere, to write; see skribh- in Appendix.] — pre-scrib'er n.

pre-script (prĕʹskrĭptʹ) n. Something prescribed, especially a rule or regulation of conduct. — adj. (prĕʹskrĭptʹ, prĭ-skrĭptʹ) Having been established as a rule; prescribed. [From Middle English, prescribed, from Latin praescriptum, neuter past participle of praescribere, to order, prescribe. See PRESCRIBE.]

pre-scrip-ti-ble (prĭ-skrĭpʹtə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be prescribed: prescriptible regulations. 2. Requiring or derived from prescription. — pre-scripʹti-bilʹi-ty n.

pre-scrip-tion (prĭ-skrĭpʹshən) n. 1. a. The act of establishing official rules, laws, or directions. b. Something prescribed as a rule. 2. a. A written order, especially by a physician, for the preparation and administration of a medicine or other treatment. b. A prescribed medicine or other treatment. c. An ophthalmologist's or optometrist's written instruction, as for the grinding of corrective lenses. 3. A formula directing the preparation of something. 4. Law. The process of acquiring title to property by reason of uninterrupted possession of specified duration. Also called positive prescription. 5. Law. The limitation of time beyond which an action, a debt, or a crime is no longer valid or enforceable. Also called negative prescription — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a prescription drug; a prescription pad. [Middle English prescripcion, establishment of a claim, from Old French prescription, from Medieval Latin praescriptiō, praescriptiōn-, from Latin, introduction, precept, from praescriptus, past participle of praescribere, to order. See PRESCRIBE.]

pre-scrip·tive (prī-skřip'tiv) adj. 1. Sanctioned or authorized by long-standing custom or usage. 2. Making or giving injunctions, directions, laws, or rules. 3. Law. Acquired by or based on uninterrupted possession. —pre-scrip'tive·ly adv. —pre-scrip'tive·ness n.

prescriptive grammar (prī-skřip'tiv grām'ər) n. A grammar that attempts to establish norms or rules for correct usage and to characterize incorrect usage, as opposed to a grammar that simply describes how a language is used.

pre-scrip·tiv·ist (prī-skřip'tə-vīst) n. One who supports or promotes prescriptive grammar.

pre-sea·son (prē'sē'zən) n. Sports. The period immediately before the start of a new season, in which athletes undergo intensive training and participate in exhibition games.

pre-se·lect (prē'sī-lěkt') v. tr. pre-se·lect·ed, pre-se·lect·ing, pre-se·lects. To select beforehand, usually according to a specific criterion. —pre'se·lec'tion n.

pre-sell (prē-sěl') v. tr. pre-sold (-söld'), pre-sell·ing, pre-sells. 1. To sell (a house, for example) in advance of construction. 2. To promote (a product not yet on the market) by means of advertising. 3. To condition (a potential customer) in advance for later purchase of a product.

pres·ence (prěz'əns) n. 1. The state or fact of being present; current existence or occurrence. 2. Immediate proximity in time or space. 3. The area immediately surrounding a great personage, especially a sovereign. 4. A person who is present. 5. a. A person's bearing, especially when it commands respectful attention: "He continues to possess the presence, mental as well as physical, of the young man" (Brendan Gill). See Synonyms at bearing. b. The quality of self-assurance and effectiveness that permits a performer to achieve a rapport with the audience: stage presence. 6. A supernatural influence felt to be nearby. 7. The diplomatic, political, or military influence of a nation in a foreign country, especially as evidenced by the posting of its diplomats or its troops there: "The American diplomatic presence in London began in 1785 when John Adams became our first minister" (Nancy Holmes).

presence of mind (prĕz'əns ūv mīnd) n. The ability to think and act calmly and efficiently, especially in an emergency.

pres-ent¹ (prĕz'ənt) n. 1. A moment or period in time perceptible as intermediate between past and future; now. 2. Abbr. pres., pr. Grammar. a. The present tense. b. A verb form in the present tense. 3. presents. Law. The document or instrument in question: Be it known by these presents. — adj. 1. Existing or happening now; current: the present leader; present trends. 2. a. Being at hand or in attendance: Thirty guests were present at the ceremony. b. Existing in something specified: Oxygen is present in the bloodstream. 3. Now being considered; actually here or involved: the present subject; present company excepted. 4. Abbr. pres., pr. Grammar. Designating a verb tense or form that expresses current time. 5. Archaic. Readily available; immediate. 6. Obsolete. Alert to circumstances; attentive. — idioms. at present. At the present time; right now. for the present. For the time being; temporarily. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praesēns, praesent- present participle of praeesse, to be present : prae-, pre- + esse, to be; see es- in Appendix.] — pres'ent-ness n.

pre-sent² (prĭ-zĕnt') v. tr. pre-sent-ed, pre-sent-ing, pre-sents. 1. a. To introduce, especially with formal ceremony. b. To introduce (a young woman) to society with conventional ceremony. 2. To bring before the public: present a play. 3. a. To make a gift or an award of. b. To make a gift to. 4. To offer for observation, examination, or consideration; show or display. See Synonyms at offer. 5. To salute with (a weapon, such as a rifle or saber). 6. Ecclesiastical. To recommend (a cleric) for a benefice. 7. Law. a. To offer to a legislature or court for consideration. b. To bring a charge or an indictment against. — n. also pres-ent (prĕz'ənt) Something presented; a gift. [Middle English presenten, from Old French presenter, from Latin presentāre, to show, from praesēns, praesent- present participle of praeesse, to be in front of. See PRESENT¹.]

—pre-sent'er n.

pre-sent-a-ble (prĭ-zĕnt'tə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be given, displayed, or offered: presentable gifts; presentable attire. 2. Fit for introduction to others: presentable relatives. — pre-sent'a-bil'i-ty, pre-sent'a-ble-ness n. — pre-sent'a-bly adv.

pre-sent arms (prĭ-zĕnt' ärmz) n. 1. A position in the military manual of arms in which the rifle is held vertically in front of the body. 2. A command to assume present arms or to give a hand salute.

pres-en-ta-tion (prĕz'ən-tā'shən, prĕ'zən-) n. 1. a. The act of presenting. b. The state of being presented. 2. A performance, as of a drama. 3. a. Something, such as an award or a gift, that is offered or given. b. Something, such as a lecture or speech, that is set forth for an audience: gave a presentation on drug abuse. 4. a. A formal introduction. b. A social debut. 5. Ecclesiastical. The act or right of naming a cleric to a benefice. 6. The process of offering for consideration or display. 7. Medicine. The position of the fetus in the uterus at birth with respect to the mouth of the uterus. —pres'en-ta'-tion-al adj.

pre-sent-a-tive (prĭ-zĕn'tə-tĭv) adj. 1. Having the capacity or function of bringing an idea or image to mind. 2. a. Perceived or capable of being perceived directly rather than through association. b. Having the ability to so perceive.

3. Ecclesiastical. Capable of naming or of being named to a benefice.

—pre-sent'a-tive-ness n.

pres-ent-day (prĕz'ənt-dā') adj. Now in existence or progress; current: present-day attitudes about the family.

pres-ent-ee (prĕz'ən-tē', prĭ-zĕn'-) n. 1. One who is presented. 2. One to whom something is given.

pre-sen-tient (prĕ-sĕn'shənt, -shĕ-ənt) adj. Having a presentiment. [Latin praesentiēns, praesentient- present participle of praesentĭre, to feel beforehand. See PRESENTIMENT.]

pre-sen-ti-ment (prĭ-zĕn'tə-mənt) n. A sense that something is about to occur; a premonition. See Synonyms at apprehension. [Obsolete French, from presentir, to feel beforehand, from Latin praesentĭre : prae-, pre- + sentĭre, to feel; see sent- in Appendix.] —pre-sen'ti-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj.

pres-ent-ly (prĕz'ənt-lē) adv. 1. In a short time; soon: She will arrive presently.

2. Usage Problem. At this time or period; now: He is presently staying with us.

3. Archaic. At once; immediately.

USAGE NOTE: An original meaning of presently was “at the present time; currently.” That sense is said to have disappeared from the literary language in the 17th century, but it has survived in popular usage and is widely found nowadays in literate speech and writing. Still, there is a lingering prejudice against this use. In the most recent survey the sentence General Walters is... presently the United States Ambassador to the United Nations was acceptable to exactly 50 percent of the Usage Panel.

pre-sent-ment (prĭ-zĕnt'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of presenting to view or to the mind. b. Something expressed, presented, or exhibited. c. The light in which something is presented. 2. Law. a. The act of submitting or presenting a formal statement of a legal matter to a court or an authorized person. b. The report written by a grand jury concerning an offense and based on the jury's own knowledge and observation. 3. The act of presenting a bill or note for payment.

pres-ent participle (prĕz'ənt pər'tĭ-sĭp'əl) n. Grammar. A participle expressing present action, formed in English by the infinitive plus -ing and used to express present action in relation to the time indicated by the finite verb in its clause, to form progressive tenses with the auxiliary be, and to function as a verbal adjective.

pres-ent per-fect (prĕz'ənt pŭr'fikt) n. Grammar. 1. The verb tense expressing action completed at the present time, formed in English by combining the present tense of have with a past participle, as in He has spoken. 2. A verb in the present perfect tense.

pres-ent tense (prĕz'ənt tĕns) n. Grammar. The verb tense expressing action in the present time, as in She writes; she is writing.

pres-er-va-tion-ist (prĕz'ər-vā'shə-nĭst) n. One who advocates preservation, especially of natural areas, historical sites, or endangered species.

—pres'er-va'tion-ism n.

pre-ser-va-tive (prĭ-zŭr'və-tĭv) adj. Tending to preserve or capable of preserving. — n. Something used to preserve, especially a chemical added to foods to inhibit spoilage.

pre-serve (prĭ-zŭrv') v. pre-served, pre-serv-ing, pre-serves. — v. tr.

1. To maintain in safety from injury, peril, or harm; protect. 2. To keep in perfect or unaltered condition; maintain unchanged. 3. To keep or maintain intact: tried to preserve family harmony. See Synonyms at defend. 4. To prepare (food) for future use, as by canning or salting. 5. To prevent (organic bodies) from decaying or spoiling. 6. To keep or protect (game or fish) for one's private hunting or fishing. — v. intr. 1. To treat fruit or other foods so as to prevent decay.

2. To maintain a private area stocked with game or fish. — n. 1. Something that acts to preserve; a preservative. 2. Often preserves. Fruit cooked with sugar to protect against decay or fermentation. 3. An area maintained for the protection of wildlife or natural resources. 4. Something considered as being the exclusive province of certain persons: Ancient Greek is the preserve of scholars.

[Middle English preserven, from Old French preserver, from Medieval Latin praeservāre, from Late Latin, to observe beforehand : Latin prae-, pre- + Latin servāre, to guard, preserve; see ser-1 in Appendix.] —pre-serv'a-bil'i-ty n.

—pre-serv'a-ble adj. —pres'er-va'tion (prĕz'ər-vā'shən) n. —pre-serv'er n.

pre-set (prĕ-sĕt') v. tr. pre-set, pre-set-ting, pre-sets. To set (an automatic control, for example) beforehand: preset a microwave oven. —pre-set'ta-ble adj.

pre-shrunk also pre-shrunk (prĕ'shrŭngk') adj. Of, relating to, or being fabric or a garment that has undergone shrinking during manufacture to minimize subsequent shrinkage: preshrunk jeans.

pre-side (prĭ-zĭd') v. intr. pre-sid-ed, pre-sid-ing, pre-sides. 1. To hold the position of authority; act as chairperson or president. 2. To possess or exercise authority or control. 3. Music. To be the featured instrumental performer: pre- sided at the keyboard. [French présider, from Old French, from Latin praesidēre: prae-, pre- + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.] —pre-sid'er n.

pres-i-den-cy (prēz'ī-dən-sē, -dēn'-) n. pl. pres-i-den-cies. 1. The office, function, or term of a president. 2. a. Often Presidency. The office of president of a republic. b. Presidency. The office of the President of the United States. 3. Mormon Church. a. A governing body on a local level consisting of three men. b. Often Presidency. The chief administrative body of the church.

pres-i-dent (prēz'ī-dənt, -dənt') n. Abbr. pres., Pres., p., P. 1. One appointed or elected to preside over an organized body of people, such as an assembly or a meeting. 2. a. Often President. The chief executive of a republic.

b. President. The chief executive of the United States, serving as both chief of state and chief political executive. 3. The chief officer of a branch of government, a corporation, a board of trustees, a university, or a similar body. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin praesidēs, praesident- from present participle of praesidēre, to preside. See PRESIDE.] —pres'i-dent-ship' n.

pres-i-dent-e-lect (prēz'ī-dənt-ī-lēkt') n. pl. pres-i-dents-e-lect (prēz'ī-dənts-). A person who has been elected president but has not yet been inducted into office.

Pre-si-den-te Pru-den-te (prē'zī-dēn'tī prō-dēn'tī) A city of south-central Brazil near the Paraná River west-northwest of São Paulo. It is a processing and shipping center for a coffee-growing region. Population, 127,903.

pres-i-den-tial (prēz'ī-dēn'shəl) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to a president or presidency. b. Befitting a president, especially the office of the President of the United States: criticized the candidate for not looking presidential. 2. Of or relating to a political system in which the chief officer is a president who is elected independently of the legislature for a fixed term: a presidential government.

—pres'i-den'tial-ly adv.

president pro tem (prēz'ī-dənt prō tēm') n. pl. presidents pro tem. Informal. A president pro tempore.

president pro tem-po-re (prēz'ī-dənt prō tēm'pə-rē) n. pl. presidents pro tempore. The senator who presides over the U.S. Senate in the absence of the Vice President.

Pres-i-dents' Day (prēz'ī-dənts dā, -dənts) n. The third Monday in February, observed in the United States as a legal holiday in commemoration of the birthdays of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

pre-sid-i-a (prī-sīd'ē-ə) n. A plural of presidium.

pre-sid-i-al (prī-sīd'ē-əl) also pre-sid-i-ar-y (-ēr'ē) adj. Of, relating to, possessing, or being a garrison.

pre-si-di-o (prī-sē'dē-ō', -sīd'ē-ō') n. pl. pre-si-di-os. A garrison, especially a fortress of the kind established in the southwest United States by the Spanish to protect their holdings and missions. [Spanish, from Latin praesidium, guard, defense, from praesidēre, to guard. See PRESIDE.]

pre-sid-i-um (prī-sīd'ē-əm) n. pl. pre-sid-i-a (-ē-ə) or pre-sid-i-ums. 1. Any of various permanent executive committees in Communist countries having power to act for a larger governing body. 2. Presidium. An executive committee of the Supreme Soviet headed by the president. [Russian prezidium, from Latin praesidium, garrison. See PRESIDIO.]

pre-sig-ni-fy (prē-sīg'nə-fī') v. tr. pre-sig-ni-fied, pre-sig-ni-fy-ing, pre-sig-ni-fies. To indicate or signify beforehand; foreshadow.

Pres-ley (prēs'lē, prēz'-), Elvis Aron. Known as “the King.” 1935-1977. American singer whose numerous hit records, such as “Heartbreak Hotel,” “Hound Dog,” and “Don’t Be Cruel,” and charismatic manner greatly influenced American popular culture.

pre-soak (prē-sōk') v. tr. pre-soaked, pre-soak-ing, pre-soaks. To soak (laundry) before washing. — n. (prē'sōk') 1. The act or an instance of presoaking. 2. A liquid preparation in which laundry is presoaked. 3. A cycle on an automatic washing machine for presoaking laundry.

pre-So-cratic (prē'sō-krăt'īk, -sə-) adj. Of or relating to the Greek philosophers or philosophical systems of thought before Socrates. — n. A pre-Socratic philosopher.

pre-sold (prē-sōld') v. Past tense and past participle of presell.

pre-sort (prē-sôrt') v. tr. pre-sort-ed, pre-sort-ing, pre-sorts. To sort (mail) according to ZIP codes before delivering to a post office.

press¹ (prēs) v. pressed, press-ing, press-es. — v. tr. 1. To exert steady weight or force against; bear down on. 2. a. To squeeze the juice or other contents from. b. To extract (juice, for example) by squeezing or compressing. 3. a. To reshape or make compact by applying steady force; compress. b. To iron (clothing, for example). 4. To clasp in fondness or politeness. 5. To try to influence, as by insistent arguments; importune or entreat. 6. To urge or force to action; impel. 7. To place in trying or distressing circumstances; harass or oppress. See Synonyms at urge. 8. To move (keys on a computer keyboard, for example) by applying pressure. 9. To lay stress on; emphasize. 10. To advance or carry on vigorously: “Far from backing down, he pressed the attack” (Justin Kaplan). 11. To put forward importunately or insistently. 12. To make (a phonograph record or videodisk) from a mold or matrix. 13. Sports. To lift (a weight) to a position above the head without moving the legs. — v. intr. 1. To exert force or pressure. 2. To weigh heavily, as on the mind. 3. To advance eagerly; push forward. 4. To require haste; be urgent. 5. To iron clothes or other material. 6. To assemble closely and in large numbers; crowd. 7. To employ urgent persuasion or entreaty. 8. Sports. To raise or lift a weight in a press. 9. Basketball. To employ a press. — n. 1. Any of various machines or devices that apply pressure. 2. Any of various machines used for printing; a printing press. 3. A place or an establishment where matter is printed. 4. The art, method, or business of printing. 5. a. The collecting and publishing or broadcasting of news; journalism in general. b. The entirety of media and agencies that collect, publish, transmit, or broadcast the news. c. The people involved in the media, as news reporters, photographers, publishers, and broadcasters. d. Commentary or coverage especially in newspapers or periodicals: “Like the pool hall and the tattoo parlor, the motorcycle usually gets a bad press” (R.Z. Shepard). 6. The act of gathering in large numbers or of pushing forward. 7. A large gathering; a throng. See Synonyms at crowd¹. 8. a. The act of applying pressure. b. The state of being pressed. 9. The haste or urgency of business or matters. 10. The set of proper creases in a garment or fabric, formed by ironing. 11. Chiefly Northeastern U.S. An upright closet or case used for storing clothing, books, or other articles. 12. A viselike device for keeping a racket from warping. 13. Sports. A lift in weightlifting in which the weight is raised to shoulder level and then steadily pushed straight overhead without movement of the legs. 14. Basketball. An aggressive defense tactic in which players guard opponents closely, often over the entire court. —idiom. press the flesh. Informal. To shake hands and mingle with many people, especially while campaigning for public office. [Middle English pressen, from Old French presser, from Latin pressāre, frequentative of premere, to press. See per-⁴ in Appendix.]

press² (prĕs) v. tr. pressed, press-ing, press-es. 1. To force into service in the army or navy; impress. 2. a. To take arbitrarily or by force, especially for public use. b. To use in a manner different from the usual or intended, especially in an emergency. — n. 1. Conscription or impressment into service, especially into the army or navy. 2. Obsolete. An official warrant for impressing men into military service. [Alteration of obsolete prest, to hire for military service by advance payment, from Middle English, enlistment money, loan, from Old French, from prester, to lend, from Medieval Latin praestāre, from Latin, to furnish, from praestō, present, at hand.]

press agency (prĕs ā'jən-sē) n. See news agency.

press agent (prĕs ā'jənt) n. Abbr. PA, P.A. A person employed to arrange advertising and publicity, as for a performer or for a business. —press agency n.

press association (prĕs ə-sō'sē-ā'shən) n. See news agency.

press-board (prĕs'bôrd', -bôrd') n. 1. A heavy glazed paper or pasteboard used especially to cover the platen or cylinder of a printing press. 2. A small ironing board.

press box (prĕs bŏks) n. A section for reporters, as in a stadium.

press conference (prĕs kŏn'fər-əns) n. An interview held for news reporters by a political figure or a famous person. Also called news conference press-er (prĕs'ər) n. 1. One who presses clothes. 2. Any of various devices that apply pressure to a product in manufacturing or canning.

press gang also press-gang (prĕs'gǎng') n. A company of men under an officer detailed to force men into military or naval service.

press-gang (prĕs'gǎng') v. tr. press-ganged, press-gang-ing, press-gangs. 1. To force into military or naval service. 2. To force or coerce: "press-ganging a consumer into buying something he doesn't want" (Feona McEwan).

press-ing (prĕs'ɪŋ) adj. 1. Demanding immediate attention; urgent: a pressing need. See Synonyms at urgent. 2. Very earnest or persistent; insistent: a pressing invitation. — n. 1. The process or an instance of applying pressure by means of a press. 2. a. A phonograph record pressed from a master mold or matrix. b. A number of recordings pressed at the same time. 3. Urgent solicitation; insistence. — press'ing-ly adv.

press kit (prĕs kīt) n. A packaged set of promotional materials, such as photographs and background information, for distribution to the press, as at a news conference or before the release of a new product.

press-man (prĕs'mən, -mǎn') n. 1. A man who operates a printing press. 2. Chiefly British. A newspaper reporter.

press-mark (prĕs'mǎrk') n. 1. Printing. A notation or figure in the margin of a printed sheet indicating the press on which it was printed. 2. Chiefly British. A notation in or on a book indicating where it should be placed in a library.

press of sail (prĕs ūv sāl) n. Nautical. The greatest amount of sail that a ship can carry safely. Also called press of canvas pres-sor (prĕs'ôr', -ər) adj. Causing an increase in blood pressure. [Late Latin, one who presses, from Latin premere, press-, to press. See PRESS¹.]

press release (prĕs rĭ-lĕs') n. An announcement of an event, a performance, or other newsworthy item that is issued to the press.

press-room (prĕs'rōom', -rōom') n. The room in a printing or newspaper publishing establishment that contains the presses.

press run or press-run (prĕs'rŭn') n. 1. Continuous operation of a printing press for a specific job. 2. The number of copies printed in one such continuous operation.

press secretary (prĕs sĕk'rĭ-tĕr'ĕ) n. One who officially manages the public affairs and press conferences of a public figure.

pres-sure (prĕsh'ər) n. 1. a. The act of pressing. b. The condition of being pressed. 2. The application of continuous force by one body on another that it is touching; compression. 3. Abbr. P Physics. Force applied uniformly over a surface, measured as force per unit of area. 4. Meteorology. Atmospheric pressure. 5. A compelling or constraining influence, such as a moral force, on the mind or will: pressure to conform; peer-group pressure. 6. Urgent claim or demand: under the pressure of business; doesn't work well under pressure. 7. An oppressive condition of physical, mental, social, or economic distress. 8. A physical sensation produced by compression of a part of the body. 9. Archaic. A mark made by application of force or weight; an impression. — v. tr. pres-sured, pres-sur-ing, pres-sures. 1. To force, as by overpowering influence or persuasion. 2. To pressurize. 3. To pressure-cook. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pressūra, from pressus, past participle of premere, to press. See per⁴ in Appendix.]

pressure cabin (prĕsh'ər kăb'ĭn) n. A pressurized section of an aircraft.

pres-sure-cook (prĕsh'ər-kōōk') v. tr. pres-sure--cooked, pres-sure-cook-ing, pres-sure--cooks. To cook in a pressure cooker.

pressure cooker (prĕsh'ər kōōk'ər) n. 1. An airtight metal pot that uses steam under pressure at high temperature to cook food quickly. 2. Informal. A situation or an atmosphere of difficulty, stress, or anxiety: "placing children into social, educational pressure cookers" (Fred M. Hechinger).

pressure gauge (prĕsh'ər gāj) n. 1. A device for measuring the pressure of a gas or liquid. 2. A device for measuring the pressure of explosions.

pressure group (prĕsh'ər grōōp) n. An interest group that endeavors to influence public policy and especially governmental legislation, regarding its particular concerns and priorities.

pressure point (prĕsh'ər point) n. 1. Any of several points on the body at which an underlying artery can be pressed against a bone to stop distal bleeding. 2. An area on the skin that is highly sensitive to the application of pressure.

pressure suit (prĕsh'ər sōōt) n. A garment that is worn in high-altitude aircraft or in spacecraft to compensate for low-pressure conditions.

pres-sur-ize (prĕsh'ə-rīz') v. tr. pres-sur-ized, pres-sur-iz-ing, pres-sur-iz-es. 1. To maintain normal air pressure in (an enclosure, as an aircraft or a submarine). 2. To put (gas or liquid) under a greater than normal pressure. 3. To design to resist pressure. 4. To pressure-cook. 5. Informal. To subject to excessive stress, strain, or vexation: an executive who was pressurized by a heavy workload. —pres'sur-i-za'tion (-ər-ĭ-ză'shən) n. —pres'sur-iz'er n.

press-work (prĕs'wŭrk') n. 1. Management or operation of a printing press. 2. The matter printed by such a press.

Pres-ter John (prĕs'tər jŏn') n. A legendary medieval Christian priest and king thought to have reigned over a Christian kingdom in the Far East or Ethiopia. [Middle English prestre, priest, from Old French, from Late Latin presbyter. See PRESBYTER.]

pre-ster-num (prĕ-stŭr'nəm) n. See manubrium (n., sense 1).

pres-ti-dig-i-ta-tion (prĕs'tĭ-dĭj'ĭ-tă'shən) n. Manual skill and dexterity in the execution of tricks; sleight of hand. [French (influenced by prestigiateur, juggler, conjurer, from prestige, illusion); see PRESTIGE, from prestidigitateur, conjurer

: preste, nimble (from Italian presto); see PRESTO + Latin digitus, finger; see DIGIT.]

—pres'ti·dig'i·ta'tor n.

pres-tige (prĕ-stĕzh', -stĕj') n. 1. The level of respect at which one is regarded by others; standing. 2. A person's high standing among others; honor or esteem. 3. Widely recognized prominence, distinction, or importance: a position of prestige in diplomatic circles. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a prestige address; the prestige groups in society. [French, illusion, from Latin praestīgiae, tricks, probably alteration of praestrīgiae*, from praestringere, to touch, blunt, blind : prae-, pre- + stringere, to draw tight; see streig- in Appendix.]

pres-ti-gious (prĕ-stĕj'jəs, -stij'əs) adj. Having prestige; esteemed. —pres-ti-gious-ly adv. —pres-ti-gious-ness n.

pres-tis-si-mo (prĕ-stīs'ə-mō') Music. adv. & adj. In as fast a tempo as possible. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl. pres-tis-si-mos. A prestissimo passage or movement. [Italian, superlative of presto, presto. See PRESTO.]

pres-to (prĕs'tō) adv. 1. Music. In a very fast tempo, usually considered to be faster than allegro but slower than prestissimo. Used chiefly as a direction. 2. So suddenly that magic seems involved; right away. — n. pl. pres-tos. Music. A passage or movement that is performed presto. [Italian, from Late Latin praestus, quick, from Latin praestō, at hand.] —pres'to adj.

Pres-ton (prĕs'tən) A borough of northwest England north-northeast of Liverpool. The Jacobites surrendered here after an uprising in 1715. Population, 125,800.

Prest-wick (prĕst'wĭk) A burgh of southwest Scotland north of Ayr. It is a resort with a noted golf course and the site of an international airport. Population, 13,174.

pre-sum-a-ble (prĭ-zōō'mə-bəl) adj. That can be presumed or taken for granted; reasonable as a supposition: presumable causes of the disaster.

—pre-sum'a-bly adv.

pre-sume (prĭ-zōōm') v. pre-sumed, pre-sum-ing, pre-sumes. — v. tr.

1. To take for granted as being true in the absence of proof to the contrary. 2. To give reasonable evidence for assuming; appear to prove. 3. To venture without authority or permission; dare: He presumed to invite himself to dinner. — v. intr.

1. To act overconfidently; take liberties. 2. To take unwarranted advantage of something; go beyond the proper limits: Don't presume on their hospitality.

3. To take for granted that something is true or factual; suppose: That's the new assistant, I presume. [Middle English presumen, from Old French presumer, from Late Latin praesūmere, from Latin, to anticipate : prae-, pre- + sūmere, to take; see em- in Appendix.] —pre-sum'ed-ly (-zōō'mĭd-lĕ) adv. —pre-sum'er n.

SYNONYMS: presume, presuppose, postulate, posit, assume. These verbs signify to take something for granted or as being a fact. To presume is to suppose that something is reasonable, justifiable, sound, or possible in the absence of proof to the contrary: “I presume you’re tired after the long ride” (Edith Wharton). We cannot presume the existence of life on other planets. Presuppose can mean merely to believe or suppose in advance; it can also mean to require as an antecedent condition: It is unrealistic to presuppose a sophisticated knowledge of harmony and counterpoint in a beginning music student. The evolution of species presupposes a process of natural selection. Postulate and posit denote the assertion of the existence, reality, necessity, or truth of something, as something considered to be self-evident or axiomatic, as the basis for reasoning or argument: “We can see individuals, but we can’t see providence; we have to postulate it” (Aldous Huxley). Historical linguists posit a common ancestor from which both Romance and Germanic languages descend. To assume is to accept something as existing or being true without proof or on inconclusive grounds: Why do you assume that I’m angry? “We must never assume that which is incapable of proof” (G.H. Lewes).

pre-sum-ing (prī-zōō’ming) adj. Having or showing excessive and arrogant self-confidence; presumptuous. —pre-sum’ing-ly adv.

pre-sump-tion (prī-zūmp’shən) n. 1. Behavior or language that is boldly arrogant or offensive; effrontery. 2. The act of presuming or accepting as true. 3. Acceptance or belief based on reasonable evidence; assumption or supposition. 4. A condition or basis for accepting or presuming. 5. Law. A conclusion derived from a particular set of facts based on law, rather than probable reasoning. [Middle English presumpcion, from Old French, from Late Latin praesūptiō, praesūptiōn-, from Latin, anticipation, from praesūptus, past participle of praesūmere, to anticipate. See PRESUME.]

pre-sump-tive (prī-zūmp’tiv) adj. 1. Providing a reasonable basis for belief or acceptance. 2. Founded on probability or presumption. —pre-sump’tive-ly adv.

pre-sump-tu-ous (prī-zūmp’chōō-əs) adj. Going beyond what is right or proper; excessively forward. [Middle English, from Old French presumptueux, from Late Latin presūptuōsus, variant of praesūptiōsus, from praesūptiō, presumption. See PRESUMPTION.] —pre-sump’tu-ous-ly adv.

—pre-sump’tu-ous-ness n.

pre-sup-pose (prē’sə-pōz’) v. tr. pre-sup-posed, pre-sup-pos-ing, pre-sup-pos-es. 1. To believe or suppose in advance. 2. To require or involve necessarily as an antecedent condition. See Synonyms at presume.

—pre-sup’po-si’tion (-sūp’ə-zīsh’ən) n. —pre-sup’po-si’tion-al adj.

pre-syn-ap-tic (prē’sī-năp’tik) adj. Situated in front of or occurring before a synapse: a presynaptic nerve fiber; a presynaptic stimulus.

pret. abbr. Grammar. Preterit.

prêt-à-porter (prêt'ä-pôr-tā', -pôr-) n. Ready-to-wear clothing. [French : prêt, ready + à, to + porter, to wear.]

pre-tax (prē'tāks') adj. Existing before tax deductions: pretax income.

pre-teen (prē'tēn') adj. 1. Relating to or designed for children especially between the ages of 9 and 12: preteen clothing. 2. Being a child especially between the ages of 9 and 12; preadolescent. — n. A preadolescent boy or girl. Also called subteen pre-teen-ager (prē'tēn'ā'jər) n. A preteen.

pre-tence (prē'tēns', prī-tēns') n. Chiefly British. Variant of pretense.

pre-tend (prī-tēnd') v. pre-tend-ed, pre-tend-ing, pre-tends. — v. tr.

1. To give a false appearance of; feign: “You had to pretend conformity while privately pursuing high and dangerous nonconformism” (Anthony Burgess). 2. To claim or allege insincerely or falsely; profess: doesn't pretend to be an expert. 3. To represent fictitiously in play; make believe: pretended they were on a cruise. 4. To take upon oneself; venture: I cannot pretend to say that you are wrong. — v. intr.

1. To feign an action or a character, as in play. 2. To put forward a claim. 3. To make pretensions: pretends to gourmet tastes. — adj. Informal. Imitation; make-believe: pretend money; pretend pearls. [Middle English pretenden, from Old French pretendre, from Latin praetendere : prae-, pre- + tendere, to extend; see ten- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: pretend, assume, affect, simulate, feign, fake, counterfeit. These verbs all mean to take on a false or misleading appearance. Pretend often suggests a vain or transparent attempt to fool or deceive: “My bedmate pretended to be asleep” (George W. Cable). Assume may—but does not necessarily—connote dishonesty, insincerity, or trickery: “Assume a virtue, if you have it not” (Shakespeare). I assumed an air of confidence that I was far from feeling. Affect suggests an effort to give the appearance of something either out of personal preference or to make an impression: “He affects the disdainful petulance of a rock star” (Annalyn Swan). Simulate emphasizes the assumption of an appearance or a form that closely resembles reality: “A... verdant scum upon the surface of deep pools simulated the turf that had been removed” (John Lothrop Motley). The remaining terms—feign, fake, and counterfeit—all imply at least a measure of deliberate sham. Feign suggests false representation or fictitious fabrication: The child feigned a look of innocence when his mother asked who had eaten the cake. Fake implies fraudulent simulation: He faked an interest in my work. Counterfeit denotes a close imitation that can often pass for an original: “Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee” (Oliver Goldsmith).

pre-tend·ed (prī-tĕn'dĭd) adj. 1. Not genuine or sincere; feigned: a pretended interest in the proceedings. 2. Supposed; alleged: the pretended heir to the throne.

—pre-tend'ed·ly adv.

pre-tend·er (prī-tĕn'dĕr) n. 1. One who simulates, pretends, or alleges falsely; a hypocrite or dissembler. 2. One who sets forth a claim, especially a claimant to a throne.

pre-tense (prē'tĕns', prī-tĕns') n. 1. The act of pretending; a false appearance or action intended to deceive. 2. A false or studied show; an affectation: a pretense of nonchalance. 3. A professed but feigned reason or excuse; a pretext: under false pretenses. 4. Something imagined or pretended. 5. Mere show without reality; outward appearance. 6. A right asserted with or without foundation; a claim. See Synonyms at claim. 7. The quality or state of being pretentious; ostentation. [Middle English, from Old French pretensse, from Medieval Latin praetēnsa*, from Late Latin, feminine of praetēnsus, alteration of Latin praetentus, past participle of praetendere, to pretend, assert. See PRETEND.] pre-ten-sion (prī-tĕn'shən) n. 1. A specious allegation; a pretext. 2. A claim to something, such as a privilege or right. See Synonyms at claim. 3. The advancing of a claim. 4. Ostentatious display; pretentiousness.

pre-ten-tious (prī-tĕn'shəs) adj. 1. Claiming or demanding a position of distinction or merit, especially when unjustified. 2. Making or marked by an extravagant outward show; ostentatious. See Synonyms at showy. —pre-ten'tious-ly adv. —pre-ten'tious-ness n.

pret-er-it or pret-er-ite (prĕt'ĕr-ĭt) Grammar. adj. Abbr. pret., pt. Of, relating to, or being the verb tense that describes a past action or state. — n. Abbr. pret., pt. 1. The verb form expressing or describing a past action or condition. 2. A verb in the preterit form. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin (tempus) praeteritum, past (tense), neuter past participle of praeterīre, to go by : praeter, beyond, comparative of prae, before; see per¹ in Appendix + īre, to go; see ei- in Appendix.]

pret-er-i-tion (prĕt'ĕ-rĭsh'ən) n. 1. The act of passing by, disregarding, or omitting. 2. Law. Neglect of a testator to mention a legal heir in his or her will. 3. Theology. The Calvinist doctrine that God neglected to designate those who would be damned, positively determining only the elect. [Late Latin praeteritiō, praeteritiōn-, a passing over, from Latin praeteritus, past participle of praeterīre, to go by. See PRETERIT.] pre-term (prē'tŭrm', prĕ-tŭrm') adj. Occurring or appearing before the expected time at the end of a full-term pregnancy: preterm labor; a preterm infant. — n. An infant born prematurely.

pre-ter-mit (prĕ'tĕr-mĭt') v. tr. pre-ter-mit-ted, pre-ter-mit-ting, pre-ter-mits. 1. To disregard intentionally or allow to pass unnoticed or unmentioned. 2. To fail to do or include; omit. 3. To interrupt or terminate. [Latin praeternittere : praeter, beyond; see PRETERIT + mittere, to let go.] —pre'ter-mis-sion (-mish'ən) n. —pre'ter-mit'ter n.

pre-ter-nat-u-ral (prē'tər-näch'ər-əl, -näch'rəl) adj. 1. Out of or being beyond the normal course of nature; differing from the natural. 2. Surpassing the normal or usual; extraordinary: "Below his preternatural affability there is some acid and steel" (George F. Will). 3. Transcending the natural or material order; supernatural. [Medieval Latin praeternātūrālis, from Latin praeter nātūrām, beyond nature : praeter, beyond; see PRETERIT + nātūra, nature; see NATURE.] —pre'ter-nat'u-ral-ism n. —pre'ter-nat'u-ral-ly adv. —pre'ter-nat'u-ral-ness n.

pre-test (prē'tĕst') n. 1. a. A preliminary test given to determine whether students are sufficiently prepared for a more advanced course of studies. b. A test taken for practice. 2. The advance testing of something, such as a questionnaire, a product, or an idea. — v. tr. intr. pre-test-ed, pre-test-ing, pre-tests (prē-tĕst'). To subject to or conduct a pretest.

pre-text (prē'tĕkst') n. 1. An ostensible or professed purpose; an excuse. 2. An effort or a strategy intended to conceal something. — v. tr. pre-text-ed, pre-text-ing, pre-texts. To allege as an excuse. [Latin praetextum, from neuter past participle of praetexere, to disguise : prae-, pre- + texere, to weave; see teks- in Appendix.]

pre-tick-et or pre-tick-et (prē-tĭk'it) v. tr. pre-tick-et-ed, pre-tick-et-ing, pre-tick-ets. To issue or sell tickets to (passengers or customers) at a given time only or at a time before other tickets are sold.

pre-tor (prē'tər) n. Variant of praetor.

Pre-to-ri-a (prī-tôr'ē-ə, -tôr'-) The administrative capital of South Africa, in the northeast part of the country north of Johannesburg. Founded in 1855, it became the capital of Transvaal in 1860 and capital of South Africa in 1910. Population, 435,100.

pre-to-ri-an (prē-tôr'ē-ən, -tôr'-) adj. Variant of praetorian.

Pre-to-ri-us (prī-tôr'ē-əs, -tôr'-), Andries Wilhelmus Jacobus. 1798-1853. Afrikaner soldier and politician who led the defeat of the Zulus (1838) and negotiated the independence of the Transvaal (1852). His son Marthinus Wessels Pretorius (1819-1901) founded Pretoria (1855) and was president of the Transvaal (1857-1877) as well as the Orange Free State (1859-1863).

pre-treat (prē-trĕt') v. tr. pre-treat-ed, pre-treat-ing, pre-treats. To treat (wood or fabric, for example) beforehand. —pre-treat'ment n.

pre-tri-al (prē-trī'əl, -trīl') Law. n. A proceeding held before an official trial, especially to clarify points of law and facts. — adj. 1. Of or relating to a pre-trial. 2. Existing or occurring before a trial: pretrial imprisonment; pretrial hearings.

pret-ti-fy (prĭt'ĭ-fĭ') v. tr. pret-ti-fied, pret-ti-fy-ing, pret-ti-fies. To make pretty or prettier. — pret'ti-fi-ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n. — pret'ti-fi'er n.

pret-ty (prĭt'ē) adj. pret-ti-er, pret-ti-est. 1. Pleasing or attractive in a graceful or delicate way. See Synonyms at beautiful. 2. Clever; adroit: a pretty maneuver. 3. Very bad; terrible: in a pretty predicament; a situation that has reached a pretty pass. 4. Ostensibly or superficially attractive but lacking substance or conviction: full of pretty phrases. 5. Informal. Considerable in size or extent: a pretty fortune. — adv. 1. To a fair degree; moderately: a pretty good student. 2. In a pretty manner; prettily or pleasingly. — n. pl. pret-ties.

1. One that is pretty. 2. pretties. Delicate clothing, especially lingerie. — v. tr.

pret-tied, pret-ty-ing, pret-ties. To make pretty: pretty up the house.

— idiom. pretty much. For the most part; mostly: “The... matter was pretty much dying down” (John Strahinich). [Middle English prety, clever, fine, handsome, from Old English prættig, cunning, from prætt, trick.] — pret'ti-ly adv.

— pret'ti-ness n.

pret-zel (prĕt'səl) n. A glazed, brittle biscuit that is salted on the outside and usually baked in the form of a loose knot or a stick. [German Brezel, Pretzel, from Middle High German brēzel, prēzel, from Old High German brezitella, from Medieval Latin brāchitellum*, diminutive of Latin bracchiātus, branched, from bracchium, arm, from Greek brakhiōn, upper arm. See mregh-u- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: It is probably well known or widely assumed that pretzel is a German word, since the food seems traditionally German, but the word ultimately has a Latin origin. The German word Brezel or Pretzel, which was borrowed into English (first being recorded in American English in a newspaper of March 1856) goes back to the assumed Medieval Latin word brāchitellum. This would accord with the story that a monk living in France or northern Italy first created the knotted shape of a pretzel, even though this type of biscuit had been enjoyed by the Romans. The monk wanted to symbolize arms folded in a prayer, hence the name derived from Latin bracchiātus, “having branches,” itself from bracchium, “branch, arm.”

prev. abbr. 1. Previous. 2. Previously.

pre-vail (prĭ-vāl') v. intr. pre-vailed, pre-vail-ing, pre-vails. 1. To be greater in strength or influence; triumph: prevailed against great odds. 2. To be or become effective; win out: hoped justice would prevail. 3. To be most common or frequent; be predominant: a region where snow and ice prevail. 4. To be in force, use, or effect; be current: an ancient tradition that still prevails. 5. To use persuasion or inducement successfully. Often used with on, upon, or with. See Synonyms at persuade. [Middle English prevailen, from Old French prevaloir, prevail-, from Latin praevalēre, to be stronger : prae-, pre- + valēre, to be strong; see wal- in Appendix.] —pre-vail'er n.

pre-vail-ing (přī-vā'ling) adj. 1. Most frequent or common; predominant.

2. Generally current; widespread. —pre-vail'ing-ly adv. —pre-vail'ing-ness n.

SYNONYMS: prevailing, prevalent, current, rife. These adjectives denote what exists or is encountered generally at a particular time. Prevailing applies to what is most frequent or common at a certain time or in a certain place: The prevailing opinion seems to be that a trade war can be averted if both countries make concessions. Prevalent suggests widespread existence or occurrence but does not imply predominance: “The religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principles of resistance: it is the dissidence of dissent” (Edmund Burke). Current often stresses the present time; the term is frequently applied to what passes from one to another or to what is subject to frequent change: Many current psychoanalytic theories diverge markedly from classical Freudian dogma. Rife implies that something is current, plentiful, or rapidly spreading or increasing: “The speculation which for some time was rife concerning [the book's] authorship made many turn to it” (Samuel Butler). “The drinking of tea... now... became very rife” (John Galt).

prev-a-lence (přev'ə-ləns) n. 1. The condition of being prevalent.

2. Medicine. The total number of cases of a disease in a given population at a specific time.

prev-a-lent (přev'ə-lənt) adj. Widely or commonly occurring, existing, accepted, or practiced. See Synonyms at prevailing. [Middle English, very strong, from Latin praevalēns, praevalent- present participle of praevalēre, to be stronger. See PREVAIL.] —prev'a-lent-ly adv.

pre-var-i-cate (přī-vār'ī-kāt') v. intr. pre-var-i-cat-ed, pre-var-i-cat-ing, pre-var-i-cates. To stray from or evade the truth; equivocate. See Synonyms at lie². [Latin praevāricārī, praevāricāt- : prae-, pre- + vāricāre, to straddle (from vāricus, straddling, from vārus, bent).] —pre-var'i-ca'tion n. —pre-var'i-ca'-tor n.

pre-ven-i-ence (přī-vēn'yəns) n. 1. The act or state of being antecedent or prevenient. 2. Attention to another's needs.

pre-ven-ient (přī-vēn'yənt) adj. 1. Coming before; preceding. 2. Expectant; anticipatory. [Latin praeveniēns, praevenient- present participle of praevenīre, to precede : prae-, pre- + venīre, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.] —pre-ven'ient-ly adv.

pre-vent (přī-věnt') v. pre-vent-ed, pre-vent-ing, pre-vents. — v. tr.

1. To keep from happening: took steps to prevent the strike. 2. To keep (someone) from doing something; impede: prevented us from winning. 3. Archaic. To anticipate or counter in advance. 4. Archaic. To come before; precede. — v. intr. To present an obstacle: There will be a picnic if nothing prevents. [Middle English preventen, to anticipate, from Latin praevenīre, praevent- : prae-, pre- + venīre, to come; see g^{wā-} in Appendix.] —pre-vent' a·bil'i·ty, pre-vent'i·bil'i·ty n. —pre-vent'a·ble, pre-vent'i·ble adj. —pre-vent'er n.

SYNONYMS: prevent, preclude, avert, obviate, forestall. These verbs mean to stop or hinder something from happening, especially by advance planning or action. Prevent implies anticipatory counteraction: “The surest way to prevent war is not to fear it” (John Randolph). To preclude is to exclude the possibility of the occurrence of an event or action: “a tranquillity which... his wife's presence would have precluded” (John Henry Newman). To avert is to ward off something about to happen: Only quick thinking on the pilot's part averted a disastrous accident. Obviate implies that something, such as a difficulty, has been anticipated and disposed of effectively: “the objections... having... been obviated in the preceding chapter” (Joseph Butler). Forestall usually suggests anticipatory measures taken to counteract, neutralize, or nullify the effects of something: We installed an alarm system to forestall break-ins.

pre-ven·ta·tive (prī-vĕn'tə-tĭv) adj. & n. Variant of preventive.

pre-ven·tion (prī-vĕn'shən) n. 1. The act of preventing or impeding. 2. A hindrance; an obstacle.

pre-ven·tive (prī-vĕn'tĭv) also pre-ven·ta·tive (-tə-tĭv) adj. 1. Intended or used to prevent or hinder; acting as an obstacle: preventive measures. 2. Carried out to deter expected aggression by hostile forces. 3. Preventing or slowing the course of an illness or a disease; prophylactic: preventive medicine; preventive health care. — n. 1. Something that prevents; an obstacle. 2. Something that prevents or slows the course of an illness or disease. —pre-ven'tive·ly adv.

—pre-ven'tive·ness n.

preventive detention (prī-vĕn'tĭv dĭ-tĕn'shən) n. The pretrial imprisonment without the right to bail of a person accused of a felony and judged dangerous to society.

pre-verb (prē'vûrb') n. Linguistics. A prefix or particle preceding the root or stem of a verb, as for- in forget. —pre-verb' adj.

pre-verb·al (prē-vûrb'ə) adj. 1. Grammar. Preceding the verb. 2. a. Having not yet learned to speak: preverbal children. b. Marked by the absence of spoken language: preverbal sounds; the preverbal stage of development.

pre-view also pre-vue (prē'vyōō') n. 1. An advance showing, as of a movie or an art exhibition, to which a selected audience is invited before public presentation begins. 2. An advance viewing or exhibition, especially the presentation of several scenes advertising a forthcoming movie; a trailer. 3. An introductory or preliminary message, sample, or overview; a foretaste. — v. tr. pre-viewed also pre-vued, pre-view-ing also pre-vu-ing, pre-views also pre-vues.

1. To view or exhibit in advance. 2. To provide a preliminary sample or overview of: The professor previewed the course for us.

pre-vi-ous (prē'vē-əs) adj. Abbr. prev. 1. Existing or occurring before something else in time or order; prior: children by a previous marriage. 2. Informal. Acting, occurring, or done too soon; premature. [From Latin praevius, going before : prae-, pre- + via, way; see wegh- in Appendix.] — pre'vi-ous-ly adv. — pre'vi-ous-ness n.

previous question (prē'vē-əs kwēs'chən) n. Abbr. p.q., P.Q. The motion in parliamentary procedure to take an immediate vote on the main question being considered or on any other questions so designated.

previous to (prē'vē-əs tōō) prep. Prior to; before.

pre-vice (prī-vīz') v. tr. pre-vised, pre-vis-ing, pre-vis-es. 1. To know in advance; foresee. 2. To notify in advance; forewarn. [Middle English previsen, from Latin praevidēre, praevis- : prae-, pre- + vidēre, to see; see weid- in Appendix.] — pre-vi'sor n.

pre-vi-sion (prī-vīzh'ən) n. 1. A knowing in advance; foresight. 2. A prediction; a forecast. — v. tr. pre-vi-sioned, pre-vi-sion-ing, pre-vi-sions. To foresee. — pre-vi'sion-al, pre-vi'sion-ar'y (-vīzh'ə-nēr'ē) adj.

pre-vo-cal-ic (prē'vō-kāl'ik) adj. Linguistics. 1. Preceding a vowel. 2. Of or relating to a form of a linguistic element, such as a suffix, prefix, or word, that occurs only before a vowel.

pre-vo-ca-tion-al (prē'vō-kā'shə-nəl) adj. Of or relating to instruction given in preparation for vocational school.

Pré-vost d'Ex-iles (prā-vō' dēg-zēl'), Antoine François. Known as "Abbé Prévost." 1697-1763. French writer and cleric who left the religious life to pursue worldly interests. His literary repute lies on the novel Manon Lescaut (1731).

pre-vue (prē'vyōō') n. & v. Variant of preview.

pre-war (prē'wôr') adj. Existing or occurring before a war.

pre-washed (prē'wōsht', -wōsht') adj. Washed by the manufacturer so as to impart a softer texture or faded appearance. Used of textiles or clothing: pre-washed denim; prewashed jeans.

pre-writ-ing (prē'rī'ting) n. The creation and arrangement of ideas preliminary to writing.

prex-y (prēk'sē) n. pl. prex-ies. Slang. A president, especially of a college or university. [Shortening and alteration of PRESIDENT.]

prey (prā) n. 1. An animal hunted or caught for food; quarry. 2. One that is defenseless, especially in the face of attack; a victim. 3. The act or practice of preying. — v. intr. preyed, prey-ing, preys. 1. To hunt, catch, or eat as prey:

Owls prey on mice. 2. To victimize or make a profit at someone else's expense.

3. To plunder or pillage. 4. To exert a baneful or injurious effect: Remorse preyed on his mind. [Middle English preie, from Old French, from Latin praeda, booty, prey. See ghend- in Appendix.] —prey'er n.

PRF abbr. 1. Pulse recurrence frequency. 2. Pulse repetition frequency.

prf. abbr. Printing. Proof.

Pri-am (prī'əm) n. Greek Mythology. The father of Paris, Hector, and Cassandra and king of Troy, who was killed when his city fell to the Greeks.

pri-a-pic (prī-ā'pik, -ăp'ik) also pri-a-pe-an (prī-ə-pē'an) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling a phallus; phallic. 2. Relating to or overly concerned with masculinity. [From PRIAPUS.]

pri-a-pism (prī-ə-piz'əm) n. Persistent, usually painful erection of the penis, especially as a consequence of disease and not related to sexual arousal. [French priapisme, from Late Latin priāpismus, from Greek priapismos, from priapizein, to have an erection, from Priapos, Priapus.]

pri-a-pus (prī-ā'pəs) n. 1. Priapus. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The god of procreation, guardian of gardens and vineyards, and personification of the erect phallus. 2. An image of this god, often used as a scarecrow in ancient gardens. 3. A representation of a phallus. [Latin Priāpus, from Greek Priapos.]

Prib-i-lof Islands (prīb'ə-lôf' ī'ləndz) A group of islands off southwest Alaska in the Bering Sea. First visited and named by a Russian explorer in 1786, they are noted as a breeding ground for seals.

price (prīs) n. Abbr. pr. 1. The amount as of money or goods, asked for or given in exchange for something else. 2. The cost at which something is obtained: believes that the price of success is hard work. 3. The cost of bribing someone: maintained that every person has a price. 4. A reward offered for the capture or killing of a person: a felon with a price on his head. 5. Archaic. Value or worth. — v. tr. priced, pric-ing, pric-es. 1. To fix or establish a price for: shoes that are priced at nine dollars. 2. To find out the price of: spent the day pricing dresses. —idiom. price out of the market. To charge so much for goods or services that people no longer buy or use them. [Middle English pris, from Old French, from Latin pretium. See per-⁵ in Appendix.] —price'a-ble adj. —pric'er n.

SYNONYMS: price, charge, cost, expense. These nouns signify an amount given or asked for in payment for goods or services. Price is the amount of money needed to purchase something offered for sale: The house didn't sell because the price was too high. Charge is the sum asked especially for the rendering of a service: There is a nominal charge for postage and handling. Cost, a more inclusive term, generally applies to the total spent or to be spent, including money, time, and labor: Sales more than offset production costs. Expense suggests cost in the agree-gate: Litigation often entails enormous expense.

Price (prīs), (Mary) Leontyne. Born 1927. American operatic soprano who performed with the New York Metropolitan Opera (1961-1985), earning greatest praise for her roles in Verdi's operas.

price-cut-ting (prīs/kūt'ŭng) n. Reduction of retail prices to a level low enough to eliminate competition. —price'-cut'ter n.

price-earn-ings ratio (prīs'ūr'nīngz rā'shō) n. The ratio of the market price of a common stock to its earnings per share.

price fix-ing also price-fix-ing (prīs'fik'sing) n. 1. The setting of commodity prices artificially by a government. 2. The result of an unlawful agreement between manufacturers or dealers to set and maintain specified prices on typically competing products.

price index (prīs in'dēks') n. A number relating prices of a group of commodities to their prices during an arbitrarily chosen base period.

price-less (prīs'lis) adj. 1. Of inestimable worth; invaluable. See Synonyms at costly. 2. Highly amusing, absurd, or odd: a priceless remark. —price/less-ly adv.

price support (prīs sə-pōrt') n. Maintenance of prices, as of a raw material or commodity, at a certain level usually through public subsidy or government intervention.

price tag (prīs tāg) n. 1. A label attached to a piece of merchandise indicating its price. 2. The cost of something.

price war (prīs wōr) n. A period of intense competition among businesses in which each competitor tries to cut retail prices below those of the others.

pric-ey also pric-y (prī'sē) adj. pric-i-er, pric-i-est. Informal. Expensive: a pricey restaurant. —pric/ey-ness n. —pric/i-ly adv.

Prich-ard (prīch'ərd) A city of southwest Alabama, an industrial suburb of Mobile. Population, 34,311.

prick (prīk) n. 1. a. The act of piercing or pricking. b. The sensation of being pierced or pricked. 2. a. A persistent or sharply painful feeling of sorrow or remorse. b. A small, sharp, local pain, such as that made by a needle or a bee sting. 3. A small mark or puncture made by a pointed object. 4. A pointed object, such as an ice pick, a goad, or a thorn. 5. A hare's track or footprint. 6. Vulgar Slang. A penis. 7. Vulgar Slang. A person regarded as highly unpleasant. — v. pricked, prick-ing, pricks. — v. tr. 1. To puncture lightly. 2. To affect with a mental or emotional pang, as of sorrow or remorse: Her conscience began to prick her. 3. To impel as if with a spur; urge on. See Synonyms at urge. 4. To mark or delineate on a surface by means of small punctures: prick a pattern on a board. 5. Nautical. To measure with dividers on a chart. 6. To pierce the quick of (a horse's hoof) while shoeing. 7. To transplant (seedlings, for example) before final planting. 8. To cause to stand erect or point upward: The dogs pricked their ears. — v. intr. 1. To pierce or puncture something or cause a pricking feeling. 2. To feel a pang or twinge from or as if from being pricked. 3. a. To spur a horse on. b. To ride at a gallop. 4. To stand erect; point upward: The dog's ears pricked at the noise. — idiom. prick up (one's) ears. To listen with attentive interest. [Middle English, from Old English prica, puncture.]

prick·er (prĭk'ər) n. 1. One, such as a pricking tool, that pierces or pricks. 2. A prickle or thorn.

prick·et (prĭk'ĭt) n. 1. a. A small point or spike for holding a candle upright. b. A candlestick having such a spike. 2. A buck in its second year, before the antlers branch. [Middle English priket, diminutive of prik, prick, prick. See PRICK.]

prick·le (prĭk'əl) n. 1. A small sharp point, spine, or thorn. 2. A tingling or pricking sensation. — v. prick·led, prick·ling, prick·les. — v. tr. 1. To prick as if with a thorn. 2. To cause a tingling or pricking sensation in. — v. intr. 1. To feel a tingling or pricking sensation. 2. To rise or stand up like prickles. [Middle English prikel, from Old English pricel.]

prick·ly (prĭk'lē) adj. prick·li·er, prick·li·est. 1. Having prickles. 2. Marked by prickling or tingling or smarting: a prickly sensation in my foot. 3. a. Causing trouble or vexation; thorny: a prickly situation. b. Bristling or irritable: "In consequence, he became rebarbative, prickly, spiteful" (Robert Craft). — prick·li·ness n.

prickly ash (prĭk'lē āsh) n. 1. Any of numerous cosmopolitan, deciduous or evergreen shrubs or trees of the genus Zanthoxylum, having aromatic bark and alternate, mostly pinnate leaves. 2. See Hercules' club (n., sense 1).

prickly heat (prĭk'lē hēt) n. See heat rash.

prickly pear (prĭk'lē pâr) n. 1. Any of various cacti of the genus Opuntia, having bristly, flattened or cylindrical joints, showy, usually yellow flowers, and ovoid, sometimes edible fruit. 2. The fruit of any of these plants.

prickly poppy (prĭk'lē pöp'ē) n. Any of various plants of the genus Argemone, chiefly of tropical America, having large yellow, lavender, or white flowers and prickly leaves, stems, and pods.

prick·y (prĭk'ē) adj. prick·i·er, prick·i·est. Prickly.

pride (prĭd) n. 1. A sense of one's own proper dignity or value; self-respect. 2. Pleasure or satisfaction taken in an achievement, a possession, or an association: parental pride. 3. Arrogant or disdainful conduct or treatment; haughtiness. 4. a. A cause or source of pleasure or satisfaction; the best of a group or class: These soldiers were their country's pride. b. The most successful or thriving condition; prime: the pride of youth. 5. An excessively high opinion of oneself; conceit. 6. Mettle or spirit in horses. 7. A company of lions. See Synonyms at flock¹. 8. A flamboyant or impressive group: a pride of acrobats. — v. tr.

prid·ed, prid·ing, prides. To indulge (oneself) in a feeling of pleasure or satisfaction: I pride myself on this beautiful garden. [Middle English, from Old English prȳde, from prūd, proud. See PROUD.]

Pride (prīd), Thomas. Died 1658. English Parliamentarian who led a regiment to Parliament and expelled Presbyterian and Royalist members who opposed the condemnation of Charles I (1648). He was a signatory of Charles's death warrant.

pride-ful (prīd'fəl) adj. 1. Arrogant; disdainful. 2. Highly pleased; elated.

—pride'ful-ly adv. —pride'ful-ness n.

pride of place (prīd ūv plās) n. The highest or most important position: The crystal vase enjoyed pride of place on the grand piano.

pried¹ (prīd) v. Past tense and past participle of pry¹.

pried² (prīd) v. Past tense and past participle of pry².

prie-dieu (prē-dyœz') n. pl. prie--dieus or prie--dieux (-dyœz'). 1. A narrow, desklike kneeling bench with space above for a book or the elbows, for use by a person at prayer. 2. An armless, upholstered chair with a high, straight back and a low seat. [French prie-Dieu: prier, to pray (from Old French, from Latin precārī); see PRAY + Dieu, God (from Old French); see ADIEU.]

pri-er also pry-er (prī'ær) n. One who pries, especially a person who is unduly interested in the affairs of others.

pries¹ (prīz) v. Third person singular present tense of pry¹. — n. Plural of pry¹.

pries² (prīz) v. Third person singular present tense of pry². — n. Plural of pry².

priest (prēst) n. Abbr. Pr., P. 1. In many Christian churches, a member of the second grade of clergy ranking below a bishop but above a deacon and having authority to administer the sacraments. 2. A person having the authority to perform and administer religious rites. 3. Informal. One whose role is considered comparable to that of a priest: computers and their priests. — v. tr. priest-ed, priest-ing, priests. To ordain or admit to the priesthood. [Middle English preost, from Old English prēost, perhaps from Vulgar Latin prester* (from Late Latin presbyter); see PRESBYTER, or from West Germanic prēvost* (from Latin praepositus, superintendent); see PROVOST.]

priest-ess (prē'stīs) n. A woman who presides over especially pagan rites.

priest-hood (prēst'hōōd') n. 1. The character, office, or vocation of a priest. 2. The clergy.

Priest-ley (prēst'lē), J(ohn) B(oynton). 1894-1984. British writer of more than 100 novels, most notably The Good Companions (1929), numerous dramas, and critical works on literature and social issues.

Priest-ley (prēst'lē), Joseph. 1733-1804. British chemist noted for work on the isolation of gases and his discovery of oxygen (1774).

priest·ly (prĕst'/lē) adj. priest·li·er, priest·li·est. 1. Of or relating to a priest or the priesthood. 2. Characteristic of or suitable for a priest. —priest/li·ness n.

prig (prĭg) n. 1. A person who demonstrates an exaggerated conformity or propriety, especially in an irritatingly arrogant or smug manner. 2. Chiefly British. A petty thief or pickpocket. 3. Archaic. A conceited dandy; a fop. — v. tr.

prigged, prig·ging, prigs. Chiefly British. To steal or pilfer. [Origin unknown.] —prig/ger·y n. —prig/gish adj. —prig/gish·ly adv.

—prig/gish·ness n.

Pri·go·gine (prĭ-gô'/zhən, -gô-zhĕn'), Ilya. Born 1917. Russian-born Belgian chemist. He won a 1977 Nobel Prize for his contributions to nonequilibrium thermodynamics.

prim¹ (prĭm) adj. prim·mer, prim·mest. 1. a. Precise or proper to the point of affectation; excessively decorous. b. Strait-laced; prudish. 2. Neat and trim: a prim hedgerow. — v. primmed, prim·ming, prims. — v. tr. 1. To fix (the face or mouth) in a prim expression. 2. To make prim, as in dress or appearance. — v. intr. To assume a prim expression. [Possibly from obsolete prim, formal or demure person, perhaps from Old French prin, first, delicate. See PRIME.]

—prim/ly adv. —prim/ness n.

prim² (prĭm) n. A privet. [Short for obsolete primprint, of unknown origin.]

prim. abbr. 1. Primary. 2. Primitive.

pri·ma ballerina (prĕ'mə bäl'ə-rĕ'nə) n. The leading woman dancer in a ballet company. [Italian : prima, feminine of primo, first + ballerina, ballerina.]

pri·ma·cy (prĭ'mə-sē) n. pl. pri·ma·cies. 1. The state of being first or foremost. 2. Ecclesiastical. The office, rank, or province of primate. [Middle English primacie, from Old French, from Medieval Latin prīmātia, office of church primate, from Latin prīmās, prīmāt-, of first rank. See PRIMATE.]

pri·ma donna (prĕ'mə dŏn'ə, prĭm'ə) n. 1. The leading woman soloist in an opera company. 2. A temperamental, conceited person. [Italian : prima, feminine of primo, first + donna, lady.]

pri·ma fa·cie (prĭ'mə fā'shē, -shĕ-ē, fā'shə) adv. At first sight; before closer inspection: They had, prima facie, a legitimate complaint. — adj. 1. True, authentic, or adequate at first sight; ostensible: prima facie credibility. 2. Evident without proof or reasoning; obvious: a prima facie violation of the treaty. [Middle English, manifestly, from Latin prīmā faciē : prīmā, feminine ablative of prīmus, first + faciē, ablative of faciēs, shape, face.]

prima facie case (prĕ'mə fā'shē kās) n. Law. A case in which the evidence presented is sufficient for a judgment to be made unless the evidence is contested.

prima facie evidence (prĕ'mə fā'shē ěv'ĭ-dĕns) n. Law. Evidence that would, if uncontested, establish a fact or raise a presumption of a fact.

pri-mal (prī'məl) adj. 1. Being first in time; original; primeval. 2. Of first importance; primary. [Medieval Latin prīmālis, from Latin prīmus, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] —pri-mal'i-ty (-mäl'i-tē) n.

primal therapy (prī'məl thēr'ə-pē) n. A method of psychotherapy that treats neurosis by teaching patients to relive early traumatic experiences and to express feelings through angry screaming and other verbal or physical acts of aggression. Also called primal scream therapy —primal therapist n.

pri-mar-i-ly (prī-mâr'ə-lē, -mēr'-) adv. 1. Chiefly; mainly: a scholastic program primarily for seniors; a primarily middle-class neighborhood. 2. At first; originally.

pri-mar-y (prī'mēr'ē, -mə-rē) adj. Abbr. prim. 1. First or highest in rank, quality, or importance; principal. 2. Being or standing first in a list, series, or sequence. 3. Occurring first in time or sequence; earliest. 4. Being or existing as the first or earliest of a kind; primitive. 5. Geology. Characteristic of or existing in a rock at the time of its formation. 6. Serving as or being an essential component, as of a system; basic. See Synonyms at chief. 7. a. Immediate; direct: a primary effect; a primary information source. b. Preliminary to a later stage in a continuing process: primary training. c. Of or relating to a primary school: the primary grades. 8. Color. Of or relating to a primary color or colors.

9. Linguistics. a. Having a word root or other linguistic element as a basis that cannot be further analyzed or broken down. Used of the derivation of a word or word element. b. Referring to present or future time. Used as a collective designation for various present and future verb tenses in Latin, Greek, and Sanskrit.

10. Electronics. Of, relating to, or constituting an inducting current, circuit, or coil. 11. Of, relating to, or designating the main flight feathers projecting along the outer edge of a bird's wing. 12. Of or relating to agriculture, forestry, the industries that extract natural materials from the earth, or the products so obtained: a primary commodity. 13. Chemistry. a. Relating to the replacement of one of several atoms or radicals in a compound by another atom or radical.

b. Having a carbon atom attached solely to one other carbon atom in a molecule.

14. Biochemistry. Of, relating to, or being the sequence of amino acids in a protein. 15. Botany. Of, relating to, or being growth or tissue derived solely from apical meristems present in the embryo: primary meristem; primary xylem. —

n. pl. pri-mar-ies. 1. a. One that is first in time, order, or sequence. b. One that is first or best in degree, quality, or importance. c. One that is fundamental, basic, or elemental. 2. a. A meeting of the registered voters of a political party for the purpose of nominating candidates and for choosing delegates to their party convention. b. A preliminary election in which the registered voters of a political party nominate candidates for office. 3. Color. A primary color. 4. One of the main flight feathers projecting along the outer edge of a bird's wing.

5. Electronics. An inducting current, circuit, or coil. 6. Astronomy. a. A celestial body, especially a star, relative to other bodies in orbit around it. b. The brighter of two stars that make up a double star. [Middle English, from Latin primārius, chief, from prīmus, first. See per¹ in Appendix.]

primary accent (prī'mēr'ē āk'sent') n. Linguistics. 1. The strongest degree of stress placed on a syllable in the pronunciation of a word. 2. The mark (') used to indicate the strongest degree of stress.

primary atypical pneumonia (prī'mēr'ē ā-tīp'ī-kəl nōō-mōn'yə) n. An acute infectious respiratory disease caused by the bacterium Mycoplasma pneumoniae, often in association with a virus, and characterized by fever, coughing, sore throat, and muscle pain.

primary care (prī'mēr'ē kâr) n. The medical care a patient receives upon first contact with the health care system, before referral elsewhere within the system.

primary cell (prī'mēr'ē sĕl) n. A cell in which an irreversible chemical reaction generates electricity; a cell that cannot be recharged. Also called galvanic cell, voltaic cell.

primary coil (prī'mēr'ē kōil) n. A coil to which the input voltage is applied in an inductively coupled circuit, especially a transformer.

primary color (prī'mēr'ē kü'l'ər) n. Color. A color belonging to any of three groups each of which is regarded as generating all colors, with the groups being: a. Additive, physiological, or light primaries red, green, and blue. Lights of red, green, and blue wavelengths may be mixed to produce all colors. b. Subtractive or colorant primaries magenta, yellow, and cyan. Substances that reflect light of one of these wavelengths and absorb other wavelengths may be mixed to produce all colors. c. Psychological primaries red, yellow, green, and blue, plus the achromatic pair black and white. All colors may be subjectively conceived as mixtures of these.

primary consumer (prī'mēr'ē kən-sōō'mər) n. Ecology. An animal that eats grass and other green plants in a food chain; an herbivore.

primary election (prī'mēr'ē ĭ-lĕk'shən) n. A preliminary election in which voters nominate party candidates for office.

primary growth (prī'mēr'ē grōth) n. Botany. Growth originating from the apical meristems of roots and shoots and resulting chiefly in extension of the plant body.

primary meristem (prī'mēr'ē mĕr'ī-stĕm') n. A type of plant tissue derived from the apical meristem of a root or stem.

primary school (prī'mēr'ē skōōl) n. 1. A school usually including the first three or four grades of elementary school and sometimes kindergarten. 2. See elementary school.

primary syphilis (prī'mēr'ē sīf'ə-līs) n. The first stage of syphilis, characterized by formation of a painless chancre at the point of infection and hardening and swelling of adjacent lymph nodes.

primary tooth (prī'mēr'ē tōōth) n. See milk tooth.

primary wall (prī'mēr'ē wōl) n. The wall layer of a plant cell deposited during cell expansion.

primary wave (prī'mēr'ē wāv) n. An earthquake wave in which rock particles vibrate parallel to the direction of wave travel. It can travel through solids and liquids.

primary xylem (prī'mēr'ē zī'ləm) n. Botany. A type of xylem tissue derived from the procambium.

pri·mate (prī'mīt, -māt') n. 1. (prī'māt') A mammal of the order Primates, which includes the anthropoids and prosimians, characterized by refined development of the hands and feet, a shortened snout, and a large brain. 2. A bishop of highest rank in a province or country. [From New Latin Prīmātes, order name, from Latin prīmātēs, pl. of prīmās, principal, of first rank, from prīmus, first; see per¹ in Appendix. Sense 2, from Middle English primat from Old French, from Medieval Latin prīmās, prīmāt-, from Latin.] —pri·ma'tial (-mā'shəl) adj.

pri·ma·tol·o·gy (prī'mə-tōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of zoology that deals with the study of primates. —pri·ma·to·log'i·cal (-tl-ōj'ī-kəl) adj.

—pri·ma·tol·o·gist n.

pri·ma·ve·ra¹ or pri·ma ve·ra (prē'mə-vēr'ə) n. 1. A tree (Cybistax donnell-smithii) of Mexico and Guatemala, having opposite, palmately compound leaves, yellow flowers, and close-grained, light-colored wood. 2. The wood of this tree, used in cabinetry. In this sense, also called white mahogany [Spanish, spring, primavera, from Late Latin prīma vēra, early spring, pl. of prīmum vēr: Latin prīmus, first; see per¹ in Appendix + Latin vēr, spring; see vesr in Appendix.]

pri·ma·ve·ra² (prē'mə-vēr'ə) adj. Made with different kinds of sliced or diced vegetables: pasta primavera; shrimp in a primavera sauce. [From Italian (alla) primavera, (in the) spring (style), from Late Latin prīma vēra. See PRIMAVERA¹.]

prime (prīm) adj. 1. First in excellence, quality, or value. See Usage Note at perfect. 2. First in degree or rank; chief. See Synonyms at chief. 3. First or early in time, order, or sequence; original. 4. Of the highest U.S. government grade of meat. 5. Mathematics. Of, relating to, or being a prime number. — n. 1. The earliest hours of the day; dawn. 2. The first season of the year; spring. 3. The age of ideal physical perfection and intellectual vigor. 4. The period or phase of ideal or peak condition. See Synonyms at bloom¹. 5. The first position of thrust and parry in fencing. 6. A mark (') appended above and to the right of a character, especially: a. One used to distinguish different values of the same variable in a mathematical expression. b. One used to represent a unit of measurement, such as feet or minutes in latitude and longitude. 7. Ecclesiastical. a. The second of the seven canonical hours. No longer in ecclesiastical use. b. The time appointed for this service, the first hour of the day or 6 A.M. 8. Mathematics. A prime number. 9. A prime rate. — v. primed, prim-ing, primes. — v. tr. 1. To make ready; prepare: guard dogs primed for attack. 2. To prepare (a gun or mine) for firing by inserting a charge of gunpowder or a primer. 3. To prepare for operation, as by pouring water into a pump or gasoline into a carburetor. 4. To prepare (a surface) for painting by covering with size, primer, or an undercoat. 5. To inform or instruct beforehand; coach. — v. intr. To become prepared for future action or operation. — idiom. prime the pump. Informal. To encourage the growth or action of something. [Middle English, first in occurrence, from Old French, feminine of prin, from Latin prīmus. N., sense 7, from Middle English from Old English prīm, from Late Latin prīma (hora), first (hour), from Latin, feminine of prīmus. See per¹ in Appendix.] — prime'ly adv. — prime'ness n.

prime interest rate (prīm ĭn'trĭst rāt) n. See prime rate.

prime meridian (prīm mə-rĭd'ē-ən) n. The zero meridian (0°), used as a reference line from which longitude east and west is measured. It passes through Greenwich, England.

prime minister (prīm mĭn'ĭ-stər) n. Abbr. PM, P.M. 1. A chief minister appointed by a ruler. 2. The head of the cabinet and often also the chief executive of a parliamentary democracy. — prime ministerial adj. — prime minister-ship, prime ministry n.

prime mover (prīm mōō'vər) n. 1. a. Something regarded as the initial source of energy directed toward a goal: Patriotism was the prime mover of the revolution. b. The initial force, such as electricity, wind, or gravity, that engages or moves a machine. c. A machine or mechanism that converts natural energy into work. Also called primum mobile 2. Any of various heavy-duty trucks or tractors. 3. Philosophy. In Aristotelian philosophy, the self-moved being that causes all motion.

prime number (prīm nŭm'bər) n. Mathematics. A whole number not divisible without a remainder by any whole number other than itself and one.

prim-er¹ (prĭm'ər) n. 1. An elementary textbook for teaching children to read. 2. A book that covers the basic elements of a subject. [Middle English, from Norman French, from Medieval Latin prīmārium, from neuter of prīmārius, first, from Latin, from prīmus. See PRIME.]

prim-er² (prĭ'mər) n. 1. A cap or tube containing a small amount of explosive used to detonate the main explosive charge of a firearm or mine. 2. An undercoat of paint or size applied to prepare a surface, as for painting.

prime rate (prīm rāt) n. The lowest rate of interest on bank loans at a given time and place, offered to preferred borrowers. Also called prime interest rate pri-me-ro (prĭ-mâr'ō) n. Games. A gambling card game, popular in Elizabethan England. [Alteration of Spanish primera, feminine of primero, first, from Latin prīmārius, principal, from prīmus, first. See PRIME.]

prime time (prīm tĭm) n. The evening hours, generally between 7 and 11 P.M., when the largest television audience is available. — prime'-time' (prīm'tĭm') adj.

pri-me-val (prī-mē'vəl) adj. Belonging to the first or earliest age or ages; original or ancient: a primeval forest. [From Latin prīmaevus, early in life : prīmus, first; see per¹ in Appendix + aevum, age; see aiw- in Appendix.]

—pri-me-val-ly adv.

pri-mi (prē'mē) n. Music. A plural of primo.

prim-ing (prī'mīŋ) n. 1. The act of one that primes. 2. The explosive used to ignite a charge. 3. A preliminary coat of paint or size applied to a surface.

pri-mip-a-ra (prī-mīp'ər-ə) n. pl. pri-mip-a-ras or pri-mip-a-rae (-ə-rē').

1. A woman who is pregnant for the first time. 2. A woman who has given birth to only one child. [Latin prīmipara : prīmus, first; see per¹ in Appendix + -para, -para.] —pri'mi-par'i-ty (-mī-pār'i-tē) n. —pri-mip'a-rous adj.

prim-i-tive (prīm'ī-tīv) adj. Abbr. prim. 1. Not derived from something else; primary or basic. 2. a. Of or relating to an earliest or original stage or state; primeval. b. Being little evolved from an early ancestral type. 3. Characterized by simplicity or crudity; unsophisticated: primitive weapons. See Synonyms at rude. 4. Anthropology. Of or relating to a nonindustrial, often tribal culture, especially one that is characterized by a low level of economic complexity: primitive societies. 5. Linguistics. a. Serving as the basis for derived or inflected forms: Pick is the primitive word from which picket is derived. b. Being a protolanguage: primitive Germanic. 6. Mathematics. An algebraic or geometric expression from which another expression is derived. 7. Relating or belonging to forces of nature; elemental: primitive passions. 8. a. Of or created by an artist without formal training; simple or naive in style. b. Of or relating to the work of an artist from a nonindustrial, often tribal culture, especially a culture that is characterized by a low level of economic complexity. 9. Of or relating to late medieval or pre-Renaissance European painters or sculptors. 10. Biology. Occurring in or characteristic of an early stage of development or evolution. — n. 1. Anthropology. A person belonging to a nonindustrial, often tribal society, especially a society characterized by a low level of economic complexity. 2. An unsophisticated person. 3. One that is at a low or early stage of development. 4. a. One belonging to an early stage in the development of an artistic trend, especially a painter of the pre-Renaissance period. b. An artist having or affecting a simple, direct, unschooled style, as of painting. c. A self-taught artist. d. A work of art created by a primitive artist. 5. Linguistics. A word or word element from which another word is derived by morphological or historical processes or from which inflected forms are derived. 6. Computer Science. A basic or fundamental unit of machine instruction or translation. [Middle English, from Old French primitif, primitive, from Latin primitīvus, from prīmitus, at first, from prīmus, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prim'i-tive-ly adv. —prim'i-tive-ness, prim'i-tiv'i-ty n.

prim-i-tiv-ism (prīm'ī-tī-vīz'əm) n. 1. The condition or quality of being primitive. 2. The style characteristic of a primitive artist. 3. a. A belief that it is best to live simply and in a natural environment. b. A belief that the acquisitions of civilization are evil or that the earliest period of human history was the best.

—prim'i-tiv-ist adj., n. —prim'i-tiv-is'tic adj.

pri-mo (prē'mō) n. pl. pri-mi (-mē) also pri-mos (-mōz). Music. The principal part in a duet or ensemble composition. — adj. 1. First. 2. Slang.

a. Exceptionally good of its kind; first-class. b. Highly or most valuable. [Italian, from Old Italian, first, from Latin prīmus. See per¹ in Appendix.]

Pri-mo de Ri-ve-ra y Or-ba-ne-ja (prē'mō dā rī-vēr'ə ē ôr'bə-nā'hä, ē ôr'bə-nā'hä, thĕ rē-vĕ'rä ē ôr'vā-nĕ'hä), Miguel Marqués de Estella. 1870-1930. Spanish general and politician who seized power and ruled as dictator (1923-1930). His son José Antonio Primo de Rivera (1903-1936) founded the Spanish Fascist Party (1933) and was executed by Loyalists during the Civil War.

pri-mo-gen-i-tor (prī'mō-jĕn'ĭ-tər) n. 1. The earliest ancestor. 2. An ancestor or a forefather. [Late Latin prīmōgenitor: Latin prīmō, at first (from prīmus, first); see per¹ in Appendix + Latin genitor, begetter (from gignere, genit-, to beget); see genə- in Appendix.]

pri-mo-gen-i-ture (prī'mō-jĕn'ĭ-chōōr') n. 1. The state of being the first-born or eldest child of the same parents. 2. Law. The right of the eldest child, especially the eldest son, to inherit the entire estate of one or both parents. [Late Latin prīmōgenitūra: Latin prīmō, at first (from prīmus, first); see per¹ in Appendix + Latin genitūra, birth (from gignere, genit-, to beget); see genə- in Appendix.] —pri'mo-gen'i-tar'y (-jĕn'ĭ-tĕr'ē), pri'mo-gen'i-tal (-təl) adj.

pri-mor-di-al (prī-môr'dĕ-əl) adj. 1. Being or happening first in sequence of time; original. 2. Primary or fundamental: play a primordial role. 3. Biology. Belonging to or characteristic of the earliest stage of development of an organism or a part: primordial cells. — n. A basic principle. [Middle English, from Late Latin prīmōrdiālis, from Latin prīmōrdium, origin: prīmus, first; see per¹ in Appendix + ōrdīrī, to begin to weave; see ar- in Appendix.] —pri-mor'di-al-ly adv.

pri-mor-di-um (prī-môr'dĕ-əm) n. pl. pri-mor-di-a (-dĕ-ə). An organ or a part in its most rudimentary form or stage of development. [Latin prīmōrdium. See PRIMORDIAL.]

primp (prĭmp) v. primped, primp-ing, primps. — v. tr. To dress or groom (oneself) with meticulous or excessive attention to detail. — v. intr. To dress or groom oneself with elaborate care; preen. [Perhaps alteration of PRIM¹.]

prim-rose (prĭm'rōz') n. 1. Any of numerous plants of the genus Primula, having well-developed basal leaves and tubular, variously colored flowers grouped in umbels or heads with a funnel-shaped or salverlike corolla and a tube much longer than the calyx. 2. An evening primrose. [Middle English primerose, from Old French, from Medieval Latin prīma rosa, first rose: Latin prīmum, neuter of prīmus, first; see PRIME + Latin rosa, rose.]

primrose path (prīm'roz' pāth) n. 1. A way of life of worldly ease or pleasure. 2. A course of action that seems easy and appropriate but can actually end in calamity.

pri-mum mo-bi-le (prī'məm mō'bə-lē', prē'məm mō'bī-lā') n. 1. The tenth and outermost concentric sphere of the universe thought in Ptolemaic astronomy to revolve around Earth from east to west in 24 hours and believed to cause the other nine spheres to revolve with it. 2. See prime mover (n., sense 1). [Medieval Latin primum mobile: primum, neuter of primus, first + mōbile, from neuter of mōbilis, movable (translation of Arabic al-muḥarrīk al-awwal).]

pri-mus (prī'məs) n. pl. pri-mus-es. Often Primus. The first in rank of the bishops of Scotland. [Medieval Latin primus, from Latin, first. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pri-mus in-ter pa-res (prī'məs ɪn'tər pâr'ēz, prē'mōs ɪn'tər pâr'ēs') n. pl. pri-mi inter pares (-mī, -mē). The first among equals. [Latin primus inter parēs: primus, first + inter, among + parēs, pl. of pār, equal.]

prin. abbr. 1. Principal. 2. Principle.

prince (prɪns) n. Abbr. p., P., Pr. 1. A male member of a royal family other than the monarch, especially a son of the monarch. 2. a. The ruler of a principality. b. A hereditary ruler; a king. 3. A nobleman of varying status or rank. 4. An outstanding man, especially in a particular group or class: a merchant prince. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin princeps. See per¹ in Appendix.]
—prince/ship n.

Prince Al-bert¹ (prɪns əl'bɜrt) A city of central Saskatchewan, Canada, on the North Saskatchewan River north-northeast of Saskatoon. It was founded as a Presbyterian mission in 1866. Population, 31,380.

Prince Al-bert² (prɪns əl'bɜrt) n. A man's long, double-breasted frock coat. [After Prince Albert Edward, later Edward VII.]

Prince Charm-ing also prince charm-ing (prɪns ʃɑr'mɪŋ) n. 1. A man who fulfills all the romantic expectations of a woman. 2. A man who ardently seeks the company and affection of women. [After Prince Charming, hero of the fairy tale Cinderella.]

prince consort (prɪns kɔn'sɔrt') n. The husband of a sovereign queen.

prince-dom (prɪns'dəm) n. 1. The territory, jurisdiction, sovereignty, rank, or estate of a prince. 2. principdoms. Theology. See principality (n., sense 3).

Prince Ed-ward Island (prɪns ɛd'wɜrd ɪ'lænd) Abbr. PE, P.E.I. A province of southeast Canada consisting of Prince Edward Island in the southern Gulf of St. Lawrence. It joined the confederacy in 1873. The island was discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534 and named Île St. Jean by Samuel de Champlain in 1603. It was renamed in 1798 after Edward, Duke of Kent (1767-1820), the father of Queen Victoria. Charlottetown is the capital and the largest city. Population, 122,506.

Prince George (prɪns ʤɔːrj) A city of central British Columbia, Canada, at the confluence of the Fraser and Nechako rivers. Originally a fur-trading post called Fort George (established in 1807), it is now a distributing center for a lumbering region. Population, 67,559.

prince-ling (prɪns'liŋ) n. A prince judged to be of minor status or importance.

prince-ly (prɪns'lē) adj. prince-li-er, prince-li-est. 1. Of or relating to a prince; royal. 2. Befitting a prince, as: a. Noble: a princely bearing. b. Munificent; lavish: inherited a princely sum. —prince/li-ness n. —prince/ly adv.

Prince of Wales (prɪns ʊv wālz) n. 1. The male heir to the British throne. 2. Used as the title for the male heir to the British throne, conferred by the sovereign.

Prince of Wales Island (prɪns ʊv wālz ī'lənd) 1. An island of northern Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Ocean northeast of Victoria Island. 2. An island of extreme southeast Alaska in the Alexander Archipelago. It is the largest island in the group.

prince regent (prɪns rē'jənt) n. pl. prince regents or princes regent. A prince who rules during the minority, absence, or incapacity of a sovereign.

Prince Rupert (prɪns rōʊ'pərt) A city of western British Columbia, Canada, on the Pacific Ocean near the Alaska border. A railroad and highway terminus and ice-free port, it is a processing and shipping center. Population, 16,197.

prince's feather (prɪn'sɪz fēth'ər) n. 1. A tall plant (Polygonum orientale) of Asia and Australia, having hairy stems, broadly ovate leaves, and long spikes of pink or rose flowers. 2. Either of two plants (Amaranthus hybridus var. erythrostachys or A. cruentus) having reddish foliage and dense panicles of brownish-red flowers.

prince's pine (prɪn'sɪz pɪn) n. See pipissewa.

prin-cess (prɪn'sɪs, -sēs', prɪn-sēs') n. 1. A woman who is ruler of a principality. 2. A woman member of a royal family other than the monarch, especially a daughter of a monarch. 3. A noblewoman of varying status or rank. 4. The wife of a prince. 5. A woman regarded as having the status or qualities of a princess. 6. Archaic. A hereditary woman ruler; a queen. — adj. Designed to hang in smooth, close-fitting, unbroken lines from shoulder to flared hem: a princess dress. [Middle English princesse, from Old French, feminine of prince, prince. See PRINCE.]

prin-cesse (prɪn-sēs') adj. Princess: a gown cut on princesse lines. [French, from Old French, princess. See PRINCESS.]

princess royal (prɪn'sɪs roi'əl) n. 1. The eldest daughter of a British sovereign, who has had the title conferred on her for life by the sovereign. 2. Used as the title for such a woman.

princess tree (prɪn'sɪs trē) n. See paulownia. [After Princess Anna Paulovna (1795-1865), queen of William II of the Netherlands.]

Prince-ton (prɪn'stən) A borough of central New Jersey north-northeast of Trenton. Founded by Quakers in 1696, it is the seat of Princeton University (established in 1746 as the College of New Jersey and renamed in 1896). George Washington defeated the British here in January 1777. Population, 12,016.

Princeton, Mount. A mountain, 4,330 m (14,197 ft) high, in the Sawatch Range of the Rocky Mountains in central Colorado.

Prince Wil-liam Sound (prɪns wɪl'yəm sound) An arm of the Gulf of Alaska east of the Kenai Peninsula. The worst oil spill in U.S. history occurred here in March 1989.

prin-ci-pal (prɪn'sə-pəl) adj. Abbr. prin. 1. First, highest, or foremost in importance, rank, worth, or degree; chief. See Synonyms at chief. 2. Of, relating to, or being financial principal, or a principal in a financial transaction. — n. Abbr. prin. 1. One who holds a position of presiding rank, especially the head of an elementary school or high school. 2. A main participant in a situation. 3. A person having a leading or starring role. 4. a. The capital or main body of an estate or a financial holding as distinguished from the interest or revenue from it. b. A sum of money owed as a debt, upon which interest is calculated. 5. Law. a. A person who empowers another to act as his or her representative. b. The person having prime responsibility for an obligation as distinguished from one who acts as surety or as an endorser. c. One who commits or is an accomplice to a crime. 6. The main truss or rafter that supports and gives form to a roof. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prīncipālis, from prīnceps, prīncip-, leader, emperor. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prin'ci-pal-ly adv.
—prin'ci-pal-ship n.

USAGE NOTE: Principal and principle are often confused but have no meanings in common. Principle is only a noun, and most of its senses refer to that which is basic or to rules and standards. Principal is both a noun and an adjective. As a noun (aside from its specialized meanings in law and finance) it generally denotes a person who holds a high position or plays an important role: a meeting among all the principals in the transaction. As an adjective it has the sense of “chief” or “leading.”

principal diagonal (prɪn'sə-pəl dī-äg'ə-nəl) n. Mathematics. The diagonal in a square matrix that goes from the upper left corner to the lower right corner.

principal focus (prɪn'sə-pəl fō'kəs) n. A focal point.

prin-ci-pal-i-ty (prɪn'sə-pāl'ɪ-tē) n. pl. prin-ci-pal-i-ties. 1. A territory ruled by a prince or from which a prince derives his title. 2. The position, authority, or jurisdiction of a prince; sovereignty. 3. principalities. Theology. The seventh of the nine orders of angels. In this sense, also called princedom principal parts (prɪn'sə-pəl pɑrts) pl.n. Grammar. 1. In traditional grammars of inflected languages, the forms of the verb that are considered basic and from which all forms of the verb are derived. 2. In English, the present infinitive (play, eat, put), the past tense (played, ate, put), and the present participle (playing, eating, putting).

Prin-ci-pe (prɪn'sə-pə, prɛn'sɪ-) An island of western Africa in the Gulf of Guinea, part of São Tomé and Príncipe.

prin-cip-i-um (prɪn-sɪp'ē-əm) n. pl. prin-cip-i-a (-ē-ə). A principle, especially a basic one. [Latin prīncipium. See PRINCIPLE.]

prin-ci-ple (prɪn'sə-pəl) n. Abbr. prin. 1. A basic truth, law, or assumption: the principles of democracy. 2. a. A rule or standard, especially of good behavior: a man of principle. b. The collectivity of moral or ethical standards or judgments: a decision based on principle rather than expediency. 3. A fixed or predetermined policy or mode of action. 4. A basic or essential quality or element determining intrinsic nature or characteristic behavior: the principle of self-preservation. 5. A rule or law concerning the functioning of natural phenomena or mechanical processes: the principle of jet propulsion. 6. Chemistry. One of the elements that compose a substance, especially one that gives some special quality or effect. 7. A basic source. See Usage Note at principal. 8. Principle. Christian Science. God. —idioms. in principle. With regard to the basics: an idea that is acceptable in principle. on principle. According to or because of principle. [Middle English, alteration of Old French principe, from Latin prīncipium, from prīnceps, prīncip-, leader, emperor. See per¹ in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Despite generations of spelling lessons, the words principle and principal are still commonly confused. Perhaps an understanding of their history will help in keeping them straight. Both words go back to the same Latin word, prīnceps, meaning “first, as in time, position, or authority.” The split that has caused all the trouble occurred in the next stage of development. From prīnceps were derived the noun prīncipium, “start, origin, guiding principle,” the adjective prīncipālis, “first in importance or esteem,” and the noun prīncipālis, “a leading citizen.” Clearly the latter two words with the ā between the p and the l have given us the adjective principal (first recorded around 1300) and the noun principal (also first recorded in a work composed around 1300). Perhaps it should not be mentioned that one Middle English spelling for the noun was principle. On the other hand, the Latin word prīncipium and its Old French descendant principe were involved in the creation of the word principle in Middle English, first recorded in a work written around 1380. Words like manciple and participle influenced the spelling of this new word, but again perhaps we should keep silent about the fact that we also find the word spelled principal and prinsipal in Middle English. A key point to remember about these seemingly aberrant Middle English spellings is that in Middle English spelling was not nearly as fixed as it usually is today, a development that was much furthered by the invention of printing. When we interchange spellings for principle and principal, we are doing something that would have been less of a fault in the days before the conformity imposed on us by this marvelous invention.

prin-ci-pled (prɪn'sə-pæld) adj. Based on, marked by, or manifesting principle: a principled decision; a highly principled person.

prink (prɪŋk) v. prinked, prink-ing, prinks. — v. tr. To adorn (oneself) in a showy manner. — v. intr. To dress or groom oneself with elaborate care or vanity; primp. [Probably alteration of PRANK².] — prink'er n.

print (prɪnt) n. 1. A mark or an impression made in or on a surface by pressure: the print of footsteps in the sand. See Synonyms at impression. 2. a. A device or an implement, such as a stamp, die, or seal, used to press markings onto or into a surface. b. Something formed or marked by such a device. 3. a. Lettering or other impressions produced in ink from type by a printing press or other means. b. Matter so produced; printed material. c. Printed state or form. 4. a. A printed publication, such as a magazine or newspaper. b. Printed matter. 5. A design or picture transferred from an engraved plate, wood block, lithographic stone, or other medium. 6. A photographic image transferred to paper or a similar surface, usually from a negative. 7. A copy of a film or movie. 8. a. A fabric or garment with a dyed pattern that has been pressed onto it, usually by engraved rollers. b. The pattern itself. — v. print-ed, print-ing, prints. — v. tr. 1. To press (a mark or design, for example) onto or into a surface. 2. a. To make an impression on or in (a surface) with a device such as a stamp, seal, or die. b. To press (a stamp or similar device) onto or into a surface to leave a marking. 3. a. To produce by means of pressed type on a paper surface, with or as if with a printing press. b. To offer in printed form; publish. 4. To write (something) in characters similar to those commonly used in print. 5. To impress firmly in the mind or memory. 6. To produce a photographic image from (a negative, for example) by passing light through film onto a photosensitive surface, especially sensitized paper. — v. intr. 1. a. To work as a printer. b. To produce printed material. 2. To produce something in printed form by means of a printing press or other reproduction process. 3. To write characters similar to those commonly used in print. 4. To produce or receive an impression, a marking, or an image. — adj. Of, relating to, writing for, or constituting printed publications: a print journalist; print coverage. — phrasal verb. print out. Computer Science. To print as a function; produce printout. — idioms. in print. 1. In printed or published form: denials that were to be found in print. 2. Offered for sale by a publisher: books that are still in print. out of print. No longer offered for sale by a publisher: books that are out of print. [Middle English preinte, from Old French, from feminine past participle of preindre, to press, alteration of prembre, from Latin premere. See per-⁴ in Appendix.]

print. abbr. Printing.

print·a·ble (prɪn'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of being printed or of producing a print: printable negatives. 2. Fit for publication: printable language.

—print'a·bil'i·ty n.

print bar (prɪnt bär) n. A mechanism in a printing device that carries the template of the final form of the alphanumeric characters to be printed.

print·ed circuit (prɪn'tɪd sɪr'kɪt) n. An electric circuit in which the conducting connections have been printed or otherwise deposited in predetermined patterns on an insulating base.

printed matter (prɪn'tɪd mät'ər) n. Printed material, such as a book or magazine, that is not considered first-class mail and qualifies for a special postal rate.

print·er (prɪn'tər) n. 1. One that prints, especially one whose occupation is printing. 2. A device used for printing, especially a photographic machine from which a duplicate of a master print can be made. 3. Computer Science. The part of a system that produces printed matter.

print·er's devil (prɪn'tərz dəv'əl) n. An apprentice in a printing establishment.

print head (prɪnt hɛd) n. Computer Science. The element of a printer that applies the mark or image to the paper.

print·ing (prɪn'tɪŋ) n. Abbr. print., pr., ptg. 1. The art, process, or business of producing printed material by means of inked type and a printing press or by similar means. 2. a. The act of one that prints. b. Matter that is printed. 3. All the copies of a publication, such as a book, that are printed at one time. 4. Written characters not connected to one another and resembling those appearing in print.

printing ink (prɪn'tɪŋ ɪŋk) n. Ink made especially for use in printing.

printing office (prɪn'tɪŋ ô'fis) n. An establishment where printed material is produced, especially one that is officially authorized.

printing press (prɪn'tɪŋ prɛs) n. A machine that transfers lettering or images by contact with various forms of inked surface onto paper or similar material fed into it in various ways.

print·mak·ing (prɪnt'mā'kɪŋ) n. The artistic design and manufacture of prints, such as woodcuts or silk-screens. —print'mak'er n.

print·out (prɪnt'out') n. Computer Science. Printed output.

print wheel (prɪnt hwɛl) n. A disk-shaped mechanism in a printing device that carries the template of the characters to be printed around its rim and prints one character at a time, revolving after each character to the proper position for the next.

pri-on (prē'ōn) n. A microscopic protein particle similar to a virus but lacking nucleic acid, thought to be the infectious agent responsible for scrapie and certain other degenerative diseases of the nervous system. [proteinaceous (PROTEIN + -ACEOUS) + I(NFECTIOUS) + -ON¹.]

pri-or¹ (prī'ər) adj. 1. Preceding in time or order: “[They] insist that foreign vessels seeking access obtain prior approval” (Seymour M. Hersh). 2. Preceding in importance or value: a prior consideration. [Latin. See PRIOR².] —pri/or-ly adv.

pri-or² (prī'ər) n. 1. A monastic officer in charge of a priory or ranking next below the abbot of an abbey. 2. One of the ruling magistrates of the medieval Italian republic of Florence. [Middle English priour, from Old English, and Old French prior both from Medieval Latin, from Latin, superior. See per¹ in Appendix.] —pri/or-ate (-īt), pri/or-ship' (-shīp') n.

Pri-or (prī'ər), Matthew. 1664-1721. English poet and diplomat known for his epigrams and light satirical verse.

pri-or-ess (prī'ər-īs) n. A nun in charge of a priory or ranking next below the abbess of an abbey. [Middle English prioress, from Old French, feminine of prior, a prior. See PRIOR².]

pri-or-i-tize (prī-ôr'ī-tīz', -ôr'-) v. pri-or-i-tized, pri-or-i-tiz-ing, pri-or-i-tiz-es. Usage Problem. — v. tr. To arrange or deal with in order of importance. — v. intr. To put things in order of importance: “Everyone should take time to be alone, to prioritize and meditate” (Art Linkletter). [PRIORIT(Y) + -IZE.] —pri-or'i-ti-za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

USAGE NOTE: It can be argued that prioritize serves a useful function in providing a single word to mean “arrange according to priority,” but like many other recent formations with -ize, it is widely regarded as corporate or bureaucratic jargon. In an earlier survey, prioritize was unacceptable to the great majority of the Usage Panel. See Usage Note at -ize.

pri-or-i-ty (prī-ôr'ī-tē, -ôr'-) n. pl. pri-or-i-ties. 1. Precedence, especially established by order of importance or urgency. 2. a. An established right to precedence. b. An authoritative rating that establishes such precedence. 3. A preceding or coming earlier in time. 4. Something afforded or deserving prior attention. [Middle English priorite, from Old French, from Medieval Latin priōritās, from Latin prior, first. See PRIOR².]

prior to (prī'ər tō) prep. Preceding, before: “prior to the changes of ownership and editorship” (Brendan Gill).

pri-or-y (prī'ə-rē) n. pl. pri-or-ies. A monastery governed by a prior or a convent governed by a prioress.

Prip-et (prip'ět) or Pri-pyat (prē'pyət) A river, about 708 km (440 mi) long, of northern Ukraine and southern Belarus flowing generally eastward through the Pripet Marshes, a forested, swampy area, to the Dnieper River north of Kiev.

Pris-cian (prīsh'ən, -ē-ən), fl. A.D. 500. Latin grammarian at Constantinople whose text Institutiones Grammaticae was used throughout medieval Europe.

prise (prīz) v. & n. Variant of prize³.

prism (prīz'əm) n. 1. A solid figure whose bases or ends have the same size and shape and are parallel to one another, and each of whose sides is a parallelogram.

2. A transparent body of this form, often of glass and usually with triangular ends, used for separating white light passed through it into a spectrum or for reflecting beams of light. 3. A cut-glass object, such as a pendant of a chandelier.

4. A crystal form consisting of three or more similar faces parallel to a single axis.

5. A medium that misrepresents whatever is seen through it. [Late Latin prisma, from Greek prisma, thing sawed off, prism, from priein, prizein, to saw.]

pris-mat-ic (prīz-măt'ik) also pris-mat-i-cal (-i-kəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, resembling, or being a prism. 2. Formed by refraction of light through a prism. Used of a spectrum of light. 3. Brilliantly colored; iridescent. [Greek prisma, prismat-, prism; see PRISM + -IC.] —pris-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

pris-ma-toid (prīz'mə-toid') n. A polyhedron all of whose vertices lie in one of two parallel planes. [Greek prisma, prismat-, prism + -OID.] —pris'ma-toi'dal (-toid'l) adj.

pris-moid (prīz'moid') n. A prismatoid having polygons with the same number of sides as bases, and faces that are parallelograms or trapezoids.

—pris-moi'dal (-moid'l) adj.

pris-on (prīz'ən) n. 1. A place where persons convicted or accused of crimes are confined; a penitentiary or a jail. 2. A place or condition of confinement or forcible restraint. 3. A state of imprisonment or captivity. — v. tr. pris-oned, pris-on-ing, pris-ons. To confine in a prison; imprison. [Middle English, from Old French, alteration (influenced by Old French pris, taken), of Latin prēnsiō, prēnsiōn-, a seizing, from prehēnsiō*, from prehēnsus, past participle of prehendere, to seize. See ghend- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: The word prison has its origins not in the notions of what such a place is but rather in the notion of how one gets there. Prison can be traced back to the Latin word prēnsiō, “the action or power of making an arrest.” This in turn is derived from the verb prehendere or prendere, which meant “to take hold of, take into custody, arrest.” Prēnsiō then dives into the obscurity of the time when Romance languages such as French were being formed from Vulgar Latin and resurfaces in the Old French of the 12th century with the form prison and the senses “capture” and “place of imprisonment.” This new sense could have already been developed in Latin and not been recorded, but we have to wait until the 12th century to see it, the sense “captivity” being added in the same century. From Old French as well as the Medieval Latin word priso, “prison,” derived from Old French, came our Middle English word prisoun, first recorded in a work written before 1121 in the sense “imprisonment.” The sense “place of imprisonment” is recorded shortly afterward in a text copied down before 1225 but perhaps actually written in the Old English period before the Norman Conquest.

prison camp (prɪz'ən kămp) n. 1. A camp for prisoners of war. 2. A minimum security facility for the internment of prisoners. In this sense, also called work camp pris-on-er (prɪz'ə-nər, prɪz'nər) n. 1. A person held in custody, captivity, or a condition of forcible restraint, especially while on trial or serving a prison sentence. 2. One deprived of freedom of expression or action: “He was a prisoner of his own personality—of that given set of traits that... predisposed him to see the world in a certain way, to make certain moves, certain choices” (William H. Hallahan).

prisoner of war (prɪz'ə-nər ʊv wôr) n. pl. prisoners of war. A person taken by or surrendering to enemy forces in wartime.

Prisoner of War Medal (prɪz'ə-nər ʊv wôr mĕd'l) n. A congressional decoration featuring a bald eagle surrounded by barbed wire and bayonet points, that is awarded to any American prisoner of war held captive by enemy troops after April 5, 1917.

pris-on-er's base (prɪz'ə-nərz bās, prɪz'nərz) n. Games. A children's game in which two teams try to capture opposing players by tagging them and bringing them to a base.

prison fever (prɪz'ən fē'vər) n. See typhus. [So called because it formerly prevailed in prisons.]

pris-sy (prɪs'ē) adj. pris-si-er, pris-si-est. Excessively or affectedly prim and proper. [Perhaps blend of PRI(M)¹, and (SI)SSY.] —pris'si-ly adv. —pris'si-ness n.

pris-tine (prɪs'tĕn', prɪ-stĕn') adj. 1. a. Remaining in a pure state; uncorrupted by civilization. b. Remaining free from dirt or decay; clean: pristine mountain snow. 2. Of, relating to, or typical of the earliest time or condition; primitive or original. [Latin prīstinus. See per¹ in Appendix.] —pris-tine/ly adv.

Pritch-ett (prɪtʃ'ĭt), Sir V(ictor) S(awdon). Born 1900. British writer of novels, literary criticism, and most notably, short stories.

prith-ee (prɪθ'hē, prɪθ'ē) interj. Archaic. Used to express a polite request. [Alteration of (I) pray thee.]

priv. abbr. 1. Private. 2. Grammar. Privative.

pri·va·cy (prī'və-sē) n. 1. a. The quality or condition of being secluded from the presence or view of others. b. The state of being free from unsanctioned intrusion: a person's right to privacy. 2. The state of being concealed; secrecy.

pri·vate (prī'vīt) adj. Abbr. priv., pvt. 1. a. Secluded from the sight, presence, or intrusion of others: a private hideaway. b. Designed or intended for one's exclusive use: a private room. 2. a. Of or confined to the individual; personal: a private joke; private opinions. b. Undertaken on an individual basis: private studies; private research. c. Of, relating to, or receiving special hospital services and privileges: a private patient. 3. Not available for public use, control, or participation: a private club; a private party. 4. a. Belonging to a particular person or persons, as opposed to the public or the government: private property. b. Conducted and supported primarily by private individuals or by a nongovernmental agency or corporation: a private college; a private sanatorium. c. Of, relating to, or derived from nongovernment sources: private funding. 5. Not holding an official or public position: a former President who is now a private citizen. 6. a. Not for public knowledge or disclosure; secret: private papers; a private communication. b. Not appropriate for use or display in public; intimate: private behavior; a private tragedy. c. Placing a high value on personal privacy: a retiring, private individual. — n. 1. Abbr. PVT, Pvt a. A noncommissioned rank in the U.S. Army or Marine Corps that is below private first class. b. One who holds this rank or a similar rank in a military or paramilitary organization. 2. privates. Private parts. Often used with the. — idioms. go private. To take a publicly owned company into private ownership, as by a leveraged buyout. in private. Not in public; secretly or confidentially. [Middle English privat, from Latin privātus, not in public life, past participle of privāre, to release, deprive, from prīvus, single, alone. See per¹ in Appendix.] — pri·vate·ly adv. — pri·vate·ness n.

private detective (prī'vīt dī-tĕk'tīv) n. A privately employed detective. Also called private eye, private investigator.

private enterprise (prī'vīt ěn'tər-prīz') n. 1. Business activities unregulated by state ownership or control; privately owned business. 2. A privately owned business enterprise, especially one operating under a system of free enterprise or laissez-faire capitalism.

pri·va·teer (prī'və-tīr') n. 1. A ship privately owned and manned but authorized by a government during wartime to attack and capture enemy vessels. 2. The commander or one of the crew of such a ship. — v. intr. pri·va·teered, pri·va·teer·ing, pri·va·teers. To sail as a privateer.

private eye (prī'vīt ī) n. See private detective.

private first class (prī'vīt fīrst klās) n. pl. privates first class. Abbr. PFC, Pfc 1. A noncommissioned rank in the U.S. Army that is above private and below corporal or in the U.S. Marine Corps that is above private and below lance corporal. 2. One who holds this rank.

private investigator (prī'vīt in-vēs'tī-gā'tər) n. Abbr. PI See private detective.

private law (prī'vīt lô) n. The branch of law that deals with the legal rights and relationships of private individuals.

private member (prī'vīt mēm'bər) n. Chiefly British. A member of Parliament who does not hold office in the government or in his or her party.

private parts (prī'vīt pärts) pl.n. The external organs of sex and excretion.

private school (prī'vīt skōōl) n. A secondary or elementary school run and supported by private individuals or a corporation rather than by a government or public agency.

pri·va·tion (prī-vā'shən) n. 1. a. Lack of the basic necessities or comforts of life. b. The condition resulting from such lack. 2. An act, condition, or result of deprivation or loss. [Middle English privacion, from Old French, from Latin privātiō, privātiōn-, from privātus, past participle of privāre, to deprive. See PRIVATE.]

pri·vat·ism (prī'və-tīz'əm) n. The social position of being noncommittal to or uninvolved with anything other than one's own immediate interests and lifestyle. —pri·va·tist adj., n. —pri·va·tis'tic adj.

priv·a·tive (prīv'ə-tīv) adj. 1. Causing deprivation, lack, or loss. 2. Abbr. priv. Grammar. Altering the meaning of a term from positive to negative. — n. Abbr. priv. Grammar. A privative prefix or suffix, such as a-, non-, un-, or -less. [Middle English privatif, from Latin privātīvus, from privātus, past participle of privāre, to deprive. See PRIVATE.] —priv·a·tive·ly adv.

pri·va·tize (prī'və-tīz') v. tr. pri·va·tized, pri·va·tiz·ing, pri·va·tiz·es. Usage Problem. To change (an industry or a business, for example) from governmental or public ownership or control to private enterprise: “The strike... was called to protest the... government’s plans to break up and privatize the deficit-ridden national railway system” (Christian Science Monitor). See Usage Note at -ize. —pri·va·ti·za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

priv·et (prīv'īt) n. 1. Any of several shrubs of the genus Ligustrum, especially L. vulgare or L. ovalifolium, having opposite leaves and clusters of white flowers and widely used for hedges. 2. Any of several similar or related plants. [Origin unknown.]

priv·i·lege (prīv'ə-līj, prīv'lij) n. 1. a. A special advantage, immunity, permission, right, or benefit granted to or enjoyed by an individual, a class, or a caste. See Synonyms at right. b. Such an advantage, an immunity, or a right held as a prerogative of status or rank, and exercised to the exclusion or detriment of others. 2. The principle of granting and maintaining a special right or immunity: a society based on privilege. 3. Law. The right to privileged communication in a confidential relationship, as between client and attorney, patient and physician, or communicant and priest. 4. An option to buy or sell a stock, including put, call, spread, and straddle. — v. tr. priv-i-legged, priv-i-leg-ing, priv-i-leg-es.

1. To grant a privilege to. 2. To free or exempt. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin privilēgium, a law affecting one person : prīvus, single, alone; see per¹ in Appendix + lēx, lēg-, law; see leg- in Appendix.]

priv-i-legged (prīv'ə-lījd, prīv'lījd) adj. 1. Enjoying a privilege or having privileges: privileged students. 2. Confined to an exclusive or chosen group of individuals: privileged information. — n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Those enjoying a privilege or having privileges: tax laws that favored the privileged at the expense of the disadvantaged.

privileged communication (prīv'ə-lījd kə-myōō'nī-kā'shən) n. Law. 1. A confidential communication that one cannot be forced to divulge. 2. A communication that is not subject to charges of slander or libel.

priv-i-ly (prīv'ə-lē) adv. In a privy manner; privately or secretly.

priv-i-ty (prīv'ī-tē) n. pl. priv-i-ties. 1. Knowledge of something private or secret shared between individuals, especially with the implication of approval or consent. 2. Law. a. A relation between parties that is held to be sufficiently close and direct to support a legal claim on behalf of or against another person with whom this relation exists. b. A successive or mutual interest in or relationship to the same property. [Middle English privete, secrecy, privacy, from Old French, from Medieval Latin privitās, from Latin prīvus, single, alone. See per¹ in Appendix.]

priv-y (prīv'ē) adj. 1. Made a participant in knowledge of something private or secret: was privy to government secrets. 2. Belonging or proper to a person, such as the British sovereign, in a private rather than official capacity. 3. Secret; concealed. — n. pl. priv-ies. 1. a. An outdoor toilet; an outhouse. b. A toilet. 2. Law. One of the parties having an interest in the same matter. [Middle English prive, from Old French, from Latin privātus, private, from prīvus, single, alone. See per¹ in Appendix.]

Priv-y Council (prīv'ē koun'səl) n. Abbr. P.C. 1. A council of the British sovereign that until the 17th century was the supreme legislative body, that now consists of cabinet ministers ex officio and others appointed for life, and that has no important function except through its Judicial Committee, which in certain cases acts as a supreme appellate court in the Commonwealth. 2. privy council. An advisory council to an executive. — privy councilor n.

prix fixe (prē' fēks') n. pl. prix fixes (prē' fēks'). 1. A complete meal of several courses, sometimes with choices permitted, offered by a restaurant at a fixed price. 2. A fixed price charged for such a meal. 3. See table d'hôte (n., sense 2). [French : prix, price + fixe, fixed.]

prize¹ (prīz) n. 1. Something offered or won as an award for superiority or victory, as in a contest or competition. See Synonyms at bonus. 2. Something worth striving for; a highly desirable possession. — adj. 1. Offered or given as a prize: a prize cup. 2. Given a prize, or likely to win a prize: a prize cow. 3. Worthy of a prize; first-class: our prize azaleas. — v. tr. prized, priz-ing, priz-es. 1. To value highly; esteem or treasure. See Synonyms at appreciate. 2. To estimate the worth of; evaluate. [Alteration of Middle English pris, value, price, reward. See PRICE.]

prize² (prīz) n. 1. Nautical. Something seized by force or taken as booty, especially an enemy ship and its cargo captured at sea during wartime. 2. The act of seizing; capture. [Alteration of Middle English prise, from Old French, from feminine past participle of prendre, from Latin prehendere, prendere, to seize. See ghend- in Appendix.]

prize³ also prise (prīz) v. tr. prized also prised, priz-ing also pris-ing, priz-es also pris-es. To move or force with or as if with a lever; pry. — n. 1. Leverage. 2. Chiefly Southern U.S. Something used as a lever or for prying. [From Middle English prise, instrument for prying, probably from prise, the taking of something. See PRIZE².]

prize-fight (prīz'fīt') n. Sports. A match fought between professional boxers for money. — prize'fight'er n. — prize'fight'ing n.

prize ring (prīz rīng) n. Sports. 1. A platform enclosed by ropes on which contending boxers meet. 2. Professional boxing.

prize-win-ner (prīz'wīn'ər) n. One that wins a prize.

prize-win-ning also prize-win-ning (prīz'wīn'īng) adj. Having won or worthy of winning a prize: a prizewinning wine.

p.r.n. or PRN abbr. Latin. Pro re nata (as the situation demands).

pro¹ (prō) n. pl. pros. Abbr. p. 1. An argument or a consideration in favor of something: weighing the pros and cons. 2. One who supports a proposal or takes the affirmative side in debate. — adv. In favor; affirmatively: arguing pro and con. — adj. Affirmative; supporting: a pro vote. [Middle English, from Latin prō, for. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro² (prō) Informal. n. pl. pros. 1. A professional, especially in sports. 2. An expert in a field of endeavor. — adj. Professional: pro football.

PRO also P.R.O. abbr. Public relations officer.

pro¹ pref. 1. Acting in the place of; substituting for: pronoun. 2. Supporting; favoring: prorevolutionary. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pro-, prō-, from prō, for. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro² pref. 1. a. Earlier; before; prior to: procambium. b. Rudimentary: pronucleus. 2. Anterior; in front of: procephalic. [Middle English, from Old French, from Greek, from pro, before, in front. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro·a (prō'ə) also prau (prou) or prah·u (prā'ōō) n. Nautical. A swift Malayan sailboat with a triangular sail and a single outrigger. [Malay pērāhū, probably from Marathi paḍāv.]

pro·a·bor·tion (prō'ə-bôr'shən) adj. Favoring or supporting legalized abortion. —pro' a·bor'tion·ist n.

pro·ac·tive or pro·ac·tive (prō-āk'tiv) adj. Acting in advance to deal with an expected difficulty; anticipatory: not reactive, but proactive steps to combat terrorism. —pro·ac'tion n. —pro·ac'tive·ly adv.

pro·am (prō'ām') Sports. n. A sports event, such as a golf tournament, in which professionals compete with or against amateurs. — adj. Of, relating to, or constituting a sports event participated in by professionals and amateurs. [PRO(FES-SIONAL) + AM(ATEUR).]

prob. abbr. 1. Probable; probably. 2. Law. Probate. 3. Problem.

prob·a·bi·lism (prōb'ə-bə-līz'əm) n. 1. Philosophy. The doctrine that probability is a sufficient basis for belief and action, since certainty in knowledge is unattainable. 2. Roman Catholic Church. The system of casuistry that, in those cases in which expert opinions on ethics are in doubt concerning the licitness of an act, allows an actor to follow the solidly probable opinion that favors the actor's personal liberty even though an opposing opinion, favoring law, may be more probable. —prob' a·bi·list adj. & n.

prob·a·bil·is·tic (prōb'ə-bə-līs'tik) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or based on probabilism: the probabilistic system of ethics. 2. Of, based on, or affected by probability, randomness, or chance: "The Big Bang universe is... exemplified in the probabilistic and indeterminate interactions of the smallest known physical properties" (Frederick Turner). —prob' a·bil·ist'i·cal·ly adv.

prob·a·bil·i·ty (prōb'ə-bīl'ī-tē) n. pl. prob·a·bil·i·ties. 1. The quality or condition of being probable; likelihood. 2. A probable situation, condition, or event. 3. a. The likelihood that a given event will occur: a great probability of rain this evening. b. Statistics. A number expressing the likelihood that a specific event will occur, expressed as the ratio of the number of actual occurrences to the number of possible occurrences. —idiom. in all probability. Most probably; very likely.

probability density (prōb'ə-bīl'ī-tē dēn'si-tē) n. Statistics. 1. A function whose integral over a given interval gives the probability that the value of a random variable specified by its values will fall within the interval. 2. The calculated value of a probability density. Also called probability distribution probability distribution (prōb'ə-bīl'ī-tē dīs'trə-byōō'shən) n. Statistics. 1. See probability density. 2. A function of a discrete random variable yielding the probability that the variable will have a given value.

probability theory (prɒb'ə-bɪl'i-tē thē'ə-rē) n. The branch of mathematics that studies the likelihood of occurrence of random events in order to predict the behavior of defined systems.

prob·a·ble (prɒb'ə-bəl) adj. Abbr. prob. 1. Likely to happen or to be true: War seemed probable in 1938. The home team, far ahead, is the probable winner.

2. Likely but uncertain; plausible. 3. Theology. Of or relating to opinions and actions in ethics and morals for whose lawfulness intrinsic reasons or extrinsic authority may be adduced. [Middle English, plausible, from Old French, from Latin probābilis, from probāre, to prove. See PROVE.]

probable cause (prɒb'ə-bəl kôz) n. Law. Reasonable grounds for belief that an accused person may be subject to arrest or the issuance of a warrant.

—prob'a·ble-cause' (prɒb'ə-bəl-kôz') adj.

probable error (prɒb'ə-bəl ɛr'ər) n. Abbr. P.E. Statistics. The amount by which the arithmetic mean of a sample is expected to vary because of chance alone.

prob·a·bly (prɒb'ə-blē) adv. Abbr. prob. Most likely; presumably.

pro·bang (prō'bǎŋg') n. A long, slender, flexible rod having a tuft or sponge at the end, used to remove foreign bodies from or apply medication to the larynx or esophagus. [Alteration (probably influenced by PROBE), of provang.]

pro·bate (prō'bāt') Law. n. Abbr. prob. 1. The process of legally establishing the validity of a will before a judicial authority. 2. Judicial certification of the validity of a will. 3. An authenticated copy of a will so certified. — v. tr.

pro·bat·ed, pro·bat·ing, pro·bates. To establish the validity of (a will) by probate. [Middle English probat, from Latin probātum, neuter past participle of probāre, to prove. See PROVE.]

probate court (prō'bāt' kôrt) n. Law. A court limited to the jurisdiction of probating wills and administering estates.

pro·ba·tion (prō-bā'shən) n. 1. A process or period in which a person's fitness, as for membership in a working or social group, is tested. 2. a. Law. The act of suspending the sentence of a person convicted of a criminal offense and granting that person provisional freedom on the promise of good behavior. b. A discharge for a person from commitment as an insane person on condition of continued sanity and of being recommitted upon the reappearance of insanity.

3. A trial period in which a student is given time to try to redeem failing grades or bad conduct. 4. The status of a person on probation. [Middle English probacion, a testing, from Old French, from Latin probātiō, probātiōn-, from probātus, past participle of probāre, to test. See PROVE.] —pro·ba'tion·al adj. —pro·ba'tion·al·ly adv. —pro·ba'tion·ar'y adj.

pro·ba·tion·er (prō-bā'shə-nər) n. A person on probation.

probation officer (prō-bā'shən ô'fī-sər) n. Law. 1. An official usually attached to a juvenile court and charged with the care of juvenile delinquents.

2. An official charged with supervising convicts at large on suspended sentence or probation.

pro·ba·tive (prō'bā-tīv) also pro·ba·to·ry (-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Serving to test, try, or prove: a probative period. 2. Furnishing evidence or proof.

probe (prōb) n. 1. An exploratory action, expedition, or device, especially one designed to investigate and obtain information on a remote or unknown region: electronic probes into the crust of the earth. 2. A slender, flexible surgical instrument used to explore a wound or body cavity. 3. The act of exploring or searching with or as if with a device or an instrument. 4. An investigation into unfamiliar matters or questionable activities; a penetrating inquiry: a congressional probe into price fixing. See Synonyms at inquiry. 5. A space probe. — v. probed, prob·ing, probes. — v. tr. 1. To explore with or as if with a probe: probe a wound to find its extent; probing the anthill with a stick. 2. To delve into; investigate. — v. intr. To conduct an exploratory investigation; search. [Middle English, examination, from Medieval Latin proba, from Late Latin, proof, from Latin probāre, to test, from probus, good. See per¹ in Appendix.] — prob'er n. — prob'ing·ly adv.

pro·ben·e·cid (prō-bĕn'ī-sīd) n. A uricosuric drug, C₁₃H₁₉NO₄S, derived from benzoic acid and used chiefly in the treatment of gout. [PRO(PYL) + BEN(ZOIC) (A)CID.]

pro·bi·ty (prō'bī-tē) n. Complete and confirmed integrity; uprightness: "He was a gentlemanly Georgian, a person of early American probity" (Mary McGrory). See Synonyms at honesty. [Middle English probite, from Old French, from Latin probitās, from probus, upright, good. See per¹ in Appendix.]

prob·lem (prōb'ləm) n. Abbr. prob. 1. A question to be considered, solved, or answered: math problems; the problem of how to hem a skirt evenly. 2. A situation, matter, or person that presents perplexity or difficulty: urban problems such as traffic congestion and smog; the philosophical problem of evil. See Usage Note at dilemma. — adj. 1. Difficult to deal with or control: a problem child; problem customers. 2. Dealing with a moral or social problem: a problem play. [Middle English probleme, from Old French, from Latin problēma, problēmat-, from Greek, from proballein, to throw before, put forward : pro-, before; see PRO⁻² + ballein, blē-, to throw; see g^wel- in Appendix.]

prob·lem·at·ic (prōb'lə-măt'īk) also prob·lem·at·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. 1. Posing a problem; difficult to solve: a problematic situation in the home. 2. Open to doubt; debatable: "if you ever get married, which seems to me extremely problematic" (Oscar Wilde). 3. Not settled; unresolved or dubious: a problematic future. — prob'lem·at'ic·al·ly adv.

prob·lem·o·ri·ent·ed language (prōb'ləm-ôr'ē-ĕn'tīd lăng'gwīj, -ôr'-) n. Computer Science. A programming language intended for use in solving a particular set of problems.

pro bo·no (prō bō'nō) adj. Done without compensation for the public good: a lawyer's pro bono work. [Latin prō bonō (publicō), for the (public) good : prō, for + bonō, ablative of bonum, the good.]

pro·bos·ci·de·an (prō-bōs'ī-dē'ən) adj. & n. Variant of proboscidian.

pro·bos·ci·des (prō-bōs'ī-dēz') n. A plural of proboscis.

pro·bos·cid·i·an (prō'bə-sīd'ē-ən) also pro·bos·ci·de·an (prō-bōs'ī-dē'ən) n. A mammal of the order Proboscidea, such as the elephant or its extinct relatives, having a long trunk, large tusks, and a massive body. — adj. Of or belonging to the order Proboscidea. [From New Latin Proboscidea, order name, from Latin proboscis, proboscid-, proboscis. See PROBOSCIS.]

pro·bos·cis (prō-bōs'īs) n. pl. pro·bos·cis·es or pro·bos·ci·des (-bōs'ī-dēz'). 1. A long, flexible snout or trunk, as of an elephant. 2. The slender, tubular feeding and sucking organ of certain invertebrates, such as insects, worms, and mollusks. 3. A human nose, especially a prominent one. [Latin, from Greek proboskis : pro-, in front; see PRO-² + boskein, to feed.]

pro·bus·ing (prō-būs'īng) adj. Favoring or supporting the busing of children to schools outside their neighborhoods as a means of achieving racial integration.

proc. abbr. 1. Proceeding. 2. Process.

pro·caine (prō'kān') n. A white crystalline powder, C₁₃H₂₀N₂O₂, used chiefly in its hydrochloride form as a local anesthetic in medicine and dentistry. [PRO-¹ + (CO)CAINE.]

pro·cam·bi·um (prō-kām'bē-əm) n. A type of undifferentiated plant tissue that gives rise to vascular tissue. — pro·cam'bi·al (-əl) adj.

pro·car·ba·zine (prō-kār'bə-zēn) n. A potent antineoplastic drug, C₁₂H₁₉N₃O, used to treat advanced Hodgkin's disease. [PRO(PYL) + CARB(O)- + AZINE.]

pro·car·y·ote (prō-kār'ē-ōt') n. Variant of prokaryote.

pro·ce·dur·al (prə-sē'jər-əl) adj. Of or concerning procedure, especially of a court of law or parliamentary body. — n. A police procedural. — pro·ce'·dur·al·ly adv.

pro·ce·dure (prə-sē'jər) n. 1. A manner of proceeding; a way of performing or effecting something: complained to the manager, and by this procedure got the money back. 2. A series of steps taken to accomplish an end: a long therapeutic procedure. 3. A set of established forms or methods for conducting the affairs of a business, legislative body, or court of law. [French procédure, from Old French, from proceder, to proceed. See PROCEED.]

pro·ceed (prō-sēd', prə-) v. intr. pro·ceed·ed, pro·ceed·ing, pro·ceeds.

- 1. To go forward or onward, especially after an interruption; continue: proceeded to his destination; paused to clear her throat, then proceeded.
- 2. To begin to carry on an action or a process: looked surprised, then proceeded to roar with laughter.
- 3. To move on in an orderly manner: Business proceeded as usual.
- 4. To come from a source; originate or issue: behavior proceeding from hidden motives. See Synonyms at stem¹. 5. Law. To institute and conduct legal action: proceeded against the defaulting debtor. — n. also pro-ceeds (prō'sēdz') The amount of money derived from a commercial or fundraising venture; the yield. [Middle English proceden, from Old French proceder, from Latin prōcēdere: prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.] — pro-ceed'er n.

pro-ceed-ing (prō-sē'dīŋ, prə-) n. 1. A course of action; a procedure.

2. proceedings. A sequence of events occurring at a particular place or occasion: watched the proceedings from a ringside seat. 3. proceedings. Abbr. proc.

A record of business carried on by a society or other organization; minutes. 4.

Often proceedings. Law. a. Legal action; litigation. b. The instituting or conducting of legal action.

pro-ce-phal-ic (prō'sə-fāl'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or located on or near the front of the head.

pro-cer-coid (prō-sūr'koid) n. A larval stage of certain tapeworms that typically develops in the body cavity of a copepod. [PRO⁻² + Greek kerkos, tail + -OID.]

proc-ess¹ (prōs'ēs', prō'sēs') n. pl. proc-ess-es (prōs'ēs'īz, prō'sēs'-, prōs'ī-sēz', prō'sī-). Abbr. proc. 1. A series of actions, changes, or functions bringing about a result: the process of digestion; the process of obtaining a driver's license.

2. A series of operations performed in the making or treatment of a product: a manufacturing process; leather dyed during the tanning process. 3. Progress; passage: the process of time; events now in process. 4. Law. The entire course of a judicial proceeding. 5. Law. a. A summons or writ ordering a defendant to appear in court. b. The total quantity of summonses or writs issued in a particular proceeding. 6. Biology. An outgrowth of tissue; a projecting part: a bony process.

7. Any of various photomechanical or photoengraving methods. 8. See conk³.

— v. tr. proc-essed, proc-ess-ing, proc-ess-es. 1. To put through the steps of a prescribed procedure: processing newly arrived immigrants; received the order, processed it, and dispatched the goods. 2. To prepare, treat, or convert by subjecting to a special process: process ore to obtain minerals. 3. Law. a. To serve with a summons or writ. b. To institute legal proceedings against; prosecute.

4. Computer Science. To perform operations on (data). 5. To straighten (hair) by a chemical process; conk. — adj. 1. Prepared or converted by a special process: process cheese. 2. Made by or used in any of several photomechanical or photoengraving processes: a process print. [Middle English proces, from Old French, development, from Latin prōcessus, from past participle of prōcēdere, to advance. See PROCEED.]

USAGE NOTE: In recent years there has been a tendency to pronounce the plural ending -es of processes as (-ēz), perhaps by analogy with words of Greek origin such as analysis and neurosis. But process is not of Greek origin, and there is no etymological justification for this pronunciation of its plural. The pronunciation may someday become so widespread as to be a standard variant, but it still strikes some listeners as a bungled affectation.

pro-cess² (prə-sēs') v. intr. pro-cessed, pro-cess-ing, pro-cess-es. To move along in or as if in a procession: "The man in the panama hat offered his arm and... they processed into the dining room" (Anita Brookner). [Back-formation from PROCESSION.]

pro-ces-sion (prə-sësh'ən) n. 1. The act of moving along or forward; procession. 2. Origination; emanation; rise. 3. a. A group of persons, vehicles, or objects moving along in an orderly, formal manner. b. The movement of such a group. 4. An orderly succession: the procession of the seasons. — v. intr.

pro-ces-sioned, pro-ces-sion-ing, pro-ces-sions. To form or go in a procession. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin prōcessiō, prōcessiōn-, from Latin, an advance, from prōcessus, past participle of prōcēdere, to advance. See PROCEED.]

pro-ces-sion-al (prə-sësh'ə-nəl) adj. Of, relating to, or suitable for a procession. — n. 1. A book containing the rituals observed during a religious procession. 2. Music. a. A piece played or sung when the clergy enter a church at the beginning of a service. b. Music intended to be played or sung during a procession. — pro-ces/sion-al-ly adv.

proc-es-sor (prös'ēs'ər, prō'sēs'-) n. 1. One that processes, especially an apparatus for preparing, treating, or converting material: a wood pulp processor.

2. Computer Science. a. A computer. b. A central processing unit. c. A program that translates another program into a form acceptable by the computer being used.

proc-ess printing (prös'ēs' prīn'tīng, prō'sēs') n. Printing from multiple halftone images, each inked with a different color such that the composite impression will reproduce the colors of the original.

pro-cès-ver-bal (prō-sā'vēr-bäl') n. pl. pro-cès-ver-baux (-vēr-bō'). A detailed official record of diplomatic, deliberative, or legal proceedings. [French : procès, proceedings + verbal, oral (originally used of oral evidence given by illiterate police officers of the lower ranks).]

pro-choice (prō-chois') adj. Favoring or supporting the legal right of women and girls to choose whether or not to continue a pregnancy to term.

pro-claim (prō-klām', prə-) v. tr. pro-claimed, pro-claim-ing, pro-claims.

1. To announce officially and publicly; declare. See Synonyms at announce. 2. To indicate conspicuously; make plain: wearing a button that proclaimed my choice for president. 3. To praise; extol. [Middle English proclamen, proclaimen (influenced by claimen, to claim), from Old French proclamer, from Latin proclāmāre : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + clāmāre, to cry out; see kelə⁻² in Appendix.] — pro-claim'er n. — pro-clam'a-to'ry (prō-klām'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

proc-la-ma-tion (prōk'lə-mā'shən) n. 1. The act of proclaiming or the condition of being proclaimed. 2. Something proclaimed, especially an official public announcement.

pro-clit-ic (prō-klīt'ik) Linguistics. adj. Forming an accentual unit with the following word and thus having no independent accent. — n. A proclitic word. [New Latin procliticus : PRO⁻² + Late Latin encliticus, enclitic; see ENCLITIC.]

pro-cliv-i-ty (prō-klīv'ī-tē) n. pl. pro-cliv-i-ties. A natural propensity or inclination; predisposition. See Synonyms at predilection. [Latin prōclivitas, from prōclivis, inclined : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + clivus, slope; see klei- in Appendix.]

Pro-clus (prō'kləs, prōk'ləs), A.D. 410?-485. Greek philosopher and the last major Neo-Platonic teacher. He maintained that reality is fundamentally mental rather than material.

Proc-ne (prōk'nē) n. Greek Mythology. An Athenian princess who avenged the betrayal and cruelty of her husband, Tereus, by killing their son. She and her sister Philomela were changed into swallows as Tereus pursued them.

pro-co-ag-u-lant (prō'kō-äg'yə-lənt) n. 1. The precursor of any of various blood factors necessary for coagulation. 2. An agent that promotes the coagulation of blood.

pro-con-sul (prō-kön'səl) n. 1. A provincial governor of consular rank in the Roman Republic and Roman Empire. 2. A high administrator in one of the modern colonial empires. [Middle English, from Latin prōcōnsul, from prō cōnsule, in place of the consul : prō, instead of; see PRO⁻¹ + cōnsule, ablative of cōnsul, consul; see CONSUL.] — pro-con/su-lar (-sə-lər) adj. — pro-con/su-late (-sə-līt) n. — pro-con/sul-ship' n.

Pro-co-pi-us (prə-kō'pē-əs), fl. sixth century A.D. Byzantine historian during the reign of Justinian I. He wrote histories of the Persian, Vandal, and Gothic wars and Anecdota, an attack on Justinian.

pro-cras-ti-nate (prō-krās'tə-nāt', prə-) v. pro-cras-ti-nat-ed, pro-cras-ti-nat-ing, pro-cras-ti-nates. — v. intr. To put off doing something, especially out of habitual carelessness or laziness. — v. tr. To postpone or delay needlessly. [Latin prōcrāstināre, prōcrāstināt- : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + crāstinus, of tomorrow (from crās, tomorrow).] — pro-cras'ti-na'tion n. — pro-cras'ti-na'tor n.

pro-cre-ate (prō'krē-āt') v. pro-cre-at-ed, pro-cre-at-ing, pro-cre-ates. — v. tr. 1. To beget and conceive (offspring). 2. To produce or create; originate. — v. intr. To beget and conceive offspring; reproduce. [Latin prōcreāre, prōcreāt- : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + creāre, to create; see ker⁻² in Appendix.] — pro'cre-ant (-ənt) adj. — pro'cre-a'tion n. — pro'cre-a'tor n.

pro-cre-a-tive (prō'krē-ā'tiv) adj. 1. Capable of reproducing; generative.

2. Of or directed to procreation: the procreative instinct.

Pro-crus-te-an also pro-crus-te-an (prō-krūs'tē-ən) adj. Exhibiting merciless disregard for individual differences or special circumstances: a private club with Procrustean standards for the admission of new members. [After Procrustes, a mythical Greek giant who stretched or shortened captives to make them fit his beds, from Latin Procrustēs, from Greek Prokroustēs, from prokrouein, hammer out, to stretch out : pro-, forth; see PRO-² + krouein, to beat.]

Procrustean bed also procrustean bed (prō-krūs'tē-ən bēd) n. An arbitrary standard to which exact conformity is forced.

pro-cryp-tic (prō-krīp'tik) adj. Zoology. Having a pattern or coloration adapted for natural camouflage. [Probably PRO(TECTIVE) + CRYPTIC.]

proc-ti-tis (prök-tī'tis) n. Inflammation of the rectum or anus. [Greek prōktos, anus + -ITIS.]

proc-to-de-um also proc-to-dae-um (prök'tə-dē'əm) n. pl. proc-to-de-a (-dē'ə) or proc-to-de-ums also proc-to-dae-a (-dē'ə) or proc-to-dae-ums. An inward fold on the surface of the embryonic ectoderm that develops into part of the anal passage. [New Latin : Greek prōktos, anus + New Latin -odeum (probably from Greek hodaion, neuter of hodaios, on the way, from hodos, way).]

proc-tol-o-gy (prök-tōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of medicine that deals with the diagnosis and treatment of disorders affecting the colon, rectum, and anus. [Greek prōktos, anus + -LOGY.] —proc'to-log'ic (-tə-lōj'ik), proc'to-log'i-cal (-i-kəl) adj. —proc'to-log'i-cal-ly adv. —proc-tol'o-gist n.

proc-tor (prök'tər) n. A dormitory and examination supervisor in a school. — v. tr. proc-tored, proc-tor-ing, proc-tors. To supervise (an examination). [Middle English procurator, proctour, university officer, manager, from procuratur. See PROCURATOR.] —proc-to'ri-al (-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. —proc'tor-ship' n.

proc-to-scope (prök'tə-sköp') n. An instrument consisting of a tube or speculum equipped with a light, used to examine the rectum. [Greek prōktos, anus + -SCOPE.] —proc'to-scop'ic (-sköp'ik) adj. —proc-tos/co-py (-tōs'kə-pē) n.

pro-cum-bent (prō-kūm'bənt) adj. 1. Lying face down; prone. 2. Botany. Trailing along the ground but not rooting: a procumbent vine. [Latin prōcum-bēns, prōcumbent- present participle of prōcumbere, to bend down : prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + -cumbere, to lie down.]

proc-u-ra-tor (prök'yə-rā'tər) n. 1. One authorized to manage the affairs of another; an agent. 2. An employee of the Roman emperor in civil affairs, especially in finance and taxes, in management of imperial estates and properties, and in governing minor provinces. [Middle English procuratur, from Old French, from Latin prōcūrātor, from prōcūrāre, to take care of. See PROCURE.]

—proc'u-ra-to'ri-al (-yər-ə-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj.

pro-cure (prō-kyōōr', prə-) v. pro-cured, pro-cur-ing, pro-cures. — v. tr.

1. To get by special effort; obtain or acquire: managed to procure a pass. 2. To bring about; effect: procure a solution to a knotty problem. 3. To obtain for another (a person) for sex acts. — v. intr. To obtain sexual partners for others. [Middle English procuren, from Old French procurer, to take care of, from Latin prōcūrāre, to take care of : prō-, for; see PRO⁻¹ + cūrāre, to care for (from cūra, care); see CURE.] — pro-cur'a-ble adj. — pro-cur'ance, pro-cure'ment n.

pro-cur-er (prō-kyōōr'ər, prə-) n. 1. One that procures: a procurer of free tickets to concerts. 2. A pander.

Pro-cy-on (prō'sē-ōn') n. A binary star in the constellation Canis Minor. Also called Dog Star [Latin Procyōn, from Greek Prokuōn : pro-, before; see PRO⁻² + kuōn, dog; see kwon- in Appendix.]

prod (prōd) v. tr. prod-ded, prod-ding, prods. 1. To jab or poke, as with a pointed object. 2. To goad to action; incite. See Synonyms at urge. — n. 1. A pointed object used to prod: a cattle prod. 2. An incitement; a stimulus. [Origin unknown.] — prod'der n.

Prod or prod (prōd) n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a Protestant.

prod. abbr. 1. Produce. 2. Produced. 3. Product. 4. Production.

prod-i-gal (prōd'i-gəl) adj. 1. Rashly or wastefully extravagant: They are prodigal in their expenditures. 2. Marked by rash or wasteful extravagance: a prodigal life. 3. Giving or given in abundance; lavish or profuse: prodigal praise. See Synonyms at profuse. — n. One who is given to wasteful luxury or extravagance. [Probably back-formation from PRODIGALITY.] — prod'i-gal-ly adv.

prod-i-gal-i-ty (prōd'i-gāl'i-tē) n. pl. prod-i-gal-i-ties. 1. Extravagant wastefulness. 2. Profuse generosity. 3. Extreme abundance; lavishness. [Middle English prodigalite, from Old French, from Late Latin prōdigālitās, from prōdigālis*, prodigal, from Latin prōdigus, prodigal, from prōdigere, drive away, to squander : prōd-, prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + agere, to drive; see ag- in Appendix.]

pro-di-gious (prə-dij'əs) adj. 1. Impressively great in size, force, or extent; enormous: a prodigious storm. 2. Extraordinary; marvelous: the young Mozart's prodigious talents. 3. Obsolete. Portentous; ominous. [Latin prōdigiosus, portentous, monstrous, from prōdigium, omen.] — pro-di'gious-ly adv. — pro-di'gious-ness n.

WORD HISTORY: No one would now say, as did a character in Fanny Burney's Evelina (1778), "You are prodigiously kind!" But this utterance, exclamation point and all, illustrates two important points about intensives, linguistic elements, such as extremely or awfully, that provide force or emphasis. One point is that we press words that originally had other meanings into service as intensives. Prodigiously is an adverb formed on prodigious, which meant such things as "ominous, amazing, enormous,” going back to the Latin prōdigiōsus, “portentous, marvelous, unnatural.” Prodigiously, first recorded in 1595, meant “portentously, ominously,” and was later used to mean “wonderfully, astonishingly,” therefore making a perfect candidate for use as an intensive. The other point about intensives illustrated by prodigiously is that they go in and out of fashion. The character in Evelina used prodigiously in a way that was no doubt very stylish; no one would find it so today. Perhaps the main reason for such shifts in the use of these intensives is that once they have been used for a while they no longer intensify.

prod·i·gy (prōd'ə-jē) n. pl. prod·i·gies. 1. A person with exceptional talents or powers: a prodigy who had learned several foreign languages by the age of five.

2. An act or event so extraordinary or rare as to inspire wonder. See Synonyms at wonder. 3. A portentous sign or event; an omen. [Middle English prodige, portent, from Latin prōdigium.]

pro·drome (prō'drōm') n. pl. pro·dromes or pro·dro·ma·ta (-drō'mə-tə). An early symptom indicating the onset of an attack or a disease. [French, from Latin prodromus, precursor, from Greek prodromos, precursor : pro-, forward; see PRO-² + dromos, running.] — pro·dro'mal (-drō'məl), pro·drom'ic (-drōm'ik) adj.

pro·drug (prō'drüg') n. An inactive precursor of a drug, converted into its active form in the body by normal metabolic processes.

pro·duce (prə-dōōs', -dyōōs', prō-) v. pro·duced, pro·duc·ing, pro·duc·es. — v. tr. 1. To bring forth; yield: produce offspring. 2. a. To create by physical or mental effort: produce a tapestry; produce a poem. b. To manufacture: factories that produce cars and trucks. 3. To cause to occur or exist; give rise to: chemicals that produce a noxious vapor when mixed. 4. To bring forth; exhibit: reached into a pocket and produced a packet of matches; failed to produce an eyewitness to the crime. 5. To supervise and finance the making and public presentation of: produce a stage play; produce a videotape. 6. Mathematics. To extend (an area or volume) or lengthen (a line). — v. intr. 1. To make or yield products or a product: an apple tree that produces well. 2. To manufacture or create economic goods and services. — n. (prōd'ōōs, prō'dōōs) Abbr. prod. 1. Something produced; a product. 2. Farm products, especially fresh fruits and vegetables. [Middle English producen, to proceed, extend, from Latin prōdūcere, to extend, bring forth : prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + dūcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix.] — pro·duc'i·ble, pro·duce'a·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: produce, bear, yield. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to bring forth as a product”: a mine producing gold; a seed that finally bore fruit; a plant that yields a medicinal oil.

pro·duc·er (prə-dōō'sər, -dyōō'-, prō-) n. 1. One that produces, especially a person or an organization that produces goods or services for sale. 2. One who finances and supervises the making and public presentation of a play, film, program, or similar work. 3. A furnace that manufactures producer gas. 4. Ecology. A photosynthetic green plant or chemosynthetic bacterium, constituting the first trophic level in a food chain; an autotrophic organism.

producer gas (prə-dōō'sər gās) n. A combustible mixture of nitrogen, carbon monoxide, and hydrogen, generated by passing air with steam over burning coke or coal in a furnace and used as fuel. Also called air gas producer goods (prə-dōō'sər gōōdz) pl.n. Goods, such as raw materials and tools, used to make consumer goods.

prod·uct (prɔd'əkt) n. Abbr. prod. 1. Something produced by human or mechanical effort or by a natural process. 2. A direct result; a consequence: "Is history the product of impersonal social and economic forces?" (Anthony Lewis). 3. Chemistry. A substance resulting from a chemical reaction. 4. Mathematics. a. The number or quantity obtained by multiplying two or more numbers together. b. A scalar product. c. A vector product. [Middle English, result of multiplication, produced, from Medieval Latin prōductum, result of multiplication, from neuter past participle of Latin prōdūcere, to bring forth. See PRODUCE.]

pro·duc·tion (prə-dŭk'shən, prō-) n. Abbr. prod. 1. a. The act or process of producing: timber used for the production of lumber and paper. b. The fact or process of being produced: a movie going into production. 2. The creation of value or wealth by producing goods and services. 3. Something produced; a product. 4. An amount or quantity produced; output. 5. a. A work of art or literature. b. A work produced for the stage, screen, television, or radio. c. A staging or presentation of a theatrical work: a new Broadway production of a musical. 6. An exaggerated spectacle or display: proposed on his knees, making a real production of it. —pro·duc'tion·al adj.

production line (prə-dŭk'shən līn) n. See assembly line (n., sense 1).

pro·duc·tive (prə-dŭk'tiv, prō-) adj. 1. Producing or capable of producing. 2. Producing abundantly; fertile. See Synonyms at fertile. 3. Yielding favorable or useful results; constructive. 4. Economics. Of or involved in the creation of goods and services to produce wealth or value. 5. Effective in achieving specified results; originative: policies productive of much harm. 6. Medicine. a. Producing mucus or sputum: a productive cough. b. Forming new tissue: a productive inflammation. 7. Linguistics. Of or relating to the linguistic skills of speaking and writing. —pro·duc'tive·ly adv. —pro·duc'tive·ness n.

pro·duc·tiv·i·ty (prō'dŭk-tiv'ī-tē, prɔd'ək-) n. 1. The quality of being productive. 2. Economics. The rate at which goods or services are produced especially output per unit of labor. 3. Ecology. The rate at which radiant energy is used by producers to form organic substances as food for consumers.

pro-em (prō'ēm') n. An introduction; a preface. [Middle English proheme, from Old French, from Latin prooemium, from Greek prooimion : pro-, before; see PRO-² + oimē, song.] — pro-e/mi-al (prō-ē'mē-əl, -ēm'ē-) adj.

pro-en-zyme (prō-ën'zīm') n. The inactive or nearly inactive precursor of an enzyme, converted into an active enzyme by proteolysis. Also called zymogen pro-es-trus (prō-ēs'trəs) n. The period immediately before estrus in most female mammals, characterized by development of the endometrium and ovarian follicles.

prof (prōf) n. Informal. A professor.

prof. abbr. Professional.

prof-a-na-tion (prōf'ə-nā'shən) n. The act or an instance of profaning; desecration.

pro-fane (prō-fān', prə-) adj. 1. Marked by contempt or irreverence for what is sacred: profane words. 2. Nonreligious in subject matter, form, or use; secular: sacred and profane music. 3. Not admitted into a body of secret knowledge or ritual; uninitiated. 4. Vulgar; coarse. — v. tr. pro-faned, pro-fan-ing, pro-fanes. 1. To treat with irreverence: profane the name of God. 2. To put to an improper, unworthy, or degrading use; abuse. [Middle English prophane, from Old French, from Latin profānus, from prō fānō, in front of the temple : prō-, before, outside; see PRO-¹ + fānō, ablative of fānum, temple; see dhēs- in Appendix.] — pro-fan'a-to'ry (prō-fān'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē, prə-) adj.

— pro-fane'ly adv. — pro-fane'ness n. — pro-fan'er n.

SYNONYMS: profane, blasphemous, sacrilegious. These adjectives mean showing or marked by irreverence or contempt for what is sacred. Profane implies abusive disrespect: “Keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings” (I Timothy 6:20). Blasphemous refers to impious utterances: “Researchers have speculated that in years past people with [certain neurological disorders] were burned at the stake as witches for their unbridled use of blasphemous language” (Jay Siwek). Sacrilegious implies the profanation or desecration of what is or is held to be sacred: “I was shocked that you would reproduce this painting since, for Muslims, it is sacrilegious to paint or depict any holy person” (Mohammed Bush-eri).

pro-fan-i-ty (prō-fān'i-tē, prə-) n. pl. pro-fan-i-ties. 1. The condition or quality of being profane. 2. a. Abusive, vulgar, or irreverent language. b. The use of such language.

pro-fess (prə-fēs', prə-) v. pro-fessed, pro-fess-ing, pro-fess-es. — v. tr. 1. To affirm openly; declare or claim: “I profess both to learn and to teach anatomy, not from books but from dissections” (William Harvey). 2. To make a pretense of; pretend: “He professed to despise everything that had happened since 1850” (Louis Auchincloss). 3. To claim skill in or knowledge of: profess medicine. 4. To affirm belief in: profess Catholicism. 5. To receive into a religious order or congregation. — v. intr. 1. To make an open affirmation. 2. To take the vows of a religious order or congregation. [Middle English professen, to take vows, from Old French profes, that has taken a religious vow (from Medieval Latin professus, avowed), and from Medieval Latin professāre, to administer a vow both from Latin professus, past participle of profitēri, to affirm openly : pro-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + fatēri, to acknowledge; see bhā⁻² in Appendix.] —pro·fess'ed·ly (-fěs'ĭd-lē) adv.

pro·fes·sion (prə-fěsh'ən) n. 1. An occupation requiring considerable training and specialized study: the professions of law, medicine, and engineering. 2. The body of qualified persons in an occupation or field: members of the teaching profession. 3. An act or instance of professing; a declaration. 4. An avowal of faith or belief. 5. A faith or belief: believers of various professions.

pro·fes·sion·al (prə-fěsh'ə-nəl) adj. Abbr. prof. 1. a. Of, relating to, engaged in, or suitable for a profession: a professional field such as law; professional training. b. Conforming to the standards of a profession: professional ethics. 2. Engaging in a given activity as a source of livelihood or as a career: amateur and professional actors. 3. Performed by persons receiving pay: professional football. 4. Having or showing great skill; expert: a thoroughly professional repair job. — n. Abbr. prof. 1. A person following a profession, especially a learned profession. 2. One who earns a living in a given or implied occupation: hired a professional to decorate the house. 3. A skilled practitioner; an expert. —pro·fes'sion·al·ly adv.

pro·fes·sion·al·ism (prə-fěsh'ə-nə-lĭz'əm) n. 1. Professional status, methods, character, or standards. 2. The use of professional performers, as in athletics or in the arts.

pro·fes·sion·al·ize (prə-fěsh'ə-nə-lĭz') v. tr. pro·fes·sion·al·ized, pro·fes·sion·al·iz·ing, pro·fes·sion·al·iz·es. To make professional. —pro·fes'sion·al·i·za'tion (prə-fěsh'ə-nə-lĭ-zā'shən) n.

pro·fes·sor (prə-fěs'ər) n. 1. a. A college or university teacher who ranks above an associate professor. b. A teacher or an instructor. 2. One who professes. [Middle English professour, from Old French professeur, from Latin professor, from professus, past participle of profitēri, to profess. See PROFESS.]

—pro'fes-so'ri·al (prō'fĭ-sôr'ē-əl, -sôr'-, prōf'ĭ-) adj. —pro'fes-so'ri·al·ly adv. —pro·fes'sor·ship' n.

pro·fes·so·ri·ate or pro·fes·so·ri·at (prō'fĭ-sôr'ē-ət, -sôr'-, prōf'ĭ-) n.

1. The rank or office of a professor. 2. College or university professors considered as a group.

prof·fer (prōf'ər) v. tr. prof·fered, prof·fer·ing, prof·fers. To offer for acceptance; tender. See Synonyms at offer. — n. The act of proffering; an offer. [Middle English profren, from Old French poroffrir, profrir : por-, forth pro·fi·cien·cy (prə-fish'ən-sē) n. pl. pro·fi·cien·cies. The state or quality of being proficient; competence.

(from Latin prō-); see PRO⁻¹ + offerre, to offer (from Latin offerre); see OFFER.]

—prof'fer·er n.

pro·fi·cient (prə-fish'ənt) adj. Having or marked by an advanced degree of competence, as in an art, vocation, profession, or branch of learning. — n. An expert; an adept. [Latin prōficiēns, prōficiēt- present participle of prōficere, to make progress. See PROFIT.] —pro·fi·cient·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: proficient, adept, skilled, skillful, expert. These adjectives mean having or showing knowledge, ability, or skill, as in a vocation, profession, or branch of learning. Proficient implies an advanced degree of competence acquired through training: A proficient surgeon is the product of lengthy training and experience. Adept suggests a natural aptitude improved by practice: The dress designer was adept at draping and cutting the fabric without using a pattern. Skilled implies sound, thorough competence and often mastery, as in an art, a craft, or a trade: Only the most skilled gymnasts are accepted for the Olympic team. Skillful adds to skilled the idea of natural dexterity in performance or achievement: The crafts teacher is skillful in knitting, crocheting, embroidery, and the use of the hand loom. Expert applies to one with consummate skill and command: A virtuoso is one who is expert in playing a musical instrument.

pro·file (prō'fil') n. 1. a. A side view of an object or a structure, especially of the human head. b. A representation of an object or a structure seen from the side. See Synonyms at form. 2. An outline of an object. See Synonyms at outline. 3. Degree of exposure to public notice; visibility: kept a low profile until the controversy had abated. 4. A biographical essay presenting the subject's most noteworthy characteristics and achievements. 5. A formal summary or analysis of data, often in the form of a graph or table, representing distinctive features or characteristics: a psychological profile of a job applicant; a biochemical profile of blood. 6. Geology. A vertical section of soil or rock showing the sequence of the various layers. — v. tr. pro·filed, pro·fil·ing, pro·files. 1. To draw or shape a profile of. 2. To produce a profile of. [Italian profilo, from profilare, to draw in outline : pro-, forward (from Latin prō-); see PRO⁻¹ + filare, to draw a line (from Late Latin filāre, to spin, from Latin filum, thread); see g^{whī} in Appendix.] —pro·fil·er n.

prof·it (prōf'it) n. 1. An advantageous gain or return; benefit. 2. The return received on a business undertaking after all operating expenses have been met. 3. Often profits. a. The return received on an investment after all charges have been paid. b. The rate of increase in the net worth of a business enterprise in a given accounting period. c. Income received from investments or property.

d. The amount received for a commodity or service in excess of the original cost.

— v. prof-it-ed, prof-it-ing, prof-its. — v. intr. 1. To make a gain or profit.

2. To derive advantage; benefit: profiting from the other team's mistakes. See Synonyms at benefit. — v. tr. To be beneficial to. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prōfectus, from past participle of prōficere, make progress, to profit : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.]

—prof'it-less adj.

prof-it-a-ble (prɒf'ɪ-tə-bəl) adj. Yielding profit; advantageous or lucrative. See Synonyms at beneficial. —prof'it-a-bil'i-ty, prof'it-a-ble-ness n.

—prof'it-a-bly adv.

profit and loss (prɒf'ɪt ənd lɒs) n. Abbr. P and L, p. and l. Accounting. An account showing net profit and loss over a given period.

prof-it-eer (prɒf'ɪ-tɪr') n. One who makes excessive profits on goods in short supply. — v. intr. prof-it-eered, prof-it-eer-ing, prof-it-eers. To make excessive profits on goods in short supply.

pro-fit-er-ole (prə-fɪt'ə-rəl') n. A small round cream puff. [French, perhaps diminutive of profiter, to profit, from Old French, from profit, profit. See PROFIT.] profit shar-ing (prɒf'ɪt shɑr'ɪŋ) n. A system by which employees receive a share of the profits of a business enterprise.

prof-li-gate (prɒf'li-gɪt, -gāt') adj. 1. Given over to dissipation; dissolute.

2. Recklessly wasteful; wildly extravagant. — n. A profligate person; a wastrel. [Latin prōfligātus, past participle of prōfligāre, to ruin, cast down : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + -fligāre, intensive of fligere, to strike down.] —prof'li-ga-cy (-gə-sē) n.

—prof'li-gate-ly adv.

pro for-ma (prō fɔr'mə) adj. 1. Done as a formality; perfunctory: one-candidate, pro forma elections. 2. Provided in advance so as to prescribe form or describe items: a pro forma copy of a document. [New Latin prō formā : prō, for the sake of + formā, ablative of forma, form.]

pro-found (prə-found', prō-) adj. pro-found-er, pro-found-est. 1. Situated at, extending to, or coming from a great depth; deep. See Synonyms at deep.

2. Coming as if from the depths of one's being: profound contempt.

3. Thoroughgoing; far-reaching: profound social changes. 4. Penetrating beyond what is superficial or obvious: a profound insight. 5. Unqualified; absolute: a profound silence. [Middle English profounde, from Old French profond, from Latin profundus : prō-, before; see PRO⁻¹ + fundus, bottom.] —pro-found'ly adv.

—pro-found'ness n.

pro-fun-di-ty (prə-fʌn'dɪ-tē, prō-) n. pl. pro-fun-di-ties. 1. Great depth.

2. Depth of intellect, feeling, or meaning. 3. Something profound or abstruse. [Middle English profundite, from Old French, from Late Latin profunditās, from Latin profundus, deep. See PROFOUND.] pro-fuse (prə-fyōōs', prō-) adj. 1. Plentiful; copious: a field profuse with wild-flowers. 2. Giving or given freely and abundantly; extravagant: were profuse in their compliments. [Middle English, lavish, from Latin profusus, past participle of profundere, to pour forth : pro-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + fundere, to pour; see gheu- in Appendix.] —pro-fuse/ly adv. —pro-fuse/ness n.

SYNONYMS: profuse, exuberant, lavish, lush, luxuriant, prodigal, riotous. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “given with, giving with, or marked by unrestrained abundance”: profuse apologies; an exuberant growth of moss; lavish praise; lush vegetation; luxuriant hair; a prodigal party giver; a riotous growth of ferns.

ANTONYM: *spar*e

pro-fu-sion (prə-fyōō'zhən, prō-) n. 1. The state of being profuse; abundance. 2. Lavish or unrestrained expense; extravagance. 3. A profuse outpouring or quantity: a profusion of helpful suggestions.

pro-gen-i-tor (prō-jěn'ī-tər) n. 1. A direct ancestor. See Synonyms at ances-tor. 2. An originator of a line of descent; a precursor. 3. An originator; a founder: progenitors of the new music. [Middle English progenitour, from Old French progeniteur, from Latin prōgenitor, from prōgenitus, past participle of prō-gignere, to beget : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + gignere, gen-, to beget; see genə- in Appendix.]

prog-e-ny (prōj'ə-nē) n. pl. progeny or prog-e-nies. 1. a. One born of, begotten by, or derived from another; an offspring or a descendant. b. Offspring or descendants considered as a group. 2. A result of creative effort; a product. [Middle English progeni, from Old French progenie, from Latin prōgeniēs, from prōgignere, to beget. See PROGENITOR.] pro-ger-i-a (prō-jîr'ē-ə) n. A rare congenital disorder of childhood that is characterized by rapid onset of the physical changes typical of old age, usually resulting in death before the age of 20. Also called Hutchinson-Gilford syndrome [PRO⁻² + Greek gēras, old age; see GERIATRICS + *-IA*¹.]

pro-ges-ta-tion-al (prō'jës-tā'shə-nəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to the phase of the menstrual cycle immediately following ovulation, characterized by secretion of progesterone. 2. a. Of or relating to progesterone and its actions. b. Having actions similar to progesterone. Used of a drug.

pro-ges-ter-one (prō-jës'tə-rōn') n. 1. A steroid hormone, C₂₁H₃₀O₂, secreted by the corpus luteum of the ovary and by the placenta, that acts to prepare the uterus for implantation of the fertilized ovum, to maintain pregnancy, and to promote development of the mammary glands. 2. A drug prepared from natural or synthetic progesterone, used to prevent miscarriage and to treat menstrual disorders. [PRO⁻¹ + GEST(ATION) + (ST)ER(OR) + -ONE.] pro-ges·tin (prō-jēs'tĭn) n. 1. A natural or synthetic progesterational substance that mimics some or all of the actions of progesterone. 2. A crude hormone of the corpus luteum from which progesterone can be isolated in pure form. No longer in scientific use. [PRO-¹ + GEST(ATION) + -IN.]

pro-ges-to-gen (prō-jēs'tə-jən) n. Any of various substances having progesterational effects; a progestin. [PRO-¹ + GEST(ATION) + -GEN.]

pro-glot·tid (prō-glōt'ĭd) also pro-glot·tis (-glōt'ĭs) n. pl. pro-glot·tids also pro-glot·ti-des (-glōt'ĭ-dēz'). One of the segments of a tapeworm, containing both male and female reproductive organs. [Greek proglōttis, proglōttid-, tip of the tongue (from its shape) : pro-, before; see PRO-² + glōtta, tongue.]

—pro-glot'tic, pro'glot·ti-de'an (-glōt-ĭ-dē'ən, -glō-tĭd'ē-ən) adj.

prog·na·thous (prōg'nə-thəs, prōg-nā'-) also prog·nath·ic (prōg-nāth'ĭk, -nā'thĭk) adj. Having jaws that project forward to a marked degree.

—prog·na·thism (-nə-thĭz'əm) n.

prog·no·sis (prōg-nō'sĭs) n. pl. prog·no·ses (-sēz). 1. a. A prediction of the probable course and outcome of a disease. b. The likelihood of recovery from a disease. 2. A forecast or prediction: a gloomy prognosis for economic recovery. [Late Latin prognōsis, from Greek, from progignōskein, to foreknow : pro-, before; see PRO-² + gignōskein, to know; see gnō- in Appendix.]

prog·nos·tic (prōg-nōs'tĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or useful in prognosis. 2. Of or relating to prediction; predictive. — n. 1. A sign or symptom indicating the future course of a disease. 2. A sign of a future happening; a portent. [Middle English pronostik, prognosticating, omen, from Medieval Latin prognōsticus, prognosticating,, and from Latin prognōsticum, omen, from neuter of prognōsticus from Greek prognōstikos, from prognōsis, foreknowledge. See PROGNOSIS.]

prog·nos·ti·cate (prōg-nōs'tĭ-kāt') v. tr. prog·nos·ti·cat·ed, prog·nos·ti·cat·ing, prog·nos·ti·cates. 1. To predict according to present indications or signs; foretell. See Synonyms at predict. 2. To foreshadow; portend: urban architectural renewal that prognosticates a social and cultural renaissance. [Middle English pronosticaten, from Medieval Latin prognōstīcāre, prognōstīcāt-, from Latin prognōsticum, sign of the future, from Greek prognōstikon, from neuter of prognōstikos, foreknowing. See PROGNOSTIC.]

—prog·nos'ti·ca'tion n. —prog·nos'ti·ca'tive adj. —prog·nos'ti·ca'tor n.

pro·gram (prō'grām', -grəm) n. 1. a. A listing of the order of events and other pertinent information for a public presentation. b. The presentation itself: a program of piano pieces. 2. A scheduled radio or television show. 3. An ordered list of events to take place or procedures to be followed; a schedule: a program of physical therapy for a convalescent. 4. A system of services, opportunities, or projects, usually designed to meet a social need: “Working parents rely on the center’s after-school latchkey program” (New York Times). 5. a. A course of academic study; a curriculum. b. A plan or system of academic and related or ancillary activities: a work-study program. c. A plan or system of nonacademic extracurricular activities: the football program. 6. A set of coded instructions for insertion into a machine, in accordance with which the machine performs a desired sequence of operations. 7. Computer Science. a. A procedure for solving a problem that involves collection of data, processing, and presentation of results.

b. Such a procedure coded for a computer. 8. An instruction sequence in programmed instruction. — v. tr. pro-grammed or pro-gramed, pro-gram-ming or pro-gram-ing, pro-grams or pro-grams. 1. To include or schedule in a program: program a new musical composition. 2. To design a program for; schedule the activities of. 3. To provide (a machine) with a set of coded working instructions. 4. Computer Science. To provide (a computer) with a set of instructions for solving a problem or processing data. 5. To train to perform automatically in a desired way, as if programming a machine: crudely programming children to make the right responses. 6. To prepare an instructional sequence for (material to be taught) in programmed instruction. [Late Latin programma, public notice, from Greek programma, programmat-, from prographein, to write publicly : pro-, forth; see *PRO-*² + graphein, to write; see gerbh- in Appendix.]

—pro-gram'ma-bil'i-ty n. —pro'gram'ma-ble adj.

program director (prō'grām' dī-rĕk'tər) n. A radio or television station director who is responsible for selecting, planning, and scheduling programs.

pro-gramed (prō'grāmd', -grəmd) adj. Variant of programmed.

pro-gram-er (prō'grām'ər) n. Variant of programmer.

pro-gram-ing (prō'grām'ing, -grə-ming) n. Variant of programming.

pro-gram-mat-ic (prō'grə-măt'ik) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or having a program. 2. Following an overall plan or schedule: a step-by-step, programmatic approach to problem solving. 3. Music. Of, resembling, or constituting program music. —pro'gram-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

pro-gramme (prō'grām', -grəm) n. & v. Chiefly British. Variant of program.

pro-grammed or pro-gramed (prō'grāmd', -grəmd) adj. Of, relating to, or resulting from programmed instruction: programmed learning.

programmed instruction (prō'grāmd' in-strŭk'shən) n. A method of teaching in which the information to be learned is presented in discrete units, with a correct response to each unit required before the learner may advance to the next unit.

pro-gram-mer or pro-gram-er (prō'grām'ər) n. One who programs, especially: a. Computer Science. One who writes computer programs. b. One who prepares or writes instructional programs.

pro-gram-ming or pro-gram-ing (prō'grām'ing, -grə-ming) n. The designing, scheduling, or planning of a program.

program music (prō'grām' myōō'zīk) n. Compositions intended to depict or suggest definite incidents, scenes, or images.

program trading (prō'grām' trā'dīng) n. Large-scale, computer-assisted trading of stocks or other securities according to systems in which decisions to buy and sell are triggered automatically by fluctuations in price. —program trader n.

prog·ress (prōg'rēs', -rəs, prō'grēs') n. 1. Movement, as toward a goal; advance. 2. Development or growth: pupils who show progress. 3. Steady improvement, as of a society or civilization: a believer in human progress. See Synonyms at development. 4. A ceremonial journey made by a sovereign through his or her realm. — v. intr. also pro·gress pro·gressed, pro·gress·ing, pro·gress·es (prə-grēs'). 1. To advance; proceed: Work on the new building progressed at a rapid rate. 2. To advance toward a higher or better stage; improve steadily: as technology progresses. —idiom. in progress. Going on; under way: artistic works that are in progress. [Middle English progresse, from Latin prōgressus, from past participle of prōgredī, to advance : prō-, forward; see *PRO-*¹ + gradī, to go, walk; see ghredh- in Appendix.]

pro·gres·sion (prə-grēs'hən) n. 1. The process of progressing; progress. 2. Movement from one member of a continuous series to the next. 3. A continuous series; a sequence. See Synonyms at series. 4. Mathematics. A series of numbers or quantities in which there is always the same relation between each quantity and the one succeeding it. 5. Music. a. A succession of tones or chords. b. A series of repetitions of a phrase, each in a new position on the scale. —pro·gres'sion·al adj.

pro·gres·sive (prə-grēs'iv) adj. 1. Moving forward; advancing. 2. Proceeding in steps; continuing steadily by increments: progressive change. 3. Promoting or favoring progress toward better conditions or new policies, ideas, or methods: a progressive politician; progressive business leadership. 4. Progressive. Of or relating to a Progressive Party: the Progressive platform of 1924. 5. Of or relating to progressive education: a progressive school. 6. Increasing in rate as the taxable amount increases: a progressive income tax. 7. Pathology. Tending to become more severe or wider in scope: progressive paralysis. 8. Grammar. Designating a verb form that expresses an action or condition in progress. — n. 1. A person who actively favors or strives for progress toward better conditions, as in society or government. 2. Progressive. A member or supporter of a Progressive Party. 3. Grammar. A progressive verb form. —pro·gres'sive·ly adv. —pro·gres'sive·ness n.

Pro·gres·sive·Con·ser·va·tive Party (prə-grēs'iv-kən-sûr'və-tiv pār'tē) n. Abbr. PCP A major political party in Canada advocating economic nationalism and close ties with Great Britain and the Commonwealth.

progressive education (prə-grēs'iv ěj'ə-kā'shən) n. A set of reformist educational philosophies and methods that emphasize individual instruction, informality in the classroom, and the use of group discussions and laboratories as instructional techniques.

Progressive Party (prə-grēs'iv pā'r'tē) n. 1. A U.S. political party that was organized by Republican insurgents in 1911 and supported the presidential candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912. Also called Bull Moose Party 2. A U.S. political party organized in 1924 that supported the presidential candidacy of Robert M. La Follette and was active in Wisconsin until 1946. 3. A U.S. political party formed in 1948 to support the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

pro-gres-siv-ism (prə-grēs'i-viz'əm) n. 1. The principles and practices of political progressives. 2. Progressive education. —pro-gres'siv-ist n.
—pro-gres'siv-is'tic adj.

pro-gres-siv-i-ty (prō'grě-siv'i-tē, prōg'rě-) n. pl. pro-gres-siv-i-ties. The quality or degree of being progressive: "Proponents of progressivity often argue that higher-income people should pay higher taxes because they benefit more from government" (National Review).

pro-hib-it (prō-hīb'it) v. tr. pro-hib-it-ed, pro-hib-it-ing, pro-hib-its. 1. To forbid by authority: Smoking is prohibited in most theaters. See Synonyms at forbid. 2. To prevent; preclude: Modesty prohibits me from saying what happened. [Middle English prohibiten, from Latin prohibere, prohibit-: pro-, in front; see PRO⁻¹ + habēre, to hold; see ghabh- in Appendix.]

pro-hi-bi-tion (prō'ə-bīsh'ən) n. 1. The act of prohibiting or the condition of being prohibited. 2. A law, order, or decree that forbids something. 3. a. The forbidding by law of the manufacture, transportation, sale, and possession of alcoholic beverages. b. Prohibition. The period (1920-1933) during which the 18th Amendment forbidding the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages was in force in the United States.

pro-hi-bi-tion-ist (prō'ə-bīsh'ə-nīst) n. 1. One in favor of outlawing the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages. 2. Often Prohibitionist. A member or supporter of the Prohibition Party. —pro'hi-bi'tion-ism n.

Prohibition Party (prō'ə-bīsh'ən pā'r'tē) n. A minor U.S. political party organized in 1869 that advocated prohibition.

pro-hib-i-tive (prō-hīb'i-tiv) also pro-hib-i-to-ry (-tôr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

1. Prohibiting; forbidding: took prohibitive measures. 2. So high or burdensome as to discourage purchase or use: prohibitive prices. 3. So likely to win as to discourage competition: the prohibitive favorite to win the nomination.

—pro-hib'i-tive-ly adv. —pro-hib'i-tive-ness n.

pro-in-su-lin (prō-īn'sə-līn) n. A single-chain polypeptide that is the precursor of insulin, converted into insulin by enzymatic action.

project (prɔj'ɛkt', -ikt) n. 1. A plan or proposal; a scheme. See Synonyms at plan. 2. An undertaking requiring concerted effort: a community cleanup project; a government-funded irrigation project. 3. An extensive task undertaken by a student or group of students to apply, illustrate, or supplement classroom lessons. 4. A housing project. — v. also pro-ject pro-ject-ed, pro-ject-ing, pro-jects (prə-jɛkt'). — v. tr. 1. To thrust outward or forward: project one's jaw in defiance. 2. To throw forward; hurl: project an arrow. 3. To send out into space; cast: project a light beam. 4. To cause (an image) to appear on a surface: projected the slide onto a screen. 5. Mathematics. To produce (a projection). 6. To direct (one's voice) so as to be heard clearly at a distance. 7. Psychology. To externalize and attribute (an emotion, for example) to someone or something else. 8. To convey an impression of to an audience or to others: a posture that projects defeat; projected a positive corporate image. 9. To form a plan or an intention for: project a new business enterprise. 10. To calculate, estimate, or predict (something in the future), based on present data or trends: projecting next year's expenses and income. — v. intr. 1. To extend forward or out; jut out: beams that project beyond the eaves. See Synonyms at bulge. 2. To direct one's voice so as to be heard clearly at a distance. [Middle English projecte, from Latin prōiectum, projecting structure, from neuter past participle of prōicere, to throw out : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.] —pro-ject/a-ble adj.

pro-jec-tile (prə-jɛk'təl, -tīl') n. 1. A fired, thrown, or otherwise propelled object, such as a bullet, having no capacity for self-propulsion. 2. A self-propelled missile, such as a rocket. — adj. 1. Capable of being impelled or hurled forward. 2. Driving forward; impelling: a projectile force. 3. Zoology. Capable of being thrust outward; protrusile. [New Latin proiectile, neuter of proiectilis, that can be thrown, from Latin prōiectus, past participle of prōicere, to throw out. See PROJECT.]

pro-jec-tion (prə-jɛk'shən) n. 1. The act of projecting or the condition of being projected. 2. A thing or part that extends outward beyond a prevailing line or surface: spiky projections on top of a fence; a projection of land along the coast. 3. A plan for an anticipated course of action: "facilities [that] are vital to the projection of U.S. force... in the Pacific" (Alan D. Romberg). 4. A prediction or an estimate of something in the future, based on present data or trends. 5. a. The process of projecting a filmed image onto a screen or other viewing surface. b. An image so projected. 6. Mathematics. The image of a geometric figure reproduced on a line, plane, or surface. 7. A system of intersecting lines, such as the grid of a map, on which part or all of the globe or another spherical surface is represented as a plane surface. 8. Psychology. a. The attribution of one's own attitudes, feelings, or suppositions to others: "Even trained anthropologists have been guilty of unconscious projection—of clothing the subjects of their research in theories brought with them into the field" (Alex Shoumatoff). b. The attribution of one's own attitudes, feelings, or desires to someone or something as a naive or unconscious defense against anxiety or guilt. —pro-jec'tion-al adj.

projection booth (prə-jĕk'shən bōōth) n. A booth, as in a theater, in which a movie projector is operated.

pro-jec-tion-ist (prə-jĕk'shə-nĭst) n. 1. One who operates a movie projector. 2. A maker of map projections.

pro-jec-tive (prə-jĕk'tĭv) adj. 1. Extending outward; projecting. 2. Relating to or made by projection. 3. Mathematics. Designating a property of a geometric figure that does not vary when the figure undergoes projection. —pro-jec-tive-ly adv.

projective geometry (prə-jĕk'tĭv jĕ-ōm'i-trĕ) n. Mathematics. The study of geometric properties that are invariant under projection.

projective test (prə-jĕk'tĭv tĕst) n. A psychological test in which a subject's responses to ambiguous or unstructured standard stimuli, such as a series of cartoons, abstract patterns, or incomplete sentences, are analyzed in order to determine underlying personality traits, feelings, or attitudes.

pro-jec-tor (prə-jĕk'tər) n. 1. A device for projecting a beam of light. 2. A machine for projecting an image onto a screen. 3. One who devises plans or projects.

pro-kar-y-ote also pro-car-y-ote (prō-kār'ĕ-ōt') n. An organism of the kingdom Prokaryotae, constituting the bacteria and cyanobacteria, characterized by the absence of a nuclear membrane and by DNA that is not organized into chromosomes. [French procaryote : Greek pro-, before; see PRO-² + Greek karuōtos, having nuts (from karuon, nut); see KARYO-.] —pro-kar'y-ot'ic (-ōt'ĭk) adj.

Pro-kho-rov (prô'KHƏ-rôf'), Aleksandr Mikailovich. Born 1916. Russian physicist. He shared a 1964 Nobel Prize for developing the maser and laser principle of producing high-intensity radiation.

Pro-kof-iev (prə-kô'fĕ-ĕf, -əf, -kô'-, -kôf'yĭf), Sergei Sergeyeovich. 1891-1953. Russian composer whose works include ballets, operas, and the symphonic fairy tale Peter and the Wolf (1936).

Pro-ko-pyevsk (prə-kôp'yəfsk) A city of south-central Russia east-southeast of Novosibirsk. It is a manufacturing and processing center in a major coal-mining region. Population, 274,000.

pro-lac-tin (prō-lăk'tĭn) n. A pituitary hormone that stimulates and maintains the secretion of milk.

pro-la-mine also pro-la-min (prō'lə-mĭn, -mĕn') n. Any of a class of simple proteins found in the seeds of wheat, rye, and other grains. [PROL(INE) + AM(MONIA) + -INE².]

pro-lan (prō'lăn') n. 1. Human chorionic gonadotropin. No longer in scientific use. 2. Either of two hormones of the pituitary gland, luteinizing hormone and follicle-stimulating hormone. No longer in scientific use. [German, from Latin prōlēs, offspring. See al⁻² in Appendix.]

pro-lapse (prō-lăps') Medicine. v. intr. pro-lapsed, pro-laps-ing, pro-laps-es. To fall or slip out of place. — n. also pro-lap-sus (prō-lăp'səs; prō'lăps', prō-lăps') The falling down or slipping out of place of an organ or part, such as the uterus. [Latin prōlābī, prōlāps-, to fall down : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + lābī, to fall.]

pro-late (prō'lāt') adj. 1. Having the shape of a spheroid generated by rotating an ellipse about its longer axis. 2. Having the polar axis longer than the equatorial diameter: a prolate spheroid. [Latin prōlātus, past participle of prōferre, to stretch out : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + lātus, brought; see telə- in Appendix.]

—pro/late/ly adv. —pro/late/ness n.

prole (prōl) n. A proletarian: “If there is hope... it lies in the proles” (George Orwell).

pro-leg (prō'lĕg') n. One of the stubby limbs on the abdominal segments of caterpillars and certain other insect larvae.

pro-le-gom-e-non (prō'lī-gŏm'ə-nŏn', -nən) n. pl. pro-le-gom-e-na (-nə). 1. A preliminary discussion, especially a formal essay introducing a work of considerable length or complexity. 2. prolegomena. (used with a sing. or pl. verb.) Prefatory remarks or observations. [Greek, from neuter of present passive participle of prolegein, to say beforehand : pro-, before; see PRO⁻² + legein, to speak; see leg- in Appendix.] —pro/le-gom/e-nous adj.

pro-lep-sis (prō-lĕp'sis) n. pl. pro-lep-ses (-sĕz). 1. The anachronistic representation of something as existing before its proper or historical time, as in the precolonial United States. 2. a. The assignment of something, such as an event or a name, to a time that precedes it, as in If you tell the cops, you're a dead man. b. The use of a descriptive word in anticipation of the act or circumstances that would make it applicable, as dry in They drained the lake dry. 3. The anticipation and answering of an objection or argument before one's opponent has put it forward. [Late Latin prolēpsis, from Greek prolēpsis, from prolambanein, to anticipate : pro-, before; see PRO⁻² + lambanein, lēp-, to take.] —pro-lep/tic (-lĕp'tik), pro-lep/ti-cal (-tī-kəl) adj.

pro-le-tar-i-an (prō'lī-tār'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the proletariat. — n. A member of the proletariat; a worker. [From Latin prōlētārius, belonging to the lowest class of Roman citizens (viewed as contributing to the state only through having children), from prōlēs, offspring. See al⁻² in Appendix.] —pro/le-tar/i-an-ism n.

pro-le-tar-i-at (prō'lī-tār'ē-īt) n. 1. a. The class of industrial wage earners who, possessing neither capital nor production means, must earn their living by selling their labor. b. The poorest class of working people. 2. The propertyless class of ancient Rome, constituting the lowest class of citizens. [French prolétar- iat, from Latin prōlētārius, belonging to the lowest class of Roman citizens. See PROLETARIAN.]

pro-life (prō-lif') adj. Advocating full legal protection of human embryos or fetuses, especially by opposing legalized abortion. —pro-lif'er n.

pro-lif-er-ate (prə-lif'ə-rāt') v. pro-lif-er-at-ed, pro-lif-er-at-ing, pro-lif-er-ates. — v. intr. 1. To grow or multiply by rapidly producing new tissue, parts, cells, or offspring. 2. To increase or spread at a rapid rate: fears that nuclear weapons might proliferate. — v. tr. To cause to grow or increase rapidly.

[Back-formation from PROLIFERATION, the act of proliferating, from French prolifération, from prolifère, procreative : Latin prōlēs, prōl-, offspring; see PROLIFEROUS + Latin -fer, -fer.] —pro-lif'er-a'tion n. —pro-lif'er-a'tive adj.

—pro-lif'er-a'tor n.

pro-lif-er-ous (prə-lif'ər-əs) adj. 1. Zoology. Reproducing freely by means of buds and side branches, as corals do. 2. Botany. Freely producing buds or offshoots, especially from unusual places, as shoots from flowers or fruits from fruits. [From Medieval Latin prōlifer : Latin prōlēs, prōl-, offspring; see al-² in Appendix + -fer, -fer.] —pro-lif'er-ous-ly adv.

pro-lif-ic (prə-lif'ik) adj. 1. Producing offspring or fruit in great abundance; fertile. 2. Producing abundant works or results: a prolific artist. See Synonyms at fertile. [French prolifique, from Medieval Latin prōlificus : Latin prōlēs, prōl-, offspring; see al-² in Appendix + Latin -ficus, -fic.] —pro-lif'i-ca-cy (-i-kə-sē), pro-lif-ic-ness (-ik-nīs) n. —pro-lif-i-cal-ly adv.

pro-line (prō'lēn') n. An amino acid, C₄H₈NCOOH, that is found in most proteins and is a major constituent of collagen. [Short for pyrrolidine : PYRROLE + -ID(E) + -INE².]

pro-lix (prō-līks', prō'līks') adj. 1. Tediously prolonged; wordy: editing a prolix manuscript. 2. Tending to speak or write at excessive length. See Synonyms at wordy. [Middle English, from Old French prolix, from Latin prōlixus, poured forth, extended.] —pro-lix'i-ty (-līk'sī-tē) n. —pro-lix'ly adv.

pro-log (prō'lōg', -lōg') n. Variant of prologue.

Pro-log (prō'lōg', -lōg') n. Computer Science. A programming language used for writing programs that model human thinking. [pro(gramming in) log(ic).] pro-logue also pro-log (prō'lōg', -lōg') n. 1. An introduction or a preface, especially a poem recited to introduce a play. 2. An introduction or introductory chapter, as to a novel. 3. An introductory act, event, or period. [Middle English prolog, from Old French prologue, from Latin prologus, from Greek prologos : pro-, before; see PRO-² + logos, speech; see leg- in Appendix.]

pro-long (prə-lōng', -lōng') v. tr. pro-longed, pro-long-ing, pro-longs.

1. To lengthen in duration; protract. 2. To lengthen in extent. [Middle English prolongen, from Old French prolonguer, from Late Latin prōlongāre : Latin prō-, forth; see PRO-¹ + Latin longus, long; see del-¹ in Appendix.] —pro-long'er n.

pro·lon·gate (prə-lông'gāt', -lông'-, prō-) v. tr. pro·lon·gat·ed, pro·lon·gat·ing, pro·lon·gates. To prolong. — pro'lon·ga'tion (prō'lông-gā'shən, -lông-) n.

pro·lu·sion (prō-lōō'zhən) n. 1. A preliminary exercise. 2. An essay written as a preface to a more detailed work. [Latin prōlūsiō, prōlūsiōn-, from prōlūsus, past participle of prōlūdere, to practice beforehand : prō-, before; see PRO-¹ + lūdere, to play; see leid- in Appendix.] — pro·lu'so·ry (-sə-rē, -zə-) adj.

prom (prۆm) n. A formal dance held for a high-school or college class typically at or near the end of the academic year. [Short for PROMENADE.]

PROM (prۆm) n. Computer Science. A memory that can be programmed only once. [p(rogrammable) r(ead-)o(nly) m(emory).] prom. abbr. Promontory.

prom·e·nade (prۆm'ə-nād', -nād') n. 1. a. A leisurely walk, especially one taken in a public place as a social activity. b. A public place for such walking. 2. a. A formal dance; a ball. b. A march of all the guests at the opening of a ball. 3. A square-dance figure in which couples march counterclockwise in a circle. — v. prom·e·nad·ed, prom·e·nad·ing, prom·e·nades. — v. intr. 1. To go on a leisurely walk. 2. To execute a promenade at a ball or in square dancing. — v. tr. 1. To take a promenade along or through. 2. To take or display on or as if on a promenade. [French, from promener, to take for a walk, from Latin prōmināre, to drive forward : prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + mināre, to drive with shouts (from minārī, to threaten, from minae, threats); see men-² in Appendix.] — prom'e·nad'er n.

promenade deck (prۆm'ə-nād' dĕk) n. Nautical. The upper deck or a section of the upper deck on a passenger ship where the passengers can promenade.

Pro·me·the·an (prə-mĕ'thĕ-ən) adj. 1. Greek Mythology. Relating to or suggestive of Prometheus. 2. Boldly creative; defiantly original. — n. One who is boldly creative or defiantly original in behavior or actions.

Pro·me·the·us (prə-mĕ'thĕ-əs, -thyōōs') n. Greek Mythology. A Titan who stole fire from Olympus and gave it to humankind, for which Zeus chained him to a rock and sent an eagle to eat his liver, which grew back daily. [Latin Promētheus, from Greek.]

pro·me·thi·um (prə-mĕ'thĕ-əm) n. Symbol Pm A radioactive rare-earth element prepared by fission of uranium or by neutron bombardment of neodymium, having 14 isotopes with mass numbers ranging from 141 to 154 and used as a source of beta rays. Atomic number 61; melting point 1,168°C; boiling point 2,460°C; valence 3. [From PROMETHEUS.]

prom·i·nence (prۆm'ə-nəns) n. 1. The quality or condition of being prominent. 2. Something prominent, especially an area of land raised above its surroundings. 3. Anatomy. A small projection or protuberance. 4. Astronomy. A tonguelike cloud of flaming gas rising from the sun's surface, visible as part of the corona during a total solar eclipse.

prom·i·nen·cy (prŏm'ə-nən-sē) n. Prominence: a former secretary who rose to a position of prominence as an ambassador.

prom·i·nent (prŏm'ə-nənt) adj. 1. Projecting outward or upward from a line or surface; protuberant. 2. Immediately noticeable; conspicuous. See Synonyms at noticeable. 3. Widely known; eminent. [Middle English, from Latin prōminēns, prōminent- present participle of prōminēre, to jut out : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + -minēre, to jut, threaten; see men⁻² in Appendix.] —prom'i·nent·ly adv.

prom·is·cu·i·ty (prŏm'ĩ-skyōō'ĩ-tē, prŏ'mĩ-) n. pl. prom·is·cu·i·ties. 1. The state or character of being promiscuous. 2. Promiscuous sexual relations. 3. A mixture of diverse or unrelated parts or individuals; a hodgepodge.

pro·mis·cu·ous (prə-mĩs'kyōō-əs) adj. 1. Indiscriminate in the choice of sexual partners. 2. Lacking standards of selection; indiscriminate. 3. Casual; random. 4. Consisting of diverse, unrelated parts or individuals; confused: "Throngs promiscuous strew the level green" (Alexander Pope). [From Latin prōmiscuus, possessed equally : prō-, intensive pref.; see PRO⁻¹ + miscēre, to mix; see meik- in Appendix.] —pro·mis'cu·ous·ly adv. —pro·mis'cu·ous·ness n.

prom·ise (prŏm'ĩs) n. 1. a. A declaration assuring that one will or will not do something; a vow. b. Something promised. 2. Indication of something favorable to come; expectation: a promise of spring in the milder air. 3. Indication of future excellence or success: a young player of great promise. — v. prom·ised, prom·is·ing, prom·is·es. — v. tr. 1. To commit oneself by a promise to do or give; pledge: promised a quick answer; left early but promised to return. 2. To afford a basis for expecting: thunderclouds that promise rain. — v. intr. 1. To make a declaration assuring that something will or will not be done. 2. To afford a basis for expectation: an enterprise that promises well. [Middle English promis, from Old French promise, from Medieval Latin prōmissa, alteration of Latin prōmissum, from neuter past participle of prōmittere, to send forth, promise : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + mittere, to send.] —prom'is·er n.

SYNONYMS: promise, covenant, engage, pledge, plight, swear, vow. The central meaning shared by these verbs is "to declare solemnly that one will perform or refrain from a particular course of action": promise to write soon; covenanting to exchange their prisoners of war; engaged to reorganize the department; pledged to uphold the law; plighted their loyalty to the king; swore to get revenge; vowed they would never surrender.

Prom·ised Land (prŏm'ĩst länd) n. 1. Bible. The land of Canaan, promised by the Lord to Abraham's descendants in the Old Testament. 2. promised land. A longed-for place where complete satisfaction and happiness will be achieved.

prom-is-ee (prŏm'ī-sē') n. Law. The party to which a promise is made.

prom-is-ing (prŏm'ī-sīng) adj. Likely to develop in a desirable manner.

—prom'is-ing-ly adv.

prom-i-sor (prŏm'ī-sôr') n. Law. One that makes a promise.

prom-is-so-ry (prŏm'ī-sôr'ē, -sôr'ē) adj. 1. Containing, involving, or having the nature of a promise. 2. Indicating how the provisions of an insurance contract will be carried out after it has been signed. [Medieval Latin prŏmissōrius, from Latin prŏmissor, one who promises, from prŏmissus, past participle of prŏmittere, to promise. See PROMISE.]

promissory note (prŏm'ī-sôr'ē nŏt) n. Abbr. P/N, p.n. A written promise to pay or repay a specified sum of money at a stated time or on demand. Also called note of hand pro-mo (prŏ'mō) n. pl. pro-mos. Informal. A promotional presentation, such as a television spot, radio announcement, or personal appearance. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a promo piece; an author's promo tour.

prom-on-to-ry (prŏm'ən-tŏr'ē, -tŏr'ē) n. pl. prom-on-to-ries. 1. Abbr.

prom. A high ridge of land or rock jutting out into a body of water; a headland. 2. Anatomy. A projecting part. [Latin prŏmontorium, alteration (influenced by mŏns, mont-, mount); see MOUNT², of prŏmunturium, probably from prominēre, to jut out. See PROMINENT.]

pro-mote (prə-mŏt') v. tr. pro-mot-ed, pro-mot-ing, pro-motes. 1. a. To raise to a more important or responsible job or rank. b. To advance (a student) to the next higher grade. 2. To contribute to the progress or growth of; further. See Synonyms at advance. 3. To urge the adoption of; advocate: promote a constitutional amendment. 4. To attempt to sell or popularize by advertising or publicity: commercials promoting a new product. 5. To help to establish or organize (a new enterprise), as by securing financial backing: promote a Broadway show. [Middle English promoten, from Old French promoter, from Latin prŏmovēre, prŏ-mŏt- : prŏ-, forward; see PRO-¹ + movēre, to move; see meuə- in Appendix.]

—pro-mot'a-bil'i-ty n. —pro-mot'a-ble adj.

pro-mot-er (prə-mŏ'tər) n. 1. One that promotes, especially an active supporter or advocate. 2. A financial and publicity organizer, as of a boxing match or an artistic performance. 3. Genetics. A DNA molecule to which RNA polymerase binds, initiating the transcription of messenger RNA.

pro-mo-tion (prə-mŏ'shən) n. 1. The act of promoting or the fact of being promoted. 2. Advancement in rank or responsibility. 3. Encouragement of the progress, growth, or acceptance of something; furtherance. 4. Advertising; publicity. —pro-mo'tion-al adj. —pro-mo'tion-al-ly adv.

pro-mo-tive (prə-mŏ'tiv) adj. Tending to promote. —pro-mo'tive-ness n.

prompt (prŏmpt) adj. prompt-er, prompt-est. 1. Being on time; punctual.

2. Carried out or performed without delay: a prompt reply. — v. tr.

prompt-ed, prompt-ing, prompts. 1. To move to act; spur; incite: A noise prompted the guard to go back and investigate. 2. To give rise to; inspire: The accident prompted a review of school safety policy. 3. To assist with a reminder; remind. 4. To assist (an actor or a reciter) by providing the next words of a forgotten passage; cue. — n. 1. a. The act of prompting or giving a cue. b. A reminder or cue. 2. Computer Science. A symbol that appears on a monitor to indicate that the computer is ready to receive input. 3. Business. a. A prompt note. b. The time limit stipulated in a prompt note. [Middle English, ready, from Old French, from Latin prōmptus, from past participle of prōmere, to bring forth : prō-, forth; see *PRO-*¹ + emere, to take, obtain; see em- in Appendix.]

—prompt'er n. —prompt'ti-tude' (prōmp'tī-tōōd', -tyōōd'), prompt'ness (prōmp'tnīs) n. —prompt'ly adv.

prompt-book (prōmp'tbōōk') n. An annotated script used by a theater prompter.

prompt note (prōmp't nōt) n. A notice sent to the purchaser of goods as a reminder of the amount that is due the seller and the date that it is due.

prom-ul-gate (prōm'əl-gāt', prō-mūl'gāt') v. tr. prom-ul-gat-ed, prom-ul-gat-ing, prom-ul-gates. 1. To make known (a decree, for example) by public declaration; announce officially. See Synonyms at announce. 2. To put (a law) into effect by formal public announcement. [Latin prōmulgāre, prōmulgāt-.] —prom'ul-ga'tion (prōm'əl-gā'shən, prō'məl-) n.

—prom'ul-ga'tor n.

pron. abbr. 1. Grammar. Pronominal; pronoun. 2. Pronounced. 3. Pronunciation.

pro-na-tal-ism (prō-nāt'l-īz'əm) n. An attitude or a policy that encourages childbearing. —pro-na'tal-ist n. —pro-na'tal-is'tic adj.

pro-nate (prō'nāt') v. pro-nat-ed, pro-nat-ing, pro-nates. — v. tr.

1. a. To turn or rotate (the hand or forearm) so that the palm faces down or back. b. To turn or rotate (the sole of the foot) by abduction and eversion so that the inner edge of the sole bears the body's weight. 2. To turn or rotate (a limb) so that the inner surface faces down or back. Used of a vertebrate animal. 3. To place in a prone position. — v. intr. 1. To become pronated. 2. To assume a prone position. [Late Latin prōnāre, prōnāt-, to bend forward, from prōnus, turned forward. See PRONE.] pro-na-tion (prō-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of pronating. 2. The condition of being pronated, especially the condition of having flat feet.

pro-na-tor (prō'nā'tər) n. A muscle that effects or assists in pronation.

prone (prōn) adj. 1. Lying with the front or face downward. 2. Having a tendency; inclined: paper that is prone to yellowing; children who are prone to mischief. — adv. In a prone manner: The patient was lying prone on the bed.

[Middle English, inclined, disposed, from Latin prōnus, leaning forward. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prone'ly adv. —prone'ness n.

SYNONYMS: prone, supine, prostrate, recumbent. These adjectives mean lying down, as on the ground. Prone refers to lying face downward with the front of the body facing the surface on which it rests: The spaniel lay prone on the floor, his long ears draped over his extended front legs. Supine means lying down on the back: The victim was supine on the stretcher. Prostrate denotes lying down flat or at full length: “the prostrate trunk of a coconut tree” (Herman Melville). The word often implies that a prone or a supine position has been assumed out of humiliation, submission, helplessness, or physical or emotional incapacity: “Heselrigge, as he lay prostrate... implored for life” (Jane Porter). Recumbent means lying down in a position of comfort or rest: The picnickers were recumbent on thick moss under a big tree.

pro-neph-ros (prō-nĕf'rəs, -rös') *n. pl. pro-neph-roi (-roi) or pro-neph-ra (-rə). A kidneylike organ, being either part of the most anterior pair of three pairs of organs in a vertebrate embryo, disappearing early in the embryonic development of higher vertebrates, but functioning as a kidney in some simple vertebrates, such as the lamprey. [PRO-² + Greek nephros, kidney.] —pro-neph'ric (-rik) *adj.

prong (prông, prông) n. 1. A thin, pointed, projecting part: a pitchfork with four prongs. 2. A branch; a fork: the two prongs of a river. — v. tr. pronged, prong-ing, prongs. To pierce with or as if with a thin, pointed, projecting part. [Middle English pronge, pointed instrument, pain, from Medieval Latin pronga, of Germanic origin.]

prong-horn (prông'hôn', prông'-) n. pl. pronghorn or prong-horns. A small ruminant mammal (Antilocapra americana) resembling an antelope and having small forked horns, found on western North American plains. Also called pronghorn antelope pro-no-grade (prō'nə-grād') adj. Walking with the long axis of the body parallel to the ground. Used of quadrupeds. [Latin prōnus, leaning forward; see PRONE + -gradus, walking (from gradī, to move); see RETROGRADE.]

pro-nom-i-nal (prō-nôm'ə-nəl) adj. Abbr. pron., pronom. Grammar. 1. Of, relating to, or functioning as a pronoun. 2. Resembling a pronoun, as by specifying a person, place, or thing, while functioning primarily as another part of speech. His in his choice is a pronominal adjective. [Late Latin prōnōminālis, from Latin prōnōmen, prōnōmin-, pronoun : prō-, in place of; see PRO-¹ + nōmen, name; see NOUN.] —pro-nom'i-nal-ly adv.

pro-noun (prō'noun') n. Abbr. pron., pr. Grammar. One of a class of words that function as substitutes for nouns or noun phrases and designate persons or things asked for, previously specified, or understood from the context.

pro-nounce (prə-nouns') v. pro-nounced, pro-nounc-ing, pro-nounc-es.

— v. tr. 1. a. To use the organs of speech to make heard (a word or speech sound); utter. b. To say clearly, correctly, or in a given manner: learning to pronounce French; pronounced my name wrong. 2. To represent (a word) in phonetic symbols. 3. To declare officially or formally: pronounced the legislature to be in session; was pronounced dead on arrival. — v. intr. 1. To say words; speak. 2. To declare one's opinion; make a pronouncement: pronouncing on the issues of the day. [Middle English pronouncen, from Old French prononcier, from Latin prōnūntiāre: prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + nūntiāre, to announce (from nūntius, messenger); see neu- in Appendix.] —pro-nounce'a-ble adj. —pro-nounc'er n.

pro-nounced (prə-nounst') adj. 1. Abbr. pron. Spoken; voiced. 2. Strongly marked; distinct: walks with a pronounced limp. —pro-nounc'ed-ly (-noun'sīd-lē) adv. —pro-nounc'ed-ness n.

pro-nounce-ment (prə-nouns'mənt) n. 1. A formal expression of opinion; a judgment. 2. An authoritative statement.

pro-nounc-ing (prə-noun'sɪŋ) adj. Relating to, designed for, or showing pronunciation: a pronouncing dictionary.

pron-to (prɒn'tō) adv. Informal. Without delay; quickly. [Spanish, from Latin prōmptus. See PROMPT.]

pro-nu-cle-us (prō-nōō'klē-əs, -nyōō'-) n. pl. pro-nu-cle-i (-klē-ī'). The haploid nucleus of a sperm or egg before fusion of the nuclei in fertilization.

—pro-nu'cle-ar adj.

pro-nun-ci-a-men-to (prō-nŭn'sē-ə-mĕn'tō) n. pl. pro-nun-ci-a-men-tos or pro-nun-ci-a-men-toes. An official or authoritarian declaration; a proclamation or an edict. [Spanish pronunciamiento, from pronunciar, to pronounce, from Latin prōnūntiāre. See PRONOUNCE.]

pro-nun-ci-a-tion (prə-nŭn'sē-ā'shən) n. Abbr. pron. 1. The act or manner of pronouncing words; utterance of speech. 2. A way of speaking a word, especially a way that is accepted or generally understood. 3. A graphic representation of the way a word is spoken, using phonetic symbols. [Middle English, from Old French prononciation, from Latin prōnūntiātiō, prōnūntiātiōn-, from prōnūntiātus, past participle of prōnūntiāre, to pronounce. See PRONOUNCE.]

—pro-nun'ci-a'tion-al adj.

proof (prōof) n. Abbr. prf. 1. The evidence or argument that compels the mind to accept an assertion as true. 2. a. The validation of a proposition by application of specified rules, as of induction or deduction, to assumptions, axioms, and sequentially derived conclusions. b. A statement or an argument used in such a validation. 3. a. Convincing or persuasive demonstration: was asked for proof of his identity; an employment history that was proof of her dependability. b. The state of being convinced or persuaded by consideration of evidence.

4. Determination of the quality of something by testing; trial: put one's beliefs to the proof. 5. Law. The result or effect of evidence; the establishment or denial of a fact by evidence. 6. The alcoholic strength of a liquor, expressed by a number that is twice the percentage by volume of alcohol present. 7. Printing. a. A trial sheet of printed material that is made to be checked and corrected. Also called proof sheet b. A trial impression of a plate, stone, or block taken at any of various stages in engraving. 8. a. A trial photographic print. b. Any of a limited number of newly minted coins or medals struck as specimens and for collectors from a new die on a polished planchet. 9. Archaic. Proven impenetrability: "I was clothed in Armor of proof" (John Bunyan). — adj. 1. Fully or successfully resistant; impervious. Often used in combination: waterproof watches; a fireproof cellar door. 2. Of standard alcoholic strength. 3. Used in proving or making corrections. — v. proofed, proof-ing, proofs. — v. tr. 1. Printing. a. To make a trial impression of (printed or engraved matter). b. To proofread (copy). 2. a. To activate (dormant dry yeast) by adding water. b. To work (dough) into proper lightness. 3. To treat so as to make resistant: proof a fabric against shrinkage. — v. intr. 1. Printing. To proofread. 2. To become properly light for cooking: The batter proofed overnight. [Middle English prove, preve, from Anglo-Norman prove, and from Old French prueve both from Late Latin proba, from Latin probāre, to prove. See PROVE.] — proof'er n.

proof-of-pur-chase (prōōf'əv-pûr'chīs) n. pl. proofs-of-pur-chase (prōōfs'-). A document, such as a sales slip or a product label, that is valid evidence for claiming a refund or a premium. — proof'-of-pur'chase adj.

proof of the pudding (prōōf ūv thē pōōd'ing) n. Informal. The ultimate evidence attesting the true nature of something: The proof of the pudding is not to be found in preelection polls; rather, it lies in the results of the election. [From the proverb The proof of the pudding is in the eating.] proof-read (prōōf'rēd') v. proof-read (-rēd'), proof-read-ing, proof-reads. Printing. — v. tr. To read (copy or proof) in order to find errors and mark corrections. — v. intr. To read copy or proof for purposes of error detection and correction. — proof/read'er n.

proof sheet (prōōf shēt) n. Printing. See proof (n., sense 7a).

proofs-of-pur-chase (prōōfs'əv-pûr'chīs) n. Plural of proof-of-pur-chase.

proof spirit (prōōf spîr'it) n. An alcohol-water mixture or a beverage containing a standard amount of alcohol, the U.S. standard being 100 proof, or 50 percent, of ethyl alcohol by volume at 60°F (approximately 15.6°C).

prop¹ (prōp) n. 1. An object placed beneath or against a structure to keep it from falling or shaking; a support. 2. One that serves as a support or stay: my children, my props in old age. — v. tr. propped, prop-ping, props. To support by placing something beneath or against; shore up. [Middle English proppe, probably from Middle Dutch.]

prop² (prɒp) n. A theatrical property.

prop³ (prɒp) n. Informal. A propeller.

prop. abbr. 1. Proper. 2. Properly. 3. Property. 4. Proposition. 5. Proprietary. 6. Proprietor; proprietress.

prop- pref. Related to or derived from propionic acid: propane. [From PROPI-ONIC ACID.]

pro-pae-deu-tic (prō'pī-dōō'tik, -dyōō'-) adj. Providing introductory instruction. — n. Preparatory instruction. [From Greek propaideuein, to teach beforehand : pro-, before; see PRO-² + paideuein, to teach (from pais, paid-, child); see PEDO-².]

prop-a-gan-da (prɒp'ə-gǎn'də) n. 1. The systematic propagation of a doctrine or cause or of information reflecting the views and interests of those people advocating such a doctrine or cause. 2. Material disseminated by the advocates of a doctrine or cause: the selected truths, exaggerations, and lies of wartime propaganda. 3. Propaganda. Roman Catholic Church. A division of the Roman Curia that has authority in the matter of preaching the gospel, of establishing the Church in non-Christian countries, and of administering Church missions in territories where there is no properly organized hierarchy. [New Latin, short for Sacra Congregātiō dē Prōpagandā Fide, Sacred Congregation for Propagating the Faith (established 1622), from ablative feminine gerundive of Latin prōpāgāre, to propagate. See PROPAGATE.] —prop'a-gan'dism n. —prop'a-gan'dist n. —prop'a-gan-dis'tic adj. —prop'a-gan-dis'ti-cal-ly adv.

prop-a-gan-dize (prɒp'ə-gǎn'dīz') v. prop-a-gan-dized, prop-a-gan-diz-ing, prop-a-gan-diz-es. — v. tr. 1. To engage in propaganda for (a doctrine or cause). 2. To subject (a person or group) to propaganda. — v. intr. To spread propaganda: propagandizing for nuclear disarmament; propagandized against legalized drug use. —prop'a-gan'diz'er n.

prop-a-gate (prɒp'ə-gāt') v. prop-a-gat-ed, prop-a-gat-ing, prop-a-gates. — v. tr. 1. To cause (an organism) to multiply or breed. 2. To breed (offspring). 3. To transmit (characteristics) from one generation to another. 4. To cause to extend to a broader area or larger number; spread: missionaries who propagate the faith. 5. To make widely known; publicize: propagate a rumor. 6. Physics. To cause (a wave, for example) to move in some direction or through a medium; transmit. — v. intr. 1. To have offspring; multiply. 2. To extend to a broader area or larger number; spread. 3. Physics. To move through a medium. [Latin prōpāgāre, prōpāgāt-. See pag- in Appendix.] —prop'a-ga-ble (-gə-bəl) adj. —prop'a-ga'tive adj. —prop'a-ga'tor n.

prop·a·ga·tion (prɒp'ə-gā'shən) n. 1. Multiplication or increase, as by natural reproduction. 2. The process of spreading to a larger area or greater number; dissemination. 3. Physics. The act or process of propagating, especially the process by which a disturbance, such as the motion of electromagnetic or sound waves, is transmitted through a medium such as air or water. —prop'a·ga'-tion-al adj.

prop·a·gule (prɒp'ə-gyool') n. Any of various usually vegetative portions of a plant, such as a bud or other offshoot, that aid in dispersal of the species and from which a new individual may develop. [New Latin prōpāgulum, diminutive of Latin prōpāgō, shoot, from prōpāgāre, to propagate. See PROPAGATE.]

pro·pane (prō'pān') n. A colorless gas, C₃H₈, found in natural gas and petroleum and widely used as a fuel.

pro·pa·no·ic acid (prō'pə-nō'ik əs'id) n. See propionic acid.

pro·pa·nol (prō'pə-nōl', -nōl', -nōl') n. See propyl alcohol.

pro·pel (prə-pěll') v. tr. pro·pelled, pro·pel·ling, pro·pels. To cause to move forward or onward. See Synonyms at push. [Middle English propellen, from Latin prōpellere: prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + pellere, to drive; see pel⁻⁵ in Appendix.]

pro·pel·lant also pro·pel·lent (prə-pěll'ənt) n. 1. Something, such as an explosive charge or a rocket fuel, that propels or provides thrust. 2. A compressed inert gas, such as a fluorocarbon, that acts as a vehicle for discharging the contents of an aerosol container. — adj. Serving to propel; propelling.

pro·pel·ler also pro·pel·lor (prə-pěll'ər) n. A machine for propelling an aircraft or a boat, consisting of a power-driven shaft with radiating blades that are placed so as to thrust air or water in a desired direction when spinning.

pro·pend (prō-pěnd') v. intr. pro·pend·ed, pro·pend·ing, pro·pends.

Obsolete. To have a propensity; incline or tend. [Latin prōpendēre: prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + pendēre, to hang; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

pro·pene (prō'pēn') n. See propylene.

pro·pen·si·ty (prə-pěnsi'tē) n. pl. pro·pen·si·ties. An innate inclination; a tendency. See Synonyms at predilection. [From propense, inclined, from Latin prōpēnsus, past participle of prōpendēre, to be inclined. See PROPEND.]

prop·er (prɒp'ər) adj. Abbr. prop. 1. Characterized by appropriateness or suitability; fitting: the proper knife for cutting bread; not a proper moment for a joke. See Synonyms at fit¹. 2. Called for by rules or conventions; correct: the proper form for a business letter. 3. Strictly following rules or conventions, especially in social behavior; seemly: a proper lady; a proper gentleman. 4. a. Belonging to one; own: restored to his proper shape by the magician. b. Characteristically belonging to the being or thing in question; peculiar: an optical effect proper to fluids. 5. Being within the strictly limited sense, as of a term designating something: the town proper, excluding the suburbs. 6. Ecclesiastical. For use in the liturgy of a particular feast or season of the year. 7. Mathematics. Of or relating to a subset of a given set when the set has at least one element not in the subset.

8. Worthy of the name; true: wanted a proper dinner, not just a snack. 9. Out-and-out; thorough: a proper whipping. — adv. Thoroughly: beat the eggs good and proper. — n. also Proper Ecclesiastical. The parts of the liturgy that vary according to the particular feast or season of the year. [Middle English propre, from Old French, from Latin proprius. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prop'er-ly adv.

—prop'er-ness n.

proper adjective (pröp'ər äj'ik-tiv) n. Grammar. An adjective formed from a proper noun.

pro-per-din (prō-pûr'dn) n. A natural protein in human blood serum that participates in the body's immune response by working in conjunction with the complement system. [Probably PRO-¹ + Latin perdere, to destroy; see PERDITION + -IN.] proper fraction (pröp'ər fräk'shən) n. Mathematics. 1. A numerical fraction in which the numerator is less than the denominator. 2. A polynomial fraction in which the numerator is of a lower degree than the denominator.

proper noun (pröp'ər noun) n. Grammar. A noun belonging to the class of words used as names for unique individuals, events, or places and usually having few possibilities for modification. Also called proper name prop'er-tied (pröp'ər-tēd) adj. Owning land or securities as a principal source of revenue.

Pro-per-tius (prō-pûr'shəs, -shē-əs), Sextus. 50?-15? B.C. Roman elegiac poet whose extant works include Cynthia, an elegy on his former lover.

prop'er-ty (pröp'ər-tē) n. pl. prop'er-ties. Abbr. prop. 1. a. Something owned; a possession. b. A piece of real estate: my country property. c. Something tangible or intangible to which its owner has legal title: properties such as copyrights and trademarks. d. Possessions considered as a group. 2. The right of ownership; title. 3. An article, except costumes and scenery, that appears on the stage or on screen during a dramatic performance. 4. a. A characteristic trait or peculiarity, especially one serving to define or describe its possessor. b. A characteristic attribute possessed by all members of a class. See Synonyms at quality.

5. A special capability or power; a virtue: a medicine with special properties.

[Middle English, from Old French propriete, from Latin proprietas, ownership (translation of Greek idiotēs); see IDIOT, from proprius, one's own. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prop'er-ty-less adj.

property damage insurance (pröp'ər-tē dām'ij ĩn-shōōr'əns) n. Liability insurance for claims brought against a person who causes damage to another's property, as by an automobile accident.

property tax (pröp'ər-tē tāks) n. A tax levied against the owner of real or personal property.

pro-phage (prō'fāj') n. The latent form of a bacteriophage in which the viral genes are incorporated into the bacterial chromosomes without causing disruption of the bacterial cell. [Short for French probactériophage : Greek pro-, before; see PRO-² + New Latin bacterium, bacterium; see BACTERIO- + Greek -phagos, -phage.]

pro-phase (prō'fāz') n. 1. The first stage of mitosis, during which the chromosomes condense and become visible, the nuclear membrane breaks down, and the spindle apparatus forms at opposite poles of the cell. 2. The first stage of meiosis, constituted by a series of events that include DNA replication, the synapsis of homologous chromosomes, crossing over, the formation of chiasmata, and contraction of the chromosomes. —pro-pha'sic (-fā'zīk) adj.

proph-e-cy (prōf'ī-sē) n. pl. proph-e-cies (-sēz). 1. a. An inspired utterance of a prophet, viewed as a revelation of divine will. b. A prediction of the future, made under divine inspiration. c. Such an inspired message or prediction transmitted orally or in writing. 2. The vocation or condition of a prophet. 3. A prediction. [Middle English prophecie, from Old French, from Latin prophētia, from Greek prophēteia, from prophētēs, prophet. See PROPHET.]

proph-e-sy (prōf'ī-sī') v. proph-e-sied (-sīd'), proph-e-sy-ing (-sī'īng), proph-e-sies (-sīz'). — v. tr. 1. To reveal by divine inspiration. 2. To predict with certainty as if by divine inspiration: prophesied the coming war. See Synonyms at foretell. 3. To prefigure; foreshow. — v. intr. 1. To reveal the will or message of God. 2. To predict the future as if by divine inspiration. 3. To speak as a prophet. [Middle English prophecien, from Old French prophecier, from prophecie, prophecy. See PROPHECY.] —proph'e-si'er n.

proph-et (prōf'īt) n. 1. A person who speaks by divine inspiration or as the interpreter through whom the will of a god is expressed. 2. A person gifted with profound moral insight and exceptional powers of expression. 3. A predictor; a soothsayer. 4. The chief spokesperson of a movement or cause. 5. Prophets. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Bible. The second of the three divisions of the Hebrew Scriptures, comprising the books of Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the Twelve. See Table at Bible. [Middle English prophete, from Old French, from Latin prophēta, from Greek prophētēs : pro-, before; see PRO-² + -phētēs, speaker (from phanai, to speak); see bhā-² in Appendix.] —proph'et-hood' n.

proph-et-ess (prōf'ī-tīs) n. 1. A woman who speaks by divine inspiration or as the interpreter through whom the will of a god is expressed. 2. A woman predictor; a woman soothsayer. 3. The chief spokeswoman of a movement or cause.

pro-phet-ic (prə-fēt'īk) also pro-phet-i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj. 1. Of, belonging to, or characteristic of a prophet or prophecy: prophetic books. 2. Foretelling events as if by divine inspiration: casual words that proved prophetic.

—pro-phet'i-cal-ly adv. —pro-phet'i-cal-ness n.

pro-phy-lac-tic (prō'fə-lāk'tik, prōf'ə-) adj. Acting to defend against or prevent something, especially disease; protective. — n. 1. A prophylactic agent, device, or measure, such as a vaccine or drug. 2. A contraceptive device, especially a condom. [French prophylactique, from Greek prophylaktikos, from prophulassein, to take precautions against : pro-, before; see PRO-² + phulassein, to protect (from phulax, guard).] — pro'phy-lac'ti-cal-ly adv.

pro-phy-lax-is (prō'fə-lāk'sis, prōf'ə-) n. pl. pro-phy-lax-es (-lāk'sēz'). Prevention of or protective treatment for disease. [New Latin, from Greek prophylaktikos, prophylactic. See PROPHYLACTIC.]

pro-pin-qui-ty (prə-pīŋ'kwī-tē) n. 1. Proximity; nearness. 2. Kinship. 3. Similarity in nature. [Middle English propinquite, from Old French, from Latin propinquitās, from propinquus, near. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro-pi-on-al-de-hyde (prō'pē-ōn-āl'də-hīd') n. A flammable liquid, C₂H₅CHO, used in the manufacture of plastics and rubber chemicals. [PRO-PION(IC ACID) + ALDEHYDE.]

pro-pi-o-nate (prō'pē-ə-nāt') n. A salt or an ester of propionic acid. [PRO-PION(IC ACID) + -ATE².]

pro-pi-on-ic acid (prō'pē-ōn'ik əs'īd) n. A liquid fatty acid, CH₃CH₂COOH, found naturally in sweat, in milk products, and as a product of bacterial fermentation. Prepared synthetically from ethyl alcohol and carbon monoxide, it is used chiefly in the form of its propionates as a mold inhibitor in bread and as an ingredient in perfume. Also called propanoic acid [From Greek pro-, first; see PRO-² + Greek piōn, fat (from the fact that it is first in order among the fatty acids); see peiə- in Appendix.]

pro-pi-ti-ate (prō-pīsh'ē-āt') v. tr. pro-pi-ti-at-ed, pro-pi-ti-at-ing, pro-pi-ti-ates. To conciliate (an offended power); appease: propitiate the gods with a sacrifice. [Latin propitiāre, propitiāt-, from propitius, propitious. See PROPITIOUS.] — pro-pi'ti-a-ble (-pīsh'ē-ə-bəl, -pīsh'ə-bəl) adj. — pro-pi'ti-at'ing-ly adv. — pro-pi'ti-a'tive adj. — pro-pi'ti-a'tor n.

pro-pi-ti-a-tion (prō-pīsh'ē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of propitiating.

2. Something that propitiates, especially a conciliatory offering to a god.

pro-pi-ti-a-to-ry (prō-pīsh'ē-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē, -pīsh'ə-) adj. Of or offered in propitiation; conciliatory. — pro-pi'ti-a-to'ri-ly adv.

pro-pi-tious (prə-pīsh'əs) adj. 1. Presenting favorable circumstances; auspicious. See Synonyms at favorable. 2. Kindly; gracious. [Middle English propicius, from Old French propicieux, from Latin propitius. See pet- in Appendix.]

— pro-pi'tious-ly adv. — pro-pi'tious-ness n.

prop-jet (pröp'jēt') n. See turboprop.

pro-plas-tid (prō-plās'tīd) n. A cytoplasmic organelle from which a plastid develops.

prop·o·lis (pröp'ə-līs) n. A resinous substance collected from the buds of certain trees by bees and used as a cement or sealant in the construction of their hives. [Latin, from Greek, suburb, bee glue (from the fact that it was originally the name of a structure around the opening into the hive) : pro-, before; see *PRO-*² + polis, city; see pelə-³ in Appendix.]

pro·po·nent (prə-pō'nənt) n. One who argues in support of something; an advocate. [Latin prōpōnēns, prōpōnent- present participle of prōpōnere, to set forth. See PROPOSE.]

pro·por·tion (prə-pôr'shən, -pōr'-) n. 1. A part considered in relation to the whole. 2. A relationship between things or parts of things with respect to comparative magnitude, quantity, or degree: the proper proportion between oil and vinegar in the dressing. 3. A relationship between quantities such that if one varies then another varies in a manner dependent on the first: "We do not always find visible happiness in proportion to visible virtue" (Samuel Johnson). 4. Agreeable or harmonious relation of parts within a whole; balance or symmetry. 5. Often proportions. Dimensions; size. 6. Mathematics. A statement of equality between two ratios. Four quantities, a, b, c, d, are said to be in proportion if $b = d$. — v. tr. pro·por·tioned, pro·por·tion·ing, pro·por·tions. 1. To adjust so that proper relations between parts are attained. 2. To form the parts of with balance or symmetry. [Middle English proporcion, from Old French proportion, from Latin prōportiō, prōportiōn-, from prō portiōne, according to (each) part : prō, according to; see PRO-¹ + portiōne, ablative of portiō, part; see perə-² in Appendix.] —pro·por'tion·a·ble adj. —pro·por'tion·a·bly adv. —pro·por'tion·er n. —pro·por'tion·ment n.

SYNONYMS: proportion, harmony, symmetry, balance. These nouns are compared as they mean aesthetic arrangement, as in a design, marked by proper distribution of elements. Proportion is the agreeable or harmonious relation of parts within a whole: The house, of Spanish colonial design, has rooms with graciousness of proportion and beautiful details. Harmony is the pleasing interaction or appropriate combination of elements: The harmony of her face is not diminished by her imperfect nose. Symmetry and balance both imply an arrangement of parts and details on either side of a dividing line, but symmetry frequently emphasizes exact or mirror-image correspondence of parts, while balance often suggests dissimilar parts that offset each other to make a harmonious and satisfying whole: Beds of iris were set out in perfect symmetry around a pool filled with water lilies. "In all perfectly beautiful objects, there is found the opposition of one part to another, and a reciprocal balance" (John Ruskin).

pro·por·tion·al (prə-pôr'shə-nəl, -pōr'-) adj. Abbr. P.R. 1. Forming a relationship with other parts or quantities; being in proportion. 2. Properly related in size, degree, or other measurable characteristics; corresponding: Punishment ought to be proportional to the crime. 3. Mathematics. Having the same or a constant ratio. — n. One of the quantities in a mathematical proportion.

—pro-por'tion-al/i·ty (-shə-nəl'ī-tē) n. —pro-por'tion-al-ly adv.

proportional representation (prə-pôr'shə-nəl rēp'rī-zēn-tā'shən) n.

Abbr. P.R. Representation of all parties in a legislature in proportion to their popular vote.

pro-por-tion-ate (prə-pôr'shə-nīt, -pôr'-) adj. Being in due proportion; proportional. — v. tr. pro-por-tion-at-ed, pro-por-tion-at-ing, pro-por-tion-ates (-shə-nāt'). To make proportionate. —pro-por' tion-ate-ly adv. —pro-por'tion-ate-ness n.

pro-pos-al (prə-pō'zəl) n. 1. The act of proposing. 2. A plan that is proposed.

3. An offer of marriage.

pro-pose (prə-pōz') v. pro-posed, pro-posing, pro-poses. — v. tr. 1. To put forward for consideration, discussion, or adoption; suggest: propose a change in the law. 2. To recommend (a person) for a position, office, or membership; nominate. 3. To offer (a toast to be drunk). 4. To make known as one's intention; purpose or intend: proposed to buy and run a farm. — v. intr. To form or make a proposal, especially of marriage. [Middle English proposen, from Old French proposer, alteration (influenced by poser, to put, place); see POSE¹, of Latin prōpōnere: prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + pōnere, to put; see apo- in Appendix.]

—pro-pos'er n.

SYNONYMS: propose, pose, propound, submit. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to present something for consideration or discussion”: propose a solution to a problem; a situation posing many questions and problems; propound a theory; submitting a plan.

prop-o-si-tion (prɒp'ə-zīsh'ən) n. Abbr. prop. 1. A plan suggested for acceptance; a proposal. 2. Informal. A matter to be dealt with; a task: Finding an affordable apartment will be a difficult proposition. 3. Informal. An offer of a private bargain, especially a request for sexual relations. 4. A subject for discussion or analysis. 5. Logic. a. A statement in which the subject is affirmed or denied by the predicate. b. Something that is expressed in a statement, as opposed to the way it is expressed. c. A statement containing only logical constants and having a fixed truth-value. — v. tr. prop-o-si-tioned, prop-o-si-tion-ing, prop-o-si-tions. Informal. To propose a private bargain to, especially to propose sexual relations with. [Middle English proposicion, from Old French proposition, from Latin prōpositiō, prōpositiōn-, setting out in words, from prōpositus, past participle of prōpōnere, to set forth. See PROPOSE.] —prop'o-si'tion-al adj.

—prop'o-si'tion-al-ly adv.

propositional calculus (pröp'ə-zīsh'ə-nəl käl'kyə-ləs) n. Logic. The branch of symbolic logic that deals with the relationships formed between propositions by connectives such as and, or, and if as opposed to their internal structure.

propositional function (pröp'ə-zīsh'ə-nəl fūngk'shən) n. Logic. An expression having the form of a proposition but containing undefined symbols for the substantive elements and becoming a proposition when appropriate values are assigned to the symbols.

pro-pos-i-tus (prō-pöz'ī-təs) n. pl. pro-pos-i-ti (-tī'). The person immediately concerned about or affected by an action. [Latin prōpositus, past participle of prōpōnere, to set forth. See PROPOSE.]

pro-pound (prə-pound') v. tr. pro-pound-ed, pro-pound-ing, pro-pounds. To put forward for consideration; set forth. See Synonyms at propose. [Alteration of propoune, from Middle English proponen, from Latin prōpōnere, to set forth. See PROPOSE.] —pro-pound'er n.

pro-pox-y-phene (prō-pök'sə-fēn') n. A nonnarcotic analgesic drug, $C_{22}H_{29}NO_2$. [PROP- + OXY- + -phene (alteration of PHENYL).]

propr. abbr. Proprietor; proprietress.

pro-prae-tor (prō-prē'tər) n. An ancient Roman official, appointed to be the chief administrator of a province after serving his term of office as praetor. [Latin prōpraetor : prō-, for; see PRO-¹ + praetor, praetor; see PRAETOR.]

—pro'prae-to'ri-al (prō'prī-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-), pro'prae-to'ri-an (-ən) adj.

pro-pran-o-lol (prō-prän'ə-lōl', -lōl', -lōl') n. A drug, $C_{16}H_{21}NO_2$, that blocks beta-adrenergic activity, used to treat hypertension, angina pectoris, and cardiac arrhythmia. [PRO(PYL) + PR(OP)ANOL (PROPAN(E) + -OL¹) + -OL¹.]

pro-pri-e-tar-y (prə-prī'ī-tēr'ē) adj. Abbr. prop., pty. 1. Of or relating to a proprietor or to proprietors as a group: proprietary rights. 2. Exclusively owned; private: a proprietary hospital. 3. Befitting an owner: a proprietary air.

4. Owned by a private individual or corporation under a trademark or patent: a proprietary drug. — n. pl. pro-pri-e-tar-ies. Abbr. prop., pty. 1. A proprietor. 2. A group of proprietors. 3. Ownership; proprietorship. 4. A proprietary medicine. 5. One granted ownership of a proprietary colony. [From Middle English proprietarie, owner of property, from Old French proprietaire, and from Medieval Latin proprietārius both from Late Latin, of a property owner, from Latin proprietās, ownership. See PROPERTY.] —pro-pri'e-tar'i-ly adv.

proprietary colony (prə-prī'ī-tēr'ē kōl'ə-nē) n. Any of certain early North American colonies, such as Carolina and Pennsylvania, organized in the 17th century in territories granted by the English Crown to one or more proprietors who had full governing rights.

pro-pri-e-tor (prə-prī'ī-tər) n. Abbr. prop., propr. 1. One who has legal title to something; an owner. 2. One who owns or owns and manages a business or other such establishment. [Probably alteration of Middle English proprietarie.

See PROPRIETARY.] —pro-pri'e-to'ri-al (-tôr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) adj.

—pro-pri'e-to'ri-al-ly adv. —pro-pri'e-tor-ship' n.

pro-pri-e-tress (prə-prī'ī-trīs) n. Abbr. prop., propr. 1. A woman who has legal title to something; an owner. 2. A woman who owns or owns and manages a business or other such establishment.

pro-pri-e-ty (prə-prī'ī-tē) n. pl. pro-pri-e-ties. 1. The quality of being proper; appropriateness. 2. Conformity to prevailing customs and usages. See Synonyms at etiquette. 3. proprieties. The usages and customs of polite society. [Middle English propriete, particular character, ownership, from Old French. See PROPERTY.]

pro-pri-o-cep-tion (prō'prē-ō-sĕp'shən) n. The unconscious perception of movement and spatial orientation arising from stimuli within the body itself.

[Latin proprius, one's own; see per¹ in Appendix + (RE)CEPTION.]

pro-pri-o-cep-tor (prō'prē-ō-sĕp'tər) n. A sensory receptor, found chiefly in muscles, tendons, joints, and the inner ear, that detects the motion or position of the body or a limb by responding to stimuli arising within the organism. [Latin proprius, one's own; see per¹ in Appendix + (RE)CEPTOR.] —pro'pri-o-cep'tive adj.

prop root (prɒp rōt) n. An adventitious root that arises from the stem, penetrates the soil, and helps to support the stem, as in corn. Also called brace root prop-to-sis (prɒp-tō'sis) n. pl. prop-to-ses (-sēz). Forward displacement of an organ, especially an eyeball. [Late Latin proptōsis, prolapse, from Greek, from pipitein, to fall forward : pro-, forward; see PRO⁻² + pipitein, to fall; see pet- in Appendix.]

pro-pul-sion (prə-pŭl'shən) n. 1. The process of driving or propelling. 2. A driving or propelling force. [Medieval Latin prōpulsio, *prōpulsio*n-, onslaught, urging on, from Latin prōpulsus, past participle of prōpellere, to drive forward. See PROPEL.] —pro-pul'sive, pro-pul'so-ry (-sə-rē) adj.

pro-pyl (prō'pīl) n. Abbr. Pr A univalent organic radical with composition C₃H₇, derived from propane. —pro-pyl'ic adj.

prop-y-la (prɒp'ə-lə, prō'pə-) n. Plural of propylon.

prop-y-lae-um (prɒp'ə-lē'əm, prō'pə-) n. pl. prop-y-lae-a (-lē'ə). Architecture. An entrance or vestibule to a temple or group of buildings. Also called propylon [Latin, from Greek propulaion : pro-, before; see PRO⁻² + pulē, gate.]

propyl alcohol (prō'pīl əl'kə-hôl') n. A clear colorless liquid, CH₃CH₂CH₂OH, used as a solvent and as an antiseptic. Also called propanol pro-pyl-ene (prō'pə-lēn') n. A flammable gas, CH₃CH:CH₂, derived from petroleum hydrocarbon cracking and used in organic synthesis. Also called propene propylene glycol (prō'pə-lēn' glī'kōl') n. A colorless viscous hygroscopic liquid, CH₃CHOHCH₂OH, used in antifreeze solutions, in hydraulic fluids, and as a solvent.

prop-y-lon (prōp'ə-lōn', prō'pə-) n. pl. prop-y-la (-lə). Architecture. See propylaeum. [Greek propulon : pro-, before; see PRO-² + pulē, gate.]

pro ra-ta (prō rā'tə, rāt'ə, rā'tə) adv. In proportion, according to a factor that can be calculated exactly. [Latin prō ratā (parte), according to the calculated (share) : prō, according to + ratā, feminine ablative of rātus, calculated.]

pro-rate (prō-rāt', prō'rāt') v. pro-rat-ed, pro-rat-ing, pro-rates. — v. tr. To divide, distribute, or assess proportionately. — v. intr. To settle affairs on the basis of proportional distribution. [From PRO RATA.] — pro-rat'a-ble adj.

—pro-ra'tion n.

pro-rogue (prō-rōg') v. tr. pro-rogued, pro-rogu-ing, pro-rogues. 1. To discontinue a session of (a parliament, for example). 2. To postpone; defer. [Middle English prorogen, from Old French proroguer, to postpone, from Latin prōrogāre : pro-, forward; see PRO-¹ + rogāre, to ask; see reg- in Appendix.]

—pro'ro-ga'tion n.

pros. abbr. Prosody.

pros- pref. 1. Near; toward: prosenchyma. 2. In front of: prosencephalon. [Greek, from pros, near, at. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro-sa-ic (prō-zā'īk) adj. 1. a. Consisting or characteristic of prose. b. Matter-of-fact; straightforward. 2. Lacking in imagination and spirit; dull. [Late Latin prōsaicus, from Latin prōsa, prose. See PROSE.] — pro-sa'i-cal-ly adv.

—pro-sa'ic-ness n.

pro-sa-ism (prō'zā-īz'əm) n. 1. A quality or style that is prosaic. 2. A prosaic word, phrase, or other expression.

Pros. Atty. abbr. Law. Prosecuting attorney.

pro-sce-ni-um (prō-sē'nē-əm, prə-) n. 1. pl. pro-sce-ni-ums. The area of a modern theater that is located between the curtain and the orchestra. 2. pl. pro-sce-ni-a (-nē-ə). The stage of an ancient theater, located between the background and the orchestra. [Latin proscēnium, from Greek proskēnion : pro-, before; see PRO-² + skēnē, buildings at the back of the stage.]

pro-sciut-to (prō-shōō'tō) n. pl. pro-sciut-ti (-tē) or pro-sciut-tos. An aged, dry-cured, spiced Italian ham that is usually sliced thin and is served without cooking. [Italian, alteration (probably influenced by prosciugare, to dry out), of presciutto, from Vulgar Latin perexsūctus*, thoroughly dried up : Latin per-, per- + Latin exsūctus, past participle of exsūgere, to suck out (ex-, ex- + sūgere, to suck); see SUCTION.]

pro-scribe (prō-skrīb') v. tr. pro-scribed, pro-scrib-ing, pro-scribes. 1. To denounce or condemn. 2. To prohibit; forbid. See Synonyms at forbid.

3. a. To banish or outlaw (a person). b. To publish the name of (a person) as outlawed. [Middle English proscriben, from Latin prōscribere, to put up someone's name as outlawed : prō-, in front; see PRO-¹ + scribere, to write; see skribh- in Appendix.] —pro-scrib'er n.

pro-scrip-tion (prō-skrip'shən) n. 1. The act of proscribing; prohibition.

2. The condition of having been proscribed; outlawry. [Middle English proscripcion, from Latin prōscriptiō, prōscriptiōn-, public notice of outlawry, from prōscriptus, past participle of prōscribere, to proscribe. See PROSCRIBE.]

—pro-scrip'tive adj. —pro-scrip'tive-ly adv.

prose (prōz) n. 1. Ordinary speech or writing, without metrical structure.

2. Commonplace expression or quality. 3. Roman Catholic Church. A hymn of irregular meter sung after the gradual. — v. intr. prosed, pros-ing, pros-es.

1. To write prose. 2. To speak or write in a dull, tiresome style. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prōsa (ōrātiō), straightforward (discourse), feminine of prōsus, alteration of prōrsus, from prōversus, past participle of prōvertere, to turn forward : prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.]

pro-sec-tor (prō-sĕk'tər) n. One who dissects cadavers for anatomical instruction or pathological examination. [Latin prōsector, anatomist, from prōsecāre, to cut off, up : prō-, before; see PRO-¹ + secāre, to cut; see SECTOR.]

pros-e-cute (prōs'ī-kyōōt') v. pros-e-cut-ed, pros-e-cut-ing, pros-e-cutes.

— v. tr. 1. Law. a. To initiate civil or criminal court action against. b. To seek to obtain or enforce by legal action. 2. a. To pursue (an undertaking, for example) until completion; follow to the very end. b. To chase or pursue (a vessel): “He held a dispatch saying that [they] had prosecuted and probably killed an Echo-class missile submarine” (Tom Clancy). 3. To carry on, engage in, or practice. — v. intr. Law. 1. To initiate and conduct legal proceedings. 2. To act as prosecutor.

[Middle English prosecuten, from Latin prōsequi, prōsecūt- : prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + sequi, to follow; see sek^{w-1} in Appendix.] —pros'e-cut'a-ble adj.

pros-e-cut-ing attorney (prōs'ī-kyōō'tīng ə-tūr'nē) n. Abbr. Pros. Atty., PA, P.A. Law. A lawyer empowered to prosecute cases on behalf of a government and its people. Also called prosecution, prosecutor.

pros-e-cu-tion (prōs'ī-kyōō'shən) n. 1. The act of prosecuting. 2. Law. The institution and conduct of a legal proceeding. 3. Law. See prosecuting attorney.

pros-e-cu-tor (prōs'ī-kyōō'tər) n. 1. One that prosecutes. 2. Law. One that initiates and carries out a legal action, especially criminal proceedings. 3. Law. See prosecuting attorney.

pros-e-cu-to-ri-al (prōs'ī-kyōō-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. Of, relating to, or concerned with prosecution: “a huge investigative and prosecutorial effort” (Lucian K. Truscott IV).

pros·e·lyte (prɒs'ə-līt') n. A new convert to a doctrine or religion. — v.
pros·e·lyt·ed, pros·e·lyt·ing, pros·e·lytes. — v. tr. To proselytize (a person). — v. intr. To engage in proselytization. [Middle English proselite, from Old French, from Late Latin prosēlytus, from Greek prosēlytos, stranger, proselyte, from prosēlyth-, aorist stem of proserkhesthai, to go to : pros-, pros- + erkhesthai, to go.] — pros'·e·lyt'er n.

pros·e·ly·tism (prɒs'ə-lī-tīz'əm, -lī-) n. 1. The practice of proselytizing.

2. The state of being a proselyte. — pros'·e·lyt'i·cal (-līt'ī-kəl) adj.

pros·e·ly·tize (prɒs'ə-lī-tīz') v. pros·e·ly·tized, pros·e·ly·tiz·ing, pros·e·ly·tiz·es. — v. intr. 1. To induce someone to convert to one's own religious faith. 2. To induce someone to join one's own political party or to espouse one's doctrine. — v. tr. To convert (a person) from one belief, doctrine, cause, or faith to another. — pros'·e·ly·ti·za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n. — pros'·e·ly·tiz'er n.

pro·sem·i·nar (prō-sēm'ə-när') n. A course of study for graduate and advanced undergraduate students in a college or university, conducted in the manner of a seminar. [PRO-² + SEMINAR.]

pros·en·ceph·a·lon (prɒs'ən-sĕf'ə-lɒn') n. The forebrain.

— pros'·en·ce·phal'ic (-sə-fāl'ik) adj.

pros·en·chy·ma (prɒ-sĕng'kī-mə) n. A type of plant tissue consisting of elongated cells with tapering ends, occurring in supporting and conducting tissue.

— pros'·en·chym'a·tous (-kīm'ə-təs) adj.

prose poem (prɒz pō'əm) n. A prose work that has poetic characteristics such as vivid imagery and concentrated expression.

Pro·ser·pi·na (prō-sûr'pə-nə) also Pros·er·pi·ne (prō-sûr'pə-nē, prɒs'ər-pīn') n. Roman Mythology. The daughter of Ceres who became the goddess of the underworld when Pluto carried her away and made her his wife.

pro·sim·i·an (prō-sīm'ē-ən) adj. Of or belonging to the Prosimii, a suborder of primates that includes the lemurs, lorises, and tarsiers. — n. A primate of the suborder Prosimii. [From New Latin Prosimiī, suborder name : Latin pro-, before; see PRO-¹ + Latin sīmīi, pl. of sīmius, ape (variant of sīmia); see SIMIAN.]

pro·sit (prɒst, prɒ'zīt) or prost (prɒst) interj. Used as a toast to someone's health while drinking. [German, from Latin, may it benefit, third person sing. subjunctive of prodesse, to benefit. See PROUD.]

pro·slav·er·y (prō-slāv'və-rē, -slāv'rē) adj. Advocating the practice of slavery.

pros·o·dy (prɒs'ə-dē) n. pl. pros·o·dies. Abbr. pros. 1. The study of the metrical structure of verse. 2. A particular system of versification. [Middle English prosodie, from Latin prosōdia, accent, from Greek prosōidia, song sung to music, accent : pros-, pros- + ōidē, song; see ODE.] — pro·sod'ic (prə-sɒd'ik) adj.

— pro·sod'i·cal·ly adv. — pros'o·dist n.

pro-so·ma (prō-sō'mə) n. The anterior or cephalic portion of the body of certain invertebrates, such as arachnids, in which segmentation is not evident. [PRO² + Greek sōma, body; see teuə- in Appendix.] —pro-so'mal adj.

pros·o·pog·ra·phy (prös'ə-pög'rə-fē) n. A study, often using statistics, that identifies and draws relationships between various characters or people within a specific historical, social, or literary context: “an authentic tour de force of historical writing: part intellectual history, part cultural history, part prosopography” (Josiah Bunting III). [Greek prosōpon, character; see PROSOPOPEIA + -GRAPHY.] —pros'o·po·graph'i·cal (-pə-gräf'ī-kəl) adj.

pro-so·po·pe·ia also pro-so·po·poe·ia (prə-sō'pə-pē'ə) n. 1. A figure of speech in which an absent or imaginary person is represented as speaking. 2. See personification (n., sense 3). [Latin prosōpopoeia, from Greek prosōpopoia : prosōpon, face, mask, dramatic character (pros-, pros- + ōpon, face from ōps, eye); see MYOPIA + poiein, to make; see k^wei-² in Appendix.] —pro-so'po·pe'ial adj.

prospect (prös'pĕkt') n. 1. Something expected; a possibility. 2. prospects. a. Chances. b. Financial expectations, especially of success. 3. a. A potential customer, client, or purchaser. b. A candidate deemed likely to succeed. 4. The direction in which an object, such as a building, faces; an outlook. 5. Something presented to the eye; a scene: a pleasant prospect. 6. The act of surveying or examining. 7. a. The location or probable location of a mineral deposit. b. An actual or probable mineral deposit. c. The mineral yield obtained by working an ore. — v. prospect-ed, prospect-ing, prospects. — v. tr. To search for or explore (a region) for mineral deposits or oil. — v. intr. To explore for mineral deposits or oil. [Middle English prospecte, from Latin prōspectus, distant view, from past participle of prōspicere, to look out : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + specere, to look at; see spek- in Appendix.]

pro-spec-tive (prə-spĕk'tiv) adj. 1. Likely or expected to happen. 2. Likely to become or be: prospective clients. —pro-spec'tive-ly adv.

prospec-tor (prös'pĕk'tər) n. One who explores an area for mineral deposits or oil.

pro-spec-tus (prə-spĕk'təs) n. 1. A formal summary of a proposed venture or project: She rewrote the prospectus of her dissertation three times before it was approved. 2. A document describing the chief features of something, such as a business, an educational program, or especially a stock offering or mutual fund, for prospective buyers, investors, or participants. [Latin prōspectus, distant view. See PROSPECT.]

pros-per (prös'pər) v. intr. pros-pered, pros-per-ing, pros-pers. To be fortunate or successful, especially in terms of one's finances; thrive. [Middle English prosperen, from Old French prosperer, from Latin prosperāre, to render fortunate, from prosperus, favorable. See spē- in Appendix.]

pros-per-i-ty (prō-spēr'ī-tē) n. The condition of being prosperous.

pros·per·ous (prɒs'pɛr-əs) adj. 1. Having success; flourishing: a prosperous new business. 2. Well-to-do; well-off: a prosperous family. 3. Propitious; favorable: a prosperous moment to make a decision. —pros'per·ous·ly adv.

—pros'per·ous·ness n.

prost (prɒst) interj. Variant of prosit.

pros·ta·cy·clin (prɒs'tə-sī'klɪn) n. A prostaglandin produced in the walls of blood vessels that acts as a vasodilator and inhibits platelet aggregation.

[PROSTA(TE) + CYCL(IC) + -IN.]

pros·ta·glan·din (prɒs'tə-glän'dɪn) n. Any of a group of hormonelike substances produced in various mammalian tissues that are derived from amino acids and mediate a wide range of physiological functions, such as metabolism, smooth muscle activity, and nerve transmission. [PROSTA(TE) + GLAND¹ + -IN.]

pros·tate (prɒs'tāt') n. The prostate gland. — adj. Of or relating to the prostate gland. [New Latin prostata, from Greek prostatēs (adēn), prostate (gland), from proīstanai, to set before : pro-, in front; see PRO-² + histanai, to set, place; see stā- in Appendix.] —pro·stat'ic (prō-stăt'ɪk) adj.

pros·ta·tec·to·my (prɒs'tə-tɛk'tə-mē) n. pl. pros·ta·tec·to·mies. Surgical removal of all or part of the prostate gland.

prostate gland (prɒs'tāt' glænd) n. A gland in male mammals surrounding the urethra at the base of the bladder that controls release of urine from the bladder and secretes a fluid which is a major constituent of semen.

pros·ta·tism (prɒs'tə-tɪz'əm) n. A disorder characterized by decreased force of urination and dysuria, usually resulting from enlargement of the prostate gland.

pros·ta·ti·tis (prɒs'tə-tī'tɪs) n. Inflammation of the prostate gland.

pros·the·sis (prɒs-thē'sɪs) n. pl. pros·the·ses (-sēz). 1. An artificial device used to replace a missing body part, such as a limb, a tooth, an eye, or a heart valve. 2. Replacement of a missing body part with such a device. [Greek, addition, from prostithenai, to add : pros-, pros- + tithenai, to put; see dhē- in Appendix.]

pros·thet·ic (prɒs-thɛt'ɪk) adj. 1. Serving as or relating to a prosthesis. 2. Of or relating to prosthetics. —pros·thet'i·cal·ly adv.

prosthetic group (prɒs-thɛt'ɪk grōp) n. Biochemistry. The nonprotein component of a conjugated protein, as the heme group in hemoglobin.

pros·thet·ics (prɒs-thɛt'ɪks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of medicine or surgery that deals with the production and application of artificial body parts. —pros'the·tist (prɒs'thɪ-tɪst) n.

pros·tho·don·tia (prɒs'thə-dɒn'shə) n. Prosthodontics. [PROSTH(ESIS) + -ODONTIA.]

pros·tho·don·tics (prɒs'thə-dɒn'tɪks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of dentistry that deals with the replacement of missing teeth and related mouth or jaw structures by bridges, dentures, or other artificial devices. [PROSTH(ESIS) + -ODONT(IA) + -ICS.] —pros'tho-don'tic adj. —pros'tho-don'tist n.

pros-ti-tute (prös'tī-tōōt', -tyōōt') n. 1. One who solicits and accepts payment for sex acts. 2. One who sells one's abilities, talent, or name for an unworthy purpose. — v. tr. pros-ti-tut-ed, pros-ti-tut-ing, pros-ti-tutes. 1. To offer (oneself or another) for sexual hire. 2. To sell (oneself or one's talent, for example) for an unworthy purpose. [Latin prōstitūta, from feminine past participle of prōstituere, to prostitute : prō-, in front; see PRO-¹ + statuere, to cause to stand; see stā- in Appendix.] —pros'ti-tu'tor n.

pros-ti-tu-tion (prös'tī-tōō'shən, -tyōō'-) n. 1. The act or practice of engaging in sex acts for hire. 2. The act or an instance of offering or devoting one's talent to an unworthy use or cause.

pro-sto-mi-um (prō-stō'mē-əm) n. pl. pro-sto-mi-a (-mē-ə). The portion of the head in earthworms and other annelids that is situated anterior to the mouth. [New Latin, from Greek prostomion, mouth, lips : Greek pro-, in front of; see PRO-² + Greek stomion, diminutive of stoma, mouth.] —pro-sto/mi-al (-əl) adj.

pros-trate (prös'trāt') v. tr. pros-trat-ed, pros-trat-ing, pros-trates. 1. To make (oneself) bow or kneel down in humility or adoration. 2. To throw down flat. 3. To lay low; overcome. — adj. 1. Lying face down, as in submission or adoration. 2. Lying down at full length. See Synonyms at prone. 3. Physically or emotionally incapacitated; overcome. 4. Botany. Growing flat along the ground. [Middle English prostraten, from prostrat, prostrate, from Latin prōstrātus, past participle of prōsternere, to throw down : pro-, forward; see PRO-¹ + sternere, to spread, cast down; see ster-² in Appendix.] —pros'tra'tor n.

pros-tra-tion (prö-strā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of prostrating oneself. b. The state of being prostrate. 2. Total exhaustion or weakness; collapse.

pro-style (prö'stīl') adj. Architecture. Having a row of columns across the front only, as in some Greek temples. [Latin prostȳlos, from Greek prostulos : pro-, in front; see PRO-² + stulos, pillar; see stā- in Appendix.]

pros-y (prö'zē) adj. pros-i-er, pros-i-est. 1. Matter-of-fact and dry; prosaic. 2. Dull; commonplace. [From PROSE.] —pros'i-ly adv. —pros'i-ness n.

Prot. abbr. Protestant.

prot- pref. Variant of proto-.

pro-tac-tin-i-um (prö'täk-tīn'ē-əm) n. Symbol Pa A rare, extremely toxic, radioactive element chemically similar to uranium, having 13 known isotopes, the most common of which is protactinium 231 with a half-life of 32,480 years. Atomic number 91; melting point 1,230°C; specific gravity 15.37; valence 4, 5. [PROT(O)- + ACTINIUM (so called because it disintegrates into actinium).]

pro-tag-o-nist (prö-täg'ə-nīst) n. 1. The main character in a drama or other literary work. 2. In ancient Greek drama, the first actor to engage in dialogue with the chorus, in later dramas playing the main character and some minor characters as well. 3. a. A leading or principal figure. b. The leader of a cause; a champion. 4. Usage Problem. A proponent; an advocate. [Greek prōtagōnistēs : prōto-, proto- + agōnistēs, actor, combatant (from agōnizesthai, to contend, from agōnia, contest, from agōn, from agein, to drive, lead); see ag- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The protagonist of a Greek drama was its leading actor, of whom there could be but one in any play. This is an etymological nicety that many modern writers continue to observe when using the word to refer to the main character of a drama or other fiction. Thus when the members of the Usage Panel were asked “How many protagonists are there in Othello?” the great majority answered “One” and offered substitutes such as antagonist, villain, principal, and deuteragonist to describe Desdemona and Iago. But there is reputable precedent from the 17th century on for using protagonist to mean simply “important actor” or “principal party,” with no implication of uniqueness, as in There are three protagonists in this sluggish novel. Smith and Jones were the protagonists in the struggle over the future of the computer company. Thus, while some writers may prefer to confine the word to a singular sense in their own usage, it is pedantic to insist that the looser use is incorrect. • The use of protagonist to refer to a proponent has become common only in the 20th century and may have been influenced by a misconception that the first syllable of the word represents the prefix pro-, “favoring.” In sentences such as He was an early protagonist of nuclear power, this use is likely to strike many readers as an error and can usually be replaced by advocate or proponent with no loss of sense.

Pro-tag-o-ras (prō-tăg'ər-əs), fl. fifth century B.C. Greek philosopher. Considered the first Sophist, he taught a philosophy based on his maxim “Man is the measure of all things.” —Pro-tag-o-re'an (-ə-rē'an) adj.

pro-ta-mine (prō'tə-mēn', -mīn) also pro-ta-min (-mīn) n. Any of a group of simple proteins found in fish sperm that are strongly basic, are soluble in water, are not coagulated by heat, and yield chiefly arginine upon hydrolysis. In purified form, they are used in a long-acting formulation of insulin and to neutralize the anticoagulant effects of heparin.

pro-tan-drous (prō-tăn'drəs) adj. Botany. Of or relating to a flower in which the anthers release their pollen before the stigma of the same flower is receptive. —pro-tan'dry (-drē) n.

pro-ta-no-pi-a (prō'tə-nō'pē-ə) n. A form of colorblindness characterized by defective perception of red and confusion of red with green or bluish green. [PROT(O)- + AN- + -OPIA (from the blindness to red, which is considered the first of the primary colors).] —pro'ta-nop'ic (-nöp'ik) adj.

prot-a-sis (pröt'ə-sis) n. pl. prot-a-ses (-sēz'). 1. Grammar. The subordinate clause of a conditional sentence, as if it rains in The game will be canceled if it rains. 2. The first part of an ancient Greek or Roman drama, in which the characters and subject are introduced. [Late Latin, proposition, first part of a play, from Greek, premise of a syllogism, conditional clause, from proteinein, to propose : pro-, forward; see PRO-² + teinein, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.]

—pro·tat'ic (prō-tăt'ĭk, prō-) adj.

prote- pref. Variant of proteo-.

pro·te·an (prō'tē-ən, prō-tē'-) adj. 1. Readily taking on varied shapes, forms, or meanings. 2. Exhibiting considerable variety or diversity: “He loved to show off his protean talent” (William A. Henry III). [From PROTEUS.]

pro·te·ase (prō'tē-ās', -āz') n. Any of various enzymes, including the proteinases and peptidases, that catalyze the hydrolytic breakdown of proteins.

protec. abbr. Protectorate.

pro·tect (prə-těkt') v. tr. pro·tect·ed, pro·tect·ing, pro·tects. 1. To keep from being damaged, attacked, stolen, or injured; guard. See Synonyms at defend. 2. To help (domestic industry) with tariffs or quotas on imported goods. 3. To assure payment of (drafts or notes, for example) by setting aside funds. [Middle English protecten, from Latin prōtegere, prōtēct- : prō-, in front; see PRO-¹ + tegere, to cover; see (s)teg- in Appendix.] —pro·tect'ing·ly adv.

pro·tec·tant (prə-těkt'tənt) n. One that protects: applied a protectant to the raw wood.

pro·tect·er (prə-těkt'tər) n. Variant of protector.

pro·tec·tion (prə-těkt'shən) n. 1. a. The act of protecting. b. The condition of being protected. 2. One that protects. 3. A pass guaranteeing safe-conduct to travelers. 4. A system of tariffs or other measures protecting domestic producers from foreign competition. 5. Slang. a. Money extorted by racketeers threatening violence for nonpayment. b. Bribes paid to officials by racketeers for immunity from prosecution. —pro·tec'tion·al adj.

pro·tec·tion·ism (prə-těkt'shə-nĭz'əm) n. The advocacy, system, or theory of protecting domestic producers by impeding or limiting, as by tariffs or quotas, the importation of foreign goods and services. —pro·tec'tion·ist n.

pro·tec·tive (prə-těkt'tĭv) adj. Adapted or intended to afford protection. — n. Something that protects. —pro·tec'tive·ly adv. —pro·tec'tive·ness n.

pro·tec·tor also pro·tect·er (prə-těkt'tər) n. 1. One who protects; a guardian. 2. A device that protects; a guard. 3. Protector. a. A person who rules a kingdom during the minority of a sovereign. b. The head of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland from 1653 to 1659. —pro·tec'tor·al adj.

—pro·tec'tor·ship' n.

pro·tec·tor·ate (prə-těkt'tər-ĭt) n. Abbr. protec. 1. a. A relationship of protection and partial control assumed by a superior power over a dependent country or region. b. The protected country or region. 2. Protectorate. a. The government, office, or term of a protector. b. The government of England under pro-tec-to-ry (prə-tĕk'tə-rē) n. pl. pro-tec-to-ries. An institution providing for the welfare of homeless, destitute, or delinquent children.

Oliver Cromwell and his son Richard, ruling as Lord Protector of the Commonwealth.

pro-té-gé (prō'tə-zhā', prō'tə-zhā') n. One whose welfare, training, or career is promoted by an influential person. [French, from past participle of protéger, to protect, from Old French, from Latin prōtegere. See PROTECT.]

pro-té-gée (prō'tə-zhā', prō'tə-zhā') n. A woman or girl whose welfare, training, or career is promoted by an influential person. [French, feminine of protégé, protégé. See PROTÉGÉ.]

pro-te-i (prō'tē-ī') n. Plural of proteus.

pro-te-id (prō'tē-īd) n. A protein. No longer in scientific use.

pro-te-in (prō'tēn', -tē-ĭn) n. Any of a group of complex organic macromolecules that contain carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, and usually sulfur and are composed of one or more chains of amino acids. Proteins are fundamental components of all living cells and include many substances, such as enzymes, hormones, and antibodies, that are necessary for the proper functioning of an organism. They are essential in the diet of animals for the growth and repair of tissue and can be obtained from foods such as meat, fish, eggs, milk, and legumes. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: protein compounds; protein diets. [French protéine, from Late Greek prōteios, of the first quality, from Greek prōtos, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] — pro'tein-a'ceous (prōt'n-ā'shəs, prō'tē-nā'-), pro'te-in'ic (prō'tē-ĭn'ĭk) adj.

pro-te-in-ase (prōt'n-ās', -āz', prō'tē-nās', -nāz') n. A protease that begins the hydrolytic breakdown of proteins usually by splitting them into polypeptide chains.

pro-te-in-oid (prōt'n-oid', prō'tē-noid') n. A proteinlike polypeptide formed abiotically from amino acid mixtures in the presence of heat, thought to resemble early evolutionary forms of protein.

pro-te-in-u-ri-a (prōt'n-ōōr'ē-ə, -yōōr'-, prō'tē-nōōr'-, -nyōōr'-) n. The presence of excessive amounts of protein in the urine.

pro tem (prō tĕm') adv. Pro tempore.

pro tem-po-re (prō tĕm'pə-rē) adv. Abbr. p.t. For the time being; temporarily. [Latin prō tempore: prō, for + tempore, ablative of tempus, time.]

proteo- or prote- pref. Protein: proteolysis. [From PROTEIN.]

pro-te-o-clas-tic (prō'tē-ō-klās'tĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or causing proteolysis; proteolytic. [PROTEO- + Greek klastos, broken (from klan, to break) + -IC.]

pro-te-ol-y-sis (prō'tē-ōl'ĭ-sĭs) n. The hydrolytic breakdown of proteins into simpler, soluble substances, as occurs in digestion.

pro-te-o-lyt-ic (prō'tē-ə-lĭt'ĭk) adj. Relating to, characterized by, or promoting proteolysis. — pro'te-o-lyt'i-cal-ly adv.

pro-te-ose (prō'tē-ōs', -ōz') n. Any of various water-soluble compounds that are produced during digestion by the hydrolytic breakdown of proteins.

Prot-er-o-zo-ic (prōt'ər-ə-zō'ik, prō'tər-) adj. Of, belonging to, or being the later of two divisions of Precambrian time, during which sponges, sea worms, and other forms of sea life appeared. — n. The Proterozoic Eon. [Greek prot-eros, earlier, former; see per¹ in Appendix + -ZOIC.]

pro-test (prə-tĕst', prō-, prō'tĕst') v. pro-test-ed, pro-test-ing, pro-tests. — v. tr. 1. To object to, especially in a formal statement. See Synonyms at object. 2. To promise or affirm with earnest solemnity: "He continually protested his profound respect" (Frank Norris). 3. Law. To declare (a bill) dishonored or refused. 4. Archaic. To proclaim or make known: "unrough youths that even now/Protest their first of manhood" (Shakespeare). — v. intr. 1. To express strong objection. 2. To make an earnest avowal or affirmation. — n. (prō'tĕst') 1. A formal declaration of disapproval or objection issued by a concerned person, group, or organization. 2. An individual or collective gesture or display of disapproval. 3. Law. a. A formal statement drawn up by a notary for a creditor declaring that the debtor has refused to accept or honor a bill. b. A formal declaration made by a taxpayer stating that the tax demanded is illegal or excessive and reserving the right to contest it. [Middle English protesten, from Old French protester, from Latin prōtestārī: prō-, forth; see PRO-¹ + testārī, to testify (from testis, witness); see trei- in Appendix.] — pro-test'er n. — pro-test'ing-ly adv.

Prot-es-tant (prōt'ī-stənt) n. Abbr. Prot. Theology. 1. A member of a Western Christian church whose faith and practice are founded on the principles of the Protestant Reformation, especially in the acceptance of the Bible as the sole source of revelation, in justification by faith alone, and in the universal priesthood of all the believers. 2. A member of a Western Christian church adhering to the theologies of Luther, Calvin, or Zwingli. 3. One who supported the protestation presented by the German Lutheran states against the revocation of the decree of the Diet of Speyer (1529). 4. protestant (also prə-tĕs'tənt). One who makes a declaration or an avowal. — adj. Abbr. Prot. Of or relating to Protestants or Protestantism. [French, from German, from Latin prōtestāns, prōtestant- present participle of prōtestārī, to protest. See PROTEST.]

Protestant Episcopal Church (prōt'ī-stənt ĩ-pĭs'kə-pəl chŭrch) n. The Episcopal Church.

Prot-es-tant-ism (prōt'ī-stən-tĭz'əm) n. 1. Adherence to the religion and beliefs of a Protestant church. 2. The religion and religious beliefs fostered by the Protestant movement. 3. Protestants considered as a group.

prot-es-ta-tion (prōt'ī-stā'shən, prō'tĭ-, -tĕ-) n. 1. An emphatic declaration. 2. A strong or formal expression of dissent.

pro-te-us (prō'tē-əs) n. pl. pro-te-i (-tē-ī'). Any of various gram-negative, rod-shaped bacteria of the genus Proteus, certain species of which are associated with human enteritis and urinary tract infections. [New Latin Prôteus, genus name, from Latin, Proteus. See PROTEUS.]

Pro-te-us (prō'tē-əs, -tyōs') n. Greek Mythology. A sea god who could change his shape at will. [Latin Prôteus, from Greek.]

pro-tha-la-mi-on (prō'thə-lā'mē-ən, -ōn') n. pl. pro-tha-la-mi-a (-mē-ə). Music. A song in celebration of a wedding; an epithalamium. [PRO-² + Greek epithalamion, epithalamium; see EPITHALAMIUM.]

pro-thal-lus (prō-thāl'əs) or pro-thal-li-um (-thāl'ē-əm) n. pl. pro-thal-li (-thāl'ī) or pro-thal-li-a (-thāl'ē-ə). A small, flat, delicate structure produced by a germinating spore and bearing sex organs. It is the gametophyte of ferns and some other plants. [New Latin : PRO-² + Greek thallos, shoot (from thallein, to sprout).] —pro-thal'li-al (-lē-əl) adj.

proth-e-sis (prōth'ī-sīs) n. pl. proth-e-ses (-sēz'). Linguistics. The addition of a phoneme or syllable at the beginning of a word, as in Spanish espina, “thorn,” from Latin spina. [Greek, prefixing, from protithenai, to put before : pro-, before; see PRO-² + tithenai, to put; see dhē- in Appendix.] —pro-thet'ic (prō-thēt'ik) adj. —pro-thet'i-cal-ly adv.

pro-thon-o-tar-y (prō-thōn'ə-tēr'ē, prō'thə-nō'tə-rē) also pro-ton-o-tar-y (prō-tōn'ə-tēr'ē, prō'tə-nō'tə-rē) n. pl. pro-thon-o-tar-ies. 1. The principal clerk in certain courts of law. 2. Roman Catholic Church. One of a college of 12 ecclesiastics charged with the registry of important pontifical proceedings. [Middle English prothonotarie, from Medieval Latin prōthonotārius, from Late Latin prōtonotārius : Greek prōto-, proto- + Latin notārius, secretary (from nota, mark); see gnō- in Appendix.] —pro-thon'o-tar'i-al (prō-thōn'ə-tār'ē-əl, prō'thə-nō-tār'-) adj.

prothonotary warbler (prō-thōn'ə-tēr'ē wôr'blər) n. A small North American bird (Protonotaria citrea) having a deep yellow head and breast and inhabiting wooded swamps. [Probably from the bright yellow robes worn by ecclesiastics at important meetings.]

pro-tho-ra-ces (prō-thô'r'ə-sēz', -thôr'-) n. A plural of prothorax.

prothoracic gland (prō-thô-rās'ik glānd) n. Either of a pair of endocrine glands located in the prothorax of certain insects and regulating molting.

pro-tho-rax (prō-thô'r'äks', -thôr'-) *n. pl. pro-tho-rax-es or pro-tho-ra-ces (-thô'r'ə-sēz', -thôr'-). The anterior division of the thorax of an insect, bearing the first pair of legs. —pro'tho-rac'ic (prō'thə-rās'ik) *adj.

pro-throm-bin (prō-thrōm'bĭn) n. A plasma protein that is converted into thrombin during blood clotting.

pro-tist (prō'tĭst) n. Any of the eukaryotic, unicellular organisms of the former kingdom Protista, which includes protozoans, slime molds, and certain algae. The protists now belong to the kingdom Protoctista, a new classification in most modern taxonomic systems. [From New Latin Protista, former kingdom name, from Greek prōtista, neuter pl. of prōtistos, the very first superlative of prōtos, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] —pro-tis'tan (-tīs'tən) adj., n. —pro'-tis·tol'o·gy (prō'tī-stōl'ə-jē) n.

pro-ti-um (prō'tē-əm, prō'shē-) n. The most abundant isotope of hydrogen, H₁, with atomic mass 1.

proto- or prot- pref. 1. First in time; earliest: protolithic. 2. First formed; primitive; original: protohuman. 3. Proto- Being a form of a language that is the ancestor of a language or group of related languages: Proto-Germanic. 4. Having the least amount of a specified element or radical: protoporphyrin. [Greek prōto-, from prōtos. See per¹ in Appendix.]

Pro-to-Al-gon-qui-an (prō'tō-äl-gōng'kwē-ən, -kē-ən) n. The reconstructed protolanguage of the Algonquian family of languages.

pro-to-col (prō'tə-kōl', -kōl', -kōl') n. 1. a. The forms of ceremony and etiquette observed by diplomats and heads of state. b. A code of correct conduct: a violation of safety protocols; academic protocol. See Synonyms at etiquette. 2. The first copy of a treaty or other such document before its ratification. 3. A preliminary draft or record of a transaction. 4. The plan for a course of medical treatment or for a scientific experiment. 5. Computer Science. A standard procedure for regulating data transmission between computers. — v. intr.

pro-to-coled or pro-to-colled, pro-to-col-ing or pro-to-col-ling, pro-to-cols or pro-to·cols. To form or issue protocols. [French protocole, from Old French prothocolle, draft of a document, from Medieval Latin prōtocollum, from Late Greek prōtokollon, table of contents, first sheet : Greek prōto-, proto- + Greek kollēma, sheets of a papyrus glued together (from kollan, to glue together, from kolla, glue).] —pro'to-col'ar (-kōl'ər), pro'to-col'a-ry (-kōl'ə-rē) adj.

pro-to-con-ti-nent (prō'tō-kōn'tə-nənt) n. 1. A landmass, actual or hypothetical, that could develop into a major continent. 2. See supercontinent.

pro-toc-tist (prə-tōk'tīst) n. Any of the unicellular protists and their descendant multicellular organisms, considered as a separate taxonomic kingdom in most modern classification systems. [From New Latin Prōtoctista, kingdom name : Greek prōto-, proto- + Greek ktistos, produced, created (from ktizein, to create, establish).]

pro-to-derm (prō'tə-dûrm') n. Botany. See dermatogen. —pro'to-derm'al adj.

Pro-to-Ger-man-ic (prō'tō-jûr-măn'ik) n. The reconstructed prehistoric ancestor of the Germanic languages.

pro-to-gy-nous (prō'tə-jī'nəs, -gī'-) adj. Of or relating to a flower in which the stigma is receptive before the pollen is shed from the anthers of the same flower. —pro-tog'y-ny (prō-tōj'ə-nē) n.

pro-to-his-to-ry (prō'tō-hīs'tə-rē, -hīs'trē) n. The study of a culture just before the time of its earliest recorded history. — pro'to-his-tor'i-an (-hī-stōr'ē-ən, -stōr'-) n. — pro'to-his-tor'ic (-hī-stōr'īk, -stōr'-) adj.

pro-to-hu-man (prō'tō-hyōō'mən) adj. Of or relating to various extinct hominids or other primates that resemble modern human beings. — n. A protohuman primate.

Pro-to-In-do-Eur-o-pe-an (prō'tō-īn'dō-yōōr'ə-pē'ən) n. The reconstructed language that was the ancestor of the Indo-European languages. — adj. Of, relating to, or being Proto-Indo-European or one of its reconstructed linguistic features.

pro-to-lan-guage (prō'tō-läng'gwāj) n. A language that is the recorded or hypothetical ancestor of another language or group of languages. Also called Ursprache pro-to-lith-ic (prō'tə-līth'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the very beginning of the Stone Age; Eolithic.

pro-to-mar-tyr (prō'tō-mär'tər) n. The first martyr in a cause. Used especially of the first Christian martyr, Saint Stephen.

pro-to-mor-phic (prō'tə-môr'fīk) adj. Primitive in structure or form. — pro'to-morph' n.

pro-ton (prō'tōn') n. Abbr. p Physics. A stable, positively charged subatomic particle in the baryon family having a mass 1,836 times that of the electron. [From Greek prōton, neuter of prōtos, first. See per¹ in Appendix.] — pro-ton'ic adj.

pro-to-ne-ma (prō'tə-nē'mə) n. pl. pro-to-ne-ma-ta (-nē'mə-tə, -nēm'ə-). The green, filamentous growth that arises from spore germination in liverworts and mosses and eventually gives rise to a mature gametophyte. [PROTO- + Greek nēma, thread; see (s)nē- in Appendix.] — pro'to-ne'mal (-nē'məl), pro'to-ne'ma-tal (-nē'mə-təl, -nēm'ə-) adj.

pro-ton-o-tar-y (prō-tōn'ə-tēr'ē, prō'tə-nō'tə-rē) n. Variant of prothonotary.

proton synchrotron (prō'tōn' sīng'krə-trōn') n. Physics. A ring-shaped synchrotron that accelerates protons to energies of several billion electron volts.

pro-to-on-co-gene (prō'tō-ōn'kə-jēn', -ōng'kə-) n. A normal gene that has the potential to become an oncogene.

pro-to-path-ic (prō'tə-pāth'īk) adj. Sensing pain, pressure, heat, or cold in a nonspecific manner, usually without localizing the stimulus. Used especially of certain sensory nerves. [From Medieval Greek prōtopathēs, affected first, from Greek prōtopathein, to feel first : prōto-, proto- + paskhein, to feel.]

— pro-top'a-thy (-tōp'ə-thē) n.

pro-to-plasm (prō'tə-plāz'əm) n. The complex, semifluid, translucent substance that constitutes the living matter of plant and animal cells and manifests the essential life functions of a cell. Composed of proteins, fats, and other molecules suspended in water, it includes the nucleus and cytoplasm.

—pro'to·plas'mic (-plăz'mĭk), pro'to·plas'mal (-plăz'məl), pro'to·plas'mat'ic (-plăz-măt'ĭk) adj.

pro-to-plast (prō'tə-plăst') n. 1. Biology. The living material of a plant or bacterial cell, including the protoplasm and plasma membrane after the cell wall has been removed. 2. One that is the first made or formed; a prototype. [French protoplaste, from Old French, the first man, from Late Latin prōtoplastus, from Greek prōtoplastos : prōto-, proto- + plastos, formed, molded; see -PLAST.]

—pro'to·plas'tic adj.

pro-to-por-phy-rin (prō'tō-pôrfə-rĭn) n. A metal-free porphyrin, $C_{32}H_{32}N_4(COOH)_2$, that combines with iron to form the heme of hemoglobin, myoglobin, cytochrome, and other iron-containing proteins.

pro-to-stele (prō'tə-stēl', prō'tə-stē'lē) n. Botany. A stele that has a solid core of vascular tissue. —pro'to-ste'lic (-stē'lĭk) adj.

pro-to-tro-phic (prō'tə-trō'fĭk, -trōf'ĭk) adj. Microbiology. Having the same metabolic capabilities and nutritional requirements as the wild type parent strain: prototrophic bacteria. —pro'to-troph', pro'to-troph'y n.

pro-to-type (prō'tə-tĭp') n. 1. An original type, form, or instance that serves as a model on which later stages are based or judged. 2. An early, typical example. 3. Biology. A primitive or ancestral form or species. [French, from Greek prōtotupon, from neuter of prōtotupos, original : prōto-, proto- + tupos, model.]

—pro'to·typ'al (-tĭ'pəl), pro'to·typ'ic (-tĭp'ĭk), pro'to·typ'·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj.

pro-to-xy-lem (prō'tə-zī'ləm) n. Botany. The first formed xylem that differentiates from the procambium.

pro-to-zo-an (prō'tə-zō'ən) also pro-to-zo-on (-ōn') n. pl. pro-to-zo-ans or pro-to-zo-a (-zō'ə) also pro-to--zo-ons. Any of a large group of single-celled, usually microscopic, eukaryotic organisms, such as amoebas, ciliates, flagellates, and sporozoans. [From New Latin Protozoa, former subkingdom name : PROTO- + New Latin -zoa, pl. of -zoon, -zoon.] —pro'to·zo'an, pro'to·zo'al, pro'to·zo'ic adj.

pro-to-zo-ol-o-gy (prō'tə-zō-ōl'ə-jē) n. The biological study of protozoans. —pro'to·zo'o·log'i·cal (-zō'ə-lōj'ĭ-kəl) adj. —pro'to·zo-ol'o-gist n.

pro-to-zo-on (prō'tə-zō'ōn') n. Variant of protozoan.

pro-tract (prō-trăkt', prə-) v. tr. pro-tract-ed, pro-tract-ing, pro-tracts.

1. To draw out or lengthen in time; prolong: disputants who needlessly protracted the negotiations. 2. Mathematics. To draw to scale by means of a scale and protractor; plot. 3. Anatomy. To extend or protrude (a body part). [Latin prōtrahere, prōtrāct- : prō-, forth; see PRO-¹ + trahere, to drag.] —pro-tract'ed-ly (-trăk'tĭd-lē) adv. —pro-tract'ed-ness n. —pro-trac'tive adj.

pro-trac-tile (prō-trāk'təl, -tīl', prə-) also pro-tract-i-ble (-tə-bəl) adj. That can be protracted; extensible: protractile limbs and claws. —pro'trac-til/i-ty (prō'trāk-tīl'ī-tē) n.

pro-trac-tion (prō-trāk'shən, prə-) n. 1. a. The act of protracting. b. The state of being protracted. 2. Linguistics. The irregular lengthening of a normally short syllable.

pro-trac-tor (prō-trāk'tər, prə-) n. 1. Mathematics. A semicircular instrument for measuring and constructing angles. 2. An adjustable pattern used by tailors. 3. Anatomy. A muscle that extends a limb or other part.

pro-trude (prō-trōod') v. pro-trud-ed, pro-trud-ing, pro-trudes. — v. tr. To push or thrust outward. — v. intr. To jut out; project. See Synonyms at bulge. [Latin prōtrūdere: prō-, forward; see PRO-¹ + trūdere, to thrust; see treud- in Appendix.] —pro-trud'ent (-trōod'nt) adj.

pro-tru-sile (prō-trōō'səl, -sīl') also pro-tru-si-ble (-sə-bəl) adj. Capable of being thrust outward, as the proboscis of many insects. [Latin prōtrūsus, past participle of prōtrūdere, to protrude; see PROTRUDE + *-ile*¹.] —pro'tru-sil/i-ty (prō'trōō-sīl'ī-tē) n.

pro-tru-sion (prō-trōō'zhən) n. 1. a. The act of protruding. b. The state of being protruded. 2. Something that protrudes. [Latin prōtrūsus, past participle of prōtrūdere, to protrude; see PROTRUDE + -ion.]

pro-tru-sive (prō-trōō'sīv, prə-) adj. 1. Tending to protrude; protruding. 2. Unduly or disagreeably conspicuous; obtrusive. —pro-tru'sive-ly adv. —pro-tru'sive-ness n.

pro-tu-ber-ance (prō-tōō'bər-əns, -tyōō'-, prə-) n. 1. Something, such as a bulge, knob, or swelling, that protrudes. 2. The condition of being protuberant.

pro-tu-ber-an-cy (prō-tōō'bər-ən-sē, -tyōō'-, prə-) n. pl.

pro-tu-ber-an-cies. 1. Protuberance. 2. Something that is protuberant.

pro-tu-ber-ant (prō-tōō'bər-ənt, -tyōō'-, prə-) adj. Swelling outward; bulging. [Late Latin prōtūberāns, prōtūberant- present participle of prōtūberāre, to bulge out. See PROTUBERATE.] —pro-tu'ber-ant-ly adv.

pro-tu-ber-ate (prō-tōō'bə-rāt', -tyōō'-, prə-) v. intr. pro-tu-ber-at-ed, pro-tu-ber-at-ing, pro-tu-ber-ates. To swell or bulge. [Late Latin prōtūberāre, prōtūberāt-: Latin prō-, forth; see PRO-¹ + Latin tūber, a swelling; see teuə- in Appendix.] —pro-tu'ber-a'tion n.

proud (prəud) adj. proud-er, proud-est. 1. Feeling pleasurable satisfaction over an act, a possession, a quality, or a relationship by which one measures one's stature or self-worth: proud of one's child; proud to serve one's country.

2. Occasioning or being a reason for pride: "On January 1, 1900, Americans and Europeans greeted the twentieth century in the proud and certain belief that the next hundred years would make all things possible" (W. Bruce Lincoln). 3. Feeling or showing justifiable self-respect. 4. Filled with or showing excessive self-esteem.

5. Of great dignity; honored: a proud name. 6. Majestic; magnificent: proud alpine peaks. 7. Spirited. Used of an animal: proud steeds. [Middle English, from Old English prūd, from Old French prou, prud, brave, virtuous, oblique case of prouz, from Vulgar Latin prōdis*, from Late Latin prōde, advantageous, from Latin prōdesse, to be good : prōd-, for (variant of prō-); see PRO-¹ + esse, to be; see es- in Appendix.] —proud/ly adv. —proud/ness n.

SYNONYMS: proud, arrogant, haughty, disdainful, supercilious. These adjectives mean filled with or marked by a high opinion of oneself and disdain for what one views as being unworthy. Proud can suggest dignity or justifiable self-respect or self-satisfaction, but it often implies conceit or vanity: “There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight” (Woodrow Wilson). “I pray God to keep me from being proud” (Samuel Pepys). One who is arrogant is overbearingly proud and demands more power or consideration than is warranted: “All sensibly gave him wide berth, for he was a dangerous-looking man, chewing a toothpick with the arrogant sullenness of one who is willing to commit violence” (Stephen Hunter). Haughty suggests lofty, condescending pride, as by reason of high birth or station: “We hardly know an instance of the strength and weakness of human nature so striking and so grotesque as the character of this haughty, vigilant, resolute, sagacious blue-stocking [Frederick the Great]” (Macaulay). Disdainful emphasizes scorn or contempt: “Nor [let] grandeur hear with a disdainful smile, / The short and simple annals of the poor” (Thomas Gray). Supercilious implies haughty disdain: “His mother eyed me in silence with a supercilious air” (Tobias Smollett).

proud flesh (proud flēsh) n. Pathology. The swollen flesh that surrounds a healing wound, caused by excessive granulation. [From its swelling up.]

Prou-dhon (prōō-dōn'), Pierre Joseph. 1809-1865. French anarchist who believed that human moral development would ultimately eliminate the need for laws and government.

Proust (prōōst), Marcel. 1871-1922. French writer whose seven-part novel Remembrance of Things Past (1913-1927) is among the great works of modern literature. —Proust/i-an adj.

prov. abbr. 1. Province; provincial. 2. Provisional. 3. Provost.

Prov. abbr. 1. Provençal. 2. Bible. Proverbs.

prove (prōōv) v. proved or prov-en (prōō'vən), prov-ing, proves. — v. tr.

- 1. To establish the truth or validity of by presentation of argument or evidence.
- 2. Law. To establish the authenticity of (a will).
- 3. To determine the quality of by testing; try out.
- 4. Mathematics. a. To demonstrate the validity of (a hypothesis or proposition). b. To verify (the result of a calculation).
- 5. Printing. To make a sample impression of (type).
- 6. Archaic. To find out or learn (something) through experience. — v. intr. To be shown to be such; turn out: a theory that proved impractical in practice. —phrasal verb. prove out. To turn out well; succeed. [Middle English proven, from Old French prover, from Latin probāre, to test, from probus, good. See per¹ in Appendix.] —prov'a-bil'i-ty, prov'a-ble-ness n. —prov'a-ble adj. —prov'a-bly adv. —prov'er n.

USAGE NOTE: Proved is actually the older form of the past participle; proven is a Scottish variant that was first introduced into wider usage in legal contexts: The jury ruled that the charges were not proven. Both forms are now well established in written English as participles: He has proved (or proven) his point. The claims have not been proved (or proven). However, proven is more common when the word is used as an adjective before a noun: a proven talent.

prov-en (prōō'vən) v. A past tense and a past participle of prove. — adj.

Having been demonstrated or verified without doubt: “a Soviet leader of proven shrewdness and prescience” (Joyce Carol Oates). See Usage Note at prove.

—prov'en-ly adv.

prov-e-nance (prōv'ə-nəns, -nəns') n. 1. Place of origin; derivation. 2. Proof of authenticity or of past ownership. Used of art works and antiques. [French, from provenant, present participle of provenir, to originate, from Old French, from Latin prōvenīre: prō-, forth; see PRO-¹ + venīre, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

Pro-ven-çal (prō'vən-säl', -vən-, prōv'ən-) adj. Of or relating to Provence or its people, language, or culture. — n. Abbr. Prov. 1. The Romance language of Provence. 2. pl. Pro-ven-çals or Pro-ven-çaux (-sō'). A native or inhabitant of Provence. [French, from Latin prōvinciālis, from prōvincia, province.]

Pro-ven-ce (prə-vāns', prō-vāns') A historical region and former province of southeast France bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. It was settled c. 600 B.C. by Greeks and later by Phoenician merchants and was colonized by Rome in the second century B.C. Provence became part of the kingdom of Arles in 933 A.D. and later passed to the Angevin dynasty (1246) and to France (1486).

prov-en-der (prōv'ən-dər) n. 1. Dry food, such as hay, used as feed for livestock. 2. Food or provisions. [Middle English provendre, from Old French, alteration of provende, from Vulgar Latin prōvenda*, alteration (influenced by Latin prōvidēre, to provide), of Late Latin praebenda. See PREBEND.]

pro-ve-nience (prə-vēn'yəns, -vē'nē-əns) n. A source or an origin. [Alteration of PROVENANCE.]

pro-ven-tric-u-lus (prō'vən-trīk'yə-ləs) n. pl. pro-ven-tric-u-li (-lī'). 1. The division of the stomach in birds that secretes digestive enzymes and passes food from the crop to the gizzard. 2. A similar digestive chamber in certain insects and worms. [PRO-² + Latin ventriculus, stomach, diminutive of venter, belly.]

—pro'ven-tric'u-lar (-lər) adj.

prov-erb (prɒv'ɜrb') n. 1. A short, pithy saying in frequent and widespread use that expresses a basic truth or practical precept. See Synonyms at saying.

2. Proverbs. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. Prov., Pr A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Middle English proverbe, from Old French, from Latin prōverbiūm : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + verbum, word; see wer⁻⁵ in Appendix.]

pro-ver-bi-al (prə-vɜr'bē-əl) adj. 1. Of the nature of a proverb. 2. Expressed in a proverb. 3. Widely referred to, as if the subject of a proverb; famous.

—pro-ver'bi-al-ly adv.

pro-vid-e (prə-vīd') v. pro-vid-ed, pro-vid-ing, pro-vides. — v. tr. 1. To furnish; supply: provide food and shelter for a family. 2. To make available; afford: a room that provides ample sunlight through French windows. 3. To set down as a stipulation: an agreement that provides deadlines for completion of the work. 4. Archaic. To make ready ahead of time; prepare. — v. intr. 1. To take measures in preparation: provided for the common defense of the states in time of war. 2. To supply means of subsistence: She provides for her family by working in a hospital. 3. To make a stipulation or condition: The Constitution provides for a bicameral legislature. [Middle English providen, from Latin prōvidēre, to provide for : prō-, forward; see PRO⁻¹ + vidēre, to see; see weid- in Appendix.]

pro-vid-ed (prə-vī'dīd) conj. On the condition; if: will pay the bonus provided the job is completed on time. See Usage Note at providing.

prov-i-dence (prɒv'i-dəns, -dəns') n. 1. Care or preparation in advance; foresight. 2. Prudent management; economy. 3. The care, guardianship, and control exercised by a deity; divine direction: "Some sought the key to history in the working of divine providence" (William Ebenstein). 4. Providence. God.

Providence The capital and largest city of Rhode Island, in the northeast part of the state on Narragansett Bay. It was founded by Roger Williams in 1636 as a haven for religious dissenters and became prosperous as a port in the 18th century. Providence was joint capital with Newport until 1900. Population, 160,728.

prov-i-dent (prɒv'i-dənt, -dənt') adj. 1. Providing for future needs or events. 2. Frugal; economical. [Middle English, from Latin prōvidēns, prōvident- present participle of prōvidēre, to provide for. See PROVIDE.] —prov'i-dent-ly adv.

prov-i-den-tial (prɒv'i-dēn'shəl) adj. 1. Of or resulting from divine providence. 2. Happening as if through divine intervention; opportune. See Synonyms at happy. —prov'i-den'tial-ly adv.

pro-vid-er (prə-vī'dər) n. 1. One who supplies a means of subsistence: parents who were good providers. 2. One that makes something, such as a service, available: primary health care providers.

pro-vid-ing (prə-vī'dɪŋ) conj. On the condition; provided.

USAGE NOTE: In the past some critics have maintained that provided is preferable to providing as a conjunction meaning "on condition that." The use of pro- viding has ample precedent, however, and cannot be considered incorrect.

prov·ince (pröv'ins) n. Abbr. prov. 1. A territory governed as an administrative or political unit of a country or an empire. 2. Ecclesiastical. A division of territory under the jurisdiction of an archbishop. 3. provinces. Areas of a country situated away from the capital or population center. 4. A comprehensive area of knowledge, activity, or interest: a topic falling within the province of ancient history. See Synonyms at field. 5. The range of one's proper duties and functions; scope or jurisdiction. 6. Ecology. An area of land, less extensive than a region, having a characteristic plant and animal population. 7. Any of various lands outside Italy conquered by the Romans and administered by them as self-contained units. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prōvincia.]

Prov·ince·town (pröv'ins-toun') A town of southeast Massachusetts on the tip of Cape Cod. Pilgrims first landed on the site in 1620 before sailing on to Plymouth. The town is a popular resort famed for the Provincetown Players (1915-1929), a theater group that presented many new works by Eugene O'Neill. Population, 3,374.

pro·vin·cial (prə-vĭn'shəl) adj. Abbr. prov. 1. Of or relating to a province. 2. Of or characteristic of people from the provinces; not fashionable or sophisticated: "Well-educated professional women.. made me feel uncomfortably provincial" (J.R. Salamanca). 3. Limited in perspective; narrow and self-centered. — n. Abbr. prov. 1. A native or inhabitant of the provinces. 2. A person who has provincial ideas or habits. —pro·vin'cial·ism, pro·vin'ci·al'i·ty (-shē-äl'ĭ-tē) n. —pro·vin'cial·ly adv.

pro·vin·cial·ize (prə-vĭn'shə-līz') v. tr. pro·vin·cial·ized, pro·vin·cial·iz·ing, pro·vin·cial·iz·es. To make provincial. —pro·vin'cial·i·za'tion (-shə-lĭ-zā'shən) n.

prov·ing ground (prōv'ĭng ground) n. A place for testing new devices, weapons, or theories.

pro·vi·rus (prō'vī'rəs, prō-vī'-) n. pl. pro·vi·rus·es. The precursor or latent form of a virus that is capable of being integrated into the genetic material of a host cell and being replicated with it. —pro'vi'ral (-rəl) adj.

pro·vi·sion (prə-vĭzh'ən) n. 1. The act of supplying or fitting out. 2. Something provided. 3. A preparatory action or measure. 4. provisions. A stock of necessary supplies, especially food. 5. A stipulation or qualification, especially a clause in a document or an agreement. — v. tr. pro·vi·sioned, pro·vi·sion·ing, pro·vi·sions. To supply with provisions. [Middle English, from Old French, forethought, from Latin prōvisiō, prōvisiōn-, from prōvisus, past participle of prōvidēre, to foresee, provide for. See PROVIDE.] —pro·vi'sion·er n.

pro·vi·sion·al (prə-vĭzh'ə-nəl) adj. Abbr. prov. Provided or serving only for the time being; temporary. See Synonyms at temporary. — n. 1. A person hired temporarily for a job, typically before having taken an examination qualifying the person for permanent employment: police and fire department provisionals. 2. Provisional. A member of the extremist faction of the Irish Republican Army established in 1970. —pro-vi/sion-al-ly adv.

pro-vi-so (prə-vī'zō) n. pl. pro-vi-sos or pro-vi-soes. A clause in a document making a qualification, condition, or restriction. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin prōvīsō (quod), provided (that), from Latin prōvīsō, ablative of prōvīsus past participle of prōvidēre, to provide. See PROVIDE.]

pro-vi-so-ry (prə-vī'zə-rē) adj. Depending on a proviso; conditional. [French provisoire, from Old French, from Medieval Latin prōvīsōrius, from Latin prōvīsus, past participle of prōvidēre, to provide for. See PROVIDE.] —pro-vi/so-ri-ly adv.

pro-vi-ta-min (prō-vī'tə-mĭn) n. A vitamin precursor that the body converts to its active form through normal metabolic processes. Carotene, for example, is a provitamin of vitamin A.

Pro-vo¹ (prō'vō) A city of north-central Utah south-southeast of Salt Lake City. It was settled by Mormons in 1849 and is the seat of Brigham Young University (established 1875). Population, 86,835.

Pro-vo² (prō'vō) n. pl. Pro-vos. One of the members of the extremist faction of the Irish Republican Army. [Shortening and alteration of Provisional (Wing), name of the faction.]

pro-vo-ca-teur (prō-vōk'ə-tūr) n. An agent provocateur.

prov-o-ca-tion (prōv'ə-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of provoking or inciting.

2. Something that provokes. [Middle English provocacioun, from Old French provocation, from Latin prōvocātiō, prōvocātiōn-, a challenging, from prōvocātus, past participle of prōvocāre, to challenge. See PROVOKE.]

pro-voc-a-tive (prə-vōk'ə-tĭv) adj. Tending to provoke. —pro-voc'a-tive n. —pro-voc'a-tive-ly adv. —pro-voc'a-tive-ness n.

pro-voke (prə-vōk') v. tr. pro-voked, pro-vok-ing, pro-vokes. 1. To incite to anger or resentment. 2. To stir to action or feeling. 3. To give rise to; evoke: provoke laughter. 4. To bring about deliberately; induce: provoke a fight. [Middle English provoken, from Old French provoquer, from Latin prōvocāre, to challenge : prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + vocāre, to call; see wek^w- in Appendix.]

—pro-vok'ing-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: provoke, incite, excite, stimulate, arouse, rouse, stir. These verbs are compared in the sense of moving a person to action or feeling or summoning something into being by moving a person in this way. Provoke, the least explicit with respect to means, frequently does little more than state the consequences produced: “Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath” (Shakespeare). “A situation which in the country would have provoked meetings” (John Galsworthy). To incite is to provoke and urge on: The insurrection was incited by members of the outlawed opposition. Excite especially implies the provoking of a strong reaction or powerful emotion: The play is bound to fail; the plot excites little interest or curiosity. To stimulate is to excite to activity or to renewed vigor of action as if by spurring or goading: “Our vigilance was stimulated by our finding traces of a large... encampment” (Francis Parkman). Arouse and rouse suggest awakening, as from inactivity or apathy; rouse, the stronger term, often implies incitement to vigorous or animated activity or excitement of strong emotion: “In a democratic society like ours, relief must come through an aroused popular conscience that sears the conscience of the people’s representatives” (Felix Frankfurter). “His mother... endeavored to rouse him from this passive state” (Washington Irving). “The oceangoing steamers... roused in him wild and painful longings” (Arnold Bennett). To stir is to prompt to activity, to arouse strong but usually agreeable feelings, or to provoke trouble or commotion: “It was him as stirred up th’ young woman to preach last night” (George Eliot). “I have seldom been so... stirred by any piece of writing” (Mark Twain). “Men blame you that you have stirred a quarrel up” (William Butler Yeats). See also Synonyms at annoy pro-vok-ing (prə-vō’kĭŋ) adj. Troubling the nerves or peace of mind, as by repeated vexations: a provoking delay at the airport. —pro-vok’ing-ly adv.

pro-vo-lo-ne (prō’və-lō’nē) n. A hard, usually smoked Italian cheese. [Italian, augmentative of provola, a kind of cheese.]

pro-vost (prō’vōst’, -vəst, prōv’əst) n. Abbr. prov. 1. A university administrator of high rank. 2. The highest official in certain cathedrals or collegiate churches. 3. The keeper of a prison. 4. The chief magistrate of certain Scottish cities. [Middle English, from Old English profost, and Old French provost both from Medieval Latin prōpositus, alteration of Latin praepositus, person placed over others, superintendent, from past participle of praepōnere, to place over : prae-, pre- + pōnere, to put; see apo- in Appendix.]

pro-vost marshal (prō’vō mār’shəl) n. Abbr. PM, P.M. The head of a unit of military police.

pro-w (prou) n. 1. Nautical. The forward part of a ship’s hull; the bow. 2. A projecting forward part, such as the front end of a ski. [French proue, from Old French, from Italian dialectal prua, from Vulgar Latin prōda*, alteration of Latin prōra, from Greek prōira. See per¹ in Appendix.]

pro-w-ess (prou’is) n. 1. Superior skill or ability. 2. Superior strength, courage, or daring, especially in battle. [Middle English pro-wesse, from Old French proesse, from prud, prou, brave. See PROUD.]

pro-wl (proul) v. pro-wled, pro-wl-ing, pro-wls. — v. tr. To roam through stealthily, as in search of prey or plunder: pro-wled the alleys of the city after dark. — v. intr. To rove furtively or with predatory intent: cats pro-wling through the neighborhood. — n. The act or an instance of prowling. — idiom. on the prowl. Actively looking for something: salespeople on the prowl for better jobs. [Middle English prollen, to move about.] — prowl'er n.

prowl car (proul kär) n. See squad car.

prox. abbr. Proximo.

prox·e·mics (prök-sē'mīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the cultural, behavioral, and sociological aspects of spatial distances between individuals. [PROX(IMITY) + -emics (as in PHONEMICS).] — prox·e'mic adj.

prox·i·mal (prök'sə-məl) adj. 1. Nearest; proximate. 2. Anatomy. Nearer to a point of reference such as an origin, a point of attachment, or the midline of the body: the proximal end of a bone. [From Latin proximus, nearest. See PROXIMATE.]

— prox'i-mal·ly adv.

prox·i·mate (prök'sə-mīt) adj. 1. Closely related in space, time, or order; very near. See Synonyms at close. 2. Approximate. [Latin proximātus, past participle of proximāre, to come near, from proximus, nearest. See per¹ in Appendix.]

— prox'i-mate-ly adv. — prox'i-mate-ness n.

prox·im·i·ty (prök-sīm'i-tē) n. The state, quality, sense, or fact of being near or next; closeness: “Swift's major writings have a proximity and a relevance that is splendidly invigorating” (M.D. Aeschliman). See Usage Note at close. See Usage Note at redundancy. [Middle English, from Old French proximite, from Latin proximitās, from proximus, nearest. See PROXIMATE.]

proximity fuze (prök-sīm'i-tē fyōōz) n. An electronic device for detonating a warhead as it approaches a target, used in anti-aircraft shells. Also called VT fuze prox·i·mo (prök'sə-mō') adv. Abbr. prox. Archaic. Of or in the following month. [Latin proximō (mēnse), in the next (month), from proximō, ablative of proximus, nearest, next. See PROXIMATE.]

prox·y (prök'sē) n. pl. prox·ies. 1. A person authorized to act for another; an agent or a substitute. 2. The authority to act for another. 3. The written authorization to act in place of another. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a proxy vote; proxy troops for a world power. [Middle English proccy, contraction of earlier procracie, annual payment to a prelate, from Anglo-Norman procuracie, from Medieval Latin prōcūrātia, alteration of Latin prōcūrātiō, from prōcūrātus, past participle of prōcūrāre, to take care of. See PROCURE.]

Pro-zac (prō'zāk') A trademark for an antidepressant drug that inhibits the uptake of serotonin by the central nervous system.

prude (prōōd) n. One who is excessively concerned with being or appearing to be proper, modest, or righteous. [French, short for prude femme, virtuous woman : Old French prude, feminine of prud, virtuous; see PROUD + French femme, woman (from Latin fēmina); see FEMININE.]

WORD HISTORY: Being a prude has never been widely considered a good thing, but if we dig further into the history of the word prude, we will find that it had a noble past. The change for the worse took place in French. French prude first had a good sense, “wise woman,” but apparently a woman could be too wise or, in the eyes of some, too observant of decorum and propriety, and so prude took on the sense in French that was brought into English along with the word, first recorded in 1704. The French word first meant “wise woman” because prude was a shortened form of prude femme (earlier in Old French prode femme), a word that was modeled on earlier preudomme, “a man of experience and integrity.” The second part of this word is, of course, homme, “man.” Old French prod, meaning “wise, prudent,” is from Vulgar Latin prōdis with the same sense. Prōdis in turn comes from Late Latin prōde, “advantageous,” derived from the verb prodesse, “to be good.” We can see that the history of prude is filled with usefulness, profit, wisdom, and integrity, but in spite of all this, things did not turn out that well.

pru-dence (prōd'ns) n. 1. The state, quality, or fact of being prudent.
2. Careful management; economy.

SYNONYMS: prudence, discretion, foresight, forethought, circumspection. These nouns are compared as they refer to the exercise of good judgment and common sense, especially in the conduct of practical matters. Prudence, the most comprehensive, implies not only caution but also the capacity for judging in advance the probable results of one's actions: “She had been forced into prudence in her youth, she learned romance as she grew older” (Jane Austen). Discretion suggests prudence coupled with wise self-restraint, as in resisting the impulse to take rash action: “The better part of valor is discretion” (Shakespeare). Foresight implies the ability to foresee and make provision for what may happen: She had the foresight to realize that once the ugly rumor had begun to circulate, only the truth could put it to rest. Forethought suggests advance consideration of future eventualities: An empty refrigerator illustrates a lack of forethought. Circumspection implies discretion together with prudent heed for possible consequences, as out of concern for moral or social repercussions: “The necessity of the times, more than ever, calls for our utmost circumspection, deliberation, fortitude and perseverance” (Samuel Adams).

pru-dent (prōd'nt) adj. 1. Wise in handling practical matters; exercising good judgment or common sense. 2. Careful in regard to one's own interests; provident. 3. Careful about one's conduct; circumspect. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin prūdēns, prudent-, contraction of prōvidēns, present participle of prōvidēre, to provide for. See PROVIDE.] —pru'dent-ly adv.

pru·den·tial (prōō-dĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Arising from or characterized by prudence. 2. Exercising prudence, good judgment, or common sense. —pru·den·tial·ly adv.

prud·er·y (prōō'də-rĕ) n. pl. prud·er·ies. 1. The state or quality of being prudish. 2. An instance of prudish behavior or talk. [French pruderie, from prude, prude. See PRUDE.]

Prud·hoe Bay (prōōd'hō bā, prŭd'-) An inlet of the Arctic Ocean on the northern coast of Alaska east of the Colville River delta. Extensive oil reserves were discovered here in 1968.

prud·ish (prōō'dĭsh) adj. Marked by or exhibiting the characteristics of a prude; priggish. —prud'ish·ly adv. —prud'ish·ness n.

pru·i·nose (prōō'ə-nōs') adj. Botany. Having a white, powdery covering or bloom. [Latin pruinōsus, frosty, from prūina, hoarfrost. See preus- in Appendix.]

prune¹ (prōōn) n. 1. a. The partially dried fruit of any of several varieties of the common plum, Prunus domestica. b. Any kind of plum that can be dried without spoiling. 2. Slang. An ill-tempered, stupid, or incompetent person. — v. intr. pruned, prun·ing, prunes. Slang. To make a facial expression exhibiting ill temper or disgust: “Their faces prune at the slightest provocation” (James Wolcott). [Middle English, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin prūna*, from Latin prūnum, plum.]

prune² (prōōn) v. pruned, prun·ing, prunes. — v. tr. 1. To cut off or remove dead or living parts or branches of (a plant, for example) to improve shape or growth. 2. To remove or cut out as superfluous. 3. To reduce: prune a budget. — v. intr. To remove what is superfluous or undesirable. [Middle English prouinen, from Old French proignier, perhaps from Vulgar Latin prōretundiāre*: Latin prō-, in front; see PRO⁻¹ + Latin rotundus, round (from rota, wheel); see ret- in Appendix.] —prun'er n.

pru·nel·la (prōō-nĕl'ə) also pru·nel·lo (-nĕl'ō) n. pl. pru·nel·las also pru·nel·los. A strong, heavy fabric of worsted twill, used chiefly for shoe uppers, clerical robes, and academic gowns. [Alteration of French prunelle, sloe, from Old French, diminutive of prune, prune. See PRUNE¹.]

pru·nelle (prōō-nĕl') n. A brownish sloe-flavored French liqueur. [French. See PRUNELLA.]

pru·nel·lo (prōō-nĕl'ō) n. Variant of prunella.

prun·ing hook (prōō'nĭng hōök) n. A long pole with a curved saw blade and usually a clipping mechanism on one end, used especially for pruning small trees.

pru·ri·ent (prōōr'ĕ-ənt) adj. 1. Inordinately interested in matters of sex; lascivious. 2. a. Characterized by an inordinate interest in sex: prurient thoughts. b. Arousing or appealing to an inordinate interest in sex: prurient literature.

[Latin prūriēns, prūriēnt- present participle of prūrīre, to yearn for, itch. See preus- in Appendix.] —pru'/ri-ence, pru'/ri-en-cy n. —pru'/ri-ent-ly adv.

pru-ri-go (prōō-rī'gō) n. A chronic skin disease having various causes, marked by the eruption of pale, dome-shaped papules that itch severely. [Latin prūrīgō, an itching, from prūrīre, to itch. See preus- in Appendix.] —pru-rig'i-nous (-rīj'ə-nəs) adj.

pru-ri-tus (prōō-rī'təs) n. Severe itching, often of undamaged skin. [Latin prūrītus, from past participle of prūrīre, to itch. See preus- in Appendix.] —pru-rit'ic (-rīt'ik) adj.

Prus-sia (prüşh'ə) A historical region and former kingdom of north-central Europe including present-day northern Germany and Poland. Its ancient inhabitants, of Baltic stock, were conquered by the Teutonic Knights in the 13th century. West Prussia was ceded to Poland in 1466, and East Prussia became a Polish fief that passed to Brandenburg in 1618. The kingdom of Prussia was proclaimed in 1701 and was greatly expanded and fortified by Emperor Frederick II (reigned 1740-1786). Prussia was instrumental in the unification of Germany, and in 1871 its king was declared Emperor William I of Germany. The state became a republic in 1918 and was formally abolished after World War II.

Prus-sian (prüşh'ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Prussia or its Baltic or German inhabitants. 2. Suggestive of or resembling the Junkers and the military class of Prussia. — n. 1. Any of the western Balts inhabiting the region between the Vistula and Neman rivers in ancient times. 2. A Baltic inhabitant of Prussia. 3. A German inhabitant of Prussia.

Prussian blue (prüşh'ən blōō) n. 1. An insoluble dark blue pigment and dye, ferric ferrocyanide or one of its modifications. 2. See iron blue. 3. Color. A moderate to strong blue or deep greenish blue.

prus-si-ate (prüş'ē-āt') n. 1. A ferrocyanide or ferricyanide. 2. A salt of hydrocyanic acid; cyanide. [PRUSSI(C ACID) + -ATE².]

prus-sic acid (prüş'ik əs'īd) n. See hydrocyanic acid. [So called because it was first obtained from Prussian blue.]

Prut (prōōt) A river rising in southwest Ukraine and flowing about 885 km (550 mi) generally southeast along the Romania-Moldavia border to the Danube River.

pru-tah (prōō-tā') n. pl. pru-toth or pru-tot (-tōt'). A coin formerly used in Israel, equal to one thousandth of a pound. [Modern Hebrew pērūtā.]

pry¹ (prī) v. intr. pried (prīd), pry-ing, pries (prīz). To look or inquire closely, curiously, or inquisitively, often in a furtive manner; snoop: always prying into the affairs of others. — n. pl. pries (prīz). 1. The act of prying. 2. An excessively inquisitive person; a snoop. [Middle English prien.] —pry-ing-ly adv.

pry² (prī) v. tr. pried (prīd), pry-ing, pries (prīz). 1. To raise, move, or force open with a lever. 2. To obtain with effort or difficulty: pried a confession out of the suspect. — n. pl. pries (prīz). Something, such as a crowbar, that is used to apply leverage. [Alteration of PRIZE³.]

pry·er (prī'ər) n. Variant of prier.

Prynne (prīn), William. 1600-1669. English politician and pamphleteer whose attack on the theater, Histrion-Mastix (1633), resulted in his imprisonment and the amputation of his ears. He was later imprisoned for politically agitative writings and branded on both cheeks.

Ps or Ps. abbr. Bible. 1. Psalm. 2. Psalms.

p.s. abbr. Passenger steamer.

P.S. abbr. 1. Permanent secretary. 2. Police Sergeant. 3. Also PS or p.s. Post-script. 4. Public school.

psalm (säm) n. Abbr. Ps, Ps. 1. A sacred song; a hymn. 2. Psalms. (used with a sing. verb). A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. — v. tr. psalmed, psalm·ing, psalms. To sing of or celebrate in psalms. [Middle English, from Old English, from Latin psalmus, from Greek psalmos, from psallein, to play the harp. See pōl- in Appendix.]

psalm·ist (sä'mīst) n. A writer or composer of psalms.

psalm·o·dy (sä'mə-dē, sä'mə-) n. pl. psalm·o·dies. 1. The act or practice of singing psalms in divine worship. 2. The composition or arranging of psalms for singing. 3. A collection of psalms. [Middle English psalmodie, from Late Latin psalmōdia, from Greek, singing to the harp : psalmos, psalm; see PSALM + ōidē, oidē, song; see ODE.] — psalm'·o·dist n.

Psal·ter also psal·ter (sōl'tər) n. A book containing the Book of Psalms or a particular version of, musical setting for, or selection from it. [Middle English, from Old English psaltere, and Old French psaultier both from Late Latin psaltērium, from Latin, psalter, from Greek psaltērion. See PSALTERY.]

psal·te·ri·um (sōl-tīr'ē-əm) n. pl. psal·te·ri·a (-tīr'ē-ə). The omasum. [Late Latin psaltērium, psalter (so called because when slit open its folds fall apart like the leaves of a book). See PSALTER.] — psal·te'ri·al adj.

psal·ter·y (sōl'tə-rē) also psal·try (sōl'trē) n. pl. psal·ter·ies also psal·tries. Music. An ancient stringed instrument played by plucking the strings with the fingers or a plectrum. [Middle English psalterie, from Old French, from Latin psaltērium, from Greek psaltērion, from psallein, to play the harp. See pōl- in Appendix.]

p's and q's (pēz' ən kyōōz') pl.n. 1. Socially correct behavior; manners.

2. The way one acts; conduct: was told to watch his p's and q's or he would be fired.

PSAT abbr. Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test.

psec. abbr. Picosecond.

pse·phol·o·gy (sē-fōl'ə-jē) n. The study of political elections. [Greek psēphos, pebble, ballot (from the ancient Greeks' use of pebbles for voting) + -LOGY.]

— pse'pho·log'i·cal (sē'fə-lōj'i-kəl) adj. — pse·phol'·o·gist n.

pseud. abbr. Pseudonym.

pseud- pref. Variant of pseudo-.

pseud-ax·is (sōō-dāk'sīs) n. Botany. See sympodium.

pseud-e-pig-ra·pha (sōō'dī-pīg'rə-fə) pl.n. 1. Spurious writings, especially writings falsely attributed to biblical characters or times. 2. A body of texts written between 200 B.C. and A.D. 200 and spuriously ascribed to various prophets and kings of Hebrew Scriptures. [Greek, from neuter pl. of pseudepigraphos, falsely ascribed : pseudēs, false; see PSEUDO- + epigraphēin, to inscribe (epi-, epi- + graphēin, to write); see gerbh- in Appendix.] —pseud'e-pig'ra·phal (-rə-fəl), pseud'ep-i-graph'ic (sōō'dēp-ī-grāf'ik) , pseud'ep-i-graph'i-cal (-ī-kəl) , pseud'e-pig'ra-phous (-rə-fəs) adj.

pseudo- or pseud- pref. 1. False; deceptive; sham: pseudoscience.

2. Apparently similar: pseudocoel. [Greek, from pseudēs, false, from pseudein, to lie.]

pseu-do-bulb (sōō'dō-būlb') n. A thickened, bulblike, fleshy stem located above the ground, as in many orchids.

pseu-do-carp (sōō'də-kārp') n. See accessory fruit. —pseu'do-car'pous adj.

pseu-do-coel (sōō'də-sēl') also pseu-do-coe-lom (sōō'də-sē'ləm) n. An internal body cavity of some primitive invertebrates, similar to a coelom but lacking a mesodermal lining.

pseu-do-coe-lo-mate (sōō'dō-sē'lə-māt') adj. Having a pseudocoel. — n. An animal having a pseudocoel.

pseu-do-cy·e·sis (sōō'dō-sī-ē'sīs) n. A usually psychosomatic condition in which physical symptoms of pregnancy, such as weight gain and amenorrhea, are manifested without conception. Also called pseudopregnancy [PSEUDO- + New Latin cyēsis, pregnancy (from Greek kuēsis, from kuēin, to swell); see keuə- in Appendix.]

pseu-do-e-vent (sōō'dō-ī-vēnt') n. Informal. An event that has been caused to occur or staged to engender press coverage and public interest: "Polls have become the quintessential pseudo-events of the preprimary campaign" (Edward M. Kennedy).

pseu-do-gene (sōō'də-jēn') n. A segment of DNA resembling a gene but lacking a genetic function.

pseu-do-her-maph-ro-dite (sōō'dō-hər-māf'rə-dīt') n. One that possesses the internal reproductive organs of one sex while exhibiting some of the external physical characteristics of the opposite sex. —pseu'do-her-maph'ro-dit'ic (-dīt'ik) adj. —pseu'do-her-maph'ro-dit-ism n.

pseu-do-mo-nad (sōō'də-mō'nād') n. 1. Any of various gram-negative, rod-shaped, mostly aerobic flagellated bacteria of the phylum Pseudomonad, commonly found in soil, water, and decaying matter and including some plant and animal pathogens. 2. A pseudomonad of the large genus Pseudomonas, some species of which are opportunistic pathogens in human beings. In this sense, also called pseudomonas [From New Latin Pseudomonas, genus name : PSEUDO- + Latin monas, monad-, unit (from Greek, from monos, single); see men-⁴ in Appendix.]

pseu·do·mo·nas (sōō'də-mō'nəs, sōō-dōm'ə-nəs) n. pl.

pseu·do·mon·a·des (-mōn'ə-dēz'). See pseudomonad (n., sense 2).

pseu·do·morph (sōō'də-môrf') n. 1. A false, deceptive, or irregular form.

2. Mineralogy. A mineral that has the crystalline form of another mineral rather than the form normally characteristic of its own composition.

—pseu'do·mor'phic, pseu'do·mor'phous adj. —pseu'do·mor'phism n.

pseu·do·nym (sōōd'n-ĭm') n. Abbr. pseud. A fictitious name assumed by an author; a pen name. [French pseudonyme, from Greek pseudōnumon, neuter of pseudōnumos, falsely named : pseudēs, false; see PSEUDO- + onuma, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.]

—pseu·don'y·mous (sōō-dōn'ə-məs) adj.

—pseu·don'y·mous·ly adv. —pseu·don'y·mous·ness n.

pseu·do·pod (sōō'də-pōd') n. A temporary projection of the cytoplasm of certain cells, such as phagocytes, or of certain unicellular organisms, especially amoebas, that serves in locomotion and phagocytosis. —pseu·dop'o·dal (-dōp'ə-dl), pseu'do·po'di·al (-pō'dē-əl) adj.

pseu·do·po·di·um (sōō'də-pō'dē-əm) n. pl. pseu·do·po·di·a (-pō'dē-ə). A pseudopod.

pseu·do·preg·nan·cy (sōō'dō-prĕg'nən-sē) n. pl. pseu·do·preg·nan·cies.

1. See pseudocyesis. 2. A condition resembling pregnancy that occurs in some mammals, marked by persistence of the corpus luteum and usually following infertile copulation. —pseu'do·preg'nant adj.

pseu·do·ran·dom (sōō'dō-răn'dəm) adj. Mathematics. Of, relating to, or being random numbers generated by a definite, nonrandom computational process.

pseu·do·sci·ence (sōō'dō-sī'əns) n. A theory, methodology, or practice that is considered to be without scientific foundation. —pseu'do·sci'en·tif'ic (-ən-tĭf'ĭk) adj. —pseu'do·sci'en·tist n.

psf. or p.s.f. abbr. Pounds per square foot.

pshaw (shô) interj. Used to indicate impatience, irritation, disapproval, or disbelief.

psi¹ (sī, psī) n. The 23rd letter of the Greek alphabet. [Middle English, from Late Greek, from Greek psei.]

psi² or p.s.i. abbr. Pounds per square inch.

psil·o·cin (sĭl'ə-sĭn, sĭ'lə-) n. A potent hallucinogenic compound, C₁₂H₁₆N₂O, related to psilocybin. [PSILOC(YBIN) + -IN.]

psil·o·cy·bin (sīl'ə-sī'bīn, sī'lə-) n. A hallucinogenic compound,

$C_{13}H_{18(20)}N_2O_3P_2$, obtained from the mushroom Psilocybe mexicana. [New Latin Psilocybe, genus name (Greek psilos, bare + Greek kubē, head) + -IN.]

psi·lom·e·lane (sī-lōm'ə-lān') n. A mixture of black manganese oxide minerals. [Greek psilos, bare + Greek melas, melan-, black.]

psi particle (sī pār'tī-kəl) n. See J particle.

psit·ta·cine (sīt'ə-sīn') adj. 1. Relating to, resembling, or characteristic of parrots. 2. Of or belonging to the family Psittacidae, which includes the parrots, macaws, and parakeets. [Latin psittacīnus, from psittacus, parrot, from Greek psittakos.]

psit·ta·co·sis (sīt'ə-kō'sīs) n. An infectious disease of parrots and related birds caused by the bacterium Chlamydia psittaci, that is communicable to human beings, in whom it produces high fever, severe headache, and symptoms similar to pneumonia. Also called parrot fever [New Latin psittacōsis: Latin psittacus, parrot (from Greek psittakos) + -OSIS.] — psit'ta·cot'ic (-kōt'īk, -kō'tīk) adj.

Pskov (pə-skōf', pskōf) A city of west-central Russia south-southwest of St. Petersburg. Dating from the eighth century, it became an important trade center and was annexed by Moscow in 1510. Population, 194,000.

psō·as (sō'əs) n. Either of two muscles of the loin that rotate the hip joint and flex the spine. [New Latin, from Greek psoa.]

psō·cid (sō'sīd, sōs'īd) n. Any of various small, soft-bodied, sometimes winged insects of the order Psocoptera, which includes the booklice. [From New Latin Psōcidae, family name, from Psōcus, type genus, from Greek psōkhos, dust.]

psō·ra·len (sōr'ə-lən) n. Any of a group of chemical compounds found naturally in certain plants that are used in the treatment of psoriasis and vitiligo. [From New Latin Psōralea, plant genus, from Greek psōralea, neuter pl. of psōra-leos, mangy (from the appearance of the plants' leaves), from psōra, itch.]

psō·ri·a·sis (sə-rī'ə-sīs) n. A noncontagious inflammatory skin disease characterized by recurring reddish patches covered with silvery scales. [Greek psōriasis, itch, mange, from psōrian, to have the itch, from psōra, itch.] — psō'ri·at'ic (sōr'ē-ăt'īk, sōr'-) adj.

PST or P.S.T. abbr. Pacific Standard Time.

psych (sīk) Informal. n. Psychology. — v. also psyche psyched, psych-ing, psyches. — v. tr. 1. a. To put into the right psychological frame of mind: The coach psyched the team before the game. b. To excite emotionally: She had psyched herself up so much for the camping trip that she forgot her sleeping bag. 2. To undermine the confidence of by psychological means; intimidate: “Depending on whose personality is stronger, one can more easily psych the other” (Harold C. Schonberg). 3. a. To analyze, solve, or comprehend. b. To anticipate or guess the intentions of: “Most others could never approach [his] ability... to psyche out the opposition's thinking so consistently" (Steven Brill). 4. Informal. To analyze and treat by psychoanalysis. — v. intr. To become confused or mentally deranged.

psych. abbr. Psychological; psychologist; psychology.

psych- pref. Variant of psycho-.

psy·chas·the·ni·a (sī'kəs-thē'nē-ə) n. A neurotic disorder characterized by phobias, obsessions, compulsions, or excessive anxiety. No longer in scientific use. — psy'chas·then'ic (-thēn'ik) adj.

psy·che (sī'kē) n. 1. The spirit or soul. 2. Psychiatry. The mind functioning as the center of thought, emotion, and behavior and consciously or unconsciously adjusting or mediating the body's responses to the social and physical environment. [Latin psūchē, from Greek psukhē, soul. See bhes- in Appendix.]

Psy·che (sī'kē) n. Greek Mythology. A young woman who loved and was loved by Eros and was united with him after Aphrodite's jealousy was overcome. She subsequently became the personification of the soul.

psy·che·de·li·a (sī'ki-dē'lē-ə, -dēl'yə) n. The subculture associated with psychedelic drugs.

psy·che·del·ic (sī'ki-dēl'ik) adj. Of, characterized by, or generating hallucinations, distortions of perception, altered states of awareness, and occasionally states resembling psychosis. — n. A drug, such as LSD or mescaline, that produces such effects. [PSYCHE + Greek dēloun, to make visible (from dēlos, clear, visible); see deiw- in Appendix + -IC.] — psy'che·del'i·cal·ly adv.

psychiatric hospital (sī'kē-ăt'rik hōs'pī-tl) n. A hospital for the care and treatment of patients affected with acute or chronic mental illness. Also called mental hospital psy·chi·a·trist (sī-kī'ə-trīst, sī-) n. A physician who specializes in psychiatry.

psy·chi·a·try (sī-kī'ə-trē, sī-) n. The branch of medicine that deals with the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of mental and emotional disorders.

— psy'chi·at'ric (sī'kē-ăt'rik), psy'chi·at'ri·cal (-rī-kəl) adj. — psy'chi·at'ri·cal·ly adv.

psy·chic (sī'kik) n. 1. A person apparently responsive to psychic forces. 2. See medium (n., sense 5). — adj. also psy·chi·cal (-kī-kəl) 1. Of, relating to, affecting, or influenced by the human mind or psyche; mental: psychic trauma; psychic energy. 2. a. Capable of extraordinary mental processes, such as extrasensory perception and mental telepathy. b. Of or relating to such mental processes. [From Greek psukhikos, of the soul, from psukhē, soul. See bhes- in Appendix.] — psy'chi·cal·ly adv.

psychic energizer (sī'kik ebreve/n'ər-jīz'ər) n. An antidepressant drug.

psy·cho (sī'kō) Slang. n. pl. psy·chos. A psychopath. — adj. Crazy; insane.

psycho- or psych- pref. 1. a. Mind; mental: psychogenic. b. Mental activities or processes: psychomotor. 2. Psychology; psychological: psychohistory. [Greek psukho-, soul, life, from psukhē. See bhes- in Appendix.]

psy·cho·a·cous·tics (sī'kō-ə-kōō'stiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The scientific study of the perception of sound. —psy'cho·a·cous'tic, psy'cho·a·cous'ti·cal adj.

psy·cho·ac·tive (sī'kō-āk'tiv) adj. Affecting the mind or mental processes. Used of a drug.

psy·cho·a·nal·y·sis (sī'kō-ə-nāl'ī-sīs) n. pl. psy·cho·a·nal·y·ses (-sēz').

1. a. The method of psychiatric therapy originated by Sigmund Freud in which free association, dream interpretation, and analysis of resistance and transference are used to explore repressed or unconscious impulses, anxieties, and internal conflicts. b. The theory of personality developed by Freud that focuses on repression and unconscious forces and includes the concepts of infantile sexuality, resistance, transference, and division of the psyche into the id, ego, and super-ego. 2. Psychiatric treatment incorporating this method and theory.

—psy'cho·an'a·lyst (-än'ə-līst) n. —psy'cho·an'a·lyt'ic (-än'ə-līt'ik), psy'cho·an'a·lyt'i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. —psy'cho·an'a·lyt'i·cal·ly adv.

psy·cho·an·a·lyze (sī'kō-än'ə-līz') v. tr. psy·cho·an·a·lyzed, psy·cho·an·a·lyz·ing, psy·cho·an·a·lyz·es. To analyze and treat by psychoanalysis.

psy·cho·bab·ble (sī'kō-bāb'əl) n. Psychological jargon, especially that of psychotherapy: “There is... too much talk, psychobabble that gets in the way of the book” (Michael M. Thomas). —psy'cho·bab'bler n.

psy·cho·bi·og·ra·phy (sī'kō-bī-ōg'rə-fē, -bē-) n. pl.

psy·cho·bi·og·ra·phies. 1. A biography that analyzes the psychological makeup, character, or motivations of its subject: “We are given a kind of psychobiography which ultimately pictures a deeply egotistical individual, unable to tolerate anyone else's success” (Leon Botstein). 2. A character analysis.

—psy'cho·bi·og'r·apher n. —psy'cho·bi'o·graph'ic (-bī'ə-grāf'ik), psy'cho·bi'o·graph'i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj.

psy·cho·bi·ol·o·gy (sī'kō-bī-ōl'ə-jē) n. 1. The study of the biological foundations of the mind, emotions, and mental processes. Also called biopsychology

2. The school of psychiatry that interprets personality, behavior, and mental illness in terms of adaptive responses to biological, social, cultural, and environmental factors. —psy'cho·bi'o·log'ic (-bī'ə-lōj'ik), psy'cho·bi'o·log'i·cal psy·cho·chem·i·cal (sī'kō-kēm'ī-kəl) n. A psychoactive drug or substance. — adj. Of or relating to psychochemicals.

(-ī-kəl) adj. —psy'cho·bi'o·log'i·cal·ly adv. —psy'cho·bi·ol'o·gist n.

psy·cho·dra·ma (sī'kə-drā'mə, -drām'ə) n. 1. A psychotherapeutic and analytic technique in which people are assigned roles to be played spontaneously within a dramatic context devised by a therapist. 2. A dramatization in which this technique is employed. —psy'cho·dra·mat'ic (-drə-māt'ik) adj.

- psy·cho·dy·nam·ics (sī'kō-dī-năm'iks, -dī-) n. 1. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The interaction of various conscious and unconscious mental or emotional processes, especially as they influence personality, behavior, and attitudes. 2. (used with a sing. verb). The study of personality and behavior in terms of such processes. —psy'cho-dy-nam'ic adj. —psy'cho-dy-nam'i-cal-ly adv.
- psy·cho·gen·e·sis (sī'kə-jěn'ī-sīs) n. 1. The origin and development of psychological processes, personality, or behavior. 2. Development of a physical disorder or illness resulting from psychic, rather than physiological, factors. —psy'cho-ge-net'ic (-jə-nět'ik) adj. —psy'cho-ge-net'i-cal-ly adv.
- psy·cho·gen·ic (sī'kə-jěn'ik) adj. Originating in the mind or in mental or emotional processes; having a psychological rather than a physiological origin. Used of certain disorders. —psy'cho-gen'i-cal-ly adv.
- psy·cho·graph (sī'kə-gräf') n. A graphic representation or chart of the personality traits of an individual or a group. —psy'cho-graph'ic adj.
- psy·cho·graph·ics (sī'kə-gräf'iks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The use of demographics to study and measure attitudes, values, lifestyles, and opinions, as for marketing purposes. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The data obtained from such study. [PSYCHO- + (DEMO)GRAPHICS.]
- psy·cho·his·to·ry (sī'kō-hīs'tə-rē) n. pl. psy·cho·his·to·ries. A psychological or psychoanalytic interpretation or study of historical events or persons: the psychohistory of the Nazi era. —psy'cho-his-tor'i-an (-hī-stôr'ē-ən, -stôr'-) n. —psy'cho-his-tor'i-cal (-hī-stôr'ī-kəl, -stôr'-) adj.
- psy·cho·ki·ne·sis (sī'kō-kī-nē'sīs, -kī-) n. pl. psy·cho·ki·ne·ses (-sēz). Abbr. PK 1. The production or control of motion, especially in inanimate and remote objects, purportedly by the exercise of psychic powers. 2. Psychiatry. An uncontrolled, maniacal outburst, resulting from defective inhibition. —psy'cho-ki-net'ic (-kī-nět'ik, -kī-) adj. —psy'cho-ki-net'i-cal-ly adv.
- psychol. abbr. Psychological; psychologist; psychology.
- psy·cho·lin·guis·tics (sī'kō-līng-gwīs'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the influence of psychological factors on the development, use, and interpretation of language. —psy'cho-lin'guist n. —psy'cho-lin-guis'tic adj.
- psy·cho·log·i·cal (sī'kə-lōj'ī-kəl) also psy·cho·log·ic (-lōj'ik) adj. Abbr. psych., psychol. 1. Of or relating to psychology: psychological research; psychological jargon. 2. Of, relating to, or arising from the mind or emotions. 3. Influencing or intended to influence the mind or emotions: psychological warfare. 4. Color. Of or being any of certain primary colors whose mixture may be subjectively conceived as producing other colors. —psy'cho-log'i-cal-ly adv.
- psychological moment (sī'kə-lōj'ī-kəl mō'mənt) n. The time at which the mental state of a person is most likely to produce a desired response.

psy·chol·o·gist (sī-kōl'ə-jīst) n. Abbr. psych., psychol. A person trained and educated to perform psychological research, testing, and therapy.

psy·chol·o·gize (sī-kōl'ə-jīz') v. psy·chol·o·gized, psy·chol·o·giz·ing, psy·chol·o·giz·es. — v. tr. To explain (behavior) in psychological terms. — v. intr. To investigate, reason, or speculate in psychological terms.

psy·chol·o·gy (sī-kōl'ə-jē) n. pl. psy·chol·o·gies. Abbr. psych., psychol.

1. The science that deals with mental processes and behavior. 2. The emotional and behavioral characteristics of an individual, a group, or an activity: the psychology of war. 3. Subtle tactical action or argument used to manipulate or influence another: He used poor psychology on his employer when trying to make the point. 4. Philosophy. The branch of metaphysics that studies the soul, the mind, and the relationship of life and mind to the functions of the body.

psy·cho·met·rics (sī'kə-mět'riks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of psychology that deals with the design, administration, and interpretation of quantitative tests for the measurement of psychological variables such as intelligence, aptitude, and personality traits. Also called psychometry. — psy'cho·met'ric, psy'cho·met'ri·cal adj. — psy'cho·met'ri·cal·ly adv. — psy·chom'e·tri·cian (sī-kōm'ī-trīsh'ən), psy·chom'e·trist (sī-kōm'ī-trīst) n.

psy·chom·e·try (sī-kōm'ī-trē) n. 1. See psychometrics. 2. The ability or art of divining information about people or events associated with an object solely by touching or being near to it.

psy·cho·mo·tor (sī'kō-mō'tər) adj. Of or relating to movement or muscular activity associated with mental processes.

psy·cho·neu·ro·sis (sī'kō-nōō-rō'sīs, -nyōō-) n. pl. psy·cho·neu·ro·ses (-sēz). Neurosis. — psy'cho·neu·rot'ic (-rōt'īk) adj. & n.

psy·cho·path (sī'kə-pāth') n. A person with an antisocial personality disorder, especially one manifested in aggressive, perverted, criminal, or amoral behavior. [Back-formation from PSYCHOPATHIC.]

psy·cho·path·ic (sī'kə-pāth'īk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characterized by psychopathy. 2. Relating to or affected with an antisocial personality disorder that is usually characterized by aggressive, perverted, criminal, or amoral behavior. — psy'cho·path'i·cal·ly adv.

psy·cho·pa·thol·o·gy (sī'kō-pə-thōl'ə-jē, -pə-) n. The study of the origin, development, and manifestations of mental or behavioral disorders. — psy'cho·path'o·log'i·cal (-pāth'ə-lōj'ī-kəl), psy'cho·path'o·log'ic (-lōj'īk) adj. — psy'cho·pa·thol'o·gist n.

psy·chop·a·thy (sī-kōp'ə-thē) n. Mental disorder, especially when manifested by antisocial behavior.

psy·cho·phar·ma·col·o·gy (sī'kō-fär'mə-kōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of pharmacology that deals with the study of the actions and effects of psychoactive drugs. —psy'cho-phar'ma-co-log'ic (-kə-lōj'ik), psy'cho-phar'ma-co-log'i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj. —psy'cho-phar'ma-col'o-gist n.

psy-cho-phys-ics (sī'kō-fīz'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of psychology that deals with the relationships between physical stimuli and sensory response. —psy'cho-phys'i-cal adj. —psy'cho-phys'i-cal-ly adv.

—psy'cho-phys'i-cist (-fīz'ī-sīst) n.

psy-cho-phys-i-ol-o-gy (sī'kō-fīz'ē-ōl'ə-jē) n. The study of correlations between the mind, behavior, and bodily mechanisms. Also called physiological psychology —psy'cho-phys'i-o-log'i-cal (-fīz'ē-ə-lōj'ī-kəl), psy'cho-phys'i-o-log'ic (-lōj'ik) adj. —psy'cho-phys'i-ol'o-gist n.

psy-cho-sex-u-al (sī'kō-sēk'shō-əl) adj. Of or relating to the mental and emotional aspects of sexuality. —psy'cho-sex'u-al'i-ty (-āl'ī-tē) n.

—psy'cho-sex'u-al-ly adv.

psy-cho-sis (sī-kō'sis) n. pl. psy-cho-ses (-sēz). A severe mental disorder, with or without organic damage, characterized by derangement of personality and loss of contact with reality and causing deterioration of normal social functioning.

psy-cho-so-cial (sī'kō-sō'shəl) adj. Involving aspects of social and psychological behavior: a child's psychosocial development. —psy'cho-so'cial-ly adv.

psy-cho-so-mat-ic (sī'kō-sō-măt'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to a disorder having physical symptoms but originating from mental or emotional causes.

2. Relating to or concerned with the influence of the mind on the body, especially with respect to disease: psychosomatic medicine. —psy'cho-so-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

psy-cho-sur-ger-y (sī'kō-sûr'jə-rē) n. pl. psy-cho-sur-ger-ies. Brain surgery used to treat severe, intractable mental or behavioral disorders.

—psy'cho-sur'geon (-sûr'jən) n. —psy'cho-sur'gi-cal (-jī-kəl) adj.

psy-cho-tech-nics (sī'kō-tēk'nīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The practical or technological application of psychology, as in analysis of social or economic problems. —psy'cho-tech'ni-cal adj. —psy'cho-tech'ni-cian (-tēk-nīsh'ən) n.

psy-cho-ther-a-peu-tics (sī'kō-thēr'ə-pyōō'tīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Psychotherapy.

psy-cho-ther-a-py (sī'kō-thēr'ə-pē) n. pl. psy-cho-ther-a-pies. The treatment of mental and emotional disorders through the use of psychological techniques designed to encourage communication of conflicts and insight into problems, with the goal being personality growth and behavior modification.

—psy'cho-ther'a-peu'tic (-pyōō'tīk) adj. —psy'cho-ther'a-peu'ti-cal-ly adv. —psy'cho-ther'a-pist n.

psy-cho-tic (sī-kōt'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or affected by psychosis. — n. A person affected by psychosis. [PSYCH(OSIS) + -OTIC.] —psy-cho-t'i-cal-ly adv.

psy·chot·o·mi·met·ic (sī-kōt'ō-mə-mět'ik, -mī-) adj. Tending to induce hallucinations, delusions, or other symptoms of a psychosis. Used of a drug. — n. A psychotomimetic drug, such as LSD. [Alteration of psychosomimetic (influenced by PSYCHOTIC) : PSYCHOS(IS) + MIMETIC.] — psy·chot'·o·mi·met'i·cal·ly adv.

psy·cho·tro·pic (sī'kə-trō'pik, -tröp'ik) adj. Having an altering effect on perception or behavior. Used especially of a drug. — n. A psychotropic drug or other agent.

psych-out (sīk'out') n. Informal. The act or an instance of undermining someone's confidence by psychological means.

psychro- pref. Cold: psychrophilic. [Greek psukhro-, from psukhros, cold.]

psy·chrom·e·ter (sī-krōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument that uses the difference in readings between two thermometers, one having a wet bulb and the other having a dry bulb, to measure the moisture content or relative humidity of air.

psy·chro·phil·ic (sī'krō-fil'ik) adj. Biology. Thriving at relatively low temperatures. Used of certain bacteria. — psy'chro·phile' (-fil') n.

psyl·la (sīl'ə) also psyl·lid (sīl'id) n. Any of various jumping plant lice of the family Psyllidae, especially of the genus Psylla, which includes several species that infest fruit trees. [New Latin Psylla, type genus, from Greek psulla, flea.]

psyl·li·um (sīl'ē-əm) n. 1. An annual Eurasian plant (Plantago psyllium) having opposite leaves and small flowers borne in dense spikes. 2. The seeds of this plant, widely used as a mild bulk laxative and sometimes added to foods as a dietary source of soluble fiber. [New Latin, from Greek psullion, diminutive of psulla, flea (from the plant's use against fleas).]

Pt The symbol for the element platinum (n., sense 1).

PT abbr. Patrol torpedo.

pt. abbr. 1. Part. 2. Payment. 3. Pint. 4. Point. 5. Port. 6. Grammar. Preterit.

p.t. abbr. Pro tempore.

P.T. abbr. 1. Also PT. Pacific Time. 2. Physical therapy. 3. Physical training.

PTA or P.T.A. abbr. Parent Teacher Association.

pta. abbr. Peseta.

ptar·mi·gan (tär'mī-gən) n. pl. ptarmigan or ptar·mi·gans. Any of various grouses of the genus Lagopus, inhabiting arctic, subarctic, and alpine regions of the Northern Hemisphere and having feathered legs and feet and plumage that is brown or gray in summer and white in winter. [Alteration (influenced by the spelling pt in Greek words like pteron, wing), of Scottish Gaelic tàrmachan.]

PT boat (pē-tē' bōt) n. A fast, maneuverable, lightly armed vessel, 60 to 100 feet (18 to 30 meters) in length, used to torpedo enemy shipping. [P(ATROL) + T(ORPEDO) BOAT.]

PTC abbr. Phenylthiocarbamide.

-pter suff. Wing; winglike part: ornithopter. [From Greek pteron, feather, wing. See pet- in Appendix.]

pter-i-dol-o-gy (těr'ĩ-dŏl'ə-jē) n. The study of ferns. [Greek ptēris, ptērid-, fern (from pteron, feather, wing); see pet- in Appendix + -LOGY.]

—pter'i-do-log'i-cal (-də-lŏj'ĩ-kəl) adj. —pter'i-dol'o-gist n.

pte-rid-o-phyte (tə-rĩd'ə-fĩt', těr'ĩ-dŏ-) n. Any of various vascular plants that reproduce by means of spores rather than by seeds, including the ferns and related plants, such as club mosses and horsetails. [From New Latin Pteridophyta, former division name : Greek ptēris, ptērid-, fern; see PTERIDOLOGY + Greek phuton, plant; see -PHYTE.] —pte-rid'o-phyt'ic (tə-rĩd'ə-fĩt'ĩk, těr'ĩ-dŏ-), pter'i-doph'y-tous (těr'ĩ-dŏf'ĩ-təs) adj.

pter-o-dac-tyl (těr'ə-dăk'təl) n. Any of various small, mostly tailless, extinct flying reptiles of the order Pterosauria that existed during the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods. [New Latin Pterodactylus, reptile genus : Greek pteron, feather, wing; see -PTER + Greek daktulos, finger.] —pter'o-dac'ty-loid' adj.

—pter'o-dac'ty-lous adj.

pter-o-pod (těr'ə-pŏd') n. Any of various small marine gastropod mollusks of the subclass Opisthobranchia that have winglike lobes on the feet. Also called sea butterfly [From New Latin Pteropoda, order name : Greek pteron, feather, wing; see -PTER + New Latin -poda, -pod.] —pter'o-pod' adj. —pte-rop'o-dan (tə-rŏp'ə-dən) adj. & n.

pter-o-saur (těr'ə-sŏr') n. Any of various extinct flying reptiles of the order Pterosauria, including the pterodactyls, of the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods, characterized by wings consisting of a flap of skin supported by the very long fourth digit on each forelimb. [From New Latin Pterosauria, order name : Greek pteron, feather, wing; see -PTER + Greek sauros, lizard.]

pter-o-yl-glu-tam-ic acid (těr'ŏ-ĩl-glŏŏ-tăm'ĩk əs'ĩd) n. Folic acid.

[ptero(ic acid), an amino acid + -YL + GLUTAMIC ACID.]

pte-ryg-i-um (tə-rĩj'ē-əm) n. pl. pte-ryg-i-ums or pte-ryg-i-a (-ē-ə). An abnormal mass of tissue arising from the conjunctiva of the inner corner of the eye that obstructs vision by growing over the cornea. [New Latin, from Greek pterygion, diminutive of pteryx, pteryg-, wing. See PTERYGOID.] —pte-ryg'i-al (-əl) adj.

pter-y-goid (těr'ĩ-gŏid') adj. Anatomy. 1. Of, relating to, or located in the region of the sphenoid bone; a pterygoid muscle. 2. Resembling a wing; winglike. — n. Either of two processes descending from the body of the sphenoid bone. [Greek pterygoeidēs, winglike : pteryx, pteryg-, wing; see pet- in Appendix + -oeidēs, -oid.]

pter-y-la (těr'ə-lə) n. pl. pter-y-lae (-lē', -lī'). An area on the skin of a bird from which feathers grow. [New Latin : Greek pteron, wing, feather; see -PTER + Greek hulē, forest, matter.]

ptg. abbr. Printing.

PTH abbr. Parathyroid hormone.

ptis-an (tīz'ən, tī-zăn') n. A medicinal infusion, such as sweetened barley water. [Middle English tisane, peeled barley, barley water, from Old French, from Latin ptisana, tisana, from Greek ptisanē, from ptissein, to crush.]

PTO abbr. 1. Parent Teacher Organization. 2. Power takeoff.

p.t.o. or PTO abbr. Please turn over.

Ptol·e·ma·ic (tōl'ə-mā'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to the astronomer Ptolemy.
2. Of or relating to the Ptolemies or to Egypt during their rule.

Ptolemaic system (tōl'ə-mā'ik sīs'təm) n. The astronomical system of Ptolemy, in which Earth is at the center of the universe with the sun, moon, planets, and stars revolving about it in circular orbits.

Ptol·e·ma·ist (tōl'ə-mā'ist) n. An adherent of or a believer in the Ptolemaic system.

Ptol·e·my¹ (tōl'ə-mē) An Egyptian dynasty of Macedonian kings (323-30 B.C.). The Ptolemies included Ptolemy I (367?-283?), a general in Alexander the Great's army who succeeded him as ruler of Egypt (323-285), and Ptolemy XV (47-30), who ruled as coregent (44-30) with his mother, Cleopatra.

Ptol·e·my² (tōl'ə-mē), fl. second century A.D. Alexandrian astronomer, mathematician, and geographer who based his astronomy on the belief that all heavenly bodies revolve around the earth.

pto·maine (tō'mān', tō-mān') n. A basic nitrogenous organic compound produced by bacterial putrefaction of protein. [Italian ptomaina, from Greek ptōma, corpse, from piptein, to fall. See pet- in Appendix.]

ptomaine poi·son·ing (tō'mān' poi'zə-nīng) n. Food poisoning, erroneously believed to be the result of ptomaine ingestion. Not in scientific use.

pto·sis (tō'sis) n. pl. pto·ses (-sēz). Abnormal lowering or drooping of an organ or a part, especially a drooping of the upper eyelid caused by muscle weakness or paralysis. [Greek ptōsis, fall, from piptein, to fall. See pet- in Appendix.]
—pto'tic (-tik) adj.

PTSD abbr. Posttraumatic stress disorder.

PTV abbr. 1. Pay television. 2. Public television.

pty. abbr. Proprietary.

pty·a·lin (tī'ə-līn) n. A form of amylase in the saliva of human beings and some animals that catalyzes the hydrolysis of starch into maltose and dextrin. [Greek ptualon, saliva (from ptuein, to spit) + -IN.]

pty·a·lism (tī'ə-līz'əm) n. Excessive flow of saliva. [Greek ptualismos, salivation, from ptualizein, to salivate, from ptualon, saliva, from ptuein, to spit.]

Pu The symbol for the element plutonium.

pub (püb) n. A place of business where alcoholic beverages are sold and drunk. [Short for PUBLIC HOUSE.]

pub. abbr. 1. Public. 2. Publication. 3. Published. 4. Publisher.

pub-crawl (püb'krôl') v. intr. pub--crawled, pub--crawl-ing, pub--crawls. Slang. To visit a series of bars.

pu·ber·ty (pyōō'bər-tē) n. 1. The stage of adolescence in which an individual becomes physiologically capable of sexual reproduction. 2. The approach to maturity: "Mankind will not reach puberty for another hundred thousand years" (René Dubos). [Middle English puberte, from Old French, from Latin pūbertās, from pūbēs, pūber-, adult.] —pu'ber-tal, pu'ber-al (-bər-əl) adj.

pu·ber·u·lent (pyōō-bēr'yə-lənt, -bēr'ə-) also pu·ber·u·lous (-bēr'yə-ləs, -bēr'ə-) adj. Covered with minute hairs or very fine down; finely pubescent. [Latin pūber, downy, adult + -ulentus, abounding in.]

pu·bes (pyōō'bēz) n. pl. pubes. 1. The lower part of the abdomen, especially the region surrounding the external genitalia. 2. The hair that appears on this region at puberty. 3. Plural of pubis. [Latin pūbēs.]

pu·bes·cence (pyōō-bēs'əns) n. 1. The state of being pubescent. 2. The attainment or onset of puberty. 3. A covering of soft down or short hairs, as on certain plants and insects.

pu·bes·cent (pyōō-bēs'ənt) adj. 1. Reaching or having reached puberty. 2. Covered with short hairs or soft down. [Latin pūbescēns, pūbescēt present participle of pūbescere, to reach puberty, from pūbēs, adult.]

pu·bic (pyōō'bīk) adj. Of, relating to, or located in the region of the pubis or the pubes. [From PUBES, and PUBIS.]

pu·bis (pyōō'bīs) n. pl. pubes (-bēz). The forward portion of either of the hipbones, at the juncture forming the front arch of the pelvis. Also called pubic bone [Short for New Latin (os) pūbis, (bone) of the groin, from Latin, genitive of pūbēs, groin.]

publ. abbr. 1. Publication. 2. Published. 3. Publisher.

pub·lic (püb'līk) adj. Abbr. pub. 1. Of, concerning, or affecting the community or the people: the public good. 2. Maintained for or used by the people or community: a public park. 3. Capitalized in shares of stock that can be traded on the open market: a public company. 4. Participated in or attended by the people or community: "Opinions are formed in a process of open discussion and public debate" (Hannah Arendt). 5. Connected with or acting on behalf of the people, community, or government: public office. 6. Open to the knowledge or judgment of all: a public scandal. — n. Abbr. pub. 1. The community or the people as a whole. 2. A group of people sharing a common interest: the reading public. 3. Admirers or followers, especially of a famous person. See Usage Note at col·lective noun. —idioms. go public. To become publicly owned, by launching shares of stock onto the open market: The company went public after having been closely held for 12 years. go public with. Informal. To reveal to the public a previously unknown or secret piece of information: The president finally had to go public with the scandal. in public. In such a way as to be visible to the scrutiny of the people: “A career is born in public-talent in privacy” (Marilyn Monroe). [Middle English publik, from Old French public, from Latin pūblicus, alteration (influenced by pūbēs, adult population); see PUBERTY, of poplicus, from populus, people, of Etruscan origin.] —pub’lic-ness n.

public access (pūb’lĭk äk’sĕs) n. The availability of television or radio broadcast facilities, as provided by law, for use by the public for presentation of programs, as those of community interest.

pub-lic-ad-dress system (pūb’lĭk-ə-drĕs’ sĭs’təm) n. Abbr. PA An electronic amplification apparatus installed and used for broadcasting in public areas.

public affairs (pūb’lĭk ə-fārz’) pl.n. Issues, questions, and responses involving social, economic, governmental, military, scientific, or corporate activities that are of concern to the people at large. — pl.n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a public affairs officer for NASA; public affairs staff.

pub-li-can (pūb’lĭ-kən) n. 1. Chiefly British. The keeper of a public house or tavern. 2. A collector of public taxes or tolls in the ancient Roman Empire. 3. A collector of taxes or tribute from the public. [Middle English, tax collector, from Old French, from Latin pūblicānus, from pūblicum, public revenue, from neuter of pūblicus, public. See PUBLIC.]

public assistance (pūb’lĭk ə-sĭs’təns) n. Aid, such as money or food, given to homeless and other financially needy people, the aged, or the inhabitants of a disaster-stricken area; relief.

pub-li-ca-tion (pūb’lĭ-kā’shən) n. Abbr. pub., publ. 1. The act or process of publishing printed matter. 2. An issue of printed material offered for sale or distribution. 3. Communication of information to the public. [Middle English publicacioun, act of making public, from Old French publicacion, from Latin pūblicātiō, pūblicātiōn-, from pūblicātus, past participle of pūblicāre, to make public, from pūblicus, public. See PUBLIC.]

public defender (pūb’lĭk dĭ-fĕnd’ər) n. Law. An attorney or a staff of attorneys, usually publicly appointed, having responsibility for the defense of those unable to afford or obtain legal assistance.

public domain (pūb’lĭk dō-mān’) n. Law. 1. Land owned and controlled by the state or federal government. 2. The status of publications, products, and processes that are not protected under patent or copyright.

public eye (pūb’lĭk ī) n. Public attention and scrutiny.

public figure (pūb’lĭk fĭg’yər) n. A famous person, such as a politician or performer, whose life and behavior are the focus of intense public interest and scrutiny.

public health (pūb’lĭk hĕlth) n. Abbr. PH, P.H. The science and practice of protecting and improving the health of a community, as by preventive medicine, health education, control of communicable diseases, application of sanitary measures, and monitoring of environmental hazards.

public house (püb'lik hous) n. Chiefly British. A place, such as a tavern or bar, that is licensed to sell alcoholic beverages.

public housing (püb'lik hou'zɪŋ) n. Housing that is built, operated, and owned by a government and that is typically provided at nominal rent to the needy.

public interest (püb'lik ɪn'trɪst) n. 1. The well-being of the general public; the commonweal. 2. The attention of the people with respect to events or occurrences.

pub-li-cist (püb'lɪ-sɪst) n. One who publicizes, especially a press or publicity agent.

pub-lic-i-ty (pü-blɪs'ɪ-tē) n. 1. a. Information that concerns a person, a group, an event, or a product and that is disseminated through various media to attract public notice. b. Public interest, notice, or notoriety achieved by the spreading of such information. c. The act, process, or occupation of disseminating information to gain public interest. 2. The condition of being public. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: publicity programs; a publicity department. [French publicité, from public, public, from Old French. See PUBLIC.]

pub-li-cize (püb'lɪ-sɪz') v. tr. pub-li-cized, pub-li-ciz-ing, pub-li-ciz-es. To give publicity to.

public law (püb'lik lô) n. 1. The branch of law that deals with the state or government and its relationships with individuals or other governments. 2. A law affecting the public.

public library (püb'lik lɪ'brɛr'ē) n. A noncommercial library often supported with public funds, intended for use by the general public.

public life (püb'lik lɪf) n. Public service or a term of public service by an appointed or elected official.

pub-lic-ly (püb'lik-lē) adv. 1. In a public manner; openly. 2. By or with consent of the public.

public offering (püb'lik ô'fər-ɪŋ) n. The sale of a new securities issue to the public by way of an underwriter, a transaction that must be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

public opinion (püb'lik ə-pɪn'jən) n. Public consensus, as with respect to an issue or a situation. — pub'lic-o-pin'ion (püb'lik-ə-pɪn'jən) adj.

public policy (püb'lik pɔl'ɪ-sē) n. The basic policy or set of policies forming the foundation of public laws, especially such policy not yet formally enunciated.

public prosecutor (püb'lik prɔs'ɪ-kyoo'tər) n. Law. A government official who prosecutes criminal actions on behalf of the state or community.

public relations (püb'lik rɪ-lā'shənz) pl.n. Abbr. PR, p.r., P.R. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The art or science of establishing and promoting a favorable relationship with the public. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The methods and activities employed to establish and promote a favorable relationship with the public.

3. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The degree of success obtained in achieving a favorable relationship with the public.

public sale (pŭb'lik sāl) n. An auction of property or merchandise.

public school (pŭb'lik skōōl) n. 1. Abbr. P.S. An elementary or secondary school in the United States supported by public funds and providing free education for children of a community or district. 2. A private boarding school in Great Britain for pupils between the ages of 13 and 18.

public servant (pŭb'lik sŭr'vənt) n. A person who holds a government position by election or appointment.

public service (pŭb'lik sŭr'vīs) n. 1. Employment within a governmental system, especially within the civil service. 2. A service performed for the benefit of the public, especially by a nonprofit organization. 3. The business of supplying an essential commodity, such as water or electricity, or a service, such as communications or transportation, to the public. —pub'lic-serv'ice (pŭb'lik-sŭr'vīs) adj.

public-service corporation (pŭb'lik-sŭr'vīs kôr'pə-rā'shən) n. A corporation providing essential services, such as water or electricity, to the public.

public speaking (pŭb'lik spē'kɪŋ) n. The act, art, or process of making effective speeches before an audience. —public speaker n.

pub-lic-spir-it-ed (pŭb'lik-spīr'ī-tīd) adj. Motivated by or exhibiting devotion to the public welfare. —pub'lic-spir'it-ed-ness n.

public television (pŭb'lik tē'lə-vīzh'ən) n. Abbr. PTV Noncommercial television that provides programs, especially of an educational nature, for the public. Also called educational television public utility (pŭb'lik yōō-tīl'ī-tē) n. 1. A private business organization, subject to governmental regulation, that provides an essential commodity or service, such as water, electricity, transportation, or communication, to the public. 2. Often public utilities. Stock shares issued by a company providing essential public services.

public works (pŭb'lik wŭrks) pl.n. Construction projects, such as highways or dams, financed by public funds and constructed by a government for the benefit or use of the general public.

pub-lish (pŭb'lish) v. pub-lished, pub-lish-ing, pub-lish-es. — v. tr. 1. To prepare and issue (printed material) for public distribution or sale. 2. To bring to the public attention; announce. See Synonyms at announce. — v. intr. 1. To issue a publication. 2. To be the writer or author of published works or a work. [Middle English publicen, publishen, to make known publicly, from Old French publier, from Latin pŭblicāre. See PUBLICATION.] —pub'lish-a-ble adj.

pub·lish·er (püb'li-shär) n. Abbr. pub., publ. One that is engaged in publishing printed material.

Pu·call·pa (pōō-kī'pä) A city of east-central Peru on the Ucayali River northeast of Lima. It is an agricultural trade center. Population, 112,263.

Puc·ci·ni (pōō-chē'nē), Giacomo. 1858-1924. Italian operatic composer whose works include La Bohème (1896) and Madame Butterfly (1904).

puc·coon (pə-kōōn') n. 1. a. Any of several North American plants of the genus Lithospermum, having orange or yellow flowers and roots that yield a red dye. b. Any of several plants, such as the bloodroot, whose roots yield a reddish dye. Also called gromwell 2. The dye from any of these plants. [Of Virginia Algonquian origin.]

puce (pyōōs) n. Color. A deep red to dark grayish purple. [French (couleur) puce, flea (color), puce, from Old French, variant of pulce, flea, from Latin pūlex, pūlic-.] —puce adj.

puck (pūk) n. Sports. A hard rubber disk used in ice hockey as the playing and scoring medium. [Perhaps from dialectal puck, to strike.]

Puck (pūk) n. A mischievous sprite in English folklore. [Middle English pouke, goblin, from Old English pūca.]

puck·a (pūk'ə) adj. Variant of pukka.

puck·er (pūk'ər) v. puck·ered, puck·er·ing, puck·ers. — v. tr. To gather into small wrinkles or folds. — v. intr. To become gathered, contracted, and wrinkled. — n. A wrinkle or wrinkled part, as in tightly stitched cloth. [Probably frequentative of dialectal pock, bag, sack, variant of POKE³.]

puck·ish (pūk'ish) adj. Mischievous; impish: a puckish grin; puckish wit. —puck'ish·ly adv. —puck'ish·ness n.

pud·ding (pōōd'ing) n. 1. a. A sweet dessert, usually containing flour or a cereal product, that has been boiled, steamed, or baked. b. A mixture with a soft, puddinglike consistency. 2. A sausagelike preparation made with minced meat or various other ingredients stuffed into a bag or skin and boiled. [Middle English, a kind of sausage, from Old French boudin.]

pud·ding·stone (pōōd'ing-stōn') n. Geology. A conglomerate.

pud·dle (pūd'l) n. 1. a. A small pool of water, especially rainwater. b. A small pool of a liquid. 2. A tempered paste of wet clay and sand that serves as waterproofing when dry. — v. pud·dled, pud·dling, pud·dles. — v. tr. 1. To make muddy. 2. To work (clay or sand) into a thick, watertight paste. 3. To process (impure metal) by puddling. — v. intr. To splash or dabble in or as if in a pool of liquid. [Middle English podel, diminutive of Old English pudd, ditch.]

—pud'dly adj.

pud·dler (pūd'lər) n. One that puddles iron or clay.

pud·dling (pūd'ling) n. 1. Purification of impure metal, especially pig iron, by heating and stirring in an oxidizing atmosphere. 2. Compaction of wet material, such as clay, in order to make a watertight paste.

pu·den·cy (pyōōd'n-sē) n. Modesty. [Late Latin pudētia, from Latin pudēre, to make or be ashamed.]

pu·den·dum (pyōō-dēn'dəm) n. pl. pu·den·da (-də). The human external genitalia, especially of a woman. Often used in the plural. [Latin, neuter gerundive of pudēre, to make or be ashamed.] —pu·den'dal (-dēn'dəl) adj.

pudg·y (pūj'ē) adj. pudg·i·er, pudg·i·est. Short and fat; chubby: pudgy fingers. See Synonyms at fat. [From pudge, something thick and short.]

—pudg'i·ness n.

Pueb·la (pwēb'lä) A city of east-central Mexico east-southeast of Mexico City. Founded by the Spanish in 1532, it is an agricultural, commercial, and manufacturing center and a popular resort. Population, 835,759.

pueb·lo (pwēb'lō) n. pl. pueb·los. 1. Pueblo. pl. Pueblo or Pueb·los.

a. Any of some 25 Native American peoples, including the Hopi, Zuñi, and Taos, living in established villages in northern and western New Mexico and northeast Arizona. The Pueblo are descendants of the cliff-dwelling Anasazi peoples and are noted for their skilled craft in pottery, basketry, weaving, and metalworking. b. A member of any of these peoples. 2. A permanent village or community of any of the Pueblo peoples, typically consisting of multilevel adobe or stone apartment dwellings of terraced design clustered around a central plaza. [Spanish, people, pueblo, from Latin populus, people. See PUBLIC.]

WORD HISTORY: The identity of the Pueblo peoples is undeniably connected to the stone and adobe dwellings they have occupied for more than 700 years—especially from an etymological point of view. Originally coming from the Latin word populus, “people, nation,” the Spanish word pueblo, meaning “town, village,” as well as “nation, people,” was naturally applied by 16th-century Spanish explorers to villages that they discovered or founded in the Southwest. The English word pueblo is first recorded in an American text in this sense in 1808, marking it as an Americanism. The distinctive adobe or stone villages of the Pueblo peoples, with some buildings rising as high as five stories, must have impressed the Spaniards considerably, because pueblo came to be transferred from a name for the village to a name for its inhabitants, perhaps in honor of their architectural achievements or simply as an obvious way to distinguish the Pueblo from other Native American peoples. The first recorded usage of this sense is found in 1834.

Pueblo A city of southeast-central Colorado south-southeast of Colorado Springs. It is a shipping and industrial center for an irrigated agricultural region. Population, 98,640.

pu·er·ile (pyōō'ər-əl, pyōōr'əl, -īl') adj. 1. Belonging to childhood; juvenile. 2. Immature; childish. See Synonyms at young. [Latin puerilis, from puer, child, boy. See pau- in Appendix.] —pu'er·ile·ly adv. —pu'er·il'·i·ty (-īl'ī-tē), pu'er·ile·ness (-əl-nīs, -īl-) n.

pu·er·il·ism (pyōō'ər-ə-līz'əm, pyōōr'ə-) n. Childish behavior in an adult, especially as a symptom of mental illness.

pu·er·per·al (pyōō-ūr'pər-əl) adj. Relating to, connected with, or occurring during childbirth or the period immediately following childbirth. [From Latin puerper, a woman in childbed : puer, child, boy; see pau- in Appendix + parere, to bear; see -PAROUS.]

puerperal fever (pyōō-ūr'pər-əl fē'vər) n. An illness resulting from infection of the endometrium following childbirth or abortion, marked by fever and septicemia and usually caused by unsterile technique. Also called childbed fever pu·er·pe·ri·um (pyōō'ər-pîr'ē-əm) n. pl. pu·er·pe·ri·a (-pîr'ē-ə). 1. The state of a woman during childbirth or immediately thereafter. 2. The approximate six-week period lasting from childbirth to the return of normal uterine size. [Latin, childbirth, from puerpera, a woman in childbed. See PUERPERAL.]

Puer·to Ca·bel·lo (pwër'tō kā-bā'ō, -vĕ'yô) A city of northern Venezuela on the Caribbean Sea west of Caracas. It was frequently sacked by buccaneers during the colonial period. Population, 94,000.

Puerto de San·ta Ma·rí·a (pwër'tō də sän'tə mə-rē'ə, thĕ sän'tä mə-rē'ä) A city of southwest Spain on the Gulf of Cádiz north of Cádiz. It is a commercial center known for its export of sherry. Population, 59,844.

Puer·tol·la·no (pwër'tl-yä'nə, -tô-lyä'nô) A city of central Spain south-southwest of Madrid. It is an agricultural trade center in a mining region. Population, 51,845.

Puer·to Ri·co (pwër'tə rē'kō, pôrt'ə, pôrt'ə, pwër'tō) Abbr. PR, P.R. A self-governing island commonwealth of the United States in the Caribbean Sea east of Hispaniola. Discovered by Columbus in 1493, it was colonized by the Spanish in the 16th century and ceded to the United States in 1898 after the Spanish-American War. Commonwealth status was proclaimed in 1952 and has been upheld by various plebiscites since the 1960's. San Juan is the capital and the largest city. Population, 3,522,037. —Puer'to Ri'can adj. & n.

Puer·to Val·lar·ta (pwër'tō vä-yär'tə, -tä, pwër'tô) A city of west-central Mexico on the Pacific Ocean west of Guadalajara. It is a popular coastal resort. Population, 38,645.

puff (pŭf) n. 1. a. A short, forceful exhalation of breath. b. A short, sudden gust of wind. c. A brief, sudden emission of air, vapor, or smoke. d. A short, sibilant sound produced by a puff. 2. An amount of vapor, smoke, or similar material released in a puff. 3. An act of drawing in and expelling the breath, as in smoking tobacco. 4. A swelling or rounded protuberance. 5. Puff pastry. 6. A light, soft pad for applying powder or lotion. 7. A gathered, protruding portion of fabric. 8. A light, padded bed covering. 9. a. An approving or flattering recommendation. b. A piece of writing, as on the jacket of a book, containing often exaggerated praise, used for promotional purposes. 10. Genetics. A localized region of swelling in certain chromosomes indicating the active synthesis of DNA and RNA. — v. puffed, puff-ing, puffs. — v. intr. 1. To blow in puffs.

2. To come forth in puffs: steam puffing from an engine. 3. To breathe forcefully and rapidly: huffed and puffed up the stairs. 4. To emit puffs. 5. To take puffs on smoking material: puffing on a cigar. 6. To swell or seem to swell, as with pride or air. Often used with up: He puffed up and glared at the importuning questioner.

— v. tr. 1. To emit or give forth in puffs. 2. To impel with puffs. 3. To smoke (a cigar, for example). 4. To inflate or distend. 5. To fill with pride or conceit.

6. To publicize with often exaggerated praise: publishers who puff their new books.

[From Middle English puffen, to puff, from Old English pyffan, perhaps of imitative origin.] — puff'i-ly adv. — puff'i-ness n. — puff'y adj.

puff adder (pŭf ăd'ər) n. 1. A venomous African viper (Bitis arietans) having crescent-shaped yellowish markings. 2. See hognose snake. [So called because it inflates its body when excited.]

puff-ball (pŭf'bôl') n. 1. Any of various fungi of the genus Lycoperdon and related genera, having a ball-shaped fruiting body that when pressed or struck releases the enclosed spores in puffs of dust. 2. Informal. The rounded head of a dandelion that has gone to seed.

puffed-up (pŭft'ŭp') adj. Displaying exaggerated dignity or self-importance; pompous.

puff-er (pŭf'ər) n. Any of various prickly, often poisonous, chiefly marine fishes of the family Tetraodontidae that are capable of puffing up by swallowing water or air. Also called blowfish, swellfish.

puff-er-y (pŭf'ə-rē) n. Flattering, often exaggerated praise and publicity, especially when used for promotional purposes.

puf-fin (pŭf'fĭn) n. Any of several sea birds of the genera Fratercula and Lunda of northern regions, characteristically having black and white plumage and a vertically flattened, triangular bill that is brightly colored during breeding season.

[Middle English poffoun, puffon, perhaps from puf, puff. See PUFF.]

puff pastry (pŭf pā'strē) n. A light, flaky, inflated pastry that is formed by rolling and folding the dough in layers so that it expands when baked.

pug¹ (pŭg) n. 1. A small sturdy dog of an ancient breed originating in China, having a snub nose, a wrinkled face, a squarish body, short smooth hair, and a curled tail. 2. A pug nose. [Origin unknown.]

pug² (pŭg) n. 1. Clay ground and kneaded with water into a plastic consistency for forming bricks or pottery. 2. A machine for grinding and mixing clay. — v.

tr. pugged, pug-ging, pugs. 1. To work or knead (clay) with water. 2. To fill in with clay or mortar. 3. To make soundproof by covering or packing with clay, mortar, sawdust, or felt. [Origin unknown.]

pug³ (pŭg) n. A footprint, track, or trail, especially of an animal; a pugmark. [Hindi pag, probably from Sanskrit padakam, footstep, foot, from padam. See ped- in Appendix.]

pug⁴ (pŭg) n. Slang. A fighter, especially a boxer. [Short for PUGILIST, boxer, from Latin pugil. See PUGILISM.]

Pu·get Sound (pyōō'jīt sound) A deep inlet of the Pacific Ocean in western Washington extending south from the Strait of Juan de Fuca through Admiralty Inlet. It was explored and named by Capt. George Vancouver for his aide, Peter Puget, in 1792.

pug·gree (pŭg'rē) also pug·ga·ree or pug·a·ree (pŭg'ə-rē) n. A cloth band or scarf wrapped around the crown of a hat or sun helmet. [Hindi pagṛī, turban, from Sanskrit parikara, girdle for a garment.]

pu·gi·lism (pyōō'jə-līz'əm) n. Sports. The skill, practice, and sport of fighting with the fists; boxing. [From Latin pugil, pugilist. See peuk- in Appendix.]

—pu'gi·list n. —pu'gi·lis'tic adj.

pu·gil stick (pyōō'jəl stīk) n. A long pole with padded ends used in the armed forces to simulate bayonet fighting. [Latin pugil, pugilist; see peuk- in Appendix + STICK.]

Pu·glia (pōō'lyä) See Apulia.

pug·mark (pŭg'märk') n. The mark, print, track, or trail of an animal; a pug.

pug·na·cious (pŭg-nā'shəs) adj. Combative in nature; belligerent. See Synonyms at belligerent. [From Latin pugnāx, pugnāc-, from pugnāre, to fight, from pugnus, fist. See peuk- in Appendix.] —pug·na'cious·ly adv.

—pug·na'cious·ness, pug·nac'i·ty (-näs'ī-tē) n.

pug nose (pŭg nōz) n. A short nose that is somewhat flattened and turned up at the end. [From PUG¹, ape (obsolete), pug.] —pug'-nosed' (pŭg'nōzd') adj.

puis·ne (pyōō'nē) Chiefly British. adj. Lower in rank; junior. — n. One of lesser rank than another, especially an associate judge. [Old French puisne : puis, afterward (ultimately from Latin post); see apo- in Appendix + ne, born (from Latin nātus, past participle of nāscī, to be born); see genə- in Appendix.]

puis·sance (pwīs'əns, pyōō'ī-səns, pyōō-īs'əns) n. Power; might. [Middle English, from Old French, from poissant, powerful, present participle of poir, to be able. See POWER.] —puis'sant adj. —puis'sant·ly adv.

puke (pyōōk) Slang. v. intr. tr. puked, puk·ing, pukes. To vomit (ingested matter) or experience vomiting. — n. 1. The act of vomiting. 2. Vomit. [Perhaps imitative.]

puk·ka also puck·a (pŭk'ə) adj. 1. Genuine; authentic. 2. Superior; first-class. [Hindi pakkā, cooked, ripe, from Sanskrit pakva-, from pacati, he cooks. See pek^w- in Appendix.]

pul (pōōl) n. pl. puls or pu-li (pōō'lē). A unit of currency in Afghanistan. See Table at currency. [Persian pūl, perhaps from Late Greek phollis, bellows, money bag, from Latin follis. See FOOL.]

pu·la (pōō'lä) n. A basic unit of currency in Botswana. See Table at currency.

Pu·la (pōō'lə, -lä) A city of western Croatia on the Adriatic Sea. Captured by Rome in 178 B.C., it was a major naval station of the Hapsburg empire and passed to Italy in 1919 and to Yugoslavia in 1947. Population, 47,414.

Pu·las·ki (pōō-läs'kē, pə-), Casimir or Kazimierz. 1747-1779. Polish patriot and general who aided American forces in the Revolutionary War, commanding the defense of Charleston (1779) and leading a cavalry brigade in the siege of Savannah, during which he was mortally wounded.

pul·chri·tude (pül'krī-tōōd', -tyōōd') n. Great physical beauty and appeal. [Middle English pulcritude, from Latin pulchritūdō, from pulcher, pulchr-, beautiful.]

pul·chri·tu·di·nous (pül'krī-tōōd'n-əs, -tyōōd'-) adj. Characterized by or having great physical beauty and appeal.

pule (pyōōl) v. intr. puled, pul·ing, pules. To whine; whimper. [Perhaps from French piauler, of imitative origin.] — pul'er n.

pu·li¹ (pōōl'ē, pyōō'lē) n. pl. pu·lis or pu·lik (pōōl'ēk, pyōō'lēk). A longhaired sheepdog of a Hungarian breed. [Hungarian.]

pu·li² (pōō'lē) n. A plural of pul.

pu·lik (pōōl'ēk, pyōō'lēk) n. A plural of puli¹.

Pu·lit·zer (pōōl'īt-sər, pyōō'līt-), Joseph. 1847-1911. Hungarian-born American journalist and newspaper publisher who owned newspapers in St. Louis and New York City and established and endowed the Pulitzer Prizes.

Pulitzer Prize (pōōl'īt-sər prīz) n. Any of several awards established by Joseph Pulitzer and conferred annually for accomplishment in various fields of American journalism, literature, and music.

pull (pōōl) v. pulled, pull·ing, pulls. — v. tr. 1. To apply force to so as to cause or tend to cause motion toward the source of the force. 2. To remove from a fixed position; extract: The dentist pulled the tooth. 3. To tug at; jerk or tweak. 4. To rip or tear; rend. 5. To stretch (taffy, for example) repeatedly. 6. To strain (a muscle, for example) injuriously. 7. Informal. To attract; draw: a performer who pulls large crowds. 8. Slang. To draw out (a weapon) in readiness for use: pull a gun; pulled a knife on me. 9. Informal. To remove: pulled the engine; pulled the tainted meat product from the stores. 10. Baseball. To hit (a ball) in the direction one is facing when the swing is carried through. 11. Nautical. a. To operate (an oar) in rowing. b. To transport or propel by rowing. c. To be rowed by: That boat pulls six oars. 12. To rein in (a horse) to keep it from winning a race. 13. Printing. To produce (a print or an impression) from type. — v. intr. 1. To exert force in moving something toward that force. 2. To drink or inhale deeply:

pulled on the cold beer with gusto; pull on a cigarette. 3. Nautical. To row a boat.

4. Informal. To express or feel great sympathy or empathy: We're pulling for our new President. — n. 1. The act or process of pulling. 2. Force exerted in pulling or required to overcome resistance in pulling. 3. A sustained effort: a long pull across the mountains. 4. Something, such as a knob on a drawer, that is used for pulling. 5. A deep inhalation or draft, as on a cigarette or of a beverage.

6. Slang. A means of gaining special advantage; influence: The lobbyist has pull with the senator. 7. Informal. Ability to draw or attract; appeal: a star with pull at the box office. —phrasal verbs. pull away. 1. To move away or backward; withdraw: The limousine pulled away from the curb. 2. To move ahead: The horse pulled away and took the lead in the race. pull back. To execute an orderly withdrawal, especially of troops. pull down. 4. To demolish; destroy: pull down an old office building. 5. To reduce to a lower level. 6. To depress, as in spirits or health. 7. Informal. To draw (money) as wages: pulls down a hefty salary. pull in. 8. To arrive at a destination: We pulled in at midnight. 9. To rein in; restrain. 10. To arrest (a criminal suspect, for example). pull off. Informal. To perform in spite of difficulties or obstacles; bring off: pulled off a last-minute victory. pull out. 12. To leave or depart: The train pulls out at noon. 13. To withdraw, as from a situation or commitment: After the crash, many Wall Street investors pulled out. pull over. 14. To bring a vehicle to a stop at a curb or at the side of a road: We pulled over to watch the sunset. 15. To instruct or force (a motorist) to bring his or her vehicle to a stop at a curb or at the side of a road: The state trooper pulled the speeding motorist over. pull round. To restore or be restored to sound health. pull through. To come or bring successfully through trouble or illness. pull up. 18. To bring or come to a halt. 19. To move to a position or place ahead, as in a race. —idioms. pull a fast one. Informal. To play a trick or perpetrate a fraud. pull (oneself) together. To regain one's composure. pull (one's) punch (or pull (one's) punches). To refrain from deploying all the resources or force at one's disposal: didn't pull any punches during the negotiations. pull (one's) weight. To do one's own share, as of work. pull out all the stops. Informal. To deploy all the resources or force at one's disposal: The Inaugural Committee pulled out all the stops when arranging the ceremonies. pull (someone's) leg. To play a joke on; tease. pull strings (or pull wires). Informal. To exert secret control or influence in order to gain an end. pull the plug on. Slang. To remove all restraints on: "The federal government pulled the plug on deficit spending" (Christian Science Monitor). pull the rug (out) from under. Informal. To remove all support and assistance from, usually suddenly. pull the wool over (someone's) eyes. To deceive; hoodwink. pull together. To make a joint effort. pull up stakes. To clear out; leave: She pulled up stakes in New England and moved to the desert. [Middle English pullen, from Old English pullian.] —pull'er n.

SYNONYMS: pull, drag, draw, haul, tow, tug. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause something to move toward the source of an applied force”: pull a sled up a hill; drag furniture across the floor; draw up a chair; hauling wood from the forest; a car towing a trailer; tugging at the oars.

ANTONYM: push

pull-back (pōol'bāk') n. 1. The act or process of pulling back, especially an orderly troop withdrawal. 2. A device for holding or drawing back: a pullback for heavy draperies.

pull date (pōol dāt) n. A date stamped on a perishable item of food, such as milk, after which it should not be sold.

pul-let (pōol'it) n. A young domestic hen, usually one that is less than one year old. [Middle English pulet, from Old French polet, diminutive of poul, cock, and poule, hen both from Latin pullus, young fowl, young animal, chicken. See pau- in Appendix.]

pul-ley (pōol'ē) n. pl. pul-leys. 1. A simple machine consisting essentially of a wheel with a grooved rim in which a pulled rope or chain can run to change the direction of the pull and thereby lift a load. 2. A wheel turned by or driving a belt. [Middle English poley, from Old French polie, and from Medieval Latin poliva both ultimately from Greek polos, axis. See k^wel-¹ in Appendix.]

pull-man (pōol'mən) adj. Small, long, and narrow in architectural design: a pullman hall; a pullman kitchen. [From its resemblance to a PULLMAN².]

Pull-man¹ (pōol'mən) A city of southeast Washington south of Spokane. An agricultural trade center, it is the seat of Washington State University (founded 1890). Population, 23,478.

Pullman² (pōol'mən) n. 1. A railroad parlor car or sleeping car. Also called Pullman car 2. A large suitcase. Also called Pullman case [After George Mortimer Pullman (1831-1897), American industrialist and inventor.]

pull-on (pōol'ön', -ôn') n. A garment, such as a sweater or pair of pants, designed to be easily pulled on.

pul-lo-rum disease (pə-lōr'əm dī-zēz', -lōr'-) n. A contagious, often fatal diarrheal disease of young poultry, caused by the bacterium Salmonella pullorum and usually transmitted by infected hens through their eggs. [New Latin pullōrum, specific epithet of Salmonella pullōrum, from Latin, genitive plural of pullus, young fowl. See PULLET.]

pull-out (pōol'out') n. 1. A withdrawal, especially of troops. 2. Change from a dive to level flight. Used of an aircraft. 3. An object designed to be pulled out.

pull-o-ver (pōol'ō'vər) n. A garment, such as a sweater, that is put on by being drawn over the head.

pull-tab (pööl'tăb') n. A metal ring that is pulled off the top of a can to provide an opening for drinking, pouring, or serving. — adj. Configured with a tab that is pulled off to effect opening: pull-tab cans.

pul·lu·late (pŭl'yə-lăt') v. intr. pul·lu·lat·ed, pul·lu·lat·ing, pul·lu·lates.

1. To put forth sprouts or buds; germinate.
2. To breed rapidly or abundantly.
3. To teem; swarm: a lagoon that pullulated with tropical fish. [Latin pullulāre, pullulāt-, from pullulus, diminutive of pullus, young fowl. See PULLET.]

—pul'lu·la'tion n. —pul'lu·la'tive adj.

pull-up (pööl'ŭp') n. Sports. See chin-up.

pul·mo·nar·y (pööl'mə-nĕr'ĕ, pŭl'-) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or affecting the lungs: pulmonary tuberculosis. 2. Having lungs or lunglike organs. [Latin pulmōnārius, from pulmō, pulmōn-, lung. See pleu- in Appendix.]

pulmonary artery (pööl'mə-nĕr'ĕ ār'tə-rĕ) n. An artery that carries venous blood from the right ventricle of the heart to the lungs.

pulmonary vein (pööl'mə-nĕr'ĕ vān) n. A vein that carries oxygenated blood from the lungs to the left atrium of the heart.

pul·mo·nate (pööl'mə-nāt', pŭl'-) adj. 1. Having lungs or lunglike organs.

2. Of or belonging to the Pulmonata, a subclass of gastropods including terrestrial snails and slugs and certain freshwater snails that are capable of breathing air through lunglike sacs. — n. A gastropod of the subclass Pulmonata. [From Latin pulmō, pulmōn-, lung. See PULMONARY.]

pul·mon·ic (pööl-mŏn'ik, pŭl'-) adj. Of or relating to the lungs; pulmonary.

pulp (pŭlp) n. 1. A soft, moist, shapeless mass of matter. 2. The soft, moist part of fruit. 3. A mass of pressed vegetable matter: apple pulp. 4. The soft pith forming the contents of the stem of a plant. 5. A mixture of cellulose material, such as wood, paper, and rags, ground up and moistened to make paper. 6. The soft tissue forming the inner structure of a tooth and containing nerves and blood vessels. 7. A mixture of crushed ore and water. 8. A publication, such as a magazine or book, containing lurid subject matter. — v. pulped, pulp·ing, pulps. — v. tr. 1. To reduce to pulp. See Synonyms at crush. 2. To remove the pulp from. — v. intr. To be reduced to a pulpy consistency. [Middle English, from Latin pulpa, fleshy parts of the body, fruit pulp.] —pulp'i·ness n.

—pulp'ous (pŭl'pəs), pulp'y adj.

pul·pit (pööl'pĭt, pŭl'-) n. 1. An elevated platform, lectern, or stand used in preaching or conducting a religious service. 2. a. Clerics considered as a group. b. The ministry of preaching. 3. An elevated platform, such as one used by harpooners in a whaling boat. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin pulpitum, from Latin pulpitum, wooden platform.]

pulp·wood (pŭlp'wōd') n. Soft wood, such as spruce, aspen, or pine, used in making paper.

pul-que (pōōl'kā', -kē, pōōl'-) n. A thick, fermented alcoholic beverage made in Mexico from various species of agave. [American Spanish, from Nahuatl polihqui, decomposed, lost.]

pul-sar (pŭl'sär') n. Astronomy. Any of several celestial radio sources emitting short, intense bursts of radio waves, x-rays, or visible electromagnetic radiation at regular intervals, generally believed to be rotating neutron stars. [puls(ating st)ar.] pul-sate (pŭl'sāt') v. intr. pul-sat-ed, pul-sat-ing, pul-sates. 1. To expand and contract rhythmically; beat. 2. To quiver; vibrate. [Latin pulsāre, pulsāt- frequentative of pellere, to beat. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: pulsate, pulse, beat, palpitate, throb. These verbs mean to exhibit recurrent rhythmical movements of or like those involved in the periodic expansion and contraction of the heart. Pulsate, pulse, and beat imply regular, vigorous movement: The emergency room pulsated with activity. Waves of excitement pulsed through us as the race began. The patient's heart continued to beat strongly. To palpitate is to pulsate with excessive rapidity and often arrhythmically, as a malfunctioning heart might; the term may also denote a trembling, shaking, or quivering movement: "fountains palpitating in the heat" (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow). Throb suggests strong, sometimes violent pulsation; the word is especially associated with emotional states such as agitation, exhilaration, anxiety, or stress: "Although her temples throbbed, she tried to analyze the letter" (Winston Churchill). "His lonely heart throbbed at the warm, firm grasp of this friend's hand" (Owen Wister).

pul-sa-tile (pŭl'sə-təl, -tīl') adj. Undergoing pulsation; vibrating. [Medieval Latin pulsātilis, from Latin pulsātus, past participle of pulsāre frequentative of pellere, to beat. See PULSATE.]

pul-sa-tion (pŭl-sā'shən) n. 1. The act of pulsating. 2. A single beat, throb, or vibration.

pul-sa-tor (pŭl'sā'tər, pŭl-sā'-) n. A pulsating device or machine.

pul-sa-to-ry (pŭl'sə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Having rhythmical vibration or movement.

pulse¹ (pŭls) n. 1. The rhythmical throbbing of arteries produced by the regular contractions of the heart, especially as palpated at the wrist or in the neck.

2. a. A regular or rhythmical beating. b. A single beat or throb. 3. Physics. a. A brief, sudden change in a normally constant quantity: a pulse of current; a pulse of radiation. b. Any of a series of intermittent occurrences characterized by a brief, sudden change in a quantity. 4. The perceptible emotions or sentiments of a group of people: "a man who had... his finger on the pulse of America" (Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.). — v. intr. pulsed, puls-ing, puls-es. 1. To pulsate; beat: "The nation pulsed with music and proclamation, with rages and moral pretensions" (Lance Morrow). See Synonyms at pulsate. 2. Physics. To undergo a series of intermittent occurrences characterized by brief, sudden changes in a quantity.

—idiom. take the pulse of. To judge the mood or views of (a political electorate, for example): The politician was able to take the pulse of the grassroots voters without becoming overly absorbed. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pulsus, from past participle of pellere, to beat. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.]

pulse² (pŭls) n. 1. The edible seeds of certain pod-bearing plants, such as peas and beans. 2. A plant yielding these seeds. [Middle English pols, from Old French, from Latin puls, pottage of meal and pulse, probably ultimately from Greek poltos.]

pulse-jet (pŭls/'jět') n. A jet engine in which air intake and combustion occur intermittently, producing rapid periodic bursts of thrust.

pulse modulation (pŭls möj'ə-lā/'shən) n. A system of modulation in which pulses are altered and controlled in order to represent the message to be communicated.

pul-som-e-ter (pŭl-sŏm/'ĩ-tər) n. A pump without pistons that operates by means of pulsed condensation of steam. Also called vacuum pump pul-ver-a-ble (pŭl/'vər-ə-bəl) adj. That can be pulverized: pulverable stone.

pul-ver-ize (pŭl/'və-rīz') v. pul-ver-ized, pul-ver-iz-ing, pul-ver-iz-es. — v. tr. 1. To pound, crush, or grind to a powder or dust. 2. To demolish. — v. intr. To be ground or reduced to powder or dust. [Middle English pulverizen, from Late Latin pulverizāre, from Latin pulvis, pulver-, dust.] —pul/'ver-iz'a-ble adj. —pul/'ver-i-za'tion (-vər-'ĩ-zā/'shən) n. —pul/'ver-iz'er n.

pul-ver-u-lent (pŭl-'vər'yə-lənt, -vər'ə-) adj. 1. Made of, covered with, or crumbling to fine powder or dust. 2. Dusty; crumbly. [Latin pulverulentus: from pulvis, pulver-, dust + -ulentus, abounding in.]

pul-vil-lus (pŭl-'vīl'əs) n. pl. pul-vil-li (-vīl'ĩ'). A soft, cushionlike pad on the foot of an insect, such as the housefly, by which it clings to a surface. [Latin, short for pulvīnulus, diminutive of pulvīnus, cushion.]

pul-vi-nate (pŭl/'və-nāt') also pul-vi-nat-ed (-nā'tīd) adj. 1. Shaped like a cushion. 2. Botany. Having a swelling at the base. Used of a leafstalk. [Latin pulvīnātus, from pulvīnus, cushion.]

pul-vi-nus (pŭl-'vī'nəs, -vēl'-) n. pl. pul-vi-ni (-nī'). A cushionlike swelling at the base of the stalk of a leaf or leaflet. [Latin pulvīnus, cushion.]

pu-ma (pyŏŏ/'mə, pŏŏ'-) n. See mountain lion. [Spanish, from Quechua puma.]

pum-e-lo (pŭm'ə-lŏ') n. pl. pum-e-los. See shaddock. [Variant of POMELO.]

pum-ice (pŭm'is) n. A light, porous, glassy lava, used in solid form as an abrasive and in powdered form as a polish and an abrasive. — v. tr. pum-iced, pum-ic-ing, pum-ic-es. To clean, polish, or smooth with pumice. [Middle pum·mel (pūm'əl) v. tr. pum·meled also pum·melled, pum·mel·ing also pum·mel·ling, pum·mels also pum·mels. To beat, as with the fists; pommel: The thief was pushed and pummeled by an angry crowd. See Synonyms at beat.

English, from Anglo-Norman pomis, from Late Latin pōmex, from Latin pūmex, alteration of spūma, foam.] —pu-mi'ceous (pyōō-mīsh'əs, pə-) adj.

—pum'ic-er n.

— n. The act of beating, as with the fists. [Alteration of POMMEL.]

pump¹ (pūmp) n. 1. A machine or device for raising, compressing, or transferring fluids. 2. Physiology. A molecular mechanism for the active transport of ions or molecules across a cell membrane. 3. Physics. Electromagnetic radiation used to raise atoms or molecules to a higher energy level. — v. pumped, pump·ing, pumps. — v. tr. 1. To raise or cause to flow by means of a pump. 2. To draw, deliver, or pour forth as if with a pump: pumped new life into the economy. 3. To remove the water from: pump out a flooded basement. 4. To cause to move with the up-and-down motion of a pump handle: a bicyclist pumping the pedals. 5. To propel, eject, or insert with or as if with a pump. 6. Physics. To raise (atoms or molecules) to a higher energy level by exposing them to electromagnetic radiation at a resonant frequency. 7. Physiology. To transport (ions or molecules) against a concentration gradient by the expenditure of chemically stored energy. 8. To question closely or persistently: pump a witness for secret information. — v. intr. 1. To operate a pump. 2. To raise or move gas or liquid with a pump. 3. To move up and down in the manner of a pump handle. —phrasal verb. pump up. 1. To inflate with gas by means of a pump: pump up a tire. 2. Slang. To fill with enthusiasm, strength, and energy: The lively debate really pumped us up. 3. Sports. To be actively involved in a body-building program: I saw him pumping up at the gym. —idiom. pump iron. Sports. To lift weights. [Middle English pumpe.] —pump'er n.

pump² (pūmp) n. A woman's shoe that has medium or high heels and no fastenings. [Origin unknown.]

pumped storage (pūmpt stôr'ij) n. A system of generating electricity with hydroelectric power, in which the electricity is generated during hours of peak consumption by using water that has been pumped into an elevated reservoir during the hours of low consumption.

pum·per·nick·el (pūm'pər-nīk'əl) n. A dark, sourish bread made from whole, coarsely ground rye. [German, probably from dialectal, term of abuse : obsolete Pumper, breaking wind (from dialectal pumpfern, to break wind, from Middle High German, to knock, frequentative of pumpen, of imitative origin) + German Nickel, goblin; see NICKEL.]

pump·kin (pūmp'kīn, pūm'-, pūng'-) n. 1. a. A coarse, trailing vine (Cucurbita pepo) widely cultivated for its fruit. b. The large pulpy round fruit of this plant, having a thick, orange-yellow rind and numerous seeds. c. Any of several other vines of the genus Cucurbita, especially C. maxima or C. moschata, bearing large pumpkinlike squashes. 2. Color. A moderate to strong orange. [Alteration (influenced by -KIN), of obsolete pumpion, from obsolete French pompon, popon, from Old French pepon, from Late Latin pepōn, from Latin, watermelon or gourd, from Greek, ripe, large melon. See pek^w- in Appendix.]

pump·kin·seed (pŭmp'kĭn-sĕd', pŭm'-, pŭng'-) n. 1. The seed of a pumpkin. 2. A North American sunfish (Lepomis gibbosus) having a rounded, mostly orange body with a bright red spot on each gill cover.

pun (pŭn) n. A play on words, sometimes on different senses of the same word and sometimes on the similar sense or sound of different words. — v. intr.

punned, pun·ning, puns. To make puns or a pun. [Origin unknown.]

—pun'ning·ly adv.

WORD HISTORY: The origin of the word pun is lost in obscurity, perhaps deservedly so in the eyes of those who consider the pun the feeblest form of wit. The word pun is first recorded in a work of 1662 written by John Dryden. In a slightly later passage of 1676 we find the word pun in the company of the words pundigrion and punnet with the same sense. Punnet is probably a diminutive of pun, as are the later punlet (used by Samuel Taylor Coleridge in 1819) and punkin (Henry James, 1866). But pundigrion, although recorded later, may have been around earlier than pun and might be its source. Pundrigrion in turn might be an alteration of the obsolete Italian word puntiglio, “fine point,” which we have in English as punctilio. In any case, the word pun has given birth to some derivatives of its own, including punnigram, modeled on epigram, and punnology.

punch¹ (pŭnch) n. 1. A tool for circular or other piercing: a leather punch. 2. A tool for forcing a pin, bolt, or rivet in or out of a hole. 3. A tool for stamping a design on a surface. 4. A tool for making a countersink. — v. intr. tr.

punched, punch·ing, punch·es. To use a punch or use a punch on. [Middle English pounce, punche, from Old French poinçon, ponchon; see PUNCHEON¹, V., from Middle English pouncen, punchen, to prick, from Old French poinçonner, ponchoner, to emboss with a punch. See PUNCH².]

punch² (pŭnch) v. tr. punched, punch·ing, punch·es. 1. To hit with a sharp blow of the fist. 2. a. To poke or prod with a stick. b. Western U.S. To herd (cattle). 3. To depress (a key or button, for example) in order to activate a device or perform an operation: punched the “repeat” key; punched in the number on the computer. — n. 1. A blow with the fist. 2. Vigor or drive. See Synonyms at vigor.

—phrasal verbs. punch in. To check in formally at a job upon arrival.

punch out. 2. To check out formally at a job upon departure. 3. Slang. To eject from a military aircraft. —idiom. beat to the punch. To make the first decisive move: a marketing team that beat all the competitors to the punch. [Middle English punchen, to thrust, prod, prick, from Old French poinçonner, ponchonner, to emboss with a punch, from poinçon, ponchon, pointed tool. See PUNCHEON¹.]

—punch'less adj.

punch³ (pŭnch) n. A beverage of fruit juices and sometimes carbonated water or soda, often spiced and mixed with a wine or liquor base. [Perhaps from Hindi pañc-, five-, from Sanskrit pañca, (from the hypothesis that it was originally prepared from five ingredients). See penk^we in Appendix.]

Punch (pŭnch) n. The quarrelsome hook-nosed husband of Judy in the comic puppet show Punch and Judy. —idiom. pleased as Punch. Highly pleased; gratified. [Short for PUNCHINELLO.]

punch-board (pŭnch'bôrd', -bôrd') n. Games. A small, usually rectangular board, used as a game of chance, that contains many holes each filled with a folded slip of paper that when punched out indicates a designated prize, win, or loss.

punch bowl (pŭnch bôl) n. A large bowl for serving a beverage, such as punch.

punch card (pŭnch kârd) also punched card (pŭncht kârd) n. Computer Science. A medium for feeding data into a computer, essentially a card punched with holes or notches to represent letters and numbers or with a pattern of holes to represent related data. Also called Hollerith card punch-drunk (pŭnch'drŭngk') adj. 1. Showing signs of brain damage caused by repeated blows to the head. Used especially of a boxer. 2. Behaving in a bewildered, confused, or dazed manner.

punched card (pŭncht kârd) n. Computer Science. Variant of punch card.

pun-cheon¹ (pŭn'chən) n. 1. A short wooden upright used in structural framing. 2. A piece of broad, heavy, roughly dressed timber with one face finished flat. 3. A punching, perforating, or stamping tool, especially one used by a goldsmith. [Middle English punchon, from Old French ponçon, ponchon, from Vulgar Latin punctiō*, punctiōn-, punch, from punctiāre*, to pierce, from Latin punctus, past participle of pungere, to prick. See peuk- in Appendix.]

pun-cheon² (pŭn'chən) n. 1. A cask with a capacity of from 72 to 120 gallons (273 to 454 liters). 2. The amount of liquid contained in a puncheon. [Middle English ponchon, from Old French poinçon, poinchon, punch, cask (probably because cask was inspected and marked with a punch). See PUNCHEON¹.]

punch-er (pŭn'chər) n. A cowpuncher.

Pun-chi-nel-lo (pŭn'chə-nĕl'ō) n. pl. Pun-chi-nel-los or Pun-chi-nel-loes.

1. The short, fat buffoon or clown in an Italian puppet show. 2. One who is felt to resemble a short, fat clown. [Variant of Polichinello, from Italian dialectal Pollecina, diminutive of pollecena, turkey pullet (from the resemblance between its beak and Punchinello's nose), ultimately from Latin pullus, young chicken. See PULLET.]

punch-ing bag (pŭn'chĭng bǎg) n. Sports. A stuffed or inflated leather bag that is usually suspended so that it can be punched with the fists for exercise.

punch line (pŭnch lĭn) n. The climax of a joke or humorous story.

punch-out (pŭnch'out') n. A section of material, such as cardboard, that is scored or perforated so that it may easily be pushed out.

punch press (pŭnch prĕs) n. A power press that can be fitted with various dies, as for metalworking.

punch tape (pŭnch tǎp) n. Computer Science. A paper ribbon in which holes representing data to be processed by a computer are punched.

punch-up (pŭnch'ŭp') n. Chiefly British. A fistfight.

punch-y (pŭn'chĕ) adj. punch-i-er, punch-i-est. 1. Characterized by vigor or drive: "He speaks in short, punchy sentences, using plain, populist words that excite" (Washington Post). 2. Groggy or dazed from or as if from a punch or series of punches; punch-drunk. —punch'i-ly adv. —punch'i-ness n.

punc-tate (pŭngk'tāt') also punc-tat-ed (-tā'tĭd) adj. Having tiny spots, points, or depressions. [From Latin pŭnctum, prick mark, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See PUNCTUATE.] —punc-ta'tion n.

punc-til-i-o (pŭngk-tĭl'ĕ-ō') n. pl. punc-til-i-os. 1. A fine point of etiquette. 2. Precise observance of formalities. [Obsolete Italian punctiglio, from Spanish puntillo, diminutive of punto, point, from Latin pŭnctum, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See PUNGENT.]

punc-til-i-ous (pŭngk-tĭl'ĕ-əs) adj. 1. Strictly attentive to minute details of form in action or conduct. See Synonyms at meticulous. 2. Precise; scrupulous. —punc-til'i-ous-ly adv. —punc-til'i-ous-ness n.

punc-tu-al (pŭngk'chōō-əl) adj. 1. Acting or arriving exactly at the time appointed; prompt. 2. Paid or accomplished at or by the appointed time. 3. Precise; exact. 4. Confined to or having the nature of a point in space. [Middle English, sharp-pointed, from Medieval Latin pŭnctuālis, from Latin pŭnctum, point, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See PUNGENT.] —punc'tu-al/i-ty (-ăl'ĭ-tĕ), punc'tu-al-ness (-əl-nĭs) n. —punc'tu-al-ly adv.

punc-tu-ate (pŭngk'chōō-āt') v. punc-tu-at-ed, punc-tu-at-ing, punc-tu-ates. — v. tr. 1. To provide (a text) with punctuation marks. 2. To interrupt periodically: "lectures punctuated by questions and discussions" (Gilbert Highet). "[There is] a great emptiness in America's West punctuated by Air Force bases" (Alfred Kazin). 3. To stress or emphasize. — v. intr. To use punctuation. [Medieval Latin pŭnctuāre, pŭnctuāt-, from Latin pŭnctum, point, from neuter past participle of pungere, to prick. See peuk- in Appendix.] —punc'tu-a'tive adj. —punc'tu-a'tor n.

punc-tu-a-tion (pŭngk'chōō-ā'shən) n. 1. a. The use of standard marks and signs in writing and printing to separate words into sentences, clauses, and phrases in order to clarify meaning. b. The marks so used. 2. The act or an instance of punctuating.

punctuation mark (pŭngk'chōō-ā'shən märk) n. One of a set of marks or signs, such as the comma (,) or the period (.), used to punctuate texts.

punc-ture (pŭngk'chər) v. punc-tured, punc-tur-ing, punc-tures. — v. tr. 1. To pierce with a pointed object. 2. To make (a hole) by piercing. 3. To cause to collapse by piercing. 4. To depreciate or deflate: cutting remarks that punctured my ego. — v. intr. To be pierced or punctured. — n. 1. The act or an instance of puncturing. 2. A hole or depression made by a sharp object, especially a hole in an automotive tire. [From Middle English, a pricking, from Late Latin pūnctūra, from pūnctus, past participle of pungere, to prick. See peuk- in Appendix.] — punc'tur-a-ble adj.

puncture weed (pŭngk'chər wēd) n. A prostrate weed (Tribulus terrestris) native to the Old World, having opposite, pinnately compound leaves and woody fruit with stout, divergent spines. Also called puncture vine [From the fact that the fruit can puncture tires.]

pun-dit (pŭn'dīt) n. 1. A source of opinion; a critic: a political pundit. 2. A learned person. 3. Hinduism. Variant of pandit. [Hindi paṇḍit, learned man, from Sanskrit paṇḍitaḥ, learned; scholar, perhaps of Dravidian origin.] — pun'dit-ry n.

pung (pŭng) n. New England. A low, one-horse box sleigh. [Short for dialectal tom-pung, from an Algonquian language of southern New England.]

pun-gent (pŭn'jənt) adj. 1. Affecting the organs of taste or smell with a sharp, acrid sensation. 2. a. Penetrating, biting, or caustic: pungent satire. b. To the point; sharp: pungent talks during which the major issues were confronted. 3. Pointed: a pungent leaf. [Latin pungēns, pungent- present participle of pungere, to sting. See peuk- in Appendix.] — pun/gen-cy n. — pun/gent-ly adv.

Pu-nic (pyōō'nīk) adj. 1. Of or relating to ancient Carthage, its inhabitants, or their language. 2. Having the character of treachery attributed to the Carthaginians by the Romans. — n. The dialect of Phoenician spoken in ancient Carthage. [Latin Poenicus, Pūnicus, from Poenus, a Carthaginian, from Greek Phoinix, Phoenician.]

pun-ish (pŭn'ish) v. pun-ished, pun-ish-ing, pun-ish-es. — v. tr. 1. To subject to a penalty for an offense, a sin, or a fault. 2. To inflict a penalty for (an offense). 3. To handle roughly; hurt: My boots were punished by our long trek through the desert. — v. intr. To exact or mete out punishment. [Middle English punissen, punishen, from Old French punir, puniss-, from Latin poenire, pūnīre, from poena, punishment, from Greek poinē. See k^wei-¹ in Appendix.] — pun'ish-a-bil/i-ty n. — pun'ish-a-ble adj. — pun'ish-er n.

SYNONYMS: punish, correct, chastise, discipline, castigate, penalize. These verbs mean to subject a person to a penalty, such as loss, pain, or confinement, for an offense, a sin, or a fault. Punish is the least specific: “The individual who refuses to defend his rights when called by his Government... must be punished as an enemy of his country and friend to her foe” (Andrew Jackson). To correct is to punish so that the offender will mend his or her ways: Regulations formerly permitted prison wardens to correct unruly inmates. Chastise implies punishment, such as corporal punishment or a verbal rebuke, as a means of effecting improvement in behavior: chastise a bully by giving him a thrashing; was roundly chastised for insolence. Discipline stresses punishment inflicted by an authority in order to control an offender or to eliminate or reform unacceptable conduct: The worker was disciplined for insubordination. Castigate means to censure or criticize severely, often in public: The judge castigated the attorney for badgering the witness. Penalize usually implies a monetary penalty or the forfeiture of a privilege or gain because rules or regulations have been broken: Those who file their income-tax returns after April 15 will be penalized.

pun-ish-ment (pŭn'ish-mənt) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of punishing. b. The condition of being punished. 2. A penalty imposed for wrongdoing: “The severity of the punishment must... be in keeping with the kind of obligation which has been violated” (Simone Weil). 3. Rough handling; mistreatment: These old skis have taken a lot of punishment over the years.

pu-ni-tive (pyōō'nī-tīv) adj. Inflicting or aiming to inflict punishment; punishing. [Medieval Latin pūnītīvus, from Latin poenīre, pūnīre, to punish. See PUNISH.] —pu'ni-tive-ly adv. —pu'ni-tive-ness n.

punitive damages (pyōō'nī-tīv dām'ij-iz) pl.n. Law. Damages awarded by a court against a defendant as a deterrent or punishment to redress an egregious wrong perpetrated by the defendant.

pu-ni-to-ry (pyōō'nī-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Inflicting or intended to inflict punishment. [From Latin pūnītus, from past participle of pūnīre, to punish. See PUNISH.]

Pun-jab (pŭn'jāb', pŭn-jāb') A historical region of northwest India and northern Pakistan bounded by the Indus and Jumna rivers. It was a center of the prehistoric Indus Valley civilization and after c. 1500 B.C. the site of early Aryan settlements. The Moguls brought the region to cultural eminence. The Punjab was controlled by Sikhs from 1799 to 1849, when it was annexed by Great Britain. It was partitioned between India and Pakistan in 1947.

Pun-ja-bi also Pan-ja-bi (pŭn-jā'bē, -jāb'ē) adj. Of or relating to the Punjab or the Punjabi language. — n. pl. Pun-ja-bis. 1. A native or inhabitant of the Punjab. 2. An Indic language spoken in the Punjab.

pun-ji stick (pōōn'jē stīk, pŭn'-) n. A very sharp bamboo stake that is concealed at an angle in high grass or in deep mud, often coated with excrement, and planted to wound and infect the feet of enemy soldiers. Also called punji stake [Origin unknown.]

punk (pŭngk) n. 1. Slang. a. A young person, especially a member of a rebellious counterculture group. b. An inexperienced young man. 2. Music. a. Punk rock. b. A punk rocker. 3. a. Slang. A young man who is the sexual partner of an older man. b. Archaic. A prostitute. 4. Dry, decayed wood, used as tinder. 5. Any of various substances that smolder when ignited, used to light fireworks. 6. Chinese incense. — adj. Slang. 1. Of or relating to a style of dress worn by punk rockers and often characterized by unusual clothing, hairstyles, and makeup. 2. Of poor quality; worthless. 3. Weak in spirits or health. [Origin unknown.] —punk'er n.

pun-ka or pun-kah (pŭng'kə) n. A fan used especially in India, made of a palm frond or strip of cloth hung from the ceiling and moved by a servant. [Hindi pankhā, from Sanskrit paṅśakaḥ, fan, from pakṣaḥ, wing.]

punk-ie also punk-y (pŭng'kē) n. pl. punk-ies. Any of various minute, biting flies of the family Ceratopogonidae. Also called biting midge, no-see-um. [Of North American Dutch origin, from Munsee (Delaware language) pónkwəs.]

pun-kin (pŭng'kīn) n. Informal. Variant of pumpkin.

punk rock (pŭngk rök) n. Music. A form of hard-driving rock music characterized by harsh lyrics attacking conventional society and popular culture and often expressing alienation and anger.

punk rocker (pŭngk rök'ər) n. Music. A performer or follower of punk rock music.

punk-y (pŭng'kē) n. Variant of punkie.

pun-ster (pŭn'stər) n. A maker of puns.

punt¹ (pŭnt) Nautical. n. An open, flat-bottomed boat with squared ends, propelled by a long pole and used in shallow waters. — v. punt-ed, punt-ing, punts. — v. tr. 1. To propel (a boat) with a pole. 2. To carry in a punt. — v. intr. To go in a punt. [Probably Middle English punt*, from Old English punt, from Latin pontō, pontōn-, pontoon, flat-bottomed boat, from pōns, pont-, bridge. See pent- in Appendix.] —punt'er n.

punt² (pŭnt) Football. n. A kick in which the ball is dropped from the hands and kicked before it touches the ground. — v. punt-ed, punt-ing, punts. — v. tr. To propel (a ball) by means of a punt. — v. intr. To execute a punt. [Perhaps from dialectal punt, to strike, push, perhaps alteration of bunt.] —punt'er n.

punt³ (pŭnt) v. intr. punt-ed, punt-ing, punts. 1. Games. To lay a bet against the bank, as in roulette. 2. Chiefly British. To gamble. [French ponter, from obsolete pont, past participle of pondre, to put (obsolete), to lay an egg, from Old French, to lay an egg, from Latin pōnere. See PROPOSE.] —punt'er n.

punt⁴ (pünt) n. The indentation in the bottom of a champagne or wine bottle. [Perhaps from punty, iron rod used in glass blowing, probably from French pontil, from pointe, from Old French. See POINT.]

Pun-ta A-re-nas (pōon'tə ə-rən'əs, pōon'tä ä-rě'näs) A city of southern Chile on the Strait of Magellan. Founded in the 1840's, it is the southernmost city in the world. Population, 95,332.

Punta Fi-jo (pōon'tə fē'hō) A city of northwest Venezuela on a peninsula in the Caribbean Sea northeast of Maracaibo. It is a shipping center. Population, 123,000.

pun-ty (pün'tē) n. pl. pun-ties. An iron rod on which molten glass is handled when being shaped and worked. Also called pontil [Probably from French pontil. See PUNT⁴.]

Punx-su-taw-ney (püŋk'sə-tô'nē) A city of west-central Pennsylvania northeast of Pittsburgh. It is an industrial center noted for its annual observance of Groundhog Day, February 2, when "Punxsutawney Phil" emerges from its burrow and is carefully watched for a shadow, thus supposedly presaging six more weeks of winter weather. Population, 6,782.

pu-ny (pyōō'nē) adj. pu-ni-er, pu-ni-est. 1. Of inferior size, strength, or significance; weak: a puny physique; puny excuses. 2. Chiefly Southern U.S. Sickly; ill. [Variant of PUISNE.] —pu'ni-ly adv. —pu'ni-ness n.

pup (püp) n. 1. a. A young dog; a puppy. b. The young of various other canine animals, such as the wolf or fox. c. The young of certain other animals, such as the seal. 2. An inexperienced or conceited young person: a mere pup who had to be put in her place. — v. intr. pupped, pup-ping, pups. To give birth to pups. [Short for PUPPY.]

pu-pa (pyōō'pə) n. pl. pu-pae (-pē) or pu-pas. The nonfeeding stage between the larva and adult in the metamorphosis of holometabolous insects, during which the larva typically undergoes complete transformation within a protective cocoon or hardened case. [Latin, girl, doll.] —pu'pal adj.

pu-pate (pyōō'pāt') v. intr. pu-pat-ed, pu-pat-ing, pu-pates. 1. To become a pupa. 2. To go through a pupal stage. —pu-pa'tion n.

pup-fish (püp'fish') n. pl. pupfish or pup-fish-es. Any of various small kill-fishes of the genus Cyprinodon, inhabiting desert springs and streams of Mexico and the southwest United States.

pu-pil¹ (pyōō'pəl) n. 1. A student under the direct supervision of a teacher or professor. 2. Law. A minor under the supervision of a guardian. [Middle English pupille, orphan, from Old French, from Latin pūpillus, diminutive of pūpus, boy.]

pu-pil² (pyōō'pəl) n. The apparently black circular opening in the center of the iris of the eye, through which light passes to the retina. [Middle English, from Old French pupille, from Latin pūpilla, little doll, pupil of the eye (from the tiny image reflected in it). See PUPIL¹.] —pu'pi-lar adj.

pu·pil·age also pu·pil·lage (pyōō'pə-līj) n. The state or period of being a pupil.

pu·pil·lar·y¹ (pyōō'pə-lēr'ē) adj. Of or relating to a student or ward.

pu·pil·lar·y² (pyōō'pə-lēr'ē) adj. Of or affecting the pupil of the eye.

Pu·pin (pyōō-pēn', pōō'pēn), Michael Idvorsky. 1858-1935. Hungarian-born American physicist and inventor whose works improved the telegraph and telephone and increased the safety and effectiveness of x-ray photography.

pu·pip·a·rous (pyōō-pĭp'ər-əs) adj. Producing well-developed young that are ready to pupate. Used of an insect.

pup·pet (pŭp'ĭt) n. 1. A small figure of a person or an animal, having a cloth body and hollow head, designed to be fitted over and manipulated by the hand. 2. A figure having jointed parts animated from above by strings or wires; a marionette. 3. A toy representing a human figure; a doll. 4. One whose behavior is determined by the will of others: a political puppet. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a puppet show; a puppet government. [Middle English poppet, doll, possibly from Anglo-Norman poppe, doll. See PUPPY.]

pup·pet·eer (pŭp'ĭ-tĭr') n. One who entertains with and operates puppets or marionettes.

pup·pet·ry (pŭp'ĭ-trē) n. pl. pup·pet·ries. 1. The art of making puppets and presenting puppet shows. 2. The actions of puppets. 3. A stilted or artificial dramatic performance.

Pup·pis (pŭp'ĭs) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near Canis Major and Pyxis. [Latin puppis, stern, poop.]

pup·py (pŭp'ē) n. pl. pup·pies. 1. A young dog; a pup. 2. An inexperienced young person; a pup. [Middle English popi, small pet dog, perhaps from Anglo-Norman poppe, doll, from Vulgar Latin puppa*, from Latin pūpa, girl, doll.]

pup·py·ish (pŭp'ē-ĭsh) adj. Resembling or characteristic of a puppy.

puppy love (pŭp'ē lŭv) n. Adolescent love or infatuation.

pup tent (pŭp tĕnt) n. See shelter tent.

Pu·ra·cé (pōōr'ə-sē', pōō-rā-sĕ') A volcano, 4,758 m (15,600 ft) high, in the Andes of southwest Colombia. It erupted in 1827 and again on May 26, 1949.

pur·blind (pŭr'blĭnd') adj. 1. Having poor vision; nearly or partly blind. 2. Slow in understanding or discernment; dull: "a purblind oligarchy that flatly refused to see that history was condemning it to the dustbin" (Jasper Griffin). 3. Obsolete. Completely blind. [Middle English pur blind, totally blind, near-sighted : pur, pure; see PURE + blind, blind; see BLIND.] —pur'blind'ly adv. —pur'blind'ness n.

Pur·cell (pŭr-sĕl'), Edward Mills. Born 1912. American physicist. He shared a 1952 Nobel Prize for work concerning the measurement of magnetic fields in atomic nuclei.

Pur-cell (pûr'səl, pûr-sĕl'), Henry. 1659?-1695. English composer and the leading musical figure of the baroque style in England.

Pur-chas (pûr'chəs), Samuel. 1577?-1626. English compiler of travel books, such as Purchas, His Pilgrimage (1613).

pur-chas-a-ble (pûr'chĭ-sə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be bought: purchasable goods. 2. Capable of being bribed; venal: a purchasable senator. —pur'chas-a-bil/i-ty n.

pur-chase (pûr'chĭs) v. tr. pur-chased, pur-chas-ing, pur-chas-es. 1. To obtain in exchange for money or its equivalent; buy. 2. To acquire by effort; earn. 3. To move or hold with a mechanical device, such as a lever or wrench. — n.

1. a. The act or an instance of buying. b. Something bought. c. Acquisition through the payment of money or its equivalent. 2. A grip applied manually or mechanically to move something or prevent it from slipping. 3. A device, such as a tackle or lever, used to obtain mechanical advantage. 4. A position, as of a lever or one's feet, affording means to move or secure a weight. 5. a. A means of increasing power or influence. b. An advantage that is used in exerting one's power. [Middle English purchasen, to pursue, purchase, from Old French purchacier : pur-, forth (from Latin prō-); see per¹ in Appendix + chacier, to chase; see CHASE¹.] —pur'chas-er n.

pur-chas-ing power (pûr'chĭ-sĭng pou'ər) n. 1. The ability to purchase, generally measured by income. 2. The value of a particular monetary unit in terms of the goods or services that can be purchased with it.

pur-dah (pûr'də) n. 1. a. A curtain or screen, used mainly in India to keep women separate from men or strangers. b. The Hindu or Muslim system of sex segregation, practiced especially by keeping women in seclusion. 2. Social seclusion: "Never have artists been more separate: their inordinate fame, wealth, drug use have driven them into luxurious purdah" (D. Keith Mano). [Urdu pardah, veil, from Persian pardah, from Middle Persian pardak, from Old Persian paridaka-*, from pari-dā-, to place over : pari, around, over; see per¹ in Appendix + dā-, to place; see dhē- in Appendix.]

pure (pyōōr) adj. pur-er, pur-est. 1. Having a homogeneous or uniform composition; not mixed: pure oxygen. 2. Free from adulterants or impurities: pure chocolate. 3. Free of dirt, defilement, or pollution: "A memory without blot or contamination must be... an inexhaustible source of pure refreshment" (Charlotte Brontë). 4. Free of foreign elements. 5. Containing nothing inappropriate or extraneous: a pure literary style. 6. Complete; utter: pure folly. 7. Having no faults; sinless: "I felt pure and sweet as a new baby" (Sylvia Plath). 8. Chaste; virgin. 9. Of unmixed blood or ancestry. 10. Genetics. Produced by self-fertilization or continual inbreeding; homozygous: a pure line. 11. Music. Free from discordant qualities: pure tones. 12. Linguistics. Articulated with a single unchanging speech sound; monophthongal: a pure vowel. 13. Theoretical: pure science. 14. Philosophy. Free of empirical elements: pure reason. [Middle English pur, from Old French, from Latin pūrus. See peuə- in Appendix.] —pure/ly adv.

—pure/ness n.

SYNONYMS: pure, absolute, sheer, simple, unadulterated. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “free of extraneous elements”: pure gold; absolute alcohol; sheer wine; a simple substance; unadulterated coffee.

pure·blood (pyöör/’blüd’) also pure·blood·ed (-blüd’id) adj. Of unmixed ancestry; purebred. —pure/blood’ n.

pure·bred (pyöör/’brëd’) adj. Of or belonging to a recognized strain established by breeding individuals of unmixed lineage over many generations. — n. (pyöör/’brëd’) A purebred animal.

pure democracy (pyöör dī-mök/’rə-sē) n. A democracy in which the power to govern lies directly in the hands of the people rather than being exercised through their representatives.

pu·rée (pyöo-rā’, pyöör/’ā) v. tr. pu·réed, pu·rée·ing, pu·rées. To rub through a strainer or process (food) in a blender. — n. Food prepared by straining or blending. [From French, pureé, from Old French, from feminine past participle of purere, to strain, clean, from Latin pūrāre, to purify, from pūrus, clean. See PURE.]

pur·fle (pûr/’fəl) v. tr. pur·fled, pur·fling, pur·fles. To finish or decorate the border or edge of. — n. also pur·fling (-flīng) An ornamental border or edging. [Middle English purfilen, from Old French porfiler, from Vulgar Latin prōfilāre* : Latin prō-, forth; see PRO⁻¹ + Latin filum, thread; see g^whī- in Appendix.]

pur·ga·tion (pûr-gā/’shən) n. The act of purging or purifying.

pur·ga·tive (pûr/’gə-tīv) adj. Tending to cleanse or purge, especially causing evacuation of the bowels. — n. A purgative agent or medicine; a cathartic.

Pur·ga·toire (pûr/’gə-twär’, -tôr/’ē, -tôr/’ē) A river, about 299 km (186 mi) long, of southeast Colorado flowing northeast to the Arkansas River.

pur·ga·to·ri·al (pûr/’gə-tôr/’ē-əl, -tôr/’-) adj. 1. Serving to purify of sin; expiatory. 2. Of, relating to, or resembling purgatory.

pur·ga·to·ry (pûr/’gə-tôr/’ē, -tôr/’ē) n. pl. pur·ga·to·ries. 1. Roman Catholic Church. A state in which the souls of those who have died in grace must expiate their sins. 2. A place or condition of suffering, expiation, or remorse: a purgatory of drug abuse. — adj. Tending to cleanse or purge. [Middle English purgatorie, from Old French purgatoire, from Medieval Latin pūrgātōrium, from Late Latin, means of purgation, from neuter of pūrgātōrius, cleansing, from Latin pūrgāre, to cleanse. See PURGE.]

purge (pûrj) v. purged, purg-ing, purg-es. — v. tr. 1. a. To free from impurities; purify. b. To remove (impurities and other elements) by or as if by cleansing. 2. To rid of sin, guilt, or defilement. 3. Law. To clear (a person) of a charge or an imputation. Often used with respect to contempt of court. 4. a. To rid (a nation or political party, for example) of people considered undesirable. b. To get rid of (people considered undesirable). See Synonyms at eliminate. 5. Medicine. a. To cause evacuation of (the bowels). b. To induce evacuation of the bowels in an individual. — v. intr. 1. To become pure or clean. 2. Medicine. To undergo or cause an emptying of the bowels. — n. 1. The act or process of purging. 2. Something that purges, especially a medicinal purgative. [Middle English purgen, from Old French purgier, from Latin pûrgâre, from pûrus, pure. See peuə- in Appendix.] — purg'er n.

pu·ri (pöör'ē) n. Variant of poori.

pu·ri·fi·ca·tion (pyöör'ə-fī-kā'shən) n. The act or an instance of cleansing or purifying.

pu·ri·fi·ca·tor (pyöör'ə-fī-kā'tər) n. Ecclesiastical. A cloth used to clean the chalice after the celebration of the Eucharist.

pu·ri·fy (pyöör'ə-fī') v. pu·ri·fied, pu·ri·fy·ing, pu·ri·fies. — v. tr. 1. To rid of impurities; cleanse. 2. To rid of foreign or objectionable elements. 3. To free from sin, guilt, or other defilement. — v. intr. To become clean or pure. [Middle English purifien, from Old French purifier, from Latin pûrificâre: pûrus, clean; see PURE + -ficâre, -fy.] — pu·rif'i·ca·to'ry (pyöör-řif'i-kə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. — pu'ri·fi'er n.

Pu·rim (pöör'ĭm, pöör-rēm') n. Judaism. The 14th of Adar, observed in celebration of the deliverance of the Jews from massacre by Haman. [Hebrew pûrĭm, pl. of pûr, lot (from the lots Haman cast to decide the day of the massacre, Esther 9:24-26), from Akkadian pûru, lot.]

pu·rine (pyöör'ēn') n. 1. A colorless crystalline organic base, C₅H₄N₄, that is the parent compound of various biologically important derivatives. 2. Any of a group of organic compounds derived from or structurally related to purine, including uric acid, caffeine, and the nucleic acid constituents adenine and guanine. [German Purin: Latin pûrus, clean; see PURE + New Latin uricus, uricum, uric (from Greek ouron, urine) + -in, n. suff. (from French -ine); see -IN.]

pur·ism (pyöör'ĭz'əm) n. 1. Strict observance of or insistence on traditional correctness, especially of language: "By purism is to be understood a needless and irritating insistence on purity or correctness of speech" (H.W. Fowler). 2. An example of purism.

pur·ist (pyöör'ĭst) n. One who practices or urges strict correctness, especially in the use of words. — pu·ris'tic (pyöör-řis'tĭk) adj. — pu·ris'ti·cal·ly adv.

Pu·ri·tan (pyöör'ĭ-tn) n. 1. A member of a group of English Protestants who in the 16th and 17th centuries advocated strict religious discipline along with simplification of the ceremonies and creeds of the Church of England. 2. puritan. One who lives in accordance with Protestant precepts, especially one who regards pleasure or luxury as sinful. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the Puritans or Puritanism. 2. puritan. Characteristic of a puritan; puritanical. [From Late Latin pūritās, purity (on the model of Medieval Latin Kathari, “the Pure Ones,” a third-century sect of rigorist heretics), from Latin pūrus, pure. See peuə- in Appendix.]

pu-ri-tan-i-cal (pyōōr'ī-tān'ī-kəl) adj. 1. Rigorous in religious observance; marked by stern morality. 2. Puritanical. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the Puritans. — pu'ri-tan'i-cal-ly adv. — pu'ri-tan'i-cal-ness n.

Pu-ri-tan-ism (pyōōr'ī-tn-iz'əm) n. 1. The practices and doctrines of the Puritans. 2. puritanism. Scrupulous moral rigor, especially hostility to social pleasures and indulgences: “Puritanism is the source of our greatest hypocrisies and most crippling illusions” (Molly Haskell).

pu-ri-ty (pyōōr'ī-tē) n. 1. The quality or condition of being pure. 2. A quantitative assessment of homogeneity or uniformity. 3. Freedom from sin or guilt; innocence; chastity: “Teach your children... the belief in purity of body, mind and soul” (Emmeline Pankhurst). 4. The absence in speech or writing of slang or other elements deemed inappropriate to good style. 5. Color. The degree to which a color is free from being mixed with other colors.

Pur-kin-je cell (pûr-kĭn'jē sĕl) n. A large, drop-shaped, densely branching neuron that is the characteristic cell of the cerebellar cortex. [After Johannes Evangelista von Purkinje (1787-1869), Bohemian physiologist.]

Purkinje fiber (pûr-kĭn'jē fĭ'bər) n. One of the specialized cardiac muscle fibers, part of the impulse-conducting network of the heart, that rapidly transmit impulses from the atrioventricular node to the ventricles. [After Johannes Evangelista von Purkinje (1787-1869), Bohemian physiologist.]

purl¹ (pûrl) v. intr. purled, purl-ing, purls. To flow or ripple with a murmuring sound. — n. The sound made by rippling water. [Probably of Scandinavian origin.]

purl² also pearl (pûrl) v. purled also pearled, purl-ing also pearl-ing, purls also pearls. Abbr. p. — v. tr. 1. To knit (yarn) with a purl stitch. 2. To edge or finish (a handkerchief, for example) with lace or embroidery. — v. intr. 1. To do knitting with a purl stitch. 2. To edge or finish with lace or embroidery. — n. Abbr. p. 1. Inversion of a knit stitch; purl stitch. 2. A decorative edging of lace or embroidery. 3. Gold or silver wire used in embroidery. [Origin unknown.]

pur-lieu (pûrl'yōō, pûrl'loō) n. 1. An outlying or neighboring area. 2. purlieus. Outskirts; the environs. 3. A place that one frequents. [Middle English purluwe, piece of land on the edge of a forest, probably alteration (influenced by Old French lieu, place), of porale, purale, royal perambulation, from Old French porale, from poraler, to traverse : por-, forth (from Latin prō-); see PRO-¹ + aler, aller, to go; see ALLEY¹.]

pur·lin also pur·line (pûr'lin) n. One of several horizontal timbers supporting the rafters of a roof. [Middle English.]

pur·loin (pær-loin', pûr'loin') v. pur·loined, pur·loin·ing, pur·loins. — v. tr. To steal, often in a violation of trust. See Synonyms at steal. — v. intr. To commit theft. [Middle English purloinen, to remove, from Anglo-Norman purloigner : pur-, away (from Latin prō-); see PRO⁻¹ + loign, far (from Latin longē, from longus, long); see del⁻¹ in Appendix.] — pur·loin'er n.

purl stitch (pûrl stich) n. An inverted knitting stitch, often alternated with the knit stitch to produce a ribbed effect.

pu·ro·my·cin (pyōor'ə-mī'sin) n. An antibiotic, C₂₂H₂₉N₇O₅, obtained from the soil bacterium Streptomyces alboniger, that is used experimentally as an inhibitor of protein synthesis. [PUR(INE) + -MYCIN.]

pur·ple (pûr'pəl) n. 1. Color. Any of a group of colors with a hue between that of violet and red. 2. Cloth of a color between violet and red, formerly worn as a symbol of royalty or high office. 3. Imperial power; high rank: born to the purple. 4. Roman Catholic Church. a. The rank or office of a cardinal. b. The rank or office of a bishop. — adj. 1. Color. Of the color purple. 2. Royal or imperial; regal. 3. Elaborate and ornate: purple prose. — v. tr. intr. pur·pled, pur·pling, pur·ples. To make or become purple. [Middle English, from Old English purpul, from purpure, purple garment, from Latin purpura, shellfish yielding purple dye, purple cloth, purple, from Greek porphura, a shellfish yielding purple dye.]

purple gallinule (pûr'pəl gäl'ə-nōol') n. 1. A colorful gallinule (Porphyryla martinica) of South America and the southeast United States, having a purple head, neck, and underpart, a greenish-bronze back, yellow legs, and yellow-tipped red bill. 2. A related Old World gallinule (Porphyrio porphyrio) having dark, bluish-purple plumage and red legs.

purple grackle (pûr'pəl grāk'əl) n. The common grackle (Quiscalus quiscula) of eastern North America, having iridescent blackish-purple plumage and a long, keel-shaped tail.

pur·ple·heart (pûr'pəl-härt') n. 1. A tropical tree (Peltogyne paniculata) native to Guiana and Trinidad, having very hard, durable brown wood that turns a purple color on exposure. 2. The purplish heartwood of this tree, used in furniture and turnery.

Pur·ple Heart (pûr'pəl härt) n. Abbr. PH, P.H. A U.S. military decoration awarded to members of the armed forces who have been wounded in action.

purple loosestrife (pûr'pəl lōōs'strif') n. An Old World marsh plant (Lythrum salicaria) having long spikes of purple flowers.

purple martin (pûr'pəl mār'tn) n. A large North American swallow (Progne subis) having glossy, blue-black plumage and, in the female, a light-colored breast.

pur-plish (pûr'plîsh) adj. Color. Somewhat purple.

pur-port (pær-pôrt', -pôrt') v. tr. pur-port-ed, pur-port-ing, pur-ports.

1. To have or present the often false appearance of being or intending; profess: selfish behavior that purports to be altruistic. 2. To have the intention of doing; purpose. — n. (pûr'pôrt', -pôrt') 1. Meaning presented, intended, or implied; import. See Synonyms at substance. 2. Intention; purpose. [Middle English purporten, to set forth, from Anglo-Norman purporter : pur-, forth (from Latin prō-); see PRO⁻¹ + porter, to carry (from Latin portāre); see per⁻² in Appendix.]

pur-port-ed (pær-pôrt'tid, -pôrt'-) adj. Assumed to be such; supposed: the purported author of the story. —pur-port/ed-ly adv.

pur-pose (pûr'pəs) n. 1. The object toward which one strives or for which something exists; an aim or a goal: “And ever those, who would enjoyment gain/ Must find it in the purpose they pursue” (Sarah Josepha Hale). 2. A result or an effect that is intended or desired; an intention. See Synonyms at intention. 3. Determination; resolution: He was a man of purpose. 4. The matter at hand; the point at issue. — v. tr. pur-posed, pur-pos-ing, pur-pos-es. To intend or resolve to perform or accomplish. —idioms. on purpose. Intentionally; deliberately. to good purpose. With good results. to little purpose (or to no purpose). With few or no results. [Middle English purpos, from Anglo-Norman, from purposer, to intend : pur-, forth (from Latin prō-); see PRO⁻¹ + poser, to put; see *POSE*¹.]

pur-pose-ful (pûr'pəs-fəl) adj. 1. Having a purpose; intentional: a purposeful musician. 2. Having or manifesting purpose; determined: entered the room with a purposeful look. —pur/pose-ful-ly adv. —pur/pose-ful-ness n.

pur-pose-less (pûr'pəs-lîs) adj. Lacking a purpose; meaningless or aimless. See Synonyms at meaningless. —pur/pose-less-ly adv. —pur/pose-less-ness n.

pur-pose-ly (pûr'pəs-lē) adv. With specific purpose.

pur-po-sive (pûr'pə-sîv) adj. 1. Having or serving a purpose. 2. Purposeful: purposive behavior. —pur/po-sive-ly adv. —pur/po-sive-ness n.

pur-pu-ra (pûr'pə-rə, -pyə-) n. A condition characterized by hemorrhages in the skin and mucous membranes that result in the appearance of purplish spots or patches. [Latin, purple. See PURPLE.] —pur-pu/ric (-pyöör'îk) adj.

pur-pu-rin (pûr'pyə-rîn') n. A reddish crystalline compound, C₁₄H₅O₂(OH)₃, that is isolated from madder root for use as a biological stain and commercial dye. [Latin purpura, purple; see PURPLE + -IN.] purr (pûr) n. 1. The soft vibrant sound made by a cat. 2. A sound similar to that made by a cat: the purr of an engine. — v. purred, purr-ing, purrs. — v. intr. To make or utter a soft, vibrant sound: The cat purred. The sewing machine purred. — v. tr. To express by a soft, vibrant sound. [Imitative.]

purse (pûrs) n. 1. A woman's bag for carrying keys, a wallet, and other personal items; a handbag. 2. A small bag or pouch for carrying money. 3. Something that resembles a bag or pouch. 4. Available wealth or resources; money. 5. A sum of money collected as a present or offered as a prize. — v. tr. pursed, purs-ing, purs-es. To gather or contract (the lips or brow) into wrinkles or folds; pucker. [Middle English, from Old English, from Late Latin bursa. See BURSA.] — purse/like' adj.

purse crab (pûrs krăb) n. Either of two sand-dwelling brachyuran crabs (Persephona mediterranea or P. punctata) of the U.S. Atlantic coast, the Gulf of Mexico, and the West Indies, having a rounded body and, in the female, a purselike chamber for eggs.

purs-er (pûr'sər) n. The officer in charge of money matters on board a ship or commercial aircraft. [Middle English, from purse, purse. See PURSE.]

purse seine (pûrs sãn) n. A fishing seine that is drawn into the shape of a bag to enclose the catch.

purse strings or purse-strings (pûrs'strɪŋgz') pl.n. Financial support or resources, or control over them: the politicians who control federal purse strings; tightened the corporate purse strings.

purs-lane (pûrs'lɪn, -lãn') n. A trailing Asian weed (Portulaca oleracea) having small yellow flowers, reddish stems, and fleshy obovate leaves that are sometimes cooked as a vegetable or used in salads. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman purcelane*, alteration of Latin portulāca, porcilāca. See PORTULACA.]

pur-su-ance (pər-sōō'əns) n. A carrying out or putting into effect; prosecution.

pur-su-ant (pər-sōō'ənt) adj. Proceeding from and conformable to; in accordance with. — adv. Accordingly; consequently. [Probably from Middle English pursuant, aspirant, from Anglo-Norman, present participle of pursure, to pursue. See PURSUE.]

pur-sue (pər-sōō') v. pur-sued, pur-su-ing, pur-sues. — v. tr. 1. To follow in an effort to overtake or capture; chase: a fox that was pursued by hounds. 2. To strive to gain or accomplish: pursue lofty political goals. 3. To proceed along the course of; follow: a ship that pursued the southern course. 4. To carry further; advance: Let's not pursue this argument. 5. To be engaged in (a vocation or hobby, for example). 6. To court: a lady who was pursued by many suitors. 7. To continue to torment or afflict; haunt: was pursued by the demons of lust and greed. — v. intr. 1. To follow in an effort to overtake or capture; chase. 2. To carry on; continue. [Middle English pursuen, from Anglo-Norman pursure, from Vulgar Latin prōsequere*, from Latin prōsequi. See PROSECUTE.] — pur-su/a-ble adj. — pur-su'er n.

pur-suit (pər-sōōt') n. 1. The act or an instance of chasing or pursuing. 2. The act of striving: the pursuit of higher education. 3. An activity, such as a vocation or hobby, engaged in regularly. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman pursuite, from pursure, to pursue. See PURSUE.]

pursuit plane (pər-sōōt' plān) n. A high-speed fighter plane designed and equipped to pursue and attack enemy aircraft.

pur-sui-vant (pûr'swī-vənt) n. 1. An officer in the British Colleges of Heralds who ranks below a herald. 2. A follower or an attendant. [Middle English purse-vant, attendant, from Old French poursuivant, from present participle of poursuivre, to follow, from Vulgar Latin prōsequere*. See PURSUE.]

pur-te-nance (pûr'tn-əns) n. An animal's viscera or internal organs, especially the heart, liver, and lungs. [Middle English pertenounce, purtenounce, adjunct, from Old French partenance, pertinence, from partenir, to pertain. See PERTAIN.]

pur-ty (pûr'tē) adj. Regional. pretty.

REGIONAL NOTE: Purty is probably the most common American example of metathesis, a linguistic process in which two adjacent sounds are reversed in order. Metathesis in English often involves the consonant r and a vowel, since the phonetic properties of r are so vowel-like. For example, the word third used to be thrid, and bird, brid. By the same process, English pretty often came to be realized as purty in regional speech. Most such words stabilized because of the influence of printing and the resultant standardized spelling, but purty for pretty has survived in regional American dialects.

pu-ru-lence (pyōōr'ə-ləns, pyōōr'yə-) n. 1. The condition of containing or discharging pus. 2. Pus.

pu-ru-lent (pyōōr'ə-lənt, pyōōr'yə-) adj. Containing, discharging, or causing the production of pus: a purulent infection. [Middle English purulente, from Old French purulent, from Latin pūrulentus, from pūs, pūr-, pus. See pū- in Appendix.] —pu'ru-lent-ly adv.

Pu-rus (pə-rōōs', pōō-) A river of east-central Peru and western Brazil flowing about 3,379 km (2,100 mi) generally northeast to the Amazon River.

pur-vey (pər-vā', pûr'vā') v. tr. pur-veyed, pur-vey-ing, pur-veys. 1. To supply (food, for example); furnish. 2. To advertise or circulate. [Middle English purveien, from Anglo-Norman purveier, from Latin prōvidēre. See PROVIDE.] —pur-vey'ance n.

pur-vey-or (pər-vā'ər) n. 1. One that furnishes provisions, especially food. 2. One that promulgates something: a purveyor of lies.

pur-view (pûr'vyōō') n. 1. The extent or range of function, power, or competence; scope. See Synonyms at range. 2. Range of vision, comprehension, or experience; outlook. 3. Law. The body, scope, or limit of a statute. [Alteration (influenced by VIEW), of Middle English purveu, proviso, from Anglo-Norman purveu est, it is provided (from the use of this word to introduce a proviso), past participle of purveier, to provide. See PURVEY.]

pus (pūs) n. A generally viscous, yellowish-white fluid formed in infected tissue, consisting of white blood cells, cellular debris, and necrotic tissue. [Latin pūs. See pŭ- in Appendix.]

Pu-san (pōō'sän') also Fu-san (fōō'-) A city of extreme southeast South Korea on Korea Strait southeast of Seoul. It developed into a major port during the Japanese occupation of Korea (1910-1945). Population, 3,517,000.

Pu-sey (pyōō'zē), Edward Bouverie. 1800-1882. British theologian who led the Oxford movement after John Henry Newman's conversion to Roman Catholicism (1845).

Pu-sey-ism (pyōō'zē-iz'əm, pyōō'sē-) n. Tractarianism. [After Edward Bouverie PUSEY.] — Pu'sey-ite' (-it') n.

push (pōōsh) v. pushed, push-ing, push-es. — v. tr. 1. To apply pressure against for the purpose of moving: push a shopping cart through the aisles of a market. 2. To move (an object) by exerting force against it; thrust or shove. 3. To force (one's way): We pushed our way through the crowd. 4. To urge forward or urge insistently; pressure: push a child to study harder. 5. To bear hard upon; press. 6. To exert downward pressure on (a button or keyboard, for example); press. 7. To extend or enlarge: push society past the frontier. 8. Slang. a. To promote or sell (a product): The author pushed her latest book by making appearances in bookstores. b. To sell (a narcotic) illegally: push drugs. — v. intr. 1. To exert outward pressure or force against something. 2. To advance despite difficulty or opposition; press forward. 3. To expend great or vigorous effort. — n. 1. The act of pushing; thrust: gave the door a swift push. 2. A vigorous or insistent effort toward an end; a drive: a push to democracy. 3. A provocation to action; a stimulus. 4. Informal. Persevering energy; enterprise. — phrasal verbs. push around. Informal. To treat or threaten to treat roughly; intimidate. push off. Informal. To set out; depart: The infantry patrol pushed off before dawn. push on. To continue or proceed along one's way: The path was barely visible, but we pushed on. — idioms. push paper. Informal. To have one's time taken up by administrative, often seemingly petty, paperwork: She spent the afternoon pushing paper for her boss. when push comes to shove (or if push comes to shove). At a point when or if all else has been taken into account and matters must be confronted, one way or another: "We extol the virtues of motherhood and bestow praise on the self-sacrificing homemaker but when push comes to shove, we give her little recognition for what she does" (Los Angeles Times). [Middle English pusshen, from Old French poulsier, pousser, from Latin pulsāre, frequentative of pellere, to strike, push. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: push, propel, shove, thrust. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to press against something in order to move it forward or aside”: push a baby carriage; wind propelling a sailboat; shove a tray across a table; thrust the package into her hand. See also Synonyms at campaign push-back (pōōsh'bāk') n. 1. A device or mechanism that affords movement of another object backwards: the pushback on a subway door. 2. Forced movement of troops back from the line.

ANTONYM: pull

push-ball (pōōsh'bôl') n. Sports. 1. A game in which two opposing teams attempt to push a heavy ball, 6 feet (1.8 meters) in diameter, across a goal. 2. The ball used in this game.

push broom (pōōsh brōom) n. A broom having a wide brush perpendicular to the end of a long handle, designed to be pushed in sweeping.

push button or push-but-ton (pōōsh'büt'n) n. A small button that activates an electric circuit when pushed.

push-but-ton or push-but-ton (pōōsh'büt'n) adj. Equipped with or operated by a push button.

push-cart (pōōsh'kärt') n. A light cart pushed by hand.

push-down (pōōsh'doun') n. Computer Science. A set of data stored in a computer, in which the first item to be retrieved is the one most recently stored.

push-er (pōōsh'ər) n. Slang. One who sells drugs illegally.

push-ful (pōōsh'fōol') adj. Pushing. —push'ful-ness n.

push-ing (pōōsh'ing) adj. 1. Energetic; enterprising. 2. Aggressive; forward; presuming. —push'ing-ly adv.

Push-kin (pōōsh'kīn, pōōsh'-), Aleksandr Sergeyevich. 1799-1837. Russian writer who wrote the novel Eugene Onegin (1831), the play Boris Godunov (1831), and many narrative and lyrical poems and short stories.

push-o-ver (pōōsh'ō'vər) n. 1. One that is easily defeated or taken advantage of. 2. Something that is easily done or attained. See Synonyms at breeze¹.

push-pin (pōōsh'pīn') n. 1. A tacklike pin with a large head that is easily inserted into a wall or board. 2. Games. A game played by children with pins.

push-rod also push rod (pōōsh'rōd') n. A rod moved by a cam to operate the valves in an internal-combustion engine.

Push-tu (pūsh'tōō) n. Variant of Pashto.

push-up (pōōsh'üp') n. 1. Sports. An exercise for strengthening arm muscles performed by lying face down with the palms on the floor, and pushing the body up and down with the arms. 2. Computer Science. A set of stored data in which the first item to be retrieved is the one stored earliest.

push-y (pōōsh'ē) adj. push-i-er, push-i-est. Disagreeably aggressive or forward. —push'i-ly adv. —push'i-ness n.

pu·sil·la·nim·i·ty (pyōō'sə-lə-nīm'i-tē) n. The state or quality of being pusillanimous; cowardice.

pu·sil·lan·i·mous (pyōō'sə-lān'ə-məs) adj. Lacking courage; cowardly. [Middle English pusillanimus, from Late Latin pusillanimis : Latin pusillus, weak, diminutive of pullus, young of an animal; see pau- in Appendix + animus, reason, mind; see anə- in Appendix.] —pu'sil·lan'i·mous·ly adv.

puss¹ (pōos) Informal. n. 1. A cat. 2. A girl or young woman. [Probably of Germanic origin.]

puss² (pōos) n. Slang. 1. The mouth. 2. The human face. See Synonyms at face. [Irish Gaelic pus, mouth, from Middle Irish bus, lip.]

puss·ley (püs'lē) n. Purslane. [Alteration of pursley, alteration of PURSLANE.]

puss·y¹ (pōos'ē) n. pl. puss·ies. 1. Informal. A cat. 2. Botany. A fuzzy catkin, especially of the pussy willow. 3. Vulgar Slang. The vulva. 4. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a woman.

puss·y² (püs'ē) adj. puss·si·er, puss·si·est. Containing or resembling pus.

puss·y·cat (pōos'ē-kăt') n. 1. A cat. 2. Informal. One who is regarded as easy-going, mild-mannered, or amiable.

puss·y·foot (pōos'ē-fōot') v. intr. puss·y·foot·ed, puss·y·foot·ing, puss·y·foots. 1. To move stealthily or cautiously. 2. Informal. To act or proceed cautiously or timidly to avoid committing oneself. —puss'y·foot'er n.

puss·y·toes (pōos'ē-tōz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Any of several low-growing perennial plants of the genus Antennaria, having leaves with whitish down and clusters of small, white flower heads. [From the cluster's resemblance to a cat's paw.]

puss·y willow (pōos'ē wīl'ō) n. 1. A deciduous North American shrub or small tree (Salix discolor) having large silky catkins. 2. Any of several willows similar to this plant.

pus·tu·lant (püs'chə-lənt, püs'tyə-) adj. Causing the formation of pustules. — n. A pustulant agent.

pus·tu·lar (püs'chə-lər, püs'tyə-) adj. Of, relating to, or consisting of pustules.

pus·tu·late (püs'chə-lăt', püs'tyə-) v. pus·tu·lat·ed, pus·tu·lat·ing, pus·tu·lates. — v. tr. To cause to form pustules. — v. intr. To form pustules. — adj. (also -līt) Covered with pustules.

pus·tu·la·tion (püs'chə-lā'shən, püs'tyə-) n. The formation or appearance of pustules.

pus·tule (püs'chōol, püs'tyōol) n. 1. A small inflamed elevation of the skin that is filled with pus; a pimple. 2. A small swelling similar to a blister or pimple. 3. Something likened to an inflamed, pus-filled lesion: “a cool glimpse of green between hot pustules of sooty sprawl” (Nicholas Proffitt). [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin pustula, blister.]

put (pōōt) v. put, put-ting, puts. — v. tr. 1. To place in a specified location; set: She put the books on the table. 2. To cause to be in a specified condition: His gracious manners put me at ease. 3. To cause (one) to undergo something; subject: The interrogators put the prisoner to torture. 4. To assign; attribute: They put a false interpretation on events. 5. To estimate: We put the time at five o'clock. 6. To impose or levy: The governor has put a tax on cigarettes. 7. Games. To wager (a stake); bet: put $50 on a horse. 8. Sports. To hurl with an overhand pushing motion: put the shot. 9. To bring up for consideration or judgment: put a question to the judge. 10. To express; state: I put my objections bluntly. 11. To render in a specified language or literary form: put prose into verse. 12. To adapt: The lyrics had been put to music. 13. To urge or force to an action: a mob that put the thief to flight. 14. To apply: We must put our minds to it. — v. intr. 1. To begin to move, especially in a hurry. 2. Nautical. To proceed: The ship put into the harbor. — n. 1. Sports. An act of putting the shot. 2. An option to sell a stipulated amount of stock or securities within a specified time and at a fixed price. — adj. Informal. Fixed; stationary: stay put. —phrasal verbs. put about. Nautical. To change or cause to change direction; go or cause to go from one tack to another. put across. 2. To state so as to be understood clearly or accepted readily: tried to put her views across during the hearing. 3. To attain or carry through by deceit or trickery. put away. 4. To renounce; discard: put all negative thoughts away. 5. Informal. To consume (food or drink) readily and quickly: put away the dinner in just a few minutes. 6. Informal. To confine to a mental health facility. 7. a. Informal. To kill: The injured cat was put away. b. To bury. put by. To save for later use: My grandmother puts by her fresh vegetables. put down. 9. a. To write down. b. To enter in a list. 10. a. To bring to an end; repress: put down a rebellion. b. To render ineffective: put down rumors. 11. To subject (an animal) to euthanasia. 12. Slang. a. To criticize: Her parents put her down for failing the course. b. To belittle; disparage: He tried to put down her knowledge of literature. c. To humiliate: “Many status games seem designed to put down others” (Alvin F. Poussaint). 13. a. To assign to a category: Just put him down as a sneak. b. To attribute: Let’s put this disaster down to experience. 14. To consume (food or drink) readily; put away: puts down three big meals a day. put forth. 15. To grow: Plants put forth new growth in the spring. 16. To bring to bear; exert: At least put forth a semblance of effort when you scrub the floor. 17. To offer for consideration: put forth an idea. put forward. To propose for consideration: put forward a new plan. put in. 19. To make a formal offer of: put in a plea of guilty. 20. To interpose: He put in a good word for me. 21. To spend (time) at a location or job: The inmate had put in six years at hard labor. She put in eight hours behind a desk. 22. To plant: We put in 20 rows of pine trees. 23. Nautical. To enter a port or harbor: The freighter puts in at noon. put off. 24. a. To delay; postpone: put off paying the bills. b. To persuade to delay further action: managed to put off the creditors for another week. 25. To take off; discard: put off a sweater. 26. To repel or repulse, as from bad manners: His indifferent attitude has put us off. 27. To pass (money) or sell (merchandise) fraudulently. put on. 28. To clothe oneself with; don: put on a coat; put socks on. 29. To apply; activate: put on the brakes. 30. To assume affectedly: put on an English accent. 31. Slang. To tease or mislead (another): You're putting me on! 32. To add: put on weight. 33. To produce; perform: put on a variety show. put out. 34. To extinguish: put out a fire. 35. Nautical. To leave, as a port or harbor; depart. 36. To expel: put out a drunk. 37. To publish: put out a weekly newsletter. 38. a. To inconvenience: Did our early arrival put you out? b. To offend or irritate: I was put out by his attention to the television set. 39. Baseball. To retire a runner. 40. Vulgar Slang. To be sexually active. Used of a woman. put over. 41. To postpone; delay. 42. To put across, especially to deceive: tried to put a lie over, but to no avail. put through. 43. To bring to a successful end: put the project through on time; put through a number of new laws. 44. To cause to undergo: He put me through a lot of trouble. 45. a. To make a telephone connection for: The operator put me through on the office line. b. To obtain a connection for (a telephone call). put to. Nautical. To head for shore. put together. To construct; create: put together a new bookcase; put together a tax package. put up. 48. To erect; build. 49. To preserve; can: put up six jars of jam. 50. To nominate: put up a candidate at a convention. 51. To provide (funds) in advance: put up money for the new musical. 52. To provide lodgings for: put a friend up for the night. 53. Sports. To startle (game animals) from cover: put up grouse. 54. To offer for sale: put up his antiques. 55. a. To make a display or the appearance of: put up a bluff. b. To engage in; carry on: put up a good fight. put upon. To impose on; overburden: He was always being put upon by his friends. —idioms. put down roots. To establish a permanent residence in a locale. put it to (someone). Slang. 2. To overburden with tasks or work. 3. To put blame on. 4. To take unfair advantage of. 5. To lay out the facts of a situation to (another) in a forceful, candid manner. put (one) in mind. To remind: You put me in mind of your grandmother. put (one's) finger on. To identify: I can't put my finger on the person in that photograph. put (one's) foot down. To take a firm stand. put (one's) foot in (one's) mouth. To make a tactless remark. put paid to. Chiefly British. To finish off; put to rest: "We've given up saying we only kill to eat; Kraft dinner and freeze-dried food have put paid to that one" (Margaret Atwood). put (someone) through (someone's) paces. To cause to demonstrate ability or skill; test: The drama coach put her students through their paces before the first performance. put (someone) up to. To cause to commit a funny, mischievous, or malicious act: My older brother put me up to making a prank telephone call. put the arm on (or put the bite on) (or put the squeeze on). Slang. To ask another for money. put the finger on. Slang. To inform on: The witness put the finger on the killer. put the make on. Slang. To make sexual advances to. put the screws to (or put the screws on). Slang. To pressure (another) in an extreme manner. put the skids on. Slang. To bring to a halt: “Sacrificing free speech to put the skids on prurient printed matter is not the correct path, the courts said” (Curtis J. Sitomer). put to bed. Informal.

18. To make final preparations for the printing of (a newspaper, for example).

19. To make final preparations for completing (a project). put to it. To cause extreme difficulty for: We were put to it to finish the book on time. put two and two together. To draw the proper conclusions from existing evidence or indications. put up or shut up. Slang. To have to endure (something unpleasant) without complaining or take the action necessary to remove the source of the unpleasantness. put up with. To endure without complaint: We had to put up with the inconvenience. [Middle English putten, back-formation from Old English pūtte*, past tense of pȳtan, to put out.]

pu·ta·men (pyōō-tā'mən) n. pl. pu·tam·i·na (-tām'ə-nə). A hard, shell-like covering, such as that enclosing the kernel of a peach. [Latin putāmen, that which falls off in pruning, shell, husk, from putāre, to prune. See peu- in Appendix.]

—pu·tam·i·nous (-tām'ə-nəs) adj.

pu·ta·tive (pyōō'tə-tīv) adj. Generally regarded as such; supposed. See Synonyms at supposed. [Middle English, from Old French putatif, from Late Latin putātīvus, from Latin putāre, to prune, think. See peu- in Appendix.]

—pu'ta·tive·ly adv.

put·down or put-down (pōōt'doun') n. Slang. 1. A dismissal or rejection, especially in the form of a critical or slighting remark: “Such answers were, perhaps still are, a... form of put-down to the questions of white people” (Lillian Hellman). 2. A typically good-natured parody, especially in theater: “The comedy fodder ranged from putdowns of British Royalty to... Sophie Tuckerisms” (Variety).

put-down-a-ble (pōōt'dou'nə-bəl) adj. Informal. So poorly written and unentertaining as to be easily put down. Used especially of a book.

Put-in-Bay (pōōt'īn-bā') A bay of western Lake Erie in an island off Ohio. The U.S. Navy under Oliver Hazard Perry defeated a British fleet here on September 10, 1813, in the War of 1812.

put·log (pōōt'lōg', -lōg', pūt'-) n. One of the short pieces of lumber supporting the floor of a scaffold. [Alteration (influenced by LOG¹), of obsolete putlock: perhaps PUT + LOCK¹.]

Put·nam (pūt'nəm), Israel. 1718-1790. American soldier active in the French and Indian War and the Revolutionary War. During the Battle of Bunker Hill (June 17, 1775), he supposedly issued the order, “Don't one of you shoot until you see the whites of their eyes.”

Put·nam (püt'nəm), Rufus. 1738-1824. American Revolutionary soldier who organized the batteries on Dorchester Heights that forced the British to evacuate Boston (1775).

put-off (poot'ôf', -ôf') n. A pretext for inaction; an excuse.

put-on (poot'ôn', -ôn') adj. Pretended; feigned. — n. Slang. 1. A deceptive outward appearance. 2. The act of teasing or misleading someone, especially for amusement. 3. Something, such as a prank, intended as a hoax or joke; a spoof.

Pu·tong·hua also Pu tong hua (pōo'tông'hwä', -wä', -tông'-) n. See Mandarin (n., sense 4). [Chinese (Mandarin) pǔ tōnghuà : pǔ, general, widespread + tōng, through + huà, words.]

put-out (poot'out') abbr. po, p.o. Baseball. A play in which a batter or base runner is retired.

put-put (püt'püt') n. Slang. 1. A small gasoline engine. 2. A vehicle, such as a boat, that is operated by a small gasoline engine. [Imitative of a running engine.]

pu·tre·fac·tion (pyōō'trə-fāk'shən) n. 1. Decomposition of organic matter, especially protein, by microorganisms, resulting in production of foul-smelling matter. 2. Putrefied matter. 3. The condition of being putrefied. [Middle English putrefaccioun, from Late Latin putrefactiō, putrefactiōn-, from putrefactus, past participle of Latin putrefacere, to make rotten. See PUTREFY.]

pu·tre·fac·tive (pyōō'trə-fāk'tiv) adj. 1. Bringing about putrefaction. 2. Of, relating to, or characterized by putrefaction.

pu·tre·fy (pyōō'trə-fī') v. put·tre·fied, put·tre·fy·ing, put·tre·fies. — v. tr. 1. To cause to decay and have a foul odor. See Synonyms at decay. 2. To make gangrenous. — v. intr. 1. To become decayed and have a foul odor. 2. To become gangrenous. [Middle English putrefien, from Old French putrefier, from Latin putrefacere : puter, putr-, rotten; see pŭ- in Appendix + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.]

pu·tres·cence (pyōō-trēs'əns) n. 1. A putrescent character or condition. 2. Putrid matter.

pu·tres·cent (pyōō-trēs'ənt) adj. 1. Becoming putrid; putrefying. 2. Of or relating to putrefaction. [Latin putrēscēns, putrēscēt- present participle of putrēscere, to rot inchoative of putrēre, to be rotten, from puter, putr-, rotten. See pŭ- in Appendix.]

pu·tres·ci·ble (pyōō-trēs'ə-bəl) adj. Subject to putrefaction. [French, from Old French, from Late Latin putrēscibilis, from Latin putrēscere, to rot. See PUTRESCENT.]

pu·tres·cine (pyōō-trēs'ēn) n. A colorless, foul-smelling ptomaine, $\text{NH}_2(\text{CH}_2)_4\text{NH}_2$, produced in decaying animal tissue by the decarboxylation of ornithine. [Latin putrēscere, to rot; see PUTRESCENT + -INE².]

pu·trid (pyōō'trīd) adj. 1. Decomposed and foul-smelling; rotten. 2. Proceeding from, relating to, or exhibiting putrefaction. 3. Morally rotten; corrupt: “and all the while scarlet thoughts, putrid fantasies, and no love” (Louis Auchincloss). 4. Extremely objectionable; vile. [Middle English putred, from Old French putride, from Latin putridus, from putrēre, to be rotten, from puter, putr-, rotten. See pŭ- in Appendix.] —pu-trid/i-ty (-trɪdʹɪ-tē), puʹtrid-ness (-trɪd-nɪs) n. —puʹtrid-ly adv.

putsch also Putsch (pööch) n. A sudden attempt by a group to overthrow a government. [German, from German dialectal, from Middle High German, thrust, of imitative origin.] —putschʹist n.

putt (püt) Sports. n. A light golf stroke made on the putting green in an effort to place the ball into the hole. — v. putt-ed, putt-ing, putts. — v. tr. To hit (a golf ball) with a light stroke on the green. — v. intr. To putt a golf ball. [Variant of PUT.] put-tee (pŭ-tēʹ, pütʹē) n. 1. A strip of cloth wound spirally around the leg from ankle to knee. Often used in the plural. 2. A gaiter covering the lower leg. Often used in the plural. [Hindi paṭṭī, from Sanskrit paṭṭikā, feminine of paṭṭakaḥ, bandage, ribbon, from paṭṭaḥ, strip of cloth.]

put-ter¹ (pütʹər) n. Sports. 1. A short golf club used for putting. 2. A golfer who is putting.

put-ter² (pütʹər) v. put-tered, put-ter-ing, put-ters. — v. intr. To occupy oneself in an aimless or ineffective manner. — v. tr. To waste (time) in idling: puttered away the hours in the garden. [Probably alteration of POTTER², probably frequentative of Middle English poten, to poke, push, from Old English potian.] —putʹter-er n.

putt-ing green (pütʹɪŋ grēn) n. Sports. 1. The area at the end of a golf course fairway in which the hole is placed, having more closely mowed turf than the rest of the course. 2. An area in which to practice putting.

put-ty (pütʹē) n. pl. put-ties. 1. a. A doughlike cement made by mixing whitening and linseed oil, used to fill holes in woodwork and secure panes of glass. b. A substance with a similar consistency or function. 2. A fine lime cement used as a finishing coat on plaster. 3. Color. A yellowish or light brownish gray to grayish yellow or light grayish brown. — v. tr. put-tied, put-ty-ing, put-ties. To fill, cover, or secure with putty. [French potée, polishing powder, from Old French, a potful, from pot, pot, from Vulgar Latin pottus.*] put-ty-root (pütʹē-rōōtʹ, -rōōtʹ) n. A North American orchid (Aplectrum hemale) bearing a single leaf and yellowish-brown flowers clustered in a raceme. Also called Adam-and-Eve [From the use of the sticky substance in its corm as a cement.]

Pu-tu-ma-yo (pōōʹtə-mīʹō, pōōʹtōō-mäʹyô) A river of northwest South America rising in southwest Colombia and flowing about 1,609 km (1,000 mi) along the Colombia-Peru border to the Amazon River in northwest Brazil.

put-up (pōōt'üp') adj. Informal. Planned or prearranged secretly: The theft was a put-up job.

putz (püts) n. 1. Slang. A fool; an idiot. 2. Vulgar Slang. A penis. — v. intr. putzed, putz-ing, putz-es. Slang. To behave in an idle manner; putter. [Yiddish pots, penis, fool.]

Pu-vis de Cha-vannes (pyōō-vē' də shä-vän', -vēs', pü-vē'), Pierre. 1824-1898. French artist noted for his decorative and allegorical murals, such as Work (1863).

Puy-al-lup (pyōō-äl'əp) A city of west-central Washington east-southeast of Tacoma. It is the site of an annual daffodil festival and fair. Population, 23,875.

puz-zle (püz'əl) v. puz-zled, puz-zling, puz-zles. — v. tr. 1. To baffle or confuse mentally by presenting or being a difficult problem or matter. 2. To clarify or solve (something confusing) by reasoning or study: He puzzled out the significance of the statement. — v. intr. 1. To be perplexed. 2. To ponder over a problem in an effort to solve or understand it. — n. 1. a. A jigsaw puzzle. b. Something, such as a toy or game, that tests one's ingenuity. 2. Something that baffles or confuses. 3. The condition of being perplexed; bewilderment. [Origin unknown.] — puz'zler n.

SYNONYMS: puzzle, perplex, mystify, bewilder, confound. These verbs mean to cause bafflement or confusion. Puzzle suggests a problem or matter that is difficult to solve or interpret or that puts one at a loss: "The poor creature puzzled me once... by a question merely natural and innocent, that I scarce knew what to say" (Daniel Defoe). Perplex stresses puzzlement resulting in uncertainty or anxiety, as over attaining comprehension, reaching a decision, or finding a solution: "It is not worth while to perplex the reader with inquiries into the abstract nature of evidence" (Joseph Butler). To mystify is to perplex by defying or seeming to defy comprehension: The author's imagery mystifies me. Bewilder emphasizes both perplexity and extreme mental confusion: "The old know what they want; the young are sad and bewildered" (Logan Pearsall Smith). To confound is to bewilder and astonish so that one becomes immobilized or loses one's equanimity: "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise" (I Corinthians 1:27). The fugitive doubled back to confound the pursuers.

puz-zle-ment (püz'əl-mənt) n. The state of being confused or baffled; perplexity.

puzzle palace (püz'əl päl'is) n. Slang. A place where high-level decisions are made in seclusion and great secrecy: "the notion that Washington amounts to a puzzle palace on the Potomac, divorced from the genuine desires of the voters" (David A. Stockman).

PV abbr. Polyvinyl.

- PVC (pē'vē-sē') n. A common thermoplastic resin, used in a wide variety of manufactured products, including rainwear, garden hoses, phonograph records, and floor tiles. [P(OLY)V(INYL)C(HLORIDE).]
- PVO abbr. Private voluntary organization.
- PVT or Pvt or pvt. abbr. Private.
- PWA abbr. 1. Person with AIDS. 2. Also P.W.A.. Public Works Administration.
- pwr. abbr. Power.
- pwt. abbr. Pennyweight.
- pxt. abbr. Latin. Pinxit (He, or she, painted this).
- py- pref. Variant of pyo-.
- py·a (pē-ä') n. A unit of currency in Burma. See Table at currency. [Burmese.]
- pyc·nid·i·um (pĭk-nĭd'ē-əm) n. pl. pyc·nid·i·a (-ē-ə). A flask-shaped asexual structure containing conidia, found in certain fungi. [New Latin : Greek puknos, thick + Latin -idium, diminutive suff. (from Greek -idion).] —pyc·nid'·i·al adj.
- pyc·nog·o·nid (pĭk-nŏg'ə-nĭd, pĭk'nə-gŏn'ĭd) n. See sea spider. [From New Latin Pycnogonidae, family name, from Pycnogonum, type genus : Greek puknos, thick + Greek gonu, knee; see genu-¹ in Appendix.]
- pyc·nom·e·ter (pĭk-nŏm'ĭ-tər) n. A standard vessel used in measuring the density or specific gravity of materials. [Greek puknos, dense + -meter.]
- pye·dog also pi·dog (pĭ'dŏg', -dŏg') n. A stray dog. [Perhaps Hindi pāhi, outsider.]
- py·e·li·tis (pĭ'ə-lĭ'tĭs) n. Acute inflammation of the pelvis of the kidney, caused by bacterial infection. [New Latin : Greek puelos, basin; see pleu- in Appendix + -itis.] —py·e·lit'ic (-lĭt'ĭk) adj.
- py·e·lo·gram (pĭ'ə-lə-grām') n. An x-ray obtained by pyelography. [Greek puelos, basin; see PYELITIS + -GRAM.]
- py·e·log·ra·phy (pĭ'ə-lŏg'rə-fē) n. X-ray photography of the pelvis of the kidney and associated structures after injection with a radiopaque dye. [Greek puelos, basin; see PYELITIS + -GRAPHY.] —py·e·lo·graph'ic (-lə-grăf'ĭk) adj.
- py·e·lo·ne·phri·tis (pĭ'ə-lŏ-nĭ-frĭ'tĭs) n. Inflammation of the kidney and its pelvis, caused by bacterial infection. [New Latin : Greek puelos, basin; see PYELITIS + NEPHRITIS.] —py·e·lo·ne·phrit'ic (-frĭt'ĭk) adj.
- py·e·mi·a (pĭ-ē'mē-ə) n. Septicemia caused by pyogenic microorganisms in the blood, often resulting in the formation of multiple abscesses. —py·e'mic adj.
- py·gid·i·um (pĭ-jĭd'ē-əm) n. pl. py·gid·i·a (-ē-ə). The posterior body region or caudal segment of certain insects and other invertebrates. [New Latin, from Greek pugidion, diminutive of pugē, buttocks.] —py·gid'·i·al (-ē-əl) adj.
- pyg·mae·an or pyg·me·an (pĭg-mē'an, pĭg'mē-) adj. Pygmy. [From Latin pygmaeus, sing. of Pygmaei, the Pygmies. See PYGMY.]

Pyg·ma·lion (pĭg-māl'yən, -mā'lē-ən) n. Greek Mythology. A king of Cyprus who carved and then fell in love with a statue of a woman, which Aphrodite brought to life as Galatea.

pyg·me·an (pĭg-mē'ən, pĭg'mē-) adj. Variant of pygmaean.

pyg·moid (pĭg'moid') adj. Resembling or characteristic of a Pygmy.

Pyg·my also Pig·my (pĭg'mē) n. pl. Pyg·mies. 1. Greek Mythology. A member of a race of dwarfs. 2. Also pygmy. Anthropology. A member of any of various peoples, especially of equatorial Africa and parts of southeast Asia, having an average height less than 5 feet (127 centimeters). 3. pygmy. a. An individual of unusually small size. b. An individual considered to be of little or no importance. — adj. 1. Also pygmy. Anthropology. Of or relating to the Pygmies.

2. pygmy. a. Unusually or atypically small. b. Unimportant; trivial. [Middle English pigmie, from Latin Pygmaei, the Pygmies, from Greek Pugmaioi, from pugmē, cubit, fist. See peuk- in Appendix.]

py·ja·ma (pə-jä'mə, -jäm'ə) n. Chiefly British. Variant of pajama.

pyk·nic (pĭk'nĭk) adj. Having a short, stocky physique. [From Greek puknos, compact.] — pyk'nĭc n.

Pyle (pĭl), Ernest Taylor. Known as “Ernie.” 1900-1945. American journalist noted for his stories about American soldiers on the European and North African fronts during World War II.

Pyle (pĭl), Howard. 1853-1911. American writer and illustrator of children's books, such as The Wonder Clock (1888), which features his distinctive art nouveau illustrations.

py·lon (pī'lŏn') n. 1. A steel tower supporting high-tension wires. 2. A tower marking a turning point in a race among aircraft. 3. A large structure or group of structures marking an entrance or approach. 4. A monumental gateway in the form of a pair of truncated pyramids serving as the entrance to an ancient Egyptian temple. [Greek pulōn, gateway, from pulē, gate.]

py·lo·rus (pī-lŏr'əs, -lŏr'-, pĭ-) n. pl. py·lo·ri (-lŏr'ī', -lŏr'ī'). The passage at the lower end of the stomach that opens into the duodenum. [Late Latin pylŏrus, from Greek pulōros: pulē, gate + ouros, guard; see wer-³ in Appendix.] — py·lo'ric (-ĭk) adj.

Pym (pĭm), John. 1584-1643. English Parliamentarian who moved for the impeachment of the advisers to Charles I. The king's effort to arrest Pym in the House of Commons (1642) precipitated the English Civil War.

Pyn·chon (pĭn'chən), Thomas. Born 1937. American writer whose dark, pessimistic novels of life in a technologically advanced society include Gravity's Rainbow (1973).

pyo- or py- pref. Pus: pyoderma. [Greek puo-, from puon, pus. See pū- in Appendix.]

py·o·der·ma (pī'ə-dŭr'mə) n. A pyogenic skin disease. — py'o·der'mic adj.

py·o·gen·e·sis (pī'ə-jěn'ī-sīs) n. Formation of pus.

py·o·gen·ic (pī'ə-jěn'īk) adj. 1. Producing pus. 2. Of, relating to, or characterized by pyogenesis.

py·oid (pī'oid) adj. Of or resembling pus.

Pyong·yang (pyŭng'yäng', -yäng', pyông'-) The capital and largest city of North Korea, in the southwest-central part of the country. It was an important cultural center and Chinese colony after 108 B.C., later fell to the Japanese, and became capital of North Korea in 1948. Population, 1,283,000.

py·or·rhe·a or py·or·rhe·a (pī'ə-rē'ə) n. 1. Purulent inflammation of the gums and tooth sockets, often leading to loosening of the teeth. 2. A discharge of pus. — py'or·rhe'al adj.

py·o·sis (pī-ō'sīs) n. Pyogenesis.

pyr- pref. Variant of pyro-.

py·ra·can·tha (pī'rə-kăn'thə) n. A shrub of the genus Pyracantha; the fire thorn. [Latin, from Greek purakantha, a shrub : pur, fire; see PYRE + akantha, thorn.]

py·ral·id (pī-räl'id, pīr'ə-līd) also py·ral·i·did (pī-räl'i-dīd) n. Any of numerous small or medium-sized moths of the diverse, widely distributed family Pyralidae. — adj. Of or belonging to the family Pyralidae. [From New Latin Pyralidae, family name, from Pyralis, type genus, from Greek puralis, puralid-, an insect said to live in fire, from pur, fire. See PYRE.]

pyr·a·mid (pīr'ə-mīd) n. 1. a. A solid figure with a polygonal base and triangular faces that meet at a common point. b. Something shaped like this polyhedron. 2. a. A massive monument of ancient Egypt having a rectangular base and four triangular faces culminating in a single apex, built over or around a crypt or tomb. b. Any of various similar constructions, especially a four-sided Mayan temple having stepped sides and a flat top surmounted by ceremonial chambers. 3. The transactions involved in pyramiding stock. 4. Anatomy. A structure or part suggestive of a pyramid in shape. — v. pyr·a·mid·ed, pyr·a·mid·ing, pyr·a·mids. — v. tr. 1. To place or build in the shape of a pyramid. 2. To build (an argument or a thesis, for example) progressively from a basic general premise. 3. To speculate in (stock) by making a series of buying and selling transactions in which paper profits are used as margin for buying more stock. — v. intr. 1. To assume the shape of a pyramid. 2. To increase rapidly and on a widening base. 3. To pyramid stocks. [Latin p̄ramis, p̄ramid-, from Greek puramis, probably from Egyptian pimar.] — py·ram'i·dal (pī-rām'i-dl), pyr'a·mid'ic (-mīd'īk), pyr'a·mid'i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. — py·ram'i·dal·ly adv.

Pyr·a·mid Peak (pīr'ə-mīd pēk) A mountain, 4,275.5 m (14,018 ft) high, in the Elk Mountains of west-central Colorado.

pyramidal tract (pī-rām'i-dl trākt) n. A major pathway of the central nervous system, originating in the sensorimotor areas of the cerebral cortex and generally descending through the brainstem to the spinal cord. The fibers of the pyramidal tract transmit motor impulses that function in the control of voluntary movement.

Pyra-mus (pīr'ə-məs) n. Roman Mythology. A Babylonian youth who committed suicide when he mistakenly thought his lover Thisbe was dead.

py-ran (pī'răn') n. Either of two isomeric compounds with the formula C_5H_6O , having a ring of five carbon atoms and one oxygen atom. [pyrone, heterocyclic compound (PYR(O)- + -ONE) + -AN².]

py-rar-gy-rite (pī-rär'jə-rīt', pī-) n. A deep red to black silver ore with composition Ag_3SbS_3 . [German Pyrrargyrit : Greek puro-, pyro- + Greek arguros, silver; see ARGENT.]

pyre (pīr) n. 1. A heap of combustibles for burning a corpse as a funeral rite. 2. A pile of combustibles. [Latin pyra, from Greek pura, from pur, fire. See pūr- in Appendix.]

py-rene (pī'rēn', pī-rēn') n. The stone of certain fruits, such as the cherry. [New Latin pŷrēna, from Greek purēn.]

Pyre-nees (pīr'ə-nēz') A mountain range of southwest Europe extending along the French-Spanish border from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean Sea. It rises to 3,406.2 m (11,168 ft) at Pico de Aneto. —Pyre-ne'an adj.

py-re-noid (pī-rē'noid', pī'rə-) n. A proteinaceous structure found within the chloroplast of certain algae and hornworts. It is considered to be associated with starch deposition. [New Latin pŷrēna, fruit stone; see PYRENE + -OID.]

py-re-thrin (pī-rē'thrīn, -rēth'rīn) n. Either of two viscous liquid esters, $C_{21}H_{28}O_3$ or $C_{22}H_{28}O_5$, that are extracted from pyrethrum flowers and used as insecticides. [PYRETHR(UM) + -IN.]

py-re-throid (pī-rē'throid, -rēth'roid) n. Any of several synthetic compounds similar to pyrethrin, used as an insecticide.

py-re-thrum (pī-rē'thrəm, -rēth'rəm) n. 1. Any of several Old World plants of the genus Chrysanthemum, such as C. coccineum, cultivated for their showy flower heads. 2. An insecticide made from the dried flower heads of Chrysanthemum cinerariifolium or C. coccineum. [Latin, pellitory, from Greek purethron, feverfew, from pur, fire (from its warming effect). See PYRETIC.]

py-ret-ic (pī-rēt'ik) adj. Relating to, producing, or affected by fever. [New Latin pyreticus, from Greek puretos, fever, from pur, fire. See pūr- in Appendix.]

Pyrex (pī'rēks') A trademark used for any of various types of heat-resistant and chemical-resistant glass. This trademark often occurs in attributive contexts in print: "The water is mixed with titanium dioxide, which serves as a catalyst, and is pumped through Pyrex tubes" (Scientific American). "The physicist sets the ice sample in an empty Pyrex beaker" (Smithsonian).

py·rex·i·a (pī-rĕk'sē-ə) n. Fever. [New Latin, from Greek purexis, from puresein, to have a fever, from puretos, fever. See PYRETIC.] —py·rex'i·al, py·rex'ic adj.

pyr·he·li·om·e·ter (pīr'hē-lē-ōm'ī-tər, pīr'-) n. Any of various devices that measure all the intensity of solar radiation received at the earth.

—pyr'he·li·o·met'ric (-ə-mĕt'rik) adj.

py·ric (pī'rĭk, pīr'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or resulting from burning.

pyr·i·dine (pīr'ī-dĕn') n. A flammable, colorless or yellowish liquid base, C_5H_5N , having a penetrating odor and serving as the parent compound of many biologically important derivatives. It is used as a solvent and waterproofing agent and in the manufacture of various drugs and vitamins. —py·rid'ic (pī-rĭd'ĭk) adj.

pyr·i·dox·al (pīr'ī-dōk'səl) n. An aldehyde, $C_8H_9NO_3$, one of several active forms of pyridoxine, important in amino acid synthesis. [PYRIDOX(INE) + -AL³.]

pyr·i·dox·a·mine (pīr'ī-dōk'sə-mĕn') n. A crystalline amine, $C_8H_{12}N_2O_2$, one of several active forms of pyridoxine, important in protein metabolism.

[PYRIDOX(INE) + -AMINE.]

pyr·i·dox·ine (pīr'ī-dōk'sĕn, -sĭn) also pyr·i·dox·in (-dōk'sĭn) n. A pyridine derivative, $C_{18}H_{11}NO_3$, occurring especially in cereals, yeast, liver, and fish and serving as a coenzyme in amino acid synthesis. Also called vitamin B₆ [PYRID(INE) + OX(O)- + -INE².]

pyr·i·form (pīr'ə-fōrm') adj. Shaped like a pear. [Medieval Latin pyrum, pear (alteration of Latin pirum) + -FORM.]

py·ri·meth·a·mine (pī'rə-mĕth'ə-mĕn', -mĭn) n. A drug, $C_{12}H_{13}ClN_4$, used principally in the prophylactic treatment of malaria. [PYRIM(IDINE) + ETH(YL) + AMINE.]

py·rim·i·dine (pī-rĭm'ī-dĕn', pī-) n. 1. A crystalline organic base, $C_4H_4N_2$, that is the parent substance of various biologically important derivatives. 2. Any of several basic compounds derived from or structurally related to pyrimidine, especially the nucleic acid constituents uracil, cytosine, and thymine. [Alteration of PYRIDINE.]

py·rite (pī'rĭt') n. A brass-colored mineral, FeS_2 , occurring widely and used as an iron ore and in producing sulfur dioxide for sulfuric acid. Also called fool's gold, iron pyrites. [Middle English perides, pirite, from Old French pirite, from Latin pyrītēs, flint. See PYRITES.] —py·rit'ic (-rĭt'ĭk), py·rit'i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj.

py·ri·tes (pī-rĭt'ĕz, pī'rĭts') n. pl. pyrites. Any of various natural metallic sulfide minerals, especially of iron. [Latin pyrītēs, from Greek puritēs (lithos), fire (stone), flint, from pur, fire. See pūr- in Appendix.]

pyro. abbr. Pyrotechnics.

pyro- or pyr- pref. 1. Fire; heat: pyrotechnic. 2. Relating to the action of fire or heat: pyrography. 3. Fever: pyrogen. 4. Derived from an acid by the loss of a water molecule: pyrosulfuric acid. [New Latin, from Greek puro-, from pur, fire. See pūr- in Appendix.]

py-ro-cel-lu-lose (pī'rō-sēl'yə-lōs', -lōz') n. A cellulose nitrate used as a component of smokeless powder.

py-ro-chem-i-cal (pī'rō-kēm'i-kəl) adj. Relating to or designating chemical activity at elevated temperatures. —py'ro-chem'i-cal-ly adv.

py-ro-clas-tic (pī'rō-klās'tik) adj. Composed chiefly of rock fragments of volcanic origin.

py-ro-e-lec-tric (pī'rō-ī-lēk'trīk) adj. Relating to or exhibiting pyroelectricity. — n. A pyroelectric material.

py-ro-e-lec-tric-i-ty (pī'rō-ī-lēk-trīs'i-tē, -ē'lēk-) n. Generation of electric charge on a crystal by change of temperature.

py-ro-gal-lic acid (pī'rō-gāl'ik əs'īd, -gô'lik) n. See pyrogallol.

py-ro-gal-lol (pī'rō-gāl'ôl', -ôl', -ôl', -gô'lôl', -lôl', -lôl') n. A white, toxic crystalline phenol, C₆H₃(OH)₃, used as a photographic developer and to treat certain skin diseases. Also called pyrogallic acid [PYRO- + GALL(IC ACID) + -OL¹.]

—py'ro-gal'lic (-gāl'ik, -gô'lik) adj.

py-ro-gen (pī'rə-jən) n. A substance that produces fever.

py-ro-gen-ic (pī'rō-jěn'ik) also py-rog-e-nous (pī-rōj'ə-nəs) adj.

1. Producing or produced by fever. 2. Caused by or generating heat. 3. Of or relating to solid rock formed from molten rock; igneous. —py'ro-ge-nic-i-ty (-rō-jə-nīs'i-tē) n.

py-rog-ra-phy (pī-rōg'rə-fē) n. pl. py-rog-ra-phies. 1. The process or art of producing designs on wood, leather, or other materials by using heated tools or a fine flame. 2. A design made by this process. —py'ro-graph' (pī'rə-gräf') n. —py-rog'ra-pher n. —py'ro-graph'ic adj.

py-ro-lig-ne-ous (pī'rō-līg'nē-əs) adj. Made by the destructive distillation of wood.

pyroligneous acid (pī'rō-līg'nē-əs əs'īd) n. A reddish-brown wood distillate containing acetic acid, methyl alcohol, acetone, and a tarry residue. Also called wood vinegar py-ro-lu-site (pī'rō-lō'sīt) n. A soft, black to dark gray mineral, MnO₂, the commonest and most important secondary ore of manganese. [German Pyrolusit: Greek puro-, pyro- + Greek lousis, a washing (from louein, to wash); see leu(ə)- in Appendix.]

py-rol-y-sis (pī-rōl'i-sīs) n. Decomposition or transformation of a compound caused by heat. —py'ro-lyt'ic (-rə-līt'ik) adj. —py'ro-lyt'i-cal-ly adv.

py-ro-lyze (pī'rə-līz') v. tr. py-ro-lyzed, py-ro-lyz-ing, py-ro-lyz-es. To subject (something) to pyrolysis.

py-ro-man-cy (pī'rə-măn'sē) n. Divination by fire or flames. [Middle English piromance, from Old French pyromancie, from Late Latin pyromantia, from Greek puromanteia : puro-, pyro- + manteia, divination; see -MANCY.]

—py'ro-man'tic (-măn'tĭk) adj.

py-ro-ma-ni-a (pī'rō-mā'nē-ə, -măn'yə) n. Psychiatry. An uncontrollable impulse to start fires. —py'ro-ma'ni-ac' (-mā'nē-ăk') adj., n.

—py'ro-ma-ni'a-cal (-mə-nī'ə-kəl) adj.

py-ro-met-al-lur-gy (pī'rō-mět'l-ûr'jē) n. pl. py-ro-met-al-lur-gies. An ore-refining process, such as smelting, dependent on the action of heat.

—py'ro-met'al-lur'gi-cal (-mět'l-ûr'jĭ-kəl) adj.

py-rom-e-ter (pī-röm'ĭ-tər) n. Any of various thermometers used for measuring high temperatures. —py'ro-met'ric (-rə-mět'rik), py'ro-met'ri-cal (-rĭ-kəl) adj. —py'ro-met'ri-cal-ly adv. —py-rom'e-try n.

py-ro-mor-phite (pī'rə-môr'fīt') n. A green, brown, or yellow mineral, $Pb_5(PO_4)_3Cl$, a minor ore of lead. [German Pyromorphit : Greek puro-, pyro- + Greek morphē, form.]

py-ro-nine (pī'rə-nēn') n. Any of a group of red dyes used as a biological stain, especially to detect the presence of RNA. [German Pyronin, originally a trademark.]

py-ro-pe (pī'röp') n. A deep red garnet, $Mg_3Al_2Si_3O_{12}$, used as a gem. [Middle English pirope, from Old French, from Latin pyrōpum, gold-bronze alloy, from Greek purōpos, fiery, kind of red bronze : puro-, pyro- + ōps, eye, face; see ok^w- in Appendix.]

py-ro-phor-ic (pī'rə-fôr'ĭk, -fôr'-) adj. 1. Spontaneously igniting in air.

2. Producing sparks by friction. [From pyrophorus, substance that ignites spontaneously : from Greek purōphoros, fire-bearing puro-, pyro- + -phoros, -phorous.]

py-ro-phos-phate (pī'rə-fôs'fāt') n. A salt or an ester of pyrophosphoric acid. —py'ro-phos-phat'ic (-fāt'ĭk) adj.

py-ro-phos-phor-ic acid (pī'rō-fôs-fôr'ĭk əs'ĭd, -fôr'-) n. A syrupy viscous liquid, $H_4P_2O_7$, used as a catalyst and in organic chemical manufacture.

py-ro-phyll-lite (pī'rō-fĭl'ĭt', pī-rōf'ə-līt') n. A silvery white or pale green aluminum silicate mineral, $Al_2Si_4O_{10}(OH)_2$, occurring naturally in soft, compact masses.

py-ro-sis (pī-rō'sĭs) n. See heartburn. [New Latin, from Greek purōsis, a burning, from puroun, to burn, from pur, fire. See pūr- in Appendix.]

py-ro-stat (pī'rə-stăt') n. 1. An automatic sensing device that activates an alarm or extinguisher in case of fire. 2. A high-temperature thermostat.

py-ro-sul-fate (pī'rō-sŭl'fāt') n. A salt of pyrosulfuric acid. [PYROSULF(URIC ACID) + -ATE².]

py-ro-sul-fu-ric acid (pī'rō-sŭl-fyŭr'ĭk əs'ĭd) n. A heavy, oily, colorless to dark brown liquid, $H_2S_2O_7$, produced by adding sulfur trioxide to concentrated sulfuric acid and used in petroleum refining and the manufacture of explosives.

py-ro-tech-nic (pī'rə-tĕk'nĭk) also py-ro-tech-ni-cal (-nĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to fireworks. 2. pyrotechnic. Resembling fireworks; brilliant: a pyrotechnic wit; pyrotechnic keyboard virtuosity. —py'ro-tech'ni-cal-ly adv.

py-ro-tech-nics (pī'rə-tĕk'nĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. pyro. 1. The art of manufacturing or setting off fireworks. Also called pyrotechny 2. A fireworks display. 3. A brilliant display, as of rhetoric or wit, or of virtuosity in the performing arts. —py'ro-tech'nist n.

py-ro-tech-ny (pī'rə-tĕk'nĕ) n. See pyrotechnics (n., sense 1). [New Latin pyrotechnia : Greek puro-, pyro- + Greek tekhnē, craft; see TECHNIQUE.]

py-rox-ene (pī-rŏk'sĕn') n. Any of a group of crystalline silicate minerals common in igneous and metamorphic rocks and containing two metallic oxides, as of magnesium, iron, calcium, sodium, or aluminum. [French pyroxène : Greek puro-, pyro- + Greek xenos, stranger (originally viewed as a foreign substance when found in igneous rocks); see ghos-ti- in Appendix.] —py'rox-en'ic (pī'rŏk-sĕ'nĭk, -sĕn'ĭk) adj.

py-rox-e-nite (pī-rŏk'sĕ-nĭt') n. An igneous rock consisting chiefly of pyroxenes. —py-rox'e-nit'ic (-nĭt'ĭk) adj.

py-rox-y-lin (pī-rŏk'sĕ-lĭn) also py-rox-y-line (-lĕn', -lĭn) n. A highly flammable nitrocellulose used in the manufacture of collodion, plastics, and lacquers.

pyr-rhic (pĭr'ĭk) n. A metrical foot having two short or unaccented syllables. — adj. Of or characterized by pyrrhics. [Latin pyrrhicius, from Greek purrikhios, from purrikhē, a war dance, perhaps from Purrikhos, supposed inventor of the dance.]

Pyr-rhic victory (pĭr'ĭk vĭk'tə-rĕ) n. A victory that is offset by staggering losses. [After PYRRHUS.]

pyr-rho-tite (pĭr'ə-tĭt') also pyr-rho-tine (-tĭn') n. A brownish-bronze iron sulfide mineral, FeS, characterized by weak magnetic properties and used as an iron ore and in the manufacture of sulfuric acid. Also called magnetic pyrites [Alteration (influenced by -ITE¹), of German Pyrrhotin, from Greek purrotēs, redness, from purros, fiery, from pur, fire. See pŭr- in Appendix.]

pyr-rhu-lox-i-a (pĭr'ə-lŏk'sĕ-ə, pĭr'yə-) n. A large, crested finch (Pyrrhuloxia sinuata) of Mexico and the southwest United States, having gray and red plumage and a short, thick bill. [New Latin Pyrrhuloxia, genus name : Pyrrhula, finch genus (from Greek purroulas, red-colored bird, from purros, red, from pur, fire); see PYRE + Loxia, crossbill genus (from Greek loxos, oblique).]

Pyr-rhus (pĭr'əs), 319-272 B.C. King of Epirus (306-302 and 297-272) who defeated the Romans at Heraclea (280) and Asculum (279) despite his own staggering losses.

pyr-role (pĭr'ŏl') n. A five-membered heterocyclic ring compound, C₄H₅N, having an odor similar to chloroform. It is the parent compound of hemoglobin, chlorophyll, and many other complex, biologically active substances. [Greek purros, red (from pur, fire); see PYRE + -OLE.] —pyr-ro'lic (pĭ-rō'lik) adj.

py·ru·vate (pĭ-rōō'vāt, pĭ-) n. A salt or an ester of pyruvic acid.

py·ru·vic acid (pĭ-rōō'vik əs'īd, pĭ-) n. A colorless organic liquid, CH₃COCOOH, formed as a fundamental intermediate in protein and carbohydrate metabolism. [PYR(O)- + Latin ūva, grape (from its being produced by the dry distillation of racemic acid, originally derived from grapes) + -IC.]

Py·thag·o·ras (pĭ-thäg'ər-əs), fl. sixth century B.C. Greek philosopher and mathematician who founded in southern Italy a school that emphasized the study of musical harmony and geometry. He proved the universal validity of the Pythagorean theorem and is considered the first true mathematician.

Py·thag·o·re·an·ism (pĭ-thäg'ə-rē'ə-nĭz'əm) n. Philosophy. The syncretistic philosophy expounded by Pythagoras, distinguished chiefly by its description of reality in terms of arithmetical relationships. —Py·thag'o·re'an adj. & n.

Pythagorean theorem (pĭ-thäg'ə-rē'ən thē'ər-əm) n. Mathematics. The theorem that the sum of the squares of the lengths of the sides of a right triangle is equal to the square of the length of the hypotenuse.

Pyth·i·an (pĭth'ē-ən) also Pyth·ic (pĭth'ik) adj. 1. Greek Mythology. Of or relating to Delphi, the temple of Apollo at Delphi, or its oracle. 2. Of or relating to the Pythian games. [From Latin Pythius, from Greek Puthios, from Puthō, ancient name of Delphi.]

Pythian games (pĭth'ē-ən gāmz) pl.n. A pan-Hellenic festival of athletic tournaments held every four years at Delphi in honor of the god Apollo.

Pyth·i·as (pĭth'ē-əs) n. A Greek who rescued his friend Damon, who stood bail for Pythias when he was condemned to die.

Pyth·ic (pĭth'ik) adj. Variant of Pythian.

py·thon (pĭ'thōn', -thən) n. Any of various nonvenomous snakes of the family Pythonidae, found chiefly in Asia, Africa, and Australia, that coil around and suffocate their prey. Pythons often attain lengths of 6 meters (20 feet) or more. [Probably French, from Latin Pythōn, mythical serpent killed by Apollo near Delphi. See PYTHON.]

Py·thon (pĭ'thōn', -thən) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A dragon or serpent that was the tutelary demon of the oracular cult at Delphi until killed and expropriated by Apollo. 2. python. a. A soothsaying spirit or demon. b. A person possessed by such a spirit. [Latin Pythōn, from Greek Puthōn.]

py·tho·ness (pĭ'thə-nĭs, pĭth'ə-) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A priestess of Apollo at Delphi. 2. A prophetess. [Middle English phitonesse, from Old French phitonise, from Late Latin pythonissa, from Greek Puthōn, Python.]

py·thon·ic (pĭ-thōn'ik) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling a python. 2. Of or resembling an oracle; prophetic. 3. Of extraordinary size and power.

py·u·ri·a (pī-yōōr'ē-ə) n. The presence of pus in the urine, usually a sign of urinary tract infection.

pyx also pix (pīks) n. 1. Ecclesiastical. a. A container in which wafers for the Eucharist are kept. b. A container in which the Eucharist is carried to the sick. 2. A chest in a mint in which specimen coins are placed to await assay. [Middle English pyxe, from Latin pyxis, box, from Greek pyxis.]

pyx·i·des (pīk'sī-dēz') n. Plural of pyxis.

pyx·id·i·um (pīk-sīd'ē-əm) n. pl. pyx·id·i·a (-ē-ə). A pyxis. [New Latin, from Greek pyxidion, diminutive of pyxis, box.]

pyx·ie (pīk'sē) n. A creeping evergreen shrub (Pyxidantha barbulata) having small white or pinkish flowers, native to pine barrens of the eastern United States. [Shortening and alteration of New Latin Pyxidantha, genus name : Greek pyxis, pyxid-, box + Greek anthera, pollen; see ANTHER.]

pyx·is (pīk'sīs) n. pl. pyx·i·des (pīk'sī-dēz'). Botany. A capsule dehiscing transversely by a lid that falls off to release the seeds. [Latin pyxis, box, from Greek pyxis.]

Pyx·is (pīk'sīs) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere, near Antlia and Puppis. [New Latin Pyxis (nautica), (mariner's) compass, from Greek pyxis, box.]

q¹ or Q (kyōō) n. pl. q's or Q's. 1. The 17th letter of the modern English alphabet. 2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter q. 3. The 17th in a series. 4. Something shaped like the letter Q.

q² Physics. The symbol for charge (n., sense 13).

Q abbr. 1. Games. Queen (chess). 2. Quetzal.

q. abbr. 1. Quart. 2. Quarter. 3. Quarterly. 4. Also Q.. Quarto. 5. Query. 6. Question. 7. Quintal. 8. Quire.

Qad·da·fi or Qa·dha·fi or Kad·da·fi or Kha·da·fy (kə-dä'fē) or Gad·da·fi (gə-), Muammar al- or el-. Born 1942. Libyan political leader who seized power in a military coup d'état against the Libyan monarchy (1969) and imposed socialist policies and Islamic orthodoxy on the country.

q and a abbr. Question and answer.

Qan·da·har (kūn'də-här', kän'-) See Kandahar.

Qa·tar (kä'tär', kə-tär') A country of eastern Arabia on a peninsula in the southwest Persian Gulf. It was under British protection from 1916 until 1971, when it became independent. Oil was first produced commercially in 1949. Doha is the capital. Population, 220,000. —Qa·tar'i adj. & n.

Qat·ta·ra Depression (kə-tär'ə dī-prěsh'ən) A desert basin of northwest Egypt in the Libyan Desert. Its lowest point is about 134 m (440 ft) below sea level.

Qaz·vin also Kaz·vin (kăz-vēn') A city of northwest Iran northwest of Tehran. Founded in the fourth century A.D., it was captured by the Arabs in 644 and was the capital of Persia from 1548 to 1598. Population, 244,000.

qb abbr. Football. Quarterback.

QB abbr. Games. Queen's bishop (chess).

Q.B. abbr. Law. Queen's Bench.

Q.C. abbr. 1. Also QC. Quality control. 2. Law. Queen's Counsel.

Q.E.D. abbr. Latin. Quod erat demonstrandum (which was to be demonstrated.)

Q.E.F. abbr. Latin. Quod erat faciendum (which was to have been done).

QF abbr. Quick-firing.

Q fever (kyōō' fē'vər) n. An infectious disease caused by the rickettsia Coxiella burnetii that is characterized by fever, malaise, and muscular pains. [Q(QUERY) + FEVER.]

Qian·long (chyän'lōōng') also Ch'ien-lung (chyěn'lōōng'), 1711-1799. Chinese emperor (1735-1796) of the Qing dynasty who subdued the Turkish and Mongolian threats to northern China, expanded the empire, and was a patron of the arts.

q.i.d. abbr. Latin. Quater in die (four times a day).

Qi-lian Shan (chē'lyän' shän') also Nan Shan (nän') A mountain range of north-central China extending northwest to southeast and having peaks rising from 5,490 m (18,000 ft) to more than 6,100 m (20,000 ft).

Qin also Ch'in (chĭn) A Chinese dynasty (221-206 B.C.) that established the first centralized imperial government in China. Much of the Great Wall of China was built during the rule of this dynasty.

qin-dar-ka (kĭn-där'kə) n. A unit of currency in Albania. See Table at currency. [Albanian qindarka, definite sing. of qindarkë, from qintar, from qint, qind, hundred, from Latin centum. See CENT.]

Qing also Ch'ing (chĭng), Also called Manchu. A Chinese dynasty (1644-1912) during which increasing Western influence and trade led to the Opium War (1839-1842) with Britain and the Boxer Rebellion (1898-1900). The dynasty, China's last, was overthrown by nationalist revolutionaries.

Qing-dao (chĭng'dou') also Tsing-tao (tsĭng'tou') A city of eastern China on the Yellow Sea north-northwest of Shanghai. It is a leading industrial and tourist center. The city was leased in 1898 to the Germans, who established a famed brewery. Population, 1,250,000.

Qing-hai also Ching-hai (chĭng'hĭ') or Tsing-hai (tsĭng'-) A province of northwest-central China. Its northern border is the Qilian Shan. Xining is the capital. Population, 4,070,000.

Qinghai Hu (chĭng'hĭ' hōo') also Ko-ko Nor (kō'kō' nōr', nōr') A salt lake of north-central China south of the Qilian Shan. The largest lake in China, it is at an altitude of more than 3,050 m (10,000 ft).

Qin-huang-dao (chĭn'hwäng'dou') also Chin-wang-tao (chĭn'wäng'tou') A city of northeast China on the Gulf of Bo Hai east of Beijing. It was formerly a treaty port. Population, 300,000.

qin-tar (kĭn-tär') n. A coin formerly used in Albania and worth one one-hundredth of a lek. [Albanian. See QINDARKA.]

Qi-qi-har (chē'chē'här') also Tsi-tsi-har (tsē'tsē'-) A city of northeast China in Manchuria northwest of Harbin. Founded as a fortress in 1691, it is a port and processing center. Population, 955,200.

qi-vi-ut (kē'vē-ət, -ōōt') n. The soft wool lying beneath the long coat of the musk ox, valued for its use as a fiber. [Inupiaq.]

QKt abbr. Games. Queen's knight (chess).

ql. abbr. Quintal.

qlty. abbr. Quality.

QM abbr. Quartermaster.

Q.M. abbr. Latin. Quaque mane (every morning).

QMC abbr. Quartermaster Corps.

QMG abbr. Quartermaster General.

qn. abbr. Question.

Qom (kōm) also Qum (kōōm) A city of west-central Iran south-southwest of Tehran. It has been a Shiite Muslim center since early Islamic times and a pilgrimage site since the 17th century. Population, 424,000.

qoph (kôf) n. The 19th letter of the Hebrew alphabet. [Hebrew qôp.]

QP abbr. Games. Queen's pawn (chess).

q.p. abbr. Latin. Quantum placet (as much as you please).

qq. abbr. Questions.

qq.v. abbr. Latin. Quae vide (which [things] see).

QR abbr. Games. Queen's rook (chess).

qr. abbr. 1. Quarter. 2. Quarterly. 3. Quire.

q.s. abbr. Latin. Quantum sufficit (as much as suffices).

qt or qt. abbr. Quart.

qt. abbr. Quantity.

q.t. (kyōō'tē') n. Slang. Quiet: told me the story strictly on the q.t. [Short for QUIET.]

Q-Tip (kyōō'tip') A trademark used for a cotton-tipped swab. This trademark often occurs in print in the plural and with a lowercase t: "They scrubbed for two hours straight, using rolls of paper towels, sponges, Q-tips (for hard to reach places)... and lots of elbow grease" (Washington Post). "With a surgical scalpel, [he] cut away most of the epoxy under a microscope; then, using a Q-tip... he cleaned the edges" (Smithsonian).

qto. abbr. Quarto.

qty. abbr. Quantity.

qu. abbr. 1. Queen. 2. Query. 3. Question.

qua (kwā, kwä) prep. In the capacity or character of; as: The President qua head of the party mediated the dispute. [Latin quā, feminine ablative sing. of quī, who. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

Quaa·lude (kwā'lōōd') A trademark formerly used for methaqualone.

WORD HISTORY: The former trademark Quaalude for the sedative and hypnotic agent methaqualone is an example of how a product name is carefully chosen for a positive public response. Methaqualone was developed in the 1960's by William H. Rorer, Inc. At that time, the company's best-known product was Maalox, a digestive aid that derived its name from its ingredients, magnesium and aluminum hydroxides. To enhance the product recognition of their new sedative drug, the company incorporated the aa of Maalox into the name Quaalude. The other elements of the name are presumed to be a contraction of the phrase quiet interlude, a soothing, even poetic description of the drug's effect.

quack¹ (kwăk) n. The characteristic sound uttered by a duck. — v. intr.

quacked, quack-ing, quacks. To utter the characteristic sound of a duck.

[Middle English quek, of imitative origin.] — quack'y adj.

quack² (kwăk) n. 1. An untrained person who pretends to be a physician and dispenses medical advice and treatment. 2. A charlatan; a mountebank. See Synonyms at impostor. — adj. Relating to or characteristic of a quack: a quack cure. — v. intr. quacked, quack-ing, quacks. To act as a medical quack or a charlatan. [Short for QUACKSALVER.] — quack'er-y n. — quack'ish adj.

— quack'ish-ly adv.

quack grass (kwäk gräs) n. See couch grass. [Variant of QUITCH GRASS.]

quack·sal·ver (kwäk'säl'vər) n. Archaic. A quack or charlatan. [Obsolete Dutch : Middle Dutch quac-, unguent or quacken, to quack, boast + Middle Dutch salven, to salve.]

quad¹ (kwöd) n. A quadrangle: cadets forming up in the barracks quad.

quad² (kwöd) n. Printing. See quadrat (n., sense 1).

quad³ (kwöd) n. A quadruplet.

quad⁴ (kwöd) adj. Quadraphonic.

quad. abbr. 1. Quadrangle. 2. Quadrant. 3. Quadrilateral.

quadr- pref. Variant of quadri-.

quad·ran·gle (kwöd'räng'gəl) n. Abbr. quad. 1. Mathematics. A plane figure consisting of four points, no three of which are collinear, connected by straight lines. 2. a. A rectangular area surrounded on all four sides by buildings. b. The buildings bordering this area. 3. The area of land shown on one atlas sheet charted by the U.S. Geological Survey. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin quadrangulum, from Latin, neuter of quadrangulus, four-cornered : quadri-, quadri- + angulus, angle.] — quad·ran'gu·lar (-räng'gyə-lər) adj.

— quad·ran'gu·lar·ly adv. — quad·ran'gu·lar·ness n.

quad·rant (kwöd'rənt) n. Abbr. quad. 1. Mathematics. a. A circular arc of 90°; one fourth of the circumference of a circle. b. The plane area bounded by such an arc and two perpendicular radii. c. Any of the four areas into which a plane is divided by the reference axes in a Cartesian coordinate system, designated first, second, third, and fourth, counting counterclockwise from the area in which both coordinates are positive. 2. A machine part or other mechanical device that is shaped like a quarter circle. 3. An early instrument for measuring altitude of celestial bodies, consisting of a 90° graduated arc with a movable radius for measuring angles. [Middle English, quarter of a day, from Latin quadrāns, quadrant-, a fourth part. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quad·ra·phon·ic also quad·ri·phon·ic (kwöd'rə-fōn'ik) adj. Of or for a four-channel sound system in which speakers are positioned at all four corners of the listening space, reproducing signals that are independent of each other.

— qua·draph'o·ny (kwō-drăf'ə-nē) n.

quad·ra·son·ic (kwöd'rə-sōn'ik) adj. Quadraphonic.

quad·rat (kwöd'rət, -rät') n. 1. Printing. A piece of type metal lower than the raised typeface, used for filling spaces and blank lines. Also called *quad*²

2. Ecology. Any of a group of small, usually rectangular plots of land arranged for close study of the distribution of plants or animals in an area. [Middle English, a square geometric instrument, rectangular area. See QUADRATE.]

quad-rate (kwŏd'rāt', -rīt) n. 1. a. A square or cube. b. An approximately square or cubic area, space, or object. 2. Zoology. A bone or cartilaginous structure of the skull, joining the upper and lower jaws in birds, fish, reptiles, and amphibians. — adj. 1. Having four sides and four angles; square or rectangular. 2. Zoology. Designating the quadrate bone or cartilage. — v. intr.

quad-rat-ed, quad-rat-ing, quad-rates. Archaic. To correspond; agree. [Middle English quadrat, something square, from Latin quadrātum, from neuter past participle of quadrāre, to make square, from quadrum, square. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quad-rat-ic (kwŏ-drāt'īk) adj. Mathematics. Of, relating to, or containing quantities of the second degree. [From QUADRATE.] — quad-rat'ic n.

— quad-rat'i-cal-ly adv.

quadratic equation (kwŏ-drāt'īk ĭ-kwā'zhən) n. Mathematics. An equation in which one or more of the terms is squared but raised to no higher power, having the general form $ax^2 + bx + c = 0$, where a, b, and c are constants.

quadratic formula (kwŏ-drāt'īk fŏr'myā-lə) n. Mathematics. The formula $x = [-b \pm (b^2 - 4ac)]/2a$, used to compute the roots of a quadratic equation.

quad-rat-ics (kwŏ-drāt'īks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Mathematics. The branch of algebra that deals with quadratic equations.

quad-ra-ture (kwŏd'rə-chŏŏr') n. 1. The process of making something square. 2. Mathematics. The process of constructing a square equal in area to a given surface. 3. Astronomy. A configuration in which the position of one celestial body is 90° from another celestial body, as measured from a third.

quad-ren-ni-a (kwŏ-drĕn'ĕ-ə) n. A plural of quadrennium.

quad-ren-ni-al (kwŏ-drĕn'ĕ-əl) adj. 1. Happening once in four years.

2. Lasting for four years. — quad-ren'ni-al n. — quad-ren'ni-al-ly adv.

quad-ren-ni-um (kwŏ-drĕn'ĕ-əm) n. pl. quad-ren-ni-ums or quad-ren-ni-a (kwŏ-drĕn'ĕ-ə). A period of four years. [Latin quadriennium : quadri-, quadri- + -ennium (from annus, year); see at- in Appendix.]

quadri- or quadru- or quadr- pref. 1. Four: quadrilateral. 2. Square: quadrate. [Middle English, from Latin. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quad-ric (kwŏd'rīk) adj. Mathematics. Of or relating to geometric surfaces that are defined by quadratic equations.

quad-ri-cen-ten-ni-al (kwŏd'rī-sĕn-tĕn'ĕ-əl) n. A 400th anniversary.

— quad'ri-cen-ten'ni-al adj.

quad-ri-ceps (kwŏd'rī-sĕps') n. The large four-part extensor muscle at the front of the thigh. [QUADRI- + (BI)CEPS.] — quad'ri-cip'i-tal (-sĭp'ī-tl) adj.

quad-ri-ga (kwŏd'rī-gə) n. pl. quad-ri-gae (-gĕ). A two-wheeled chariot drawn by four horses abreast. [Latin quadrīga, sing. of quadrīgae, team of four horses, contraction of quadriugae, feminine pl. of quadriugus, of a team of four : quadri-, quadri- + iugum, yoke; see JUGUM.]

quad·ri·lat·er·al (kwöd'rä-lät'är-əl) n. Abbr. quad. Mathematics. A plane figure with four sides and four angles. — adj. Abbr. quad. Having four sides.

qua·drille¹ (kwö-dril', kwə-, kə-) n. 1. A square dance of French origin composed of five figures and performed by four couples. 2. Music for this dance in 6/8 and 2/4 time. [French, from quadrille, team, crew, one of four groups of horsemen, from Spanish cuadrilla, probably diminutive of cuadro, square, from Latin quadrum. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

qua·drille² (kwö-dril', kwə-, kə-) n. Games. A card game popular during the 18th century, played by four people with a deck of 40 cards. [French, perhaps from Spanish cuartillo, diminutive of cuarto, fourth, from Latin quārtus. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quad·ril·lion (kwö-dril'yən) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 10¹⁵.

2. Chiefly British. Septillion. [QUADR(I)- + (M)ILLION.] — quad·ril'lion adj.

quad·ril·lionth (kwö-dril'yənθ) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number quadrillion in a series. 2. One of a quadrillion equal parts.

— quad·ril'lionth adv. & adj.

quad·ri·par·tite (kwöd'rä-pär'tīt') adj. 1. Consisting of or divided into four parts. 2. Involving four participants.

quad·ri·phon·ic (kwöd'rä-fön'ik) adj. Variant of quadrasonic.

— quad'ri·phon'y n.

quad·ri·ple·gi·a (kwöd'rä-plē'jē-ə, -jə) n. Complete paralysis of the body from the neck down. — quad'ri·ple'gic adj. & n.

quad·ri·va·lent (kwöd'rä-vā'lənt) adj. Chemistry. 1. Having four valences.

2. Having a valence of four; tetravalent. — quad'ri·va'lence, quad'ri·va'len·cy n.

quad·riv·i·um (kwö-driv'ē-əm) n. pl. quad·riv·i·a (-ē-ə). The higher division of the seven liberal arts in the Middle Ages, composed of geometry, astronomy, arithmetic, and music. [Late Latin, from Latin, place where four roads meet : quadri-, quadri- + via, road; see VIA.]

quad·roon (kwö-drōn') n. A person having one-quarter Black ancestry.

[Alteration of Spanish cuarterón, from cuarto, quarter, from Latin quārtus. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quadru- pref. Variant of quadri-.

quad·ru·ma·nous (kwö-drōō'mə-nəs) also quad·ru·ma·nal (-nəl) adj.

Zoology. Having four feet with opposable first digits, as primates other than human beings. [QUADRU- + Latin manus, hand; see man-² in Appendix + -OUS.]

quad·rum·vi·rate (kwö-drūm'vər-īt) n. A group of four people joined in authority or office, especially a government of four people: “[Chiang Kai-shek] was... the last survivor of the World War II quadrivirate that included Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin" (Newsweek). [QUADR(I)- + (TRI)UMVIRATE.]

quad·ru·ped (kwöd'rə-pěd') n. A four-footed animal. — adj. Four-footed: a quadruped mammal. — quad·ru'pe-dal (kwö-drōō'pə-dəl, kwöd'rə-pěd'l) adj.

quad·ru·ple (kwö-drōō'pəl, -drüp'əl, kwöd'rōō-pəl) adj. 1. Having four parts or members. 2. Multiplied by four; fourfold. 3. Music. Having four beats to the measure. — n. A number four times as great as another. — v. tr. intr.

quad·ru·pled, quad·ru·pling, quad·ru·ples. To multiply or be multiplied by four: quadrupled the order; quadrupled in size. [From Middle English quadruple, fourfold amount, and quadruple, tooth with four roots both from Old French quadruple, from Latin quadruplum, from neuter of quadruplus, fourfold : quadru-, quadri-, quadri- + -plus, -fold; see pel-² in Appendix.] — quad·ru'ply adv.

quad·ru·plet (kwö-drüp'līt, -drōō'plīt, kwöd'rə-plīt) n. 1. One of four offspring born in a single birth. 2. A group or combination of four associated by common properties or behavior.

quad·ru·pli·cate (kwö-drōō'pli-kīt) adj. 1. Multiplied by four; quadruple. 2. Fourth in a group of four identical things. — n. One of a group of four identical things. — v. tr. intr. quad·ru·pli·cat·ed, quad·ru·pli·cat·ing, quad·ru·pli·cates (-kāt'). To multiply or be multiplied four times. [Latin quadruplicātus, past participle of quadruplicāre, to multiply by four, from quadruplex, fourfold : quadru-, quadri-, quadri- + -plex, -fold; see DUPLEX.]

— quad·ru'pli·cate·ly (-kīt-lē) adv. — quad·ru'pli·ca'tion n.

quaes·tor (kwēs'tər, kwē'stər) n. Any of various public officials in ancient Rome responsible for finance and administration in various areas of government and the military. [Middle English questor, from Latin quaestor, from quaerere, quaest-, to inquire.] — quaes·to'ri·al (kwě-stōr'ē-əl, -stōr'-, kwē-) adj.

— quaes'tor·ship n.

quaff (kwōf, kwäf, kwōf) v. quaffed, quaff·ing, quaffs. — v. tr. To drink (a beverage) heartily: quaffed the ale with gusto. — v. intr. To drink a liquid heartily: quaffed from the spring. — n. A hearty draft of liquid. [Origin unknown.] — quaff'er n.

quag (kwäg, kwög) n. A quagmire. [Perhaps variant of Middle English quabbe, from Old English cwabba*.]

quag·ga (kwäg'ə, kwög'ə) n. A zebra-like mammal (Equus quagga) of southern Africa, extinct since the late 19th century. [Afrikaans, from Nguni (Xhosa) (i-)qwaxa, something striped, perhaps from Khoikhoi !ua-xa.]

quag·gy (kwäg'ē, kwög'ē) adj. quag·gi·er, quag·gi·est. 1. Resembling a marsh; soggy. 2. Soft and flabby.

quag·mire (kwäg'mīr', kwög'-) n. 1. Land with a soft, muddy surface. 2. A difficult or precarious situation; a predicament.

qua·hog also qua·haug (kwô'hôg', -hög', kwô'-, kô'-) n. An edible clam (Venus mercenaria) of the Atlantic coast of North America, having a hard, rounded shell. Also called hard-shell clam, round clam. [Narragansett poquaûhock.]

quaich also quaigh (kwākH) n. Scots. A two-handled drinking cup. [Scottish Gaelic cuach, from Old Irish cúach, alteration of cuäch.]

Quai d'Or-say (kā' dôr-sā', kē', kě dôr-sě') A street paralleling the southern bank of the Seine River in Paris, France, notable for its governmental ministries. The name is used figuratively to refer to the French foreign office.

quail¹ (kwāl) n. pl. quail or quails. 1. Any of various Old World chickenlike birds of the genus Coturnix, especially C. coturnix, small in size and having mottled brown plumage and a short tail. 2. Any of various similar or related New World birds, such as the bobwhite. [Middle English quaille, from Old French, perhaps from Vulgar Latin coacula*, of imitative origin.]

quail² (kwāl) v. intr. quailed, quail·ing, quails. To shrink back in fear; cower. See Synonyms at recoil. [Middle English quailen, to give way, probably from Middle Dutch quelen, to suffer, be ill. See g^welə- in Appendix.]

quaint (kwānt) adj. quaint·er, quaint·est. 1. Odd, especially in an old-fashioned way: "There is something almost quaint in the image of Irish organized crime, something that calls to mind old movies with Jimmy Cagney" (James Traub).

2. Unfamiliar or unusual in character; strange: quaint dialect words. See Synonyms at strange. [Middle English, clever, cunning, peculiar, from Old French queinte, cointe, from Latin cognitus, past participle of cognōscere, to learn. See COGNITION.] —quaint/ly adv. —quaint/ness n.

quake (kwāk) v. intr. quaked, quak·ing, quakes. 1. To shake or tremble, as from instability or shock. 2. To shiver, as with cold or from strong emotion. See Synonyms at shake. — n. 1. An instance of quaking. 2. An earthquake.

[Middle English quaken, from Old English cwacian.] —quak'y adj.

quake·proof (kwāk'prōōf') adj. Designed or constructed to withstand or resist the effects of an earthquake. — v. tr. quake·proofed, quake·proof·ing, quake·proofs. To make quakeproof.

Quak·er (kwā'kər) n. A member of the Society of Friends. [From QUAKE (from an early leader's admonishment to "tremble at the word of the Lord").]

—Quak'er·ism n. —Quak'er·ly adv. & adj.

Quaker gun (kwā'kər gŭn) n. A dummy gun made of wood. [From the Quakers' opposition to war.]

Quak·er·la·dies (kwā'kər-lā'dēz) pl.n. See bluets.

quak·ing aspen (kwā'kɪŋ əs'pən) n. A North American deciduous tree (Populus tremuloides) having broadly ovate, finely toothed leaves with a truncate base.

qual. abbr. Qualitative.

qua·le (kwä'lē) n. pl. qua·li·a (-lē-ə). A property, such as whiteness, considered independently from things having the property. [From Latin quāle, neuter of quālis, of what kind. See QUALITY.]

qual·i·fi·ca·tion (kwöl'ə-fī-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of qualifying or the condition of being qualified. 2. A quality, an ability, or an accomplishment that makes a person suitable for a particular position or task. 3. A condition or circumstance that must be met or complied with: fulfilled the qualifications for registering to vote in the presidential election. 4. A restriction or modification: an offer with a number of qualifications.

qual·i·fied (kwöl'ə-fīd') adj. 1. Having the appropriate qualifications for an office, a position, or a task. 2. Limited, restricted, or modified: a qualified plan for expansion. —qual·i·fied·ly (-fīd'lē, -fī'id-lē) adv.

qual·i·fi·er (kwöl'ə-fī'ər) n. 1. One that qualifies, especially one that has or fulfills all appropriate qualifications, as for a position, an office, or a task. 2. Grammar. A word or phrase that qualifies, limits, or modifies the meaning of another word or phrase.

qual·i·fy (kwöl'ə-fī') v. qual·i·fied, qual·i·fy·ing, qual·i·fies. — v. tr.
1. To describe by enumerating the characteristics or qualities of; characterize.
2. To make competent or eligible for an office, a position, or a task. 3. a. To declare competent or capable; certify. b. To make legally capable; license. 4. To modify, limit, or restrict, as by giving exceptions. 5. To make less harsh or severe; moderate. See Synonyms at moderate. 6. Grammar. To modify the meaning of (a noun, for example). — v. intr. 1. To be or become qualified. 2. To reach the later stages of a selection process or contest by competing successfully in earlier rounds. [From French qualifier (from Old French), and from Middle English qualifien, to specify the time and place of a document's execution both from Medieval Latin quālificāre, to attribute a quality to : Latin quālis, of such a kind; see QUALITY + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] qualitative analysis (kwöl'ī-tā'tīv ə-nāl'ī-sīs) n. The testing of a substance or mixture to determine its chemical constituents.

qual·i·ta·tive (kwöl'ī-tā'tīv) adj. Abbr. qual. Of, relating to, or concerning quality. [Middle English, producing a primary quality, from Medieval Latin quālitātīvus, from Late Latin, qualitative, from Latin quālitās, qualitāt-, quality. See QUALITY.] —qual·i·ta·tive·ly adv.

qual·i·ty (kwöl'ī-tē) n. pl. qual·i·ties. Abbr. qlty. 1. a. An inherent or distinguishing characteristic; a property. b. A personal trait, especially a character trait: someone with few redeeming qualities. 2. Essential character; nature: Mahogany has the quality of being durable. 3. a. Superiority of kind: an intellect of unquestioned quality. b. Degree or grade of excellence: yard goods of low quality. 4. a. High social position. b. Those in a high social position. 5. Music. Timbre, as determined by overtones: a voice with a distinctive metallic quality.

6. Linguistics. The character of a vowel sound determined by the size and shape of the oral cavity and the amount of resonance with which the sound is produced.

7. Logic. The positive or negative character of a proposition. — adj. Having a high degree of excellence: “He settled in to read Edmund Wilson... It was quality time” (Margaret Truman). [Middle English qualite, from Old French, from Latin quālītās, quālītāt-, from quālis, of what kind. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: quality, property, attribute, character, trait. These nouns all signify a feature that distinguishes or identifies someone or something. Quality is the most inclusive: “The spring of water... entirely lost the deliciousness of its pristine quality” (Nathaniel Hawthorne). “From now on an artist will be judged only by the resonance of his solitude or the quality of his despair” (Cyril Connolly). “The most vital quality a soldier can possess is self-confidence” (George S. Patton). A property is a basic or essential quality possessed by all members of a class: Resilience is a property of rubber. An attribute is a quality that is ascribed to someone or something: “God and all the attributes of God are eternal” (Spinoza). Character in this comparison is a distinctive feature of a group or category: “Natural Selection, entailing Divergence of Character and the Extinction of less-improved forms” (Charles Darwin). A trait is a single, clearly delineated characteristic, as of a person or group of people: “This reliance on authority is a fundamental primitive trait” (James Harvey Robinson).

quality circle (kwŏl'ĭ-tē sŭr'kəl) n. A group of employees who perform similar duties and meet at periodic intervals, often with management, to discuss work-related issues and to offer suggestions and ideas for improvements, as in production methods or quality control.

quality control (kwŏl'ĭ-tē kən-trŏl') n. Abbr. QC, Q.C. A system for ensuring the maintenance of proper standards in manufactured goods, especially by periodic random inspection of the product. — qual'i-ty-con-trol' (kwŏl'ĭ-tē-kən-trŏl') adj.

quality of life (kwŏl'ĭ-tē ũv lĭf) n. The degree of emotional, intellectual, or cultural satisfaction in a person's everyday life as distinct from the degree of material comfort: “programs that... make a big difference in the quality of life here in the city” (Henry Geldzahler).

qualm (kwām, kwôm) n. 1. A sudden feeling of sickness, faintness, or nausea. 2. A sudden disturbing feeling: qualms of homesickness. 3. An uneasy feeling about the propriety or rightness of a course of action. [Origin unknown.] — qualm'ish adj. — qualm'ish-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: qualm, scruple, compunction, misgiving. These nouns denote a feeling of uncertainty about the fitness or correctness of an action. Qualm is a disturbing, often queasy feeling of uneasiness and self-doubt: “an ignorant ruffianly gauchó, who... would... fight, steal, and do other naughty things without a qualm” (W.H. Hudson). Scruple is an uneasy feeling arising from conscience or principle about the decency, propriety, or appropriateness of a course of action: “My father’s old-fashioned notions boggled a little at first to this arrangement... but his scruples were in the end overruled” (John Galt). Compunction implies a prick or twinge of conscience aroused by wrongdoing or the prospect of wrongdoing: He stole the money without the slightest compunction. Misgiving suggests often sudden apprehension: “The British Empire and the United States will have to be somewhat mixed up together... for mutual and general advantage. For my own part... I do not view the process with any misgivings” (Winston S. Churchill).

quam·ash (kwǒm/’ásh’) n. See camas (n., sense 1). [New Latin, species name, variant of Chinook Jargon kamass. See CAMAS.]

quan·da·ry (kwǒn/’dā-rē, -drē) n. pl. quan·da·ries. A state of uncertainty or perplexity. See Synonyms at predicament. [Origin unknown.]

Quan·da·ry Peak (kwǎn/’dā-rē pēk, -drē) A mountain, 4,350.8 m (14,265 ft) high, in the Park Range of the Rocky Mountains in central Colorado.

quan·dong also quan·dang (kwǒn/’dǒng’) n. 1. An Australian root-parasitic tree or shrub (Santalum acuminatum) bearing shiny red drupes with edible flesh used for jam or as a dessert. 2. An Australian tree (Elaeocarpus angustifolius) having dark glossy green leaves, greenish-white flowers, and globular, shiny, bright blue drupes. [Wiradhuri (Aboriginal language of southeast Australia) guwandhan.]

quan·go (kwǎng/’gō) n. pl. quan·gos. An organization or agency that is financed by a government but that acts independently of it. [qua(si) n(on-)g(overnmental) o(rganization).]

quant (kwǒnt) n. Slang. An expert in the use of mathematics and related subjects, particularly in investment management and stock trading. [Probably short for QUANTITATIVE.]

quant. abbr. Quantitative.

quan·ta (kwǒn/’tə) n. Plural of quantum.

quan·tal (kwǒn/’tl) adj. 1. Physics. a. Of or relating to a quantum or a quantized system. b. Existing in only one of two possible states. 2. Biology. Of or designating an all-or-none response or effect: a quantal reaction. —quan·tal·ly adv.

quan·ta·some (kwǒn/’tə-sōm’) n. One of numerous particles located on the inner lamellar surface of a chloroplast and sometimes considered to be the functional unit of photosynthesis. [QUANTA + -SOME³.]

quan·tic (kwǒn/’tik) n. Mathematics. A homogeneous polynomial having two or more variables. [Latin quantus, how much; see QUANTITY + -IC.]

Quan·ti·co (kwän'ti-kō') A town of northwest Virginia on the Potomac River south-southwest of Alexandria. A U.S. Marine Corps base was established here in 1918. Population, 621.

quan·ti·fy (kwön'tə-fī') v. tr. quan·ti·fied, quan·ti·fy·ing, quan·ti·fies.

1. To determine or express the quantity of. 2. Logic. To limit the variables of (a proposition) by prefixing an operator such as all or some. [Medieval Latin quantificāre: Latin quantus, how great; see QUANTITY + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] —quan'ti-fi'a·ble adj. —quan'ti-fi-ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n. —quan'ti-fi'er n.

quan·ti·tate (kwön'ti-tāt') v. tr. quan·ti·tat·ed, quan·ti·tat·ing, quan·ti·tates. To determine or measure the quantity of. [Back-formation from QUANTITATIVE (ANALYSIS).] —quan'ti-ta'tion n.

quan·ti·ta·tive (kwön'ti-tā'tiv) adj. Abbr. quant. 1. a. Expressed or expressible as a quantity. b. Of, relating to, or susceptible of measurement. c. Of or relating to number or quantity. 2. Of or relating to a metrical system based on the duration of syllables rather than on stress. Used especially of classical Greek and Latin verse. [Medieval Latin quantitātīvus, from Latin quantitās, quantitāt-, quantity, from quantus, how great. See QUANTITY.] —quan'ti-ta'tive·ly adv.

—quan'ti-ta'tive·ness n.

quantitative analysis (kwön'ti-tā'tiv ə-nāl'ī-sis) n. The testing of a substance or mixture to determine the amounts and proportions of its chemical constituents.

quantitative gene (kwön'ti-tā'tiv jēn) n. Genetics. See polygene.

quan·ti·ty (kwön'ti-tē) n. pl. quan·ti·ties. Abbr. qt., qty. 1. a. A specified or indefinite number or amount. b. A considerable amount or number: sells drugs wholesale and in quantity. c. An exact amount or number. 2. The measurable, countable, or comparable property or aspect of a thing. 3. Mathematics. Something that serves as the object of an operation. 4. a. Linguistics. The relative amount of time needed to pronounce a vowel, consonant, or syllable. b. The duration of a syllable in quantitative verse. 5. Logic. The exact character of a proposition in reference to its universality, singularity, or particularity. [Middle English quantite, from Old French, from Latin quantitās, quantitāt-, from quantus, how great. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

quan·tize (kwön'tiz') v. tr. quan·tized, quan·tiz·ing, quan·tiz·es. Physics.

1. To limit the possible values of (a magnitude or quantity) to a discrete set of values by quantum mechanical rules. 2. To apply quantum mechanics or the quantum theory to. —quan'ti-za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.

Quan·trill (kwön'trīl'), William Clarke. 1837-1865. American desperado who led a guerrilla band that sporadically supported the Confederacy during the Civil War. He is infamous for his wanton killing of war prisoners and civilians.

quan-tum (kwŏn'təm) n. pl. quan-ta (-tə). 1. A quantity or an amount. 2. A specified portion. 3. Something that can be counted or measured. 4. Physics.
a. The smallest amount of a physical quantity that can exist independently, especially a discrete quantity of electromagnetic radiation. b. This amount of energy regarded as a unit. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: quantum advances in technology. [Latin, from neuter of quantus, how great. See QUANTITY.]

quantum chromodynamics (kwŏn'təm krŏ'mō-dī-năm'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Chromodynamics.

quantum electrodynamics (kwŏn'təm ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-dī-năm'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Physics. The quantum theory of the properties and behavior of electrons and the electromagnetic field.

quantum jump (kwŏn'təm jŭmp) n. 1. Physics. Abrupt change from one energy level to another, especially such a change in the orbit of an electron with the loss or gain of a quantum of energy. 2. A quantum leap.

quantum leap (kwŏn'təm lĕp) n. An abrupt change or step, especially in method, information, or knowledge: “War was going to take a quantum leap; it would never be the same” (Garry Wills).

quantum mechanics (kwŏn'təm mĭ-kăn'iks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Physics. Quantum theory, especially the quantum theory of the structure and behavior of atoms and molecules.

quantum number (kwŏn'təm nŭm'bər) n. Physics. Any of a set of real numbers assigned to a physical system that individually characterize the properties and collectively specify the state of a particle or of the system.

quantum state (kwŏn'təm stāt) n. Physics. Any of the possible states of a system described by quantum theory.

quantum theory (kwŏn'təm thĕ'ə-rĕ) n. Physics. The theory that radiant energy is transmitted in the form of discrete units.

Qua-paw (kwŏ'pŏ) n. pl. Quapaw or Qua-paws. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting parts of Arkansas along the Arkansas River, with a present-day population in Oklahoma. b. A member of this people. 2. The Siouan language of the Quapaw.

Qu'Ap-pelle (kwə-pĕl') A river, about 434 km (270 mi) long, of southern Saskatchewan and southwest Manitoba, Canada, flowing east to the Assiniboine River.

quar. abbr. 1. Quarter. 2. Quarterly.

quar-an-tine (kwŏr'ən-tĕn', kwŏr'-) n. 1. a. A period of time during which a vehicle, person, or material suspected of carrying a contagious disease is detained at a port of entry under enforced isolation to prevent disease from entering a country. b. A place for such detention. 2. Enforced isolation or restriction of free movement imposed to prevent the spread of contagious disease. 3. A condition of enforced isolation. 4. A period of 40 days. — v. tr. quar-an-tined, quar-an-tin-ing, quar-an-tines. 1. To isolate in or as if in quarantine. 2. To isolate politically or economically. [Italian quarantina, from quaranta (giorni), forty (days), from Latin quadrāgintā. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

—quar'an-tin'a-ble adj.

quark¹ (kwôrk, kwärk) n. Any of a group of hypothetical elementary particles having electric charges of magnitude one-third or two-thirds that of the electron, regarded as constituents of all hadrons. [Possibly from Three quarks for Muster Mark!, a line in Finnegans Wake by James Joyce.]

WORD HISTORY: “Three quarks for Muster Mark!/Sure he hasn’t got much of a bark/And sure any he has it’s all beside the mark.” This passage of James Joyce’s Finnegans Wake is part of a scurrilous 13-line poem directed against King Mark, the cuckolded husband in the Tristan legend. The poem and the accompanying prose are packed with names of birds and words suggestive of birds, and the poem is a squawk, like the cawing of a crow, against King Mark. Thus, Joyce uses the word quark, which comes from the standard English verb quark, meaning “to caw, croak,” and also from the dialectal verb quawk, meaning “to caw, screech like a bird.” But Joyce’s quark was not what it has become: “any of a group of hypothetical subatomic particles proposed as the fundamental units of matter.” Murray Gell-Mann, the physicist who proposed these particles, in a private letter of June 27, 1978, to the editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, said that he had actually been influenced by Joyce’s word in naming the particle, although the influence was subconscious at first. Gell-Mann was thinking of using the pronunciation (kwôrk) for the particle, possibly something he had picked up from Finnegans Wake, which he “had perused from time to time since it appeared in 1939.... The allusion to three quarks seemed perfect” (originally there were only three subatomic quarks). Gell-Mann, however, wanted to pronounce the word with (ô) not (ä), as Joyce seemed to indicate by rhyming words in the vicinity such as Mark. Gell-Mann got around that “by supposing that one ingredient of the line ‘Three quarks for Muster Mark’ was a cry of ‘Three quarts for Mister...’ heard in H.C. Earwicker’s pub.”

quark² (kwôrk, kwärk) n. A soft, creamy acid-cured cheese of central Europe made from whole milk. [German, from Middle High German quarc, of Slavic origin.]

Quarles (kwärlz, kwôrlz), Francis. 1592-1644. English Metaphysical poet whose book Emblems, Divine and Moral (1635) was influential in its time.

quar-rel¹ (kwôr'əl, kwör'-) n. 1. An angry dispute; an altercation. 2. A cause of a dispute or an argument: We have no quarrel with the findings of the committee. — v. intr. quar-reled or quar-relled, quar-rel-ing or quar-rel-ling, quar·rels or quar·rels. 1. To engage in a quarrel; dispute angrily. See Synonyms at argue. 2. To disagree; differ: I quarrel with your conclusions. 3. To find fault; complain. [Middle English querele, from Old French, complaint, from Latin querella, querēla, from querī, to complain. See kwes- in Appendix.]

—quar'·rel·er, quar'·rel·er n.

quar·rel² (kwôr'əl, kwôr'(-)) n. 1. A bolt for a crossbow. 2. A tool, such as a stonemason's chisel, that has a squared head. 3. A small diamond-shaped or square pane of glass in a latticed window. [Middle English quarel, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin quadrellus*, diminutive of Late Latin quadrus, square, from Latin quadrum. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quar·rel·some (kwôr'əl-səm, kwôr'(-)) adj. 1. Given to quarreling; contentious. See Synonyms at argumentative. 2. Marked by quarreling. See Synonyms at belligerent.

quar·ry¹ (kwôr'ē, kwôr'ē) n. pl. quar·ries. 1. a. A hunted animal; prey. b. Hunted animals considered as a group; game. 2. An object of pursuit: The police lost their quarry in the crowd. [Middle English querre, entrails of a deer given to hounds as a reward, from Old French cuiriee, alteration (influenced by cuir, skin), of coree, from Vulgar Latin corāta*, viscera, from Latin cor, heart. See kerd- in Appendix.]

quar·ry² (kwôr'ē, kwôr'ē) n. pl. quar·ries. 1. An open excavation or pit from which stone is obtained by digging, cutting, or blasting. 2. A rich or productive source: found the book an indispensable quarry of information. — v. tr.

quar·ried, quar·ry·ing, quar·ries. 1. To obtain (stone) from a quarry, as by cutting, digging, or blasting. 2. To extract (facts, for example) by long, careful searching: finally quarried out the genealogy from hundreds of sources. 3. To use (land) as a quarry. [Middle English quarey, from Medieval Latin quarateria, quarēia, alteration of Old French quarriere, from quarre*, cut stone, from Latin quadrum, square. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.] —quar'·ri·er n.

quar·ry³ (kwôr'ē, kwôr'ē) n. pl. quar·ries. 1. A square or diamond shape. 2. A pane of glass having this shape. [Variant of QUARREL².] quart (kwôrt) n. Abbr. q., qt, qt. 1. a. A unit of volume or capacity in the U.S. Customary System, used in liquid measure, equal to 4 gallon or 32 ounces (0.946 liter). b. A unit of volume or capacity in the U.S. Customary System, used in dry measure, equal to 8 peck or 2 pints (1.101 liters). c. A unit of volume or capacity in the British Imperial System, used in liquid and dry measure, equal to 1.201 U.S. liquid quarts or 1.032 U.S. dry quarts (1.136 liters). See Table at measurement. 2. a. A container having a capacity of one quart. b. The contents of such a container. [Middle English, from Old French quarte, from Latin quārta, feminine of quārtus, fourth. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quar·tan (kwôrt'n) adj. Occurring every fourth day, counting inclusively, or every 72 hours. Used of a fever. — n. A malarial fever recurring every 72 hours.

[Middle English quartaine, from Old French, from Latin quārtāna, from quārtānus, of the fourth, from quārtus, fourth. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quar-ter (kwôr'tər) n. Abbr. q., qr., quar. 1. One of four equal parts. 2. A coin equal to one fourth of the dollar of the United States and Canada. 3. One fourth of an hour; 15 minutes. 4. a. One fourth of a year; three months: Sales were up in the second quarter. b. An academic term lasting approximately three months. 5. Astronomy. a. One fourth of the period of the moon's revolution around Earth. b. One of the four phases of the moon: the first quarter; the third quarter. 6. Sports. One of four equal periods of playing time into which some games, such as football and basketball, are divided. 7. One fourth of a yard; nine inches. 8. One fourth of a mile; two furlongs. 9. One fourth of a pound; four ounces. 10. One fourth of a ton; 500 pounds. Used as a measure of grain. 11. Chiefly British. A measure of grain equal to approximately eight bushels. 12. a. One fourth of a hundredweight; 25 pounds. b. One fourth of a British hundredweight; 28 pounds. 13. a. One of the four major divisions of the compass. b. One fourth of the distance between any two of the 32 divisions of the compass. c. One of the four major divisions of the horizon as determined by the four major points of the compass. d. A region or an area of the earth thought of as falling into such a specific division of the compass. e. Nautical. The general direction on either side of a ship located 45° off the stern. 14. Nautical. a. The upper portion of the after side of a ship, usually between the aftermost mast and the stern. b. The part of a yard between the slings and the yardarm. 15. Heraldry. Any of four equal divisions of a shield. 16. One leg of an animal's carcass, usually including the adjoining parts. 17. Either side of a horse's hoof. 18. The part of the side of a shoe between the heel and the vamp. 19. quarters. A place of residence, especially the buildings or barracks used to house military personnel or their dependents. 20. Often quarters. A proper or assigned station or place, as for officers and crew on a warship. 21. Often Quarter. A specific district or section, as of a city: the French Quarter. 22. Often quarters. An unspecified person or group: information from the highest quarters. 23. Mercy or clemency, especially when displayed or given to an enemy. — adj. 1. Being one of four equal or equivalent parts. 2. Being one fourth of a standard or usual value. — v. quar-tered, quar-ter-ing, quar-ters. — v. tr. 1. a. To divide into four equal or equivalent parts. b. To quartersaw. 2. To divide or separate into a number of parts. 3. To dismember (a human body) into four parts. 4. Heraldry. To divide (a shield) into four equal areas with vertical and horizontal lines. 5. a. To mark or place (holes, for example) a fourth of a circle apart. b. To locate and adjust (one machine part) at right angles to its connecting part within the machine. 6. To furnish with housing: quartered the troops in an old factory building. 7. To traverse (an area of ground) laterally back and forth while slowly advancing forward. — v. intr. 1. To take up or be assigned lodgings. 2. To cover an area of ground by ranging over it from side to side. [Middle English, from Old French quartier, from Latin quārtārius, from quārtus, fourth. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: When referring to the time of day, the article a is optional in phrases such as (a) quarter to (or of, before, or till) nine; (a) quarter after (or past) ten.

quar·ter·age (kwôr'tər-īj) n. A monetary allowance, wage, or payment made or received quarterly.

quar·ter·back (kwôr'tər-băk') n. Abbr. qb Football. The backfield player whose position is behind the line of scrimmage and who usually calls the signals for the plays. — v. quar·ter·backed, quar·ter·back·ing, quar·ter·backs. — v. tr. 1. Football. To direct the offense of. 2. Slang. To lead or direct the operations of: “needed someone to quarterback the [brain trust] for the first U.S. ICBM program” (Forbes). — v. intr. Football. To play quarterback.

quarter day (kwôr'tər dā) n. Any of the four days of the year regarded as the beginning of a new season or quarter, when most quarterly payments are due.

quar·ter·deck (kwôr'tər-dĕk') n. Nautical. The after part of the upper deck of a ship, usually reserved for officers.

quar·ter·fi·nal (kwôr'tər-fī'nəl) adj. Sports & Games. Of or relating to one of four competitions in a tournament, whose winners go on to play in semifinal competitions. — n. 1. quarterfinals. A quarterfinal round. 2. A quarterfinal match. — quar'ter·fi·nal·ist n.

quarter horse (kwôr'tər hōrs) n. One of a breed of strong saddle horses developed in the western United States. [From its formerly being trained for races up to a quarter mile.]

quar·ter·hour also quar·ter hour (kwôr'tər-our') n. 1. Fifteen minutes. 2. The point on a clock's face marking either 15 minutes after or 15 minutes before an hour.

quar·ter·ly (kwôr'tər-lē) adj. Abbr. q., qr., quar. 1. Made up of four parts. 2. Being one of four parts. 3. Occurring or appearing at three-month intervals: a quarterly magazine; a quarterly payment. 4. Heraldry. Having four sections. Used of a shield. — n. pl. quar·ter·lies. Abbr. q., qr., quar. 1. A publication issued regularly every three months. 2. An examination given regularly every three months in some colleges. — adv. In or by quarters.

quar·ter·mas·ter (kwôr'tər-măs'tər) n. Abbr. QM 1. An officer responsible for the food, clothing, and equipment of troops. 2. A petty officer responsible for the navigation of a ship.

quar·tern (kwôr'tərn) n. 1. One fourth of something, especially of some weights and measures. 2. Chiefly British. A loaf of bread weighing about 4 pounds (1.81 kilograms). [Middle English quartron, from Old French quarteron, from quartier, quarter. See QUARTER.]

quarter note (kwôr'tər nōt) n. Music. A note having one-fourth the time value of a whole note. Also called crotchet quar-ter-phase (kwôr'tər-fāz') adj. Electricity. Two-phase.

quar-ter-saw (kwôr'tər-sô') v. tr. quar-ter-sawed, quar-ter-sawed or quar-ter-sawn (-sôn'), quar-ter-saw-ing, quar-ter-saws. To saw (a log) into quarters lengthwise along its axis.

quarter section (kwôr'tər sĕk'shən) n. A land unit equal to a quarter of a section and measuring 2 of a mile on a side.

quarter sessions (kwôr'tər sĕsh'ənz) pl.n. Law. 1. A British local court of limited jurisdiction that sits quarterly. 2. A local court in the United States with criminal jurisdiction and sometimes administrative functions.

quar-ter-staff (kwôr'tər-stăf') n. pl. quar-ter-staves (-stāvz'). A long wooden staff formerly used as a weapon.

quar-ter-tone (kwôr'tər-tōn') n. Music. Half a semitone.

quar-tet also quar-tette (kwôr-tĕt') n. 1. Music. a. A composition for four voices or instruments. b. A group of four performing musicians. 2. A set of four persons or things. [French quartette, from Italian quartetto, diminutive of quarto, fourth, from Latin quārtus. See QUART.]

quar-tic (kwôr'tĭk) adj. Mathematics. Of or relating to the fourth degree. [Latin quārtus, fourth; see QUART + -IC.] —quar'tic n.

quar-tile (kwôr'tĭl', -tĭl) n. Statistics. The value of the boundary at the 25th, 50th, or 75th percentiles of a frequency distribution divided into four parts, each containing a quarter of the population. [Middle English, ninety degrees apart (of the relative position of two celestial bodies), from Old French quartil, from Medieval Latin quārtĭlis, of a quartile, from Latin quārtus, fourth. See QUART.]

quar-to (kwôr'tō) n. pl. quar-tos. Abbr. q., Q., qto. 1. The page size obtained by folding a whole sheet into four leaves. 2. A book composed of pages of this size. [Short for Middle English (in) quarto, (in) the fourth part (of a sheet), from Medieval Latin (in) quārtō, from Latin, ablative of quārtus, fourth. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quartz (kwôrts) n. A very hard mineral composed of silica, SiO₂, found worldwide in many different types of rocks, including sandstone and granite. Varieties of quartz include agate, chalcedony, chert, flint, opal, and rock crystal. [German Quarz, from Middle High German quarc, of Slavic origin.] —quartz'ose' (kwôrt'sôs') adj.

quartz crystal (kwôrts krĭs'təl) n. A small crystal of quartz accurately cut along certain axes so that it can be vibrated at a particular frequency, used for its piezoelectric properties to produce an electric signal of constant known frequency.

quartz glass (kwôrts gläs) n. A clear vitreous solid, formed by melting pure quartz, that can withstand high temperatures and is extremely transparent to infrared, visible, and ultraviolet radiations. Also called fused quartz, fused silica.

quartz-if-er-ous (kwôrt-sîf'ər-əs) adj. Containing quartz.

quartz-ite (kwôrt'sît') n. A rock formed from the metamorphism of quartz sandstone.

quartz lamp (kwôrts lämp) n. A mercury-vapor lamp enclosed by an envelope made from quartz rather than glass.

qua-sar (kwā'zär', -sär', -zər, -sər) n. A starlike object that has a large red shift and emits powerful blue light and often radio waves. [QUAS(I) + (ST)AR.]

quash¹ (kwösh) v. tr. quashed, quash-ing, quash-es. To set aside or annul, especially by judicial action. [Middle English quassen, from Old French casser, quasser, from Medieval Latin quassāre, alteration (influenced by quassāre, to shatter); see QUASH², of cassāre, from Latin cassus, empty, void. See kes- in Appendix.]

quash² (kwösh) v. tr. quashed, quash-ing, quash-es. To put down or suppress forcibly and completely: quash a rebellion. [Middle English quashen, from Old French quasser, from Medieval Latin quassāre, to shatter, from Latin. See SQUASH².]

qua-si (kwā'zī', -sī', kwä'zē, -sē) adj. Having a likeness to something; resembling: a quasi success. [Middle English, as if, from Old French, from Latin quasi: quam, as; see k^wo- in Appendix + sī, if; see swo- in Appendix.]

quasi- pref. To some degree; in some manner: quasi-stellar object. [Latin quasi, as if. See QUASI.]

Qua-si-mo-do (kwä'zē-mō'dō), Salvatore. 1901-1968. Italian poet whose early nostalgic works contrast with his later socially concerned poetry. He won the 1950 Nobel Prize for literature.

qua-si-stel-lar object (kwā'zī-stēl'ər ɔb'jĕkt, -sī'-, kwä'zē-, -sē-) n. A quasar.

quas-sia (kwösh'ə) n. 1. a. A tropical American shrub or small tree (Quassia amara) having bright scarlet flowers and yielding a valuable, lustrous, fine-grained, yellowish-white wood. b. The wood of this plant. 2. A bitter substance obtained from the wood of this plant, used in medicine and as an insecticide.

[New Latin, after Graman Quassi, an 18th-century Surinamese.]

qua-ter-cen-ten-a-ry (kwöt'ər-sĕn-tĕn'ə-rĕ, -sĕn'tə-nĕr'ĕ) n. pl.

qua-ter-cen-ten-a-ries. A quadricentennial. [Latin quater, four times; see QUATERNARY + CENTENARY.]

qua-ter-nar-y (kwöt'ər-nĕr'ĕ, kwə-tŭr'nə-rĕ) adj. 1. Consisting of four; in fours. 2. Quaternary. Geology. Of, belonging to, or designating the geologic time, system of rocks, and sedimentary deposits of the second period of the Cenozoic Era, from the end of the Tertiary Period through the present, characterized by the appearance and development of human beings and including the Pleistocene Epoch and the Holocene Epoch. 3. Chemistry. Relating to an atom bonded to four carbon atoms: a quarternary nitrogen atom. — n. pl.

qua-ter-nar-ies. 1. The number four. 2. The member of a group that is fourth in order. 3. Quaternary. Geology. The second period of the Cenozoic Era and its system of deposits. [Latin quaternārius, from quaternī, by fours, from quater, four times. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quaternary ammonium compound (kwöt'ər-nēr'ē ə-mō'nē-əm kōm-pōund') n. Any of a group of compounds in which a central nitrogen atom is joined to four organic radicals and one acid radical, used as antiseptics, solvents, and emulsifying agents.

qua-ter-ni-on (kwə-tûr'nē-ən) n. 1. A set of four persons or items.

2. Mathematics. An expression that is the sum of a real number and a vector and that contains four terms, one real and three imaginary. [Middle English quaternioun, from Late Latin quaterniō, quaterniōn-, from Latin quaternī, by fours, from quater, four times. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quat-rain (kwöt'rān', kwō-trān') n. A stanza or poem of four lines. [French, from Old French, from quatre, four, from Latin quattuor. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quat-re-foil (kät'ər-foil', kät'rə-) n. 1. A representation of a flower with four petals or a leaf with four leaflets, especially in heraldry. 2. Architecture. Tracery or an ornament with four foils or lobes. [Middle English quaterfoile : Old French quatre, four; see QUATRRAIN + Old French foil, leaf; see FOIL².]

quat-tro-cen-to (kwöt'rō-chĕn'tō) n. The 15th-century period of Italian art and literature. [Italian, short for (mil) quattrocento, one thousand four hundred : quattro, four (from Latin quattuor); see k^wetwer- in Appendix + cento, hundred (from Latin centum); see dekṃ in Appendix.]

qua-ver (kwā'vər) v. qua-vered, qua-ver-ing, qua-vers. — v. intr. 1. To quiver, as from weakness; tremble. 2. To speak in a quivering voice; utter a quivering sound. 3. Music. To produce a trill on an instrument or with the voice. — v. tr. To utter or sing in a trilling voice. — n. 1. A quivering sound. 2. A trill. 3. Chiefly British. An eighth note. [Middle English quaveren, probably frequentative of cwavien, quaven, to tremble.] — qua'ver-ing-ly adv. — qua'ver-y adj.

quay (kē, kā) n. A wharf or reinforced bank where ships are loaded or unloaded. [Middle English keye, from Old North French cai, of Celtic origin.]

Quay (kwā), Matthew Stanley. 1833-1904. American politician. A U.S. senator from Pennsylvania (1887-1899 and 1901-1904), he wielded great political power on the state and national levels.

quay-age (kē'ij) n. 1. A charge for the use of a quay. 2. A system or group of quays. 3. The space available on a system of quays.

Quayle (kwāl), James Danforth. Born 1947. Vice President of the United States (since 1989) under George Bush.

quay-side (kē'sīd') n. The area adjacent to a quay or wharf or a system of quays, especially in a port city.

Que. abbr. Quebec.

quean (kwēn) n. 1. A woman regarded as being disreputable, especially a prostitute. 2. Scots. A young woman. [Middle English quene, from Old English cwene, woman. See g^wen- in Appendix.]

quea-sy also quea-zy (kwē'zē) adj. quea-si-er also quea-zi-er, quea-si-est also quea-zi-est. 1. Experiencing nausea; nauseated. 2. Easily nauseated.

3. Causing nausea; sickening: the queasy lurch of an airplane during a storm.

4. a. Causing uneasiness. b. Uneasy; troubled. 5. a. Easily troubled. b. Ill at ease; squeamish: "He is not queasy about depicting mass violence, in some circumstances, as a legitimate instrument of social transformation" (Shaul Bakhash).

[Middle English coisy, perhaps of Scandinavian origin.] —quea'si-ly adv.

—quea'si-ness n.

Que-bec (kwī-běk') or Qué-bec (kā-) 1. Abbr. PQ, P.Q., Que. A province of eastern Canada. It joined the confederacy in 1867. The region was first explored and claimed for France by Jacques Cartier (1534) and Samuel de Champlain (1608) and was made a royal colony, known as New France, by Louis XIV in 1663. Conflict between the French and British for control of the territory ended in 1763 when Great Britain was given sovereignty, but the French influence has remained dominant. Quebec is the capital and Montreal the largest city. Population, 6,438,403. 2. Also Quebec City or Québec City. The capital of Quebec, Canada, in the southern part of the province on the St. Lawrence River. Champlain established a colony in its Lower Town in 1608. British forces under General Wolfe defeated the French forces led by General Montcalm at the Plains of Abraham here in 1759. The city is today a popular tourist center. Population, 166,474.

—Que-beck'er, Que-bec'er n.

Qué-be-cois or Que-be-cois (kā'bě-kwä') adj. Of or relating to Quebec and especially to its French-speaking inhabitants or their culture. — n. pl. Québe-cois or Quebecois. A native or inhabitant of Quebec, especially a French-speaking one. [French québécois, from Québec, Quebec.]

que-bra-cho (kā-brä'chō) n. pl. que-bra-chos. 1. Either of two South American trees, Aspidosperma quebracho-blanco whose bark is used in medicine, or Schinopsis lorentzii whose wood is one of the richest sources of tannin. 2. The bark or wood of either of these trees. [Spanish, alteration of quiebrahacha: quebrar, to break (from Latin crepāre, to crack) + hacha, ax (from French hache, from Old French, of Germanic origin).]

Que-chan (kěch'ən) n. See Yuma¹. [Yuma k^wacàn, those who descended (from the sacred mountain of creation).]

Quech-ua also Kech-ua (kěch'wə, -wä') n. pl. Quechua or Quech-uas also Kechua or Kech-uas. 1. The Quechuan language of the Inca empire, now widely spoken throughout the Andes highlands from southern Colombia to Chile. 2. a. A member of a South American Indian people originally constituting the ruling class of the Inca empire. b. A speaker of the Quechua language.

[Spanish, from Quechua kkechuwa, plunderer.]

Quech·uan (kěch'wən) n. A subgroup of the Quechumaran languages, the most important language being Quechua. — adj. Of or relating to the Quechua or their language or culture.

Quech·u·mar·an (kěch'ōō-mä-rän') n. A group of languages found mostly in the Andes highlands from southern Colombia to northern Chile and Argentina, composed of the Quechuan and Aymaran languages.

queen (kwēn) n. 1. Abbr. qu. a. The wife or widow of a king. b. A woman sovereign. 2. Something having eminence or supremacy in a given domain and personified as a woman: Paris is regarded as the queen of cities. 3. Games. a. Abbr. Q The most powerful chess piece, able to move in any direction in a straight line. b. Abbr. qu. A playing card bearing the figure of a queen, ranking above the jack and below the king. 4. Abbr. qu. The fertile, fully developed female in a colony of social bees, ants, or termites. 5. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a gay or homosexual man. — v. queened, queen·ing, queens. — v. tr. 1. To make (a woman) a queen. 2. Games. To raise (a pawn) to queen in chess. — v. intr. Games. To become a queen in chess. — idiom. queen it. To act like a queen; domineer: queens it over the whole family. [Middle English quene, from Old English cwēn. See g^wen- in Appendix.]

Queen Anne (kwēn äñ') n. The style in English architecture and furniture typical of the reign of Queen Anne (1702-1714).

Queen Anne's lace (kwēn änz lās) n. A widely naturalized Eurasian herb (Daucus carota var. carota) having white, nonfleshy, fusiform compound umbels of small white or yellowish flowers. Also called wild carrot queen consort (kwēn kōn'sōrt') n. pl. queens consort. The wife of a reigning king.

Queen Char·lotte Islands (kwēn shär'lət i'ländz) An archipelago off the western coast of British Columbia, Canada, separated from Vancouver Island to the southeast by Queen Charlotte Sound, an inlet of the Pacific Ocean.

queen cup (kwēn kŭp) n. A perennial stemless plant (Clintonia uniflora) of Pacific North America, having a solitary white flower and a blue berry.

Queen E·liz·a·beth Islands (kwēn ĭ-līz'ə-bəth i'ländz) A group of islands of northern Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Archipelago north of Parry Channel. Oil deposits were first exploited here in the 1960's.

queen·ly (kwēn'lē) adj. queen·li·er, queen·li·est. 1. Having the status or rank of queen. 2. Of, resembling, or befitting a queen; majestic and regal. — adv. In a royal way; regally. — queen/li·ness n.

Queen Maud Land (kwēn môd länd) A region of Antarctica between the Weddell Sea and Enderby Land. It was claimed by Norway in 1939.

Queen Maud Mountains (kwēn môd moun'tənz) A mountain range of Antarctica near the South Pole. It extends some 805 km (500 mi).

queen mother (kwēn mūth'ər) n. A dowager queen who is the mother of a reigning monarch.

queen-of-the-prairie (kwēn'əv-thə-prâr'ē) n. A rhizomatous plant (Filipendula rubra) of the prairies and meadows of the eastern and central United States, having aromatic, pinnately compound leaves and showy panicles of small pink flowers.

queen olive (kwēn ۆl'iv) n. A large, edible variety of olive not used as a source of oil.

queen post (kwēn pۆst) n. One of two upright supporting posts set vertically between the rafters and the tie beam at equal distances from the apex of a roof.

queen regnant (kwēn rēg'nənt) n. pl. queens regnant. A queen reigning in her own right.

Queens (kwēnz) A borough of New York City in southeast New York on western Long Island. It was first settled by the Dutch in 1635 and became part of Greater New York in 1898. Population, 1,951,598.

Queen's Bench (kwēnz bēnch) n. Abbr. Q.B. Law. A division of the British superior courts system that hears criminal and civil cases. Used when the sovereign is a woman.

Queens-ber-ry (kwēnz'bēr'ē, -bə-rē), Eighth Marquis of Title of Sir John Sholto Douglas. 1844-1900. British aristocrat and boxing promoter who formulated the Marquis of Queensbury rules (1867) to govern boxing.

Queensberry rules (kwēnz'bēr'ē rۆölz) pl.n. Sports. Marquis of Queensberry rules.

Queen's Counsel (kwēnz koun'səl) n. Abbr. Q.C. Law. A barrister appointed as counsel to the British crown. Used when the sovereign is a woman.

Queen's English (kwēnz ینگ'glışh) n. English speech or usage that is considered standard or accepted; Received Standard English.

queen-ship (kwēn'shīp') n. 1. The rank or state of being a queen. 2. A noble or regal quality, as of a queen.

queen-side (kwēn'sīd') n. Games. The side of the chessboard that is nearest to the queen's opening position. —queen'side' adv. & adj.

queen-size (kwēn'sīz') also queen-sized (-sīzd') adj. 1. Extra large in size: queen-size pantyhose. 2. a. Measuring about 60 inches by 80 inches (1.5 meters by 2.0 meters). Used of a bed. b. Being of a size that will fit such a bed: queen-size fitted sheets.

Queens-land arrowroot (kwēnz'länd' ār'ō-rۆöt', -lənd) n. See edible canna (adj., sense 2). [After Queensland, a state of northeast Australia.]

queen substance (kwēn sŭb'stəns) n. A pheromone secreted by queen bees and given to worker bees to prevent them from producing more queens.

queen truss (kwēn trŭs) n. A building truss using queen posts.

queer (kwîr) adj. queer-er, queer-est. 1. Deviating from the expected or normal; strange: a queer situation. 2. Odd or unconventional, as in behavior; eccentric. See Synonyms at strange. 3. Of a questionable nature or character; suspicious. 4. Slang. Fake; counterfeit. 5. Feeling slightly ill; queasy.

6. Offensive Slang. Gay; homosexual. — n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a gay or homosexual person. — v. tr. queered, queer-ing, queers. Slang. 1. To ruin or thwart: "might try to queer the Games with anything from troop movements... to a bomb attack" (Newsweek). 2. To put (someone) in a bad position. [Perhaps from Low German, oblique, off-center, from Middle Low German dwer. See terk^w- in Appendix.] —queer'ish adj. —queer'ly adv.

—queer'ness n.

Queer Street (kwîr strēt) n. Chiefly British. Difficulties, especially financial ones.

que-le-a (kwē'lē-ə) n. An African weaverbird of the genus Quelea, especially Q. quelea, a small red-billed bird that is extremely destructive to grain crops. [New Latin Quelea, genus name, perhaps alteration of Medieval Latin qualea, quail, ultimately from Vulgar Latin coacula*, of imitative origin.]

quell (kwĕl) v. tr. quelled, quell-ing, quells. 1. To put down forcibly; suppress: Police quelled the riot. 2. To pacify; quiet: finally quelled the children's fears. [Middle English quellen, to kill, from Old English cwellan. See g^welə- in Appendix.]

Que-moy (kī-moi') In Pinyin Jin-men (jīn'moēn'). An island and group of 2 islands and 12 islets off southeast China in Taiwan Strait. The islands are heavily fortified and have been administered by Taiwan since the Chinese Revolution of 1949.

quench (kwĕnch) v. tr. quenched, quench-ing, quench-es. 1. To put out (a fire, for example); extinguish. 2. To suppress; squelch: The disapproval of my colleagues quenched my enthusiasm for the plan. 3. To put an end to; destroy. 4. To slake; satisfy: Mineral water quenched our thirst. 5. To cool (hot metal) by thrusting into water or other liquid. [Middle English quenchen, from Old English ācwencan.] —quench'a-ble adj. —quench'er n. —quench'less adj.

que-nelle (kə-nĕl') n. A ball or dumpling of finely chopped meat or seafood bound with eggs and poached in stock or water. [French, from German Knödel, from Middle High German, diminutive of knode, knot, knob, from Old High German knodo.]

quer-ce-tin (kwûr'sī-tīn) n. A yellow, powdered crystalline compound, C₅H₁₅O₂(OH)₅, synthesized or occurring as a glycoside in the rind and bark of numerous plants, and used medicinally to treat abnormal capillary fragility.

[Latin quercētum, oak forest (from quercus, oak); see perk^wu- in Appendix + -IN.]

quer-ci-tron (kwûr'sî-trən, -trön', kwər-sīt'rən) n. 1. The bright orange inner bark of the black oak, from which a yellow dye is obtained. 2. The dye obtained from this bark. [Blend of Latin quercus, oak; see perk^wu- in Appendix, and CITRON.]

Que-ré-ta-ro (kə-rět'ə-rō', kě-rě'tä-rō') A city of central Mexico northwest of Mexico City. An ancient pre-Aztec settlement, it was conquered by the Spanish in 1531. Emperor Maximilian was executed nearby in 1867. Population, 215,976.

que-rist (kwîr'ist) n. One who asks questions; an inquirer. [From obsolete quere, question. See QUERY.]

quern (kwûrn) n. A primitive hand-turned grain mill. [Middle English querne, from Old English cweorn. See g^werə-¹ in Appendix.]

quer-u-lous (kwěr'ə-ləs, kwěr'yə-) adj. 1. Given to complaining; peevish. 2. Expressing a complaint or grievance; grumbling: a querulous voice; querulous comments. [Middle English querulose, litigious, quarrelsome, from Old French querelos, from Late Latin querulōsus, querulous, from Latin querulus, from queri, to complain. See kwes- in Appendix.] —quer'u-lous-ly adv.

—quer'u-lous-ness n.

que-ry (kwîr'ē) n. pl. que-ries. 1. A question; an inquiry. 2. A doubt in the mind; a mental reservation. 3. Abbr. q., qu. A notation, usually a question mark, calling attention to an item in order to question its validity or accuracy. — v. tr. que-ried, que-ry-ing, que-ries. 1. To express doubt or uncertainty about; question: query someone's motives. 2. To put a question to (a person). See Synonyms at ask. 3. To mark (an item) with a notation in order to question its validity or accuracy. [Alteration of obsolete quaere, quere, from Latin, imperative of quaerere, to ask, to seek.] —que'ri-er n.

ques. abbr. Question.

Ques-nay (kā-nā', kě-), François. 1694-1774. French physician and pioneer political economist who emphasized the primary economic importance of land and agriculture.

quest (kwěst) n. 1. The act or an instance of seeking or pursuing something; a search. 2. An expedition undertaken in medieval romance by a knight in order to perform a prescribed feat: the quest for the Holy Grail. 3. Archaic. A jury of inquest. — v. quest-ed, quest-ing, quests. — v. intr. 1. To go on a quest. 2. To search for game. — v. tr. To search for; seek. See Synonyms at seek. [Middle English queste, from Old French, ultimately from Latin quaesta, feminine past participle of quaerere, to seek, ask.] —quest'er n.

ques-tion (kwës'chən) n. Abbr. q., qn., qu., ques. 1. a. An expression of inquiry that invites or calls for a reply. b. An interrogative sentence, phrase, or gesture. 2. A subject or point open to controversy; an issue. 3. A difficult matter; a problem: a question of ethics. 4. A point or subject under discussion or consideration. 5. a. A proposition brought up for consideration by an assembly. b. The act of bringing a proposal to vote. 6. Uncertainty; doubt: There is no question about the validity of the enterprise. — v. ques-tioned, ques-tion-ing, ques-tions. — v. tr. 1. To put a question to. See Synonyms at ask. 2. To examine (a witness, for example) by questioning; interrogate. 3. To express doubt about; dispute. 4. To analyze; examine. — v. intr. To ask questions. —idiom. out of the question. Not worth considering; impossible: Starting over is out of the question. [Middle English, from Old French, legal inquiry, from Latin quaestiō, quaestiōn-, from quaestus*, past participle of quaerere, to ask, seek.] —ques'tion-er n. —ques'tion-ing-ly adv.

ques-tion-a-ble (kwēs'chə-nə-bəl) adj. 1. a. Open to doubt or challenge; problematic. b. Not yet determined or specified. See Synonyms at doubtful. 2. Of dubious morality or respectability: a questionable reputation. —ques'tion-a-ble-ness, ques'tion-a-bil'i-ty n. —ques'tion-a-bly adv.

question mark (kwēs'chən märke) n. A punctuation symbol (?) written at the end of a sentence or phrase to indicate a direct question. Also called interrogation point ques-tion-naire (kwēs'chə-nâr') n. A printed form containing a set of questions, especially one addressed to a statistically significant number of subjects as a way of gathering information for a survey. [French, from questionner, to ask, from Old French, from question, legal inquiry. See QUESTION.]

Quet-ta (kwët'tə) A city of west-central Pakistan west-southwest of Lahore. Ringed by mountains, it commands the entrance through the strategic Bolan Pass into Afghanistan. Population, 243,000.

quet-zal (kět-säl') *n. pl. quet-zals or quet-za-les (-sä'lās). 1. A Central American bird (Pharomachrus mocino) that has brilliant bronze-green and red plumage and, in the male, long flowing tail feathers. 2. Abbr. Q A basic unit of currency in Guatemala. See Table at currency. [American Spanish, from Nahuatl quetzalli, large brilliant tail feather.]*

Quet-zal-co-atl (kět-säl'kō-ät'l) n. Mythology. A god of the Toltecs and Aztecs, represented as a plumed serpent.

queue (kyōō) n. 1. A line of waiting people or vehicles. 2. A long braid of hair worn hanging down the back of the neck; a pigtail. 3. Computer Science. A sequence of stored data or programs awaiting processing. — v. intr. queued, queu-ing, queues. To get in line: queue up at the box office. [French, from Old French cue, tail, from Latin cauda, cōda.]

Que-zon City (kā'sôn' sīt'ē, -sōn') A city of central Luzon, Philippines, adjoining Manila. Chiefly residential with a textile industry, it was the official capital of the Philippines from 1948 to 1976. Population, 1,165,865.

Quezon y Mo-li-na (kā'sôn' ē mǝ-lē'nǝ, mǝ-lē'nǝ), Manuel Luis. 1878-1944. Philippine politician. The first president of the Philippine Commonwealth (1935-1944), he was forced to flee his country after the Japanese conquest of the Philippine Islands (1941) but continued to lead the government in exile.

quib·ble (kwīb'əl) v. intr. quib·bled, quib·bling, quib·bles. 1. To evade the truth or importance of an issue by raising trivial distinctions and objections.

2. To find fault or criticize for petty reasons; cavil. — n. 1. A petty distinction or an irrelevant objection. 2. Archaic. A pun. [Probably diminutive of obsolete quib, equivocation, perhaps from Latin quibus, dative and ablative pl. of quī, who, what (from its frequent use in legal documents). See k^wo- in Appendix.]

—quib'bler n.

SYNONYMS: quibble, carp, cavil, niggle, nitpick, pettifog. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to raise petty or frivolous objections or complaints”: quibbling about minor points of grammar; an art critic who constantly carped; caviling about the price of a cup of coffee; an editor who niggled about commas; tried to get her to stop nitpicking all the time; pettifogging about a trivial clause in a contract.

quiche (kēsh) n. A rich unsweetened custard baked in a pastry shell often with other ingredients such as vegetables or seafood. [French, from German dialectal Küche, diminutive of German Kuchen, cake. See KUCHEN.]

Qui·ché (kē-chā') n. pl. Quiché or Qui·chés. 1. A member of a Mayan people of Guatemala. 2. The Mayan language of the Quiché.

quiche Lor·raine (kēsh lǝ-rān', lô-) n. A quiche made with cheese and pieces of bacon. [French, after Lorraine.]

quick (kwĭk) adj. quick·er, quick·est. 1. Moving or functioning rapidly and energetically; speedy. 2. Learning, thinking, or understanding with speed and dexterity; bright: a quick mind. See Synonyms at nimble. 3. a. Perceiving or responding with speed and sensitivity; keen. b. Reacting immediately and sharply: a quick temper. 4. a. Occurring or achieved in a relatively brief period of time: a quick rise through the ranks. b. Done or occurring immediately: a quick inspection. See Synonyms at fast¹. 5. Tending to react hastily: quick to find fault. 6. Archaic. a. Alive. b. Pregnant. — n. 1. Sensitive or raw exposed flesh, as under the fingernails. 2. The most personal and sensitive aspect of the emotions. 3. The living: the quick and the dead. 4. The vital core; the essence: got to the quick of the matter. — adv. Quickly; promptly. [Middle English, alive, lively, quick, from Old English cwicu, alive. See g^wei- in Appendix.] —quick'ly adv. —quick'ness n.

USAGE NOTE: In speech quick is commonly used as an adverb in phrases such as Come quick. In formal writing, however, quickly is required.

quick-and-dirt-y (kwĭk'ən-dŭr'tē) adj. Cheaply made or done; of inferior quality: a quick-and-dirty construction project; a quick-and-dirty research report.

quick assets (kwĭk əs'ĕts') pl.n. Liquid assets, including cash on hand and assets readily convertible to cash.

quick bread (kwĭk brĕd) n. A bread made with a leavening agent, such as baking powder, that expands during baking and requires no leavening period beforehand.

quick-en (kwĭk'ən) v. quick-ened, quick-en-ing, quick-ens. — v. tr. 1. To make more rapid; accelerate. 2. To make alive; vitalize. 3. To excite and stimulate; stir. 4. To make steeper. — v. intr. 1. To become more rapid. See Synonyms at speed. 2. To come or return to life: "And the weak spirit quickens" (T.S. Eliot). 3. To reach the stage of pregnancy when the fetus can be felt to move. —quick'en-er n.

quick fix (kwĭk fĭks) n. Slang. A hastily contrived remedy that alleviates a problem only for the time being: "Conversion of sexist English into nonsexist English is not a quick fix—it is anything but mechanical" (Douglas R. Hofstadter).

—quick'-fix' (kwĭk'fĭks') adj.

quick-freeze (kwĭk'frĕz') v. tr. quick--froze (-frōz'), quick--froz-en (-frō'zən), quick--freez-ing, quick--freez-es. To freeze (food) by a process sufficiently rapid to retain natural flavor, nutritional value, or other properties.

quick-ie (kwĭk'ĕ) n. Informal. Something made or done rapidly.

quick-lime (kwĭk'lĭm') n. See lime³ (n., sense 1b). [Middle English qwike lime: quick, live; see QUICK + lime, lime (translation of Latin calx vīva: calx, lime + vīva, live); see LIME³.]

quick-sand (kwĭk'sænd') n. 1. A bed of loose sand mixed with water forming a soft, shifting mass that yields easily to pressure and tends to engulf any object resting on its surface. 2. Often quicksands. A place or situation into which entry can be swift and sudden but from which extrication can be difficult or impossible: "This theory of the future entrapped [them] in the quicksands of Vietnam" (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.).

quick-set (kwĭk'sĕt') n. Chiefly British. 1. Cuttings or slips of a plant suitable for hedges. 2. A hedge consisting of these plant cuttings or slips. [QUICK, alive + SET¹.]

quick-silver (kwĭk'sĭl'vər) n. See mercury (n., sense 1). — adj. Unpredictable; mercurial: "a quicksilver character, cool and willful at one moment, utterly fragile the next" (Sven Birkerts). [Middle English, from Old English cwicseolfor: cwic, cwicu, alive; see g^wei- in Appendix + seolfor, silver (translation of Latin argentum vīvum); see SILVER.]

quick-step (kwĭk'stĕp') n. Music. A march for accompanying quick time.

quick study (kwĭk stŭd'ē) n. One who is able to memorize something easily and quickly or is able to understand and deal with something easily and successfully.

quick-tem-pered (kwĭk'tēm'pərd) adj. Easily aroused to anger.

quick time (kwĭk tīm) n. A military marching pace of 120 steps per minute.

quick-wit-ted (kwĭk'wĭt'ĭd) adj. Mentally alert and sharp; keen. See Synonyms at intelligent. —quick'-wit'ted-ly adv. —quick'-wit'ted-ness n.

quid¹ (kwĭd) n. A cut, as of chewing tobacco. [Middle English quide, cud, from Old English cwidu.]

quid² (kwĭd) n. pl. quid or quids. Chiefly British. A pound sterling. [Possibly from Latin, something, what. See QUIDDITY.]

Quid-de (kwĭd'ə), Ludwig. 1858-1941. German politician and pacifist. He shared the 1927 Nobel Peace Prize.

quid-di-ty (kwĭd'ĭ-tē) n. pl. quid-di-ties. 1. The real nature of a thing; the essence. 2. A hairsplitting distinction; a quibble. [Medieval Latin quidditās, from Latin quid, what. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

quid-nunc (kwĭd'nŭngk') n. A nosy person; a busybody. [Latin quid nunc?, what now? : quid, what; see k^wo- in Appendix + nunc, now; see nu- in Appendix.]

quid pro quo (kwĭd' prō kwō') n. pl. quid pro quos or quids pro quo. An equal exchange or substitution. [Latin quid prō quō : quid, what? + prō, for + quō, ablative of quid, what?.]

qui-es-cent (kwē-ēs'ənt, kwī-) adj. Being quiet, still, or at rest; inactive. See Synonyms at latent. [Latin quiēscēns, quiēscēt- present participle of quiēscere, to rest, from quiēs, quiet. See QUIET.] —qui-es'cence n. —qui-es'cent-ly adv.

qui-et (kwī'ĭt) adj. qui-et-er, qui-et-est. 1. Making no noise; silent: a quiet audience at the concert. 2. Free of noise; hushed: a quiet place for studying. 3. Calm and unmoving; still: floating on quiet waters. 4. Free of turmoil and agitation; untroubled. See Synonyms at still¹. 5. Restful; soothing: a quiet afternoon nap; a warm, quiet bath. 6. Tranquil; serene: a quiet manner. 7. Not showy or garish; restrained: a room decorated in quiet colors. — n. The quality or condition of being quiet: "A menacing quiet fills the empty streets" (Time). — v.

qui-et-ed, qui-et-ing, qui-ets. — v. tr. 1. To cause to become quiet. 2. Law. To make (a title) secure by freeing from all questions or challenges. — v. intr. To become quiet: The child wouldn't quiet down for me. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin quiētus, from past participle of quiēscere, to rest, from quiēs, quiet. See k^weiə- in Appendix.] —qui'et-ly adv. —qui'et-ness n.

qui-et-en (kwī'ĭ-tn) v. tr. intr. qui-et-ened, qui-et-en-ing, qui-et-ens. To make or become quiet.

qui-et-ism (kwī'ī-tīz'əm) n. 1. A form of Christian mysticism enjoining passive contemplation and the beatific annihilation of the will. 2. A state of quietness and passivity. — qui'et-ist n. — qui'et-is'tic adj.

qui-e-tude (kwī'ī-tōōd', -tyōōd') n. Tranquillity. [Late Latin quiētūdō, from Latin quiētus, resting, from past participle of quiēscere, to rest. See QUIET.]

qui-e-tus (kwī-ē'təs) n. 1. Something that serves to suppress, check, or eliminate. 2. Release from life; death. 3. A final discharge, as of a duty or debt. [Short for Middle English quietus (est), (he is) discharged (of an obligation), from Medieval Latin quiētus (est), from Latin, (he is) at rest. See QUIET.]

quiff¹ (kwif) n. Chiefly British. A tuft of hair, especially a forelock. [Origin unknown.]

quiff² (kwif) n. A woman regarded as promiscuous. [Origin unknown.]

quill (kwil) n. 1. The hollow stemlike main shaft of a feather. Also called calamus. 2. Any of the larger wing or tail feathers of a bird. 3. A writing pen made from the shaft of a feather. 4. Music. a. A plectrum for a stringed instrument of the clavichord type. b. A pipe having a hollow stem. 5. A toothpick made from the stem of a feather. 6. One of the sharp hollow spines of a porcupine or hedgehog. 7. A spindle or bobbin around which yarn is wound in weaving. 8. A hollow shaft that rotates on a solid shaft when gears are engaged. — v. tr. quilled, quill-ing, quills. 1. To wind (thread or yarn) onto a quill. 2. To make or press small ridges in (fabric). [Middle English quil.]

quill-back (kwil'bāk') n. pl. quillback or quill-backs. A North American freshwater fish (Carpiodes cyprinus) that has one ray of the dorsal fin extending conspicuously beyond the others.

Quil-ler-Couch (kwil'ər-kōōch'), Sir Arthur Thomas. Pen name "Q." 1863-1944. British writer and editor of The Oxford Book of English Verse (1900) and other anthologies.

quill-work (kwil'wûrk') n. Decorative articles made with overlaid porcupine quills by Native Americans.

quill-wort (kwil'wûrt', -wôrt') n. Any of several vascular, spore-bearing, aquatic or marsh plants of the genus Isoetes having short rhizomes and quill-like leaves.

Quil-mes (kēl'mēs') A city of eastern Argentina, an industrial suburb of Buenos Aires on the Río de la Plata. Population, 445,662.

quilt (kwilt) n. 1. A coverlet or blanket made of two layers of fabric with a layer of cotton, wool, feathers, or down in between, all stitched firmly together, usually in a decorative crisscross design. 2. A thick protective cover similar to or suggestive of a quilt. — v. quilt-ed, quilt-ing, quilts. — v. tr. 1. To make into a quilt by stitching (layers of fabric) together. 2. To construct like a quilt: quilt a skirt. 3. To pad and stitch ornamentally. — v. intr. 1. To make a quilt. 2. To do quilted work. [Middle English quilte, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin culcita, mattress.] —quilt'er n.

quilt-ing (kwĭl'tĭng) n. 1. The process of doing quilted work. 2. a. Material used to make quilts. b. Material that has been quilted.

Quim-per (kăN-pĕr') A city of northwest France near the Bay of Biscay south-southeast of Brest. It is noted for its pottery, known as Quimper ware. Population, 56,907.

quin- pref. Variant of quino-.

quin-a-crine hydrochloride (kwĭn'ə-krĕn' hĭ'drə-klŏr'id') n. A bright yellow, bitter, crystalline compound, C₂₃H₃₀ClN₃O, used primarily to treat malaria. [QUIN- + ACR(ID)INE.]

quin-a-liz-a-rin (kwĭn'ə-lĭz'ə-rĭn) n. A red crystalline compound, C₁₄H₈O₆, used to dye cotton.

qui-nate (kwĭ'nāt') adj. Arranged in groups of five: quinate leaflets. [Latin quīnī, five each; see penk^we in Appendix + -ATE¹.]

quince (kwĭns) n. 1. A western Asian shrub or tree (Cydonia oblonga) having white flowers and hard applelike fruit. 2. The aromatic, many-seeded fruit of this plant, edible only when cooked. [Middle English quynce, pl. of quyn, quince, from Old French cooin, from Latin cotōneum (mālum), quince (fruit), probably variant of cydōnium, from Greek kudōnion (malon), alteration (influenced by Kudōniā, Cydonia, an ancient city of northwest Crete), of Kodumalon.]

quin-cun-cial also quin-cunx-ial (kwĭn-kŭn'shəl) adj. Of, relating to, or forming a quincunx. —quin-cun'cial-ly adv.

quin-cunx (kwĭn'kŭngks') n. An arrangement of five objects with one at each corner of a rectangle or square and one at the center. [Latin quincunx, quincunc-, five twelfths : quīnque, five; see penk^we in Appendix + uncia, twelfth part of a unit; see OUNCE¹.]

quin-cunx-ial (kwĭn-kŭn'shəl) adj. Variant of quincuncial.

Quin-cy 1. (kwĭn'sĕ) A city of western Illinois on a bluff above the Mississippi River. It is a trade, industrial, and distributing center. Population, 39,681. 2.

(kwĭn'zĕ) A city of eastern Massachusetts, an industrial suburb of Boston. John and John Quincy Adams were born here; the Adams homestead is now a national historic site. Population, 84,985.

Quin-cy (kwĭn'zĕ, -sĕ), Josiah. 1744-1775. American Revolutionary patriot who traveled to England to present the colonists' grievances (1774-1775). His son Josiah (1772-1864) was a U.S. representative from Massachusetts (1804-1813) who opposed involvement in the War of 1812 and served as mayor of Boston (1823-1829) and president of Harvard University (1829-1845).

quin-de-cen-ni-al (kwĭn'dĭ-sĕn'ĕ-əl) adj. 1. Occurring once every 15 years. 2. Lasting 15 years. — n. A 15th anniversary. [From Latin quīndecim, fifteen; see penk^we in Appendix + Latin -ennium (from annus, year); see at- in Appendix.]

qui-nel-la (kwī-nĕl'ə, kē-) also qui-nie-la (kēn-yĕl'ə) n. Games. A system of betting in which the bettor, in order to win, must pick the first two finishers of a race, but not necessarily in the correct sequence. [American Spanish quiniela, diminutive of Spanish quina, keno, from French quine. See KENO.] quin-i-dine (kwīn'ī-dĕn') n. A colorless crystalline alkaloid, $C_{20}H_{24}N_2O_2$, resembling quinine and used in treating malaria and certain heart disorders.

qui-nie-la (kēn-yĕl'ə) n. Games. Variant of quinella.

qui-nine (kwī'nīn') n. 1. A bitter, colorless, amorphous powder or crystalline alkaloid, $C_{20}H_{24}N_2O_2 \cdot 3H_2O$, derived from certain cinchona barks and used in medicine to treat malaria. 2. Any of various compounds or salts of quinine.

quinine water (kwī'nīn' wô'tər) n. A carbonated beverage flavored with quinine.

quin-nat salmon (kwīn'ăt' sām'ən) n. See Chinook salmon. [Chinook ikwanat.]

quino- or quin- pref. 1. Cinchona; cinchona bark: quinoidine. 2. Quinone: quinoid. [From Spanish quina, cinchona bark, from Quechua kina.]

qui-no-a (kī-nō'ə, kēn'wä) n. A goosefoot (Chenopodium quinoa) native to the Andes and cultivated for its edible seeds. [American Spanish quínoa, from Quechua kinua, kinoa.]

quin-oid (kwīn'oid') n. A substance resembling quinone in structure or physical properties.

qui-noi-dine (kwī-noi'dĕn', -dĭn) n. A brownish-black mixture of alkaloids remaining after extraction of crystalline alkaloids from cinchona bark, used as a quinine substitute.

quin-o-line (kwīn'ə-lĕn', -lĭn) n. An aromatic organic base, C_9H_7N , having a pungent tarlike odor, synthesized or obtained from coal tar, and used as a food preservative and in making antiseptics and dyes.

qui-none (kwī-nōn', kwīn'ōn') n. Any of a class of aromatic compounds found widely in plants, especially the yellow crystalline form, $CO(CHCH)_2CO$, used in making dyes, tanning hides, and photography.

quin-o-noid (kwīn'ə-noid', kwī-nō'-) adj. Of or containing quinone or resembling it in structure or properties.

quin-qua-ge-nar-i-an (kwīng'kwə-jə-nâr'ĕ-ən) n. A person 50 years old, or in his or her fifties. — adj. Of or characteristic of a person in his or her fifties. [From Latin quīnquāgēnārius, containing fifty, from quīnquāgēnī, fifty each, from quīnquāginta, fifty. See penk^we in Appendix.]

Quin-qua-ges-i-ma (kwīng'kwə-jĕs'ə-mə) n. Shrove Sunday. [Medieval Latin, from Latin, fiftieth, from quīnquāginta, fifty. See penk^we in Appendix.]

quinque- pref. Five: quinquevalent. [Latin quīnque-, from quīnque, five. See penk^we in Appendix.]

quin·quen·ni·a (kwīn-kwĕn'ē-ə) n. A plural of quinquennium.

quin·quen·ni·al (kwīn-kwĕn'ē-əl, kwīng-) adj. 1. Happening once every five years. 2. Lasting for five years. — n. 1. A fifth anniversary. 2. A period of five years. — quin·quen'ni·al·ly adv.

quin·quen·ni·um (kwīn-kwĕn'ē-əm, kwīng-) n. pl. quin·quen·ni·ums or quin·quen·ni·a (-kwĕn'ē-ə). A period of five years. [Latin quīnquennium : quīnque, quinque- + -ennium (from annus, year); see at- in Appendix.]

quin·que·va·lent (kwīng'kwə-vā'lənt) adj. Pentavalent. — quin'que·va'·lence n.

quin·sy (kwīn'zē) n. Acute inflammation of the tonsils and the surrounding tissue, often leading to the formation of an abscess. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin quinancia, and Old French quinancie both from Greek kunankhē, dog quinsy, dog-collar : kuōn, kun-, dog; see kwon- in Appendix + ankhein, to squeeze; see angh- in Appendix.]

quint¹ (kwīnt) n. Games. A sequence of five cards of the same suit in one hand in piquet. [French quinte, from Old French, interval of a fifth (in music), feminine of quint, fifth, from Latin quīntus, fifth. See penk^we in Appendix.]

quint² (kwīnt) n. A quintuplet.

quin·tain (kwīn'tən) n. A post or an object mounted on a post, used as a target in tilting exercises. [Middle English quintaine, from Old French, probably from Latin quīntāna (via), fifth (street in a Roman camp, supposedly used for military exercises), from quīntus, fifth. See penk^we in Appendix.]

quin·tal (kwīnt'l) n. Abbr. q., ql. 1. A unit of mass in the metric system equal to 100 kilograms. 2. See hundredweight (n., sense 2). [Middle English, a unit of weight, from Old French, from Medieval Latin quīntāle, from Arabic qīntār, from Late Greek kentēnarion, from Late Latin centēnārium (pondus), hundred(weight), from Latin centēnārius, of a hundred. See CENTENARY.]

Quin·te·ro (kēn-tĕ'rō), Serafin Álvarez. See Serafin Álvarez Quintero.

quin·tes·sence (kwīn-tĕs'əns) n. 1. The pure, highly concentrated essence of a thing. 2. The purest or most typical instance: the quintessence of evil. 3. In ancient and medieval philosophy, the fifth and highest essence after the four elements of earth, air, fire, and water, thought to be the substance of the heavenly bodies and latent in all things. [Middle English, from Old French quinte essence, fifth essence, from Medieval Latin quīnta essentia : Latin quīnta, feminine of quīntus, fifth; see penk^we in Appendix + Latin essentia, essence (translation of Greek pemptē ousia); see ESSENCE.]

quin·tes·sen·tial (kwīn'tə-sĕn'shəl) adj. Of, relating to, or having the nature of a quintessence; being the most typical: "Liszt was the quintessential romantic" (Musical Heritage Review). — quin'tes·sen'tial·ly adv.

quin·tet also quin·tette (kwĭn-tĕt') n. 1. Music. a. A composition for five voices or instruments. b. A group of five performing musicians. 2. A set of five persons or things. [Probably from Italian quintetto, diminutive of quinto, fifth, from Latin quīntus. See penk^we in Appendix.]

quin·tile (kwĭn'tĭl', kwĭnt'l) n. 1. The astrological aspect of planets distant from each other by 72° or one fifth of the zodiac. 2. Statistics. The portion of a frequency distribution containing one fifth of the total sample. [Latin quīntus, fifth; see penk^we in Appendix + -ile as in QUARTILE.]

Quin·til·ian (kwĭn-tĭl'yən, -ĕ-ən), Originally Marcus Fabius Quintilianus. First century A.D. Roman rhetorician whose major work, the Institutio Oratorio, discusses the complete education and career of an orator.

quin·til·lion (kwĭn-tĭl'yən) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 10¹⁸. 2. Chiefly British. The cardinal number equal to 10³⁰. [Latin quīntus, fifth; see penk^we in Appendix + (M)ILLION.] —quin·til'lion adj.

quin·til·lionth (kwĭn-tĭl'yənθ) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number quintillion in a series. 2. One of a quintillion equal parts. —quin·til'lionth adj.

quin·tu·ple (kwĭn-tōō'pəl, -tyōō'-, -tŭp'əl, kwĭn'tə-pəl) adj. 1. Consisting of five parts or units. 2. Five times as much, as many, or as large. — n. A fivefold amount or number. — v. quin·tu·pled, quin·tu·pling, quin·tu·ples. — v. tr. To multiply by five. — v. intr. To be multiplied fivefold. [French, from Old French : from Latin quīntus, fifth; see penk^we in Appendix + -ple, -fold (from Latin -plus); see pel⁻² in Appendix.]

quin·tu·plet (kwĭn-tŭp'lĭt, -tōō'plĭt, -tyōō'-, kwĭn'tə-plĭt) n. 1. One of five offspring born in a single birth. 2. A group or combination of five associated by common properties or behavior. [From QUINTUPLE.]

quin·tu·pli·cate (kwĭn-tōō'plĭ-kĭt, -tyōō'-) adj. 1. Multiplied by five; fivefold. 2. Being the fifth of a set of five identical copies. — n. 1. One of a set of five identical things. 2. A set of five copies. — v. tr. quin·tu·pli·cat·ed, quin·tu·pli·cat·ing, quin·tu·pli·cates (-kāt'). To make five copies of. [Latin quīntus, fifth; see QUINTUPLE + (QUADRU)PLICATE.]

quip (kwĭp) n. 1. A clever, witty remark often prompted by the occasion. 2. A clever, often sarcastic remark; a gibe. See Synonyms at joke. 3. A petty distinction or objection; a quibble. 4. Something curious or odd. — v. intr.

quipped, quip·ping, quips. To make quips or a quip. [Alteration of obsolete quippy, perhaps from Latin quippe, indeed, from quid, what. See k^wo- in Appendix.] —quip'py adj.

quip·ster (kwĭp'stər) n. One given to or known for making quips.

qui·pu (kĕ'pōō) n. A record-keeping device of the Inca empire consisting of a series of variously colored strings attached to a base rope and knotted so as to encode information, used especially for accounting purposes. [American Spanish, from Quechua kipu.]

quire¹ (kwīr) n. Abbr. q., qr. 1. A set of 24 or sometimes 25 sheets of paper of the same size and stock; one twentieth of a ream. 2. A collection of leaves of parchment or paper, folded one within the other, in a manuscript or book. [Middle English quayer, four double sheets of paper, from Old French quaer, from Vulgar Latin quaternus*, from Latin quaternī, set of four, four each, from quater, four times. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

quire² (kwīr) n. & v. Archaic. Variant of choir.

Quir·i·nal (kwīr'ə-nəl) One of the seven hills of ancient Rome, traditionally occupied by the Sabines. A papal palace was built here in the 16th century and served as the residence of Italian kings from 1870 to 1946. —Quir'i·nal adj.

quirk (kwûrk) n. 1. A peculiarity of behavior; an idiosyncrasy. See Synonyms at eccentricity. 2. An unpredictable or unaccountable act or event; a vagary: a quirk of fate. 3. A sudden sharp turn or twist. 4. An equivocation; a quibble. 5. Architecture. A lengthwise groove on a molding between the convex upper part and the soffit. [Origin unknown.] —quirk'i·ly adv. —quirk'i·ness n. —quirk'y adj.

quirt (kwûrt) n. A riding whip with a short handle and a lash of braided rawhide. [Probably from American Spanish cuarta, whip, ultimately from Latin quārta, fourth. See QUART.]

quis·ling (kwīz'liŋ) n. A traitor who serves as the puppet of the enemy occupying his or her country. [After Vidkun Quisling (1887-1945), head of Norway's government during the Nazi occupation (1940-1945).]

quit (kwīt) v. quit or quit·ted (kwīt'id), quit·ting, quits. — v. tr. 1. To depart from; leave: "You and I are on the point of quitting the theater of our exploits" (Horatio Nelson). 2. To leave the company of: had to quit the gathering in order to be home by midnight. 3. To give up; relinquish: quit a job. 4. To abandon or put aside; forsake: advised them to quit their dissipated ways. 5. To cease or discontinue: asked them to quit talking. 6. a. To rid oneself of by paying: quit a debt. b. To release from a burden or responsibility. 7. To conduct (oneself) in a specified way: Quit yourselves like adults. — v. intr. 1. To cease performing an action. See Synonyms at stop. 2. To give up, as in defeat; stop. 3. To leave a job. — adj. Absolved of a duty or an obligation; free. [Middle English quiten, to release, from Old French quiter, from Medieval Latin quiētāre, quītāre, from Latin quiētus, at rest. See QUIET.]

quitch grass (kwīch grās) n. Couch grass. [Middle English quich, from Old English cwice. See g^wei- in Appendix.]

quit·claim (kwīt'klām') Law. n. The transfer of a title, right, or claim to another. — v. tr. quit·claimed, quit·claim·ing, quit·claims. To renounce all claim to (a possession or right). [Middle English quitclaime, from Anglo-Norman quiteclame, from quiteclamer, to release : quite, free (from Latin quiētus, freed of); see QUIET + clamer, to proclaim (from Latin clāmāre); see CLAIM.]

quite (kwīt) adv. 1. To the greatest extent; completely: quite alone; not quite finished. See Usage Note at perfect. 2. Actually; really: I'm quite positive about it. 3. To a degree; rather: quite soon; quite tasty. [Middle English, from quite, clear, free, from Old French, from Latin quiētus, freed. See QUIET.]

Qui-to (kē'tō) The capital of Ecuador, in the north-central part of the country. Settled by the Quito people, it was captured by the Incas in 1487 and held by the Spanish from 1534 until 1822. The city has frequently been damaged by earthquakes. Population, 890,355.

quit-rent (kwīt'rěnt') n. A rent paid by a freeman in lieu of the services required by feudal custom. [Middle English quiterent : quite, free; see QUITE + rent, rent; see RENT¹.]

quits (kwīts) adj. On even terms with by payment or requital: I am finally quits with the loan. [Middle English, probably alteration (influenced by Medieval Latin quittus, quītus, past participle of quītāre, to free), of quit, rid of a debt, from Old French quiter. See QUIT.]

quit-tance (kwīt'ns) n. 1. a. Release from a debt, an obligation, or a penalty. b. A document or receipt certifying such release. 2. Something given as requital or recompense; a repayment. [Middle English quitance, from Old French, from quiter, to free. See QUIT.]

quit-ter (kwīt'ər) n. One who gives up easily.

quit-tor (kwīt'ər) n. An inflammation of the hoof cartilage of horses and other solid-hoofed animals, characterized by degeneration of hoof tissue, formation of a slough, and fistulous sores. [Middle English quiture, perhaps from Old French, act of boiling, from Latin coctūra, boiling liquid, from coctus, past participle of coquere, to cook. See pek^w- in Appendix.]

quiver¹ (kwīv'ər) v. intr. quiver-ed, quiver-ing, quiver-ers. To shake with a slight, rapid, tremulous movement. See Synonyms at shake. — n. The act or motion of quivering. [Middle English quiveren, perhaps from quiver, nimble (from Old English cwifer-). See g^wei- in Appendix.] — quiver-y adj.

quiver² (kwīv'ər) n. 1. A portable case for holding arrows. 2. A case full of arrows. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman quiveir, variant of Old French cuirve, from Old Low Franconian cocar, probably from Medieval Latin cucurum, probably from Hunnish; akin to Mongolian kökür.]

qui vive (kē vēv') n. A sentinel's challenge. — idiom. on the qui vive. On the alert; vigilant: "a loathsome Dublin politico who is on the qui vive for... terrorists" (Julian Moynahan). [French, (long) live who? (a sentry's challenge to determine a person's political sympathies) : qui, who + vive, third person sing. present subjunctive of vivre, to live.]

quix·ot·ic (kwĭk-sŏt'ĭk) also quix·ot·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Caught up in the romance of noble deeds and the pursuit of unreachable goals; idealistic without regard to practicality. 2. Capricious; impulsive: "At worst his scruples must have been quixotic, not malicious" (Louis Auchincloss). [From English Quixote, a visionary, after Don Quixote, hero of a romance by Miguel de Cervantes.]
—quix·ot·i·cal·ly adv. —quix'o·tism (kwĭk'sə-tĭz'əm) n.

quiz (kwĭz) v. tr. quizzed, quiz·zing, quiz·zes. 1. To question closely or repeatedly; interrogate. 2. To test the knowledge of by posing questions. See Synonyms at ask. 3. Chiefly British. To poke fun at; mock. — n. pl. quiz·zes. 1. A questioning or an inquiry. 2. A short oral or written test. 3. A practical joke. [Origin unknown.] —quiz'zer n.

WORD HISTORY: Although we do not know the origin of the word quiz, just as we may not know the answers to all the questions on a quiz, we can say that its first recorded sense has to do with people, not tests. The term, first recorded in 1782, meant "an odd or eccentric person." From the noun in this sense came a verb meaning "to make sport or fun of" and "to regard mockingly." In English dialects and probably in American English the verb quiz acquired senses relating to interrogation and questioning. This presumably occurred because quiz was associated with question, inquisitive, or perhaps the English dialect verb quiset, "to question" (probably itself short for obsolete inquisite, "to investigate"). From this new area of meaning came the noun and verb senses all too familiar to students. The second recorded instance of the noun sense occurs in the writings of no less an educator than William James, who in a December 26, 1867, letter proffers the hope that "perhaps giving 'quizzes' in anatomy and physiology... may help along."

quiz show (kwĭz shō) n. A television or radio program in which the contestants' knowledge is tested by questioning, with some contestants winning money or prizes.

quiz·zi·cal (kwĭz'ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Suggesting puzzlement; questioning. 2. Teasing; mocking: "His face wore a somewhat quizzical almost impertinent air" (Lawrence Durrell). 3. Eccentric; odd. —quiz'zi·cal'i·ty (-kəl'ĭ-tē) n. —quiz'zi·cal·ly adv.

Qum (kōōm) See Qom.

Qum·ran (kōōm-rän') also Khīr·bet Qumran (kĭr'bĕt) An ancient village of Palestine on the northwest shore of the Dead Sea in the West Bank east of Jerusalem. It is noted for the caves in which the Dead Sea Scrolls were found.

quod·li·bet (kwŏd'lĭ-bĕt') n. 1. a. A theological or philosophical issue presented for formal argument or disputation. b. Formal disputation of such an issue. 2. Music. A usually humorous medley. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin quodlibetum, from Latin quod libet, anything at all : quod, what; see k^wo- in Appendix + libet, it pleases, third person sing. present of libēre, to be pleasing; see leubh- in Appendix.]

quoin also coign (koin, kwoin) n. 1. a. An exterior angle of a wall or other piece of masonry. b. A stone serving to form such an angle; a cornerstone. 2. A keystone. 3. Printing. A wedge-shaped block used to lock type in a chase. 4. A wedge used to raise the level of a gun. — v. tr. quoined also coigned, quoin-ing also coign-ing, quoins also coigns. To provide, secure, or raise with a quoin or quoins. [Variant of COIN.]

quoit (kwoit, koit) n. Upper Northern U.S. 1. quoits. (used with a sing. verb). A game in which flat rings of iron or rope are pitched at a stake, with points awarded for encircling it. 2. One of the rings used in this game. [Middle English coyte, flat stone, quoit, from Old French coilte, coite, from Latin culcita, cushion.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The game quoits derives its name from quoit, specifically denoting a heavy iron ring slightly convex on the outside and concave inside, configured so as to give it an edge for cutting into the ground. Both the game and the term are associated almost exclusively with the Upper North (the northernmost tier of states from New York State westward to North Dakota). In fact, quoits is one of a dozen terms that are most reliable for delineating the Upper North dialect boundary.

quok·ka (kwök'ə) n. A small short-tailed wallaby (Setonix brachyurus) living in coastal areas of southwest Australia. [Nyungar (Aboriginal language of southwest Australia) kwaka.]

quon·dam (kwön'dəm, -däm') adj. That once was; former: “the quondam drunkard, now perfectly sober” (Bret Harte). [Latin, from quom, when. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

Quon·set (kwön'sit) A trademark used for a prefabricated portable hut having a semicircular roof of corrugated metal that curves down to form walls. This trademark often occurs in attributive contexts in print: “a Quonset building that once stored grain” (Chicago Tribune); “an unassuming assemblage of clapboard buildings, Quonset storage huts, and docks” (Christian Science Monitor). It sometimes occurs in lowercase: “wooden frame shacks, auto trailers, abandoned Air Force quonsets” (Washington Post).

quo·rum (kwôr'əm, kwōr'-) n. 1. The minimal number of officers and members of a committee or an organization, usually a majority, who must be present for valid transaction of business. 2. A select group. [Middle English, quorum of justices of the peace, from Latin quōrum, of whom, from the wording of a commission naming certain persons as members of a body, genitive pl. of quī, who. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

quot. abbr. Quotation.

quo·ta (kwō'tə) n. 1. A proportional share, as of goods, assigned to a group or to each member of a group; an allotment. a. A production assignment. 2. The maximum number, especially of people, that may be admitted to a nation, a group, or an institution. [Medieval Latin, from Latin quota (pars), how large (a part), feminine of quotus, of what number. See QUOTE.]

quot·a·ble (kwō'tə-bəl) adj. Suitable for or worthy of quoting: a quotable slogan; a quotable pundit. —quot'a·bil'i·ty n.

quo·ta·tion (kwō-tā'shən) n. Abbr. quot. 1. The act of quoting. 2. A passage quoted. 3. An explicit reference or allusion in an artistic work to a passage or element from another, usually well-known work: "Direct quotations from other paintings are fairly sparse" (Robert Hughes). 4. a. The quoting of current prices and bids for securities and goods. b. The prices or bids cited. —quo·ta'tion·al adj. —quo·ta'tion·al·ly adv.

quotation mark (kwō-tā'shən märke) n. Either of a pair of punctuation marks used to mark the beginning and end of a passage attributed to another and repeated word for word. They appear in the form of double quotation marks (" ") and single quotation marks (‘ ’). Single quotation marks are usually reserved for setting off a quotation within another quotation.

quote (kwōt) v. quot·ed, quot·ing, quotes. — v. tr. 1. To repeat or copy the words of (another), usually with acknowledgment of the source. 2. To cite or refer to for illustration or proof. 3. To repeat a brief passage or excerpt from: The saxophonist quoted a Duke Ellington melody in his solo. 4. To state (a price) for securities, goods, or services. — v. intr. To give a quotation, as from a book. — n. 1. Informal. A quotation. 2. A quotation mark. 3. Used by a speaker to indicate the beginning of a quotation. 4. Usage Problem. A dictum; a saying. [Middle English coten, to mark a book with numbers or marginal references, from Old French coter, from Medieval Latin quotāre, to number chapters, from Latin quotus, of what number, from quot, how many. See k^wo- in Appendix.] —quot'er n.

USAGE NOTE: As a transitive verb quote is appropriately used to describe the use of an exact wording drawn from another source. When the original source is paraphrased or alluded to, the more general term cite is usually preferable. • The noun quote is well established as a truncation of quotation, though many critics regard it as unduly journalistic or breezy. As such, it is best avoided in formal literary discussions. The use of the noun was acceptable to only 38 percent of the Usage Panel in the sentence He began the chapter with a quote from the Bible. But the usage is less objectionable in informal contexts or in reference to less august sources; the word was acceptable to 53 percent of the Panel in the sentence He lightened up his talk by throwing in quotes from Marx Brothers movies. • The noun quote is sometimes used as a synonym for “dictum, saying,” as in His career is just one more validation of Andy Warhol's quote that "in the future, everybody will be famous for fifteen minutes." This example was unacceptable to 76 percent of the Usage Panel.

quoth (kwōth) v. tr. Archaic. Uttered; said. Used only in the first and third persons, with the subject following: "Quoth the Raven, 'Nevermore!'" (Edgar Allan Poe). [Middle English, from Old English cwæth, third person sing. past tense of cwethan, to say. See g^wet- in Appendix.]

quo-tha (kwō'thə) interj. Archaic. Used to express surprise or sarcasm, after quoting the word or phrase of another. [Alteration of quoth he.]

quo-tid-i-an (kwō-tīd'ē-ən) adj. 1. Everyday; commonplace: "There's nothing quite like a real... train conductor to add color to a quotidian commute" (Anita Diamant). 2. Recurring daily. Used especially of attacks of malaria. [Middle English cotidien, from Old French, from Latin quōtidiānus, from quōtidiē, each day : quot, how many, as many as; see k^wo- in Appendix + diē, genitive and dative of diēs, day; see deiw- in Appendix.]

quo-tient (kwō'shənt) n. Mathematics. The number obtained by dividing one quantity by another. In $45 \div 3 = 15$, 15 is the quotient. [Middle English quocient, alteration of Latin quōtiēns, how many times, from quot, how many. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

Qur'an (kə-rän', -rän', kô-, kō-) n. Variant of Koran.

Qur-net es Sau-da (kōör'nīt ɛs sou'də, -də) A peak, 3,090 m (10,131 ft) high, of the Lebanon Mountains in northern Lebanon. It is the highest elevation in the country.

qu-rush (kōō'rəsh) n. pl. qurush or qu-rush-es. A unit of currency in Saudi Arabia. [Arabic qurūš, pl. of qirš.]

q.v. abbr. Latin. Quod vide (which see).

QWER-TY (kwûr'tē) adj. Of, relating to, or designating the traditional configuration of typewriter or computer keyboard keys. [From the first six letters at the upper left.]

r¹ or R (är) n. pl. r's or R's. 1. The 18th letter of the modern English alphabet.

2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter r. 3. The 18th in a series.

r² abbr. 1. Or R. Mathematics. Radius. 2. Or R. Electricity. Resistance. 3. Or r. Baseball. Run.

R¹ (är) n. A movie rating that allows admission only to persons of a certain age, usually 17, unless accompanied by a parent or guardian. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an R movie. [Short for RESTRICTED.]

R² 1. The symbol for gas constant. 2. The symbol for radical.

R³ abbr. 1. Or R. Réaumur (scale). 2. Registered trademark. 3. Ecclesiastical. Response. 4. Or r. Roentgen. 5. Games. Rook (chess).

r. abbr. 1. Or R. Railroad; railway. 2. Or R. Range. 3. Rare. 4. Retired. 5. Or R. Right. 6. Or R. River. 7. Or R. Road. 8. Rod (unit of length). 9. Games. Rubber. 10. Ruble. 11. Or R. Rupee.

R. abbr. 1. Rabbi. 2. Rector. 3. Republican. 4. Royal.

Ra¹ (rä) also Re (rā) n. Mythology. The ancient Egyptian sun god, the supreme deity represented as a man with the head of a hawk crowned with a solar disk and uraeus.

Ra² The symbol for the element radium.

Ra. abbr. Range.

R.A. abbr. 1. Or RA. Rear admiral. 2. Or RA. Regular army. 3. Astronomy. Right ascension. 4. Royal Academy; Royal Academician.

ra·bat (räb'ē, rə-bät') n. A piece of cloth fitted to the collar and covering the shirt front, worn chiefly by Roman Catholic and Anglican clergy. [French, from Old French. See REBATO.]

Ra·bat (rə-bät', rä-) The capital of Morocco, on the Atlantic Ocean northeast of Casablanca. Settled in ancient times, it became a Muslim fortress c. 700. Rabat was the capital of the French protectorate of Morocco from 1912 until independence was achieved in 1956. Population, 518,616.

ra·ba·to (rə-bä'tō) n. Variant of rebato.

rab·bet (räb'it) also re·bate (rē'bät', räb'it) n. 1. A cut or groove along or near the edge of a piece of wood that allows another piece to fit into it to form a joint. 2. A joint so made. — v. rab·bet·ed also re·bat·ed, rab·bet·ing also re·bat·ing, rab·bets also re·bates. — v. tr. 1. To cut a rabbet in. 2. To join by a rabbet. — v. intr. To be joined by a rabbet. [Middle English rabet, from Old French rabat, recess in a wall, act of beating down, from rabattre, to beat down again. See REBATE¹.]

rab·bi (räb'ī) n. pl. rab·bis. 1. Abbr. R. A person trained in Jewish law, ritual, and tradition and ordained for leadership of a Jewish congregation, especially one serving as chief religious official of a synagogue. 2. A scholar qualified to interpret Jewish law. [Middle English rabi, from Old French, from Late Latin rabbī, master, from Greek rhabbi, from Hebrew rabbî: rab, master + -î, my.]

rab·bin·ate (răb'ə-nāt', -nīt) n. 1. The office or function of a rabbi. 2. Rabbis considered as a group.

rab·bin·i·cal (rə-bīn'ī-kəl) also rab·bin·ic (-īk) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of rabbis. [From obsolete rabbīn, rabbi, from French, from Old French rabain, probably from Aramaic rabbīn, pl. of rab, master.] —rab·bin'·i·cal·ly adv.

Rab·bin·ic Hebrew (rə-bīn'īk hē'brōō) n. See Mishnaic Hebrew.

rab·bin·ism (răb'ə-nīz'əm) n. Rabbinical teachings and traditions.

rab·bin·ist (răb'ə-nīst) n. A strict observer of the Talmud and of rabbinical traditions. —rab'·bin·is'tic, rab'·bin·it'ic (-īt'īk) adj.

rab·bit (răb'īt) n. pl. rab·bits or rabbit. 1. Any of various long-eared, short-tailed, burrowing mammals of the family Leporidae, as the commonly domesticated Old World species Oryctolagus cuniculus or the cottontail. 2. A hare.

3. The fur of a rabbit or hare. 4. Sports. A runner who intentionally sets a fast pace for a teammate during a long-distance race. — v. intr. rab·bit·ed, rab·bit·ing, rab·bits. To hunt rabbits or hares. [Middle English rabet, young rabbit, probably from Old French, from Middle Dutch robbe, rabbit.]

—rab'bit·er n.

rabbit ears (răb'īt îrz) pl.n. Informal. An indoor television antenna consisting of two usually adjustable rods connected to a base and swiveling apart at a V-shaped angle.

rabbit fever (răb'īt fē'vər) n. See tularemia.

rabbit food (răb'īt fōōd) n. Informal. Raw vegetables, especially those eaten in salads.

rab·bit·foot clover (răb'īt-fōōt' klō'vər) n. An annual clover (Trifolium arvense) native to the Old World, having white or pale pink furlike flowers resembling rabbits' paws.

rabbit punch (răb'īt pūnch) n. A chopping blow to the back of the neck.

—rab'bit·punch' (răb'īt-pūnch') v.

rab·ble¹ (răb'əl) n. 1. A tumultuous crowd; a mob: an aristocrat who was killed in the street by rabble. 2. The lowest or coarsest class of people: aristocrats who regarded the rabble with deep contempt. [Middle English.]

rab·ble² (răb'əl) n. 1. An iron bar with one end bent like a rake, used to stir and skim molten iron in puddling. 2. Any of various similar tools or mechanically operated devices used in roasting or refining furnaces. — v. tr. rab·bled, rab·bling, rab·bles. To stir or skim (molten iron) with an iron bar. [French râble, fire shovel, from Old French roable, from Medieval Latin rotābulum, from Latin rutābulum, from rutus, past participle of ruere, to rake up, tumble down.]

—rab'bler n.

rab·ble·rous·er (răb'əl-rou'zər) n. A leader or speaker who stirs up the passions of the masses; a demagogue.

Ra·be·lais (răb'ə-lā', răb'ə-lā', răb-lě'), François. 1494?-1553. French humanist and writer of satirical attacks on medieval scholasticism and superstition, most notably Pantagruel (1532) and Gargantua (1534).

Rab·e·lai·si·an (răb'ə-lā'zē-ən, -zhən) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of Rabelais or his works: a Rabelaisian catalogue. 2. Characterized by coarse humor, exuberant learning, or bold caricature.

Ra·bi (rŭ'bē) also Ra·bi·a (rə-bē'ə) n. Either the third or the fourth month of the year in the Muslim calendar. See Table at calendar. [Arabic rabi', spring.]

Ra·bi (ră'bē), Isidor Isaac. 1898-1988. Austrian-born American physicist. He won a 1944 Nobel Prize for his study of magnetic movement of atomic particles.

rab·id (răb'īd) adj. 1. Of or affected by rabies. 2. Raging; uncontrollable: rabid thirst. 3. Extremely zealous or enthusiastic; fanatical: a rabid football fan. [Latin rabidus, from rabere, to rave.] —ra·bid'·i·ty (rə-bīd'ī-tē, ră-), rab'·id·ness (răb'īd-nīs) n. —rab'·id·ly adv.

ra·bies (ră'bēz) n. An acute, infectious, often fatal viral disease of most warm-blooded animals, especially wolves, cats, and dogs, that attacks the central nervous system and is transmitted by the bite of infected animals. [Latin rabiēs, rage, from rabere, to rave.] —ra'bi·et'ic (-ět'īk) adj.

Ra·bin (ră-bēn', ră'bēn), Itzhak or Yitzhak. 1922-1995. Israeli military and political leader who commanded Israeli forces in the Six-Day War (1967) and served as prime minister (1974-1977 and 1992-1995). He shared the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize with Yasir Arafat. Rabin was assassinated in 1995 as he left a peace rally.

rac·coon also ra·coon (ră-kōōn') *n. pl. rac·coons or raccoon also ra·coons or racoön. 1. A carnivorous North American mammal (Procyon lotor) having grayish-brown fur, black masklike facial markings, and a black-ringed bushy tail. 2. The fur of this mammal. 3. Any of various similar or related animals. [Of Virginia Algonquian origin.]*

Rac·coon River (ră-kōōn' rīv'ər) A river rising in northwest Iowa and flowing about 322 km (200 mi) southeast to the Des Moines River near the city of Des Moines.

race¹ (rās) n. 1. A local geographic or global human population distinguished as a more or less distinct group by genetically transmitted physical characteristics. 2. A group of people united or classified together on the basis of common history, nationality, or geographic distribution: the German race. 3. A genealogical line; a lineage. 4. Human beings considered as a group. 5. Biology. a. A population of organisms differing from others of the same species in the frequency of hereditary traits; a subspecies. b. A breed or strain, as of domestic animals. 6. A distinguishing or characteristic quality, such as the flavor of a wine. [French, from Old French, from Old Italian razza, race, lineage.]

race² (rās) n. 1. Sports. a. A competition of speed, as in running or riding. b. races. A series of such competitions held at a specified time on a regular course: attending the dog races. 2. An extended competition in which participants struggle like runners to be the winner: the presidential race. 3. Steady or rapid onward movement: the race of time. 4. a. A strong or swift current of water. b. The channel of such a current. c. An artificial channel built to transport water and use its energy; a raceway. 5. A groovelike part of a machine in which a moving part slides or rolls. 6. See slipstream (n., sense 1). — v. raced, rac-ing, rac-es. — v. intr. 1. Sports. To compete in a contest of speed. 2. To move rapidly or at top speed: raced home in time. 3. To run too rapidly because of decreased resistance or a lighter load: an engine that was racing. — v. tr. 1. Sports. a. To compete against in a race. b. To cause to compete in a race; enter in a contest: The monarch raced her horses in the derby each year. 2. To transport rapidly or at top speed; rush: raced the injured motorist to the hospital. 3. To cause (an engine with the gears disengaged, for example) to run swiftly or too swiftly. [Middle English ras, from Old Norse rās, rush, running. See ers- in Appendix.]

Race (rās), Cape. A promontory of southeast Newfoundland, Canada, on the coast of the Avalon Peninsula.

race-car (rās/'kär') n. Sports. An automobile used for racing.

race-course (rās/'kôrs', -kôrs') n. Sports. A course laid out for racing.

race-horse (rās/'hôrs') n. A horse bred and trained to race.

ra-ceme (rā-sēm', rə-) n. Botany. An inflorescence having stalked flowers arranged singly along an elongated, unbranched axis, as in the lily of the valley. [Latin racēmus, a bunch of grapes.]

ra-ce-mic (rā-sē'mīk, -sēm'īk, rə-) adj. Of or relating to a chemical compound that contains equal quantities of dextrorotatory and levorotatory forms and therefore does not rotate the plane of incident polarized light.

racemic acid (rā-sē'mīk äs'īd) n. An optically inactive form of tartaric acid, $C_2H_4O_2(COOH)_2 \cdot H_2O$, that can be separated into dextrorotatory and levorotatory components and is sometimes found in grape juice during the making of wine.

ra-ce-mi-form (rā-sē'mə-fôrm') adj. Botany. Having the form of a raceme.

rac-e-mism (räs'ə-mīz'əm, rā-sē'-) n. Chemistry. The condition or state of being racemic.

rac-e-mi-za-tion (räs'ə-mī-zā'shən) n. Chemistry. Conversion of an optically active substance to a racemic form.

rac-e-mose (räs'ə-mōs') adj. 1. Botany. Resembling or borne in a raceme.

2. Anatomy. Having a structure of clustered parts. Used of glands.

—rac'e-mose'ly adv.

rac·er (rā'sər) n. 1. One that engages in races or is capable of great speed: a dog bred as a racer. 2. Any of various fast-moving North American snakes of the genus Coluber.

race riot (rās rī'ət) n. A riot caused by racial hatred or dissension.

race-run·ner (rās'rūn'ər) n. Any of several fast-moving New World lizards of the genus Cnemidophorus.

race-track (rās'trāk') n. Sports. A usually oval, specially surfaced course on which races are held.

race-walk (rās'wōk') v. intr. race--walked, race--walk·ing, race--walks. Sports. To engage in race walking.

race walking (rās wō'kīŋ) n. Sports. The sport of walking for speed, the rules of which require the racer to maintain continual foot contact with the ground and to keep the supporting leg straight at the knee when that leg is directly below the body. Also called health walking, heel-and-toeing, PowerWalking, speed walk·ing. —race walker n.

race-way (rās'wā') n. 1. Sports. A course or track for racing, especially harness racing. 2. A tube that encloses and protects electric wires. 3. A race: the raceway beside the old mill.

Ra·chel (rā'chəl) In the Old Testament, the second wife of Jacob and the mother of Joseph and Benjamin.

rach·i·des (rāk'ī-dēz', rā'kī-) n. Biology. A plural of rachis.

ra·chil·la (rə-kīl'ə) n. pl. ra·chil·lae (-kīl'ē). Botany. A diminutive axis of a spikelet that bears the florets, as in grasses and sedges. [New Latin, diminutive of RACHIS.]

ra·chis (rā'kīs) n. pl. ra·chis·es or rach·i·des (rāk'ī-dēz', rā'kī-). Biology. A main axis or shaft, such as the main stem of an inflorescence, the stalk of a pinnately compound leaf, or the spinal column. [New Latin, from Greek rhakhis, spine, ridge.] —ra'chi·al adj.

ra·chi·tis (rə-kī'tīs) n. See ricketts. [Greek rhakhis, spine + -ITIS.] —ra·chit'ic (-kīt'ik) adj.

Rach·ma·ni·noff (rāk-mā'nə-nōf', rākH-, rəKH-mā'nyī-nəf), Sergei Vasilievich. 1873-1943. Russian-born composer. A virtuoso pianist, he excelled at the interpretation of the late romantic composers. His own work is largely a continuation of that genre.

ra·cial (rā'shəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of race or races.

2. Arising from or based on differences among human racial groups: racial conflict; racial discrimination. —ra'cial·ly adv.

ra·cial·ism (rā'shə-līz'əm) n. Chiefly British. Variant of racism. —ra'cial·ist adj., n. —ra'cial·is'tic adj.

Ra·ci·bórz (rät-sē'bōōsh') A city of southern Poland on the Oder River near the Czechoslovakian border. First mentioned in the 12th century, it was later the capital of an independent principality and passed to Bohemia and Prussia before being incorporated into Poland in 1945. Population, 59,800.

Ra·cine (rə-sēn', rā-) A city of southeast Wisconsin on Lake Michigan south of Milwaukee. It is a port and manufacturing center. Population, 84,298.

Ra·cine (rə-sēn', rā-), Jean Baptiste. 1639-1699. French playwright. The greatest tragedian of the French classical period, he based his works, such as Brittannicus (1669) and Phèdre (1677), on classical Greek and Roman themes.

rac·ing form (rā'sing fôrm) n. Sports. An information sheet about horseraces.

racing skate (rā'sing skāt) n. Sports. See speed skate.

ra·cism (rā'siz'əm) n. 1. The belief that race accounts for differences in human character or ability and that a particular race is superior to others.

2. Discrimination or prejudice based on race. —rac'ist adj. & n.

rack¹ (rāk) n. 1. a. A framework or stand in or on which to hold, hang, or display various articles: a trophy rack; a rack for baseball bats in the dugout; a drying rack for laundry. b. Games. A triangular frame for arranging billiard balls at the start of a game. c. A receptacle for livestock feed. d. A frame for holding bombs in an aircraft. 2. Slang. a. A bunk; a bed. b. Sleep: was finally able to get some rack. 3. A toothed bar that meshes with a gearwheel, a pinion, or another toothed machine part. 4. a. A state of intense anguish. b. A cause of intense anguish. 5. An instrument of torture on which the victim's body was stretched.

6. A pair of antlers: a buck with a handsome rack. — v. tr. racked, rack·ing, racks. 1. Sports. To place (billiard balls, for example) in a rack. 2. To cause great physical or mental suffering to: Pain racked his entire body. See Synonyms at afflict. 3. To torture by means of the rack. —phrasal verbs. rack out. Slang. To go to sleep or get some sleep. rack up. Informal. To accumulate or score: rack up points. —idiom. on the rack. Under great stress. [Middle English rakke, probably from Middle Dutch rec, framework. See reg- in Appendix.] —rack'er n.

rack² (rāk) n. A fast, flashy, four-beat gait of a horse in which each foot touches the ground separately and at equal intervals. — v. intr. racked, rack·ing, racks. To go or move in a rack. [Origin unknown.]

rack³ (rāk) n. A thin mass of wind-driven clouds. — v. intr. racked, rack·ing, racks. To be driven by the wind; scud: as clouds racked by. [Middle English rak, probably of Scandinavian origin; akin to Swedish rak, wreckage.]

rack⁴ (rāk) n. Variant of wrack¹.

rack⁵ (rāk) n. & v. Variant of wrack².

rack⁶ (rāk) v. tr. racked, rack·ing, racks. To drain (wine or cider) from the dregs. [Middle English rakken, from Old Provençal arracar, from raca, stems and husks of grapes.]

rack⁷ (răk) n. 1. a. A wholesale rib cut of lamb or veal between the shoulder and the loin. b. A retail rib cut of lamb or veal, prepared for roasting or for rib chops.

2. The neck and upper spine of mutton, pork, or veal. [Probably from RACK¹.]

rack and pinion (răk ənd pɪn'jən) n. A device for the conversion of rotary and linear motion, consisting of a pinion and a mated rack. —rack'-and-pin'ion (răk'ən-pɪn'jən) adj.

rack-et¹ also rac-quet (răk'it) n. Sports. 1. A device consisting of an oval frame with a tight interlaced network of strings and a handle, used to strike a ball or shuttlecock in various games. 2. A wooden paddle, as one used in table tennis. [Middle English raket, a kind of handball, from Old French rachette, palm of the hand, racket, from Medieval Latin rascheta, palm, from Arabic rāḥet, variant of rāḥah.]

rack-et² (răk'it) n. 1. A loud, distressing noise. See Synonyms at noise. 2. A dishonest business or practice, especially one that obtains money through fraud or extortion. 3. a. An easy, profitable means of livelihood. b. Slang. A business or an occupation. — v. intr. rack-et-ed, rack-et-ing, rack-ets. 1. To make or move with a loud, distressing noise. 2. To lead an active social life. [Origin unknown.]

rack-et-er (răk'ī-tîr') n. A person who commits crimes such as extortion, loansharking, bribery, and obstruction of justice in furtherance of illegal business activities. — v. intr. rack-et-ered, rack-et-er-ing, rack-et-ers. To carry on illegal business activities that involve crimes.

rack-ets (răk'its) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb). Sports. Variant of racquets.

rack-et-y (răk'ī-tē) adj. Noisy; raucous.

Rack-ham (răk'əm), Arthur. 1867-1939. British artist known for his ethereal illustrations for children's books.

rack railway (răk rāl'wā') n. See cog railway.

rack-rent (răk'rĕnt') n. Exorbitant rent. — v. tr. rack--rent-ed, rack--rent-ing, rack--rents. To exact exorbitant rent for or from. [From RACK¹.] —rack'-rent'er n.

ra-clette (ră-klĕt', ră-) n. 1. A Swiss dish consisting of cheese melted and served on boiled potatoes or bread. 2. A firm cheese used in making this dish. [French, from racler, to rake, scrape, from Provençal rasclar, to rake, from Old Provençal, from Vulgar Latin rāsculāre*, from rāsculum*, diminutive of Latin rāstrum, rake. See rēd- in Appendix.]

rac-on-teur (răk'ŏn-tûr') n. One who tells stories and anecdotes with skill and wit. [French, from raconter, to relate, from Old French : re-, re- + aconter, to count up, reckon; see ACCOUNT.]

ra-coon (ră·kōōn') n. Variant of raccoon.

rac-quet (răk'it) n. Sports. Variant of racket¹.

rac·quet·ball (răk'īt-bôl') n. Sports. A game played on a four-walled handball court by two or four players with short-handled rackets and a hollow rubber ball 24 inches (5.7 centimeters) in diameter.

rac·quets also rack·ets (răk'īts) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb.) Sports. A game played on a large, netless, four-walled court by two or four players with long-handled rackets and a hard, fast-moving ball 1 inch (2.5 centimeters) in diameter.

rac·y (ră'sē) adj. rac·i·er, rac·i·est. 1. Having a distinctive and characteristic quality or taste. 2. Strong and sharp in flavor or odor; piquant or pungent.

3. Risqué; ribald. 4. Vigorous; lively. [From RACE¹.] —rac'i·ly adv.

—rac'i·ness n.

rad¹ (răd) n. Physics. A unit of energy absorbed from ionizing radiation, equal to 100 ergs per gram or 0.01 joule per kilogram of irradiated material. [Short for RADIATION.]

rad² (răd) adj. Slang. 1. Radical: rad moves on a skateboard. 2. Wonderful; marvelous.

rad³ abbr. Mathematics. Radian.

rad. abbr. 1. Mathematics. Radical. 2. Radio. 3. Mathematics. Radius.

4. Mathematics. Radix.

ra·dar (ră'dăr) n. 1. A method of detecting distant objects and determining their position, velocity, or other characteristics by analysis of very high frequency radio waves reflected from their surfaces. 2. The equipment used in such detection. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: radar technology; a radar installation. [RA(DIO) + D(TECTING) + A(ND) + R(ANGING).]

radar astronomy (ră'dăr ə-strŏn'ə-mē) n. The branch of astronomy that studies bodies in the solar system by analyzing the reflections of radio waves sent from Earth.

radar beacon (ră'dăr bē'kən) n. A fixed device that sends or receives, amplifies, alters, and returns a radar signal, permitting a distant receiver to determine its bearing and sometimes its range.

ra·dar·scope (ră'dăr-skŏp') n. The oscilloscope viewing screen of a radar receiver.

radar telescope (ră'dăr tēl'i-skŏp') n. A large radar antenna used in radar astronomy.

Rad·cliffe (răd'klif'), Ann Ward. 1764-1823. British writer of Gothic novels, including The Mysteries of Udolpho (1794).

rad·dle¹ (răd'l) v. tr. rad·dled, rad·dling, rad·dles. To twist together; interweave. [From dialectal raddle, stick interwoven with others in a fence, from Anglo-Norman reidele, stout pole, possibly from Middle High German reidel, rod. See reidh- in Appendix.]

rad·dle² (răd'l) n. & v. Variant of ruddle.

rad·dled (răd'ld) adj. Worn-out and broken-down. [Origin unknown.]

radi- pref. Variant of radio-.

ra·di·al (rā'dē-əl) adj. 1. a. Of, relating to, or arranged like rays or radii.

b. Radiating from or converging to a common center. c. Having or characterized by parts so arranged or so radiating. 2. Moving or directed along a radius.

3. Anatomy. Of, relating to, or near the radius or forearm. 4. Developing symmetrically about a central point. — n. 1. A radial part, such as a ray, spoke, or radius. 2. A radial tire. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin radiālis, from Latin radius, ray.] — ra'di·al·ly adv.

radial engine (rā'dē-əl ěn'jĭn) n. An internal-combustion engine, formerly used in propeller-driven aircraft, with cylinders arranged radially around the crankshaft.

radially symmetrical (rā'dē-ə-lē sĭ-mět'ri-kəl) adj. Having radial symmetry; actinomorphic.

radial symmetry (rā'dē-əl sĭm'ĭ-trē) n. Symmetrical arrangement of constituents, especially of radiating parts, about a central point.

radial tire (rā'dē-əl tĭr) n. A pneumatic tire in which the ply cords extending to beads are laid at approximately right angles to the center line of the tread.

ra·di·an (rā'dē-ən) n. Abbr. rad Mathematics. A unit of angular measure equal to the angle subtended at the center of a circle by an arc equal in length to the radius of the circle, approximately 57° 17' 44.6". See Table at measurement.

[RADI(US) + -AN¹.]

ra·di·ance (rā'dē-əns) also ra·di·an·cy (-ən-sē) n. 1. The quality or state of being radiant. 2. Physics. The radiant energy emitted per unit time in a specified direction by a unit area of an emitting surface.

ra·di·ant (rā'dē-ənt) adj. 1. Emitting heat or light. 2. Consisting of or emitted as radiation: radiant heat. 3. a. Filled with light; bright. b. Glowing; beaming. See Synonyms at bright. — n. 1. An object or a point from which light or heat rays are emitted. 2. Astronomy. The apparent celestial origin of a meteoric shower. [Middle English, from Latin radiāns, radiant- present participle of radiāre, to radiate. See RADIATE.] — ra'di·ant·ly adv.

radiant energy (rā'dē-ənt ěn'ər-jē) n. Physics. Energy transferred by radiation, especially by an electromagnetic wave.

radiant flux (rā'dē-ənt flŭks) n. Physics. The rate of flow of radiant energy.

ra·di·ate (rā'dē-āt') v. ra·di·at·ed, ra·di·at·ing, ra·di·ates. — v. intr. 1. To send out rays or waves. 2. To issue or emerge in rays or waves: Heat radiated from the stove. 3. To extend in straight lines from or toward a center; diverge or converge like rays: Spokes radiate from a wheel hub. 4. Ecology. To spread into new habitats and thereby diverge or diversify. Used of a group of organisms. — v. tr. 1. To emit (light, for example) in or as if in rays. 2. To send or spread out from or as if from a center: a cactus that radiates spines. 3. To irradiate or illuminate (an object). 4. To manifest in a glowing manner: a leader who radiates con- fidence. — adj. (-ĭt) 1. Botany. Having rays or raylike parts, as in the flower heads of daisies. 2. Biology. Characterized by radial symmetry. 3. Surrounded with rays: a radiate head on a coin. [Latin radiāre, radiāt-, to emit beams, from radius, ray.] —ra'di-a'tive adj.

ra-di-a-tion (rā'dē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of radiating: the radiation of heat and light from a burning body. 2. Physics. a. Emission and propagation of energy in the form of rays or waves. b. Energy radiated or transmitted in the form of rays, waves, or particles. c. A stream of particles or electromagnetic waves emitted by the atoms and molecules of a radioactive substance as a result of nuclear decay. 3. Anatomy. Radial arrangement of parts, as of a group of nerve fibers connecting different areas of the brain. 4. a. Ecology. The spread of a group of organisms into new habitats. b. Adaptive radiation.

ra-di-a-tion-al cool-ing (rā'dē-ā'shə-nəl kōō'līng) n. The cooling of the earth's surface and the air near the surface, occurring chiefly at night and caused by heat loss engendered by terrestrial radiation.

radiation sickness (rā'dē-ā'shən sĭk'nĭs) n. Illness induced by ionizing radiation, ranging in severity from nausea, vomiting, headache, and diarrhea to loss of hair and teeth, reduction in red and white blood cell counts, extensive hemorrhaging, sterility, and death.

ra-di-a-tor (rā'dē-ā'tər) n. 1. A heating device consisting of a series of connected pipes, typically inside an upright metal structure, through which steam or hot water is circulated so as to radiate heat into the surrounding space. 2. A cooling device, as in automotive engines, through which water or other fluids circulate as a coolant. 3. Physics. A body that emits radiation. 4. A transmitting antenna.

rad-i-cal (răd'ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Arising from or going to a root or source; basic: a radical flaw in a plan; chose the radical solution of starting all over again. 2. Departing markedly from the usual or customary; extreme: radical opinions on education. 3. Favoring or effecting fundamental or revolutionary changes in current practices, conditions, or institutions: radical political views. 4. Linguistics.

Of or being a root: a radical form. 5. Botany. Arising from the root or its crown: radical leaves. — n. 1. One who advocates fundamental or revolutionary changes in current practices, conditions, or institutions: radicals seeking to overthrow the social order. 2. Abbr. rad. Mathematics. The root of a quantity as indicated by the radical sign. 3. Symbol R An atom or a group of atoms with at least one unpaired electron. 4. Abbr. rad. Linguistics. See root¹ (n., sense 8). [Middle English, of a root, from Late Latin rādicālis, having roots, from Latin rādīx, rādīc-, root. See wrād- in Appendix.] —rad'i-cal-ly adv. —rad'i-cal-ness n.

radical expression (răd'ĭ-kəl ĭk-sprēsh'ən) n. Mathematics. An expression or form in which radical signs appear.

rad·i·cal·ism (răd'ī-kə-līz'əm) n. 1. The doctrines or practices of radicals.

2. The quality of being radical.

rad·i·cal·ize (răd'ī-kə-līz') v. tr. rad·i·cal·ized, rad·i·cal·iz·ing, rad·i·cal·iz·es. To make radical or more radical: "Many, probably most, of those have been radicalized by their experiences among the poor" (Conor Cruise O'Brien). —rad'·i·cal·i·za'tion (-kə-lī-zā'shən) n.

radical sign (răd'ī-kəl sīn) n. Mathematics. 1. The sign $\sqrt{\quad}$ placed before a quantity, indicating extraction of the root designated by a raised integer. When extracting a square root, the raised integer is customarily omitted. 2. The radical sign together with a horizontal bar extending from its top to the end of the expression from which a root is to be extracted.

rad·i·cand (răd'ī-kănd') n. Mathematics. The quantity under a radical sign. For example, 3 is the radicand of $\sqrt{3}$. [Latin rādīcandum, neuter gerundive of rādīcāre, to take root, from rādīx, rādīc-, root. See RADICAL.]

ra·dic·chi·o (rə-dē'kē-ō, ră-) n. pl. ra·dic·chi·os. Any of several prized varieties of chicory, having red or red-spotted leaves that form globose or elongated heads. [Italian, from Old Italian, chicory, from Vulgar Latin rādīculum*, from Latin rādīcula, diminutive of rādīx, rādīc-, root. See RADISH.]

rad·i·ces (răd'ī-sēz', ră'dī-) n. A plural of radix.

rad·i·cle (răd'ī-kəl) n. 1. Botany. The part of a plant embryo that develops into a root. 2. Anatomy. A small structure, such as a fibril of a nerve, that resembles a root. [Latin rādīcula, diminutive of rādīx, rādīc-, root. See wrad- in Appendix.]

ra·di·i (ră'dē-ī') n. A plural of radius.

ra·di·o (ră'dē-ō) n. pl. ra·di·os. Abbr. rad. 1. The wireless transmission through space of electromagnetic waves in the approximate frequency range from 10 kilohertz to 300,000 megahertz. 2. Communication of audible signals encoded in electromagnetic waves. 3. Transmission of programs for the public by radio broadcast. 4. a. An apparatus used to transmit radio signals; a transmitter. b. An apparatus used to receive radio signals; a receiver. c. A complex of equipment capable of transmitting and receiving radio signals. 5. a. A station for radio transmitting. b. A radio broadcasting organization or network of affiliated organizations. c. The radio broadcasting industry. 6. A message sent by radio. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: radio stations; radio programs. — v. ra·di·oed, ra·di·o·ing, ra·di·os. — v. tr. 1. To transmit by radio: radio a message to headquarters. 2. To transmit a message to by radio: radioed the spacecraft. — v. intr. To transmit messages or a message by radio: a ship radioing for help. [Short for RADIOTELEGRAPHY.]

radio- or radi- pref. 1. Radiation; radiant energy: radiometer. 2. Radioactive: radiochemistry. 3. Radio: radiotelephone. [From RADIATION.]

ra·di·o·ac·tive (ră'dē-ō-ăk'tīv) adj. Of or exhibiting radioactivity.

—ra'di·o·ac'tive·ly adv.

radioactive decay (rā'dē-ō-āk'tiv dī-kā') n. Spontaneous disintegration of a radioactive substance accompanied by emission of ionizing radiation in the form of particles and gamma rays.

radioactive series (rā'dē-ō-āk'tiv sîr'ēz) n. A group of isotopes representing various stages of radioactive decay in which the heavier members of the group are transformed into successively lighter ones, the lightest being stable.

ra·di·o·ac·tiv·i·ty (rā'dē-ō-āk-tiv'ī-tē) n. 1. Spontaneous emission of radiation, either directly from unstable atomic nuclei or as a consequence of a nuclear reaction. 2. The radiation, including alpha particles, nucleons, electrons, and gamma rays, emitted by a radioactive substance.

radio astronomy (rā'dē-ō ə-strŏn'ə-mē) n. The branch of astronomy that deals with detection and study of celestial objects and phenomena by means of the radio waves emitted by these objects and phenomena. —radio astronomer n.

radio beacon (rā'dē-ō bē'kən) n. A fixed radio transmitter that broadcasts distinctive signals as a navigational aid.

radio beam (rā'dē-ō bēm) n. A focused beam of radio signals transmitted by a radio beacon to guide aircraft or ships.

ra·di·o·bi·ol·o·gy (rā'dē-ō-bī-ŏl'ə-jē) n. 1. The study of the effects of radiation on living organisms. 2. The use of radioactive tracers to study biological processes. —ra'di·o·bi'o·log'i·cal (-ə-lŏj'ī-kəl) adj. —ra'di·o·bi-ol'o·gist n.

ra·di·o·broad·cast (rā'dē-ō-brŏd'kăst') v. tr. intr. ra·di·o·broad·cast or ra·di·o·broad·cast·ed, ra·di·o·broad·cast·ing, ra·di·o·broad·casts. To broadcast or be broadcast by radio. —ra'di·o·broad'cast'er n.

ra·di·o·car·bon (rā'dē-ō-kăr'bən) n. A radioactive isotope of carbon, especially carbon 14.

radiocarbon dating (rā'dē-ō-kăr'bən dā'ting) n. Carbon dating.

ra·di·o·chem·is·try (rā'dē-ō-kēm'ī-strē) n. The chemistry of radioactive materials. —ra'di·o·chem'i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj.

radio compass (rā'dē-ō kŭm'pəs) n. A navigational aid consisting of an automatic radio receiver that determines the transmission direction of incoming radio waves.

ra·di·o·e·col·o·gy (rā'dē-ō-ī-kŏl'ə-jē) n. The study of the effects of radiation and radioisotopes on an ecological population or community. —ra'di·o·ec'o·log'i·cal (-ĕk'ə-lŏj'ī-kəl) adj. —ra'di·o·e·col'o·gist n.

ra·di·o·el·e·ment (rā'dē-ō-ĕl'ə-mənt) n. A naturally occurring or artificially produced radioactive element.

radio frequency (rā'dē-ō frē'kwən-sē) n. Abbr. RF 1. The frequency of the waves transmitted by a specific radio station. 2. A frequency in the range within which radio waves may be transmitted, from about 10 kilocycles per second to about 300,000 megacycles per second. The radio frequency groups are: very low frequency (vlf), 10 to 30 kilohertz; low frequency (lf), 30 to 300 kilohertz; medium frequency (mf), 300 to 3,000 kilohertz; high frequency (hf), 3,000 to 30,000 kilohertz; very high frequency (vhf), 30 to 300 megahertz; ultrahigh frequency (uhf), 300 to 3,000 megahertz; superhigh frequency (shf), 3,000 to 30,000 megahertz; extremely high frequency (ehf), 30,000 to 300,000 megahertz.

radio galaxy (rā'dē-ō gāl'ək-sē) n. A galaxy emitting large amounts of radio energy.

ra·di·o·ge·nic (rā'dē-ō-jěn'ik) adj. Relating to or caused by radioactivity.

ra·di·o·gram (rā'dē-ō-grām') n. 1. A message transmitted by wireless telegraphy. 2. A radiograph.

ra·di·o·graph (rā'dē-ō-grāf') n. An image produced on a radiosensitive surface, such as a photographic film, by radiation other than visible light, especially by x-rays passed through an object or by photographing a fluoroscopic image.

Also called shadowgraph, skiagram, skiagraph. — v. tr. ra·di·o·graphed, ra·di·o·graph·ing, ra·di·o·graphs. To make a radiograph of.

—ra'di·og'ra·pher (-ōg'rə-fər) n. —ra'di·o·graph'ic adj.

—ra'di·o·graph'i·cal·ly adv.

ra·di·og·ra·phy (rā'dē-ōg'rə-fē) n. The process by which radiographs are made. Also called skiagraphy ra·di·o·im·mu·no·as·say (rā'dē-ō-īm'yə-nō-ās'ā, -īm-yō-/-) n. Abbr. RIA

The immunoassay of a radiolabeled substance, such as a hormone or an enzyme.

ra·di·o·im·mu·nol·o·gy (rā'dē-ō-īm'yə-nōl'ə-jē) n. The study of immunity by radiolabeling and other radiological methods.

—ra'di·o·im'mu·no·log'i·cal (-nə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj.

ra·di·o·i·o·dine (rā'dē-ō-ī'ə-dīn') n. A radioactive isotope of iodine widely used as a tracer in medical diagnosis.

ra·di·o·i·so·tope (rā'dē-ō-ī'sə-tōp') n. A naturally or artificially produced radioactive isotope of an element.

ra·di·o·la·bel (rā'dē-ō-lā'bəl) v. tr. ra·di·o·la·beled or ra·di·o·la·belled, ra·di·o·la·bel·ing or ra·di·o·la·bel·ing, ra·di·o·la·bels or ra·di·o·la·bels. To tag (a hormone, an enzyme, or other substance) with a radioactive tracer. — n.
A radioactive isotope used as a tracer; a radiotracer.

ra·di·o·lar·i·an (rā'dē-ō-lār'ē-ən) n. Any of various marine protozoans of the order Radiolaria, having rigid siliceous skeletons and spicules. [From New Latin Radiolāria, order name, from Late Latin radiolus, diminutive of radius, ray.]

ra·di·o·lo·ca·tion (rā'dē-ō-lō-kā'shən) n. Detection of distant objects, such as ships or aircraft, by radar.

ra·di·ol·o·gy (rā'dē-ōl'ə-jē) n. 1. The branch of medicine that deals with the use of radioactive substances in diagnosis and treatment of disease. 2. The use of ionizing radiation for medical diagnosis, especially the use of x-rays in medical radiography or fluoroscopy. 3. The use of radiation for the scientific examination of material structures; radioscopy. —ra'di-o-log'i-cal (-ə-lŏj'ī-kəl), ra'di-o-log'ic (-lŏj'īk) adj. —ra'di-o-log'i-cal-ly adv. —ra'di-ol'o-gist n. ra-di-o-lu-cent (rā'dē-ō-lŏ'sənt) adj. Allowing the passage of x-rays or other radiation; not radiopaque. —ra'di-o-lu'cen-cy n. ra-di-ol-y-sis (rā'dē-ŏl'ī-sīs) n. pl. ra-di-ol-y-ses (-sēz'). Molecular decomposition of a substance as a result of radiation. —ra'di-o-lyt'ic (-ə-līt'īk) adj.

ra-di-o-man (rā'dē-ō-män') n. A radio technician or operator. ra-di-om-e-ter (rā'dē-ŏm'ī-tər) n. 1. A device that measures the intensity of radiant energy, consisting of a partially evacuated glass bulb containing lightweight vertical vanes, each blackened on one side, suspended radially about a central vertical axis to permit their revolution about the axis as a result of incident radiation. 2. An instrument that detects electromagnetic radiation.
—ra'di-om'e-try n. ra-di-o-mi-met-ic (rā'dē-ō-mī-mět'īk) adj. Having effects on living tissue similar to those produced by radiation: a radiomimetic chemical.
ra-di-o-nu-clide (rā'dē-ō-nŏ'klīd', -nyŏ'-) n. A nuclide that exhibits radio-activity.
ra-di-o-paque (rā'dē-ō-pāk') adj. Not allowing the passage of x-rays or other radiation. —ra'di-o-pac'i-ty (-ŏ-päs'ī-tē) n. ra-di-o-phar-ma-ceu-ti-cal (rā'dē-ō-fär'mə-sŏ'tī-kəl) n. A radioactive compound used in radiotherapy or diagnosis. —ra'di-o-phar'ma-ceu'ti-cal adj.
ra-di-o-phone (rā'dē-ō-fŏn') n. A radiotelephone. —ra'di-o-phon'ic (- fŏn'īk) adj.
ra-di-o-pho-to (rā'dē-ō-fŏ'tŏ) n. A radiophotograph.
ra-di-o-pho-to-graph (rā'dē-ō-fŏ'tŏ-gräf') n. A photograph transmitted by radio waves, each image point being reproduced by a received electric impulse.
—ra'di-o-pho-tog'ra-phy (-fə-tŏg'rə-fē) n. ra-di-o-pro-tec-tion (rā'dē-ō-prə-tĕk'shən) n. Protection against the harmful effects of radiation. —ra'di-o-pro-tec'tive adj.
ra-di-os-co-py (rā'dē-ŏs'kə-pē) n. Examination of the inner structure of optically opaque objects by x-rays or other penetrating radiation; radiology.
—ra'di-o-scop'ic (-ŏ-skŏp'īk), ra'di-o-scop'i-cal (-ī-kəl) adj.
ra-di-o-sen-si-tive (rā'dē-ō-sĕn'sī-tĭv) adj. Sensitive to the action of radiation. Used especially of living structures. —ra'di-o-sen'si-tiv'i-ty n. ra-di-o-sonde (rā'dē-ō-sŏnd') n. An instrument carried aloft, chiefly by balloon, to gather and transmit meteorological data. [RADIO + French sonde, sounding line (from Old French, from Old English sund(rāp), sounding (line), from sund, sea).]

radio spectrum (rā'dē-ō spēk'trəm) n. The entire range of electromagnetic communications frequencies, including those used for radio, radar, and television; radio-frequency spectrum.

ra·di·o·tel·e·graph (rā'dē-ō-těl'ī-grāf') n. Transmission of messages by radiotelegraphy. —ra'di·o·tel'e·graph'ic adj.

ra·di·o·te·leg·ra·phy (rā'dē-ō-tə-lĕg'rə-fĕ) n. Telegraphy in which messages are transmitted by radio instead of wire.

ra·di·o·tel·e·phone (rā'dē-ō-těl'ə-fōn') n. Abbr. RT A telephone in which audible communication is established by use of a two-way radio transmitter and receiver. Also called wireless telephone —ra'di·o·tel'e·phon'ic (-fōn'ik) adj. —ra'di·o·te·leph'o·ny (-tə-lĕf'ə-nĕ) n.

radio telescope (rā'dē-ō tĕl'ī-skōp') n. A device used in radio astronomy for detecting and recording radio waves coming from stars and other celestial objects, consisting of a radio receiver with an antenna fixed on a wide bowl-shaped reflector that collects the waves.

ra·di·o·ther·a·py (rā'dē-ō-thĕr'ə-pĕ) n. pl. ra·di·o·ther·a·pies. Treatment of disease with radiation, especially by selective irradiation with x-rays or other ionizing radiation and by ingestion of radioisotopes. —ra'di·o·ther'a·pist n.

ra·di·o·tho·ri·um (rā'dē-ō-thōr'ē-əm, -thōr'-) n. A radioactive isotope of thorium with mass number 228.

ra·di·o·tox·ic (rā'dē-ō-tōk'sik) adj. Of, relating to, or being a radioactive substance that is toxic to living cells or tissues: the radiotoxic effects of radium on bone. —ra'di·o·tox·ic'i·ty (-tōk-sis'ī-tĕ) n.

ra·di·o·trac·er (rā'dē-ō-trā'sər) n. A radioactive tracer.

radio wave (rā'dē-ō wāv) n. An electromagnetic wave within the range of radio frequencies.

rad·ish (rād'ish) n. 1. A Eurasian plant (Raphanus sativus) having a fleshy, edible root and white to purple flowers clustered in a terminal raceme. 2. The pungent root of this plant, eaten raw as an appetizer and in salads. [Middle English radiche, from Old English rædic, from Latin rādīx, rādīc-, root. See wrad- in Appendix.]

Rad·is·son (rā-dē-sōN'), Pierre Esprit. 1636?-1710?. French explorer whose expedition to Hudson Bay and subsequent reports of the economic opportunity there led to the chartering of the Hudson Bay Company (1670).

ra·di·um (rā'dē-əm) n. Symbol Ra A rare, brilliant white, luminescent, highly radioactive metallic element found in very small amounts in uranium ores, having 13 isotopes with mass numbers between 213 and 230, of which radium 226 with a half-life of 1,622 years is the most common. It is used in cancer radiotherapy, as a neutron source for some research purposes, and as a constituent of luminescent paints. Atomic number 88; melting point 700°C; boiling point 1,737°C; valence 2. [Latin radius, ray + -IUM.]

radium therapy (rā'dē-əm thēr'ə-pē) n. The use of radium in radiotherapy, especially in treating cancer.

ra·di·us (rā'dē-əs) n. pl. ra·di·i (-dē-ī') or ra·di·us·es. 1. Abbr. R, r, rad.

Mathematics. a. A line segment that joins the center of a circle with any point on its circumference. b. A line segment that joins the center of a sphere with any point on its surface. c. A line segment that joins the center of a regular polygon with any of its vertices. d. The length of any such line segment. 2. A circular area measured by a given radius: every family within a radius of 25 miles of the city center. 3. A bounded range of effective activity or influence: the operating radius of a helicopter. 4. A radial part or structure, such as a mechanically pivoted arm or the spoke of a wheel. 5. Anatomy. a. A long, prismatic, slightly curved bone, the shorter and thicker of the two forearm bones, located on the lateral side of the ulna. b. A similar bone in many vertebrates. [Latin, ray.]

radius vector (rā'dē-əs vēk'tər) n. 1. Mathematics. a. A line segment that joins the origin and a variable point in a system of polar or spherical coordinates. b. The length of such a line segment. 2. Astronomy. A straight line connecting the center of the sun or another body with the center of a planet, comet, or another body orbiting around it.

ra·dix (rā'dīks) n. pl. rad·i·ces (răd'ī-sēz', rā'dī-) or ra·dix·es. 1. Biology. A root or point of origin. 2. Abbr. rad. Mathematics. The base of a system of numbers, such as 2 in the binary system and 10 in the decimal system. [Latin rādīx, root. See wrād- in Appendix.]

RADM or R.Adm. abbr. Rear admiral.

Ra·dom (rā'dôm) A city of east-central Poland south of Warsaw. Founded in the 14th century, it passed to Austria in 1795 and to Russia in 1815, reverting to Poland after World War I. Population, 213,500.

ra·dome (rā'dôm) n. A domelike shell transparent to radio-frequency radiation, used to house a radar antenna. [RA(DAR) + DOME.]

ra·don (rā'dôn) n. Symbol Rn A colorless, radioactive, inert gaseous element formed by the radioactive decay of radium. It is used as a radiation source in radiotherapy and to produce neutrons for research. Its most stable isotope is Rn 222 with a half-life of 3.82 days. Atomic number 86; melting point -71°C ; boiling point -61.8°C ; specific gravity (solid) 4. [RAD(IUM) + -ON².]

rad·u·la (răj'ōō-lə) n. pl. rad·u·lae (-lē'). Zoology. A flexible tonguelike organ in certain mollusks, having rows of horny teeth on the surface. [Latin rādula, scraper, from rādere, to scrape. See rēd- in Appendix.] —rad'u·lar adj.

Rae (rā), John. 1813-1893. British explorer who charted much of the Canadian Arctic coast.

Rae·burn (rā'bərn), Sir Henry. 1756-1823. British portrait painter whose many subjects included Sir Walter Scott, David Hume, and James Boswell.

Rae·der (rā'dər), Erich. 1876-1960. German admiral who commanded the German navy (1928-1943) and advocated submarine warfare during World War II.

RAF also R.A.F. abbr. Royal Air Force.

raf·fi·a also raph·i·a (răf'ē-ə) n. 1. An African palm tree (Raphia ruffia) having large leaves that yield a useful fiber. 2. The leaf fibers of this plant, used for mats, baskets, and other products. [Malagasy rafia.]

raf·fi·nate (răf'ə-nāt') n. The portion of an original liquid that remains after other components have been dissolved by a solvent. [French raffiner, to refine; see RAFFINOSE + -ATE².]

raf·fi·nose (răf'ə-nōs') n. A white crystalline sugar, C₁₈H₃₂O₁₆·5H₂O, obtained from cottonseed meal, sugar beets, and molasses. [French, from raffiner, to refine : re-, again (from Old French); see RE- + affiner, to refine (from Old French : a-, to from Latin ad-; see ad- + fin, fine from Old French); see FINE¹.]

raff·ish (răf'ish) adj. 1. Cheaply or showily vulgar in appearance or nature; tawdry. 2. Characterized by a carefree or fun-loving unconventionality; rakish. [Probably from dialectal raff, rubbish, from Middle English raf, perhaps of Scandinavian origin.] —raff'ish·ly adv. —raff'ish·ness n.

raf·fle¹ (răf'əl) Games. n. A lottery in which a number of persons buy chances to win a prize. [Middle English rafle, a game using dice, from Old French, act of seizing, dice game, perhaps of Germanic origin.] —raf'fle v. —raf'fler n.

raf·fle² (răf'əl) n. Rubbish; debris. [Probably from French rafle, act of seizing, from Old French. See RAFFLE¹.]

Raf·fles (răf'əlz), Sir Thomas Stamford. 1781-1826. British colonial administrator who acquired Singapore for the East India Company (1819) and founded a settlement there.

raf·fle·sia (ră-flē'zhə) n. Any of various parasitic plants of the genus Rafflesia of tropical Asia, having small, brownish, scalelike leaves and fleshy, apetalous, foul-smelling flowers of various sizes. The species R. arnoldii has the largest flowers among all flowering plants, often measuring up to 1 meter (40 inches) in diameter. [New Latin, genus name, after Sir Thomas Stamford RAFFLES.]

Ra·fi·nesque (ră-fē-něsk') also Ra·fi·nesque-Schmaltz (-shmälts), Constantine Samuel. 1783-1840. French-American naturalist whose thoughts on the origin of plant species presaged Darwin's theory of evolution.

raft¹ (răft) n. 1. A flat structure, typically made of planks, logs, or barrels, that floats on water and is used for transport or as a platform for swimmers. 2. A flat-bottomed inflatable craft for floating or drifting on water: shooting the rapids in a rubber raft. — v. raft·ed, raft·ing, rafts. — v. tr. 1. To convey on a raft. 2. To make into a raft. — v. intr. To travel by raft. [Middle English, from Old Norse rapttr, beam, rafter.]

raft² (räft) n. Informal. A great number, amount, or collection: asked a raft of questions. [Alteration of dialectal raff, rubbish, from Middle English raf. See RAFFISH.]

raft-er¹ (räf'tər) n. One who travels by raft.

raf-ter² (räf'tər) n. One of the sloping beams that supports a pitched roof.

[Middle English, from Old English ræfter.] —raf'tered adj.

rag¹ (räg) n. 1. a. A scrap of cloth. b. A piece of cloth used for cleaning, washing, or dusting. 2. rags. Threadbare or tattered clothing. 3. Cloth converted to pulp for making paper. 4. A scrap; a fragment. 5. Slang. A newspaper, especially one specializing in sensationalism or gossip. 6. The stringy central portion and membranous walls of a citrus fruit. [Middle English ragge, from Old English ragg*, from Old Norse rögg*, woven tuft of wool.]

rag² (räg) v. tr. ragged, rag-ging, rags. 1. Slang. To tease or taunt. See Synonyms at banter. 2. Slang. To berate; scold. 3. Chiefly British. To play a joke on. — n. Chiefly British. A practical joke; a prank. [Origin unknown.]

rag³ (räg) n. 1. A roofing slate with one rough surface. 2. Chiefly British. A coarsely textured rock. [Origin unknown.]

rag⁴ (räg) Music. v. tr. ragged, rag-ging, rags. To compose or play (a piece) in ragtime. — n. A piece written in ragtime. [Perhaps from RAGGED.]

ra-ga (rä'gə) n. Music. A traditional form in Hindu music, consisting of a theme that expresses an aspect of religious feeling and sets forth a tonal system on which variations are improvised within a prescribed framework of typical progressions, melodic formulas, and rhythmic patterns. [Sanskrit rāgaḥ, color, musical mode.]

rag-a-muf-fin (räg'ə-müf'in) n. A shabbily clothed, dirty child. [Middle English Ragamuffyn, a personal name : probably raggi, ragged (from ragge, rag); see RAG¹ + Middle Dutch moffel, muffe, mitten; see MUFF².]

WORD HISTORY: Perhaps ragamuffin should be seen as an example of melioration, or improvement in the sense of a word, since it can now be used rather affectionately of children who are normally far from dirty or unkempt. In any event, even its use for an unkempt child or man represents something of an improvement over one of its earliest uses. Ragamuffin was a name given to a demon in Piers Plowman, an allegorical poem of the 14th century. This name was once thought to be the source of our word, but researches at the Middle English Dictionary have shown that the word was used as the last name of a woman, Isabella Ragamuffyn, earlier in the 14th century (1344), before the poem was composed. The word even then had the sense “ragged lout, tattered oaf,” though it was found only in names. The element raga- is probably from the Middle English adjective raggi, “ragged,” also used of the devil in the sense “shaggy” and as a name. The element -muffin is probably from Middle Dutch moffel or muffe, “mitten.”

rag-bag (răg'băg') n. 1. A bag for storing rags. 2. A motley collection; a hodgepodge.

rage (rāj) n. 1. a. Violent, explosive anger. See Synonyms at anger. b. A fit of anger. 2. Furious intensity, as of a storm or disease. 3. A burning desire; a passion. 4. A current, eagerly adopted fashion; a fad or craze: when torn jeans were all the rage. — v. intr. ragged, rag-ing, rag-es. 1. To speak or act in violent anger: raged at the mindless bureaucracy. 2. To move with great violence or intensity: A storm raged through the mountains. 3. To spread or prevail forcefully: The plague raged for months. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin rabia, from Latin rabiēs, from rabere, to be mad.]

rag-ged (răg'id) adj. 1. Tattered, frayed, or torn: clothes as ragged as a scarecrow's. 2. Dressed in tattered or threadbare clothes: a ragged tramp. 3. Unkempt or shaggy. 4. Having an irregular surface or edge; uneven or jagged in outline: a column of text set with a ragged right margin. 5. Imperfect; uneven: a ragged performance. 6. Harsh; rasping: a ragged cough. [Middle English, from ragge, rag. See *RAG*¹.] — rag'ged-ly adv. — rag'ged-ness n.

ragged edge (răg'id ěj) n. 1. The edge of a cliff. 2. A dangerous or precarious position; a brink: "the gray, grainy, complex nature of existence and the ragged edges of our lives as we actually live them" (A. Bartlett Giamatti).

ragged robin (răg'id rōb'in) n. A European perennial plant (Lychnis flos-cuculi) having opposite, clasping leaves, and panicles of reddish or white flowers with deeply lobed petals. Also called cuckooflower rag-ged-y (răg'i-dē) adj. rag-ged-i-er, rag-ged-i-est. Tattered or worn-out; ragged.

ra-gi (răg'ē) n. pl. ra-gis. See finger millet. [Hindi rāgī, from Sanskrit, perhaps of Dravidian origin.]

rag-lan (răg'lən) adj. Having or being a sleeve that extends in one piece to the neckline of the garment, with slanted seams from the armhole to the neck. — n. A garment, such as an overcoat or a sweater, that has raglan sleeves. [After Fitzroy James Henry Somerset (1788-1855), First Baron Raglan, British field marshal.]

rag-man (răg'măn') n. A man who collects and sells rags.

ra-gout (ră-gōō') n. A well-seasoned meat or fish stew, usually with vegetables. [French ragoût, from ragoûter, to revive the taste, from Old French ragouster: re-, re- + a, to (from Latin ad); see AD- + gost, taste (from Latin gustus); see geus- in Appendix.]

rag picker (răg pĭk'ər) n. One who makes a living scavenging rags and other refuse.

rag-tag (răg'tăg') adj. 1. Shaggy or unkempt; ragged. 2. Diverse and disorderly in appearance or composition: "They're a small ragtag army of racketeers, bandits, and murderers" (Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.).

ragtag and bobtail (răg'tăg' ənd bōb'tāl') n. The lowest social class; the rabble.

rag-time (răg'tīm') n. Music. A style of jazz characterized by elaborately syncopated rhythm in the melody and a steadily accented accompaniment. [From RAG⁴.]

rag-top (răg'tōp') n. Slang. A convertible automobile.

rag trade (răg trād) n. Slang. The garment industry.

Ra-gu-sa (rə-gōō'zə, ră-gōō'zä) 1. A city of southeast Sicily, Italy, south-southwest of Messina. It is a manufacturing and food-processing center. Population, 53,000. 2. See Dubrovnik.

rag-weed (răg'wēd') n. 1. Any of various weeds of the genus Ambrosia having small, greenish, unisexual flower heads and producing abundant pollen that is one of the chief causes of hay fever. 2. Chiefly British. Ragwort. [From the ragged shape of its leaves.]

rag-wort (răg'wûrt', -wôrt') n. Any of several plants of the very large genus Senecio in the composite family, having yellow flower heads, especially S. aureus of eastern North America and S. jacobaea of Europe. [From the ragged shape of its leaves.]

rah (ră) interj. Used as an exclamation of approval or encouragement. [Short for HURRAH.]

rah-rah (ră'ră') adj. Informal. Ardently enthusiastic. [Reduplication of RAH.]

Rah-way (rô'wā') A city of northeast New Jersey south-southwest of Elizabeth on the Rahway River. Settled c. 1720, Rahway is a manufacturing center. Population, 25,325.

Ra-ia-te-a (rī'ə-tā'ə) A volcanic island of the southern Pacific Ocean west-northwest of Tahiti. It is the largest of the Leeward group of the Society Islands in French Polynesia. Migration of its people to Hawaii, the Cook Islands, and New Zealand is believed to have begun some 600 years ago.

raid (rād) n. 1. A surprise attack by a small armed force. 2. Sudden, forcible entry into a place by police: a raid on a gambling den. 3. An entrance into another's territory for the purpose of seizing goods or valuables. 4. A predatory operation mounted against a competitor, especially an attempt to lure away the personnel or membership of a competing organization. 5. An attempt to seize control of a company, as by acquiring a majority of its stock. 6. An attempt by speculators to drive stock prices down by coordinated selling. — v. raid-ed, raid-ing, raids. — v. tr. To make a raid on. — v. intr. To conduct a raid or participate in one. [Scots, raid on horseback, from Middle English rade, from Old English rād, a riding, road. See reidh- in Appendix.] — raid'er n.

WORD HISTORY: The members of an army traveling on a particular road to carry out a raid probably would not draw a connection between the two words.

However, raid and road descend from the same Old English word rād. The ai in raid represents the standard development in the northern dialects of Old English long a, while the oa in road represents the standard development of Old English long a in the rest of the English dialects. Old English rād meant “the act of riding” and “the act of riding with a hostile intent; that is, a raid,” senses that no longer exist for our word road. It was left to Sir Walter Scott to revive the Scots form raid with the sense “a military expedition on horseback.” The Scots weren’t making all the raids, however. Others seem to have returned the favor, for we find these words in the Middle English Coventry Leet Book: “aftur a Rode... made uppon the Scottes at thende of this last somer.” The “Rode” was led by the non-Scottish Duke of Gloucester, who was later crowned as Richard III, and Henry Percy, Duke of Northumberland.

rail¹ (rāl) n. 1. a. A bar extending horizontally between supports, as in a fence. b. A structure made of such bars and supports and forming a barrier or guard; a railing. 2. A steel bar used, usually in pairs, as a track for railroad cars or other wheeled vehicles. 3. The railroad as a means of transportation: goods transported by rail. 4. A horizontal piece of wood in a door or in paneling. — v. tr. railed, rail-ing, rails. To supply or enclose with rails or a rail. [Middle English raile, from Old French reille, from Latin rēgula, straight piece of wood, ruler. See reg- in Appendix.]

rail² (rāl) n. Any of various marsh birds of the family Rallidae, characteristically having brownish plumage and short wings adapted only for short flights. [Middle English raile, from Old French raale, perhaps from Old French raler, racler, to scrape, from Old Provençal rasclar. See RACLETTE.]

rail³ (rāl) v. intr. railed, rail-ing, rails. To express objections or criticisms in bitter, harsh, or abusive language. See Synonyms at scold. [Middle English railen, from Old French railler, to tease, joke, from Old Provençal ralhar, to chat, joke, from Vulgar Latin ragulāre*, to bray, from Late Latin ragere.] — rail'er n.

rail-bird (rāl'bûrd') n. Slang. A horseracing enthusiast, especially one who watches races at the outer rail of the track.

rail-car (rāl'kâr') n. A railroad car.

rail fence (rāl fěns) n. A fence of split logs secured to stakes or laid across each other at an angle.

rail-head (rāl'hěd') n. 1. The farthest point on a railroad to which rails have been laid. 2. A place on a railroad where military supplies are unloaded.

rail-ing (rāl'līng) n. 1. a. A structure made of rails and upright members that is used as a guard or barrier or for support. b. The upper rail of such a structure. 2. Rails considered as a group.

rail-ler-y (rā'lə-rē) n. pl. rail-ler-ies. 1. Good-natured teasing or ridicule; banter. 2. An instance of bantering or teasing. [French raillerie, from Old French railler, to tease. See RAIL³.]

rail-road (rāl'rōd') n. Abbr. RR, R.R., r., R. 1. A road composed of parallel steel rails supported by ties and providing a track for locomotive-drawn trains or other wheeled vehicles. 2. A system of railroad track, together with the land, stations, rolling stock, and other related property under one management. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: railroad lines; railroad ties. — v. rail-road-ed, rail-road-ing, rail-roads. — v. tr. 1. To transport by railroad. 2. To supply (an area) with railroads. 3. Informal. a. To rush or push (something) through quickly in order to prevent careful consideration and possible criticism or obstruction: railroad a special-interest bill through Congress. b. To convict (an accused person) without a fair trial or on trumped-up charges. — v. intr. To work for a railroad company. — rail/road'er n.

railroad flat (rāl'rōd' flăt) n. An apartment in which the rooms are connected in a line.

rail-road-ing (rāl'rō'dĩng) n. The construction or operation of railroads.

rail-split-ter (rāl'splīt'ər) n. One that splits logs for fences.

rail-way (rāl'wā') n. Abbr. rwy., ry., r., R. 1. A railroad, especially one operated over a limited area: a commuter railway. 2. A track providing a runway for wheeled equipment. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: railway stops; railway lines.

rai-ment (rā'mənt) n. Clothing; garments. [Middle English, short for araiment, from Old French arement, array, from areer, arrayer, to array. See ARRAY.]

Rai-mon-di (rī-mōn'dē, -mōn'-), Marcantonio. 1480?-1534?. Italian engraver noted for his reproductions of the works of Raphael.

rain (rān) n. 1. a. Water condensed from atmospheric vapor and falling in drops. b. A fall of such water; a rainstorm. c. The descent of such water. d. Rainy weather. e. rains. A rainy season. 2. A heavy or abundant fall: a rain of fluffy cottonwood seeds; a rain of insults. — v. rained, rain-ing, rains. — v. intr. 1. To fall in drops of water from the clouds. 2. To fall like rain: Praise rained down on the composer. 3. To release rain. — v. tr. 1. To send or pour down. 2. To give abundantly; shower: rain gifts; rain curses upon their heads. — phrasal verb. rain out. To force the cancellation or postponement of (an outdoor event) because of rain. — idiom. rain cats and dogs. Informal. To rain very heavily. [Middle English, from Old English rēn, regn.] — rain/less adj.

rain-bow (rān'bō') n. 1. a. An arc of all seven spectral colors appearing in the sky opposite the sun as a result of the refractive dispersion of sunlight in drops of rain or mist. b. A similar arc or band, as one produced by a prism or by iridescence. c. A graded display of colors. 2. An illusory hope: chasing the rainbow of overnight success. 3. A diverse assortment or collection. [Middle English, from Old English rēnboga : rēn, rain + boga, bow; see BOW³.]

rainbow cactus (rān' bō' kāk'təs) n. Either of two tall, spiny, cylindrical varieties of cactus of the southwest United States and Mexico, Echinocereus pectinatus var. neomexicanus having yellow flowers or E. pectinatus var. rigidissimus having showy magenta flowers.

rainbow trout (rān' bō' trout) n. A North American food fish (Salmo gairdneri) having a reddish longitudinal band and black spots.

rain check (rān chĕk) n. 1. A ticket stub entitling the holder to admission to a future event if the scheduled event is canceled because of rain. 2. An assurance to a customer that an item on sale that is sold out or out of stock may be purchased later at the sale price. 3. A promise that an unaccepted offer will be renewed in the future: declined the invitation to dinner, but asked for a rain check.

rain-coat (rān' kōt') n. A waterproof or water-resistant coat.

rain date (rān dāt) n. A second date scheduled for an outdoor event in case rain forces cancellation of the first date.

rain-drop (rān' drōp') n. A drop of rain.

Rai-ney (rā'nē), Gertrude Pridgett. Known as "Ma Rainey." 1886-1939. American singer considered the first great blues vocalist.

rain-fall (rān' fōl') n. 1. A shower or fall of rain. 2. The quantity of water, expressed in inches, precipitated as rain, snow, hail, or sleet in a specified area and time interval.

rain forest (rān fōr' ist) n. A dense evergreen forest occupying a tropical region with an annual rainfall of at least 2.5 meters (100 inches).

rain gauge also rain gage (rān gāj) n. A device for measuring rainfall. Also called pluviometer, udometer.

Rai-nier III (rā-nîr', rē-, rə-, rē-nyā'), Born 1923. Prince of Monaco (since 1949) who married the American actress Grace Kelly in 1956.

Rai-nier (rə-nîr', rā-), Mount. A volcanic peak, 4,395.1 m (14,410 ft) high, of the Cascade Range in west-central Washington. It is the highest point in the range and the highest elevation in the state.

rain lily (rān lîl' ē) n. See zephyr lily.

rain-mak-er (rān' mā' kər) n. 1. Slang. One who is known for achieving excellent results, as in business or politics. 2. One who is supposedly capable of producing rain.

rain-mak-ing (rān' mā' kĭng) n. 1. The process of producing or attempting to produce rain, as by magic. 2. Informal. Cloud seeding.

rain-out (rān' out') n. An event, such as an athletic contest, that has been rained out.

rain-spout (rān' spout') n. Chiefly Pennsylvania & Chiefly New Jersey. See gutter (n., sense 2). See Regional note at gutter.

rain-squall (rān'skwōl') n. A squall accompanied by rain.

rain-storm (rān'stōrm') n. A storm accompanied by rain.

rain-wash (rān'wōsh', -wōsh') Geology. n. Rock debris transported downhill by rain. — v. tr. rain--washed, rain--wash-ing, rain--wash-es. To wash (material) down a slope by rain.

rain-wat-er (rān'wō'tər, -wōt'ər) n. Water that has fallen as rain and contains little dissolved mineral matter.

Rain-wat-er (rān'wō'tər, -wōt'ər), L(eo) James. 1917-1986. American physicist. He shared a 1975 Nobel Prize for discovering the asymmetry of atomic nuclei.

rain-wear (rān'wâr') n. Waterproof clothing.

rain-y (rā'nē) adj. rain-i-er, rain-i-est. Characterized by, full of, or bringing rain. — rain'i-ness n.

Rain-y Lake (rā'nē lāk) A lake of northern Minnesota and southwest Ontario, Canada, drained by the Rainy River, which flows about 129 km (80 mi) generally westward along the U.S.-Canadian border to Lake of the Woods.

rainy day (rā'nē dā) n. A time of need or trouble.

Rai-pur (rī'pūr) A city of east-central India east of Nagpur. It is a trade and processing center in an agricultural district. Population, 338,245.

raise (rāz) v. raised, rais-ing, rais-es. — v. tr. 1. To move to a higher position; elevate: raised the loads with a crane. See Synonyms at lift. 2. To set in an upright or erect position: raise a flagpole. 3. To erect or build: raise a new building. 4. To cause to arise, appear, or exist: The slap raised a welt. 5. To increase in size, quantity, or worth: raise an employee's salary. 6. To increase in intensity, degree, strength, or pitch: raised his voice. 7. To improve in rank or dignity; promote: raised her to management level. 8. a. To grow, especially in quantity; cultivate: raise corn and soybeans. b. To breed and care for to maturity: raise cattle. c. To bring up; rear: raise children. 9. To put forward for consideration: raised an important question. See Synonyms at broach¹. 10. To voice; utter: raise a shout. 11. a. To awaken; arouse: noise that would raise the dead. b. To stir up; instigate: raise a revolt. c. To bring about; provoke: remarks intended to raise a laugh. 12. To make contact with by radio: couldn't raise the control tower after midnight. 13. To gather together; collect: raise money from the neighbors for a charity. 14. To cause (dough) to puff up. 15. To end (a siege) by withdrawing troops or forcing the enemy troops to withdraw. 16. To remove or withdraw (an order). 17. Games. a. To increase (a poker bet). b. To bet more than (a preceding bettor in poker). c. To increase the bid of (one's bridge partner).

18. Nautical. To bring into sight by approaching nearer: raised the Cape. 19. To alter and increase fraudulently the written value of (a check, for example).

20. To cough up (phlegm). 21. Scots. To make angry; enrage. — v. intr. Games. To increase a poker bet or a bridge bid. — n. 1. The act of raising or increasing.

2. An increase in salary. —idioms. raise Cain (or raise the devil) (or raise hell). 1. To behave in a rowdy or disruptive fashion. 2. To reprimand someone angrily. raise eyebrows. To cause surprise or mild disapproval. raise the stakes. To increase one's commitment or involvement. [Middle English raisen, from Old Norse reisa.] —rais'er n.

raised (rāzd) adj. 1. Projecting from a flat background; in relief; embossed: a raised design. 2. Made light and high by yeast or other leaven.

rai-sin (rā'zīn) n. A sweet grape dried either in the sun or by artificial means. [Middle English, from Old French, grape, from Vulgar Latin racīmus*, from Latin racēmus, bunch of grapes.]

Rai-sin River (rā'zīn rīv'ər) A river, about 185 km (115 mi) long, of southeast Michigan flowing generally eastward to Lake Erie.

rai-son d'ê-tre (rā'zōn dēt'rə, rě-zōN) n. pl. rai-sons d'ê-tre (rā'zōn, rě-zōN). Reason or justification for existing. [French : raison, reason + de, of, for + être, to be.]

raj (rāj) n. Dominion or rule, especially the British rule over India (1757-1947). [Hindi rāj, from Sanskrit rājā, king. See reg- in Appendix.]

ra-ja (rā'jə) n. Variant of rajah.

Raj-ab (rūj'əb) n. The seventh month of the year in the Muslim calendar. See Table at calendar. [Arabic rajab.]

Ra-ja-go-pa-la-cha-ri (rā'jə-gō-pā'lā-chār'ē), Chakravarti. 1879-1972. Indian politician who served as India's first native-born governor-general (1948-1950).

ra-jah or ra-ja (rā'jə) n. A prince, chief, or ruler in India or the East Indies. [Hindi rājā, from Sanskrit, king. See reg- in Appendix.]

Ra-jah-mun-dry (rā'jə-mōōn'drē) A city of eastern India on the Godavari River east of Hyderabad. A pilgrimage center, it has timber and tobacco industries. Population, 203,358.

Raj-kot (rāj'kōt') A city of western India west-southwest of Ahmadabad. Formerly the capital of a princely state, it is now an educational center and a transportation hub. Population, 445,076.

Raj-put also Raj-poot (rāj'pōōt) n. A member of any of several powerful Hindu landowning and military lineages inhabiting northern and central India. [Hindi rājput, from Sanskrit rājaputraḥ, king's son : rājā, king; see RAJAH + putraḥ, son.]

rake¹ (rāk) n. 1. A long-handled implement with a row of projecting teeth at its head, used especially to gather leaves or to loosen or smooth earth. 2. A device that resembles such an implement. — v. raked, rak-ing, rakes. — v. tr.

1. To gather or move with or as if with a rake: rake leaves; rake in the gambling chips. 2. To smooth, scrape, or loosen with a rake or similar implement: rake the soil for planting. 3. Informal. To gain in abundance: suddenly began raking in the money. 4. To search or examine thoroughly; ransack. 5. To scrape; scratch. 6. To aim heavy gunfire along the length of. — v. intr. 1. To use a rake. 2. To conduct a thorough search: raked through the files for the misplaced letter.

—phrasal verb. rake up. To revive or bring to light; uncover: rake up old gossip. [Middle English, from Old English raca. See reg- in Appendix.] —rak'er n.

rake² (rāk) n. An immoral or dissolute person; a libertine. [Short for RAKEHELL.]

rake³ (rāk) v. intr. tr. raked, rak-ing, rakes. To slant or cause to incline from the perpendicular: propeller blades that rake backward from the shaft; rake a ship's mast. — n. 1. Inclination from the perpendicular: the rake of a jet plane's wings. 2. The angle between the cutting edge of a tool and a plane perpendicular to the working surface to which the tool is applied. [Origin unknown.]

rak·ee (rāk'ē, rā'kē, rā'kə) n. Variant of raki.

rake·hell (rāk'hěl') n. A dissolute person; a rake. [Possibly by folk-etymology from obsolete rackle, headstrong, from Middle English rakel, perhaps from raken, to go.]

rake-off (rāk'ôf', -ôf') n. Informal. A percentage or share of the profits of an enterprise, especially one given or accepted as a bribe. [From the rake used by a croupier in a gambling house.]

rak·i also rak·ee (rāk'ē, rā'kē, rā'kə) n. pl. rak·is also rak·ees. A brandy of Turkey and the Balkans, distilled from grapes or plums and flavored with anise. [Turkish rāqī, from Arabic 'araq, arrack.]

rak·ish¹ (rā'kīsh) adj. 1. Nautical. Having a trim, streamlined appearance: "We were schooner-rigged and rakish, with a long and lissome hull" (John Masefield).

2. Dashing or sportingly stylish; jaunty. [Probably from RAKE³ (from the raking masts of pirate ships).]

rak·ish² (rā'kīsh) adj. Of the character of a rake; dissolute.

rale also râle (rāl) n. An abnormal or pathological respiratory sound. [French râle, from râler, to make a rattling sound in the throat, from Old French racler, to scrape, rattle. See RACLETTE.]

Ra·leigh (rô'lē, rā'-) The capital of North Carolina, in the east-central part of the state southeast of Durham. Selected as the capital in 1788, the city was laid out in 1792. Population, 207,951.

Raleigh or Ra·legh (rô'lē, rā'-), Sir Walter. 1552?-1618. English courtier, navigator, colonizer, and writer. A favorite of Elizabeth I, he campaigned in Ireland and Cádiz, explored Guiana, colonized Virginia, and introduced tobacco and the potato to Europe. Convicted of treason by James I, he was released for another expedition to Guiana and executed after its failure. His literary works include poetry, memoirs, and a world history.

Ra·lik Chain (rā'līk chān) The western group of the Marshall Islands in the western Pacific Ocean. The chain comprises 3 coral islands and 15 atolls, including Eniwetok.

ral·len·tan·do (răl'ən-tăn'dō, răl'lĕn-tăn'dō) Music. adv. & adj. Abbr. rall.

Gradually slackening in tempo; ritardando. Used chiefly as a direction. — n. pl.

ral·len·tan·dos. A rallentando passage or movement. [Italian, present participle of rallentare, to slow down : re-, intensive pref. (from Latin); see RE- + allentare, to slow down (from Late Latin allentāre : Latin ad-, ad- + Latin lentus, slow).]

ral·li·form (răl'ə-fōrm') adj. Relating to or resembling the rail, a marsh bird.

[New Latin Rallus, rail genus (from French râle, rail, from Old French raale); see *RAIL*² + -FORM.]

ral·ly¹ (răl'ē) v. ral·lied, ral·ly·ing, ral·lies. — v. tr. 1. To call together for a common purpose; assemble: rally troops at a parade ground. 2. To reassemble and restore to order: rally scattered forces. 3. To rouse or revive from inactivity or decline: paused to refresh themselves and rally their strength. — v. intr. 1. To come together for a common purpose. 2. To join in an effort for a common cause: "In the terror and confusion of change, society rallied round the kings" (Garrett Mattingly). 3. To recover abruptly from a setback or disadvantage: The stock market declined, then rallied. The home team rallied in the ninth inning to win the game. 4. To show sudden improvement in health or spirits. 5. Sports. To exchange several strokes before a point is won, as in tennis. — n. pl. ral·lies.

1. A gathering, especially one intended to inspire enthusiasm for a cause: a political rally. 2. a. A reassembling, as of dispersed troops. b. The signal ordering this reassembly. 3. An abrupt recovery from a setback or disadvantage. 4. A sharp improvement in health, vigor, or spirits. 5. A notable rise in stock market prices and trading volume after a decline. 6. Sports. a. An exchange of several strokes, before a point is won, as in tennis. b. A competition in which automobiles are driven over public roads and under normal traffic regulations but with specified rules as to speed, time, and route. [French rallier, from Old French ralier : re-, re- + alier, to unite, ally; see ALLY.]

ral·ly² (răl'ē) v. ral·lied, ral·ly·ing, ral·lies. — v. tr. To tease good-humoredly; banter. — v. intr. To engage in good-humored teasing or jesting. [French railler, from Old French, to tease. See *RAIL*³.]

ralph (rălf) v. intr. ralphed, ralph·ing, ralphs. Slang. To vomit. [Imitative.]

ram (răm) n. 1. A male sheep. 2. Any of several devices used to drive, batter, or crush by forceful impact, especially: a. A battering ram. b. The weight that drops in a pile driver or steam hammer. c. The plunger or piston of a force pump or hydraulic press. 3. A hydraulic ram. 4. a. A projection on the prow of a warship, used to batter or cut into enemy vessels. b. A ship having such a projection. — v. tr. rammed, ram·ming, rams. 1. To strike or drive against with a heavy impact; butt: rammed the door with a sledgehammer until it broke open. 2. To force or press into place. 3. To cram; stuff: rammed the clothes into the suitcase. 4. To force passage or acceptance of: rammed the project through the city council despite local opposition. [Middle English, from Old English ramm.] —ram/mer n.

Ram (räm) n. See Aries.

RAM abbr. 1. Computer Science. Random-access memory. 2. Also R.A.M..
Royal Academy of Music.

Ra·ma (rä'mə) n. Hinduism. A deified hero worshiped as an incarnation of Vishnu.

Rama VII, Originally Pra·ja·dhi·pok (prə-chä'tī-pök') 1893-1941. King of Siam (1925-1935) who abdicated after failing to suppress the newly formed constitutional government.

ra·ma·da (rə-mä'də) n. Southwestern U.S. 1. An open porch. 2. An openwork trellis, constructed over a walkway, onto which climbing plants are trained.

[Spanish, from rama, branch, from Vulgar Latin rāma*, from Latin rāmus. See RAMIFY.]

REGIONAL NOTE: One of the words Spanish contributed to the English of the American Southwest is ramada, a term for an open porch. Ramada can also mean an openwork trellis constructed over a walkway onto which climbing plants are trained; this sense illustrates the derivation of the word from Spanish rama, meaning “branch”—hence ramada, “arbor, mass of branches.” The suffix -ada in Spanish denotes “a place characterized by (something).” Ramada might have remained a relatively obscure regional word were it not for its adoption in the name of a national chain of motels.

Ram·a·dan (räm'ə-dän', räm'ə-dän') n. 1. The ninth month of the year in the Muslim calendar. See Table at calendar. 2. A fast, held from sunrise to sunset, that is carried out during this period. [Arabic Ramaḍān, from ramaḍ, dryness.]

Ra·man (rä'mən), Sir Chandrasekhara Venkata. 1888-1970. Indian physicist. He won a 1930 Nobel Prize for his discovery of the Raman effect.

Raman effect (rä'mən ĩ-fěkt') n. Physics. The alteration in frequency and random alteration in phase of light passing through a transparent medium.

[After Sir Chandrasekhara Venkata RAMAN.]

Ra·ma's Bridge (rä'məz brīj) See Adam's Bridge.

ra·mate (rä'mät') adj. Having branches; branched. [Latin rāmus, branch; see RAMUS + -ATE¹.]

Ra·mat Gan (rə-mät' gän', rə'mät) A city of west-central Israel, a suburb of Tel Aviv-Jaffa. Its diamond exchange was founded in 1921. Population, 116,500.

ram·ble (räm'bəl) v. intr. ram·bled, ram·bling, ram·bles. 1. To move about aimlessly. See Synonyms at wander. 2. To walk about casually or for pleasure. 3. To follow an irregularly winding course of motion or growth. 4. To speak or write at length and with many digressions. — n. A leisurely, sometimes lengthy walk. [Probably from Middle Dutch rammelen*, to wander about in a state of sexual desire, from rammen, to copulate with.]

ram·bler (räm'blər) n. 1. One that rambles: tourists and Sunday ramblers on the village streets; a conversational Rambler. 2. A type of climbing rose having numerous red, pink, or white flowers.

ram·bling (räm'blɪŋ) adj. 1. Often or habitually roaming; wandering.

2. Extended over an irregular area; sprawling: a large rambling country estate.

3. Lengthy and digressive: a rambling speech. —ram'bling-ly adv.

Ram·bo (räm'bō) n. pl. Ram·bos. Slang. An extremely aggressive person who feels no qualms about defying rules, regulations, or the law in order to right a perceived wrong. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a Rambo mentality; Rambo motorists. [After John Rambo, character in American films.]

Ram·bouil·let (räm'boō-lā, räm'boō-yā') n. Any of a breed of merino sheep of French origin, raised for wool and meat. [After Rambouillet, a town of north-central France.]

ram·bunc·tious (räm-büŋk'shəs) adj. Boisterous and disorderly. [Probably alteration of robustious, rumbustious, from ROBUST.] —ram·bunc'tious-ly adv. —ram·bunc'tious-ness n.

WORD HISTORY: The origins of rambunctious are not clearly established, a situation that may be better understood after looking at the evidence. The development that is generally accepted is from the word robustious, derived from robust and first recorded in a work written before 1548, to rumbustious, first recorded in 1778, to rambunctious, first recorded in 1830, all three words having more or less the same meaning. But how did robustious lead to rumbustious? It has been suggested that the word rumble played a part in this, although the word rumbustion, meaning “the alcoholic beverage rum,” might also have been involved. The first form in which rambunctious is recorded is rumbunctious, showing how rumbustious was involved in the alteration of robustious to rambunctious, but how the sound indicated by s became that indicated by nc or why the first u became a is a mystery.

ram·bu·tan (räm-boōt'n) n. 1. A tree (Nephelium lappaceum) of southeast Asia, bearing edible oval red fruit with soft spines. 2. The fruit of this tree. [Malay, from rambut, hair (from its hairy covering).]

Ra·meau (rä-mō'), Jean Philippe. 1683-1764. French composer and music theorist known for his treatise on harmony (1722) and his ballets and operas, including Castor et Pollux (1737).

Ra·mée (rä-mā'), Marie Louise de la. Pen name Ouida. 1839-1908. British writer whose romantic novels include Under Two Flags (1867).

ram·e·kin also ram·e·quin (rām'ī-kĭn) n. 1. A cheese preparation made with eggs and bread crumbs or unsweetened puff pastry, baked and served in individual dishes. 2. A small dish used for baking and serving. [French ramequin, perhaps from Dutch dialectal rammeken, toasted bread, or from Low German ramken, diminutive of ram, cream (from Middle Low German rōme).]

Ram·e·ses II also Ram·es·ses II (rām'ī-sēz') or Ram·ses II (rām'sēz'), Known as "Rameses the Great." 14th-13th century B.C. King of Egypt (1304-1237 B.C.) whose reign was marked by the building of numerous monuments. He was probably king during the Jewish exodus from Egypt.

ra·met (rā'mĭt) n. An individual member of a clone. [Latin rāmus, branch; see RAMUS + -ET.]

ra·mi (rā'mī) n. Biology & Anatomy. Plural of ramus.

ram·ie (rām'ē, rā'mē) n. 1. A tropical Asian perennial herb (Boehmeria nivea) having broad leaves and densely branched panicles of small, unisexual, apetalous flowers. 2. The flaxlike fiber from the stem of this plant, used in making fabrics and cordage. [Malay rami.]

ram·i·fi·ca·tion (rām'ə-fĭ-kā'shən) n. 1. A development or consequence growing out of and sometimes complicating a problem, plan, or statement: the ramifications of a court decision. 2. a. The act or process of branching out or dividing into branches. b. A subordinate part extending from a main body; a branch. c. An arrangement of branches or branching parts.

ram·i·form (rām'ə-fōrm') adj. Branching or branchlike. [Latin rāmus, branch; see RAMUS + -FORM.]

ram·i·fy (rām'ə-fī') v. ram·i·fied, ram·i·fy·ing, ram·i·fies. — v. intr. 1. To have complicating consequences or outgrowths: The problem merely ramified after the unsuccessful meeting. 2. To send out branches or subordinate branchlike parts. — v. tr. To divide into or cause to extend in branches or subordinate branchlike parts. [Middle English ramifien, from Old French ramifier, from Medieval Latin rāmificāre: Latin rāmus, branch; see wrād- in Appendix + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] ram·jet (rām'jĕt') n. A jet engine that propels aircraft by igniting fuel mixed with air taken and compressed by the engine in a fashion that produces greater exhaust than intake velocity.

ra·mo·na (rə-mō'nə) n. See sage² (n., sense 1a). [Possibly after Ramona, heroine of a novel by Helen Hunt Jackson.]

Ra·mòn y Ca·jal (rā-môn' ē kā-häl'), Santiago. 1852-1934. Spanish histologist. He shared a 1906 Nobel Prize for research on the structure of the nervous system.

ra·mose (rā'mōs', rə-mōs') adj. Having many branches. [Latin rāmōsus, from rāmus, branch. See wrād- in Appendix.]

ra·mous (rā'məs) adj. 1. Of or resembling branches. 2. Branching; ramose.

[From Latin rāmōsus, ramose. See RAMOSE.]

ramp¹ (rämp) n. 1. An inclined surface or roadway connecting different levels. 2. A mobile staircase by which passengers board and leave an aircraft. 3. A concave bend of a handrail where a sharp change in level or direction occurs, as at a stair landing. [French rampe, from ramper, to slope, rise up, from Old French. See RAMP².]

ramp² (rämp) v. intr. ramped, ramp-ing, ramps. 1. To act threateningly or violently; rage. 2. To assume a threatening stance. 3. Heraldry. To stand in the rampant position. [Middle English rampen, from Old French ramper, to rear, rise up, of Germanic origin.] —ramp n.

ram·page (räm'pāj') n. A course of violent, frenzied action or behavior. — v. intr. ram·paged, ram·pag-ing, ram·pag-es (also räm-pāj'). To move about wildly or violently. [Scots, possibly from RAMP².] —ram·pag'er n.

ram·pa·geous (räm-pā'jəs) adj. Raging; frenzied: “the hot rampageous horses of my will” (W.H. Auden). —ram·pa'geous-ly adv. —ram·pa'geous-ness n.

ram·pant (räm'pənt) adj. 1. Extending unchecked; unrestrained: a rampant growth of weeds in the neglected yard. 2. Occurring without restraint and frequently, widely, or menacingly; rife: a rampant epidemic; rampant corruption in city government. 3. a. Rearing on the hind legs. b. Heraldry. Rearing on the left hind leg with the forelegs elevated, the right above the left, and usually with the head in profile. 4. Architecture. Springing from a support or an abutment that is higher at one side than at the other: a rampant arch. [Middle English rampaunt, from Old French rampant, present participle of ramper, to ramp. See RAMP².] —ram'pan-cy n. —ram'pant-ly adv.

ram·part (räm'pärt', -pərt) n. 1. A fortification consisting of an embankment, often with a parapet built on top. 2. A means of protection or defense; a bulwark. See Synonyms at bulwark. — v. tr. ram·part-ed, ram·part-ing, ram·parts. To defend with a rampart. [French rempart, from Old French, from remparer, to fortify : re-, re- + emparer, to fortify, take possession of (from Old Provençal amparar, from Vulgar Latin ante parāre*, to prepare : Latin ante-, ante- + Latin parāre, to prepare); see perə-¹ in Appendix.]

ram·pike (räm'pīk') n. A standing dead tree or tree stump, especially one killed by fire. [Origin unknown.]

ram·pi·on (räm'pē-ən) n. 1. A biennial Eurasian plant (Campanula rapunculus) having rosette leaves with winged stalks, panicles of lilac-colored flowers, and an edible root used in salads. 2. Any of various similar plants of the genus Phyteuma. [Probably alteration of French raiponce, from Old French responce, from Old Italian raponzo, probably from rapa, turnip, from Latin rāpum.]

Ram·pur (räm'pöör) A city of north-central India east of Delhi. It is a processing and manufacturing center known for its library containing a fine collection of Mogul miniature paintings. Population, 204,610.

ram·rod (rä'm'röd') n. 1. A rod used to force the charge into a muzzleloading firearm. 2. A rod used to clean the barrel of a firearm. 3. A harshly demanding overseer; a disciplinarian. — v. tr. ram·rod·ded, ram·rod·ding, ram·rods.

1. To exert strict control over; supervise closely. 2. To force passage or acceptance of: a group that ramrodded the bill through Congress.

Ram·say (rä'm'zē), Allan. 1686-1758. Scottish poet noted for his patriotic and pastoral works, including the drama The Gentle Shepherd (1725).

Ram·say (rä'm'zē), James Andrew Brown. See Tenth Earl and First Marquis of Dalhousie.

Ram·say (rä'm'zē), Sir William. 1852-1916. British chemist. He won a 1904 Nobel Prize for discovering the inert gases argon, helium, neon, xenon, and krypton.

Ram·ses II (rä'm'sēz') See Rameses II.

Ram·sey (rä'm'zē), Arthur Michael. 1904-1988. British prelate and archbishop of Canterbury (1961-1974).

ram·shack·le (rä'm'shāk'əl) adj. So poorly constructed or kept up that disintegration is likely; rickety: a ramshackle cabin in the woods. [Back-formation from obsolete ranshacked, ramshackle, alteration of ransackled, past participle of ransackle, to ransack, frequentative of Middle English ransaken, to pillage. See RAN-SACK.]

ram's horn (rä'mz hôrn) n. Judaism. A shofar.

ram·son (rä'm'zən, -sən) n. A Eurasian garlic (Allium ursinum) having broad, stalked, oblong to lance-shaped leaves and bulbous roots used in salads and relishes. Often used in the plural. [Middle English ramsyn, from Old English hramsan, pl. of hramsa.]

ram·til (rä'm'til) or ram·til·la (rä'm-til'ə) n. An Ethiopian plant (Guizotia abyssinica) having opposite leaves and rayed, yellow flower heads, grown for its oil-rich seeds. [Hindi rāmtil: Sanskrit rāma-, dark + Sanskrit tilaḥ, sesame.]

ram·u·lose (rä'm'yə-lōs') adj. Having numerous small branches. [Latin rāmulōsus, from rāmulus, diminutive of rāmus, branch. See RAMUS.]

ra·mus (rā'məs) n. pl. ra·mi (-mī'). 1. Biology. A branch, as of a plant, nerve, or blood vessel. 2. Anatomy. A bony process extending like a branch from a larger bone, especially the ascending part of the lower jaw that makes a joint at the temple. [Latin rāmus, branch. See wrad- in Appendix.]

ran (rän) v. Past tense of run.

Ran (rän) n. Mythology. The Norse goddess of the sea.

Ran·ca·gua (rän-kä'gwä, räng-) A city of central Chile south of Santiago. It is primarily an agricultural center in a copper-mining area. Population, 139,925.

ranch (rănch) n. 1. An extensive farm, especially in the western United States, on which large herds of cattle, sheep, or horses are raised. 2. A large farm on which a particular crop or kind of animal is raised: a mink ranch. 3. A house in which the owner of an extensive farm lives. — v. intr. ranch·ed, ranch·ing, ranch·es. To manage or work on a ranch. [American Spanish rancho, small farm, from Spanish, hut, group of people who eat together, from Old Spanish rancharse, to be billeted, from Old French se ranger, to be arranged, from renc, reng, row, line, of Germanic origin. See sker-² in Appendix.]

ranch·er (răn'chər) n. 1. One that owns or manages a ranch. 2. A rectangular house of one story; a ranch house.

ran·che·ri·a (răn'chə-rē'ə) n. Southwestern U.S. 1. a. A Mexican herdsman's hut. b. A village of these huts. 2. A rural Native American settlement. [American Spanish ranchería, from rancho, small farm. See RANCH.]

ran·che·ro (răn-châr'ō) n. pl. ran·che·ros. Southwestern U.S. A ranch owner; a rancher. [American Spanish, from rancho, small ranch. See RANCH.]

ranch house (rănch hous) n. 1. The building on a ranch occupied by its operator. 2. A rectangular, one-story house with a low-pitched roof.

Ran·chi (răn'chē) A city of northeast India west-northwest of Calcutta. It is a manufacturing center and health resort. Population, 489,626.

ranch·man (rănch'mən) n. The owner or manager of a ranch; a rancher.

ranch mink (rănch mīngk) n. A mink bred in captivity from Alaskan and Labrador strains for special pelt colors and qualities.

ran·cho (răn'chō) n. pl. ran·chos. Southwestern U.S. 1. A hut or group of huts for housing ranch workers. 2. A ranch. [American Spanish, small ranch. See RANCH.]

Ran·cho Cor·do·va (răn'chō kôr-dō'və, kôr'də-) A community of north-central California, a suburb of Sacramento. Population, 48,731.

Rancho Cu·ca·mon·ga (răn'chō koō'kə-mūng'gə, -mōng'-) An unincorporated community of southwest California west of San Bernadino. It is in a wine-producing area. Population, 101,409.

Rancho Pal·os Ver·des (răn'chō pāl'ōs vûr'dēz, pāl'əs) A city of southern California on a channel of the Pacific Ocean west of Long Beach. Population, 41,659.

ran·cid (răn'sid) adj. 1. Having the disagreeable odor or taste of decomposing oils or fats; rank. 2. Repugnant; nasty: rancid remarks. [Latin rancidus, past participle of rancēre, to stink, be rotten.] —ran·cid/i·ty, ran'cid·ness n.

ran·cor (răng'kər) n. Bitter, long-lasting resentment; deep-seated ill will. See Synonyms at enmity. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin, rancid smell, from Latin rancēre, to stink, be rotten.] —ran'cor·ous adj. —ran'cor·ous·ly adv. —ran'cor·ous·ness n.

ran·cour (răng'kər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of rancor.

rand (ränd, ränd) n. A basic unit of currency in South Africa and Swaziland. See Table at currency. [Afrikaans, after (Witwaters)rand.]

Rand (ränd) See Witwatersrand.

Rand (ränd), Ayn. 1905-1982. Russian-born American writer primarily known for her polemical novels, such as The Fountainhead (1943), which defend political conservatism.

Ran-dalls-town (rän'dlz-toun') A community of north-central Maryland, a suburb of Baltimore. Population, 26,277.

ran-dan (rän'dän') n. Nautical. 1. A boat designed to be rowed by three persons. 2. The method of rowing such a boat, in which the persons fore and aft use one oar each and the person amidships uses two. [Origin unknown.]

r & b or R & B abbr. Music. Rhythm and blues.

R & D abbr. Research and development.

Rand-ers (rä'nərs) A city of northern Denmark in the eastern part of the Jutland Peninsula north-northwest of Århus. It is a trade and manufacturing center in an agricultural and salmon-fishing area. Population, 61,410.

Ran-dolph (rän'dölf') A town of eastern Massachusetts south-southwest of Quincy. It is mainly residential. Population, 30,093.

Ran-dolph (rän'dölf'), Edmund Jennings. 1753-1813. American Revolutionary leader and public official. A member of the Constitutional Convention (1787), he later served as U.S. attorney general (1789-1794) and secretary of state (1794-1795).

Ran-dolph (rän'dölf'), John. Called "Randolph of Roanoke." 1773-1833.

American politician known for his brilliant oratory and eccentric behavior during his tenure as a U.S. representative (12 terms between 1799 and 1829) and senator (1825-1827) from Virginia.

ran-dom (rän'dəm) adj. 1. Having no specific pattern, purpose, or objective: random movements; a random choice. See Synonyms at chance. 2. Statistics. Of or relating to the same or equal chances or probability of occurrence for each member of a group. —idiom. at random. Without a governing design, method, or purpose; unsystematically: chose a card at random from the deck. [From at random, by chance, at great speed, from Middle English randon, speed, violence, from Old French, from randir, to run, of Germanic origin.] —ran/-dom-ly adv. —ran'/dom-ness n.

ran-dom-ac-cess memory (rän'dəm-äk'sēs mēm'ə-rē) adj. Abbr. RAM Computer Science. A memory device in which information can be accessed in any order.

ran-dom-ize (rän'də-mīz') v. tr. ran-dom-ized, ran-dom-iz-ing, ran-dom-iz-es. To make random in arrangement, especially in order to control the variables in an experiment. —ran'/dom-i-za'tion (-də-mī-zā'shən) n.

—ran'/dom-iz'er n.

random variable (răn'dəm vâ'r'ē-ə-bəl) n. Statistics. A variable whose values are distributed according to a probability distribution.

random walk (răn'dəm wôk) n. Statistics. A series of sequential movements in which the direction and size of each move is randomly determined.

R and R abbr. Rest and recreation.

Rand-wick (rănd'wîk) A city of southeast Australia, a suburb of Sydney on the Pacific Ocean and Botany Bay. Population, 116,600.

ran-dy (răn'dē) adj. ran-di-er, ran-di-est. 1. a. Lascivious; lecherous. b. Of or characterized by frank, uninhibited sexuality. 2. Scots. Ill-mannered. [Possibly from obsolete rand, to rant, from obsolete Dutch randen, ranten.]

ra-nee (ră'nē) n. Variant of rani.

rang (răng) v. Past tense of ring².

range (rănj) n. Abbr. Ra., r., R. 1. a. Extent of perception, knowledge, experience, or ability. b. The area or sphere in which an activity takes place. c. The full extent covered: within the range of possibilities. 2. a. An amount or extent of variation: a wide price range. b. Music. The gamut of tones that a voice or an instrument is capable of producing. 3. a. The maximum extent or distance limiting operation, action, or effectiveness, as of a projectile, an aircraft, a radio signal, or a sound. b. The maximum distance that can be covered by a vehicle with a specified payload before its fuel supply is exhausted. c. The distance between a projectile weapon and its target. 4. A place equipped for practice in shooting at targets. 5. Aerospace. A testing area at which rockets and missiles are launched and tracked. 6. An extensive area of open land on which livestock wander and graze. 7. The geographic region in which a plant or an animal normally lives or grows. 8. The act of wandering or roaming over a large area. 9. Mathematics. The set of all values a given function may take on. 10. Statistics. The difference or interval between the smallest and largest values in a frequency distribution. 11. A class, a rank, or an order: The candidate had broad support from the lower ranges of the party. 12. An extended group or series, especially a row or chain of mountains. 13. One of a series of double-faced bookcases in a library stack room. 14. A north-south strip of townships, each six miles square, numbered east and west from a specified meridian in a U.S. public land survey. 15. A stove with spaces for cooking a number of things at the same time. — v. ranged, rang-ing, rang-es. — v. tr. 1. To arrange or dispose in a particular order, especially in rows or lines. 2. To assign to a particular category; classify. 3. To align (a gun, for example) with a target. 4. a. To determine the distance of (a target). b. To be capable of reaching (a maximum distance). 5. To pass over or through (an area or a region). 6. To turn (livestock) onto an extensive area of open land for grazing. 7. Nautical. To uncoil (an anchor cable) on deck so the anchor may descend easily. — v. intr. 1. To vary within specified limits: ages that ranged from two to five. 2. To extend in a particular direction: a river that ranges to the east. 3. To extend or lie in the same direction: “Whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine” (Shakespeare). 4. To pass over or through an area or a region in or as if in exploration. 5. To wander freely; roam. 6. To live or grow within a particular region. [Middle English, row, rank, from Old French, from rangier, to put in a row, from rang, reng, line, of Germanic origin. See sker-2 in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: range, ambit, compass, orbit, purview, reach, scope, sweep. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an area within which something acts, operates, or has power or control”: the range of a supersonic jet; the ambit of municipal legislation; information not within the compass of this article; countries within the political orbit of a world power; hospital regulations under the purview of the department of health; outside the reach of the law; issues within the scope of an investigation; outside the sweep of federal authority. See also Synonyms at wander range finder also range·find·er (rānj'fīn'dər) n. Any of various optical, electronic, or acoustical instruments used to determine the distance of an object.

—range'find'er adj.

range·land (rānj'länd', -lənd) n. An expanse of land suitable for livestock to wander and graze on.

Range·ley Lake (rānj'lē lāk) A lake of west-central Maine near the New Hampshire border. It and other nearby lakes form a popular resort area.

rang·er (rān'jər) n. 1. A wanderer; a rover. 2. A member of an armed troop employed in patrolling a specific region. 3. Ranger. A member of a group of U.S. soldiers specially trained for making raids either on foot, in ground vehicles, or by airlift. 4. a. A warden employed to maintain and protect a forest or other natural area. b. Chiefly British. The keeper of a royal forest or park.

Ran·goon (rān-gōon', rāng-) Officially (since 1989) Yan·gon (yān'gōn'). The capital and largest city of Burma, in the southern part of the country on the Rangoon River near its outlet in the Irrawaddy River delta. It was a small fishing village until it became the capital of Burmese kings after the 1750's. Further growth was spurred by the British occupation of the city in 1852. Population, 2,458,712.

rang·y (rān'jē) adj. rang·i·er, rang·i·est. 1. Having long, slender limbs. 2. Inclined to rove. 3. Providing ample range; roomy.

ra·ni also ra·nee (rā'nē) n. pl. ra·nis also ra·nees. 1. The wife of a rajah. 2. A reigning Hindu princess or queen. [Hindi rānī, from Sanskrit rājñī, feminine of rājā, rajah. See RAJAH.]

Ran·jit Singh (rūn'jīt sīng'), Known as “the Lion of the Punjab.” 1780-1839. Indian leader of the Sikhs who founded a kingdom uniting the Sikh provinces and maintained an alliance with the British.

rank¹ (rǎngk) n. 1. a. A relative position in a society. b. An official position or grade: the rank of sergeant. c. A relative position or degree of value in a graded group. d. High or eminent station or position: persons of rank. 2. A row, line, series, or range. 3. a. A line of soldiers, vehicles, or equipment standing side by side in close order. b. ranks. The armed forces. c. ranks. Personnel, especially enlisted military personnel. 4. ranks. A body of people classed together; numbers: joined the ranks of the unemployed. 5. Games. Any of the horizontal lines of squares on a chessboard. — v. ranked, rank-ing, ranks. — v. tr. 1. To place in a row or rows. 2. To give a particular order or position to; classify. 3. To out-rank or take precedence over. — v. intr. 1. To hold a particular rank: ranked first in the class. 2. To form or stand in a row or rows. 3. Slang. a. To complain. b. To engage in carping criticism. Often used with on: Stop ranking on me all the time. — idiom. pull rank. To use one's superior rank to gain an advantage. [Middle English, line, row, from Old French ranc, renc, of Germanic origin. See sker-² in Appendix.]

rank² (rǎngk) adj. rank-er, rank-est. 1. Growing profusely or with excessive vigor: rank vegetation in the jungle. 2. Yielding a profuse, often excessive crop; highly fertile: rank earth. 3. Strong and offensive in odor or flavor. 4. Conspicuously offensive: rank treachery. See Synonyms at flagrant. 5. Absolute; complete: a rank amateur; a rank stranger. [Middle English ranc, from Old English, strong, overbearing. See reg- in Appendix.] — rank'ly adv. — rank'ness n.

rank and file (rǎngk ənd fil) n. 1. The enlisted troops, excluding noncommissioned officers, in an army. 2. Those who form the major portion of a group or an organization, excluding the leaders and officers.

rank-and-file (rǎngk'ən-fil') adj. 1. Made up of or coming from the ordinary members of a group, excluding leaders and officers: rank-and-file committees; rank-and-file grievances. 2. Made up of or coming from the common people: a rank-and-file pressure group; political candidates seeking rank-and-file support.

Ran-ke (rǎng'kə), Leopold von. 1795-1886. German historian who pioneered the modern methods of rigorously analyzing firsthand documentation. His written works include The History of the Popes (1834-1836).

rank-er (rǎng'kər) n. Chiefly British. 1. An enlisted soldier. 2. A commissioned officer who has been promoted from enlisted status.

Ran-kin (rǎng'kɪn), Jeannette. 1880-1973. American reformer and politician. A leader in the women's suffrage movement in Montana, her home state, she later was the first woman U.S. representative (1917-1919 and 1941-1943) and the only legislator to oppose U.S. involvement in both World Wars.

Ran-kine scale (rǎng'kɪn skāl) n. A scale of absolute temperature using Fahrenheit degrees, in which the freezing point of water is 491.69° and the boiling point of water is 671.69°. [After William John Macquorn Rankine (1820-1872), Scottish engineer and physicist.]

rank·ing (rǎng/'kɪŋ) adj. Of the highest rank; preeminent.

ran·kle (rǎng/'kəl) v. ran·kled, ran·kling, ran·kles. — v. intr. 1. To cause persistent irritation or resentment. 2. To become sore or inflamed; fester. — v. tr. To embitter; irritate. [Middle English ranclen, from Old French rancler, alteration of draoncler, from draoncle, festering sore, from Latin dracunculus, diminutive of dracō, dracōn-, serpent. See DRAGON.]

WORD HISTORY: A persistent resentment, a festering sore, and a little snake are all coiled together in the history of the word rankle. “A little snake” is the sense of the Latin word dracunculus to which rankle can be traced, dracunculus being a diminutive of dracō, “snake.” The Latin word passed into Old French, as draoncle, having probably already developed the sense “festering sore,” because some of these sores resembled little snakes in their shape or bite. The verb draoncler, “to fester,” was then formed in Old French. The noun and verb developed alternate forms without the d-, and both were borrowed into Middle English, the noun rancl being recorded in a work written around 1190, the verb ranclen, in a work probably composed about 1300. Both words had literal senses having to do with festering sores. The noun is not recorded after the 16th century, but the verb went on to develop the figurative senses having to do with resentment and bitterness with which we are all too familiar.

Rann of Kutch (rǎn ūf kŭch) An extensive salt marsh of western India and southeast Pakistan between the Gulf of Kutch and the Indus River delta. It was the scene of major border disputes in 1965 and 1971.

ran·sack (rǎn/'sǎk') v. tr. ran·sacked, ran·sack·ing, ran·sacks. 1. To search or examine thoroughly. 2. To search carefully for plunder; pillage. [Middle English ransaken, from Old Norse rannsaka : rann, house + saka*, to search, seek; see sāg- in Appendix.] —ran/'sack'er n.

ran·som (rǎn/'səm) n. 1. a. The release of property or a person in return for payment of a demanded price. b. The price or payment demanded or paid for such release. 2. Theology. A redemption from sin and its consequences. — v. tr. ran·somed, ran·som·ing, ran·soms. 1. a. To obtain the release of by paying a certain price. b. To release after receiving such a payment. 2. Theology. To deliver from sin and its consequences. [Middle English ransome, from Old French rançon, from Latin redēptiō, redēptiōn-, a buying back. See REDEMP-TION.] —ran/'som·er n.

Ran·som (rǎn/'səm), John Crowe. 1888-1974. American poet and critic. The founder and editor (1939-1959) of the Kenyon Review, he was a leading proponent of New Criticism. His collections of poetry include Chills and Fevers (1924).

rant (rǎnt) v. rant-ed, rant-ing, rants. — v. intr. To speak or declaim in a violent, loud, or vehement manner; rave. — v. tr. To utter with violence or extravagance: a dictator who ranted his vitriol onto a captive audience. — n.

1. Violent, loud, or extravagant speech. See Synonyms at bombast. 2. Chiefly British. Wild or uproarious merriment. [Probably from obsolete Dutch ranten.]
—rant'er n.

Ran-toul (rǎn-tōol') A village of east-central Illinois north of Champaign. A U.S. military air technical school was established here in 1917. Population, 17,212.

ran-u-la (rǎn'yə-lə) n. A cyst on the underside of the tongue caused by the obstruction of a duct of a salivary gland. [Latin rānula, swelling on the tongue, diminutive of rāna, frog. See RANUNCULUS.]

ra-nun-cu-lus (rə-nŭng'kyə-ləs) n. pl. ra-nun-cu-lus-es or ra-nun-cu-li (-lī'). Any of numerous plants of the genus Ranunculus, including the buttercups. [New Latin Rānunculus, genus name, from Latin rānunculus, a kind of medicinal plant, diminutive of rāna, frog, perhaps of imitative origin.]

rap¹ (rǎp) v. rapped, rap-ping, raps. — v. tr. 1. To hit sharply and swiftly; strike: rapped the table with his fist. 2. To utter sharply: rap out a complaint. 3. To criticize or blame. — v. intr. To strike a quick, light blow: rapped on the door. — n. 1. A quick, light blow or knock. 2. A knocking or tapping sound. 3. Slang. a. A reprimand. b. A sentence to serve time in prison. 4. Slang. A negative quality or characteristic associated with a person or an object. —idioms. beat the rap. Slang. To escape punishment or be acquitted of a charge. take the rap. Slang. To accept punishment or take the blame for an offense or error. [Middle English rappen, possibly of imitative origin.]

rap² (rǎp) v. tr. rapt or rapped (rǎpt), rap-ping, raps. Archaic. 1. past participle. rapt. To enchant or seize with rapture. 2. To snatch. [Back-formation from RAPT.]

rap³ (rǎp) n. Informal. The least bit: I don't give a rap about office politics. I don't care a rap what you do. [From obsolete rap, 18th-century Irish counterfeit half-penny, from Irish Gaelic, alteration (possibly influenced by rap, piece, bit), of rofaire.]

rap⁴ (rǎp) n. 1. Slang. A talk, conversation, or discussion. 2. Music. A form of popular music characterized by spoken or chanted rhyming lyrics with a syncopated, repetitive rhythmic accompaniment. — v. intr. rapped, rap-ping, raps. 1. Slang. To discuss freely and at length. 2. Music. To perform rap. [Possibly from RAP¹.]

Ra-pa (rǎ'pə) An island of the southern Pacific Ocean in southern French Polynesia south-southeast of Tahiti. It was much visited by whalers in the early 19th century.

ra·pa·cious (rə-pā'shəs) adj. 1. Taking by force; plundering. 2. Greedy; ravenous. See Synonyms at voracious. 3. Subsisting on live prey. [From Latin rapāx, rapāc-, from rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.] —ra·pa'cious·ly adv.

—ra·pac'i·ty (rə-pās'ī-tē), ra·pa'cious·ness n.

Ra·pal·lo (rə-pā'lō, rä-päl'-) A city of northwest Italy on the Ligurian Sea. It is a resort on the Italian Riviera. The treaty proclaiming Fiume (now Rijeka) an independent city was signed here by Italy and Yugoslavia in November 1920. Population, 28,318.

Rapa Nu·i (rä'pə nōō'ē) See Easter Island.

rape¹ (rāp) n. 1. The crime of forcing another person to submit to sex acts, especially sexual intercourse. 2. The act of seizing and carrying off by force; abduction. 3. Abusive or improper treatment; violation: a rape of justice. — v. tr. raped, rap·ing, rapes. 1. To force (another person) to submit to sex acts, especially sexual intercourse; commit rape on. 2. To seize and carry off by force. 3. To plunder or pillage. [Middle English, from rapen, to rape, from Old French raper, to abduct, from Latin rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.] —rap'er n.

WORD HISTORY: Although three senses are listed in our entry for the verb rape, it is unlikely that many people think of the word as having more than one sense. The Latin word rapere from which rape comes had an even wider range of meanings, including “to ravish.” It must be kept in mind, however, that most of its senses had to do with the notion of seizing or carrying off and that sexual violation was confined to the one sense. In the case of the Middle English word rapen, taken from Latin rapere, fewer senses existed, but some of them differed quite significantly from any in which we would use the word today. It could mean “to fix or set a certain time” (“The tyme he wild [would] not rape”) or “to carry off somebody to heaven from earth” (“the visions of seynt poul wan [when] he was rapt in to paradys”). The past participle rapt has survived in Modern English, where it has become a separate word referring to states of deep delight or absorption, far removed from the hideous cruelties of rape. The sense involving these cruelties was probably present in Middle English and has largely taken over the word.

rape² (rāp) n. A European plant (Brassica napus) of the mustard family, cultivated as fodder and for its seed that yields a valuable oil. Also called colza, oil-seed rape. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rāpa, turnip.]

rape³ (rāp) n. The refuse of grapes left after the extraction of the juice in wine-making. [French rāpe, grape stalk, from Old French, from rasper, to scrape. See RASP.]

rape oil (rāp oil) n. The edible oil extracted from rapeseed, also used as a lubricant and in the manufacture of various products. Also called rapeseed oil rape·seed (rāp'sēd') n. The seed of the rape plant.

rapeseed oil (rāp'sēd' oil) n. See rape oil.

rape shield law (rāp shēld lô) n. A law that prohibits the defense in a rape case from cross-examination regarding the plaintiff's prior sexual conduct.

ra·phae (rā'fē') n. Plural of raphe.

Raph·a·el¹ (rāf'ē-əl, rā'fē-, rā'fē-əl') n. One of the archangels of Hebrew tradition.

Raph·a·el² (rāf'ē-əl, rā'fē-, rā'fē-əl'), 1483-1520. Italian painter whose works, including religious subjects, portraits, and frescoes, exemplify the ideals of the High Renaissance.

ra·phe also rha·phe (rā'fē) n. pl. ra·phae (-fē'). 1. Anatomy. A seamlike line or ridge between two similar parts of a body organ, as in the scrotum. 2. Botany. The portion of the funiculus that is united to the ovule wall, commonly visible as a line or ridge on the seed coat. 3. The median groove of a diatom valve. [New Latin, from Greek rhaphe, seam, suture, from rhaptein, to sew. See wer-² in Appendix.]

raph·i·a (rāf'ē-ə) n. Variant of raffia.

ra·phide (rā'fid) also ra·phis (-fis) n. pl. raph·i·des (rāf'i-dēz'). Botany. One of a bundle of needlelike crystals of calcium oxalate occurring in many plant cells. [French, sing. of raphides, from New Latin, from Greek raphides, pl. of raphis, needle, from rhaptein, to sew. See wer-² in Appendix.]

rap·id (rāp'ɪd) adj. rap·id·er, rap·id·est. Moving, acting, or occurring with great speed; swift. See Synonyms at fast¹. — n. An extremely fast-moving part of a river, caused by a steep descent in the riverbed. Often used in the plural. [Latin rapidus, from rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.] — ra·pid'·i·ty (rā-pɪd'i-tē), rap'·id·ness (rāp'ɪd-nēs) n. — rap'·id·ly adv.

Rap·id City (rāp'ɪd sɪt'ē) A city of southwest South Dakota west-southwest of Pierre in the eastern part of the Black Hills. It is a trade, transportation, and tourist center. Population, 54,523.

rapid eye movement (rāp'ɪd ī mōv'mənt) n. REM.

rap·id·fire (rāp'ɪd-fɪr') adj. 1. Designed to fire shots in rapid succession: a rapid-fire machine gun. 2. Marked by continuous, rapid occurrence: rapid-fire questions.

rapid transit (rāp'ɪd trān'sɪt) n. An urban passenger transportation system using elevated or underground trains or a combination of both.

ra·pi·er (rā'pē-ər, rāp'yər) n. 1. A long, slender, two-edged sword with a cuplike hilt, used in the 16th and 17th centuries. 2. A light, sharp-pointed sword lacking a cutting edge and used only for thrusting. [French rapière, from Old French (espee) rapiere, rapier (sword).]

rap·ine (răp'īn) n. Forcible seizure of another's property; plunder. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rapīna, from rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.]

rap·ist (rā'pīst) n. One who commits the crime of rape.

Rapp (răp, rāp), George. 1757-1847. German-born American religious leader who founded utopian communities in Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Rap·pa·han·nock (răp'ə-hăn'ək) A river of northeast Virginia rising in the Blue Ridge and flowing about 341 km (212 mi) generally southeast to form a long estuary that empties into Chesapeake Bay.

rap·pa·ree (răp'ə-rē') n. 1. A freebooting soldier of 17th-century Ireland.

2. A bandit or robber. [Irish Gaelic rapaire, variant of rotaire, cutpurse, from ropaid, he stabs.]

rap·pee (ră-pē') n. A strong snuff made from a dark, coarse tobacco. [From French (tabac) râpé, grated (tobacco), past participle of râper, to grate, from Old French rasper, to scrape. See RASP.]

rap·pel (ră-pěl') n. The act or method of descending from a mountainside or cliff by means of a belayed rope that is passed under one thigh and over the opposite shoulder so that it can be payed out smoothly and gradually. — v. intr.

rap·pelled, rap·pel·ing, rap·pels. To descend from a steep height by this method. [French, recall, return, rappel, from Old French, recall, from rapeler, to recall : re-, re- + apeler, to summon; see APPEAL.]

rap·pen (ră'pən) n. pl. rappen. A Swiss centime. [German, from Rappe, raven (in joking reference to the eagle on the original coin), from Middle High German, alteration of rabēn, from Old High German hraban.]

rap·per¹ (răp'ər) n. One that raps or strikes, especially a door knocker.

rap·per² (răp'ər) n. Music. One who performs rap.

rap·port (ră-pôrt', -pōrt', rə-) n. Relationship, especially one of mutual trust or emotional affinity. [French, from Old French, from raporter, to bring back : re-, re- + aporter, to bring (from Latin apportāre : ad-, ad- + portāre, to carry); see per² in Appendix.]

rap·por·teur (răp'ôr-tûr', -tœr') n. One who is designated to give a report, as at a meeting. [Middle English raportour, judge, from Old French raporteur, from raporter, to bring back. See RAPPORT.]

rap·proche·ment (ră'prôsh-măn') n. 1. A reestablishing of cordial relations, as between two countries. 2. The state of reconciliation or of cordial relations. [French, from rapprocher, to bring together : re-, re- + approcher, to approach (from Old French aprochier); see APPROACH.]

rap·scal·lion (răp-skăl'yən) n. A rascal; a scamp. [Alteration of obsolete rascallion, from RASCAL.]

rap session (răp sësh'ən) n. Slang. An informal discussion held especially by a group of people with similar concerns.

rap sheet (răp shēt) n. Slang. A police arrest record.

rapt (răpt) v. Past participle of rap² (v. tr., sense 1). — adj. 1. Deeply moved or delighted; enraptured: listened to the speaker with rapt admiration. 2. Deeply absorbed; engrossed: was rapt in thought all evening. [Middle English, carried away, from Latin raptus, past participle of rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.] —rapt·ly adv.

rap·tor (răp'tər) n. A bird of prey. [Latin, one who seizes, from rapere, to seize. See RAPT.]

rap-to-ri-al (răp-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. 1. Subsisting by seizing prey; predatory. 2. Adapted for the seizing of prey. 3. Of, relating to, or characteristic of birds of prey.

rap·ture (răp'chər) n. 1. The state of being transported by a lofty emotion; ecstasy. 2. Often raptures. An expression of ecstatic feeling. See Synonyms at ecstasy. 3. The transporting of a person from one place to another, especially to heaven. — v. tr. rap·tured, rap·tur·ing, rap·tures. To enrapture. [Obsolete French rapture, abduction, carrying off, from rapt, carried away, from Old French rat, from Latin raptus. See RAPT.]

rap·tur·ous (răp'chər-əs) adj. Filled with great joy or rapture; ecstatic.

—rap'tur·ous·ly adv. —rap'tur·ous·ness n.

ra-ra a·vis (râr'ə ā'vīs) n. pl. ra-ra a·vis·es or ra-rae a·ves (râr'ē ā'vēz). A rare or unique person or thing. [Latin rāra avis: rāra, feminine of rārus, rare + avis, bird.]

rare¹ (râr) adj. rar·er, rar·est. Abbr. r. 1. Infrequently occurring; uncommon: a rare event; a plant that is rare in this region. 2. Excellent; extraordinary: a rare sense of honor; a rare friend. 3. Thin in density: rarefied: rare air. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rārus.] —rare'ness n.

rare² (râr) adj. rar·er, rar·est. Cooked a short time to retain juice and redness: a rare steak. [Middle English rere, lightly boiled, from Old English hrēr. See kerə in Appendix.] —rare'ness n.

rare·bit (râr'bīt) n. Welsh rabbit. [Probably alteration of (WELSH) RABBIT.]

rare earth (râr ūrth) n. 1. Any of various oxides of the rare-earth elements.

2. A rare-earth element.

rare-earth element (râr'ūrth' ěl'ə-mənt) n. Any of the abundant metallic elements of atomic number 57 through 71. Also called lanthanide [So called because they were originally thought to be rare.]

rar·ee show (râr'ē shō) n. 1. See peepshow (n., sense 1). 2. A street show. [Alteration of RARE¹ + SHOW.]

rar·e·fac·tion (râr'ə-făk'shən) n. 1. A decrease in density and pressure in a medium, such as air, caused by the passage of a sound wave. 2. The region in which this occurs. —rar'e·fac'tive adj.

rar·e·fied also rar·i·fied (râr'ə-fīd') adj. 1. Belonging to or reserved for a small, select group; esoteric. 2. Elevated in character or style; lofty.

rar·e·fy also rar·i·fy (râr'ə-fī') v. rar·e·fied, rar·e·fy·ing, rar·e·fies. — v. tr. 1. To make thin, less compact, or less dense. 2. To purify or refine. — v. intr. To become thin or less compact or dense. [Middle English rarefien, from Old French rarefier, from Medieval Latin rārifīcāre, alteration of Latin rārēfacere: rārus, rare + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.] — rar'·e·fi'·a·ble adj.

rare·ly (râr'lē) adv. 1. Not often; infrequently: “The truth is rarely pure and never simple” (Oscar Wilde). 2. In an unusual degree; exceptionally. 3. With uncommon excellence.

USAGE NOTE: Strictly speaking, the use of ever after rarely and seldom is redundant; She rarely ever watches television adds nothing to She rarely watches television. In an earlier survey a large majority of the Usage Panel found this construction unacceptable in formal writing. But ever has been used as an intensive with rarely for several hundred years, and the construction is common in informal contexts. By contrast, the constructions rarely (or seldom) if ever and rarely (or seldom) or never are unexceptionable: She rarely if ever watches television. She rarely or never watches television. See Usage Note at hardly. See Usage Note at redundancy.

rare·ripe (râr'rīp') adj. Ripening early. — n. A fruit or vegetable that ripens early. [Dialectal rare, early (variant of RATHE) + RIPE.]

rar·i·fied (râr'ə-fīd') adj. Variant of rarefied.

rar·i·fy (râr'ə-fī') v. Variant of rarefy.

rar·ing (râr'ing) also rar·in' (-in) adj. Informal. Full of eagerness; enthusiastic. [Present participle of dialectal rare, to rear, variant of REAR².]

Rar·i·tan (râr'i-tən) A river, about 129 km (80 mi) long, formed by the confluence of two tributaries in north-central New Jersey and flowing eastward to Raritan Bay, the western arm of Lower New York Bay, at Perth Amboy.

rar·i·ty (râr'i-tē) n. pl. rar·i·ties. 1. Something rare. 2. The quality or state of being rare; infrequency of occurrence.

Rar·o·ton·ga (râr'ə-tōng'gə) A volcanic island of the southern Pacific Ocean in the southwest Cook Islands. Discovered in the early 1820's by English missionaries, it is the largest and most important island in the group.

ras·bo·ra (răz-bôr'ə, -bôr'ə) n. Any of various tropical fishes of the genus Rasbora, of which several brightly colored species are kept in home aquariums. [New Latin Rasbora, genus name, from a native word in the East Indies.]

ras·cal (răs'kəl) n. 1. One that is playfully mischievous. 2. An unscrupulous, dishonest person; a scoundrel. — adj. Archaic. Made up of, belonging to, or relating to the common people: “Nor shall the Rascal Rabble here have Peace”

(John Dryden). [Middle English rascaile, rabble, commoners, from Old French rascaille, probably from rasque, mud, from Vulgar Latin rāsīcāre*, to scrape. See RASH².] —ras'cal·ly adj.

ras·cal·i·ty (rās-kāl'ī-tē) n. pl. ras·cal·i·ties. 1. Behavior or character typical of a rascal. 2. A base or mischievous act.

Ras Da·shan (rās də-shän') A mountain, 4,623.2 m (15,158 ft) high, in northern Ethiopia. Of volcanic origin, it is the highest peak in the country.

rase¹ (rāz) v. tr. rased, ras·ing, ras·es. To erase. [Middle English rasen, to scrape off, erase. See RAZE.]

rase² (rāz) v. Variant of rase.

rash¹ (rāsh) adj. rash·er, rash·est. 1. Characterized by or resulting from ill-considered haste or boldness. See Synonyms at reckless. 2. Archaic. Quick in producing a strong or marked effect. [Middle English rasche, active, perhaps from Old English -raesc (in līgræsc, lightning), or from Middle Dutch or Middle Low German rasch.] —rash'ly adv. —rash'ness n.

rash² (rāsh) n. 1. A skin eruption. 2. An outbreak of many instances within a brief period: a rash of burglaries. [Possibly from obsolete French rache, a sore, from Old French rasche, scurf, from raschier, to scrape, scratch, from Vulgar Latin rāsīcāre*, from Latin rāsus, past participle of rādere. See rēd- in Appendix.]

rash·er (rāsh'ər) n. 1. A thin slice of fried or broiled bacon. 2. A dish or an order of thin slices of fried or broiled bacon. [Origin unknown.]

Rasht (rāsht) also Resht (rēsht) A city of northwest Iran near the Caspian Sea east-southeast of Tabriz. It is a trade and silk-producing center. Population, 260,000.

Rask (rāsk, rās-k), Rasmus Christian. 1787-1832. Danish philologist who was a founder of comparative linguistics.

Ras·mus·sen (rās'mə-sən, rās'mōōs-ən), Knud Johan Victor. 1879-1933. Danish ethnologist and Arctic explorer who conducted extensive research on Eskimo culture and heritage.

ra·so·ri·al (rə-zôr'ē-əl, -zōr'-, -sôr'-, -sôr'-) adj. Characteristically scratching the ground for food. Used of chickens and similar birds. [From Late Latin rāsōr, scraper, from Latin rāsus, past participle of rādere, to scrape. See rēd- in Appendix.]

rasp (rāsp) v. rasped, rasp·ing, rasps. — v. tr. 1. To file or scrape with a coarse file having sharp projections. 2. To utter in a grating voice. 3. To grate on (nerves or feelings). — v. intr. 1. To scrape harshly; grate. 2. To make a harsh, grating sound. — n. 1. A coarse file with sharp, raised, pointed projections. 2. The act of filing with a rasp. 3. A harsh, grating sound. [Middle English raspen, from Middle Dutch raspen, and Old French rasper of Germanic origin.] —rasp'er n. —rasp'ing·ly adv.

rasp·ber·ry (răz'běr'ē) n. 1. Any of various shrubby, usually prickly plants of the genus Rubus in the rose family, such as R. idaeus var. strigosus of eastern North America and R. idaeus of Europe, that bear edible fruit. 2. The aggregate fruit of any of these plants, consisting of many small, fleshy, usually red drupelets. 3. Color. A moderate to dark or deep purplish red. 4. Slang. A derisive or contemptuous sound made by vibrating the extended tongue and the lips while exhaling. [Obsolete raspis, raspberry + BERRY. Sense 4, possibly short for raspberry tart rhyming slang for FART.]

Ras·pu·tin (răs-pyōō'tin, rə-spōō'tyĭn), Grigori Efimovich. 1872?-1916. Russian starets whose magnetic personality and relative success in the treatment of the czarévich's hemophilia gained him favor in the court of Nicholas II. He was assassinated by noblemen who feared that his licentious manner and ignorance would undermine the monarchy.

rasp·y (răs'pē) adj. rasp·i·er, rasp·i·est. Rough; grating.

Ras·ta (ră'stə, răs'tə) n. 1. A Rastafarian. 2. Rastafarianism. — adj. Rastafarian.

Ras·ta·far·i·an (răs'tə-făr'ē-ən, răs'tə-făr'-) n. An adherent of Rastafarianism. — adj. Of or relating to Rastafarianism or its adherents.

Ras·ta·fa·ri·an·ism (ră'stə-făr'ē-ə-nĭz'əm, răs'tə-făr'-) n. A religious sect originating in Jamaica whose members worship Haile Selassie as savior and regard Africa, especially Ethiopia, as the Promised Land. [After Ras Tafari, former name of Haile Selassie : Amharic ras, head, prince + Amharic tafari, to be feared.]

rat (răt) n. 1. a. Any of various long-tailed rodents resembling mice but larger, especially one of the genus Rattus. b. Any of various animals similar to one of these long-tailed rodents. 2. Informal. A despicable, sneaky person, especially one who betrays or informs upon associates. 3. A pad of material, typically hair, worn as part of a woman's coiffure to puff out her own hair. — v. intr. rat·ted, rat·ting, rats. 1. To hunt for or catch rats, especially with the aid of dogs.

2. Slang. To desert or betray one's comrades by giving information: ratted on his best friend to the police. [Middle English, from Old English ræt.]

rat·a·ble (ră'tə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be rated, estimated, or appraised: ratable income. 2. Proportional. 3. Chiefly British. Liable to assessment; taxable.

—rat'a·bil'i·ty, rat'a·ble·ness n. —rat'a·bly adv.

rat·a·bles (ră'tə-bəlz) pl.n. 1. Income from property taxes: netted the city over $30 million in new ratables. 2. Properties or buildings, especially those used for commercial purposes, that provide tax income for local government: constructed a total of $10 million in new ratables.

rat·a·fi·a (răt'ə-fē'ə) also rat·a·fee (-ə-fē') n. 1. A sweet cordial flavored with fruit kernels or almonds. 2. A biscuit flavored with ratafia. [French, perhaps of West Indian Creole origin.]

Ra-tak Chain (rä'täk' chān) The eastern group of the Marshall Islands in the western Pacific Ocean. The chain comprises 2 coral islands and 14 atolls, including Bikini.

rat·a·plan (rät'ə-plän') n. A tattoo, as of a drum, the hoofs of a galloping horse, or machine-gun fire. [French, of imitative origin.]

rat-a-tat-tat (rät'ə-tät'tät') n. A series of short, sharp sounds, as that made by knocking on a door. [Imitative.]

ra-ta-tou-ille (rät'ə-tōō'ē, rä'tä-) n. A vegetable stew, usually made with eggplant, tomatoes, zucchini, peppers, and onions, seasoned with herbs and garlic, and served hot or cold. [French, from alteration of toillier, touiller, to stir, mix. See TOIL¹.]

rat-bite fever (rät'bīt' fē'vər) n. Either of two infectious diseases contractible from the bite of a rat, specifically: a. A disease caused by the bacterium Streptobacillus moniliformis and characterized by skin inflammation, back and joint pains, headache, and vomiting. b. A disease caused by the bacterium Spirillum minus and characterized by ulceration at the site of the bite, a purplish rash, and recurrent fever.

rat cheese (rät chēz) n. Cheddar.

ratch-et (räch'īt) n. 1. A mechanism consisting of a pawl that engages the sloping teeth of a wheel or bar, permitting motion in one direction only. 2. The pawl, wheel, or bar of this mechanism. — v. tr. ratch-et-ed, ratch-et-ing, ratch-ets. To increase or decrease by increments. Often used with up, upward, down, or downward: "Some companies... may make things worse if they seek to ratchet down their medical expenses by limiting benefits for psychological or psychiatric care" (Newsweek). [French rochet, from Old French rocquet, head of a lance (from the shape of the teeth), of Germanic origin.]

rate¹ (rät) n. 1. A quantity measured with respect to another measured quantity: a rate of speed of 60 miles an hour. 2. A measure of a part with respect to a whole; a proportion: the mortality rate; a tax rate. 3. The cost per unit of a commodity or service: postal rates. 4. A charge or payment calculated in relation to a particular sum or quantity: interest rates. 5. Level of quality. 6. Often rates. Chiefly British. A locally assessed property tax. — v. rat-ed, rat-ing, rates. — v. tr. 1. To calculate the value of; appraise. See Synonyms at estimate. 2. To place in a particular rank or grade. 3. To regard or account: rated the movie excellent. 4. To value for purposes of taxation. 5. To set a rate for (goods to be shipped). 6. To specify the performance limits of (a machine, for example): This fuse is rated at 50 amperes. 7. Informal. To merit or deserve: people that rate special treatment. See Synonyms at earn¹. — v. intr. 1. To be ranked in a particular class. 2. Informal. To have status, importance, or influence. — idiom. at any rate. 1. Whatever the case may be. 2. At least. [Middle English, from Old French, from Medieval Latin rata, proportion, short for Latin (prō) ratā (parte), (according to a) fixed (part), from feminine ablative past participle of rēri, to consider, reckon. See ar- in Appendix.]

rate² (rāt) v. rat-ed, rat-ing, rates. — v. tr. To berate. — v. intr. To express reproof. [Middle English raten, perhaps of Scandinavian origin.]

ra-tel (rät'1, rāt'1) n. A carnivorous mammal (Mellivora capensis) of Africa and Asia, having short legs and a thick coat that is dark below and whitish above. Also called honey badger [Afrikaans, from Middle Dutch, rattle, honeycomb (either from its cry or its taste for honey).]

rate-mak-ing (rät'mā'king) n. The practice of establishing rates of payment, as for public transportation or utilities. — rate'mak'ing adj.

rate of exchange (rāt ūv 'iks-chānj') n. pl. rates of exchange. The ratio at which the unit of currency of one country is or may be exchanged for the unit of currency of another country.

rate-pay-er (rät'pā'ər) n. One that pays rates: utility ratepayers.

rat-er (rā'tər) n. 1. One that rates, especially one that establishes a rating.

2. One having an indicated rank or rating. Often used in combination: a third-rater; a first-rater.

rat-fink (rät'fɪŋk') n. Slang. A person regarded as contemptible, obnoxious, or otherwise undesirable.

rat-fish (rät'fish') n. pl. ratfish or rat-fish-es. A fish (Hydrolagus collei) of Pacific waters, having a long narrow tail.

rathe (rāth, rǎth) adj. Archaic. Appearing or ripening early in the year, as flowers or fruit. [Middle English, quick, from Old English hræd, hræth.]

rath-er (rǎth'ər, rǎ'thər) adv. 1. More readily; preferably: I'd rather go to the movies. 2. With more reason, logic, wisdom, or other justification. 3. More exactly; more accurately: He's my friend, or rather he was my friend. 4. To a certain extent; somewhat: rather cold. 5. On the contrary. 6. (rǎ'thûr', rǎ'-) Chiefly British. Most certainly. Used as an emphatic affirmative reply. [Middle English, from Old English hrathor, comparative of hræthe, quickly, soon, from hræth, quick.]

USAGE NOTE: In expressions of preference rather is commonly preceded by would or in formal style should: We would rather rent the house than buy it outright. I should rather my daughter attended a public school. The use of had in these constructions may now be more infrequent than it once was but is still encountered in reputable writing: I had rather be dead than be a slave. This use of had was once widely criticized as a mistake, the result of a misanalysis of the contraction in sentences such as I'd rather stay. But it is in fact a survival of the subjunctive form had that appears in constructions like had better and had best, as in We had better leave her alone. (Notice that in these constructions would and should cannot be used.) This use of had shows an unbroken line of usage running back to Middle English, and traditional criticisms of these constructions are unfounded. • Before an unmodified noun only rather a is used: It was rather a disaster. When the noun is preceded by an adjective, however, both rather a and a rather are found: It was rather a boring party. It was a rather boring party. When a rather is used in this construction, rather can be construed as qualifying only the adjective, whereas with rather a it can be construed as qualifying either the adjective or the entire noun phrase. Thus a rather long ordeal can mean only “an ordeal that is rather long,” whereas rather a long ordeal can also mean roughly “a long process that is something of an ordeal.” Rather a is the only possible choice when the adjective itself does not permit modification: The horse was rather a long shot (not The horse was a rather long shot). See Usage Note at better¹. See Usage Note at should.

raths-kel-ler (rät'skəl'ər, rät'-, rāth'-) n. A restaurant or tavern, usually below street level, that features the serving of beer. [Obsolete German, restaurant in the city hall basement : German Rat, council, counsel (from Middle High German rāt, from Old High German); see ar- in Appendix + German Keller, cellar (from Middle High German, from Old High German kellāri, from Latin cellārium); see CELLAR.]

rat·i·fi·ca·tion (rät'ə-fī-kā'shən) n. The act of ratifying or the condition of being ratified.

rat·i·fy (rät'ə-fī') v. tr. rat·i·fied, rat·i·fy·ing, rat·i·fies. To approve and give formal sanction to; confirm. See Synonyms at approve. [Middle English rati-fien, from Old French ratifier, from Medieval Latin ratificāre : Latin ratus, fixed, past participle of rērī, to reckon, consider; see RATE¹ + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] rat·i·né (rät'ə-nā') n. A loosely woven fabric with a rough, nubby texture.

—rat·i·fi'er n.

[French, past participle of ratiner, to adorn, from ratine, ratteen. See RATTEEN.]

rat·ing¹ (rā'tĩng) n. 1. A position assigned on a scale; a standing. 2. a. A classification according to specialty or proficiency, as of a member of the armed forces. b. Chiefly British. An enlisted person in the navy. 3. An evaluation of the financial status of a business or person: a credit rating. 4. A specified performance limit, as of capacity, range, or operational capability: the power rating of a light fixture. 5. The popularity of a television or radio program as estimated by a poll of segments of the audience.

rat·ing² (rā'tĩng) n. A harsh scolding.

Ra·ting·en (rā'tĩng-ən) A city of west-central Germany north of Düsseldorf.

Chartered in 1276, it is a manufacturing center. Population, 87,710.

ra·tio (rā'shō, rā'shē-ō') n. pl. ra·tios. 1. Relation in degree or number between two similar things. 2. The relative value of silver and gold in a currency system that is bimetallic. 3. Mathematics. The relation between two quantities expressed as the quotient of one divided by the other: The ratio of 7 to 4 is written

7:4 or 7/4. [Latin ratio, calculation, from ratus, past participle of rērī, to reckon, consider. See ar- in Appendix.]

ra·ti·oc·i·nate (răsh'ē-ōs'ə-nāt') v. intr. ra·ti·oc·i·nat·ed, ra·ti·oc·i·nat·ing, ra·ti·oc·i·nates. To reason methodically and logically. [Latin ratiocinārī, ratiocināt-, from ratio, calculation. See RATIO.] —ra'ti·oc'i·na'tion n. —ra'ti·oc'i·na'tor n.

ra·ti·oc·i·na·tive (răsh'ē-ōs'ə-nā'tiv) adj. Of, relating to, marked by, or skilled in methodical and logical reasoning. See Synonyms at logical.

ra·tion (răsh'ən, rā'shən) n. 1. A fixed portion, especially an amount of food allotted to persons in military service or to civilians in times of scarcity.

2. rations. Food issued or available to members of a group. — v. tr.

ra·tioned, ra·tion·ing, ra·tions. 1. To supply with rations. 2. To distribute as rations: rationed out flour and sugar. See Synonyms at distribute. 3. To restrict to limited allotments, as during wartime. [French, from Latin ratio, ration-, calculation. See RATIO.]

ra·tion·al (răsh'ə-nəl) adj. 1. Having or exercising the ability to reason. 2. Of sound mind; sane. 3. Consistent with or based on reason; logical: rational behavior. See Synonyms at logical. 4. Mathematics. Capable of being expressed as a quotient of integers. [Middle English racional, from Old French racionel, from Latin rationālis, from ratio, ration-, reason. See REASON.] —ra'tion·al·ly adv. —ra'tion·al·ness n.

ra·tion·ale (răsh'ə-nāl') n. 1. Fundamental reasons; the basis. 2. An exposition of principles or reasons. [Late Latin rationāle, from neuter of Latin rationālis, rational. See RATIONAL.]

rational function (răsh'ə-nəl fŭngk'shən) n. Mathematics. A function that can be expressed as a quotient of polynomials.

rational horizon (răsh'ə-nəl hə-rī'zən) n. Astronomy. See celestial horizon.

ra·tion·al·ism (răsh'ə-nə-līz'əm) n. 1. Reliance on reason as the best guide for belief and action. 2. Philosophy. The theory that the exercise of reason, rather than the acceptance of empiricism, authority, or spiritual revelation, provides the only valid basis for action or belief and that reason is the prime source of knowledge and of spiritual truth. —ra'tion·al·ist n. —ra'tion·al·is'tic adj. —ra'tion·al·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

ra·tion·al·i·ty (răsh'ə-nāl'ī-tē) n. pl. ra·tion·al·i·ties. 1. The quality or condition of being rational. 2. A rational belief or practice.

ra·tion·al·i·za·tion (răsh'ə-nə-lī-zā'shən) n. 1. The act, process, or practice of rationalizing. 2. An instance of rationalizing.

ra·tion·al·ize (răsh'ə-nə-līz') v. ra·tion·al·ized, ra·tion·al·iz·ing, ra·tion·al·iz·es. — v. tr. 1. To make rational. 2. To interpret from a rational standpoint. 3. To devise self-satisfying but incorrect reasons for (one's behavior). 4. Mathematics. To remove radicals without changing the value of (an expression) or roots of (an equation). 5. Chiefly British. To bring modern, efficient methods to (an industry, for example). — v. intr. 1. To think in a rational or rationalistic way. 2. To devise self-satisfying but incorrect reasons for one's behavior. — ra'tion-al-iz'er n.

rational number (răsh'ə-nəl nŭm'bər) n. Mathematics. A number capable of being expressed as an integer or a quotient of integers, excluding zero as a denominator.

Rat Islands (răt ī'ləndz) A group of islands in the western Aleutian Islands of southwest Alaska. Kiska and Rat Island are included in the group.

rat-ite (răt'īt') adj. Relating to or being any of a group of flightless birds having a flat breastbone without the keellike prominence characteristic of most flying birds. — n. A ratite bird, such as the ostrich or emu. [From Latin ratītus, marked with the figure of a raft, from ratis, raft.]

rat-line also rat-lin (răt'līn) n. Nautical. 1. Any of the small ropes fastened horizontally to the shrouds of a ship and forming a ladder for going aloft. 2. The material used for these ropes. [Middle English rathelinge (line), wattling, ratline (cord).]

ra-toon also rat-toon (ră-tōon') n. A shoot sprouting from a plant base, as in the banana, pineapple, or sugar cane. — v. ra-tooned, ra-toon-ing, ra-toons. — v. intr. To produce or grow as a ratoon. — v. tr. To propagate (a crop) from ratoons. [Spanish retoño, sprout, from retoñar, to sprout : re-, again (from Latin); see RE- + otoñar, to grow in autumn (from otoño, autumn, from Latin autumnus); see AUTUMN.] rat pack (răt pāk) n. Slang. A closely knit group of people sharing interests: a rat pack of popular singers who were friendly with high government officials.

rat race (răt rās) n. Informal. A difficult, tiring, often competitive activity or routine.

rats-bane (răts'bān') n. 1. Rat poison. 2. Arsenic trioxide.

rat snake (răt snāk) n. Any of several nonvenomous snakes of the genus Elaphe that eat rats and other rodents. Also called chicken snake rat's tail cactus (răts tāl kăk'təs) n. Variant of rattail cactus.

rat-tail (răt'tāl') n. See grenadier (n., sense 2). — adj. also rat-tailed (-tāld') or rat-tail (răt'tāl') Shaped like or having a part shaped like a rat's tail: a rat-tail file; a rattail comb.

rattail cactus (răt'tāl' kăk'təs) or rat's tail cactus (răts tāl kăk'təs) n. A Mexican cactus (Aporocactus flagelliformis) having thin, creeping or hanging stems and brilliant crimson-pink flowers.

rat-tan (ră-tăn', rə-) n. 1. Any of various climbing palms of the genera Calamus, Daemonorops, or Plectomia of tropical Asia, having long, tough, slender stems. 2. a. The stems of any of these palms, used to make wickerwork, canes, and furniture. b. Work made of the stems of these palms. 3. A switch or cane made from these palms. [Malay rōtan (perhaps from raut, to pare or trim for use).]

rat·teen (ră-tēn′) n. Archaic. A thick, twilled woolen cloth. [French ratine, from Old French rastin, from raster*, to scrape, ultimately from Latin rādere. See RASH².]

rat·ter (răt′ər) n. 1. One that catches or kills rats: Many terriers are good ratters. 2. Slang. One who betrays or deserts another.

Rat·ti·gan (răt′ī-gən), Sir Terence Mervyn. 1911-1977. British playwright whose works include The Winslow Boy (1946) and Separate Tables (1954).

rat·tle¹ (răt′l) v. rat·tled, rat·tling, rat·tles. — v. intr. 1. a. To make or emit a quick succession of short percussive sounds. b. To move with such sounds: A train rattled along the track. 2. To talk rapidly and at length, usually without much thought: rattled on about this and that. — v. tr. 1. To cause to make a quick succession of short percussive sounds: rattled the dishes in the kitchen. 2. To utter or perform rapidly or effortlessly: rattled off a list of complaints. 3. Informal. To fluster; unnerve: The accident rattled me. See Synonyms at embarrass. — n. 1. A rapid succession of short percussive sounds. 2. A device, such as a baby’s toy, that produces short percussive sounds. 3. A rattling sound in the throat caused by obstructed breathing, especially near the time of death. 4. The series of horny structures at the end of a rattlesnake’s tail. 5. Loud or rapid talk; chatter. [Middle English ratelen, perhaps from Middle Dutch, probably of imitative origin.]

WORD HISTORY: A large proportion (86 percent) of the Usage Panel approved the use of the verb rattle in the sense “to unnerve” in the first edition of The American Heritage Dictionary, published in 1969. But we may ask how the verb rattle came to have such a sense. The earliest use of the word is found in a name, Johannes Ratellebagg, recorded in a document of around 1273; the earliest use of the word as a common noun (in the sense “to flap, used of a banner”) is found in a work written about 1300 and copied in manuscript around 1330. It is thought that the word probably comes from Middle Dutch ratelen, which may be imitative in origin. In any case, the word ratelen was used mainly in intransitive senses such as “to make a rattling sound.” Already in Middle English, however, the transitive sense “to babble something” existed, and other transitive senses, as in “to make something rattle,” “to stir up, rouse,” “to drive in a rapid, rattling manner,” came into existence from the 16th century on. The transitive sense “to unnerve,” that is, “to make somebody rattle,” is first found in an American work of 1869.

rat-tle² (răt'1) v. tr. rat-tled, rat-tling, rat-tles. Nautical. To secure ratlines to (shrouds). [Back-formation from rattling, ratline, variant of RATLINE.]

rat-tle-box (răt'1-böks') n. Any of various plants of the genus Crotalaria, having inflated pods containing seeds that rattle when the stem is moved.

rat-tle-brained (răt'1-bränd') adj. Giddy and talkative; foolish. —rat-tle-brain' (-brän') n.

rat-tler (răt'1lər) n. 1. One that rattles: a rattler of pots and pans. 2. A rattlesnake. 3. Informal. A freight train.

rat-tle-snake (răt'1-snāk') n. Any of various venomous New World snakes of the genera Crotalus and Sistrurus, having at the end of the tail a series of loosely attached, horny segments that can be vibrated to produce a rattling or buzzing sound.

rattlesnake flag (răt'1-snāk' fläg) n. Any of several U.S. flags bearing the motto "Don't Tread on Me" and a picture of a rattlesnake, used during the French and Indian War and the Revolutionary War.

rattlesnake master (răt'1-snāk' mäs'tər) n. Any of several plants, such as Eryngium yuccifolium of the eastern United States, supposedly effective against the venom of rattlesnakes and having narrow leaves with spiny margins and whitish flower heads. Also called button snakeroot rattlesnake plantain (răt'1-snāk' plän'tən) n. Any of various rhizomatous orchids of the genus Goodyera, having mottled or striped leaves and spikes of small whitish flowers. [From the resemblance of its leaves to a rattlesnake's skin.]

rattlesnake root (răt'1-snāk' rōöt) n. Any of various plants of the genus Prenanthes, having bitter-tasting tuberous roots and white to purple ligulate flower heads. [From the belief that the root cured a rattlesnake's bite.]

rattlesnake weed (răt'1-snāk' wēd) n. A North American plant (Hieracium venosum) having basal leaves with reddish-purple veins and yellow flower heads borne in open corymbose panicles.

rat-tle-trap (răt'1-trăp') n. A rickety, worn-out vehicle.

rat-tling (răt'1lɪŋ) adj. Informal. Animated; brisk: A rattling conversation about politics. — adv. Used as an intensive: "the guiltless gust of a rattling good yarn" (Anthony Burgess).

rat-tly (răt'1-ē) adj. Rattling or likely to rattle; clattering.

rat-toon (ră-tōön') n. & v. Variant of ratoon.

rat-trap (răt'trăp') n. 1. A device for trapping rats. 2. Informal. A dilapidated or unsanitary dwelling.

rat-ty (răt'ē) adj. rat-ti-er, rat-ti-est. 1. Of or characteristic of rats. 2. Infested with rats. 3. Dilapidated; shabby.

rau-cous (rô'kəs) adj. 1. Rough-sounding and harsh: raucous laughter.

2. Boisterous and disorderly: "the raucous give and take of American democracy"

(Charles Kuralt). [From Latin raucus.] —rau'cous-ly adv. —rau'cous-ness, rau'ci-ty (rô'sī-tē) n.

raunch (rônch, ränch) n. Slang. 1. Lewdness; vulgarity; obscenity. 2. Material or a performance that is sexually explicit or evocative: “Audiences are still astonished when she goes for the raunch” (Katrine Ames). [Back-formation from RAUNCHY.]

raun-chy (rôn'chē, rän'-) adj. raun-chi-er, raun-chi-est. Slang.

1. a. Obscene, lewd, or vulgar: “[He] uses language so aggressively raunchy that he seems to be insisting his choice of vocabulary, at least, is no sin” (Wall Street Journal). b. Sexually explicit. c. Exhibiting lust. 2. Grimy; unkempt: a raunchy closet full of dirty socks. [Origin unknown.] —raun'chi-ly adv. —raun'-chi-ness n.

Raur-ke-la or Rour-ke-la (rôr-kā'lə) A town of eastern India west of Calcutta. It has important iron and steel plants. Population, 206,821.

Rausch-en-berg (rou'shən-bûrg'), Robert. Born 1925. American artist noted for his collages, photomontages, and paintings that incorporate photographs and real objects.

Rau-schen-busch (rou'shən-böosh'), Walter. 1861-1918. American religious leader who sought solutions to social and economics problems through the application of Christian and socialist ideals.

rau-wol-fi-a (rou-wööl'fē-ə, rô-) n. Any of various tropical trees and shrubs of the genus Rauwolfia, especially R. serpentina, of southeast Asia, the root of which is the source of tranquilizing alkaloid drugs such as reserpine. [New Latin Rauwolfia, genus name, after Leonhard Rauwolf (died 1596), German botanist.]

rav-age (räv'ij) v. rav-aged, rav-ag-ing, rav-ages. — v. tr. 1. To bring heavy destruction on; devastate: A tornado ravaged the countryside. 2. To pillage; sack: Enemy soldiers ravaged the village. — v. intr. To wreak destruction. — n. 1. The act or practice of pillaging, destroying, or devastating. 2. Grievous damage; havoc: the ravages of disease. [French ravager, from Old French, to uproot, from ravir, to ravish. See RAVISH.] —rav'ag-er n.

rave (rāv) v. raved, rav-ing, raves. — v. intr. 1. To speak wildly, irrationally, or incoherently. 2. To roar; rage: The storm raved along the coast. 3. To speak with wild enthusiasm: He raved about the new play. — v. tr. To utter in a frenzied manner. — n. 1. The act or an instance of raving. 2. Informal. An extravagantly enthusiastic opinion or review: The play received raves. — adj.

Informal. Relating to or being an extravagantly enthusiastic opinion or review. [Middle English raven, from Old North French raver, variant of resver, to dream, wander, rave.]

rav-el (räv'əl) v. rav-eled also rav-elled, rav-el-ing also rav-el-ling, rav-els also rav-els. — v. tr. 1. To separate the fibers or threads of (cloth, for example); unravel. 2. To clarify by separating the aspects of. 3. To tangle or complicate.

— v. intr. 1. To become separated into its component threads; unravel or fray. 2. To become tangled or confused. — n. 1. A raveling. 2. A broken or discarded thread. 3. A tangle. [Obsolete Dutch ravelen, from ravel, loose thread.]
—rav'el·er n.

WORD HISTORY: To say that we will ravel the history of ravel is an ambiguous statement, given that history. Ravel comes from the obsolete Dutch verb ravelen, “to tangle, fray out, unweave,” which comes in turn from the noun ravel, “a loose thread.” We can see the ambiguity of ravel already in the notion of a loose thread, because threads can be loose when they are tangled or when they are untangling. The Dutch verb has both notions present in it, denoting both tangling and unweaving. In one of its earliest recorded uses in English (before 1585) the verb means “to become entangled or confused,” and in 1598 we find a use in the sense “to entangle.” But in 1611 the word is used with reference to a fabric in the sense “to fray out,” and in 1607 in the sense “to unwind, unweave, or unravel.” In 1582 we already have an author using the word in a figurative way to mean “to take to pieces or disentangle,” while in a work written before 1656 we have a figurative instance of the sense “to entangle or confuse.” Clearly there was a need for the word unravel, which is first found in 1603, but strangely enough it did not solve the problem, ravel retaining up to this day both “entangling” and “disentangling” senses.

Ra·vel (rə-vĕl', rə-), Maurice Joseph. 1875-1937. French composer of impressionistic operas, ballets, orchestral works, such as Boléro (1928), and piano works, including Le Tombeau de Couperin (1917).

rav·el·ing also rav·el·ling (rāv'ə-lĭng) n. A thread or fiber that has become separated from a woven material.

rav·el·ment (rāv'əl-mənt) n. Confusion or complexity; a tangle.

ra·ven¹ (rā'vən) n. A large bird (Corvus corax) having black plumage and a croaking cry. — adj. Black and shiny: raven tresses. [Middle English, from Old English hræfn.]

rav·en² (rāv'ən) v. rav·ened, rav·en·ing, rav·ens. — v. tr. 1. To consume greedily; devour. 2. To seek or seize as prey or plunder. — v. intr. 1. To seek or seize prey or plunder. 2. To eat ravenously. — n. Variant of ravin. [From Middle English ravin, raven, rapine, plunder, prey. See RAVIN.] —rav'en·er n.

rav·en·ing (rāv'ə-nĭng) adj. Greedily predacious; voracious or rapacious. — n. The action of one that ravens. —rav'en·ing·ly adv.

Ra·ven·na (rə-vĕn'ə, rə-vĕn'nä) A city of northeast Italy near the Adriatic Sea northeast of Florence. An important naval station in Roman times, it was an Ostrogoth capital in the fifth and sixth centuries A.D. and the center of Byzantine power in Italy from the late sixth century until c. 750, when it was conquered by the Lombards. Ravenna eventually became part of the papal dominions and was included in the kingdom of Italy in 1860. Population, 101,000.

rav-en-ous (rāv'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Extremely hungry; voracious. 2. Rapacious; predatory. 3. Greedy for gratification: ravenous for power. See Synonyms at voracious. [Middle English, from Old French ravineux, from raviner, to take by force, from Vulgar Latin rapīnāre*, from Latin rapīna, plunder. See RAPINE.] —rav'en-ous-ly adv. —rav'en-ous-ness n.

rave-up (rāv'ŭp') n. 1. Music. A wild or vigorous musical performance. 2. Chiefly British. A raucous party or gathering.

Ra-vi (rāv'vē) A river, about 764 km (475 mi) long, of northwest India and north-east Pakistan. Rising in the Himalaya Mountains, it is one of the five rivers of the Punjab.

ra-vi-gote also ra-vi-gotte (rā-vē-gôt') n. A vinegar sauce seasoned with minced onion, capers, and herbs, used with boiled meats or fish. [French, from ravigoter, to add new vigor, alteration of obsolete ravigorer, from Old French : re-, re- + a-, to (from Latin ad-); see AD- + vigueur, vigor; see VIGOR.]

rav-in also rav-en (rāv'ən) n. 1. Voracity; rapaciousness. 2. Something taken as prey. 3. The act or practice of preying. [Middle English ravin, raven, from Old French ravine, rapine, from Latin rapīna, from rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.]

ra-vine (rā-vēn') n. A deep, narrow valley or gorge in the earth's surface worn by running water. [French, from Old French, violent rush, from Latin rapīna, rapine. See RAVIN.]

rav-ing (rāv'vīng) adj. 1. Talking or behaving irrationally; wild: a raving maniac. 2. Exciting admiration: a raving beauty. — n. Delirious, irrational speech. —rav'ing-ly adv.

ra-vi-o-li (rāv'ē-ō'lē, rāv'vē-) n. pl. ravioli or ra-vi-o-lis. 1. A small casing of pasta with various fillings, such as chopped meat or cheese. 2. A dish made with ravioli. [Italian, pl. of dialectal raviolo.]

rav-ish (rāv'ish) v. tr. rav-ished, rav-ish-ing, rav-ish-es. 1. To seize and carry away by force. 2. To rape; violate. 3. To overwhelm with emotion; enrapture. See Synonyms at enrapture. [Middle English ravishen, from Old French ravir, raviss-, from Vulgar Latin rapīre*, from Latin rapere, to seize. See rep- in Appendix.] —rav'ish-er n.

rav-ish-ing (rāv'ī-shīng) adj. Extremely attractive; entrancing. —rav'ish-ing-ly adv.

rav-ish-ment (rāv'ish-mənt) n. 1. The act of seizing by force. 2. Sexual rape. 3. Rapture; entrancement.

raw (rô) adj. raw-er, raw-est. 1. Uncooked: raw meat. 2. a. Being in a natural condition; not processed or refined: raw wool. See Synonyms at crude.

b. Not finished, covered, or coated: raw wood. See Synonyms at rude. c. Not having been subjected to adjustment, treatment, or analysis: raw data; the raw cost of production. 3. Untrained and inexperienced: raw recruits. 4. Recently finished; fresh: raw plaster. 5. Having subcutaneous tissue exposed: a raw wound. 6. Inflamed; sore: a raw throat. 7. Unpleasantly damp and chilly: raw weather. 8. Cruel and unfair: a raw punishment. 9. Outspoken; crude: a raw portrayal of truth. 10. Powerfully impressive; stark: raw beauty; raw talent. 11. Nude; naked. —idiom. in the raw. 1. In a crude or unrefined state: nature in the raw. 2. Nude; naked. [Middle English, from Old English hrēaw. See kreu- in Appendix.] —raw'ly adv. —raw'ness n.

Ra-wal-pin-di (rā'wəl-pīn'dē) A city of northeast Pakistan north-northwest of Lahore. Settled by Sikhs in 1765, it was interim capital of Pakistan from 1959 to 1970. Population, 452,000.

raw-boned (rô'bōnd') adj. Having a lean, gaunt frame with prominent bones. See Synonyms at lean².

raw-hide (rô'hīd') n. 1. The untanned hide of cattle or other animals. 2. A whip or rope made of rawhide. — v. tr. raw-hid-ed, raw-hid-ing, raw-hides. To beat with a rawhide whip.

ra-win-sonde (rā'wīn-sōnd') n. A radiosonde used to observe the velocity and direction of upper-air winds and tracked by a radio direction-finding instrument or radar. [RA(DAR) + WIN(D)¹ + (RADIO)SONDE.]

Raw-lings (rô'līngz), Marjorie Kinnan. 1896-1953. American writer known for her novel The Yearling (1938).

Raw-lin-son (rô'līn-sən), Sir Henry Creswicke. 1810-1895. British diplomat and scholar who deciphered cuneiform texts from ancient Persia.

raw material (rô mə-tīr'ē-əl) n. 1. An unprocessed natural product used in manufacture. 2. Unprocessed material of any kind: These data are the raw material for the analysis.

raw sienna (rô sē-ēn'ə) n. 1. A brownish-yellow pigment. 2. Color. A brownish orange to light brown.

raw silk (rô sīlk) n. 1. Untreated silk as reeled from a cocoon. 2. Fabric or yarn made from untreated silk.

ray¹ (rā) n. 1. a. A thin line or narrow beam of light or other radiant energy. b. A graphic or other representation of such a line. 2. Radiance; light. 3. A small amount; a trace: not a ray of hope left. 4. Mathematics. A straight line extending from a point. Also called half-line. 5. A structure or part having the form of a straight line extending from a point. 6. Any of the bright streaks that are seen radiating from some craters on the moon. 7. Botany. a. A ray flower or the corolla of a ray flower. b. A branch of an umbel. 8. Zoology. a. One of the bony spines supporting the membrane of a fish's fin. b. One of the arms of a starfish or other radiate animal. 9. rays. Slang. Sunshine: Let's go to the beach and catch some rays. — v. tr. rayed, ray-ing, rays. 1. To send out as rays; emit. 2. To supply with rays or radiating lines. 3. To cast rays on; irradiate.

[Middle English, from Old French rai, from Latin radius.]

ray² (rā) n. Any of various marine fishes of the order Rajiformes or Batoidei, having cartilaginous skeletons, horizontally flattened bodies, and narrow tails.

[Middle English raye, from Old French raie, from Latin raia.]

Ray (rā), Cape. A promontory of extreme southwest Newfoundland, Canada, on Cabot Strait.

Ray (rā), John. 1627-1705. English naturalist who was the first to use anatomy to distinguish between specific plants and animals and established “species” as the basic classification of living things.

Ray (rā), Man. 1890-1976. American artist. A founder of Dada in New York, he is known for his photographs, paintings, sculpture, films, and later experiments with surrealism.

Ray (rī), Satyajit. 1921-1992. Indian filmmaker whose works, especially the trilogy including The World of Apu (1958), offer a contemplative depiction of Bengali life.

Ray-burn (rā'bûrn'), Samuel Taliaferro. 1882-1961. American politician. A U.S. representative from Texas (1913-1961), he served as Speaker of the House (17 terms between 1940 and 1961) and was a major advocate of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal.

ray flower (rā flou'ər) n. A flower with a flat, strap-shaped corolla, found in members of the composite family, as the units of a flower head of the dandelion or the marginal units of a flower head of the daisy.

ray gun (rā gŭn) n. A gun that fires a ray of energy, especially one depicted as a destructive weapon in science fiction.

Ray-leigh (rā'lē), Third Baron Title of John William Strutt. 1842-1919. British physicist. He won a 1904 Nobel Prize for investigating the density of gases and for discovering argon with Sir William Ramsay.

Rayleigh scattering (rā'lē skāt'ər-ĭng) n. The scattering of electromagnetic radiation by particles with dimensions much smaller than the wavelength of the radiation, resulting in angular separation of colors and responsible for the reddish color of sunset and the blue of the sky. [After Third Baron. RAYLEIGH.]

ray-less (rā'lis) adj. 1. Lacking rays: a rayless flower. 2. Lacking light: “Hid by a rayless night” (Percy Bysshe Shelley).

Ray-mond (rā'mənd), Henry Jarvis. 1820-1869. American journalist and politician who founded the New York Times (1851).

Ray-naud's phenomenon (rā-nōz' fi-nōm'ə-nōn') n. A circulatory disorder that affects the hands and feet, caused by insufficient blood supply to these parts and resulting in cyanosis, numbness, pain, and, in extreme cases, gangrene. [After Maurice Raynaud (1834-1881), French physician.]

ray-on (rā'ŏn) n. 1. Any of several synthetic textile fibers produced by forcing a cellulose solution through fine spinnerets and solidifying the resulting filaments.

2. A fabric so woven or knit. [Perhaps from French rayon, ray of light (from its sheen), from rai, from Old French. See RAY¹.]

Ray-on-ism (rā'ə-nīz'əm) n. A style of abstract painting allied to futurism, developed about 1911, in which forms are depicted as emitting rays of light.

[French rayonisme, from rayon, ray (translation of Russian luchizm, from luch, ray). See RAYON.] —Ray/on-ist adj., n. —Ray'on-is'tic adj.

Ray-side-Bal-four (rā'sīd-bāl'fôr', -fər) A town of central Ontario, Canada, a suburb of Sudbury. Population, 15,017.

Ray-town (rā'toun') A city of western Missouri, a residential suburb surrounded by Kansas City. Population, 30,601.

raze also rase (rāz) v. tr. razed also rased, raz-ing also ras-ing, raz-es also ras-es. 1. To level to the ground; demolish. See Synonyms at ruin. 2. To scrape or shave off. 3. Archaic. To erase. [Middle English rasen, to scrape off, from Old French raser, from Vulgar Latin rāsāre*, frequentative of Latin rādere. See RASH².]

ra-zor (rā'zər) n. 1. A sharp-edged cutting instrument used especially for shaving the face or removing other body hair. 2. A device for holding a razorblade, with guards to prevent cutting of the skin. Also called safety razor 3. An electric instrument with vibrating or rotating blades used for shaving. [Middle English rasor, from Old French, from raser, to scrape. See RAZE.]

ra-zor-back (rā'zər-bāk') n. 1. A semiwild hog of the southeast United States, having a narrow body with a ridged back. 2. See rorqual. 3. A sharp, ridged hill.

ra-zor-bill (rā'zər-bīl') n. A razor-billed auk.

ra-zor-billed auk (rā'zər-bīld' ôk) n. A sea bird (Alca torda) of the northern Atlantic, having black-and-white plumage and a white-ringed, flattened bill.

ra-zor-blade also ra-zor blade (rā'zər-blād') n. A thin, sharp-edged piece of steel that can be fitted into a razor.

razor clam (rā'zər klām) n. Any of various clams of the family Solenidae, characteristically having long narrow shells.

razor wire (rā'zər wīr) n. A sharp-edged wire used for fences and barriers.

razz (răz) Slang. n. A raspberry sound; a Bronx cheer. — v. tr. razzed, razz-ing, razz-es. To deride, heckle, or tease. See Synonyms at banter. [Shortening and alteration of RASPBERRY.]

raz-zle-daz-zle (răz'əl-dăz'əl) n. Informal. Dazzling excitement. [Reduplication of DAZZLE.]

razz-ma-tazz (răz'mə-tăz') n. Slang. 1. A flashy action or display intended to bewilder, confuse, or deceive. 2. Ambiguous or evasive language; double talk.

3. Ebullient energy; vim. [Perhaps alteration of RAZZLE-DAZZLE.]

Rb The symbol for the element rubidium.

RBC or rbc abbr. 1. Red blood cell. 2. Red blood cell count.

RBE or rbe abbr. Relative biological effectiveness.

RBI also rbi abbr. Baseball. Run batted in; runs batted in.

RC abbr. 1. Red Cross. 2. Roman Catholic.

RCAF also R.C.A.F. abbr. Royal Canadian Air Force.

R.C.Ch. abbr. Roman Catholic Church.

RCMP also R.C.M.P. abbr. Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

R.C.P. abbr. Royal College of Physicians.

rcpt. abbr. Receipt.

R.C.S. abbr. Royal College of Surgeons.

rct. abbr. Recruit.

rd abbr. 1. Rod (unit of measure). 2. Rutherford.

RD abbr. Rural delivery.

rd. abbr. 1. Or Rd. Road. 2. Round.

RDA abbr. Recommended daily allowance.

RDF abbr. Radio direction finder.

re¹ (rā) n. Music. The second tone of the diatonic scale in solfeggio. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin. See GAMUT.]

re² (rē) prep. In reference to; in the case of; concerning. [Latin rē, ablative of rēs, thing. See rē- in Appendix.]

Re¹ (rā) n. Mythology. Variant of Ra¹.

Re² The symbol for the element rhenium.

Re. abbr. Rupee.

R.E. or RE abbr. Real estate.

re- pref. 1. Again; anew: rebuild. 2. Backward; back: react. 3. Used as an intensive: refine. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin. See re- in Appendix.]

're Are: They're not at home.

re·ab·sorb (rē'əb-sôrb', -zôrb') v. re·ab·sorbed, re·ab·sorb·ing, re·ab·sorbs. — v. tr. 1. To absorb again. 2. To accommodate or accept again, as into a group or category. — v. intr. To undergo resorption. — re'ab·sorp'tion (-sôrp'shən, -zôrp'-) n.

re·ac·cred·i·ta·tion (rē'ə-krēd'ī-tā'shən) n. 1. The process of reviewing the accreditation of an institution. 2. Renewal of accreditation status.

reach (rēch) v. reached, reach·ing, reach·es. — v. tr. 1. To stretch out or put forth (a body part); extend: reached out an arm. 2. To touch or grasp by stretching out or extending: couldn't reach the shelf. 3. To arrive at; attain: reached a conclusion; reached their destination. 4. a. To succeed in getting in contact with or communicating with: They reached us by telephone. Our newsletter reaches a very specialized readership. b. To succeed in having an effect on: No one seems able to reach her anymore. 5. a. To extend as far as: The property reaches the shore. b. To project as far as: A distant cry reached our ears. c. To travel as far as: a long fly ball that reached the wall of the stadium. 6. To aggregate or amount to: Sales reached the thousands. 7. Informal. To grasp and hand over to another: Reach me the sugar. — v. intr. 1. To thrust out or extend something. 2. To try to grasp or touch something: reached for a book. 3. a. To have extension in space or time: a coat that reaches to the knee; shrubbery reaching up to the eaves; a career that reached over several decades. b. To be extensive in influence or effect. 4. To make an excessive effort, as in drawing a conclusion or making a joke; overreach. 5. Nautical. To sail with the wind abeam. — n. 1. The act or an instance of stretching or thrusting out. 2. The extent or distance something can reach. 3. a. Range of understanding; comprehension: a subject beyond my reach. b. Range or scope of influence or effect. 4. An expanse: a reach of prairie; the lower reaches of the food chain. 5. A pole connecting the rear axle of a vehicle with the front. 6. Nautical. The tack of a sailing vessel with the wind abeam. 7. The stretch of water visible between bends in a river or channel. [Middle English rechen, from Old English ræcan. See reig- in Appendix.] —reach/a-ble adj. —reach'er n.

SYNONYMS: reach, achieve, attain, gain, compass. All of these verbs mean to succeed in arriving at a goal or an objective. Reach, the least specific, like the other terms connotes the expenditure of effort: reached shelter before the storm broke; reach an understanding; reach perfection. Achieve suggests in addition the application of skill or initiative: achieved international recognition. Attain often implies the impelling force of ambition, principle, or ideals: trying to attain self-confidence. Gain connotes considerable effort in surmounting obstacles: gained the confidence of the workers. Compass implies circumvention of impediments to success: couldn't compass the assigned task. See also Synonyms at range re-act (rē-äkt') v. intr. re-act-ed, re-act-ing, re-acts. 1. To act in response to or under the influence of a stimulus or prompting: reacted strongly to the sarcastic tone of the memorandum. 2. To act in opposition to a former condition or act: composers who reacted against romanticism. 3. To act reciprocally or in return. 4. Chemistry. To undergo a reaction: Methane reacts with hydroxyl to produce formaldehyde.

re-ac-tance (rē-äk'təns) n. Symbol X Electricity. Opposition to the flow of alternating current caused by the inductance and capacitance in a circuit rather than by resistance.

re-ac-tant (rē-äk'tənt) n. A substance participating in a chemical reaction, especially a directly reacting substance present at the initiation of the reaction.

re-ac-tion (rē-äk'shən) n. 1. a. A response to a stimulus. b. The state resulting from such a response. 2. A reverse or opposing action. 3. a. A tendency to revert to a former state. b. Opposition to progress or liberalism; extreme conservatism. 4. Chemistry. A change or transformation in which a substance decomposes, combines with other substances, or interchanges constituents with other substances. 5. Physics. A nuclear reaction. 6. Physics. An equal and opposite force exerted by a body against a force acting upon it. 7. The response of cells or tissues to an antigen, as in a test for immunization. 8. Psychology. A pattern of behavior constituting a mental disorder or personality type.

re·ac·tion·ar·y (rē-āk'shə-nēr'ē) adj. Characterized by reaction, especially opposition to progress or liberalism; extremely conservative. — n. pl.

re·ac·tion·ar·ies. An opponent of progress or liberalism; an extreme conservative.

reaction engine (rē-āk'shən ɛn'jɪn) n. An engine that develops thrust by the focused expulsion of matter, especially ignited fuel gases.

reaction formation (rē-āk'shən fôr-mā'shən) n. Psychology. A defense mechanism by which an objectionable impulse is expressed in an opposite or contrasting factor.

reaction time (rē-āk'shən tīm) n. The interval of time between application of a stimulus and detection of a response.

re·ac·ti·vate (rē-āk'tə-vāt') v. tr. re·ac·ti·vat·ed, re·ac·ti·vat·ing, re·ac·ti·vates. 1. To make active again. 2. To restore the ability to function or the effectiveness of. — re·ac·ti·va'tion n.

re·ac·tive (rē-āk'tīv) adj. 1. Tending to be responsive or to react to a stimulus. 2. Characterized by reaction. 3. Chemistry & Physics. Tending to participate readily in reactions. — re·ac'tive·ly adv. — re·ac'tive·ness, re'ac'tiv/i·ty n.

re·ac·tor (rē-āk'tər) n. 1. One that reacts to a stimulus. 2. Electronics. A circuit element, such as a coil, used to introduce reactance. 3. Physics. A nuclear reaction.

read (rēd) v. read (rēd), read·ing, reads. — v. tr. 1. To examine and grasp the meaning of (written or printed characters, words, or sentences). 2. To utter or render aloud (written or printed material): She read her poems to the students. 3. To have the ability to examine and grasp the meaning of (written or printed material in a given language or notation): reads Chinese; reads music. 4. a. To examine and grasp the meaning of (language in a form other than written or printed characters, words, or sentences): reading Braille; reading sign language. b. To examine and grasp the meaning of (a graphic representation): reading a map. 5. a. To discern and interpret the nature or significance of through close examination or sensitive observation: The tracker read the trail for signs of game. b. To discern or anticipate through examination or observation; descry: "I can read abandonment in a broken door or shattered window" (William H. Gass). 6. To determine the intent or mood of: I can read your mind like a book. He's a hard person to read. 7. a. To attribute a certain interpretation or meaning to: She read a different meaning into what he had said. b. To consider (something written or printed) as having a particular meaning or significance: I read the novel as a parable. 8. To foretell or predict (the future). 9. To receive or comprehend (a radio message, for example): I read you loud and clear. 10. To study or make a study of: She read history as an undergraduate. 11. To learn or get knowledge of from something written or printed: He read that interest rates would continue to rise. 12. To proofread. 13. To have or use as a preferred reading in a particular passage: For change read charge. 14. To indicate, register, or show: The dial reads 32°. 15. Computer Science. To obtain information from a storage medium, such as a magnetic disk. — v. intr. 1. To examine and grasp the meaning of printed or written characters, as of words or music. 2. To speak aloud the words that one is reading: He reads to his children every night. 3. To learn by reading: We read about the storm in the paper today. 4. To study. 5. To have a particular wording: Recite the poem exactly as it reads. 6. To contain a specific meaning: As the law reads, the defendant is guilty. 7. To indicate, register, or show a measurement or figure: How does your new watch read? 8. To have a specified character or quality for the reader: His poems read well. — n. Informal. Something that is read: “The book is a page-turner as well as a very satisfying read” (Frank Conroy). — adj. (rĕd) Informed by reading; learned: He was only sparsely read in fields outside his profession. — phrasal verbs. read out. To read aloud: Please read out the names on the list. read up. To study or learn by reading: Read up on the places you plan to visit before you travel. — idioms. read a lecture (or read a lesson). To issue a reprimand: Mother read us a lecture after the principal telephoned her. read between the lines. To perceive or detect an obscure or unexpressed meaning: learned to read between the lines of corporate annual reports to discern areas of fiscal weakness. read out of. To expel by proclamation from a social, political, or other group: He was read out of the secretariat after the embarrassing incident. [Middle English reden, from Old English rædan, to advise. See ar- in Appendix.]

Read (rĕd), George. 1733-1798. American Revolutionary leader, politician, and jurist. Delaware’s delegate to the Constitutional Convention (1787), he championed the rights of small states and later served as a U.S. senator (1789-1793).

Read (rĕd), Sir Herbert. 1893-1968. British writer known for his imagistic poetry and works of literary and art criticism.

read-a-ble (rĕ'də-bəl) adj. 1. Easily read; legible: a readable typeface.

2. Pleasurable or interesting to read: a readable story. — read'a-bil'i-ty, read'a-ble-ness n. — read'a-bly adv.

Reade (rĕd), Charles. 1814-1884. British writer whose work includes The Cloister and the Hearth (1861), a historical novel.

read-er (rĕ'dər) n. 1. One that reads. 2. One who publicly recites literary works. 3. a. A person employed by a publisher to read and evaluate manuscripts.

b. One who corrects printers' proofs; a proofreader. 4. A teaching assistant who reads and grades examination papers. 5. Chiefly British. A university teacher, especially one ranking next below a professor. 6. a. A textbook of reading exercises. b. An anthology, especially a literary anthology. 7. A layperson or minor cleric who recites lessons or prayers in church services.

read-er-ship (rē'dər-shĭp') n. 1. The readers of a publication considered as a group. 2. Chiefly British. The office of a reader at a university.

read-i-ly (rĕd'ə-lē, rĕd'l-ē) adv. 1. In a prompt, timely manner; promptly. 2. In a cooperative manner; willingly. 3. In a manner indicating or connoting ease; easily.

read-ing (rē'dĭŋ) n. 1. The act or activity of one that reads. 2. The act or practice of rendering aloud written or printed matter: skilled at forensic reading. 3. An official or public recitation of written material: the reading of a will; a reading by the poet of her own works. 4. a. The specific form of a particular passage in a text: an unusual reading of the old manuscript. b. The distinctive interpretation of a work of performing art given by the person or persons performing it. 5. A personal interpretation or appraisal: He gave us his reading of the situation. 6. Written or printed material. 7. The information indicated by a gauge or graduated instrument.

Read-ing (rĕd'ĭŋ) 1. A borough of south-central England west of London. Occupied by the Danes in 871, it was chartered in 1253. Population, 136,200. 2. A town of northeast Massachusetts, a primarily residential suburb of Boston. Population, 22,539. 3. A city of southeast Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill River northwest of Philadelphia. Settled in 1748, it is an important commercial, industrial, and transportation center. Population, 78,380.

Read-ing (rĕd'ĭŋ), First Marquis of Title of Rufus Daniel Isaacs. 1860-1935. British politician, diplomat, and colonial administrator who served as the lord chief justice of England (1913-1921) and viceroy of India (1921-1926).

read-ing desk (rē'dĭŋ dĕsk) n. A desk or stand, usually with a slanted top, for holding a book or papers for a standing reader.

re-ad-just (rē'ə-jüst') v. tr. re-ad-just-ed, re-ad-just-ing, re-ad-justs. To adjust or arrange again. —re'ad-just'er n. —re'ad-just'ment n.

read-on-ly memory (rĕd'ŏn'lē mĕm'ə-rē) n. Abbr. ROM Computer Science. A small memory that allows fast access to permanently stored data but prevents addition to or modification of the data.

read-out or read-out (rĕd'out') n. Computer Science. Presentation of data, usually in digital form, from calculations or storage.

read-y (rĕd'ē) adj. read-i-er, read-i-est. 1. Prepared or available for service, action, or progress: I am ready to work. The soup will be ready in a minute. The pupils are ready to learn to read. 2. Mentally disposed; willing: He was ready to believe her. 3. Likely or about to do something: She is ready to resign. 4. Prompt in apprehending or reacting: a ready intelligence; a ready response. 5. Available: ready money. — v. tr. read·ied, read·y·ing, read·ies. To cause to be ready. — idioms. at the ready. Available for immediate use: soldiers with machine guns at the ready; students with notebooks at the ready. make ready. To make preparations. [Middle English redy, from Old English rāde. See reidh- in Appendix.] — read/i·ness n.

read·y·made or read·y·made (rĕd'ē-mād') adj. 1. Already made, prepared, or available: ready-made clothes. 2. Preconceived: a raft of ready-made excuses.

read·y·mix (rĕd'ē-mĭks') n. A mixture in proper proportions of two or more ingredients, as of concrete or a food product, marketed for convenience; a pre-mix. — ready·mix, ready·mixed adj.

read·y·to·wear (rĕd'ē-tə-wâr') adj. Abbr. RTW 1. Marketed in a finished condition in standard sizes. Used of clothing. 2. Of, relating to, or doing business in ready-to-wear clothing. — n. Clothing marketed in a finished condition in standard sizes.

re·af·firm (rĕ'ə-fûrm') v. tr. re·af·firmed, re·af·firm·ing, re·af·firms. To affirm or assert again. — re'af·fir·ma'tion (rĕ'ăf-ər-mā'shən) n.

Rea·gan (rā'gən), Nancy Davis. Born 1921. First Lady of the United States (1981-1989) as the wife of President Ronald Reagan. She established a nationwide antidrug campaign.

Rea·gan (rā'gən), Ronald Wilson. Born 1911. The 40th President of the United States (1981-1989). An actor turned politician, he was governor of California (1967-1975) and defeated the incumbent Jimmy Carter in the 1980 presidential election. His administration was marked by economic recovery, military involvement in Grenada, Central America, Lebanon, and Libya, and improved relations with the Soviet Union.

re·a·gent (rĕ-ā'jənt) n. A substance used in a chemical reaction to detect, measure, examine, or produce other substances.

re·a·gin (rĕ-ā'jĭn) n. 1. An antibody found in the blood of individuals having a genetic predisposition to allergies such as asthma and hay fever. 2. A substance present in the blood of individuals having a positive serological test for syphilis. [REAG(ENT) + -IN.] — re'a·gin'ic (rĕ'ə-jĭn'ĭk) adj. — re'a·gin'i·cal·ly adv.

re·al¹ (rĕ'əl, rĕl) adj. 1. a. Being or occurring in fact or actuality; having verifiable existence: real objects; a real illness. b. True and actual; not imaginary, alleged, or ideal: real people, not ghosts; a real problem; a film based on real life. c. Of or founded on practical matters and concerns: a recent graduate experiencing the real world for the first time. 2. Genuine and authentic; not artificial or spurious: real mink; real humility. 3. Being no less than what is stated; worthy of the name: a real friend. 4. Free of pretense, falsehood, or affectation: tourists wishing for a real experience while on the guided tour. 5. Not to be taken lightly; serious: We're in real trouble. 6. Philosophy. Existing objectively in the world regardless of subjectivity or conventions of thought or language. 7. Relating to, being, or having value reckoned by actual purchasing power: real income; real growth. 8. Physics. Of, relating to, or being an image formed by light rays that converge in space. 9. Mathematics. Of, relating to, or being a real number.

10. Law. Of or relating to stationary or fixed property, such as buildings or land. — adv. Informal. Very: I'm real sorry about that. — n. 1. A thing or whole having actual existence. Often used with the: theories beyond the realm of the real.

2. Mathematics. A real number. — idiom. for real. Slang. Truly so in fact or actuality: “Is this place for real? A wolf in a... leisure suit and a cow in a print dress wait patiently on the couch in the lobby” (Teresa Carson). [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin reālis, from Latin rēs, thing. See rē- in Appendix.]

—real/ness n.

SYNONYMS: real, actual, true, existent. These adjectives are compared as they mean not imaginary but having verifiable existence. Real implies that something is genuine or authentic or that what it seems or purports to be tallies with fact: Don't lose the bracelet; it's made of real gold. My mother showed real sympathy for my predicament. "The general, in a well-feigned or real ecstasy, embraced him" (William Hickling Prescott). Actual means existing and not merely potential or possible: “rocks, trees... the actual world” (Henry David Thoreau); “what the actual things were which produced the emotion that you experienced” (Ernest Hemingway). True implies that something is consistent with fact, reality, or the actual state of things: “It is undesirable to believe a proposition when there is no ground whatever for supposing it true” (Bertrand Russell). Existent applies to what has life or being: Much of the beluga caviar existent in the world is found in the Soviet Union and Iran. See also Synonyms at authentic re·al² (rā-äl') n. pl. re·als or re·al·es (-ä'lès). A silver coin formerly used in Spain and Latin America. [Spanish, royal, real, from Latin rēgālis, royal, from rēx, rēg-, king. See reg- in Appendix.]

re·al³ (rā-äl') n. pl. reals or reis (rās). 1. A basic unit of currency in Brazil. See Table at currency. 2. A former unit of currency in Portugal. [Portuguese, royal, real, from Latin rēgālis, royal. See REAL².]

re·al estate (rē'əl ĭ-stāt', rēl) n. Abbr. R.E., RE Land, including all the natural resources and permanent buildings on it. —re'al-es-tate' (rē'əl-ĭ-stāt', rēl'-) adj.

re·al-gar (rē-äl'gär', -gär) n. A soft orange-red arsenic ore, As₂S₂, used in pyrotechnics and tanning and as a pigment. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin, from Catalan, from Arabic rahj al-gār, powder (of) the mine or cave : rahj, powder + al, the + gār, cave.]

re-align (rē'ə-līn') v. tr. re-aligned, re-align-ing, re-aligns. 1. To put back into proper order or alignment. 2. To make new groupings of or working arrangements between. —re-align'ment n.

re-al-ism (rē'ə-līz'əm) n. 1. An inclination toward literal truth and pragmatism. 2. The representation in art or literature of objects, actions, or social conditions as they actually are, without idealization or presentation in abstract form. 3. Philosophy. a. The scholastic doctrine, opposed to nominalism, that universals exist independently of their being thought. b. The modern philosophical doctrine, opposed to idealism, that physical objects exist independently of their being perceived.

re-al-ist (rē'ə-līst) n. 1. One who is inclined to literal truth and pragmatism. 2. A practitioner of artistic or philosophic realism.

re-al-is-tic (rē'ə-līs'tik) adj. 1. Tending to or expressing an awareness of things as they really are: She gave us a realistic appraisal of our chances. 2. Of or relating to the representation of objects, actions, or social conditions as they actually are: a realistic novel about ghetto life. See Synonyms at graphic. —re'al-is-'ti-cal-ly adv.

re-al-i-ty (rē-ăl'i-tē) n. pl. re-al-i-ties. 1. The quality or state of being actual or true. 2. One, such as a person, an entity, or an event, that is actual: "the weight of history and political realities" (Benno C. Schmidt, Jr.). 3. The totality of all things possessing actuality, existence, or essence. 4. That which exists objectively and in fact: Your observations do not seem to be about reality. 5. Philosophy. That which has necessary existence and not contingent existence. —idiom. in reality. In fact; actually.

reality principle (rē-ăl'i-tē prīn'sə-pəl) n. Psychiatry. Awareness of and adjustment to environmental demands in a manner that assures ultimate satisfaction of instinctual needs.

re-al-i-za-tion (rē'ə-lī-zā'shən) n. 1. The act of realizing or the condition of being realized. 2. The result of realizing.

re-al-ize (rē'ə-līz') v. re-aligned, re-align-ing, re-align-es. — v. tr. 1. To comprehend completely or correctly. 2. To make real; fulfill: He finally realized his lifelong ambition to learn how to play the violin. 3. To make realistic. 4. To obtain or achieve, as gain or profit: She realized a substantial return on the investment. 5. To bring in (a sum) as profit by sale. — v. intr. To exchange holdings or goods for money. [French réaliser, from Old French, from real, real. See REAL¹.] —re'al-iz'a-ble adj. —re'al-iz'er n.

re-al-ly (rē'ə-lē', rē'lē) adv. 1. In actual truth or fact: The horseshoe crab isn't really a crab at all. 2. Truly; genuinely: That was a really enjoyable evening. 3. Indeed: Really, you shouldn't have done it.

realm (rēlm) n. 1. A kingdom. 2. A field, sphere, or province: the realm of science. See Synonyms at field. [Middle English realme, from Old French, alteration (influenced by Old French reial, royal), of Latin regimen, government, from regere, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.]

re-al number (rē'əl nŭm'bər, rēl) n. Mathematics. A number that is rational or irrational, not imaginary.

re-al-po-li-tik (rā-äl'pō'li-tēk') n. A usually expansionist national policy having as its sole principle advancement of the national interest. [German : real, practical (from Late Latin reālis, real); see REAL¹ + Politik, politics (from French politique, political, policy); see POLITIC.] —re-al'po'li-tik'er n.

re-al time (rē'əl tīm, rēl) n. Computer Science. 1. The actual time in which a physical process under computer study or control occurs. 2. The time required for a computer to solve a problem, measured from the time data are fed in to the time a solution is received.

re-al-time (rē'əl-tīm', rēl'-) adj. Computer Science. Of or relating to computer systems that update information at the same rate as they receive data, enabling them to direct or control a process such as an automatic pilot.

Re-al-tor (rē'əl-tər, -tôr') A service mark used for a real-estate agent affiliated with the National Association of Realtors. This service mark often occurs in print in lowercase and in the plural as well: “None of the realtors who worked on the deal would comment” (Los Angeles Times). “The economic aftershocks are already rippling through the area’s non-defense businesses, from realtors to pizzerias” (New York Times). “Since virtually every other industry publicizes its top performers, the Realtors should be proud of theirs, too” (Chicago Tribune).

re-al-ty (rē'əl-tē) n. pl. re-al-ties. Real estate.

ream¹ (rēm) n. Abbr. rm. 1. A quantity of paper, formerly 480 sheets, now 500 sheets or, in a printer’s ream, 516 sheets. 2. Often reams. A very large amount: reams of work to do. [Middle English reme, from Old French reime, from Old Spanish resma, from Arabic rizmah, bundle.]

ream² (rēm) v. tr. reamed, ream-ing, reams. 1. To form, shape, taper, or enlarge (a hole) with or as if with a reamer. 2. To remove (material) by this process. 3. To squeeze the juice out of (fruit) with a reamer. [Possibly from Middle English remen, to make room, variant of rimen, from Old English rȳman. See reuə- in Appendix.]

ream-er (rē'mər) n. 1. Any of various tools used to shape or enlarge holes. 2. A utensil with a conical, ridged projection, used for extracting citrus-fruit juice.

re-an-i-mate (rē-än'ə-māt') v. tr. re-an-i-mat-ed, re-an-i-mat-ing, re-an-i-mates. 1. To give new life to: Her dancing reanimates the classical style.

2. To bring to life; evoke powerfully or effectively: a book that reanimates the Mayan civilization.

reap (rēp) v. reaped, reap-ing, reaps. — v. tr. 1. To cut (grain or pulse) for harvest with a scythe, sickle, or reaper. 2. To harvest (a crop). 3. To harvest a crop from: reaping a field. 4. To obtain as a result of effort: She reaped large profits from her unique invention. — v. intr. 1. To cut or harvest grain or pulse.

2. To obtain a return or reward. [Middle English repen, from Old English rīpan.]

SYNONYMS: reap, garner, gather, glean, harvest. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to collect”: reap grain; garner compliments; gathering mushrooms; glean information; harvested rich rewards.

reap·er (rē'pər) n. One that reaps, especially a machine for harvesting grain or pulse crops.

re·ap·por·tion (rē'ə-pôr'shən) v. tr. re·ap·por·tioned, re·ap·por·tion·ing, re·ap·por·tions. To distribute anew.

re·ap·por·tion·ment (rē'ə-pôr'shən-mənt) n. 1. The act of reapportioning or the state of being reapportioned. 2. Redistribution of representation in a legislative body, especially the periodic reallocation of U.S. congressional seats according to changes in the census figures as required by the Constitution.

re·ap·prais·al (rē'ə-prā'zəl) n. A new appraisal or evaluation.

re·ap·praise (rē'ə-prāz') v. tr. re·ap·praised, re·ap·prais·ing, re·ap·prais·es. To make a fresh appraisal or evaluation of.

rear¹ (rîr) n. 1. A hind part. 2. The point or area farthest from the front: the rear of the hall. 3. The part of a military deployment usually farthest from the fighting front. 4. Informal. The buttocks. — adj. Of, at, or located in the rear. [Middle English rere, rear of an army, short for rereward, rear guard. See REARWARD².]

rear² (rîr) v. reared, rear·ing, rears. — v. tr. 1. To care for (children or a child) during the early stages of life; bring up. 2. To lift upright; raise. 3. To build; erect. See Synonyms at lift. 4. To tend (growing plants or animals). — v. intr. 1. To rise on the hind legs, as a horse. 2. To rise high in the air; tower. [Middle English reren, to raise, from Old English ræran.] — rear'er n.

rear admiral (rîr äd'mər-əl) n. Abbr. RADM, R.A., RA, R. Adm. 1. A commissioned rank in the U.S. Navy or Coast Guard that is above commodore and below vice admiral. 2. One who holds this rank.

rear end (rîr ěnd) n. 1. The rear part: the rear end of a car. 2. Informal. The buttocks.

rear-end (rîr'ěnd') v. tr. rear--end·ed, rear--end·ing, rear--ends. Slang. To run into (another motor vehicle) from behind: My car was rear-ended by a truck. — rear'-end'er n.

rear guard (rîr gärd) n. A detachment of troops that protects the rear of a military force. [Middle English reregarde, from Old French : rere, backward (from Latin retrō); see re- in Appendix + garde, guard (from guarder, to defend); see GUARD.]

rear-guard (rîr'gärd') adj. 1. Of or relating to a rear guard. 2. Of or relating to economic, political, or social resistance: mounting a rear-guard effort to prevent tax increases.

re-ar-gue (rē-är'gyōō) v. tr. re-ar-gued, re-ar-gu-ing, re-ar-gues. 1. To argue again or repeatedly. 2. To debate again or present additional arguments for (a case or an issue, for example), especially in a court of law: filed a motion to reargue the case.

re-arm (rē-ärm') v. re-armed, re-arm-ing, re-arms. — v. tr. 1. To arm again. 2. To equip with better weapons. — v. intr. To arm oneself again. — re-ar'ma-ment (rē-är'mə-mənt) n.

rear-most (rîr'mōst') adj. Farthest in the rear; last.

re-ar-range (rē'ə-rānj') v. tr. re-ar-ranged, re-ar-rang-ing, re-ar-rang-es. To change the arrangement of. — re'ar-range'ment n.

rear-view mirror or rear-view mirror also rear view mirror (rîr'vyōō'mîr'ər) n. A mirror, such as one attached to a motor vehicle, that provides a view of what is behind.

rear-ward¹ (rîr'wərd) adv. Toward, to, or at the rear. — adj. At or in the rear. — n. A rearward direction, point, or position. — rear'wards adv.

rear-ward² (rîr'wôrd') n. The rear guard of an armed force. [Middle English rereward, from Anglo-Norman : rere, behind (from Latin retrō); see re- in Appendix + warde, guard (of Germanic origin); see wer-³ in Appendix.]

rea-son (rē'zən) n. 1. The basis or motive for an action, a decision, or a conviction. See Usage Note at because. See Usage Note at why. 2. A declaration made to explain or justify an action, a decision, or a conviction: inquired about her reason for leaving. 3. An underlying fact or cause that provides logical sense for a premise or an occurrence: There is reason to believe that the accused did not commit this crime. 4. The capacity for logical, rational, and analytic thought; intelligence. 5. Good judgment; sound sense. 6. A normal mental state; sanity: He has lost his reason. 7. Logic. A premise, usually the minor premise, of an argument. — v. rea-soned, rea-son-ing, rea-sons. — v. intr. 1. To use the faculty of reason; think logically. 2. To talk or argue logically and persuasively. 3. Obsolete. To engage in conversation or discussion. — v. tr. 1. To determine or conclude by logical thinking: reasoned out a solution to the problem. 2. To persuade or dissuade (someone) with reasons. — idioms. by reason of. Because of. in reason. With good sense or justification; reasonably. within reason. Within the bounds of good sense or practicality. with reason. With good cause; justifiably. [Middle English, from Old French raison, from Latin ratiō, ratiōn-, from ratus, past participle of rērī, to consider, think. See ar- in Appendix.] — rea'son-er n.

SYNONYMS: reason, intuition, understanding, judgment. These nouns refer to the intellectual faculty by means of which human beings seek or attain knowledge or truth. Reason is the power to think rationally and logically and to draw inferences: “the rationalist whose reason is not sufficient to teach him those limitations of the powers of conscious reason” (Friedrich August von Hayek). “Mere reason is insufficient to convince us of its [the Christian religion’s] veracity” (David Hume). Intuition is perception or comprehension, as of truths or facts, without the use of the rational process: “Because of their age-long training in human relations—for that is what feminine intuition really is—women have a special contribution to make to any group enterprise” (Margaret Mead). Understanding is the faculty by which one understands, often together with the comprehension resulting from its exercise: “So long as the human heart is strong and the human reason weak, Royalty will be strong because it appeals to diffused feeling, and Republics weak because they appeal to the understanding” (Walter Bagehot). “The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding” (Louis D. Brandeis). Judgment is the ability to assess situations or circumstances and draw sound conclusions: “my salad days, / When I was green in judgment” (Shakespeare). “At twenty years of age, the will reigns; at thirty, the wit; and at forty, the judgment” (Benjamin Franklin). See also Synonyms at cause mind think rea·son·a·ble (rē'zə-nə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of reasoning; rational: a reasonable person. 2. Governed by or being in accordance with reason or sound thinking: a reasonable solution to the problem. 3. Being within the bounds of common sense: arrive home at a reasonable hour. 4. Not excessive or extreme; fair: reasonable prices. —rea'son-a-bil'i-ty, rea'son-a-ble-ness n. —rea'son-a-bly adv.

rea·son·ing (rē'zə-nĭng) n. 1. Use of reason, especially to form conclusions, inferences, or judgments. 2. Evidence or arguments used in thinking or argumentation.

re·as·sem·ble (rē'ə-sēm'bəl) v. re-as-sem-bled, re-as-sem-bling, re-as-sem-bles. — v. tr. 1. To bring or gather together again: reassembled the cast for an anniversary performance of the musical. 2. To fit or joint the parts of (something) together again: took the entire artifact apart and reassembled it at the museum. — v. intr. To gather together again, especially in a different place: The crowd reassembled in front of the state house.

re·as·sign (rē'ə-sīn') v. tr. re-as-signed, re-as-sign-ing, re-as-signs. To assign to a new position, distribution, or function: reassigned the ambassador to a new post; reassigned the job to more experienced workers. —re-as-sign'ment n.

re·as·sure (rē'ə-shōōr') v. tr. re-as-sured, re-as-sur-ing, re-as-sures. 1. To restore confidence to. 2. To assure again. 3. To reinsure. —re'as-sur'ance n. —re'as-sur'ing-ly adv.

re·a·ta (rē-ä'tə) n. Variant of riata.

Ré·au·mur or Re·au·mur (rā'ō-myōōr') adj. Abbr. R, R. Relating to, being, or indicated on a thermometer scale that registers the freezing point of water as 0° and the boiling point as 80°. [After René Antoine Ferchault de RÉAUMUR.] Ré·au·mur (rā'ə-myōōr', -ō-, rā-ō-mür'), René Antoine Ferchault de.

1683-1757. French physicist who invented the alcohol thermometer and devised the Réaumur scale.

reave¹ (rēv) v. reaved or reft (rēft), reav·ing, reaves. Archaic. — v. tr.

1. To seize and carry off forcibly. 2. To deprive (one) of something; bereave. — v. intr. To rob, plunder, or pillage. [Middle English reven, to plunder, from Old English rēafian. See reup- in Appendix.]

reave² (rēv) v. tr. reaved or reft (rēft), reav·ing, reaves. Archaic. To break or tear apart. [Middle English reven, possibly alteration (influenced by reven, to plunder), of Old Norse rīfa, to rive.]

Reb¹ also reb (rēb) n. Informal. A Confederate soldier. [Short for REBEL.]

Reb² (rēb) n. Judaism. Used as a title of respect for a man. Used with the given name. [Yiddish, from Hebrew rabbî, my master. See RABBI.] re·bar·ba·tive (rē-bär'bə-tīv) adj. Tending to irritate; repellent: “He became rebarbative, prickly, spiteful” (Robert Craft). [French rébarbatif, from Old French, from (se) rebarber, to confront : re-, re- + barbe, beard (from Latin barba); see bhardh-ā- in Appendix.]

re·bate¹ (rē'bāt') n. A deduction from an amount to be paid or a return of part of an amount given in payment. — v. tr. re·bat·ed, re·bat·ing, re·bates

(rē'bāt', rī-bāt'). 1. To deduct or return (an amount) from a payment or bill.

2. To lessen; diminish. [From Middle English rebaten, to deduct, from Old French rabattre, rebatte, to reduce, to beat down again : re-, re- + abbattre, to beat down; see ABATE.] — re/bat·er n.

re·bate² (rē'bāt', rāb'īt) n. & v. Variant of rabbet.

re·ba·to (rī-bā'tō) also ra·ba·to (rə-) n. pl. re·ba·tos. A stiff, flaring collar of lace or other fabric, worn early in the 17th century. [Obsolete French rebateau, alteration of French rabat, from Old French, from rabattre, to turn down again, reduce. See REBATE¹.]

reb·be (rēb'ə, rēb'ē) n. A Jewish spiritual leader or rabbi, especially of a Hasidic sect. [Yiddish, from Hebrew rabbî, rabbi. See RABBI.] re·bec also re·beck (rē'bĕk') n. Music. A pear-shaped, two-stringed or three-stringed medieval instrument, played with a bow. [French, from Old French, alteration (influenced by bec, beak, from its shape), of rebebe, from Old Provençal rebeb, from Arabic rabāb.]

Re·bec·ca also Re·bek·ah (rī-bĕk'ə) In the Old Testament, the wife of Isaac and the mother of Jacob and Esau.

re·bel (rī-bĕl') v. intr. re·belled, re·bel·ling, re·bels. 1. To refuse allegiance to and oppose by force an established government or ruling authority. 2. To resist or defy an authority or a generally accepted convention. 3. To feel or express strong unwillingness or repugnance: She rebelled at the unwelcome suggestion. — n. also reb-el (rēb'əl) One who rebels or is in rebellion: "He is the perfect recruit for fascist movements: a rebel not a revolutionary, contemptuous yet envious of the rich and involved with them" (Stanley Hoffman). — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: rebel troops; a rebel army. [Middle English rebellēn, from Old French rebeller, from Latin rebellāre: re-, re- + bellāre, to make war (from bellum, war). N., Middle English, rebellious, rebel from Old French rebelle, from Latin rebellis, from rebellāre, to rebel.]

re·bel·lion (rī-bĕl'yən) n. 1. Open, armed, and organized resistance to a constituted government. 2. An act or a show of defiance toward an authority or established convention. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rebelliō, rebelliōn-, from rebellāre, to rebel. See REBEL.]

SYNONYMS: rebellion, revolution, revolt, mutiny, insurrection, uprising. These nouns denote acts of violence intended to change or overthrow an existing order or authority. Rebellion is open, armed, organized resistance to constituted political authority that often fails of its purpose: A rebellion in the officer corps led to chaos in the armed forces. A revolution is the overthrow of one government and its replacement with another: The 20th century has seen several major revolutions, which in turn have altered the balance of power among nations. Revolt is rejection of and rebellion against a prevailing state of affairs or a controlling authority: Fearing a taxpayers' revolt, the legislature passed a less confiscatory revenue bill. Mutiny is revolt against constituted authority, especially by sailors: The sailors, who had received low pay and poor rations, were finally in a state of mutiny. Insurrection and uprising apply to popular revolts that are sometimes limited or are viewed as being the first indications of a more extensive rebellion: The freedom fighters withdrew into the mountains, from which they mounted an insurrection against the junta. The 1956 uprising in Hungary was soon quelled by ruthless Soviet military action.

re·bel·lious (rī-bĕl'yəs) adj. 1. Prone to or participating in a rebellion: rebellious students. 2. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a rebel or rebellion: rebellious behavior. 3. Resisting treatment or control; unruly. See Synonyms at insubordinate. — re·bel'lious·ly adv. — re·bel'lious·ness n.

rebel yell (rī-bĕl'yēl) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See wahoo⁴.

re·bid (rē-bīd') v. re·bid, re·bid·den (-bīd'n) or re·bid, re·bid·ding, re·bids. — v. tr. 1. Games. To bid (a previously bid suit) again in bridge. 2. To offer a revised bid for (a contract). — v. intr. 1. Games. To bid again in the auction of a deal in bridge. 2. To offer a revised bid for a contract. — re'bid' n.

re·bind (rē-bīnd') v. tr. re·bound (-bound'), re·bind·ing, re·binds. To bind again, especially to put a new binding on (a book). — n. (rē'bīnd') A book that has been rebound.

re·birth (rē-bûrth', rē'bûrth') n. 1. A second or new birth; reincarnation. 2. A renaissance; a revival: a rebirth of classicism in architecture.

re·book (rē-bōök') v. re·booked, re·book·ing, re·books. — v. tr. 1. To book again. 2. To change a booking for (a performance or reservation). — v. intr. To make a new booking: rebooked on another airline.

re·boot (rē-bōōt') v. tr. re·boot·ed, re·boot·ing, re·boots. Computer Science. To turn a computer off and then on again; restart the operating system.

re·born (rē-bôrn') adj. Emotionally or spiritually revived or regenerated.

re·bound¹ (rē'bound', rī-) v. re·bound·ed, re·bound·ing, re·bounds. — v. intr. 1. To spring or bounce back after hitting or colliding with something. 2. To recover, as from depression or disappointment. 3. To reecho; resound. 4. Basketball. To retrieve and gain possession of the ball as it bounces off the backboard or rim after an unsuccessful shot. — v. tr. To cause to rebound. — n. (rē'bound', rī-bound') 1. A springing or bounding back; a recoil. 2. a. Sports. A rebounding or caroming ball or hockey puck. b. Basketball. The act or an instance of taking possession of a rebounding ball. 3. A quick recovery from or reaction to disappointment or depression. [Middle English rebounden, from Old French rebondir: re-, re- + bondir, to leap; see BOUND¹.] —re·bound·er n.

re·bound² (rē-bound') v. Past tense and past participle of rebind.

re·bo·zo (rī-bō'sō, rē-bô'thō) n. pl. re·bo·zos. A long scarf worn over the head and shoulders chiefly by Mexican women. [Spanish, from rebosar, to muffle with a shawl: re-, back (from Latin); see RE- + bozo, muzzle, mouth (from Vulgar Latin bucceum*, from Latin bucca, cheek).]

re·broad·cast (rē-brôd'kăst') v. tr. re·broad·cast or re·broad·cast·ed, re·broad·cast·ing, re·broad·casts. 1. To repeat the broadcast of (a program). 2. To receive and send out (a broadcast) again. — n. A broadcast that is repeated or that is relayed from another station.

re·buff (rī-bŭf') n. 1. A blunt or abrupt repulse or refusal, as to an offer. 2. A check or an abrupt setback to progress or action. — v. tr. re·buffed, re·buff·ing, re·buffs. 1. To reject bluntly, often disdainfully; snub. See Synonyms at refuse¹. 2. To repel or drive back. [From obsolete French rebuffer, to reject, from Italian ribuffare, from ribuffo, reprimand: ri-, back (from Latin re-); see RE- + buffo, gust, puff (of imitative origin).]

re·build (rē-bīld') v. tr. re·built (-bīlt'), re·build·ing, re·builds. 1. To build again. 2. To make extensive structural repairs on. 3. To remodel or make extensive changes in: tried to rebuild society.

re-buke (rĭ-byōōk') v. tr. re-buked, re-buk-ing, re-bukes. 1. To criticize or reprove sharply; reprimand. See Synonyms at admonish. 2. To check or repress. — n. A sharp reproof. [Middle English rebuken, from Old North French rebuker : re-, back (from Latin); see RE- + buker*, to strike, chop wood (variant of Old French buschier, from busche, firewood, of Germanic origin).]

re-bus (rē'bəs) n. re-bus-es. A representation of words in the form of pictures or symbols, often presented as a puzzle. [Latin rēbus, ablative pl. of rēs, thing. See rē- in Appendix.]

re-but (rĭ-büt') v. re-but-ted, re-but-ting, re-butts. — v. tr. 1. To refute, especially by offering opposing evidence or arguments, as in a legal case. 2. To repel. — v. intr. To present opposing evidence or arguments. [Middle English reboten, rebutte, to rebuke, repel, from Old French rebouter : re-, re- + bouter, to push (of Germanic origin); see bhau- in Appendix.]

re-but-tal (rĭ-büt'l) n. 1. The act of rebutting. 2. A statement made in rebutting.

re-but-ter (rĭ-büt'ər) n. One who refutes or rebuts.

rec (rĕk) n. Informal. Recreation. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a rec room; a rec hall.

rec. abbr. 1. Receipt. 2. Record; recording. 3. Recreation.

re-cal-ci-trant (rĭ-käl'sĭ-trənt) adj. Marked by stubborn resistance to and defiance of authority or guidance. See Synonyms at unruly. — n. A recalcitrant person. [Late Latin recalcitrāns, recalcitrant- present participle of recalcitrāre, to be disobedient, from Latin, to deny access : re-, re- + calcitrāre, to kick (from calx, calc-, heel).] — re-cal'ci-trance, re-cal'ci-tran-cy n.

re-cal-cu-late (rē-käl'kyə-lāt') v. tr. re-cal-cu-lat-ed, re-cal-cu-lat-ing, re-cal-cu-lates. To calculate again, especially in order to eliminate errors or to incorporate additional factors or data. — re'cal-cu-la'tion n.

re-ca-les-cence (rē'kə-lĕs'əns) n. A sudden glowing in a cooling metal caused by liberation of the latent heat of transformation. [From Latin recalēscēns, recalē-scent- present participle of recalēscere, to grow warm again : re-, re- + calēscere, to become warm, inchoative of calēre, to be warm; see kelə⁻¹ in Appendix.] — re'ca-les'cent adj.

re-call (rĭ-kôl') v. tr. re-called, re-cal-ling, re-calls. 1. To ask or order to return: recalled all workers who had been laid off. 2. To summon back to awareness of or concern with the subject or situation at hand. 3. To remember; recollect. See Synonyms at remember. 4. To cancel, take back, or revoke. 5. To bring back; restore. 6. To request return (of a product) to the manufacturer, as for necessary repairs or adjustments. — n. (also rē'kôl') 1. The act of recalling or summoning back, especially an official order to return. 2. A signal, such as a bugle call, used to summon troops back to their posts. 3. The ability to remember information or experiences. 4. The act of revoking. 5. a. The procedure by which a public official may be removed from office by popular vote. b. The right to employ this procedure. 6. A request by the manufacturer of a product that has been identified as defective to return it, as for necessary repairs or adjustments. —re-call/a·ble adj.

Ré·ca·mi·er (rā'kəm-yā', rā-kām-), Jeanne Françoise Julie Adélaïde Bernard. 1777-1849. French socialite whose Parisian salon attracted noted literary and political figures.

re·cant (rĭ-kănt') v. re·cant·ed, re·cant·ing, re·cants. — v. tr. To make a formal retraction or disavowal of (a statement or belief to which one has previously committed oneself). — v. intr. To make a formal retraction or disavowal of a previously held statement or belief. [Latin recantāre: re-, re- + cantāre, to sing, frequentative of canere; see kan- in Appendix.] —re'can·ta'tion (rē'kănt-ā'shən) n. —re·cant'er n.

re·cap¹ (rē'kăp') v. tr. re·capped, re·cap·ping, re·caps. 1. To replace a cap or caplike covering on: recapped the bottle. 2. To restore (a used tire of a motor vehicle) to usable condition by bonding new rubber onto the worn tread and lateral surface. — n. (rē'kăp') A tire that has been recapped.

re·cap² (rē'kăp') Informal. v. tr. re·capped, re·cap·ping, re·caps. To recapitulate: recapped the headlines at the end of the news broadcast. — n. A recapitulation, as of a news report.

re·cap·i·tal·ize (rē-kăp'i-tl-īz') v. tr. re·cap·i·tal·ized, re·cap·i·tal·iz·ing, re·cap·i·tal·iz·es. To change the capital structure of (a corporation). —re·cap'i·tal·i·za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

re·ca·pit·u·late (rē'kə-pĭch'ə-lāt') v. re·ca·pit·u·lat·ed, re·ca·pit·u·lat·ing, re·ca·pit·u·lates. — v. tr. 1. To repeat in concise form. 2. Biology. To appear to repeat (the evolutionary stages of the species) during the embryonic development of the individual organism. — v. intr. To make a summary. [Latin recapitulāre, recapitulāt-: re-, re- + capitulum, main point, heading diminutive of caput, capit-, head. See kaput- in Appendix.] —re·ca·pit'u·la'tive, re·ca·pit'u·la·to'ry (-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

re·ca·pit·u·la·tion (rē'kə-pĭch'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of recapitulating. 2. A summary or concise review. 3. See biogenesis (n., sense 4).

4. Music. Restatement of the exposition that constitutes the third section of the typical sonata form.

recapitulation theory (rē'kə-pĭch'ə-lā'shən thē'ə-rē) n. See biogenetic law.

re·cap·ture (rē-kăp'chər) n. 1. a. The act of retaking or recovering. b. The condition of having been retaken or recovered. 2. Law. The act or an instance of retaking booty or goods. 3. Something recaptured. 4. The lawful taking by a government of a fixed amount of the profits of a public-service corporation in excess of a stipulated rate of return. — v. tr. re·cap·tured, re·cap·tur·ing, re·cap·tures. 1. To capture again. 2. To recall: an attempt to recapture the past.

3. To acquire by the government procedure of recapture.

re·cast (rē-kăst') v. tr. re·cast, re·cast·ing, re·casts. 1. To mold again: recast a bell. 2. To set down or present (ideas, for example) in a new or different arrangement: recast a sentence. 3. To change the cast of (a theatrical production). — n. (rē'kăst') 1. The act or process of recasting. 2. Something produced by recasting.

rec·ce (rĕk'ĕ) n. Slang. Reconnaissance. — rec'ce adj.

recd. abbr. Received.

re·cede (rĭ-sĕd') v. intr. re·ced·ed, re·ced·ing, re·cedes. 1. To move back or away from a limit, point, or mark: The flood waters finally receded. 2. To slope backward. 3. To become or seem to become fainter or more distant: With the passage of time, my unhappy memories of the place receded. 4. To withdraw or retreat. [Middle English receden, from Old French receder, from Latin recēdere: re-, re- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: recede, ebb, retract, retreat, retrograde. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to move backward”: a hairline that had receded; waters ebbing at low tide; a turtle retracting its head into its shell; a retreating army; academic standards that have retrograded.

ANTONYM: advance

re·cede (rĕ-sĕd') v. tr. re·ced·ed, re·ced·ing, re·cedes. To yield or grant to one formerly in possession; cede (something) back.

re·ceipt (rĭ-sĕt') n. Abbr. rcpt., rec., rect. 1. a. The act of receiving: We are in receipt of your letter. b. The fact of being or having been received: They denied receipt of the shipment. 2. Often receipts. A quantity or amount received: cash receipts. 3. A written acknowledgment that a specified article, sum of money, or shipment of merchandise has been received. 4. A recipe. — v. re·ceipt·ed, re·ceipt·ing, re·ceipts. — v. tr. 1. To mark (a bill) as having been paid. 2. To give or write a receipt for (money paid or goods or services delivered). — v. intr. To give a receipt. [Middle English receite, from Old North French, from Medieval Latin recepta, medical prescription, money received, from Latin, feminine past participle of recipere, to receive. See RECEIVE.]

re·ceiv·a·ble (rĭ-sĕv'və-bəl) adj. 1. Suitable for being received or accepted, especially as payment. 2. Awaiting or requiring payment; due or collectible. — n. A business asset due to one business from another. Often used in the plural.

re·ceive (rĭ-sĕv') v. re·ceiv·ed, re·ceiv·ing, re·ceives. — v. tr. 1. To take or acquire (something given, offered, or transmitted); get. 2. To hear or see (information, for example): receive bad news; received a good report of the group's activities. 3. To have (a title, for example) bestowed on oneself. 4. To meet with; experience: receive sympathetic treatment. 5. To have inflicted or imposed on oneself: receive a penalty. 6. To bear the weight or force of; support: The beams receive the full weight of the walls and roof. 7. To take or intercept the impact of (a blow, for example). 8. To take in, hold, or contain: a tank that receives rainwater. 9. To admit: receive new members. 10. To greet or welcome: receive guests. 11. To perceive or acquire mentally: receive a bad impression. 12. To regard with approval or disapproval: essays that were received well. 13. To listen to and acknowledge formally and authoritatively: The judge received their oath of allegiance. — v. intr. 1. To acquire or get something; be a recipient. 2. To admit or welcome guests or visitors: The couple are not receiving this winter. 3. To partake of the Eucharist. 4. Electronics. To convert incoming electromagnetic waves into visible or audible signals. 5. Football. To catch or take possession of a kicked ball. [Middle English receiven, from Old North French receivre, from Latin recipere: re-, re- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.]

re-ceived (rĭ-sēvd') adj. Having been accepted as true or worthy: “Received political wisdom says not. Surveys show otherwise” (Economist).

Re-ceived Pronunciation (rĭ-sēvd' prə-nŭn'sē-ā'shən) n. Abbr. R.P. The pronunciation of British English that reflects the social and cultural predominance of southern English speech, that was at one time characteristic of the English spoken at the public schools and Oxford and Cambridge Universities, and that was accepted as the standard form of English used in broadcasting. Also called BBC English, Southern Educated Standard.

Received Standard English (rĭ-sēvd' stān'dərd ɪŋ'glɪʃ) n. British English characterized especially by Received Pronunciation.

re-ceiver (rĭ-sē'vər) n. 1. One that receives something: a receiver of many compliments. 2. Electronics. A device, such as a part of a radio, television set, or telephone, that receives incoming radio signals and converts them to perceptible forms, such as sound or light. 3. An official appointed to receive and account for money due. 4. Law. A person appointed by a court administrator to take into custody the property or funds of others, pending litigation. 5. A person who knowingly buys or receives stolen goods. 6. A receptacle intended for a specific purpose. 7. a. Football. A member of the offensive team eligible to catch a forward pass. b. Baseball. The catcher.

re-ceiver-ship (rĭ-sē'vər-shĭp') n. Law. 1. The office or functions of a receiver. 2. The state of being held by a receiver: The company went into receiver-ship.

re-ceiving blanket (rĭ-sē'vĭŋ blāŋ'kĭt) n. A lightweight blanket used to wrap a baby especially after a bath.

receiving line (rĭ-sē'vĭŋ lĭn) n. A line of people formed to greet arriving guests individually, as at a formal gathering.

re-cen-sion (rĭ-sĕn/'shən) n. 1. A critical revision of a text incorporating the most plausible elements found in varying sources. 2. A text so revised. [Latin recĕnsiō, recĕnsiōn-, a reviewing, from recĕnsĕre, to review : re-, re- + cĕnsĕre, to estimate; see kens- in Appendix.]

re-cent (rĕ/'sənt) adj. 1. Of, belonging to, or occurring at a time immediately before the present. 2. Modern; new. 3. Recent. Geology. Of, belonging to, or denoting the Holocene Epoch. [Middle English, new, fresh, from Latin recĕns, recent-. See ken- in Appendix.] —re'/cen-cy, re'/cent-ness n. —re'/cent-ly adv.

re-cep-ta-cle (rĭ-sĕp/'tə-kəl) n. 1. A container that holds items or matter. 2. Botany. The expanded tip of a flower stalk or axis that bears the floral organs or the group of flowers in a head. 3. Electronics. A fitting connected to a power supply and equipped to receive a plug. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin receptāculum, from receptāre, to receive again, frequentative of recipere, to receive. See RECEIVE.]

re-cep-tion (rĭ-sĕp/'shən) n. 1. The act or process of receiving or of being received. 2. A welcome, greeting, or acceptance: a friendly reception. 3. A social function, especially one intended to provide a welcome or greeting: a wedding reception. 4. Mental approval or acceptance: the reception of a new theory. 5. Electronics. a. Conversion of transmitted radio waves or electric signals into perceptible forms, such as sound or light, by means of antennas and electronic equipment. b. The condition or quality of the waves or signals so received. [Middle English reception, from Old French reception, from Latin receptiō, receptiōn-, from receptus, past participle of recipere, to receive. See RECEIVE.]

re-cep-tion-ist (rĭ-sĕp/'shə-nĭst) n. An office worker employed chiefly to receive visitors and answer the telephone.

re-cep-tive (rĭ-sĕp/'tĭv) adj. 1. Capable of or qualified for receiving. 2. Ready or willing to receive favorably: receptive to their proposals. 3. Linguistics. Of or relating to the skills of listening and reading. —re-cep'tive-ly adv. —re'-cep-tiv'i-ty, re-cep'tive-ness n.

re-cep-tor (rĭ-sĕp/'tər) n. 1. Physiology. A specialized cell or group of nerve endings that responds to sensory stimuli. 2. Biochemistry. A molecular structure or site on the surface or interior of a cell that binds with substances such as hormones, antigens, drugs, or neurotransmitters.

re-cer-ti-fy (rĕ-sŭr/'tə-fĭ') v. tr. re-cer-ti-fied, re-cer-ti-fy-ing, re-cer-ti-fies. To renew the certification of, especially certification given by a licensing board. —re'cer-ti-fi-ca-tion (-fĭ-kā/'shən) n.

re-cess (rĕ/'sĕs', rĭ-sĕs') n. 1. a. A temporary cessation of the customary activities of an engagement, occupation, or pursuit. b. The period of such cessation. See Synonyms at pause. 2. Often recesses. A remote, secret, or secluded place. 3. a. An indentation or small hollow. b. An alcove. — v. re-cessed, re-cess-ing, re-cess-es. — v. tr. 1. To place in a recess. 2. To create or fashion a recess in: recessed a portion of the wall. 3. To suspend for a recess: The committee chair recessed the hearings. — v. intr. To take a recess: The investigators recessed for lunch. [Latin recessus, retreat, from past participle of recēdere, to recede. See RECEDE.]

re-ces-sion (rĭ-sĕsh'ə̀n) n. 1. The act of withdrawing or going back. 2. An extended decline in general business activity, typically three consecutive quarters of falling real gross national product. 3. The withdrawal in a line or file of participants in a ceremony, especially clerics and choir members after a church service. [Latin recessiō, recessiōn-, from recessus, past participle of recēdere, to recede. See RECEDE.]

re-ces-sion (rĕ-sĕsh'ə̀n) n. Law. The act of restoring possession to a former owner.

re-ces-sion-al (rĭ-sĕsh'ə̀-ŋəl) n. 1. Music. A hymn that accompanies the exit of the clergy and choir after a service. 2. A recession from a church. — adj. Of or relating to a recession.

re-ces-sive (rĭ-sĕs'iv) adj. 1. Tending to go backward or recede. 2. a. Genetics. Of, relating to, or designating an allele that does not produce a characteristic effect when present with a dominant allele. b. Of or relating to a trait that is expressed only when the determining allele is present in the homozygous condition. — n. Genetics. 1. A recessive allele or trait. 2. An organism having a recessive trait. — re-ces'sive-ly adv. — re-ces'sive-ness n.

re-charge (rĕ-chärj') v. tr. re-charged, re-charg-ing, re-charg-es. To charge again, especially to reenergize a storage battery. — re'charge' n. — re-charge'a-ble adj. — re-charg'er n.

ré-chauf-fé (rā'shō-fā') n. 1. Warmed leftover food. 2. Old material reworked or rehashed. [French, past participle of réchauffer, to reheat, warm over, from Old French rechauffer : re-, re- + echauffer, to warm (from Vulgar Latin excalefāre* : Latin ex-, intensive pref.; see ex- + Latin calefacere, to warm); see CHAFE.]

re-cher-ché (rə-shĕr'shā') adj. 1. Uncommon; rare. 2. Exquisite; choice. 3. Overrefined; forced. 4. Pretentious; overblown. [French, past participle of rechercher, to research, from Old French rechercher. See RESEARCH.]

re-cid-i-vism (rĭ-sĭd'ə̀-ŋĭz'əm) n. A tendency to lapse into a previous pattern of behavior, especially a tendency to return to criminal habits. [From recidivist, from French récidiviste, from récidiver, to relapse, from Medieval Latin recidivāre, from Latin recidivus, falling back, from recidere, to fall back : re-, re- + cadere, to fall; see kad- in Appendix.] — re-cid'i-vist n. — re-cid'i-vis'tic, re-cid'i-vous adj.

Re-ci-fe (rə-sē'fə) A city of northeast Brazil on the Atlantic Ocean south of Natal. First settled in 1535, it was plundered by English privateers in 1595 and occupied by the Dutch from 1630 to 1654. Population, 1,203,899.

recip. abbr. Reciprocal; reciprocity.

rec-i-pe (rēs'ə-pē') n. 1. A set of directions with a list of ingredients for making or preparing something, especially food. 2. A formula for or means to a desired end: a recipe for success. 3. A medical prescription. [Latin, imperative of recipere, to take, receive. See RECEIVE.]

re-cip-i-ence (rī-sīp'ē-əns) also re-cip-i-en-cy (-ən-sē) n. Capacity to receive; receptivity.

re-cip-i-ent (rī-sīp'ē-ənt) adj. Functioning as a receiver; receptive. — n.

1. One that receives or is receptive. 2. One who receives blood, tissue, or an organ from a donor. [Latin recipiēns, recipient- present participle of recipere, to receive. See RECEIVE.]

re-cip-ro-cal (rī-sīp'rə-kəl) adj. Abbr. recip. 1. Concerning each of two or more persons or things. 2. Interchanged, given, or owed to each other: reciprocal agreements to abolish customs duties; a reciprocal invitation to lunch.

3. Performed, experienced, or felt by both sides: reciprocal respect.

4. Interchangeable; complementary: reciprocal electric outlets. 5. Grammar.

Expressing mutual action or relationship. Used of some verbs and compound pronouns. 6. Mathematics. Of or relating to the reciprocal of a quantity.

7. Physiology. Of or relating to a neuromuscular phenomenon in which the excitation of one group of muscles is accompanied by the inhibition of another.

8. Genetics. Of or designating a pair of crosses in which the male parent in one cross is of the same genotype or phenotype as the female parent in the other cross. — n. Abbr. recip. 1. Something that is reciprocal to something else.

2. Mathematics. A number related to another in such a way that when multiplied together their product is 1. For example, the reciprocal of 7 is $\frac{1}{7}$; the reciprocal of $\frac{1}{3}$ is 3. [From Latin reciprocus, alternating. See per¹ in Appendix.]

—re-cip'ro-cal'i-ty (-kāl'ī-tē), re-cip'ro-cal-ness (-kəl-nīs) n.

—re-cip'ro-cal-ly adv.

reciprocal pronoun (rī-sīp'rə-kəl prō'noun') n. Grammar. A pronoun or pronominal phrase, such as each other, that expresses mutual action or relationship.

re-cip-ro-cate (rī-sīp'rə-kāt') v. re-cip-ro-cat-ed, re-cip-ro-cat-ing, re-cip-ro-cates. — v. tr. 1. To give or take mutually; interchange. 2. To show, feel, or give in response or return. — v. intr. 1. To move back and forth alternately. 2. To give and take something mutually. 3. To make a return for something given or done. 4. To be complementary or equivalent. [Latin reciprocāre, reciprocāt-, to move back and forth, from reciprocus, alternating. See RECIPROCAL.]

—re-cip'ro-ca'tive adj. —re-cip'ro-ca'tor n.

SYNONYMS: reciprocate, requite, return. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to give, take, or feel reciprocally”: doesn't reciprocate favors; consideration requited with callous disregard; return a compliment.

re·cip·ro·cat·ing engine (rĭ-sĭp' rə-kā'tĭŋ ěn'jĭn) n. An engine in which the crankshaft is turned by pistons moving up and down in a cylinder.

re·cip·ro·ca·tion (rĭ-sĭp' rə-kā'shən) n. 1. An alternating back-and-forth movement. 2. The act or fact of reciprocating; interchange.

rec·i·proc·i·ty (rĕs' ə-prŏs' ĭ-tē) n. pl. rec·i·proc·i·ties. Abbr. recip. 1. A reciprocal condition or relationship. 2. A mutual or cooperative interchange of favors or privileges, especially the exchange of rights or privileges of trade between nations.

re·ci·sion (rĭ-sĭzh' ən) n. The act of rescinding; annulment or cancellation.

[Obsolete French, from Old French, annulment of a judgment, from Latin recīsio, recīsion-, from recūsus, past participle of recīdere, to cut back : re-, re- + caedere, to cut; see kaə-id- in Appendix.]

re·cit·al (rĭ-sĭt' əl) n. 1. The act of reading or reciting in a public performance.

2. A very detailed account or report of something; a narration. 3. A public performance of music or dance, especially by a solo performer. — re·ci'tal·ist n.

rec·i·ta·tion (rĕs' ĭ-tā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of reciting memorized materials in a public performance. b. The material so presented. 2. a. Oral delivery of prepared lessons by a pupil. b. The class period within which this delivery occurs.

rec·i·ta·tive¹ (rĕs' ĭ-tā' tĭv, rĭ-sĭ' tə-tĭv) adj. Of, relating to, or having the character of a recital or recitation.

rec·i·ta·tive² (rĕs' ĭ-tə-tēv') n. Music. 1. A style used in operas, oratorios, and cantatas in which the text is declaimed in the rhythm of natural speech with slight melodic variation. 2. A passage rendered in this style. Also called recitativo [Italian recitativo, from recitare, to recite, from Latin recitāre. See RECITE.]

re·ci·ta·ti·vo (rĕs' ĭ-tə-tē' vŏ, rĕ' chē-tā-) n. pl. re·ci·ta·ti·vi (-vĕ) or re·ci·ta·ti·vos (-vŏz). Music. See recitative². [Italian. See RECITATIVE².]

re·cite (rĭ-sĭt') v. re·cit·ed, re·cit·ing, re·cites. — v. tr. 1. To repeat or utter aloud (something rehearsed or memorized), especially before an audience. 2. To relate in detail. See Synonyms at describe. 3. To list or enumerate. — v. intr.

1. To deliver a recitation. 2. To repeat lessons prepared or memorized. [Middle English reciten, from Old French reciter, from Latin recitāre, to read out : re-, re- + citāre, to quote; see CITE.] — re·cit'er n.

reck (rĕk) v. tr. intr. recked, reck·ing, recks. To take heed of or to have caution. [Middle English reken, from Old English reccan. See reg- in Appendix.]

reck·less (rĕk' lĭs) adj. 1. a. Heedless or careless. b. Headstrong; rash.

2. Indifferent to or disregarding of consequences: a reckless driver. [Middle English reckeles, from Old English rēcelēas. See reg- in Appendix.] —reck'/less-ly adv. —reck'/less-ness n.

SYNONYMS: reckless, rash, precipitate, foolhardy, temerarious. These adjectives are compared as they mean given to or marked by unthinking boldness. Reckless suggests brazen indifference to or defiant disregard for consequences: “James... became the fiercest and most reckless of partisans” (Macaulay). Rash implies haste, impetuosity, and insufficient consideration: “Take calculated risks. That is quite different from being rash” (George S. Patton). Precipitate connotes headlong haste without due deliberation: “destroyed in a precipitate burning of his papers a few days before his death” (James Boswell). Foolhardy implies injudicious or imprudent boldness: “One of the hostages was foolhardy enough to try to wrest the gun from the hijacker’s hand. Temerarious suggests reckless presumption: “the temerarious use of Christian names” (H.G. Wells).

Reck-ling-hau-sen (rĕk'ling-hou'zən) A city of west-central Germany southwest of Münster. Originally a Saxon settlement, it was held by the archbishop of Cologne after 1236 and passed to Prussia in 1815. Population, 117,989.

reck-on (rĕk'ən) v. reck-oned, reck-on-ing, reck-ons. — v. tr. 1. To count or compute: reckon the cost. See Synonyms at calculate. 2. To consider as being; regard as. See Synonyms at consider. 3. Informal. To think or assume. — v. intr. 1. To make a calculation; figure. 2. To rely with confident expectancy. See Synonyms at rely. —phrasal verb. reckon with. To come to terms or settle accounts with. [Middle English reknen, from Old English gerecenian, to recount, arrange. See reg- in Appendix.]

reck-on-er (rĕk'ən-ər) n. A handbook of mathematical tables used to facilitate computation.

reck-on-ing (rĕk'ən-ŋŋ) n. 1. The act of counting or computing. 2. An itemized bill or statement of a sum due. 3. A settlement of accounts: a day of reckoning. 4. a. The act or process of calculating the position of a ship or an aircraft. b. The position so calculated.

re-claim (rĭ-klām') v. tr. re-claimed, re-claim-ing, re-claims. 1. To bring into or return to a suitable condition for use, as cultivation or habitation: reclaim marshlands; reclaim strip-mined land. 2. To procure (usable substances) from refuse or waste products. 3. To bring back, as from error, to a right or proper course; reform. See Synonyms at save¹. 4. To tame (a falcon, for example). [Middle English reclamen, to call back, from Old French reclamer, to entreat, from Latin reclāmāre: re-, re- + clāmāre, to cry out; see kela-² in Appendix.] —re-claim'a-ble adj. —re-claim'ant, re-claim'er n.

re-claim (rĕ-klām') v. tr. re--claimed, re--claim-ing, re--claims. To demand the restoration or return of (a possession, for example); claim again or back.

rec-la-ma-tion (rĕk'lā-mā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of reclaiming. 2. A restoration, as to productivity, usefulness, or morality. [Middle English reclamation, from Old French reclamation, from Latin reclāmātiō, reclāmātiōn-, cry of opposition, from reclāmātus, past participle of reclāmāre, to exclaim against. See RECLAIM.]

ré-clame (rā-klām') n. 1. Public acclaim. 2. A taste or flair for publicity. [French, advertising, from réclamer, to claim, beg for, from Old French reclamer, to exclaim against. See RECLAIM.]

rec-li-nate (rĕk'lā-nāt') adj. Botany. Bent or turned downward toward the base. [Latin reclīnātus, past participle of reclīnāre, to recline. See RECLINE.]

re-cline (rĭ-klĭn') v. re-clined, re-clin-ing, re-clines. — v. tr. To cause to assume a leaning or prone position. — v. intr. To lie back or down. [Middle English reclinen, from Old French recliner, from Latin reclīnāre : re-, re- + -clīnāre, to bend; see klei- in Appendix.] — rec'li-na'tion (rĕk'lā-nā'shən) n.

re-clin-er (rĭ-klĭ'nər) n. One that reclines, as an armchair that reclines when the sitter lowers the chair's back and raises its front.

re-cluse (rĕk'lōōs', rĭ-klōōs') n. A person who withdraws from the world to live in seclusion and often in solitude. — adj. Withdrawn from the world; reclusive. [Middle English, from Old French reclus, from Latin reclūsus, past participle of reclūdere, to shut up : re-, re- + claudere, to close.]

re-clu-sion (rĭ-klōō'zhən) n. 1. The condition of being a recluse. 2. The state of being in solitary confinement.

re-clu-sive (rĭ-klōō'sĭv, -zĭv) adj. 1. Seeking or preferring seclusion or isolation. 2. Providing seclusion: a reclusive hut. — re-clu'sive-ly adv. — re-clu'-sive-ness n.

rec-og-ni-tion (rĕk'æg-nĭsh'ən) n. 1. The act of recognizing or condition of being recognized. 2. An awareness that something perceived has been perceived before. 3. An acceptance as true or valid, as of a claim: a recognition of their civil rights. 4. Attention or favorable notice: She received recognition for her many achievements. 5. Official acceptance of the national status of a new government by another nation. 6. Biology. The ability of one molecule to attach itself to another molecule having a complementary shape, as in enzyme-substrate and antibody-antigen interactions. [Middle English recognicion, knowledge of an event, from Old French recognition, from Latin recognitiō, recognitiōn-, act of recognizing, from recognitus, past participle of recognōscere, to recognize. See RECOGNIZE.] — re-cog'ni-to'ry (rĭ-kōg'nĭ-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē), re-cog'ni-tive (-tĭv) adj.

re-cog-ni-zance (rĭ-kōg'nĭ-zəns, -kōn'ĭ-) n. 1. Law. a. An obligation of record that is entered into before a court or magistrate, containing a condition to perform a particular act, such as making a court appearance. b. A sum of money pledged to assure the performance of such an act. 2. A recognition. 3. Archaic. A pledge; a token. [Middle English recognisanze, from Old French recognissance, alteration (influenced by Medieval Latin recognizāre, to recognize), of reconnoissance, from reconoistre, reconoiss-, to recognize. See RECOGNIZE.]

—re-cog/ni-zant adj.

rec-og-nize (rĕk'əg-nīz') v. tr. rec-og-nized, rec-og-niz-ing, rec-og-niz-es.

1. To know to be something that has been perceived before: recognize a face.
2. To know or identify from past experience or knowledge: recognize hostility.
3. To perceive or show acceptance of the validity or reality of: recognizes the concerns of the tenants. 4. To permit to address a meeting: The club's president recognized the new member. 5. To accept officially the national status of as a new government. 6. To show awareness of; approve of or appreciate: recognize services rendered. 7. To admit the acquaintance of, as by salutation: recognize an old friend with a cheerful greeting. 8. Law. To enter into a recognizance. 9. Biology. To exhibit recognition for (an antigen or a substrate, for example). [Middle English recognisen, to resume possession of land, alteration (influenced by Medieval Latin recognizāre, to recognize), of Old French reconoistre, reconoiss-, to know again, from Latin recognōscere : re-, re- + cognōscere, to get to know; see gnō- in Appendix.] —rec'og-niz'a-ble adj. —rec'og-niz'a-bly adv. —rec'og-niz'er n.

re-coil (rĭ-koil') v. intr. re-coiled, re-coil-ing, re-coils. 1. To spring back, as upon firing. 2. To shrink back, as in fear or repugnance. 3. To fall back; return: "Violence does, in truth, recoil upon the violent" (Arthur Conan Doyle). — n. (also rĕ'koil') 1. The backward action of a firearm upon firing. 2. The act or state of recoiling; reaction. [Middle English recoilen, from Old French reculer : re-, re- + cul, buttocks (from Latin cūlus); see (s)keu- in Appendix.] —re-coil'er n.

SYNONYMS: recoil, blench, quail, shrink, flinch. These verbs all mean to draw back involuntarily, as through fright, timidity, or abhorrence. To recoil is to spring back; the term can imply a physical motion or an emotional withdrawal or retreat: "Those who had felt his strength recoiled from his presence" (Sir Walter Scott). "With a sudden revulsion his heart recoiled from its purpose" (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow). Blench suggests shying away, as to evade something unpleasant or threatening: "split-second dealmaking and risks that would make a currency dealer blench" (Financial Times). Quail implies cringing loss of courage, as that resulting from being intimidated: "She made Barnes quail before her by the shafts of contempt which she flashed at him" (Thackeray). To shrink is to start back instinctively, as in avoidance: "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country" (Thomas Paine). Flinch denotes a shrinking away from what is unpleasant or difficult; it often implies a faint-hearted retreat, as from a necessary undertaking: "We did not flinch but gave our lives to save Greece" (Simonides).

re-coil-less (rĭ-koil'lis, rē'koil'-) adj. Of or being a weapon designed to minimize the effect of recoil: a recoilless rifle.

rec-ol-lect (rĕk'ə-lĕkt') v. rec-ol-lect-ed, rec-ol-lect-ing, rec-ol-lects. — v. tr. To recall to mind. See Synonyms at remember. — v. intr. To have a recollection. [Medieval Latin recolligere, recollĕct-, from Latin, to gather up : re-, re- + colligere, to collect; see COLLECT¹.] — rec'ol-lect'tive adj. — rec'ol-lect'tive-ly adv.

re-col-lect (rē'kə-lĕkt') v. tr. re-col-lect-ed, re-col-lect-ing, re-col-lects.

1. To collect again: re-collect monies owed. 2. To calm or control (oneself).

rec-ol-lec-tion (rĕk'ə-lĕk'shən) n. 1. The act or power of recollecting.

2. Something recollected. See Synonyms at memory.

re-com-bi-nant (rē-kŏm'bə-nənt) Genetics. n. 1. An organism or a cell in which genetic recombination has taken place. 2. Genetic material produced by gene-splicing. — adj. 1. Formed by or showing recombination: a recombinant chromosome. 2. Of or relating to recombinant DNA: recombinant fragments; recombinant technology.

recombinant DNA (rē-kŏm'bə-nənt dē'ĕn-ā') n. Genetically engineered DNA prepared by transplanting or splicing genes from one species into the cells of a host organism of a different species. Such DNA becomes part of the host's genetic makeup and is replicated.

re-com-bi-nase (rē-kŏm'bə-nās', -nāz') n. An enzyme that catalyzes genetic recombination.

re-com-bi-na-tion (rē'kŏm-bə-nā'shən) n. The natural formation in offspring of genetic combinations not present in parents, by the processes of crossing over or independent assortment.

re-com-bine (rē'kəm-bīn') v. re-com-bined, re-com-bin-ing, re-com-bines. — v. tr. To combine (things) again. — v. intr. 1. To combine again. 2. Genetics. To undergo or cause recombination; form new combinations.

rec-om-mend (rĕk'ə-mĕnd') v. rec-om-mend-ed, rec-om-mend-ing, rec-om-mends. — v. tr. 1. To praise or commend (one) to another as being worthy or desirable; endorse: recommended him for the job; recommended a sedan instead of a station wagon. 2. To make (the possessor, as of an attribute) attractive or acceptable: Honesty recommends any person. 3. To commit to the charge of another; entrust. 4. To advise or counsel: She recommended that we avoid giving offense. See Synonyms at advise. — v. intr. To give advice or counsel: "recommended against signing an international agreement" (Time). [Middle English recomenden, from Medieval Latin recommendāre : Latin re-, re- + Latin commendāre, to entrust, commend; see COMMEND.] — rec'om-mend'a-ble adj. — rec'om-mend'er n.

rec-om-men-da-tion (rĕk'ə-mĕn-dā'shən) n. 1. The act of recommending.

2. Something that recommends, especially a favorable statement concerning character or qualifications. 3. Something, such as a course of action, that is recommended. See Synonyms at advice. —rec'om-men'da-to'ry (-də-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

re-com-mit (rē'kə-mīt') v. tr. re-com-mit-ted, re-com-mit-ting, re-com-mits. 1. To commit again. 2. To refer (proposed legislation, for example) to a committee again. —re'com-mit'tment, re'com-mit'tal (-mīt'l) n.

rec-om-pense (rĕk'əm-pĕns') v. tr. rec-om-pensed, rec-om-pens-ing, rec-om-pens-es. 1. To award compensation to: recompensed the victims of the accident. 2. To award compensation for; make a return for: recompensed their injuries. — n. 1. Amends made, as for damage or loss. 2. Payment in return for something, such as a service. [Middle English recompensen, from Old French recompenser, from Late Latin recompĕnsāre: Latin re-, re- + Latin compĕnsāre, to compensate; see COMPENSATE.]

re-com-pose (rē'kəm-pōz') v. tr. re-com-posed, re-com-pos-ing, re-com-pos-es. 1. To compose again; reorganize or rearrange. 2. To restore to composure; calm. —re'com-po-si'tion (rē'kŏm-pə-zīsh'ən) n.

re-con¹ (rē'kŏn') n. The smallest genetic unit capable of recombination.

[REC(OMBINATION) + -ON¹.]

re-con² (rē'kŏn') n. Informal. Reconnaissance. —re'con' adj.

rec-on-cil-a-ble (rĕk'ən-sī'lə-bəl, rĕk'ən-sī'-) adj. Capable of or qualified for reconciliation: reconcilable differences. —rec'on-cil'a-bil'i-ty, rec'on-cil'a-ble-ness n. —rec'on-cil'a-bly adv.

rec-on-cile (rĕk'ən-sīl') v. rec-on-ciled, rec-on-cil-ing, rec-on-ciles. — v.

tr. 1. To reestablish a close relationship between. 2. To settle or resolve. 3. To bring (oneself) to accept: He finally reconciled himself to the change in management. 4. To make compatible or consistent: reconcile my way of thinking with yours. See Synonyms at adapt. — v. intr. 1. To reestablish a close relationship, as in marriage: The estranged couple reconciled after a year. 2. To become compatible or consistent: The figures would not reconcile. [Middle English reconcilen, from Old French reconcilier, from Latin reconciliāre: re-, re- + conciliāre, to conciliate; see CONCILIATE.] —rec'on-cile'ment n. —rec'on-cil'er n.

—rec'on-cil'i-a-to'ry (-sīl'ē-ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

rec-on-cil-i-a-tion (rĕk'ən-sīl'ē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of reconciling. 2. The condition of being reconciled. 3. See penance (n., sense 2). [Middle English reconciliacion, from Old French reconciliation, from Latin reconciliātiō, reconciliātiōn-, from reconciliātus, past participle of reconciliāre, to reconcile. See RECONCILE.]

rec-on-dite (rĕk'ən-dīt', rĭ-kŏn'dīt') adj. 1. Not easily understood; abstruse.

See Synonyms at ambiguous. 2. Concerned with or treating something abstruse or obscure: recondite scholarship. 3. Concealed; hidden. [Latin recondi- tus, past participle of recondere, to put away : re-, re- + condere, to put together, preserve; see dhē- in Appendix.] —rec'on-dite'ly adv. —rec'on-dite'ness n.

re-con-dition (rē'kən-dīsh'ən) v. tr. re-con-ditioned, re-con-dition-ing, re-con-ditions. To restore to good condition, especially by repairing, renovating, or rebuilding.

re-con-firm (rē'kən-fûrm') v. tr. re-con-firmed, re-con-firm-ing, re-con-firms. To confirm again, especially to establish or support more firmly: reconfirmed the reservations. —re'con-fir-ma'tion (rē'kŏn-fər-mā'shən) n.

re-con-nais-sance also re-con-nois-sance (rī-kŏn'ə-səns, -zəns) n. An inspection or exploration of an area, especially one made to gather military information. [French, from Old French reconnaissance, recognition, from reconoistre, reconoiss-, to recognize. See RECOGNIZE.]

re-con-noi-ter (rē'kə-noi'tər, rĕk'ə-) v. re-con-noi-tered, re-con-noi-ter-ing, re-con-noi-ters. — v. tr. To make a preliminary inspection of, especially in order to gather military information. — v. intr. To make a reconnaissance. [Obsolete French reconnoître, from Old French reconoistre, to recognize. See RECOGNIZE.] —re'con-noi'ter-er n.

re-con-sid-er (rē'kən-sīd'ər) v. re-con-sid-ered, re-con-sid-er-ing, re-con-sid-ers. — v. tr. 1. To consider again, especially with intent to alter or modify a previous decision. 2. To take up for reconsideration, as a matter previously acted on by a legislature. — v. intr. To consider again. —re'-con-sid'er-a'tion n.

re-con-sti-tute (rē-kŏn'stī-tōot', -tyōot') v. tr. re-con-sti-tut-ed, re-con-sti-tut-ing, re-con-sti-tutes. 1. To provide with a new structure: The parks commission has been reconstituted. 2. To bring (a liquid in concentrated or powder form) to normal strength by adding water.

re-con-struct (rē'kən-strŭkt') v. tr. re-con-struct-ed, re-con-struct-ing, re-con-structs. 1. To construct again. 2. To cause to adapt to social or economic change. —re'con-struc'ti-ble adj.

re-con-struc-tion (rē'kən-strŭk'shən) n. 1. The act or result of reconstructing. 2. Reconstruction. The period (1865-1877) during which the states of the Confederacy were controlled by the federal government before being readmitted to the Union. —re'con-struc'tive adj.

Re-con-struc-tion-ism (rē'-kən-strŭk'shə-nīz'əm) n. Judaism. The branch of Judaism founded in the United States in the 20th century that regards Judaism as a religious civilization and questions the doctrine that the Jews are God's chosen people. —Re'con-struc'tion-ist adj. & n.

re-con-vert (rē'kən-vûrt') v. intr. tr. re-con-vert-ed, re-con-vert-ing, re-con-verts. To undergo or cause to undergo conversion to a previous state or condition. —re'con-ver'sion (-vûr'zhən, -shən) n.

re-con-vey (rē'kən-vā') v. tr. re-con-veyed, re-con-vey-ing, re-con-veys.

To convey to a former owner or place. — re'con-vey'ance n.

re-cord (rĭ-kôrd') v. re-cord-ed, re-cord-ing, re-cords. — v. tr. 1. To set down for preservation in writing or other permanent form. 2. To register or indicate: The clerk recorded the votes. 3. a. To register (sound or images) in permanent form by mechanical or electrical means for reproduction. b. To register the words, sound, appearance, or performance of by such means: recorded the oldest townspeople on tape; recorded the violin concerto. — v. intr. To record something. — n. also rec-ord (rĕk'ərd) Abbr. rec. 1. a. An account, as of information or facts, set down especially in writing as a means of preserving knowledge. b. Something on which such an account is based. c. Something that records: a fossil record. 2. Information or data on a particular subject collected and preserved: the coldest day on record. 3. The known history of performance, activities, or achievement: your academic record; hampered by a police record. 4. An unsurpassed measurement: a world record in weightlifting; a record for cold weather. 5. Computer Science. A collection of related, often adjacent items of data, treated as a unit. 6. Law. a. An account officially written and preserved as evidence or testimony. b. An account of judicial or legislative proceedings written and preserved as evidence. c. The documents or volumes containing such evidence. 7. a. A disk designed to be played on a phonograph. b. Something, such as magnetic tape, on which sound or visual images have been recorded.

—idioms. go on record. To embrace a certain position publicly: go on record in favor of the mayor's reelection. off the record. Not for publication: The senator told the reporters that his remarks were strictly off the record. on record.

Known to have been stated or to have taken a certain position: The senator's opposition to the new legislation is on record. [Middle English recorden, from Old French recorder, from Latin recordārī, to remember : re-, re- + cor, cord-, heart; see kerd- in Appendix.]

rec-ord changer (rĕk'ərd chānj'ər) n. A device on a phonograph that automatically plays each in turn of a group of records stacked on the spindle.

re-cord-er (rĭ-kôrd'ər) n. 1. One, such as a tape recorder, that makes recordings or records. 2. Law. A judge who has criminal jurisdiction in a city. 3. Music. A flute with eight finger holes and a whistlelike mouthpiece. [Sense 3, probably from RECORD, to practice a tune, warble.]

re-cord-ing (rĭ-kôrd'ĩng) n. Abbr. rec. 1. Something on which sound or visual images have been recorded. 2. A recorded sound or picture.

re-cord-ist (rĭ-kôrd'ĩst) n. One that records sound electronically, as for films or at concerts.

re-count (rĭ-kount') v. tr. re-count-ed, re-count-ing, re-counts. 1. To narrate the facts or particulars of. See Synonyms at describe. 2. To enumerate.

[Middle English recounten, from Old French reconter : re-, re- + conter, relate; see COUNT¹.] —re-count'al n.

re-count (rē-kount') v. tr. re-count-ed, re-count-ing, re-counts. To count again. — n. (also rē'kount') An additional count, especially a second count of votes cast in an election.

re-coup (rĭ-kōop') v. re-couped, re-coup-ing, re-coups. — v. tr. 1. To receive an equivalent for; make up for: recoup a loss. See Synonyms at recover. 2. To return as an equivalent for; reimburse. 3. Law. To deduct or withhold (part of something due) for an equitable reason. — v. intr. To regain a former favorable position. — n. The act of recouping. [Middle English recoupen, from Old French recouper, to cut back : re-, re- + couper, to cut (from coup, blow); see COUP.] —re-coup'a-ble adj. —re-coup'ment n.

re-course (rē'kōrs', -kōrs', rĭ-kōrs', -kōrs') n. 1. The act or an instance of turning or applying to a person or thing for aid or security: have recourse to the courts. 2. One that is turned or applied to for aid or security: His only recourse was the police. 3. Law. The right to demand payment from the endorser of a commercial paper when the first party liable fails to pay. [Middle English recours, from Old French, from Latin recursus, a running back, from past participle of recurrere, to run back : re-, re- + currere, to run; see kers- in Appendix.]

re-cov-er (rĭ-kŭv'ər) v. re-cov-ered, re-cov-er-ing, re-cov-ers. — v. tr. 1. To get back; regain. 2. To restore (oneself) to a normal state: He recovered himself after a slip on the ice. 3. To compensate for: She recovered her losses. 4. To procure (usable substances, such as metal) from unusable substances, such as ore or waste. 5. To bring under observation again: “watching the comet since it was first recovered—first spotted since its 1910 visit” (Christian Science Monitor). — v. intr. 1. To regain a normal or usual condition, as of health. 2. To receive a favorable judgment in a lawsuit. [Middle English recoveren, from Old French recoverer, from Latin recuperāre. See RECUPERATE.] —re-cov'er-a-ble adj. —re-cov'er-er n.

SYNONYMS: recover, regain, recoup, retrieve. These verbs are compared as they mean to get back something lost or taken away. Recover is the least specific: The police recovered the stolen car. “In a few days Mr. Barnstaple had recovered strength of body and mind” (H.G. Wells). “He... stood in the porch a minute to recover his composure” (John Galsworthy). Regain suggests success in recovering something that has been taken from one: “hopeful to regain/Thy Love” (John Milton); “re-gain'd my freedom with a sigh” (Byron). To recoup is to get back the equivalent of something lost: The teacher, who had bought the book for the school library, felt entitled to recoup her expenses. Retrieve pertains to the effortful recovery of something (retrieved the ball from the end zone) or to the rectification of unfavorable consequences or the making good of something gone amiss or awry: “a false step that he was never able to retrieve” (John Morley). “By a brilliant coup he has retrieved... a rather serious loss” (Samuel Butler).

re-cov-er (rē-kūv'ər) v. tr. re-cov-ered, re-cov-er-ing, re-cov-ers. To cover anew: re-cover an armchair.

recoverable error (rī-kūv'ər-ə-bəl ɛr'ər) n. Computer Science. A program error that does not prevent execution.

re-cov-er-y (rī-kūv'ə-rē) n. pl. re-cov-er-ies. 1. The act, process, duration, or an instance of recovering. 2. A return to a normal condition. 3. Something gained or restored in recovering. 4. The act of obtaining usable substances from unusable sources.

recovery room (rī-kūv'ə-rē rōōm) n. A hospital room equipped for the care and observation of patients immediately following surgery.

rec-re-ant (rɛk'rē-ənt) adj. 1. Unfaithful or disloyal to a belief, duty, or cause. See Synonyms at faithless. 2. Craven or cowardly. — n. 1. A faithless or disloyal person. 2. A coward. [Middle English, from Old French, present participle of recoire, to remember, from Medieval Latin recrēdere, to yield, pledge : Latin re-, re- + Latin crēdere, to believe; see kerd- in Appendix.] —rec're-ance, rec're-an-cy n. —rec're-ant-ly adv.

rec-re-ate (rɛk'rē-āt') v. rec-re-at-ed, rec-re-at-ing, rec-re-ates. — v. tr. To impart fresh life to; refresh mentally or physically. — v. intr. To take recreation. [Middle English recreaten, from Latin recreāre, recreāt- : re-, re- + creāre, to create; see CREATE.] —rec're-a'tive adj.

re-cre-ate (rē'krē-āt') v. tr. re-cre-at-ed, re-cre-at-ing, re-cre-ates. To create anew.

rec-re-a-tion (rɛk'rē-ā'shən) n. Abbr. rec. Refreshment of one's mind or body after work through activity that amuses or stimulates; play.

rec-re-a-tion-al (rɛk'rē-ā'shə-nəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to recreation: recreational swimming. 2. Of or relating to the occasional use, asserted not to be addictive, of narcotics: “You can't accept recreational drug use and expect to control the drug problem” (Lacy Thornburg). —rec're-a'tion-al-ly adv.

recreational vehicle (rɛk'rē-ā'shə-nəl vē'ī-kəl) n. Abbr. RV A vehicle, such as a camper or a motor home, used for traveling and recreational activities.

recreation room (rɛk'rē-ā'shən rōōm) n. A room in a house or an institution suited for games, dancing, or other kinds of recreation.

rec-re-ment (rɛk'rə-mənt) n. Waste matter; dross. [Latin recrēmentum : re-, re- + cernere, crē-, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.] —rec're-men'tal (-mɛn'tl) adj.

re-crim-i-nate (rī-krīm'ə-nāt') v. re-crim-i-nat-ed, re-crim-i-nat-ing, re-crim-i-nates. — v. tr. To accuse in return. — v. intr. To counter one accusation with another. [Medieval Latin recrīminārī, recrīmināt- : Latin re-, re- + crīmināre, to accuse (from crīmen, crīmin-, accusation, crime); see krei- in Appendix.] —re-crim/i-na'tive, re-crim/i-na-to'ry (-nə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

—re-crim/i-na'tor n.

re-crim-i-na-tion (rĭ-krĭm'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of recriminating. 2. A countercharge.

rec room (rĕk rōom) n. Informal. A recreation room.

re-cru-desce (rē'krōō-dĕs') v. intr. re-cru-desced, re-cru-desc-ing, re-cru-desc-es. To break out anew or come into renewed activity, as after a period of quiescence. See Synonyms at return. [Latin recrūdēscere, to grow raw again : re-, re- + crūdēscere, to get worse (from crūdus, raw); see kreuə- in Appendix.] —re'cru-des'cence n. —re'cru-des'cent adj.

re-cruit (rĭ-krōot') v. re-cruit-ed, re-cruit-ing, re-cruits. — v. tr. 1. To engage (persons) for military service. 2. To strengthen or raise (an armed force) by enlistment. 3. To supply with new members or employees. 4. To enroll or seek to enroll: colleges recruiting minority students. 5. To replenish. 6. To renew or restore the health, vitality, or intensity of. — v. intr. 1. To raise a military force. 2. To obtain replacements for or new supplies of something lost, wasted, or needed. 3. To regain lost health or strength; recover. — n. Abbr. rect. 1. A newly engaged member of a military force, especially one of the lowest rank or grade. 2. A new member of an organization or a body. [French recruter, from obsolete recrute, recruit, variant of recrue, from feminine past participle of recroître, to grow again, from Old French recroistre : re-, re- + croistre, to grow (from Latin crēscere); see ker-² in Appendix.] —re-cruit'er n. —re-cruit'ment n.

rec. sec. abbr. Recording secretary.

rect. abbr. 1. Receipt. 2. Rectangle; rectangular. 3. Rectified. 4. Rector; rectory.

rec-ta (rĕk'tə) n. A plural of rectum.

rec-tal (rĕk'təl) adj. Of, relating to, or situated near the rectum. —rec'tal-ly adv.

rec-tan-gle (rĕk'tăng'gəl) n. Abbr. rect. A four-sided plane figure with four right angles. [French, from Medieval Latin rēctangulum, a right triangle, from Late Latin rēctiangulum : Latin rēctus, right; see reg- in Appendix + Latin angulus, angle.]

rec-tan-gu-lar (rĕk-tăng'gyə-lər) adj. Abbr. rect. 1. Having the shape of a rectangle. 2. Having one or more right angles. 3. Designating a geometric coordinate system with mutually perpendicular axes. —rec-tan'gu-lar'i-ty (-lăr'ĭ-tē) n. —rec-tan'gu-lar-ly adv.

rectangular coordinate (rĕk-tăng'gyə-lər kō-ôr'dn-āt') n. Mathematics. A coordinate in a rectangular Cartesian coordinate system.

rec-ti (rĕk'tĭ') n. Plural of rectus.

rec-ti-fi-er (rĕk'tā-fī'ər) n. 1. One that rectifies: a rectifier of many wrongs.

2. Electronics. A device, such as a diode, that converts alternating current to direct current. 3. A worker who blends or dilutes whiskey or other alcoholic beverages.

rec-ti-fy (rĕk'tā-fī') v. tr. rec-ti-fied, rec-ti-fy-ing, rec-ti-fies. 1. To set right; correct. 2. To correct by calculation or adjustment. See Synonyms at correct.

3. Chemistry. To refine or purify, especially by distillation. 4. Electronics. To convert (alternating current) into direct current. 5. To adjust (the proof of alcoholic beverages) by adding water or other liquids. [Middle English rectifien, from Old French rectifier, from Medieval Latin rĕctificāre: Latin rĕctus, right; see reg- in Appendix + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] —rec'ti-fi'a-ble adj. —rec'ti-fi-ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

rec-ti-lin-e-ar (rĕk'tā-līn'ē-ər) adj. Moving in, consisting of, bounded by, or characterized by a straight line or lines: following a rectilinear path; rectilinear patterns in wallpaper. [From Late Latin rĕctilīneus: Latin rĕctus, right; see reg- in Appendix + Latin līnea, line; see LINE¹.] —rec'ti-lin'e-ar-ly adv.

rec-ti-tude (rĕk'tī-tōōd', -tyōōd') n. 1. Moral uprightness; righteousness. See Synonyms at honesty. 2. The quality or condition of being correct in judgment. 3. The quality of being straight. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin rĕctitūdō, from Latin rĕctus, straight. See reg- in Appendix.]

—rec'ti-tu'di-nous adj.

rec-to (rĕk'tō) n. pl. rec-tos. Printing. A right-hand page of a book or the front side of a leaf, on the other side of the verso. [From Latin (foliō) rĕctō, (the leaf) being right, ablative of rĕctus, straight, right. See reg- in Appendix.]

rec-tor (rĕk'tər) n. Abbr. R., rect. 1. A cleric in charge of a parish in the Protestant Episcopal Church. 2. An Anglican cleric who has charge of a parish and owns the tithes from it. 3. A Roman Catholic priest appointed to be managerial as well as spiritual head of a church or other institution, such as a seminary or university. 4. The principal of certain schools, colleges, and universities. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rĕctor, director, from regere, rĕct-, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.] —rec'tor-ate (-ĭt) n. —rec-to'ri-al (rĕk-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) adj.

rec-to-ry (rĕk'tā-rē) n. pl. rec-to-ries. Abbr. rect. 1. The house in which a parish priest or minister lives. 2. a. An Anglican rector's dwelling. b. An Anglican rector's office and benefice.

rec-trix (rĕk'trīks) n. pl. rec-tri-ces (rĕk'trī-sēz', rĕk-trī'sēz). One of the stiff main feathers of a bird's tail, used to control the direction of flight. [Latin rĕctrīx, feminine of rĕctor, director. See RECTOR.] rec-tum (rĕk'təm) n. pl. rec-tums or rec-ta (-tə). The terminal portion of the large intestine, extending from the sigmoid flexure to the anal canal. [Middle English, from Latin (intestīnum) rĕctum, straight (intestine), neuter of rĕctus. See reg- in Appendix.]

rec-tus (rĕk'təs) n. pl. rec-ti (-tī'). Any of various straight muscles, as of the abdomen, eye, neck, and thigh. [New Latin (musculus) rēctus, from Latin, straight (muscle). See RECTUM.]

re-cum-bent (rĭ-kŭm'bənt) adj. 1. Lying down, especially in a position of comfort or rest; reclining. See Synonyms at prone. 2. Resting; idle. 3. Biology. Resting on the surface from which it arises. Used of an organ or other structure. [Latin recumbēns, recumbent- present participle of recumbere, to lie down : re-, re- + cumbere, to lie.] —re-cum'bence, re-cum'ben-cy n. —re-cum'bent-ly adv.

re-cu-per-ate (rĭ-kōō'pə-rāt', -kyōō'-) v. re-cu-per-at-ed, re-cu-per-at-ing, re-cu-per-ates. — v. intr. 1. To return to health or strength; recover. 2. To recover from financial loss. — v. tr. 1. To restore to health or strength. 2. To regain. [Latin recuperāre, recuperāt- : re-, re- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.] —re-cu'per-a'tion n. —re-cu'per-a'tive (-pə-rā'tĭv, -pər-ə-tĭv), re-cu'per-a-to'ry (-pər-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

re-cur (rĭ-kŭr') v. intr. re-curred, re-cur-ring, re-curs. 1. To happen, come up, or show up again or repeatedly. See Synonyms at return. 2. To return to one's attention or memory. 3. To return in thought or discourse. 4. To have recourse: recur to the use of force. [Latin recurrere : re-, re- + currere, to run; see kers- in Appendix.] —re-cur'rence n.

re-cur-rent (rĭ-kŭr'ənt, -kŭr'-) adj. 1. Occurring or appearing again or repeatedly. 2. Anatomy. Turning in a reverse direction. Used of blood vessels and nerves. —re-cur'rent-ly adv.

recurrent fever (rĭ-kŭr'ənt fē'vər) n. See relapsing fever.

re-cur-ring decimal (rĭ-kŭr'ĭng dĕs'ə-məl, -kŭr'-) n. Mathematics. See repeating decimal.

re-cur-sion (rĭ-kŭr'zhən) n. Mathematics. 1. An expression, such as a polynomial, each term of which is determined by application of a formula to preceding terms. 2. A formula that generates the successive terms of a recursion. [Late Latin recursiō, recursiōn-, a running back, from Latin recursus, past participle of recurrere, to run back. See RECUR.] —re-cur'sive adj.

re-cur-vate (rĭ-kŭr'vāt', -vĭt) adj. Bent or curved backward.

re-curve (rĕ-kŭrv') v. tr. intr. re-curved, re-curv-ing, re-curves. To curve (something) backward or downward or become curved backward or downward. [Latin recurvāre : re-, re- + curvāre, to curve (from curvus, curve); see CURVE.] —re'cur-va'tion (rĕ'kŭr-vā'shən) n.

rec-u-sant (rĕk'yə-zənt, rĭ-kyōō'-) n. 1. One of the Roman Catholics in England who incurred legal and social penalties in the 16th century and afterward for refusing to attend services of the Church of England. 2. A dissenter; a nonconformist. —rec'u-san-cy n. —rec'u-sant adj.

re-cuse (rĭ-kyōōzʹ) v. tr. re-cused, re-cus-ing, re-cus-es. To disqualify or seek to disqualify from participation in a decision on grounds such as prejudice or personal involvement. [Middle English recusen, from Old French recuser, from Latin recūsāre : re-, re- + causa, cause.]

re-cy-cle (rē-sīʹkəl) v. tr. re-cy-cled, re-cy-cling, re-cy-cles. 1. To put or pass through a cycle again, as for further treatment. 2. To start a different cycle in. 3. a. To extract useful materials from (garbage or waste). b. To extract and reuse (useful substances found in waste). 4. a. To use again, especially to reprocess: recycle aluminum cans; recycle old jokes. b. To recondition and adapt to a new use or function: recycling old warehouses as condominiums. —re-cy/cla-ble adj., n. —re-cy/cler n.

red (rĕd) n. 1. a. Color. The hue of the long-wave end of the visible spectrum, evoked in the human observer by radiant energy with wavelengths of approximately 630 to 750 nanometers; any of a group of colors that may vary in lightness and saturation and whose hue resembles that of blood; one of the additive or light primaries; one of the psychological primary hues. b. A pigment or dye having a red hue. c. Something that has a red hue. 2. a. Often Red. A Communist. b. A revolutionary activist. — adj. red-der, red-dest. 1. Color. Having a color resembling that of blood. 2. Reddish in color or having parts that are reddish in color: a red dog; a red oak. 3. a. Having a reddish or coppery skin color. b. Often Red. Offensive. Of or being a Native American. 4. Having a ruddy or flushed complexion: red with embarrassment. 5. Often Red. Communist. —idiom. in the red. Operating at a loss; in debt. [Middle English, from Old English rĕad. See reudh- in Appendix.] —red/ly adv. —red/ness n.

red. abbr. 1. Reduced. 2. Reduction.

re-dact (rĭ-dăktʹ) v. tr. re-dact-ed, re-dact-ing, re-dacts. 1. To draw up or frame (a proclamation, for example). 2. To make ready for publication; edit or revise. [Middle English redacten, from Latin redigere, redāct-, to drive back : re-, red-, re- + agere, to drive; see ACT.] —re-dac/tor (-dăkʹtər, -tôrʹ) n.

re-dac-tion (rĭ-dăkʹshən) n. 1. The act or process of editing or revising a piece of writing; preparation for publication. 2. An edited work; a new edition or revision.

red alga (rĕd ălʹgə) n. Any of various predominantly marine algae of the division Rhodophyta, characteristically red or reddish in color. Often used in the plural.

red-bait (rĕdʹbātʹ) v. tr. red-bait-ed, red-bait-ing, red-baits. To accuse, denounce, or attack (a person, for example) as a Communist or a Communist sympathizer. —redʹbaitʹer n. —redʹbaitʹing n.

red-bird (rĕdʹbûrdʹ) n. Any of various birds with red plumage, as the cardinal or scarlet tanager.

red blood cell (rĕd blŭd sĕl) n. Abbr. RBC, rbc A cell in the blood of vertebrates that transports oxygen and carbon dioxide to and from the tissues. In mammals, the red blood cell is disk-shaped and biconcave, contains hemoglobin, and lacks a nucleus. Also called erythrocyte, red cell, red corpuscle.

red-blood-ed (rĕd'blŭd'id) adj. Strong and highly spirited.

red-breast (rĕd'brĕst') n. 1. A bird, such as the robin, that has a red breast. 2. A freshwater sunfish (Lepomis auritus) of the eastern United States, having a reddish belly.

red-brick (rĕd'brĭk') adj. Of, relating to, or being the British universities other than Oxford and Cambridge. [So-called because many of the buildings of such universities were built of red bricks.]

red-bud (rĕd'bŭd') n. Any of several shrubs or small trees of the genus Cercis, having flat pods and pinkish flowers that bloom before the leaves appear. Also called Judas tree red bug also red-bug (rĕd'bŭg') n. See chigger (n., sense 1).

red-cap (rĕd'kăp') n. A porter, usually in a railroad station.

Red-car (rĕd'kăr') A municipal borough of northeast England on the North Sea northeast of Middlesbrough. It is a seaside resort and has iron and steel industries. Population, 85,600.

red carpet (rĕd kăr'pĭt) n. A carpet laid down for important visitors.

—idiom. roll out the red carpet. To welcome with great hospitality or ceremony.

red cedar (rĕd sĕ'dăr) n. 1. An evergreen, coniferous, eastern North American tree (Juniperus virginiana) having fleshy, purplish-black seed cones. 2. A tall, evergreen, Pacific North American tree (Thuja plicata) having flattened branches, scalelike opposite leaves, and small, ovoid seed-bearing cones. 3. The reddish, aromatic, durable wood of either of these trees.

red cell (rĕd sĕl) n. See red blood cell.

red cent (rĕd sĕnt) n. Informal. Insignificant value: not worth a red cent.

Red Cloud (rĕd kloud), 1822-1909. Oglala Sioux leader of the resistance against the development of a trail through Wyoming and Montana by the U.S. government (1865-1867).

Red-cloud Peak (rĕd'kloud' pĕk) A mountain, 4,280.4 m (14,034 ft) high, in the San Juan Mountains of southwest Colorado.

red clover (rĕd klŏ'vər) n. A Eurasian plant (Trifolium pratense) having trifoliate leaves and globular heads of fragrant rose-purple flowers, widely naturalized in North America and frequently planted as a forage or cover crop.

red-coat (rĕd'kŏt') n. A British soldier, especially one serving during the American Revolution.

red corpuscle (rĕd kŏr'pə-səl) n. See red blood cell.

Red Crescent (rĕd krĕs'ənt) n. 1. A branch of the Red Cross organization operating in a Muslim country. 2. The crescent-shaped emblem of such a branch.

Red Cross (rĕd krōs) n. Abbr. RC 1. a. An international organization that cares for the wounded, sick, and homeless in wartime, according to the terms of the Geneva Convention of 1864, and now also during and following natural disasters. b. A national branch of this organization. 2. The emblem of this organization, a Geneva cross or a red Greek cross on a white background.

redd (rĕd) v. tr. redd-ed or redd, redd-ing, reds. Chiefly Pennsylvania. To clear: redd the dinner table. —phrasal verb. redd up. To tidy: She redded up the front room. [Middle English dialectal redden, to clear an area (influenced by Middle English redden, to rescue, free from, from Old English hreddan), from Old Norse rydhja. See RID.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The terms redd and redd up came to the American Midlands from the many Scottish immigrants who settled there. Meaning “to clear an area or to make it tidy,” redd is still used in Scotland and Northern Ireland; in the United States it is especially common in Pennsylvania as the phrasal verb redd up. The term, which goes back to Old Norse rydhja, can be traced from the 15th century to the present, particularly in dialects of Scotland and the North of England.

red deer (rĕd dīr) n. 1. A common deer (Cervus elaphus) of Europe and Asia, having a reddish-brown coat. 2. The summer morph of the white-tailed deer, having a reddish coat.

Red Deer (rĕd dīr) A city of south-central Alberta, Canada, on the Red Deer River north of Calgary. It is a trade center in a farm and dairy region. Population, 46,393.

Red Deer River (rĕd dīr rĭv'ər) A river rising in the Rocky Mountains of southwest Alberta, Canada, and flowing about 619 km (385 mi) northeast then southeast and east across the province and into the South Saskatchewan River just across the Saskatchewan border.

red·den (rĕd'n) v. tr. intr. red·dened, red·den-ing, red·dens. To make or become red.

Red·ding (rĕd'ɪŋ) A city of northern California on the Sacramento River south of Shasta Lake. It is a resort and has lumbering and food-processing industries. Population, 41,995.

red·dish (rĕd'ɪʃ) adj. Color. Mixed or tinged with red; somewhat red.
—red'dish·ness n.

Red·ditch (rĕd'ɪtʃ) An urban district of central England south of Birmingham. It was designated a new town in 1964 to alleviate overcrowding in Birmingham and the surrounding area. Population, 67,400.

red-dle (rĕd'ɫ) n. & v. Variant of ruddle.

red-dog (rĕd'dôg', -dôg') Football. n. See blitz (n., sense 3). — v. red-dogged, red--dog-ging, red--dogs. — v. tr. To rush (the quarterback) in a blitz. — v. intr. To carry out a blitz.

red drum (rĕd drŭm) n. A large food fish (Sciaenops ocellata) of the Atlantic coastal waters of North America. Also called channel bass rede (rĕd) v. tr. red-ed, red-ing, redes. 1. To give advice to; counsel. 2. To interpret; explain. — n. 1. Advice or counsel. 2. Archaic. A narration. [Middle English reden, from Old English rædan. See ar- in Appendix.]

re-dec-o-rate (rĕ-dĕk'ə-rāt') v. re-dec-o-rat-ed, re-dec-o-rat-ing, re-dec-o-rates. — v. tr. To change the appearance or furnishings of; refurbish. — v. intr. To change a decorative scheme. — re-dec'o-ra'tion n.
— re-dec'o-ra'tor n.

re-deem (rĭ-dĕm') v. tr. re-deemed, re-deem-ing, re-deems. 1. To recover ownership of by paying a specified sum. 2. To pay off (a promissory note, for example). 3. To turn in (coupons, for example) and receive something in exchange. 4. To fulfill (a pledge, for example). 5. To convert into cash: redeem stocks. 6. To set free; rescue or ransom. 7. To save from a state of sinfulness and its consequences. See Synonyms at save¹. 8. To make up for: The low price of the clothes dryer redeems its lack of special features. 9. To restore the honor, worth, or reputation of: You botched the last job but can redeem yourself on this one. [Middle English redemen, from Old French redimer, from Latin redimere : re-, red-, re- + emere, to buy; see em- in Appendix.] — re-deem'a-ble adj.

re-deem-er (rĭ-dĕ'mər) n. 1. One who redeems. 2. Redeemer. Jesus.

red eft (rĕd ěft) n. The bright red terrestrial stage in the life cycle of a newt (Notophthalmus viridescens) of the eastern United States. Also called red-spotted eft re-de-liv-er (rĕ'dĭ-lĭv'ər) v. tr. re-de-liv-ered, re-de-liv-er-ing, re-de-liv-ers. 1. To deliver again. 2. To deliver in return; give back.

re-demp-tion (rĭ-dĕmp'shən) n. 1. The act of redeeming or the condition of having been redeemed. 2. Recovery of something pawned or mortgaged. 3. The payment of an obligation, as a government's payment of the value of its bonds. 4. Deliverance upon payment of ransom; rescue. 5. Theology. Salvation from sin through Jesus's sacrifice. [Middle English redempcioun, from Old French redemption, from Latin redēptiō, redēptiōn-, from redēptus, past participle of redimere, to redeem. See REDEEM.] — re-demp'tion-al, re-demp'tive, re-demp'to-ry (-tə-rĕ) adj.

re-demp-tion-er (rĭ-dĕmp'shə-nər) n. A colonial emigrant from Europe to America who paid for the voyage by serving for a specified period as a bondservant.

Re-demp-tor-ist (rĭ-dĕmp'tər-ĭst) n. A member of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer, a Roman Catholic order founded in 1732 by Saint Alphonsus Liguori (1696-1787). [French rédemptoriste, from Late Latin redēptor, redeemer, from Latin, contractor, from redimere, to buy back. See REDEEM.]

re-de-ploy (rē'dĭ-ploi') v. tr. re-de-ployed, re-de-ploy-ing, re-de-ploys.

1. To move (military forces) from one combat zone to another. 2. To shift (something) from one place or use to another for greater effectiveness: redeploy the company's resources. —re'de-ploy'ment n.

re-de-sign (rē'dĭ-zĭn') v. tr. re-de-signed, re-de-sign-ing, re-de-signs. To make a revision in the appearance or function of. —re'de-sign' n.

re-de-vel-op (rē'dĭ-vĕl'əp) v. re-de-vel-oped, re-de-vel-op-ing, re-de-vel-ops. — v. tr. 1. To develop (something) again. 2. To tone or intensify (a photographic print, for example) by a second developing process. 3. To restore (buildings or neighborhoods, for example) to a better condition: redeveloped the waterfront. — v. intr. To develop again. —re'de-vel'op-er n. —re'de-vel'op-ment n.

red-eye (rĕd'ī') n. 1. Informal. A danger signal on a railroad. 2. Slang. A late-night or overnight flight: caught the redeye from Los Angeles to New York. 3. Any of several fishes with red eyes, as the rock bass. 4. Slang. Inferior whiskey.

redeye gravy (rĕd'ī' grā'vĕ) n. Gravy made from the juices of a cooked ham.

red-faced (rĕd'fāst') adj. Embarrassed: "They were caught red-handed, and now they are red-faced" (Margaret Thatcher).

red fir (rĕd fĭr) n. 1. An evergreen tree (Abies magnifica) of California and Oregon, having reddish wood valued as timber. 2. The wood of this tree.

red fire (rĕd fĭr) n. Any of various combustible compounds, especially salts of lithium or strontium, that burn bright red and are used in flares and fireworks.

red-fish (rĕd'fĭsh') n. pl. redfish or red-fish-es. Any of several fishes that are reddish in color, as the red drum and the rosefish.

Red-ford (rĕd'fərd) A community of southeast Michigan, a suburb of Detroit. Population, 58,441.

red fox (rĕd fŏks) n. A fox of the genus Vulpes, characteristically having reddish fur, especially V. fulva of North America and V. vulpes of Europe.

Red-grave (rĕd'grāv'), Sir Michael. 1908-1985. British actor noted for his Shakespearean and motion-picture roles. His daughters Vanessa (born 1937) and Lynn (born 1943) are both versatile actresses.

red giant (rĕd jĭ'ənt) n. A star of great size and brightness that has a relatively low surface temperature.

red grouse (rĕd grəus) n. A grouse (Lagopus lagopus subsp. scoticus) of the British Isles that has chestnut plumage and inhabits open fields. Also called moorfowl

Red Guard (rěd gǎrd) n. 1. A member of an activist youth movement in China, prominent during the Chinese Cultural Revolution of the late 1960's, that espoused Maoist principles. 2. A member of a radical political group with Maoist leanings. [Translation of Chinese (Mandarin) hóng wèi bīng: hóng, red + wèi bīng, guard.]

red gum¹ (rěd gǔm) n. Any of several Australian evergreen trees of the genus Eucalyptus, especially E. camaldulensis or E. calophylla, having lance-shaped, aromatic leaves.

red gum² (rěd gǔm) n. See strophulus.

red-hand·ed (rěd'hǎn'dǐd) adv. & adj. In the act of committing something wrong. —red'-hand/ed·ly adv.

red-head (rěd'hěd') n. 1. A person with red hair. 2. A North American duck (Aythya americana), the male of which has black and gray plumage and a reddish head.

red-head·ed (rěd'hěd'ǐd) adj. 1. Having red hair. 2. Having a red head: a redheaded woodpecker.

red heat (rěd hēt) n. 1. The temperature of a red-hot substance. 2. The physical condition of a red-hot substance.

red herring (rěd hěr'ɪŋ) n. 1. A smoked herring having a reddish color. 2. Something that draws attention away from the central issue. [From its use to distract hunting dogs from the trail.]

red hind (rěd hīnd) n. A reddish-brown grouper (Epinephelus guttatus) of the West Indies and the Gulf of Mexico, having dark red-brown spots.

red-hot (rěd'hōt') adj. 1. Glowing hot; very hot. 2. Heated, as with excitement, anger, or enthusiasm: a red-hot speech. 3. Very recent; new: red-hot information. — n. 1. See hot dog. 2. A small, usually round red candy strongly flavored with cinnamon.

re·di·a (rē'dē-ə) n. pl. re·di·ae (-dē-ē'). A larva of certain trematodes that is produced within the sporocyst and that can give rise to additional rediae or to cercariae. [New Latin, after Francesco Redi (1626-1697), Italian naturalist.]

re·did (rē-dǐd') v. Past tense of redo.

re·dif·fer·en·ti·a·tion (rē'dǐf-ə-rěn'shē-ā'shən) n. Biology. A process by which a group of once differentiated cells return to their original specialized form.

red-in·gote (rěd'ɪŋ-gōt') n. 1. A man's long double-breasted topcoat with full skirt. 2. A woman's full-length unlined coat or dress open down the front to show a dress or underdress. [French, alteration of English riding coat.]

red ink (rěd ɪŋk) n. 1. A financial loss in business. 2. The condition of showing a fiscal deficit: a firm drowning in red ink. [From the use of red ink to record debits and losses in financial records.]

red·in·te·gra·tion (rĕd-ĭn'tĭ-grā'shən, rĭ-dĭn'-) n. Psychology. Evocation of a particular state of mind resulting from the recurrence of one of the elements that made up the original experience. [Middle English redintegracion, from Latin redintegrātiō, redintegrātiōn-, from redintegrātus, past participle of redintegrāre, to make whole again : re-, red-, re- + integer, whole, entire; see INTEGER.]

—red·in·te·gra·tive adj. —red·in·te·gra·tor n.

re·di·rect (rĕ'dĭ-rĕkt', -dĭ-) v. tr. re·di·rect·ed, re·di·rect·ing, re·di·rects. To change the direction or course of. — n. (rĕ'dĭ-rĕkt', -dĭ-) Law. A redirect examination. —re'di-rec'tion n.

redirect examination (rĕ'dĭ-rĕkt' ĭg-zām'ə-nā'shən) n. Law. Further examination of a witness after cross-examination, carried out by the party that first called the witness.

re·dis·count (rĕ-dĭs'kount') v. tr. re·dis·count·ed, re·dis·count·ing, re·dis·counts. To discount again. — n. 1. The act of rediscounting. 2. Often rediscounts. Commercial paper that is discounted a second time.

re·dis·trib·ute (rĕ'dĭ-strĭb'yōot) v. tr. re·dis·trib·ut·ed, re·dis·trib·ut·ing, re·dis·trib·utes. To distribute again in a different way; reallocate.

re·dis·tri·bu·tion (rĕ'dĭs-trĕ-byōō'shən) n. 1. The act or process of redistributing. 2. An economic theory or policy that advocates reducing inequalities in the distribution of wealth. —re'dis-tri-bu'tion-ist adj. & n.

re·dis·trict (rĕ-dĭs'trĭkt) v. tr. re·dis·trict·ed, re·dis·trict·ing, re·dis·tricts. To divide again into districts, especially to give new boundaries to administrative or election districts.

red·i·vi·vus (rĕd'ə-vĭ'vəs, -vĕ'-) adj. Come back to life; revived: “defenders of the Imperial Presidency redivivus” (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.). [Late Latin redivīvus, from Latin, renewed : re-, red-, re- + vīvus, living; see VIVIFY.]

Red Jack·et (rĕd jāk'ĭt), 1756?-1830. Seneca leader who advocated peace with the United States while resisting the geographic and cultural encroachment of settlers.

Red·lands (rĕd'ləndz) A city of southern California in the San Bernardino Valley. It is primarily residential with varied light industries. Population, 60,394.

red lead (rĕd lĕd) n. A poisonous bright red powder, Pb_3O_4 , used in paints, glass, pottery, and packing for pipe joints.

red·let·ter (rĕd'lĕt'ər) adj. Memorably happy: a red-letter day. [From the practice of marking in red the holy days in church calendars.]

red light (rĕd līt) n. 1. The red-colored light that signals traffic to stop. 2. Informal. A command to stop.

red-light district (rĕd'līt' dĭs'trĭkt) n. A neighborhood containing many brothels.

red·line (rĕd'lĭn') v. red·lined, red·lin·ing, red·lines. — v. intr. To refuse home mortgages or home insurance to areas or neighborhoods deemed poor financial risks. — v. tr. 1. To discriminate against by refusing to grant loans, mortgages, or insurance to. 2. To remove from operational status because of mechanical defects or the need for scheduled maintenance: redlined three fighter aircraft.

red maple (rĕd mā'pəl) n. A medium-sized eastern North American maple (Acer rubrum) having reddish twigs and buds.

red meat (rĕd mēt) n. Meat, especially beef, that is dark-colored before being cooked.

Redmond (rĕd'mənd) A city of west-central Washington, a residential and industrial suburb of Seattle east of Lake Washington. Population, 35,800.

Redmond (rĕd'mənd), John Edward. 1856-1918. Irish nationalist politician who succeeded Charles Parnell as the principal advocate of Irish home rule. His support for Britain during World War I and his opposition to Sinn Fein undermined his influence.

red mulberry (rĕd mŭl'bĕr'ē) n. A deciduous eastern North American tree (Morus rubra) having irregularly lobed leaves and edible, fleshy, red to purple, multiple fruit.

red mullet (rĕd mŭl'it) n. See goatfish.

red-neck (rĕd'nĕk') n. Offensive Slang. 1. Used as a disparaging term for a member of the white rural laboring class, especially in the southern United States. 2. One who is regarded as having a provincial, conservative, often bigoted socio-political attitude.

re-do (rĕ-dō) v. tr. re-did (-dĭd'), re-done (-dŭn'), re-do-ing, re-does (-dŭz'). 1. To do over again. 2. To redecorate: redo a living area in yellow.

red oak (rĕd ōk) n. Either of two eastern North American deciduous trees (Quercus rubra or Q. falcata) having deeply and acutely lobed leaves and a saucer-shaped cup enclosing the lower third of the nut.

red ocher (rĕd ō'kĕr) n. A form of hematite used as a red pigment.

red-o-lence (rĕd'l-əns) also red-o-len-cy (-l-ən-sē) n. The quality or state of being redolent. See Synonyms at fragrance.

red-o-lent (rĕd'l-ənt) adj. 1. Having or emitting fragrance; aromatic.

2. Suggestive; reminiscent: a campaign redolent of machine politics. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin redolēns, redolent- present participle of redolēre, to smell : re-, red-, re- + olēre, to smell.] —red'o-lent-ly adv.

Re-don (rĕ-dŏn', -dŏN'), Odilon. 1840-1916. French artist and forerunner of surrealism whose works include eerie lithographs and floral paintings.

Re-don-do Beach (rĭ-dŏn'dō bĕch) A city of southern California, a residential suburb of Los Angeles on the Pacific Ocean. Population, 60,167.

re-done (rĕ-dŭn') v. Past participle of redo.

red osier (rĕd ō'zhər) n. North American shrub (Cornus sericea) often growing in dense clumps and having red branches, white flowers, and bluish-white drupes.

re·dou·ble (rē-düb'əl) v. re·dou·bled, re·dou·bling, re·dou·bles. — v. tr. 1. To double. 2. To repeat. 3. Games. To double the doubling bid of (an opponent) in bridge. — v. intr. 1. To become twice as great. 2. Games. To double a double in bridge.

re·doubt (rĭ-dout') n. 1. A small, often temporary defensive fortification. 2. A reinforcing earthwork or breastwork within a permanent rampart. 3. A protected place of refuge or defense. [French redoute, from Italian ridotto, from Medieval Latin reductus, concealed place, from Latin, past participle of reducere, to withdraw, lead back. See REDUCE.]

Re·doubt (rē'dout'), Mount. A volcano, 3,111 m (10,200 ft) high, of southern Alaska. The highest peak of the Aleutian Range, it erupted in 1989 for the first time in 25 years.

re·doubt·a·ble (rĭ-dou'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Arousing fear or awe; formidable. 2. Worthy of respect or honor. [Middle English redoubtabel, from Old French redoutable, from redouter, to dread : re-, re- + douter, to doubt, fear; see DOUBT.] — re·doubt'·a·bly adv.

re·dound (rĭ-dound') v. intr. re·dound·ed, re·dound·ing, re·dounds. 1. To have an effect or consequence: deeds that redound to one's discredit. 2. To return; recoil: Glory redounds upon the brave. 3. To contribute; accrue. [Middle English redounden, to abound, from Old French redonder, from Latin redundāre, to overflow. See REDUNDANT.]

red·out (rĕd'out') n. A sudden reddening of the visual field accompanied by severe headache and caused by engorgement of the blood vessels of the head when a person is subjected to a negative force of gravity, as in stunt flying.

re·dox (rĕ'dōks') n. Oxidation-reduction. [RED(UCTION) + OX(IDATION).]

red panda (rĕd pän'də) n. See panda (n., sense 2).

red·pen·cil (rĕd'pĕn'səl) v. tr. red·pen·ciled also red·pen·cilled, red·pen·cil·ing also red·pen·cil·ling, red·pen·cils also red·pen·cils. To censor, cut, revise, or correct with or as if with a red pencil.

red pepper (rĕd pĕp'ər) n. 1. The pungent, red, podlike fruit of any of several cultivars of the pepper plants, Capsicum frutescens and C. annum. 2. See cayenne pepper.

red pine (rĕd pīn) n. An evergreen timber tree (Pinus resinosa) of northeast North America, having long, flexible, glossy leaves grouped in fascicles of two. Also called Norway pine red·poll (rĕd'pōl') n. Any of several small finches of the genus Carduelis of northern North America and Eurasia, especially C. flammea, having a red crown and black chin.

Red Poll (rĕd pōl) or Red Polled (pōld) n. Any of a breed of reddish, hornless cattle developed in England and raised for milk and meat.

red puccoon (rĕd pə-kōōn') n. See bloodroot.

re-dress (rĭ-drĕs') v. tr. re-dressed, re-dress-ing, re-dress-es. 1. To set right; remedy or rectify. 2. To make amends to. 3. To make amends for. See Synonyms at correct. 4. To adjust (a balance, for example). — n. (also rĕ/drĕs)

1. Satisfaction for wrong or injury; reparation. See Synonyms at reparation.

2. Correction or reformation. [Middle English redressen, from Old French redrecier: re-, re- + drecier, to arrange; see DRESS.] — re-dress'er, re-dres'sor n.

red ribbon (rĕd rĭb'ən) n. An emblem, a badge, or a rosette made of red ribbon that is awarded as the second prize in a competition.

Red River (rĕd rĭv'ər) 1. Or in China Yu-an Jang (yōō-än' jyäng', yüän'). and in Vietnam Hong Ha (hông' hä') or Song Hong (sông' hông'). A river of southeast Asia rising in southern China and flowing about 1,175 km (730 mi) generally south through northern Vietnam to a fertile delta on the Gulf of Tonkin. 2. A river of the south-central United States rising in two branches in the Texas Panhandle and flowing about 1,638 km (1,018 mi) eastward along the Texas-Oklahoma border and into Arkansas, where it changes direction and flows southward into Louisiana and then southeast to the Mississippi River. 3. Also Red River of the North. A river of the north-central United States and south-central Canada formed by the confluence of two tributaries in west-central Minnesota and flowing about 499 km (310 mi) north along the Minnesota-North Dakota border into southeast Manitoba, Canada, where it empties into Lake Winnipeg. The Red River Valley is a fertile region for growing wheat, flax, and barley.

red-root (rĕd'rōōt', -rōōt') n. 1. An eastern North American bog plant (Lachnanthes caroliana) having red roots and woolly yellow flowers. 2. See pigweed (n., sense 2). 3. See ceanothus.

red salmon (rĕd sām'ən) n. See sockeye salmon.

Red Sea (rĕd sē) A long, narrow sea between northeast Africa and the Arabian Peninsula. It is linked with the Mediterranean to the north through the Gulf of Suez and the Suez Canal and with the Gulf of Aden and the Arabian Sea to the south through the strait of Bab el Mandeb.

red-shank (rĕd'shāngk') n. An Old World wading bird (Tringa totanus) having long red legs.

red shift (rĕd shĭft) n. An increase in the wavelength of radiation emitted by a celestial body as a consequence of the Doppler effect. [From the fact that the longer wavelengths of light are at the red end of the visible spectrum.]

red-shirt (rĕd'shûrt') v. tr. red-shirt-ed, red-shirt-ing, red-shirts. Sports. To keep (a college or school athlete) out of varsity competition for one year in order to extend the athlete's period of eligibility. [From the red jerseys worn by such athletes to distinguish them from the regular players.] —red'shirt' adj. & n.

red-should-ered hawk (rĕd'shō'dĕrd hōk) n. A medium-sized North American hawk (Buteo lineatus), having rufous shoulder feathers and found typically in wet woodlands and savannas.

red-skin (rĕd'skĭn') n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a Native American.

red snapper (rĕd snăp'ər) n. Any of several marine food fishes of the genus Lutjanus, of tropical and semitropical waters, having red or reddish bodies.

red snow (rĕd snō) n. Snow on which red-pigmented algae has grown, commonly found in Arctic and Alpine regions.

red spider (rĕd spĭ'dər) n. Any of various small red mites of the family Tetranychidae that feed on vegetation, causing damage to the leaves. Also called spider mite red-spot-ted eft (rĕd'spöt'ĭd ěft) n. See red eft.

Red Square (rĕd skwâr) A large open area in central Moscow bordered by the Kremlin, Lenin's tomb, St. Basil's Cathedral, and the GUM department store.

red squill (rĕd skwĭl) n. 1. See sea onion (n., sense 1). 2. A powder prepared from the bulbs of the red squill and used as a rat poison.

red squirrel (rĕd skwûr'əl) n. A North American squirrel (Tamiasciurus hudsonicus) having reddish or tawny fur.

red-start (rĕd'stärt') n. 1. A small North American bird (Setophaga ruticilla), the male of which has black plumage with orange patches on the wings and tail. 2. A European bird (Phoenicurus phoenicurus) having grayish plumage and a rust-red breast and tail. [RED + obsolete start, tail (from Middle English stert, from Old English steort); see ster-¹ in Appendix.]

red-tailed hawk (rĕd'tăld' hōk) n. A heavy-bodied North American hawk (Buteo jamaicensis) that feeds primarily on rodents and has a conspicuous reddish-brown tail in the male.

red tape (rĕd tăp) n. Official forms and procedures, especially when oppressively complex and time consuming. [From its former use in tying British official documents.]

red tide (rĕd tĭd) n. A bloom of dinoflagellates that causes reddish discoloration of coastal ocean waters. Certain dinoflagellates of the genus Gonyamllax produce toxins that kill fish and contaminate shellfish.

red-top (rĕd'tŏp') n. A widely cultivated Eurasian grass (Agrostis gigantea) having reddish flower clusters.

re-duce (rĭ-dōos', -dyōos') v. re-duced, re-duc-ing, re-duc-es. — v. tr.

1. To bring down, as in extent, amount, or degree; diminish. See Synonyms at decrease. 2. To bring to a humbler, weaker, difficult, or forced state or condition; especially: a. To gain control of; conquer: "a design to reduce them under absolute despotism” (Declaration of Independence). b. To subject to destruction: Enemy bombers reduced the city to rubble. c. To weaken bodily: was reduced almost to emaciation. d. To sap the spirit or mental energy of. e. To compel to desperate acts: The Depression reduced many to begging on street corners. f. To lower in rank or grade; demote. See Synonyms at demote. g. To powder or pulverize. h. To thin (paint) with a solvent. 3. To lower the price of: The store has drastically reduced winter coats. 4. To put in order or arrange systematically: reduce a complex tax situation. 5. To separate into orderly components by analysis. 6. Chemistry. a. To decrease the valence of (an atom) by adding electrons. b. To remove oxygen from (a compound). c. To add hydrogen to (a compound). d. To change to a metallic state by removing nonmetallic constituents; smelt. 7. Mathematics. To simplify the form of (an expression, such as a fraction) without changing the value. 8. Medicine. To restore (a fractured or displaced body part) to a normal condition or position. — v. intr. 1. To become diminished. 2. To lose weight, as by dieting. 3. Biology. To undergo meiosis. [Middle English reducen, to bring back, from Old French reducier, from Latin reducere: re-, re- + dūcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix.] —re-duc'er n. —re-duc'i-bil'i-ty n. —re-duc'i-ble adj. —re-duc'i-bly adv.

re-duc-ing agent (rĭ-dōō'sĭng ā'jənt, -dyōō'-) n. A substance that chemically reduces other substances, especially by donating an electron or electrons.

re-duc-tant (rĭ-dŭk'tənt) n. A reducing agent. [REDUCT(ION) + -ANT.]

re-duc-tase (rĭ-dŭk'tās', -tāz') n. An enzyme that promotes reduction of an organic compound. [REDUCT(ION) + -ASE.]

re-duc-ti-o ad ab-sur-dum (rĭ-dŭk'tē-ō ād əb-sŭr'dəm, -zŭr'-, -shē-ō) n. pl. re-duc-ti-o-nes ad absurdum (-ō'nēz, -nās). Disproof of a proposition by showing the absurdity of its inevitable conclusion. [Medieval Latin reductiō ad absurdum: Latin reductiō, a bringing back, reduction + Latin ad, to + Latin absurdum, absurdity, from neuter of absurdus, absurd.]

re-duc-tion (rĭ-dŭk'shən) n. Abbr. red. 1. The act or process of reducing.

2. The result of reducing: a reduction in absenteeism. 3. The amount by which something is lessened or diminished: a reduction of 12 percent in violent crime.

4. Biology. The first meiotic division, in which the chromosome number is reduced. Also called reduction division 5. Chemistry. a. A decrease in positive valence or an increase in negative valence by the gaining of electrons. b. A reaction in which hydrogen is combined with a compound. c. A reaction in which oxygen is removed from a compound. 6. Mathematics. a. The canceling of common factors in the numerator and denominator of a fraction. b. The converting of a fraction to its decimal equivalent. c. The converting of an expression or equation to its simplest form. [Middle English reduccion, restoration, from Old French reduction, from Latin reductiō, reductiōn-, from reductus, past participle of reducere, to bring back. See REDUCE.] —re-duc'tion-al adj.

re·duc·tion·ism (rĭ-dŭk/'shə-nĭz'əm) n. An attempt or a tendency to explain complex phenomena or structures by relatively simple principles, as by asserting that life processes or mental acts are instances of chemical and physical laws: “Our educational system has had a dangerous predilection for reductionism—an addiction to the primary, the elementary” (Frederick Turner). —re·duc'tion·ist adj., n.
—re·duc'tion·is'tic adj.

re·duc·tive (rĭ-dŭk/'tĭv) adj. 1. Of or relating to reduction. 2. Relating to, being an instance of, or exhibiting reductionism. 3. Relating to or being an instance of reductivism. —re·duc'tive·ly adv.

re·duc·tiv·ism (rĭ-dŭk/'tə-vĭz'əm) n. See minimalism (n., sense 1).
—re·duc'tiv·ist n.

re·dun·dan·cy (rĭ-dŭn/'dən-sē) n. pl. re·dun·dan·cies. 1. The state of being redundant. 2. A superfluity; an excess. 3. Unnecessary repetition. 4. Electronics. Duplication or repetition of elements in electronic equipment to provide alternative functional channels in case of failure. 5. Repetition of parts or all of a message to circumvent transmission errors.

USAGE NOTE: The usages that critics have condemned as redundancies fall into several classes. In some cases, such as consensus of opinion, close proximity, hollow tube, and refer back, the use of what is regarded as an unnecessary modifier or qualifier can sometimes be justified on the grounds that it in fact makes a semantic contribution. Thus a hollow tube can be distinguished from one that has been blocked up with deposits, and a consensus of opinion can be distinguished from a consensus of judgments or practice. In other cases the use of the qualifier is harder to defend. Thus there is no way to revert without reverting back and no consensus that is not general. • Sometimes recognition of redundancy may require familiarity with a foreign language. The expressions Sierra Mountains and Rio Grande River are indeed redundant for those who know Spanish, but the use of the words mountains and river may still serve some purpose when one is addressing an English-speaking audience. Occasionally, what originates as a redundant element may, through long use, become part of the established name of a thing. Thus a reference to the site of a famous World War II battle as “the El Alamein” incorporates three versions of the definite article, in English, Spanish, and Arabic. See Usage Note at close. See Usage Note at consensus. See Usage Note at cross section. See Usage Note at mental telepathy. See Usage Note at rarely. See Usage Note at refer.

re·dun·dant (rĭ-dŭn/'dənt) adj. 1. Exceeding what is necessary or natural; superfluous. 2. Needlessly repetitive; verbose. 3. Electronics. Of or involving redundancy in electronic equipment. 4. Of or involving redundancy in the transmission of messages. [Latin redundāns, redundant- present participle of redundāre, to overflow : re-, red-, re- + undāre, to surge (from unda, wave); see wed-¹ in Appendix.] —re-dun'dant·ly adv.

re-du·pli·cate (rĭ-dōō'plə-kāt', -dyōō'-) v. re-du·pli·cat·ed, re-du·pli·cat·ing, re-du·pli·cates. — v. tr. 1. To repeat over and again; redouble. 2. Linguistics. a. To double (the initial syllable or all of a root word) to produce an inflectional or derivational form. b. To form (a new word) by doubling all or part of a word. — v. intr. To be doubled. — adj. (-plə-kīt) Doubled. [Late Latin reduplicāre, reduplicāt- : Latin re-, re- + duplicāre, to duplicate; see DUPLICATE.]

re-du·pli·ca·tion (rĭ-dōō'plĭ-kā'shən, -dyōō'-) n. 1. The act of reduplicating or the state of being reduplicated. 2. The product or result of reduplicating. 3. Linguistics. a. A word formed by or containing a reduplicated element. b. The added element in a word form that is reduplicated. —re-du'pli-ca'tive adj. —re-du'pli-ca'tive·ly adv.

re-du·vi·id (rĭ-dōō'vē-īd, -dyōō'-) n. See assassin bug. [From New Latin Reduviidae, family name, from Reduvius, type genus, from Latin reduvia, hangnail, fragment. See eu-¹ in Appendix.]

re·dux (rē-dŭks') adj. Brought back; returned. Used postpositively. [Latin : re-, re- + dux, leader; see DUKE.]

red valerian (rĕd və-lĭr'ē-ən) n. A Mediterranean perennial plant (Centranthus ruber) having glabrous, ovate leaves and fragrant crimson to pale red flowers borne in dense terminal clusters.

red·wing (rĕd'wĭng') n. 1. See red-winged blackbird. 2. A European thrush (Turdus iliacus) having reddish feathers under the wings and a white eye stripe.

red-winged blackbird (rĕd'wĭngd' blāk'bŭrd') n. A North American blackbird (Agelaius phoeniceus), the male of which has scarlet patches on the wings. Also called redwing red wolf (rĕd wōōlf) n. A small reddish wolf (Canis rufus) of the southeast United States, having gray or black highlights and existing almost exclusively in captivity.

red·wood (rĕd'wōōd') n. 1. a. A very tall, evergreen, coniferous tree (Sequoia sempervirens) native to the coastal ranges of southern Oregon and central and northern California, having small, seed-bearing cones with peltate scales and unflattened branches. b. The soft, reddish wood of this tree. Also called sequoia 2. Any of various woods having a reddish color or yielding a red dye.

Red-wood City (rĕd'wōōd' sĭt'ē) A city of western California northwest of Palo Alto. It is a residential community with an electronics industry. Population, 66,072.

re·ech·o also re·ech·o (rĭ-ĕk'ō) v. re·ech·oed, re·ech·o·ing, re·ech·oes.

— v. intr. To sound back or reverberate. — v. tr. To echo back; repeat. See Synonyms at echo.

reed (rēd) n. 1. a. Any of various tall perennial grasses, especially of the genera Phragmites or Arundo, having hollow stems, broad leaves, and large plumelike terminal panicles. b. The stalk of any of these plants. c. A collection of these stalks: reed for making baskets. 2. Music. A primitive wind instrument made of a hollow reed stalk. 3. Music. a. A flexible strip of cane or metal set into the mouthpiece or air opening of certain instruments to produce tone by vibrating in response to a stream of air. b. An instrument, such as an oboe or a clarinet, that is fitted with a reed. 4. A narrow, movable frame fitted with reed or metal strips that separate the warp threads in weaving. 5. Architecture. A reeding. [Middle English rede, from Old English hrēod.]

Reed (rēd), John. 1887-1920. American journalist. A World War I correspondent, he was in Petrograd during the October Revolution (1917), an experience he recounted in Ten Days That Shook the World (1919). In 1919 he founded the American Communist Labor Party. Reed is buried in the Kremlin in Moscow.

Reed (rēd), Stanley Forman. 1884-1980. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1938-1957).

Reed (rēd), Thomas Brackett. 1839-1902. American politician. A U.S. representative from Maine (1877-1899), he twice served as Speaker of the House (1889-1891 and 1895-1899).

Reed (rēd), Walter. 1851-1902. American physician and army surgeon who proved that yellow fever was transmitted by the Aedes aegypti mosquito.

reed·bird (rēd'bûrd') n. See bobolink.

reed·buck (rēd'bŭk') n. Any of several African antelopes of the genus Redunca, having long hoofs, small horns that curve forward, and a short bushy tail. [Translation of Afrikaans rietbok.]

reed·ing (rē'dĭng) n. 1. Architecture. A convex decorative molding having parallel strips resembling thin reeds. 2. Parallel grooves cut into the edge of a coin at right angles to the faces.

reed·ling (rēd'lĭng) n. A small Eurasian marsh bird (Panurus biarmicus), the male of which has mustachelike black markings.

reed mace (rēd mās) n. See cattail.

reed·man (rēd'măn') n. Music. A player of reeds, especially a jazz saxophonist or jazz clarinetist.

reed organ (rēd ôr'gən) n. Music. A harmonium.

reed pipe (rēd pĭp) n. Music. An organ pipe with a reed that vibrates and produces a tone when air is forced through it.

reed stop (rēd stŏp) n. Music. A stop on an organ made up of or controlling reed pipes.

re-ed·u·cate also re-ed·u·cate (rē-ĕj'ə-kāt') v. tr. re-ed·u·cat·ed, re-ed·u·cat·ing, re-ed·u·cates. 1. To instruct again. 2. To retrain (a person) to function effectively; rehabilitate. —re-ed'u·ca'tion n.

reed·y (rē'dē) adj. reed·i·er, reed·i·est. 1. Full of reeds. 2. Made of reeds. 3. Resembling a reed, especially in being thin or fragile: “reedy businessmen in severe three-piece business suits” (Jimmy Breslin). 4. Music. Having a tone like that of a reed instrument. —reed'i·ness n.

reef¹ (rēf) n. Abbr. rf. 1. A strip or ridge of rocks, sand, or coral that rises to or near the surface of a body of water. 2. A vein of ore. [Obsolete Dutch rif, possibly from Old Norse, ridge.] —reef'y adj.

reef² (rēf) Nautical. n. A portion of a sail rolled and tied down to lessen the area exposed to the wind. — v. tr. reefed, reef·ing, reefs. 1. To reduce the size of (a sail) by tucking in a part and tying it to or rolling it around a yard. 2. To shorten (a topmast or bowsprit) by taking part of it in. [Middle English riff, from Old Norse rif, ridge, reef.]

reef·er¹ (rē'fər) n. 1. A short, heavy, close-fitting, double-breasted jacket. 2. A close-fitting, single-breasted or double-breasted coat. 3. Nautical. A person, such as a midshipman, who reefs.

reef·er² (rē'fər) n. Slang. Marijuana, especially a marijuana cigarette. [Origin unknown.]

ree·fer³ (rē'fər) n. Slang. 1. A conveyance, such as a railroad car or truck trailer, that carries cargo under refrigeration. 2. A refrigerator. [Alteration of REFRIGERATOR.]

reef knot (rēf nōt) n. Nautical. A square knot used in reefing sails.

reek (rēk) v. reeked, reek·ing, reeks. — v. intr. 1. To smoke, steam, or fume. 2. To be pervaded by something unpleasant: “This document... reeks of self-pity and self-deception” (Christopher Hitchens). 3. To give off or become permeated with a strong, unpleasant odor: “Grandma, who reeks of face powder and lilac water” (Garrison Keillor). — v. tr. 1. To emit or exude (smoke, for example). 2. To process or treat by exposing to the action of smoke. — n. 1. A strong, offensive odor; a stench. See Synonyms at stench. 2. Vapor; steam. [Middle English reken, to smoke, from Old English rēocan, to emit smoke, and rēcan, to expose to smoke; see reug- in Appendix.] —reek'er n. —reek'y adj.

WORD HISTORY: Reek is a word that can be said to have been degraded by the company that it has kept. The Old English word rēocan, one of two ancestors of our word, meant “to emit vapor, steam, or smoke,” while the other Old English ancestor, rēcan, meant “to fumigate, expose to smoke,” or “to cause to emit smoke, burn incense.” Burning incense and fumigating are certainly a far cry from the sort of thing now denoted by the verb reek. But at least in one case Old English rēocan did mean “to stink,” hardly a surprise when one considers how bad some smoke smells. Middle English reken, the descendant of these two Old English words, never meant “to stink,” but it could refer to a stench while meaning “to rise, ascend.” It would seem that the various exhalations of heated persons and animals, of freshly shed blood, and of smoke referred to by Middle English reken and its Modern English descendant reek eventually overwhelmed the word, so that as far as concrete senses are concerned, we largely think of it as meaning “to stink.”

reel¹ (rēl) n. 1. A device, such as a cylinder, spool, or frame, that turns on an axis and is used for winding and storing rope, tape, film, or other flexible materials. 2. A cylindrical device attached to a fishing rod to let out or wind up the line. 3. The quantity of wire, film, or other material wound on one reel. 4. A set of curved lawn-mower blades that rotate around a bar parallel to the ground, cutting grass while moving against a stationary straight blade. — v. tr. reeled, reel-ing, reels. 1. To wind on or let out from a reel. 2. To recover by winding on a reel: reel in a large fish. —phrasal verb. reel off. To recite fluently and usually at length: reeled off a long list of names and dates. [Middle English, from Old English hrēol.] —reel/a·ble adj.

reel² (rēl) v. reeled, reel-ing, reels. — v. intr. 1. To be thrown off balance or fall back: reeled from the sharp blow. 2. To stagger, lurch, or sway, as from drunkenness: reeled down the alley. 3. To go round and round in a whirling motion: gulls reeling and diving. 4. To feel dizzy: My head reeled with the facts and figures. — v. tr. To cause to reel. — n. 1. A staggering, swaying, or whirling movement. 2. a. A fast dance of Scottish origin. b. The Virginia reel. c. The music for one of these dances. [Middle English relen, to whirl about, probably from reel, spool. See REEL¹.] —reel/er n.

reel³ n. Maine. A hand-held hammer used in a quarry for shaping granite blocks. See Regional note at reeling. [Origin unknown.]

re·e·lect also re·e·lect (rē'ī-lĕkt') v. tr. re·e·lect·ed, re·e·lect·ing, re·e·lects. To elect again. —re'e·lec'tion n.

reel-ing (rē'ling) n. Maine. Sustained noise, as from hammering: “Hark that reeling, now, you’ll wake the baby!” (Anonymous).

REGIONAL NOTE: In the granite quarries of Maine, stones for paving were once shaped by men using small hammers called reels. Crews of 30 men at a time would use these hammers. The resulting “shattering noise as the pieces of the granite were shaped.... gave Mainers a word for any sustained hubbub—reelin” (John Gould). Reeling can denote noise made by humans as well: She told the children to hush their reeling.

reel-to-reel (rēl'tə-rēl') adj. Designating sound recording equipment or sound recordings that use magnetic tape which must be threaded through the equipment and onto an empty reel.

re-en-act also re-en-act (rē'ĕn-ăkt', -ə-năkt') v. tr. re-en-act-ed, re-en-act-ing, re-en-acts. 1. To enact again: reenact a law. 2. To perform again: reenact the first two scenes. 3. To go through a second time: reenacted the events leading up to the accident. —re'en-act'ment n.

re-en-force or re-en-force (rē'ĭn-fōrs', -fōrs') v. Variants of reinforce.

re-en-ter also re-en-ter (rē-ĕn'tər) v. re-en-tered, re-en-ter-ing, re-en-ters.

— v. intr. To come in or enter again. — v. tr. To record again on a list or ledger.

—re-en'trance n.

re-en-trant also re-en-trant (rē-ĕn'trənt) adj. Reentering; pointing inward.

— n. A reentrant angle or part.

reentrant angle also re-entrant angle (rē-ĕn'trənt äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. In an irregular polygon, an interior angle that is greater than 180° and whose apex faces into the polygon.

re-en-try also re-en-try (rē-ĕn'trē) n. pl. re-en-tries. 1. The act of reentering.

2. Law. The recovery of possession under a right reserved in a previous property transaction. 3. Games. a. The act of regaining the lead by taking a trick in bridge and whist. b. The card that will take a trick and thus regain the lead.

4. Aerospace. The return of a missile or spacecraft into Earth's atmosphere.

reentry vehicle (rē-ĕn'trē vē'ĭ-kəl) n. Abbr. RV The part of a spacecraft or missile that reenters Earth's atmosphere.

Reese (rēs), Lizette Woodworth. 1856-1935. American poet and educator whose works include A Handful of Lavender (1891) and White April (1930).

reeve¹ (rēv) n. 1. The elected president of a town council in some parts of Canada. 2. Any of various minor officers of parishes or other local authorities. 3. A bailiff or steward of a manor in the later medieval period. 4. A high officer of local administration appointed by the Anglo-Saxon kings. [Middle English, from Old English gerēfa.]

reeve² (rēv) v. tr. reeved or rove (rōv), reev-ing, reeves. Nautical. 1. To pass (a rope or rod) through a hole, ring, pulley, or block. 2. To fasten by passing through or around. 3. To pass a rope or rod through (a hole, ring, pulley, or block). [Origin unknown.]

reeve³ (rēv) n. The female ruff. [Probably alteration of RUFF¹.]

re-ex-am-ine also re-ex-am-ine (rē'ĭg-zăm'ĭn) v. tr. re-ex-am-ined, re-ex-am-in-ing, re-ex-am-ines. 1. To examine again or anew; review. 2. Law. To question (a witness) again after cross-examination. —re'ex-am'i-na'tion n.

ref (rĕf) n. Sports & Games. A referee.

ref. abbr. 1. Reference. 2. Referred. 3. Refining. 4. Reformation; reformed.
5. Refunding.

re·fect (rĭ-fĕkt') v. tr. re·fect·ed, re·fect·ing, re·fects. Archaic. To refresh with food and drink. [Latin reficere, re-fer-, to refresh : re-, re- + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.]

re·fec·tion (rĭ-fĕk'shən) n. 1. Refreshment with food and drink. 2. A light meal or repast.

re·fec·to·ry (rĭ-fĕk'tə-rĕ) n. pl. re·fec·to·ries. A room where meals are served, especially in a college or other institution.

refectory table (rĭ-fĕk'tə-rĕ tā'bəl) n. A long table with straight, heavy legs.

re·fer (rĭ-fūr') v. re·ferred, re·fer·ring, re·fers. — v. tr. 1. To direct to a source for help or information: referred her to a heart specialist; referred me to his last employer for a recommendation. 2. To assign or attribute to; regard as originated by. 3. To assign to or regard as belonging within a particular kind or class. 4. To submit (a matter in dispute) to an authority for arbitration, decision, or examination. 5. To direct the attention of: refer him to his duties. — v. intr.

1. To pertain; concern: questions referring to yesterday's lecture. 2. To make mention or reference. 3. To have recourse; turn: refer to a dictionary. [Middle English referren, from Old French referer, from Latin referre : re-, re- + ferre, to carry; see bher-¹ in Appendix.] — ref'er·a·ble (rĕf'ər-ə-bəl, rĭ-fūr'-) adj.

— re·fer'ral n. — re·fer'rer n.

SYNONYMS: refer, advert, mention. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to call or direct attention to something”: referred to my indiscretion; adverting to childhood experiences; often mentions his old friend. See also Synonyms at attribute resort

USAGE NOTE: It is sometimes believed that the phrase refer back is redundant, since the prefix re- means “back,” but the objection is misplaced. In fact, an expression can refer either to something that has already been mentioned or to something that is yet to be mentioned, and the distinction between refer back and refer ahead may thus be required for clarification. For example, the sentence Jones promised that if he was elected to the council, Harris would be made the council president is ambiguous, because the pronoun he may either refer back or refer ahead. See Usage Note at allude. See Usage Note at redundancy.

ref·e·ree (rĕf'ə-rĕ') n. 1. One to whom something is referred, especially for settlement, decision, or an opinion as to the thing's quality. 2. Sports & Games. An official supervising the play; an umpire. 3. Law. A person appointed by a court to make a determination of a case or to investigate and make a report on it. See Synonyms at judge. — v. ref·e·reed, ref·e·ree·ing, ref·e·rees. — v. tr. To judge as referee. — v. intr. To act as referee.

ref-er-ence (rĕf'ər-əns, rĕf'rəns) n. Abbr. ref. 1. An act of referring: My careful writing results from many references to a dictionary. 2. a. Significance in a specified context: Her speeches have special reference to the African situation. b. Meaning or denotation. 3. The state of being related or referred: with reference to; in reference to. 4. A mention of an occurrence or a situation: She made frequent references to her promotion. 5. a. A note in a publication referring the reader to another passage or source. b. The passage or source so referred to. c. A work frequently used as a source. d. A mark or footnote used to direct a reader elsewhere for additional information. 6. Law. a. Submission of a case to a referee. b. Legal actions conducted before or by a referee. 7. a. A person who is in a position to recommend another or to vouch for his or her fitness, as for a job. b. A statement about a person's qualifications, character, and dependability. — v. tr. ref-er-enced, ref-er-enc-ing, ref-er-ences. 1. To supply references to: "Our memories are addressed and referenced... by significant fragments of their own content" (Frederick Turner). 2. To mention in a reference; refer to: He referenced her book in his speech. See Usage Note at allude. —ref'er-enc-er n.

—ref'er-en'tial (-ə-rĕn'shəl) adj. —ref'er-en'tial-ly adv.

reference book (rĕf'ər-əns böök) n. 1. A book, such as a dictionary or an encyclopedia, to which one can refer for authoritative information. 2. See pass-book (n., sense 3).

ref-er-en-dum (rĕf'ə-rĕn'dəm) n. pl. ref-er-en-dums or ref-er-en-da (-də). 1. a. The submission of a proposed public measure or actual statute to a direct popular vote. b. Such a vote. 2. A note from a diplomat to the diplomat's government requesting instructions. [Latin, neuter gerundive of referre, to refer. See REFER.]

ref-er-ent (rĕf'ər-ənt, rĭ-fūr'ənt) n. 1. Something that refers, especially a linguistic item in its capacity of referring to a meaning. 2. Something referred to.

re-ferred pain (rĭ-fūr'd pān) n. Pain that is felt in a part of the body at a distance from the area of pathology, as pain in the right shoulder derived from the presence of a gallstone in the bladder.

re-fill (rĕ-fĭl') v. tr. re-filled, re-fill-ing, re-fills. To fill again. — n. (rĕ'fĭl') 1. A product packaged to replace the used contents of a container. 2. A second or subsequent filling.

re-fin-ance (rĕ'fə-nāns', rĕ-fĭ'nāns') v. intr. tr. re-fi-nanced, re-fi-nanc-ing, re-fi-nanc-es. To provide new financing or new financing for, as by discharging a mortgage with the proceeds from a new mortgage obtained at a lower interest rate. —re-fi'nance' n. —re'fi-nan'cer, re'fin-an-cier' (-fĭn-ən-sĭr', -fə-nān'-) n.

re-fine (rĭ-fĭn') v. re-fined, re-fin-ing, re-fines. — v. tr. 1. To reduce to a pure state; purify. 2. To remove by purifying. 3. To free from coarse, unsuitable, or immoral characteristics: refined his manners; refined her speaking style. — v.

intr. 1. To become free of impurities. 2. To acquire polish or elegance. 3. To use precise distinctions and subtlety in thought or speech. —re-fin'er n.

re-fined (rī-fīnd') adj. 1. Free from coarseness or vulgarity; polite. 2. Free of impurities; purified. 3. Precise to a fine degree.

re-fine-ment (rī-fīn'mənt) n. 1. The act of refining. 2. The result of refining; an improvement or elaboration. 3. The state or quality of being refined; cultivation, as in manners or taste. See Synonyms at culture. 4. A keen or precise phrasing; a subtle distinction.

re-fin-er-y (rī-fī'nə-rē) n. pl. re-fin-er-ies. An industrial plant for purifying a crude substance, such as petroleum or sugar.

re-fin-ish (rē-fīn'ish) v. tr. re-fin-ished, re-fin-ish-ing, re-fin-ish-es. To put a new finish on (furniture). —re-fin'ish-er n.

re-fit (rē-fīt') v. re-fit-ted, re-fit-ting, re-fits. — v. tr. To prepare and equip for additional use. — v. intr. To be made fit again. — n. (rē'fīt', rē-fīt')

1. Repair of damage or wear: "a house... in need of a major refit" (Nancy Holmes).

2. A secondary or subsequent preparation of supplies and equipment.

refl. abbr. 1. Reflection; reflective. 2. Reflex; reflexive.

re-flag (rē-flāg') v. tr. re-flagged, re-flag-ging, re-flags. To give a new registered nationality to (a ship or an aircraft).

re-reflect (rī-flēkt') v. re-reflect-ed, re-reflect-ing, re-reflects. — v. tr. 1. To throw or bend back (light, for example) from a surface. See Synonyms at echo. 2. To form an image of (an object); mirror: "Baseball reflects America's history" (Roslyn A. Mazer). 3. To manifest as a result of one's actions: Her work reflects intelligence. 4. Archaic. To bend back. — v. intr. 1. To be bent back. 2. To give back a likeness. 3. a. To think seriously. See Synonyms at think. b. To express carefully considered thoughts. —phrasal verb. reflect on. 1. To form or express carefully considered thoughts about: reflects on her country's place in history.

2. To give evidence of the qualities of (one): The hasty preparation of this report reflects on you. 3. To give evidence that (one) has acted in a given way: The excuses you gave reflect disappointingly on you. [Middle English reflecten, from Old French reflector, from Latin reflectere, to bend back : re-, re- + flectere, to bend.]

re-flec-tance (rī-flēk'təns) n. The ratio of the total amount of radiation, as of light, reflected by a surface to the total amount of radiation incident on the surface.

re-reflect-ing telescope (rī-flēk'tīng tēl'ī-skōp') n. A telescope in which light from the object is gathered and focused by a concave mirror, with the resulting image magnified by the eyepiece.

re-flec-tion (rī-flēk'shən) n. Abbr. refl. 1. The act of reflecting or the state of being reflected. 2. Something, such as light, radiant heat, sound, or an image, that is reflected. 3. a. Mental concentration; careful consideration. b. A thought or an opinion resulting from such consideration. 4. An indirect expression of censure or discredit: a reflection on his integrity. 5. A manifestation or result: Her achievements are a reflection of her courage. 6. Anatomy. a. The folding of a membrane from the wall of a cavity over an organ and back to the wall. b. The folds so made. —re·flec'tion·al adj.

re·flec·tive (rĭ-flĕk'tĭv) adj. Abbr. refl. 1. a. Of, relating to, produced by, or resulting from reflection. b. Capable of or producing reflection: a reflective surface. 2. Characterized by or given to meditation or contemplation; thoughtful. See Synonyms at pensive. —re·flec'tive·ly adv. —re·flec'tive·ness n.

re·flec·tiv·i·ty (rĕ'flĕk-tĭv'ĭ-tĕ) n. pl. re·flec·tiv·i·ties. 1. The quality of being reflective. 2. The ability to reflect. 3. Physics. The ratio of the intensity of a wave reflected from a surface to the energy possessed by the wave striking the surface.

re·flec·tom·e·ter (rĕ'flĕk-tŏm'ĭ-tər) n. An instrument for measuring the reflectance of a surface.

re·flec·tor (rĭ-flĕk'tər) n. 1. Something, such as a surface, that reflects. 2. A reflecting telescope.

re·flec·tor·ize (rĭ-flĕk'tə-rĭz') v. tr. re·flec·tor·ized, re·flec·tor·iz·ing, re·flec·tor·iz·es. To cause (a surface, for example) to reflect light, as by chemical treatment.

re·flex (rĕ'flĕks') adj. Abbr. refl. 1. Bent, turned, or thrown back; reflected. 2. Physiology. Being an involuntary action or response, such as a sneeze, blink, or hiccup. 3. Produced as an automatic response or reaction: reflex opposition to change. — n. Abbr. refl. 1. a. Something, such as light or heat, that is reflected. b. An image produced by reflection. c. A copy or reproduction. 2. Physiology. An involuntary response to a stimulus. 3. Psychology. An unlearned or instinctive response to a stimulus. 4. Linguistics. A form or feature that reflects or represents an earlier, often reconstructed, form or feature having undergone phonetic or other change. — v. tr. re·flexed, re·flex·ing, re·flex·es (rĭ-flĕks'). Abbr. refl. 1. To bend, turn back, or reflect. 2. To cause to undergo a reflex process. [From Middle English reflexen, to refract light, bend back, from Latin reflexus, past participle of reflectere, to bend back. See REFLECT.] reflex angle (rĕ'flĕks' äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. An angle greater than 180° and less than 360°.

reflex arc (rĕ'flĕks' ärk) n. Physiology. The neural path of a reflex.

reflex camera (rĕ'flĕks' kām'ər-ə) n. A camera fitted with a mirror that reflects the image of an object or a scene onto a viewing screen so that focus, lighting, and composition may be evaluated.

re·flex·ion (rĭ-flĕk'shən) n. Chiefly British. Variant of reflection.

re·flex·ive (rĭ-flĕk'sĭv) adj. Abbr. refl. 1. Directed back on itself. 2. Grammar. a. Of, relating to, or being a verb having an identical subject and direct object, as dressed in the sentence She dressed herself. b. Of, relating to, or being the pronoun used as the direct object of a reflexive verb, as herself in She dressed herself.

3. Of or relating to a reflex. 4. Elicited automatically; spontaneous: “a bid for... reflexive left-wing approval” (Marshall Delaney). — n. Abbr. refl. Grammar. A reflexive verb or pronoun. See Usage Note at myself. —re·flex’ive·ly adv.

—re·flex’ive·ness, re’flex·iv’i·ty (rē’flĕk-sĭv’i-tē) n.

re·flex·ol·o·gy (rē’flĕk-sŏl’ə-jē) n. 1. The study of reflex responses, especially as they affect behavior. 2. A method of massage that relieves nervous tension through the application of finger pressure, especially to the feet. —re’-flex·ol’o·gist n.

ref·lu·ent (rĕf’lōō-ənt) adj. Flowing back; ebbing. [Latin refluēns, refluent- present participle of refluere, to flow back : re-, re- + fluere, to flow; see FLUENT.] —ref’lu·ence n.

re·flux (rē’flŭks’) n. 1. A flowing back; ebb. 2. Chemistry. The process of refluxing. — v. re·fluxed, re·flux·ing, re·flux·es. — v. tr. Chemistry. To boil (a liquid) in a vessel attached to a condenser so that the vapors continuously condense for reboiling. — v. intr. To be boiled in such a way. [Medieval Latin refluxus : Latin re-, re- + fluxus, flow, from past participle of fluere, to flow; see bhleu- in Appendix.]

re·for·est (rē-fŏr’ĭst, -fŏr’ĭst) v. tr. re·for·est·ed, re·for·est·ing, re·for·ests. To replant (an area) with forest cover. —re’for·es·ta’tion n.

re·form (rĭ-fŏrm’) v. re·formed, re·form·ing, re·forms. — v. tr. 1. To improve by alteration, correction of error, or removal of defects; put into a better form or condition. 2. a. To abolish abuse or malpractice in: reform the government. b. To put an end to (a wrong). See Synonyms at correct. 3. To cause (a person) to give up harmful or immoral practices; persuade to adopt a better way of life. — v. intr. To change for the better. — n. 1. A change for the better; an improvement. 2. Correction of evils, abuses, or errors. 3. Action to improve social or economic conditions without radical or revolutionary change. — adj. 1. Relating to or favoring reform: a reform candidate for mayor. 2. Reform. Of or relating to Reform Judaism. [Middle English reformen, from Old French reformer, from Latin refŏrmāre : re-, re- + fŏrmāre (from fŏrma, form).] —re·form’a·bil’i·ty n. —re·form’a·ble adj. —re·form’er n.

re·form (rĕ-fŏrm’) v. re--formed, re--form·ing, re--forms. — v. tr. To form again. — v. intr. To become formed again.

ref·or·ma·tion (rĕf’ər-mā’shən) n. 1. Abbr. ref. The act of reforming or the state of being reformed. 2. Reformation. A 16th-century movement in Western Europe that aimed at reforming some doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church and resulted in the establishment of the Protestant churches. —ref’or·ma’tion·al adj.

re·for·ma·tive (rĭ-fŏr’mə-tĭv) adj. Serving to induce reform.

re·for·ma·to·ry (rĭ-fôr'mə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) n. pl. re·for·ma·to·ries. A penal institution for the discipline, reformation, and training of young or first offenders. Also called reform school — adj. Reformative.

re·formed (rĭ-fôrmd') adj. Abbr. ref. 1. Improved by the removal of faults or abuses. 2. Improved in conduct or character. 3. Reformed. Relating to or being the Protestant churches that follow the teachings of John Calvin and Ulrich Zwingli.

re·form·ism (rĭ-fôr'mĭz'əm) n. A doctrine or movement of reform.
—re·form'ist n.

Reform Judaism (rĭ-fôrm' jōō'dē-ĭz'əm) n. The branch of Judaism introduced in the 19th century that seeks to reconcile historical Judaism with modern life and does not require strict observance of traditional religious law and ritual.

reform school (rĭ-fôrm' skōōl) n. See reformatory.

re·fract (rĭ-frăkt') v. tr. re·fract·ed, re·fract·ing, re·fracts. 1. To deflect (light, for example) from a straight path by refraction. 2. To alter by viewing through a medium: "In the Quartet reality is refracted through a variety of eyes" (Elizabeth Kastor). 3. Medicine. To determine the refraction of (an eye, for example). [Latin refringere, refrāct-, to break up : re-, re- + frangere, to break; see bhreg- in Appendix.]

re·fract·ing telescope (rĭ-frăk'tĭng tēl'ĭ-skōp') n. A telescope in which light from an object is gathered and focused by lenses, with the resulting image magnified by the eyepiece.

re·frac·tion (rĭ-frăk'shən) n. 1. The turning or bending of any wave, such as a light or sound wave, when it passes from one medium into another of different density. 2. Astronomy. The apparent change in position of celestial objects caused by the bending of light rays entering Earth's atmosphere. 3. Medicine. a. The ability of the eye to bend light so that an image is focused on the retina.

b. Determination of the refractive characteristics of the eye. —re·frac'tion·al, re·frac'tive adj. —re·frac'tive·ly adv. —re·frac'tive·ness, re'frac·tiv'i·ty (rē'frăk-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n.

refractive index (rĭ-frăkt'tĭv ĭn'dēks') n. Physics. See index of refraction.

re·frac·tom·e·ter (rē'frăk-tōm'ĭ-tər) n. Any of several instruments used to measure the index of refraction of a substance.

re·frac·tor (rĭ-frăk'tər) n. 1. One that refracts. 2. A refracting telescope.

re·frac·to·ry (rĭ-frăk'tə-rē) adj. 1. Obstinately resistant to authority or control. See Synonyms at unruly. 2. Difficult to melt or work; resistant to heat: a refractory material such as silica. 3. Resistant to treatment: a refractory case of acne. — n. pl. re·frac·to·ries. 1. One that is refractory. 2. Material that has a high melting point. [Alteration (influenced by adjectives in -ORY), of obsolete refractory, from Latin refrāctārius, from refrāctus, past participle of refringere, to break up. See REFRACT.] —re·frac'to·ri·ly adv. —re·frac'to·ri·ness n.

re·frain¹ (rĭ-frān') v. re·frained, re·frain·ing, re·frains. — v. intr. To hold oneself back; forbear: refrained from swearing. — v. tr. Archaic. To restrain or hold back; curb. [Middle English refreinen, from Old French refrener, to restrain, from Latin refrēnāre: re-, re- + frēnāre, to restrain (from frēnum, bridle, from frendere, to grind); see ghrendh- in Appendix.] —re·frain'er n. —re·frain'·ment n.

SYNONYMS: refrain, abstain, forbear. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to keep or prevent oneself from doing or saying something”: refrained from commenting; abstained from smoking; can't forbear criticizing their ineptitude.

re·frain² (rĭ-frān') n. 1. a. A phrase, verse, or group of verses repeated at intervals throughout a song or poem, especially at the end of each stanza. b. Music for the refrain of a poem. 2. A song or melody. 3. A repeated utterance or theme. [Middle English refrein, from Old French refrain, alteration of refrait, past participle of refraindre, to break off, repeat, from Vulgar Latin refrangere*, to break off, alteration of Latin refringere. See REFRACT.]

re·fran·gi·ble (rĭ-frān'jə-bəl) adj. That can be refracted: refrangible rays of light. [From Latin refringere, to refract (influenced by REFRACT).]

—re·fran'gi·bil'i·ty, re·fran'gi·ble·ness n.

re·fresh (rĭ-frĕsh') v. re·refreshed, re·fresh·ing, re·fresh·es. — v. tr. 1. To revive with or as if with rest, food, or drink; give new vigor or spirit to. 2. To give new freshness or brightness to; restore. 3. To make cool, clean, or moist; freshen up. 4. To renew by stimulation: refresh one's memory. 5. To fill up again; replenish: refresh a drink. — v. intr. 1. To take refreshment. 2. To become fresh again; revive. [Middle English refresshen, from Old French refreschir: re-, re- + fres, fresche, fresh (of Germanic origin).]

re·fresh·en (rĭ-frĕsh'ən) v. tr. intr. re·fresh·ened, re·fresh·en·ing, re·fresh·ens. To refresh or become refreshed.

re·fresh·er (rĭ-frĕsh'ər) n. 1. One that refreshes: a lemon refresher, imbibed on a hot day. 2. Instruction that serves to acquaint one with material previously studied or to bring one's knowledge or skills up to date.

re·fresh·ing (rĭ-frĕsh'ɪŋ) adj. 1. Serving to refresh. 2. Pleasantly fresh and different: “common sense of a most refreshing sort” (William Raspberry).

—re·fresh'ing·ly adv.

re·fresh·ment (rĭ-frĕsh'mənt) n. 1. The act of refreshing or the state of being refreshed. 2. Something, such as food or drink, that refreshes.

3. refreshments. A snack or light meal and drinks.

re·fried beans (rĕ'frīd' bēnz) pl.n. Beans that have been cooked and then mashed and fried with seasonings. [Translation of Spanish frijoles refritos: frijoles, pl. of frijol, bean + refritos, pl. past participle of refreir, to refry.]

re·frig·er·ant (rĭ-frĭj'ər-ənt) adj. 1. Cooling or freezing; refrigerating.

2. Medicine. Reducing fever. — n. 1. A substance, such as air, ammonia, water, or carbon dioxide, used to provide cooling either as the working substance of a refrigerator or by direct absorption of heat. 2. Medicine. An agent used to reduce fever.

re·frig·er·ate (rĭ-frĭj'ə-rāt') v. tr. re·frig·er·at·ed, re·frig·er·at·ing, re·frig·er·ates. 1. To cool or chill (a substance). 2. To preserve (food) by chilling. [Latin refrigerāre, refrigerāt- : re-, re- + frigerāre, to make cool (from frīgus, frīgor-, coldness).] — re·frig'er-a'tion n. — re·frig'er-a'tive, re·frig'er-a-to'ry (-ər-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

re·frig·er·a·tor (rĭ-frĭj'ə-rā'tər) n. An appliance, a cabinet, or a room for storing food or other substances at a low temperature.

re·frin·gence (rĭ-frĭn'jəns) n. Refractive power.

re·frin·gent (rĭ-frĭn'jənt) adj. Of, relating to, or producing refraction; refractive. [Latin refringēns, refringent- present participle of refringere, to break up. See REFRACT.]

reft¹ (rĕft) v. A past tense and a past participle of reave¹.

reft² (rĕft) v. A past tense and a past participle of reave².

re·fu·el (rē-fyōō'əl) v. re·fu·eled also re·fu·elled, re·fu·el·ing also re·fu·el·ing, re·fu·els also re·fu·els. — v. tr. To supply again with fuel. — v. intr. To take on a fresh supply of fuel.

ref·uge (rĕf'yōōj) n. 1. Protection or shelter, as from danger or hardship. 2. A place providing protection or shelter. 3. A source of help, relief, or comfort in times of trouble. See Synonyms at shelter. — v. ref·uged, ref·ug·ing, ref·ug·es. Archaic. — v. tr. To give refuge to. — v. intr. To take refuge. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin refugium, from refugere, to run away : re-, re- + fugere, to flee.]

ref·u·gee (rĕf'yōō-jē') n. One who flees in search of refuge, as in times of war, political oppression, or religious persecution. [French réfugié, from past participle of réfugier, to take refuge, from Old French, from refuge, refuge. See REFUGE.]

re·fu·gi·um (rĭ-fyōō'jē-əm) n. pl. re·fu·gi·a (-jē-ə). Ecology. An area that has escaped ecological changes occurring elsewhere and so provides a suitable habitat for relict species. [Latin, refuge. See REFUGE.]

re·ful·gent (rĭ-fōōl'jənt, -fŭl'-) adj. Shining radiantly; resplendent. [Latin refulgēns, refulgent- present participle of refulgēre, to flash back : re-, re- + fulgēre, to flash; see bhel⁻¹ in Appendix.] — re·ful'gence, re·ful'gen·cy n.

— re·ful'gent·ly adv.

re·fund (rĭ-fŭnd', rē'fŭnd') v. re·fund·ed, re·fund·ing, re·funds. — v. tr.

To give back, especially money; return or repay: refunded the purchase price. — v. intr. To make repayment. — n. (rē'fŭnd') Abbr. rf. 1. A repayment of funds.

2. An amount repaid. [Middle English refunden, from Old French refunder, from Latin refundere: re-, re- + fundere, to pour; see gheu- in Appendix.]

—re·fund/a·ble adj. —re·fund'er n. —re·fund/ment n.

re·fund (rē-fünd') v. tr. re·fund·ed, re·fund·ing, re·funds. 1. To fund anew. 2. To pay back (a debt) with new borrowing, especially to replace (a bond issue) with a new issue.

re·fur·bish (rē-fûr'bîsh) v. tr. re·fur·bished, re·fur·bish·ing, re·fur·bish·es. To make clean, bright, or fresh again; renovate.

—re·fur/bish·ment n.

re·fus·al (rī-fyōō'zəl) n. 1. The act or an instance of refusing. 2. The opportunity or right to accept or reject something before it is offered elsewhere.

re·fuse¹ (rī-fyōōz') v. re·fused, re·fus·ing, re·fus·es. — v. tr. 1. a. To indicate unwillingness to do, accept, give, or allow: She was refused admittance. He refused treatment. b. To indicate unwillingness (to do something): refused to leave. 2. To decline to jump (an obstacle). Used of a horse. — v. intr. To decline to do, accept, give, or allow something. [Middle English refusen, from Old French refuser, from Vulgar Latin refūsāre*, probably blend of Latin recūsāre, to refuse; see RECUSE, and refūtāre; see REFUTE.] —re·fus'er n.

SYNONYMS: refuse, decline, reject, spurn, rebuff. These verbs all mean to be unwilling to accept, consider, or receive someone or something. Refuse usually implies determination and often brusqueness: “The commander... refused to discuss questions of right” (George Bancroft). “I’ll make him an offer he can’t refuse” (Mario Puzo). To decline is to refuse courteously: “I declined election to the National Institute of Arts and Letters some years ago, and now I must decline the Pulitzer Prize” (Sinclair Lewis). Reject suggests the discarding of someone or something as unsatisfactory, defective, or useless; it implies categoric refusal: “He again offered himself for enlistment and was again rejected” (Arthur S.M. Hutchinson). “Emphasize your choice by utter ignoring of all that you reject” (Ralph Waldo Emerson). To spurn is to reject scornfully or contemptuously: “The more she spurns my love,/The more it grows” (Shakespeare). Rebuff pertains to blunt, often disdainful rejection: “He had... forgotten himself, had gone too far in his advances, and had been rebuffed” (Robert Louis Stevenson).

ref·use² (rĕf'yōōs) n. Items or material discarded or rejected as useless or worthless; trash or rubbish. [Middle English, from Old French refus, rejection, refuse, from refuser, to refuse. See REFUSE¹.]

re·fuse·nik also re·fused·nik (rī-fyōōz'nĭk) n. A Soviet citizen who has been denied the right to emigrate.

ref·u·ta·tion (rĕf'yōō-tā'shən) also re·fut·al (rī-fyōōt'l) n. 1. The act of refuting. 2. Something, such as an argument, that refutes someone or something.

re·fute (rĭ-fyōōt') v. tr. re·fut·ed, re·fut·ing, re·futes. 1. To prove to be false or erroneous; overthrow by argument or proof: refute testimony. 2. To deny the accuracy or truth of: refuted the results of the poll. [Latin refūtāre. See bhau- in Appendix.] —re·fut'a·bil'i·ty (rĭ-fyōō'tə-bĭl'ĭ-tē, rĕf'yə-tə-) n. —re·fut'a·ble (rĭ-fyōō'tə-bəl, rĕf'yə-tə-) adj. —re·fut'a·bly adv. —re·fut'er n.

reg. abbr. 1. Regent. 2. Regiment. 3. Region. 4. Register; registered. 5. Registrar. 6. Registry. 7. a. Regular. b. Regularly. 8. Regulation. 9. Regulator.

re·gain (rē-gān') v. tr. re·gained, re·gain·ing, re·gains. 1. To recover possession of; get back again: regain one's strength. See Synonyms at recover. 2. To manage to reach again: regained the summit. —re·gain'er n.

re·gal (rē'gəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to a monarch; royal. 2. Belonging to or befitting a monarch: regal attire. 3. Magnificent; splendid. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rēgālis, from rēx, rēg-, king. See reg- in Appendix.] —re·gal'i·ty (rĭ-gāl'ĭ-tē) n. —re'gal·ly adv.

re·gale (rĭ-gāl') v. re·galed, re·gal·ing, re·gales. — v. tr. 1. To provide with great enjoyment; entertain. See Synonyms at amuse. 2. To entertain sumptuously with food and drink; provide a feast for. — v. intr. To feast. — n. 1. A great feast. 2. A choice food; a delicacy. 3. Refreshment. [French régaler, from Old French regal, feast, from gale (influenced by se rigoler, to amuse oneself), from galer, to make merry.] —re·gale'ment n.

re·ga·lia (rĭ-gāl'yə, -gāl'lē-ə) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. The emblems and symbols of royalty, such as the crown and scepter. 2. The rights and privileges of royalty. 3. The distinguishing symbols of a rank, office, order, or society. 4. Magnificent attire; finery. [Medieval Latin rēgālia, from Latin, neuter pl. of rēgālis, regal. See REGAL.] re·gard (rĭ-gārd') v. re·gard·ed, re·gard·ing, re·gards. — v. tr. 1. To look at attentively; observe closely. 2. To look upon or consider in a particular way: I regard him as a fool. 3. To hold in esteem or respect: She regards her teachers highly. 4. To relate or refer to; concern: This item regards their liability. 5. To take into account; consider. 6. Obsolete. To take care of. — v. intr. 1. To look or gaze. 2. To give heed; pay attention. — n. 1. A look or gaze. 2. Careful thought or attention; heed: She gives little regard to her appearance. 3. a. Respect, affection, or esteem: He has high regard for your work. b. regards. Good wishes expressing such sentiment: Give the family my best regards. 4. A particular point or aspect; respect: She was lucky in that regard. 5. Basis for action; motive. 6. Obsolete. Appearance or aspect. —idioms. as regards. Concerning. in regard to (or with regard to). With respect to. [Middle English regarden, from Old French regarder: re-, re- + guarder, to guard (of Germanic origin); see GUARD.]

SYNONYMS: regard, esteem, admiration, respect. These nouns refer to a feeling based on perception of and a measure of approval for the worth of a person or thing. Regard is the least forceful and most general: Please give your parents my warmest regards. "I once thought you had a kind of regard for her" (George Borrow). Esteem connotes considered appraisal and positive regard: "The near-unanimity of esteem he enjoyed during his lifetime has by no means been sustained since" (Will Crutchfield). Admiration is a feeling of keen approbation: "Greatness is a spiritual condition worthy to excite love, interest, and admiration" (Matthew Arnold). Respect implies appreciative, often deferential regard resulting from careful assessment: "I have a great respect for any man who makes his own way in life" (Winston Churchill). See also Synonyms at consider

USAGE NOTE: Regard is traditionally used in the singular in the phrase in regard (not in regards) to. Regarding and as regards are also standard in the sense "with reference to." In the same sense with respect to is acceptable, but respecting is not. • Respects is sometimes considered preferable to regards in the sense of "particulars": In some respects (not regards) the books are alike.

re-gar-dant (rĭ-gär'dnt) adj. Heraldry. Looking backward in profile: a lion regardant. [Middle English, from Old French, present participle of regarder, to regard. See REGARD.] re-gard-ful (rĭ-gärd'fəl) adj. 1. Showing attention; heedful. 2. Showing deference; respectful. —re-gard'ful-ly adv. —re-gard'ful-ness n.

re-gard-ing (rĭ-gär'dĭng) prep. In reference to; with respect to; concerning. See Usage Note at regard.

re-gard-less (rĭ-gärd'lĭs) adv. In spite of everything; anyway: continues to work regardless. — adj. Heedless; unmindful. —re-gard'less-ly adv. —re-gard'less-ness n.

regardless of (rĭ-gärd'lĭs ūv) prep. 1. In spite of: We will persevere regardless of past failures. 2. With no heed to: freedom for all, regardless of race or creed.

re-gat-ta (rĭ-gä'tə, -gät'ə) n. Nautical. A boat race or a series of boat races. [Italian dialectal, a contention, regatta, from regattare, to contend, perhaps from recatare, to sell again, compete, from Vulgar Latin recaptāre*, to contend : Latin re-, re- + Latin captāre, to seek to catch, frequentative of capere, to seize; see CATCH.] regd. abbr. Registered.

re-ge-late (rĕ'jə-lāt', rĕ'jə-lāt') v. intr. re-ge-lat-ed, re-ge-lat-ing, re-ge-lates. To undergo regelation. [RE- + Latin gelāre, gelāt-, to freeze; see GELATION.] re·ge·la·tion (rē'jə-lā'shən) n. 1. The fusion of two blocks of ice by pressure. 2. Successive melting under pressure and freezing when pressure is relaxed at the interface of two blocks of ice.

re·gen·cy (rē'jən-sē) n. pl. re·gen·cies. 1. A person or group selected to govern in place of a monarch or other ruler who is absent, disabled, or still in minority. 2. The period during which a regent governs. 3. The office, area of jurisdiction, or government of regents or a regent. — adj. 1. Regency. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the style, especially in furniture, prevalent in England during the regency (1811-1820) of George, Prince of Wales (later George IV). 2. Regency. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the style prevalent in France during the regency (1715-1723) of Philippe, Duc d'Orléans (1674-1723). 3. Of or relating to a regency: regency policies and appointments that were later rescinded.

re·gen·er·a·cy (rĭ-jĕn'ər-ə-sē) n. The state of being regenerated.

re·gen·er·ate (rĭ-jĕn'ə-rāt') v. re·gen·er·at·ed, re·gen·er·at·ing, re·gen·er·ates. — v. tr. 1. To reform spiritually or morally. 2. To form, construct, or create anew, especially in an improved state. 3. To give new life or energy to; revitalize. 4. Biology. To replace (a lost or damaged organ or part) by formation of new tissue. — v. intr. 1. To become formed or constructed again. 2. To undergo spiritual conversion or rebirth; reform. 3. To effect regeneration. — n. (-ər-ĭt) 1. One who is spiritually reborn. 2. Biology. A regenerated organ or part. — adj. (-ər-ĭt) 1. Spiritually or morally reformed. 2. Formed or created anew. 3. Restored to a better state; refreshed or renewed. [Latin regenerāre, regenerāt-, to reproduce : re-, re- + generāre, to beget; see GENERATE.] — re·gen'·er·a·ble (-ər-ə-bəl) adj. — re·gen'·er·ate·ly adv. — re·gen'·er·a'tor n.

re·gen·er·a·tion (rĭ-jĕn'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of regenerating or the state of being regenerated. 2. Spiritual or moral revival or rebirth. 3. Biology. Regrowth of lost or destroyed parts or organs.

re·gen·er·a·tive (rĭ-jĕn'ə-rā'tĭv, -ər-ə-tĭv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or marked by regeneration. 2. Tending to regenerate. — re·gen'·er·a'tive·ly adv.

Re·gens·burg (rā'gənz-bûrg', -gəns-böörk') A city of southeast Germany on the Danube River north-northeast of Munich. An ancient Celtic settlement, it was an important Roman frontier station and later a free imperial city before passing to Bavaria in 1810. Population, 126,681.

re·gent (rē'jənt) n. Abbr. reg., regt. 1. One who rules during the minority, absence, or disability of a monarch. 2. One acting as a ruler or governor. 3. A member of a board that governs an institution, such as a state university. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin regēns, regent-, ruler, from present participle of regere, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.] — re'gent·al (-jən-tl) adj.

reg-gae (rĕg'ā) n. Music. Popular music of Jamaican origin having elements of calypso, soul, and rock 'n' roll and characterized by a strongly accentuated off-beat. [Jamaican English, ultimately from rege-rege, ragged clothing, probably from RAG¹.]

Reg-gio di Ca-la-bri-a (rĕj'ē-ō dē kā-lā'brē-ā, rĕd'jō) also Reggio or Reggio Calabria A city of extreme southern Italy on the Strait of Messina opposite Sicily. Founded by Greek colonists in the late eighth century B.C., it suffered frequent invasions because of its strategic location. Earthquakes have also caused extensive damage. Population, 171,324.

Reggio nell'E-mi-lia (rĕj'ē-ō nĕl'ĕ-mĕl'yā) also Reggio or Reggio Emilia A city of north-central Italy west-northwest of Bologna. Founded by Romans in the second century B.C., it was ruled by the Este family for many centuries. Population, 129,893.

reg-i-cide (rĕj'ī-sīd') n. 1. The killing of a king. 2. One who kills a king. [Latin rĕx, rĕg-, king; see reg- in Appendix + -CIDE.] —reg'i-ci'dal (-sīd'l) adj.

re-gime also ré-gime (rā-zhēm', rĭ-) n. 1. a. A form of government: a fascist regime. b. A government in power; administration: suffered under the new regime. 2. A prevailing social system or pattern. 3. The period during which a particular administration or system prevails. 4. A regulated system, as of diet and exercise; a regimen. [French régime, from Old French, from Latin regimen, from regere, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.]

reg-i-men (rĕj'ə-mən, -mĕn') n. 1. Governmental rule or control. 2. The systematic procedure of a natural phenomenon or process. 3. a. A regulated system, as of diet, therapy, or exercise, intended to promote health or achieve another beneficial effect. b. A course of intense physical training. [Middle English, from Latin. See REGIME.]

reg-i-ment (rĕj'ə-mənt) n. Abbr. reg., regt. 1. A military unit of ground troops consisting of at least two battalions, usually commanded by a colonel. 2. A large group of people. — v. tr. reg-i-ment-ed, reg-i-ment-ing, reg-i-ments (rĕj'ə-mĕnt'). 1. To form into a regiment. 2. To put into systematic order; systematize. 3. To subject to uniformity and rigid order. [Middle English, government, rule, from Old French, from Late Latin regimentum, rule, from Latin regere, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.] —reg'i-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj. —reg'i-men'tal-ly adv. —reg'i-men-ta'tion n.

reg-i-men-tals (rĕj'ə-mĕnt'lz) pl.n. 1. The uniform and insignia of a particular regiment. 2. Military dress.

Re-gi-na (rĭ-jī'nə) The capital and largest city of Saskatchewan, Canada, in the southern part of the province southeast of Saskatoon. It was the capital of the Northwest Territories until the province of Saskatchewan was created in 1905. Population, 162,613.

Re-gi-o-mon-ta-nus (rē'jē-ō-mōn-tā'nəs, -tā'-, -tān-əs, rēj'ē-) See Johann Müller.

re-gion (rē'jən) n. Abbr. reg. 1. A large, usually continuous segment of a surface or space; area. 2. A large, indefinite portion of the earth's surface. 3. A specified district or territory. 4. An area of interest or activity; a sphere.

5. Ecology. A part of the earth characterized by distinctive animal or plant life.

6. An area of the body having natural or arbitrarily assigned boundaries: the abdominal region. See Synonyms at area. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin regiō, regiōn-, from regere, to rule. See reg- in Appendix.]

re-gion-al (rē'jə-nəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to a large geographic region. 2. Of or relating to a particular region or district. 3. Of or characteristic of a form of a language that is distributed in identifiable geographic areas and differs in pronunciation, grammar, or vocabulary from the standard form; dialectal. — n. Something, such as a magazine or a company branch, that serves a region: “earlier attempts to launch glossy regionals for women” (Business Week). — re'gion-al-ly adv.

re-gion-al-ism (rē'jə-nə-līz'əm) n. 1. a. Political division of an area into partially autonomous regions. b. Advocacy of such a political system. 2. Loyalty to the interests of a particular region. 3. A feature, such as an expression, a pronunciation, or a custom, that is characteristic of a geographic area. 4. The use of regional characteristics, as of locale, custom, or speech, in literature or art. 5. A policy whereby the interests of a nation in world affairs are defined in terms of particular countries or regions. — re'gion-al-ist adj., n. — re'gion-al-is'tic adj.

re-gion-al-ize (rē'jə-nə-līz') v. tr. re-gion-al-ized, re-gion-al-iz-ing, re-gion-al-iz-es. To divide into regions, especially for administrative purposes. — re'gion-al-i-za'tion (rē'jə-nə-lī-zā'shən) n.

ré-gis-seur (rā'zhē-sûr', -sœr') n. pl. re-gis-seurs (-sûr', -sœr'). A stage director, especially of a ballet. [French, from régir, régiss-, to direct, from Old French regir, from Latin regere. See REGENT.]

reg-is-ter (rēj'ī-stər) n. Abbr. reg. 1. a. A formal or official recording of items, names, or actions. b. A book for such entries. c. An entry in such a record. 2. The act of registering. 3. A device that automatically records a quantity or number. 4. Computer Science. A part of the central processing unit where groups of binary digits are stored as the computer is processing them. 5. An adjustable, grill-like device through which heated or cooled air is released into a room. 6. A state of proper alignment: to be in register. 7. Printing. a. Exact alignment of the lines and margins on the opposite sides of a leaf. b. Proper positioning of colors in color printing. 8. Music. a. The range of an instrument or a voice. b. A part of such a range. c. A group of matched organ pipes; a stop. 9. A variety of language used in a specific social setting: speaking in an informal register; writing in a scientific register. — v. reg-is-tered, reg-is-ter-ing, reg-is-ters. — v. tr.

1. a. To enter in an official register. b. To enroll officially or formally, especially in order to vote or attend classes. 2. To set down in writing; record: “It is for the historian to discover and register what actually happened” (Robert Conquest).

3. To indicate on or as if on an instrument or a scale. 4. To give outward signs of; express: Her face registered surprise. 5. To attain or achieve: registered a new high in sales. 6. To cause (mail) to be officially recorded and specially handled by payment of a fee. 7. To adjust so as to be properly aligned. — v. intr.

1. To place or cause placement of one’s name in a register. 2. To have one’s name officially placed on a list of eligible voters. 3. To enroll as a student. 4. To be indicated on or as if on an instrument or a scale. 5. To be shown or expressed, as on the face.

6. To make an impression; be recorded in the mind: The warning failed to register.

7. To be in proper alignment. [Middle English registre, from Old French, from Medieval Latin registrum, alteration of Late Latin regesta, from Latin, neuter pl. past participle of regerere, to record : re-, re- + gerere, to carry.] — reg’is-ter-er

n. — reg’is-tra-ble (-ĭ-strə-bəl) adj.

reg-is-tered (rĕj’ĭ-stərd) adj. Abbr. reg., regd. 1. Having the owner’s name listed in a register: registered bonds. 2. Having the pedigree recorded and verified by an authorized association of breeders: a registered golden retriever.

3. Officially qualified or certified: a registered pharmacist.

registered mail (rĕj’ĭ-stərd māl) n. Mail that is recorded by the post office when sent and at each point on its route so as to assure safe delivery.

registered nurse (rĕj’ĭ-stərd nŭrs) n. Abbr. RN, R.N. A graduate trained nurse who has passed a state registration examination and has been licensed to practice nursing.

reg-is-trant (rĕj’ĭ-strənt) n. One who registers or is registered.

reg-is-trar (rĕj’ĭ-strär’, rĕj’ĭ-strär’) n. Abbr. reg. 1. One who is in charge of official records. 2. An officer in a college or university who keeps the records of enrollment and academic standing. 3. An officer of a corporation responsible for maintaining records of ownership of its securities. 4. An admitting officer in a hospital. [Probably from registry, from Medieval Latin registrārius, from registrum, register. See REGISTER.]

reg-is-tra-tion (rĕj’ĭ-strā’shən) n. 1. The act of registering: voter registration. 2. The number of persons registered; enrollment. 3. An entry in a register. 4. A document certifying an act of registering. 5. Music. a. A combination of organ stops selected to be used in playing a piece. b. The technique of selecting and adjusting organ stops.

reg-is-try (rĕj’ĭ-strē) n. pl. reg-is-tries. Abbr. reg. 1. The act of registering; registration. 2. The registered nationality of a ship. 3. A place for registering. 4. a. A book for official records. b. The place where such records are kept.

re-gius professor (rē'jəs prə-fēs'ər, -jē-əs) n. One holding a professorship established by royal subsidy at any of certain older British universities. [From Latin rēgius, royal, from rēx, rēg-, king. See reg- in Appendix.]

reg-let (rĕg'līt) n. 1. Architecture. A narrow, flat molding. 2. Printing. A flat piece of wood used to separate lines of type. [French réglet, from Old French, diminutive of regle, ruler, from Latin rēgula, rod. See reg- in Appendix.]

reg-nal (rĕg'nəl) adj. Being a specified year of a monarch's reign calculated from the date of accession: in her 12th regnal year. [Medieval Latin rēgnālis, royal, from Latin rēgnum, reign. See REIGN.] reg-nant (rĕg'nənt) adj. 1. Reigning; ruling: a queen regnant. 2. Predominant. 3. Widespread; prevalent. [Probably from Middle English, a sovereign, from Old French, from Latin rēgnāns, rēgnant- present participle of rēgnāre, to reign, from rēgnum, reign. See REIGN.]

reg-o-lith (rĕg'ə-līth') n. The layer of loose rock resting on bedrock, constituting the surface of most land. Also called mantle rock [Greek rhēgos, blanket + LITH.] re-gorge (rē-gôrij') v. tr. re-gorged, re-gorg-ing, re-gorg-es. To disgorge. [French regorger, from Old French : re-, re- + gorger, to gorge (from gorge, throat); see GORGE.] re-gress (rī-grĕs') v. re-gressed, re-gress-ing, re-gress-es. — v. intr. 1. To go back; move backward. 2. To return to a previous, usually worse or less developed state. 3. To have a tendency to approach or go back to a statistical mean. — v. tr. Psychology. To induce a state of regression in. — n. (rĕ'grĕs')

1. a. The act of going or coming back; return. b. Passage back; reentry. 2. The act of reasoning backward from an effect to a cause. [Latin regredī, regress- : re-, re- + gradī, to go; see ghredh- in Appendix.] — re-gres'sor n.

re-gres-sion (rī-grĕsh'ən) n. 1. Reversion; retrogression. 2. Relapse to a less perfect or developed state. 3. Psychology. Reversion to an earlier or less mature pattern of feeling or behavior. 4. Biology. The return of a population to an earlier or less complex physical type in successive generations. 5. Statistics. The relationship between the mean value of a random variable and the corresponding values of one or more independent variables. 6. Astronomy. Retrograde motion of a celestial body.

re-gres-sive (rī-grĕs'iv) adj. 1. Tending to return or revert. 2. Characterized by regression or a tendency to regress. 3. Decreasing proportionately as the amount taxed increases. a regressive tax. — re-gres'sive-ly adv. — re-gres'sive-ness n.

re-gret (rī-grĕt') v. re-gret-ted, re-gret-ting, re-grets. — v. tr. 1. To feel sorry, disappointed, or distressed about. 2. To remember with a feeling of loss or sorrow; mourn. — v. intr. To feel regret. — n. 1. A sense of loss and longing for someone or something gone. 2. A feeling of disappointment or distress about something that one wishes could be different. 3. regrets. A courteous expression of regret, especially at having to decline an invitation. [Middle English regretten, to lament, from Old French regreter : re-, re- + -greter, to weep (perhaps of Germanic origin).] —re-gret/ter n.

SYNONYMS: regret, sorrow, grief, anguish, woe, heartache, heartbreak. All of these nouns denote mental distress. Regret has the broadest range, from mere disappointment to a painful sense of loss, dissatisfaction, self-reproach, or longing, as over something lost, gone, done, or left undone: He had hoped that our policy of not dealing with terrorists would be an example to other countries but soon realized, to his regret, that we didn't practice what we preached. She looked back with regret on the pain she had caused her family. Sorrow connotes sadness caused by misfortune, affliction, or loss; it can also imply contrition: “sorrow for his women, for his kinfolk, for his children, who needed his protection, and whom he could not protect” (James Baldwin). Grief is deep, acute personal sorrow, as that arising from irreplaceable loss: “Grief fills the room up of my absent child,/Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me” (Shakespeare). Anguish implies agonizing, excruciating mental pain: “I pray that our heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement” (Abraham Lincoln). Woe is intense, often prolonged wretchedness or misery: “the deep, unutterable woe/Which none save exiles feel” (W.E. Aytoun). Heartache most often applies to sustained private sorrow: The child's devastating problems are a source of untold heartache to the parents. Heartbreak is overwhelming grief: “Better a little chiding than a great deal of heartbreak” (Shakespeare).

re-gret·ful (rĭ-grĕt'fəl) adj. Full of regret; sorrowful or sorry. —re-gret/fully adv. —re-gret/fulness n.

re-gret·ta·ble (rĭ-grĕt'ə-bəl) adj. Eliciting or deserving regret: a regrettable lack of funds; regrettable remarks.

re-gret·ta·bly (rĭ-grĕt'ə-blĕ) adv. 1. To an extent deserving of regret: a regrettablely brief career. 2. As a matter of regret: Regrettably, the book is not available.

re-group (rĕ-grōop') v. re-grouped, re-group-ing, re-groups. — v. tr. To arrange in a new grouping. — v. intr. 1. To come back together in a tactical formation, as after a dispersal in a retreat. 2. To reorganize for renewed effort, as after a temporary setback.

regt. abbr. 1. Regent. 2. Regiment.

reg-u-lar (rĕg'yə-lər) adj. Abbr. reg. 1. Customary, usual, or normal: the train's regular schedule. 2. Orderly, even, or symmetrical: regular teeth. 3. In conformity with a fixed procedure, principle, or discipline. 4. Well-ordered; methodical: regular habits. 5. Occurring at fixed intervals; periodic: regular payments. See Synonyms at normal. 6. a. Occurring with normal or healthy frequency. b. Having bowel movements or menstrual periods with normal or healthy frequency. 7. Not varying; constant. 8. Formally correct; proper. 9. Having the required qualifications for an occupation: not a regular lawyer. 10. Informal. Complete; thorough: a regular scoundrel. 11. Informal. Good; nice: a regular guy. 12. Botany. Having symmetrically arranged parts of similar size and shape: regular flowers. 13. Grammar. Conforming to the usual pattern of inflection, derivation, or word formation. 14. Ecclesiastical. Belonging to a religious order and bound by its rules: the regular clergy. 15. Mathematics. a. Having equal sides and equal angles. Used of polygons. b. Having faces that are congruent regular polygons and congruent polyhedral angles. Used of polyhedrons. 16. Belonging to or constituting the permanent army of a nation. — n. 1. Ecclesiastical. A member of the clergy or of a religious order. 2. A soldier belonging to a regular army. 3. A dependable, loyal person: one of the party regulars. 4. A clothing size designed for persons of average height. 5. A habitual customer. [Middle English reguler, living under religious rule, from Old French, from Late Latin rēgulāris, according to rule, from Latin rēgula, rod, rule. See reg- in Appendix.]

—reg'·u·lar'·i·ty (-lār'ī-tē) n. —reg'·u·lar·ly adv.

regular army (rĕg'yə-lər är'mē) n. Abbr. R.A., RA The permanent standing army of a nation or state.

reg·u·lar·ize (rĕg'yə-lə-rīz') v. tr. reg·u·lar·ized, reg·u·lar·iz·ing, reg·u·lar·iz·es. To make regular; cause to conform. —reg'·u·lar·i·za'tion (-lār-ī-zā'shən) n. —reg'·u·lar·iz'er n.

regular year (rĕg'yə-lər yîr) n. An ordinary year of 354 days or a leap year of 384 days in the Jewish calendar.

reg·u·late (rĕg'yə-lāt') v. tr. reg·u·lat·ed, reg·u·lat·ing, reg·u·lates. 1. To control or direct according to rule, principle, or law. 2. To adjust to a particular specification or requirement: regulate temperature. 3. To adjust (a mechanism) for accurate and proper functioning. 4. To put or maintain in order: regulate one's eating habits. [Middle English, from Late Latin rēgulāre, rēgulāt-, from Latin rēgula, rod, rule. See reg- in Appendix.] —reg'·u·la'tive, reg'·u·la·to'ry (-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

reg·u·la'tion (rĕg'yə-lā'shən) n. Abbr. reg. 1. The act of regulating or the state of being regulated. 2. A principle, rule, or law designed to control or govern conduct. 3. A governmental order having the force of law. Also called executive order. 4. Embryology. The capacity of an embryo to continue normal development following injury to or alteration of a structure.

reg·u·la'tor (rĕg'yə-lā'tər) n. Abbr. reg. 1. One that regulates, as: a. The mechanism in a watch by which its speed is governed. b. A highly accurate clock used as a standard for timing other clocks. c. A device used to maintain uniform speed in a machine; a governor. d. A device used to control the flow of gases, liquids, or electric current. 2. One, such as the member of a governmental regulatory agency, that ensures compliance with laws, regulations, and established rules: banking regulators; price regulators.

regulator gene (rĕg'yə-lā'tər jĕn) n. A gene that represses the activity of another gene in an operon. Also called regulatory gene re·gu·lus (rĕg'yə-ləs) n. pl. reg·u·li (-lī) or reg·u·lus·es. 1. The metallic mass that sinks to the bottom of a furnace or crucible during smelting. 2. A relatively impure intermediate product of various ores in smelting. [Latin rĕgulus, diminutive of rĕx, rĕg-, king. See reg- in Appendix.] —reg'u·line (rĕg'yə-līn, -līn') adj.

Reg·u·lus (rĕg'yə-ləs) n. A bright double star in the constellation Leo. [Latin rĕgulus, diminutive of rĕx, rĕg-, king. See REGULUS.]

Regulus, Marcus Atilius. Died c. 250 B.C. Roman general and politician who was captured by the Carthaginians (255). Giving his word to return to Carthage, he was sent to Rome to negotiate a peace treaty but instead convinced the Romans to reject the Carthaginian terms. He subsequently returned to Carthage, where he died in prison.

re·gur·gi·tate (rĕ-gŭr'jĭ-tāt') v. re·gur·gi·tat·ed, re·gur·gi·tat·ing, re·gur·gi·tates. — v. intr. To rush or surge back. — v. tr. To cause to pour back, especially to cast up (partially digested food). [Medieval Latin regurgitāre, regurgitāt-, to overflow : Latin re-, re- + Late Latin gurgitāre, to engulf, flood (from Latin gurgēs, gurgit-, whirlpool).] —re·gur'gi·tant (-tənt) adj.

—re·gur'gi·ta'tion n. —re·gur'gi·ta'tive adj.

re·hab (rĕ'hăb') Informal. n. 1. Rehabilitation. 2. Something, especially a building, that has undergone rehabilitation. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: rehab programs; rehab sites. — v. tr. re·habbed, re·hab·bing, re·habs. To rehabilitate: “purchased and rehabbed eight units of housing” (Hatfield MA Valley Advocate).

re·ha·bil·i·tant (rĕ'hə-bĭl'ĭ-tənt) n. One who is undergoing rehabilitation, as for a disability.

re·ha·bil·i·tate (rĕ'hə-bĭl'ĭ-tāt') v. tr. re·ha·bil·i·tat·ed, re·ha·bil·i·tat·ing, re·ha·bil·i·tates. 1. To restore to good health or useful life, as through therapy and education. 2. To restore to good condition, operation, or capacity. 3. To reinstate the good name of. 4. To restore the former rank, privileges, or rights of. [Medieval Latin rehabilitāre, rehabilitāt-, to restore to a former rank : Latin re-, re- + Late Latin habilitāre, to enable; see HABILITATE.] —re'ha·bil'ĭ·tat'a·ble adj. —re'ha·bil'ĭ·ta'tion n. —re'ha·bil'ĭ·ta'tive adj.

re·hash (rĕ-hăsh') v. tr. re·hashed, re·hash·ing, re·hash·es. 1. To bring forth again in another form without significant alteration: rehashing old ideas. 2. To discuss again. — n. (rĕ'hăsh') The act or result of rehashing: a rehash of an old plot.

re·hear (rĕ-hĭr') v. tr. re·heard (-hŭrd'), re·hear·ing, re·hears. 1. To hear again. 2. Law. To give a new hearing to (a case) by the same court.

re·hear·ing (rē-hîr'ing) n. Law. A new hearing of a case by the same court or other administrative tribunal in which it was originally heard.

re·hears·al (rī-hûr'səl) n. 1. The act of practicing in preparation for a public performance. 2. A session of practice for a performance, as of a play. 3. A detailed enumeration or repetition: a long rehearsal of his woes.

re·hearse (rī-hûrs') v. re·hearsed, re·hears·ing, re·hears·es. — v. tr.

1. a. To practice (a part in a play, for example) in preparation for a public performance. b. To direct in rehearsal: rehearsed the orchestra. 2. To perfect or cause to perfect (an action) by repetition. See Synonyms at practice. 3. a. To retell or recite. b. To list or enumerate: rehearsed her complaints in a letter. See Synonyms at describe. — v. intr. To practice something, such as a speech, before presenting it publicly. [Middle English rehercen, to repeat, from Old French rehercier: re-, re- + hercier, to harrow (from herce, harrow); see HEARSE.]

—re·hears'er n.

Rehn·quist (rĕn'kwist'), William Hubbs. Born 1924. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1972-1986) and was appointed chief justice in 1986.

re·house (rē-houz') v. tr. re·housed, re·hous·ing, re·hous·es. To provide with new, usually improved housing.

re·hy·drate (rē-hī'drat') v. tr. re·hy·drat·ed, re·hy·drat·ing, re·hy·drates.

1. To cause (something dehydrated) to take up fluid. 2. To replenish the body fluids of. —re'hy·dra'tion n.

Reich (rīk, rīKH), Wilhelm. 1897-1957. Austrian psychoanalyst who theorized that sexual repression is the source of many psychological and social problems.

reichs·mark (rīks'märk', rīKHS'-) n. pl. reichsmark or reichs·marks. Abbr. RM, Rm. A monetary unit of Germany from 1925 to 1948. [German: Reichs, genitive of Reich, realm (from Middle High German rīch, from Old High German rīchi); see reg- in Appendix + Mark, unit of currency (from Middle High German marke); see MARK².]

Reich·stein (rīk'stīn', rīKH'shtīn'), Tadeus. Born 1897. Polish-born Swiss chemist. He shared a 1950 Nobel Prize for discoveries concerning the hormones of the adrenal cortex.

Reid (rēd), Thomas. 1710-1796. Scottish philosopher who founded a philosophy of common sense largely as a reaction to the ideas of David Hume.

Reid (rēd), Whitelaw. 1837-1912. American editor and diplomat who was publisher of the New York Tribune (1872-1912), U.S. minister to France (1889-1892), and ambassador to Great Britain (1905-1912).

re·i·fy (rē'ə-fī', rā'-) v. tr. re·i·fied, re·i·fy·ing, re·i·fies. To regard or treat (an abstraction) as if it had concrete or material existence. [Latin rēs, rē-, thing; see rē- in Appendix + -FY.] —re'i·fi·ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n. —re'i·fi'er n.

Rei-gate (rī'gīt) A municipal borough of southern England, a residential suburb of London. Population, 116,700.

reign (rān) n. 1. Exercise of sovereign power, as by a monarch. 2. The period during which a monarch rules. 3. Dominance or widespread influence: the reign of reason. — v. intr. reigned, reign-ing, reigns. 1. To exercise sovereign power. 2. To hold the title of monarch, but with limited authority. 3. To be predominant or prevalent: Panic reigned as the fire spread. [Middle English reigne, from Old French, from Latin rēgnum, from rēx, rēg-, king. See reg- in Appendix.]

Reign of Terror (rān ūv tēr'ər) n. 1. The period (1793-1794) of the French Revolution during which thousands of people were executed. 2. reign of terror. pl. reigns of terror. A period of brutal suppression or intimidation by those in power.

re-im-burse (rē'īm-bûrs') v. tr. re-im-bursed, re-im-burs-ing, re-im-burs-es. 1. To repay (money spent); refund. 2. To pay back or compensate (another party) for money spent or losses incurred. [RE- + imburse, to put in a purse, pay (from French embourser, from Old French : en-, in from Latin in-; see in-² + borser, to get money from borse, purse, from Late Latin bursa, bag); see BURSA.] — re'im-burs'a-ble adj. — re'im-burse'ment n.

re-im-port (rē'īm-pôrt', -pôrt', rē-īm'pôrt', -pôrt') v. tr. re-im-port-ed, re-im-port-ing, re-im-ports. To bring back into a country (goods made from its exported raw materials). — re-im'port (rē-īm'pôrt, -pôrt) n. — re'im-por-ta'tion n.

re-im-pres-sion (rē'īm-prēsh'ən) n. Printing. A second impression, as of a book, that is identical to the original; a reprint.

Reims (rēmz, răns) See Rheims.

rein (rān) n. 1. Often reins. A long, narrow leather strap attached to each end of the bit of a bridle and used by a rider or driver to control a horse or other animal. 2. A means of restraint, check, or guidance. 3. Often reins. A means or an instrument by which power is exercised: the reins of government. — v. reined, rein-ing, reins. — v. tr. 1. To check or hold back by or as if by the use of reins. Often with in, back, or up. 2. To restrain or control. — v. intr. To control a horse, for example, with reins. — idioms. draw in the reins. To slow down or stop by or as if by pressure on the reins. give free rein to (or give full rein to). To release from restraints; allow to go unchecked: gave rein to her emotions. tight rein. Close control: kept expenses on a tight rein. [Middle English, from Old French resne, reine, from Vulgar Latin retina*, from Latin retinēre, to retain. See RETAIN.]

re-in-car-nate (rē'ĭn-kār'nāt) v. tr. re-in-car-nat-ed, re-in-car-nat-ing, re-in-car-nates. To cause to be reborn in another body; incarnate again.

re-in-car-na-tion (rē'ĭn-kār-nā'shən) n. 1. a. Rebirth of the soul in another body. b. Belief in this rebirth. 2. A rebirth in another form; a new embodiment.

rein-deer (rān'dîr') n. pl. reindeer or rein-deers. A large deer (Rangifer tarandus) of the Arctic and northern regions of Eurasia and North America, having branched antlers in both sexes. [Middle English reindere: Old Norse hreinn, reindeer; see ker-¹ in Appendix + Middle English der, animal; see DEER.]

WORD HISTORY: Although Saint Nick uses reins on his reindeer and reindeer are used to pull sleds in Lapland and northern Siberia, the word reindeer has nothing to do with reins. The element -deer is indeed our word deer, but the rein- part is borrowed from another language, specifically from the Scandinavian languages spoken by the chiefly Danish and Norwegian invaders and settlers of England from the 9th to the 11th century. Even though the Old Icelandic language in which much of Old Norse literature is written is not the same variety of Old Norse spoken by these settlers of England, it is close enough to give us an idea of the words that were borrowed into English. Thus we can cite the Old Icelandic word hreinn, which means “reindeer,” as the source of the first part of the English word. The word reindeer is first recorded in Middle English in a work composed before 1400.

Rein-deer Lake (rān'dîr' lāk) A lake of northeast Saskatchewan and northwest Manitoba, Canada. It is drained by the Reindeer River, which flows about 230 km (143 mi) southward to the Churchill River.

reindeer moss (rān'dîr' mōs) n. An erect, grayish, branching lichen (Cladonia rangiferina) of Arctic regions, constituting the chief source of food for reindeer and several other herbivores.

Rei-ner (rī'nēr), Fritz. 1888-1963. Hungarian-born American conductor who was musical director of the Pittsburgh Symphony (1938-1948), New York Metropolitan Opera (1948-1953), and Chicago Symphony (1953-1962).

re-in-fec-tion (rē'in-fĕk'shən) n. A second infection that follows recovery from a previous infection by the same causative agent.

re-in-force also re-en-force or re-en-force (rē'in-fōrs', -fōrs') v. tr.

re-in-forced, re-in-forc-ing, re-in-forc-es. 1. To give more force or effectiveness to; strengthen: The news reinforced her hopes. 2. To strengthen (a military force) with additional personnel or equipment. 3. To strengthen by adding extra support or material. 4. To increase the number or amount of; augment.

5. Psychology. a. To reward (an experimental subject, for example) with a reinforcer subsequent to a desired response or performance. b. To stimulate (a response) by means of a reinforcer. [RE- + inforce (variant of ENFORCE).]

—re'in-force/a-ble adj.

re-in-forced concrete (rē'in-fōrst' kōn-krēt', -fōrst') n. Poured concrete containing steel bars or metal netting to increase its tensile strength. Also called ferroconcrete re·in·force·ment (rē'ĭn-fôrs'mənt, -fôrs' -) n. 1. The act or process of reinforcing or the state of being reinforced. 2. Something that reinforces. 3. Often reinforcements. Additional personnel or equipment sent to support a military action. 4. Psychology. a. The occurrence or experimental introduction of an unconditioned stimulus along with a conditioned stimulus. b. The strengthening of a conditioned response by such means. c. An event, a circumstance, or a condition that increases the likelihood that a given response will recur in a situation like that in which the reinforcing condition originally occurred.

re·in·forc·er (rē'ĭn-fôr'sər, -fôr' -) n. Psychology. A stimulus, such as a reward, that in operant conditioning maintains or strengthens a desired response.

Rein·hardt (rĭn'härt'), Max. 1873-1943. Austrian theatrical director and manager whose experimental, large-scale productions included Oedipus Rex and The Miracle.

reins (rānz) pl.n. 1. The kidneys, loins, or lower back. 2. The seat of the affections and passions. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin rēnēs.]

re·in·state (rē'ĭn-stāt') v. tr. re·in·stat·ed, re·in·stat·ing, re·in·states.

1. To bring back into use or existence. 2. To restore to a previous condition or position. —re·in·state·ment n.

re·in·sure (rē'ĭn-shōor') v. tr. re·in·sured, re·in·sur·ing, re·in·sures. To insure again, especially by transferring in whole or in part a risk or contingent liability already covered under an existing contract. —re·in·sur·ance n.

—re·in·sur·er n.

re·in·te·grate (rē-ĭn'tĭ-grāt') v. tr. re·in·te·grat·ed, re·in·te·grat·ing, re·in·te·grates. To restore to a condition of integration or unity.

—re·in·te·gra·tion n. —re·in·te·gra·tive adj.

re·in·ter·pret (rē'ĭn-tŭr'prĭt') v. tr. re·in·ter·pret·ed, re·in·ter·pret·ing, re·in·ter·prets. To interpret again or anew. —re·in·ter·pre·ta·tion (-tŭr'prĭ-tā'shən) n.

re·in·vent (rē'ĭn-vĕnt') v. tr. re·in·vent·ed, re·in·vent·ing, re·in·vents.

1. To make over completely: She kept trying to reinvent herself as an actress. 2. To bring back into existence or use: reinvented the concept of neighborliness.

—idiom. reinvent the wheel. 1. To do something again, from the beginning, especially in a needless or inefficient effort: "School districts need not reinvent the wheel every time they try to improve their schools" (Washington Post). 2. To recast something familiar or old into a different form: "Call it reinventing the wheel or recasting old ideas, but these contemporary versions have a spirit and style all their own" (New York Times).

re·in·vest (rē'ĭn-vĕst') v. tr. re·in·vest·ed, re·in·vest·ing, re·in·vests. To invest (capital or earnings) again, especially to invest (income from securities or funds) in additional shares. —re·in·vest·ment n.

re·in·vig·o·rate (rē'īn-vīg'ə-rāt') v. tr. re·in·vig·o·rat·ed, re·in·vig·o·rat·ing, re·in·vig·o·rates. To give new life or energy to.
—re'īn·vig'o·ra'tion n. —re'īn·vig'o·ra'tor n.

reis (rās) n. A plural of real³.

re·is·sue (rē-īsh'ōō) v. re·is·sued, re·is·su·ing, re·is·sues. — v. tr. To issue again, especially to make available again. — v. intr. To come forth again. — n.
1. A second or subsequent issue, as of a book. 2. A reprinting of postage stamps from unchanged plates.

Rei·sters·town (rī'stərz-toun') A community of north-central Maryland, a suburb of Baltimore. Population, 19,314.

REIT abbr. Real estate investment trust.

re·it·er·ate (rē-īt'ə-rāt') v. tr. re·it·er·at·ed, re·it·er·at·ing, re·it·er·ates. To say or do again or repeatedly. See Synonyms at repeat. —re·it'er·a'tion n.
—re·it'er·a'tive (-ə-rā'tiv, -ər-ə-tiv) adj. —re·it'er·a'tive·ly adv.
—re·it'er·a'tor n.

re·ject (rī-jěkt') v. tr. re·ject·ed, re·ject·ing, re·jects. 1. To refuse to accept, submit to, believe, or make use of. 2. To refuse to consider or grant; deny. 3. To refuse to recognize or give affection to (a person). See Synonyms at refuse¹.
4. To discard as defective or useless; throw away. 5. To spit out or vomit.
6. Medicine. To resist immunologically the introduction of (a transplanted organ or tissue); fail to accept as part of one's own body. — n. (rē'jěkt) One that has been rejected: a reject from the varsity team; a tire that is a reject. [Middle English rejecten, from Latin reicere, reiect-: re-, re- + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.] —re·ject'er, re·jec'tor n. —re·jec'tive adj.

re·jec·tion (rī-jěk'shən) n. 1. The act of rejecting or the state of being rejected. 2. Something rejected. 3. Medicine. The failure of a recipient's body to accept a transplanted tissue or organ as the result of immunological incompatibility; immunological resistance to foreign tissue.

rejection slip (rī-jěk'shən slīp) n. A printed note accompanying a manuscript rejected for publication and returned to the author.

rejective art (rī-jěk'tiv ärt) n. See minimalism (n., sense 1). —re·jec'tiv·ist adj.

re·jig (rē-jīg') v. tr. re·jigged, re·jig·ging, re·jigs. Informal. To rejigger: "a series of measures to... rejig the monetary system" (Christian Science Monitor).

re·jig·ger (rē-jīg'ə) v. tr. re·jig·gered, re·jig·ger·ing, re·jig·gers. Informal. To readjust or rearrange.

re·joyce (rī-jois') v. re·joiced, re·joic·ing, re·joic·es. — v. intr. To feel joyful; be delighted: rejoiced at the news; rejoiced in her friend's good fortune. — v. tr. To fill with joy; gladden. —phrasal verb. rejoice in. To have or possess: rejoices in a keen mind. [Middle English rejoicen, from Old French rejoir, rejoiss-:

re-, re- + joir, to be joyful (from Vulgar Latin gaudire*, from Latin gaudēre); see gāu- in Appendix.] —re-joic'er n.

re-join¹ (rī-join') v. re-joined, re-join-ing, re-joins. — v. tr. To say in reply, especially in sharp response to a reply. — v. intr. To reply. [Middle English rejoinen, from Old French rejoindre, rejoin- : re-, re- + joindre, to join; see JOIN.]

re-join² (rē-join') v. re-joined, re-join-ing, re-joins. — v. tr. 1. To come again into the company of: rejoined his regiment. 2. To join together again; reunite. — v. intr. To become joined again.

re-join-der (rī-join'dər) n. An answer, especially to a reply. [Middle English, from Old French rejoindre, to answer, rejoin. See REJOIN¹.]

re-ju-ve-nate (rī-jōō'və-nāt') v. tr. re-ju-ve-nat-ed, re-ju-ve-nat-ing, re-ju-ve-nates. 1. To restore to youthful vigor or appearance; make young again. 2. To restore to an original or new condition: rejuvenate an old sofa. 3. a. To stimulate (a stream) to renewed erosive activity, as by uplift of the land. b. To develop youthful topographic features in (a previously leveled area). [From RE- + Latin iuvenis, young; see yeu- in Appendix.] —re-ju've-na'tion n.

—re-ju've-na'tor (-tər) n.

re-ju-ve-nes-cence (rī-jōō'və-nēs'əns) n. A renewal of youthful appearance or character. —re-ju've-nes'cent adj.

re-kin-dle (rē-kīn'dl) v. tr. re-kin-dled, re-kin-dling, re-kin-dles. 1. To relight (a fire). 2. To revive or renew: rekindled an old interest in the sciences.

rel. abbr. 1. Relating. 2. Relative. 3. Relatively. 4. Released. 5. Religion; religious.

re-laid (rē-lād') v. Past tense and past participle of re-lay.

re-lapse (rī-lāps') v. intr. re-lapsed, re-laps-ing, re-laps-es. 1. To fall or slide back into a former state. 2. To regress after partial recovery from illness. 3. To slip back into bad ways; backslide. — n. (rē'lāps, rī-lāps') A falling back into a former state, especially after apparent improvement. [Middle English relapsen, to forswear, from Latin relābī, relāps-, to fall back gradually : re-, re- + lābī, to slide.] —re-laps'er n.

re-laps-ing fever (rī-lāp'sīng fē'vər) n. Any of several infectious diseases characterized by chills and fever and caused by spirochetes transmitted by lice and ticks. Also called recurrent fever re-late (rī-lāt') v. re-lat-ed, re-lat-ing, re-lates. — v. tr. 1. To narrate or tell. See Synonyms at describe. 2. To bring into or link in logical or natural association. See Synonyms at join. 3. To establish or demonstrate a connection between. — v. intr. 1. To have connection, relation, or reference: The symbols relate to an earlier system. 2. To have or establish a reciprocal relationship; interact: She doesn't relate well to her peers. 3. To react in response, especially favorably: I just can't relate to these new fashions. [Obsolete French relater, from Old re-lat-ed (rĭ-lā'tĭd) adj. 1. Being connected; associated. 2. Connected by kinship, common origin, or marriage. 3. Music. Having a close harmonic connection. —re-lat'ed-ly adv. —re-lat'ed-ness n.

French, from Latin relātus, past participle of referre : re-, re- + lātus, brought; see tel- in Appendix.] —re-lat/a-ble adj. —re-lat'er n.

re-la-tion (rĭ-lā'shən) n. 1. A logical or natural association between two or more things; relevance of one to another; connection: the relation between smoking and heart disease. 2. The connection of people by blood or marriage; kinship. 3. A person connected to another by blood or marriage; a relative. 4. The way in which one person or thing is connected with another: the relation of parent to child. 5. relations. a. The mutual dealings or connections of persons, groups, or nations in social, business, or diplomatic matters: international relations. b. Sexual intercourse. 6. Reference; regard: in relation to your inquiry. 7. a. The act of telling or narrating. b. A narrative; an account. 8. Law. The principle whereby an act done at a later date is considered to have been done on a prior date.

re-la-tion-al (rĭ-lā'shə-nəl) adj. 1. Of or arising from kinship. 2. Indicating or constituting relation. 3. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a word or particle, such as a conjunction or preposition, that expresses a syntactic relation between elements in a phrase or sentence. —re-la'tion-al-ly adv.

re-la-tion-ship (rĭ-lā'shən-ship') n. 1. The condition or fact of being related; connection or association. 2. Connection by blood or marriage; kinship. 3. A particular type of connection existing between people related to or having dealings with each other: has a close relationship with his siblings. 4. A romantic or sexual involvement.

rel-a-tive (rĕl'ə-tĭv) adj. Abbr. rel. 1. Having pertinence or relevance; connected or related. 2. Considered in comparison with something else: the relative quiet of the suburbs. 3. Dependent on or interconnected with something else; not absolute. See Synonyms at dependent. 4. Grammar. Referring to or qualifying an antecedent, as the pronoun who in the man who was on TV or that in the dictionary that I use. 5. Music. Having the same key signature. Used of major and minor scales and keys: C major is the relative major of A minor. — n. 1. One related by kinship, common origin, or marriage. 2. Something having a relation or connection to something else. 3. Grammar. A relative pronoun. [Middle English, from Old French relatif, from Late Latin relātīvus, from Latin relātus, past participle of referre, to relate. See RELATE.] —rel'a-tive-ness n.

relative biological effectiveness (rĕl'ə-tĭv bĭ'ə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl ĩbreve/-fĕk'tĭv-nĭs) n. Abbr. RBE, rbe A measure of the capacity of a specific ionizing radiation to produce a specific biological effect, expressed relative to a reference radiation, such as radium gamma rays or 200-volt x-rays.

relative clause (rĕl'ə-tĭv klôz) n. Grammar. A dependent clause introduced by a relative pronoun, as which is downstairs in The dining room, which is downstairs, is too dark.

relative humidity (rĕl'ə-tĭv hyōō-mĭd'ĭ-tĕ) n. Abbr. r.h. The ratio of the amount of water vapor in the air at a specific temperature to the maximum amount that the air could hold at that temperature, expressed as a percentage.

rel·a·tive·ly (rĕl'ə-tĭv-lĕ) adv. Abbr. rel. In a relative manner; in comparison with something else: a relatively minor problem. See Usage Note at perfect.

relative permittivity (rĕl'ə-tĭv pûr'mĭ-tĭv'ĭ-tĕ) n. Physics. See permittivity.

relative pitch (rĕl'ə-tĭv pĭch) n. Music. 1. The pitch of a tone as determined by its position in a scale. 2. The ability to recognize or produce a tone by mentally establishing a relationship between its pitch and that of a recently heard tone.

relative pronoun (rĕl'ə-tĭv prō'noun') n. Grammar. A pronoun that introduces a relative clause and has reference to an antecedent, as who in the child who is wearing a hat or that in the house that you live in.

relative to (rĕl'ə-tĭv tōō) prep. With regard to; concerning: questions relative to the deficit.

rel·a·tiv·ism (rĕl'ə-tĭ-vĭz'əm) n. Philosophy. A theory that conceptions of truth and moral values are not absolute but are relative to the persons or groups holding them.

rel·a·tiv·ist (rĕl'ə-tĭ-vĭst) n. 1. Philosophy. A proponent of relativism. 2. A physicist who specializes in the theories of relativity.

rel·a·tiv·is·tic (rĕl'ə-tĭ-vĭs'tĭk) adj. 1. Of or relating to relativism. 2. Physics. a. Of, relating to, or resulting from speeds approaching the speed of light: relativistic increase in mass. b. Having to do with or based on the theory of relativity: relativistic mechanics.

rel·a·tiv·i·ty (rĕl'ə-tĭv'ĭ-tĕ) n. 1. The quality or state of being relative. 2. Philosophy. Existence dependent solely on relation to a thinking mind. 3. A state of dependence in which the existence or significance of one entity is solely dependent on that of another. 4. Physics. a. Special relativity. b. General relativity.

re·la·tor (rĭ-lā'tər) n. 1. One who relates or narrates: a relator of stories for children. 2. Law. A beneficially interested person on whose behalf an action is maintained by a sovereign power or a state.

re·lax (rĭ-lăks') v. re·laxed, re·lax·ing, re·lax·es. — v. tr. 1. To make lax or loose: relax one's grip. 2. To make less severe or strict: relax a curfew. 3. To reduce in intensity; slacken: relax one's efforts. 4. To relieve from tension or strain: The warm bath relaxed me. — v. intr. 1. To take one's ease; rest. 2. To become lax or loose. 3. To become less severe or strict. 4. To become less restrained or tense. [Middle English relaxen, from Old French relaxer, from Latin relaxāre : re-, re- + laxāre, to loosen (from laxus, loose); see slēg- in Appendix.]

—re·lax'·a·ble adj.

re·lax·ant (rī-lăk'sənt) n. Something, such as a drug or therapeutic treatment, that relaxes or relieves muscular or nervous tension. — adj. Tending to relax or to relieve tension.

re·lax·a·tion (rē'lăk-sā'shən) n. 1. The act of relaxing or the state of being relaxed. 2. Refreshment of body or mind; recreation: played golf for relaxation. See Synonyms at rest¹. 3. A loosening or slackening. 4. A reduction in strictness or severity. 5. Physiology. The lengthening of inactive muscle or muscle fibers. 6. Physics. The return or adjustment of a system to equilibrium following displacement or abrupt change. 7. Mathematics. A method of solving equations in which the errors resulting from an initial approximation are reduced by succeeding approximations until all errors are within specified limits.

relaxation time (rē'lăk-sā'shən tīm) n. Physics. The time required for an exponential variable to decrease to $1/e$ (0.368) of its initial value.

re·laxed (rī-lăkst') adj. 1. Not rigorous or strict. 2. Free from strain or tension. 3. Easy and informal in manner.

re·lax·er (rī-lăk'sər) n. One that relaxes, as a chemical solution used on tightly curled hair to soften or loosen the curls.

re·lax·in (rī-lăk'sin) n. A female hormone secreted by the corpus luteum that helps soften the cervix and relax the pelvic ligaments in childbirth.

re·lay (rē'lā) n. 1. An act of passing something along from one person, group, or station to another. 2. Sports. a. A relay race. b. A division of a relay race. 3. Electronics. A device that responds to a small current or voltage change by activating switches or other devices in an electric circuit. 4. A crew of workers who relieve another crew; a shift. 5. A fresh team, as of horses or dogs, to relieve weary animals in a hunt, task, or journey. — v. tr. re·layed, re·lay·ing, re·lays (rē'lā, rī-lā'). 1. To pass along by or as if by relay: relayed the message to his boss. 2. To supply with fresh relays. 3. Electronics. To control or retransmit by means of a relay. [Middle English relai, fresh team of dogs for a hunt, from Old French, from relaier, to relay : re-, re- + laier, to leave (of Germanic origin); see leip- in Appendix.]

re·lay (rē-lā') v. tr. re·laid (-lād'), re·lay·ing, re·lays. To lay again: re-laid the carpet.

relay race (rē'lā rās) n. Sports. A race between two or more teams, in which each team member runs only a set part of the race and is then relieved by another member of the team.

re·leas·a·ble (rī-lē'sə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be released: releasable documents; releasable prisoners. 2. Intended or configured to release: releasable ski bindings.

—re·leas·a·bil'i·ty n. —re·leas'·a·bly adv.

re·lease (rĭ-lēs') v. tr. re·leased, re·leas·ing, re·leas·es. 1. To set free from confinement, restraint, or bondage: released the prisoners. 2. To free from something that binds, fastens, or holds back; let go: released the balloons; released a flood of questions. 3. To dismiss, as from a job. 4. To relieve of debt or obligation. 5. To relieve of care and suffering. 6. a. To issue for performance, sale, publication, or distribution. b. To make known or available. 7. To relinquish (a right or claim). — n. 1. A deliverance or liberation, as from confinement, restraint, or suffering. 2. An authoritative discharge, as from an obligation or from prison. 3. An unfastening or letting go of something caught or held fast. 4. A device or catch for locking or releasing a mechanism. 5. a. The act or an instance of issuing something for publication, use, or distribution. b. Something thus released: a press release. 6. Law. a. Relinquishment to another of a right, title, or claim. b. The document authorizing such relinquishment. [Middle English relesen, from Old French relaissier, alteration of relacher, from Latin relaxāre. See RELAX.]

re·lease (rē-lēs') v. tr. re·leased, re·leas·ing, re·leas·es. To lease again: re-leased the car.

re·leas·er (rĭ-lē'sər) n. 1. One that releases: a releaser of shipments; a releaser of prisoners. 2. Zoology. A stimulus that releases a specific behavior pattern in an animal.

re·leas·ing factor (rĭ-lē'sĭng fāk'tər) n. Any of several hormones secreted by the hypothalamus that stimulate the anterior part of the pituitary gland to release certain hormones.

rel·e·gate (rĕl'i-gāt') v. tr. rel·e·gat·ed, rel·e·gat·ing, rel·e·gates. 1. To assign to an obscure place, position, or condition. 2. To assign to a particular class or category; classify. See Synonyms at commit. 3. To refer or assign (a matter or task, for example) for decision or action. 4. To send to a place of exile; banish. [Middle English relegaten, to banish, from Latin relēgāre, relēgāt- : re-, re- + lēgāre, to send, depute; see leg- in Appendix.] — rel'e-ga'tion n.

re·lent (rĭ-lĕnt') v. re·lent·ed, re·lent·ing, re·lents. — v. intr. To become more lenient, compassionate, or forgiving. See Synonyms at yield. — v. tr. Obsolete. 1. To cause to slacken or abate. 2. To cause to soften in attitude or temper. [Middle English relenten, to melt, from Anglo-Norman relenter, from relent, damp : Latin re-, re- + Latin lentus, sticky, slow.]

re·lent·less (rĭ-lĕnt'lis) adj. 1. Unyielding in severity or strictness; unrelenting: relentless persecution. 2. Steady and persistent; unremitting: the relentless beat of the drums. — re·lent'less·ly adv. — re·lent'less·ness n.

rel·e·vance (rĕl'ə-vəns) also rel·e·van·cy (-vən-sē) n. 1. Pertinence to the matter at hand. 2. Applicability to social issues: a governmental policy lacking relevance. 3. Computer Science. The capability of an information retrieval system to select and retrieve data appropriate to a user's needs.

rel·e·vant (rĕl'ə-vənt) adj. Having a bearing on or connection with the matter at hand. [Medieval Latin relevāns, relevant-, from Latin, present participle of relevāre, to relieve, raise up. See RELIEVE.] —rel'·e·vant·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: relevant, pertinent, germane, material, apposite, apropos. These adjectives all describe what relates to and has a direct bearing on the matter at hand. Something relevant is connected with a subject or issue: The scientist corresponds with colleagues in order to learn about matters relevant to her own research. Pertinent suggests a logical, precise relevance: The professor has given the students a list of articles pertinent to the topic under discussion. Germane implies close kinship and appropriateness: "He's a serious student of the issues, always inquisitive about the facts, and aggressive in their pursuit.... he asks questions that are germane and central to the issue" (Marlin Fitzwater). Something material is not only relevant but also crucial to a matter: "Facts, the statement of which may reasonably be presumed likely to have such an influence on the judgment of the underwriter are called material facts" (Joseph Arnould). Apposite implies a striking appropriateness and pertinence: The successful copywriter is a master of apposite and evocative verbal images. Something apropos is both to the point and opportune: The thought may have been apropos, but I suppressed its expression out of consideration of their feelings.

ANTONYM: irrelevant

re·li·a·ble (rĭ-lī'ə-bəl) adj. Capable of being relied on; dependable: a reliable assistant; a reliable car. —re·li'·a·bil'·i·ty, re·li'·a·ble·ness n. —re·li'·a·bly adv.

SYNONYMS: reliable, dependable, responsible, trustworthy, trusty. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is "worthy of reliance or trust": a reliable source of information; a dependable worker; a responsible used-car dealer; a trustworthy report; a trusty servant of the state.

re·li·ance (rĭ-lī'əns) n. 1. The act of relying or the state of being reliant. 2. The faith, confidence, or trust felt by one who relies; dependence. See Synonyms at trust. 3. One relied on; a mainstay.

re·li·ant (rĭ-lī'ənt) adj. Having or exhibiting reliance; dependent: reliant on medication. —re·li'ant·ly adv.

rel·ic (rĕl'ĭk) n. 1. Something that has survived the passage of time, especially an object or a custom whose original culture has disappeared: "Corporal punishment was a relic of barbarism" (Cyril Connolly). 2. Something cherished for its age or historic interest. 3. An object kept for its association with the past; a memento. 4. An object of religious veneration, especially a piece of the body or a personal item of a saint. 5. Or relics. A corpse; remains. [Middle English relik, object of religious veneration, from Old French relique, from Late Latin reliquiae, sacred relics, from Latin, remains, from reliquus, remaining, from relinquere, reliq-, to leave behind. See RELINQUISH.]

rel-ict (rĕl'ikt, rĭ-lĭkt') n. 1. Ecology. An organism or a species of an earlier time surviving in an environment that has undergone considerable change.

2. Something that has survived; a remnant. 3. A widow. — adj. Geology. Of or relating to something that has survived, as structures or minerals after destructive processes. [From Middle English relicte, left undisturbed, from Latin relictus, past participle of relinquere, to leave behind; see RELINQUISH. Sense 2, Middle English relicte, widow from Medieval Latin relicta, from Latin, feminine past participle of relinquere, to leave behind.]

re-lic-tion (rĭ-lĭk'shən) n. Geology. Gradual recession of water in a sea, lake, or stream, leaving permanently dry land.

re-lief (rĭ-lĕf') n. 1. The easing of a burden or distress, such as pain, anxiety, or oppression. 2. Something that alleviates pain or distress. 3. a. Public assistance. b. Aid in time of danger, especially rescue from siege. 4. a. Release from a post or duty, as that of sentinel. b. One who releases another by taking over a post or duty. 5. A pleasant or amusing change; a diversion. 6. a. The projection of figures or forms from a flat background, as in sculpture, or such a projection that is apparent only, as in painting. b. A work of art featuring such projection. Also called relievo 7. Geology. The variations in elevation of an area of the earth's surface. 8. Distinction or prominence due to contrast: "The light brought the white church... into relief from the flat ledges" (Willa Cather). 9. Law. Redress awarded by a court. 10. A payment made by the heir of a deceased tenant to a feudal lord for the privilege of succeeding to the tenant's estate. — idiom. on relief.

Receiving public assistance because of need or poverty. [Middle English, from Old French, from relever, to relieve; see RELIEVE. Senses 6, 7, and 8, French from Italian rilievo. See BAS-RELIEF.]

relief map (rĭ-lĕf' mǎp) n. A map that depicts land configuration, usually with contour lines.

relief pitcher (rĭ-lĕf' pĭch'ər) n. Baseball. A pitcher who replaces another during a game.

re-lieve (rĭ-lĕv') v. tr. re-lieved, re-liev-ing, re-lieves. 1. To cause a lessening or alleviation of: relieved all his symptoms; relieved the tension. 2. To free from pain, anxiety, or distress. 3. To furnish assistance or aid to. 4. To rescue from siege. 5. To release (a person) from an obligation, a restriction, or a burden, as by law or legislation. 6. To free from a specified duty by providing or acting as a substitute. 7. To make less tedious, monotonous, or unpleasant: Only one small candle relieved the gloom. 8. To make prominent or effective by contrast; set off. 9. Informal. To rob or deprive: Pickpockets relieved him of his money. — idiom. relieve oneself. To urinate or defecate. [Middle English releven, from Old French relevier, from Latin relevāre: re-, re- + levāre, to raise; see leg^wh- in Appendix.] —re-liev'a-ble adj. —re-liev'er n.

SYNONYMS: relieve, allay, alleviate, assuage, lighten, mitigate, palliate. All of these verbs mean to make something less severe or more bearable. To relieve is to ease and make more endurable something causing discomfort or distress: “that misery which he strives in vain to relieve” (Henry David Thoreau). “The counselor relieved her fears” (Sir Walter Scott). Allay suggests relief at least for the time being from what is burdensome or painful: “This music crept by me upon the waters;/ Allaying both their fury and my passion/With its sweet air” (Shakespeare). Alleviate connotes temporary lessening of distress without removal of its cause: “No arguments shall be wanting on my part that can alleviate so severe a misfortune” (Jane Austen). To assuage is to soothe or make milder: “What shall assuage the unforgotten pain/And teach the unforgetful to forget?” (Dante Gabriel Rossetti). Lighten in this comparison signifies to make less heavy or oppressive: Congress endeavored to lighten the taxpayers' burden. Mitigate and palliate connote moderating the severity, force, or intensity of something that causes suffering: “I... prayed to the Lord to mitigate a calamity which seemed to me past the capacity of man to remedy” (John Galt). “His well-known financial ability made men turn to him in the hour of distress, as of all statesmen the most fitted to palliate it” (William E.H. Lecky).

re-lie-vo (rĭ-lē'vō) n. pl. re-lie-vos. See relief (n., sense 6). [Italian rilievo. See BAS-RELIEF.]

re-lig-ion (rĭ-lĭj'ən) n. Abbr. rel., relig. 1. a. Belief in and reverence for a supernatural power or powers regarded as creator and governor of the universe. b. A personal or institutionalized system grounded in such belief and worship. 2. The life or condition of a person in a religious order. 3. A set of beliefs, values, and practices based on the teachings of a spiritual leader. 4. A cause, a principle, or an activity pursued with zeal or conscientious devotion. —idiom. get religion. Informal. To accept a higher power as a controlling influence for the good in one's life. [Middle English religioun, from Old French religion, from Latin religiō, religiōn-, perhaps from religāre, to tie fast. See RELY.] re-lig-ion-ism (rĭ-lĭj'ə-nĭz'əm) n. Excessive or affected religious zeal.

—re-lig-ion-ist n.

re-li-gi-ose (rĭ-lĭj'ē-ōs') adj. Excessively religious, especially in a conspicuous or sentimental manner.

re-lig-i-os-i-ty (rĭ-lĭj'ē-ōs'ĭ-tē) n. 1. The quality of being religious.
2. Excessive or affected piety.

re-lig-i-ous (rĭ-lĭj'əs) adj. Abbr. rel. 1. Having or showing belief in and reverence for God or a deity. 2. Of, concerned with, or teaching religion: a religious text. 3. Extremely scrupulous or conscientious: religious devotion to duty. — n.

pl. religious. A member of a monastic order, especially a nun or monk. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin religiōsus, from religiō, religion. See RELIGION.] —re·lig'ious·ly adv. —re·lig'ious·ness n.

SYNONYMS: religious, devout, pious, sanctimonious. These adjectives mean having or showing a belief in and veneration for God or a divine power, especially as it is reflected in the practice of religion. Religious implies adherence to religion in both belief and practice: The cathedral at Chartres is an expression of the religious fervor of the Middle Ages. “To know that what is impenetrable to us really exists... is at the center of true religiousness. In this sense, and in this sense only, I belong to the ranks of the devoutly religious men” (Albert Einstein). Devout connotes ardent faith and sincere devotion: Devout Muslims observe Ramadan punctiliously. Pious stresses dutiful, reverential discharge of religious duties: Her mother, a pious woman, attends Mass every morning. When the term refers to insincere piety, however, it is derogatory: “It is... well stored with pious frauds, and... much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher than the edification of the hearers” (Edmund Burke). Sanctimonious in its modern usage always implies a hypocritical pretense of sanctity: “Thou conclud’st like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the Ten Commandments, but scrap’d one [Thou shalt not steal] out of the table” (Shakespeare).

re·line (rē-līn′) v. tr. re·lined, re·lin·ing, re·lines. 1. To make new lines on. 2. To put a new lining in.

re·lin·quish (rī-līng′kwīsh) v. tr. re·lin·quished, re·lin·quish·ing, re·lin·quish·es. 1. To retire from; give up or abandon. 2. To put aside or desist from (something practiced, professed, or intended). 3. To let go; surrender. 4. To cease holding physically; release: relinquish a grip. [Middle English relinquisschen, from Old French relinquir, relinquiss-, from Latin relinquere : re-, re- + linquere, to leave; see leik^w- in Appendix.] —re·lin′quish·er n.
—re·lin′quish·ment n.

SYNONYMS: relinquish, yield, resign, abandon, surrender, cede, waive, renounce. These verbs have in common the sense of letting something go or giving something up. Relinquish, the least specific, sometimes connotes unwillingness or regret: can’t bear to relinquish the idea. Yield implies giving way, as to pressure or superior authority, often in the hope that such action will be temporary: gradually had to yield ground. Resign suggests unresisting submission or acquiescence, as that arising from hopelessness: was forced by the scandal to resign the office to which he had been elected. Abandon and surrender agree in implying no expectation of returning to or recovering what is given up, but the terms differ in that surrender implies the operation of compulsion, demand, or force: abandoned all hope; refusing to surrender control. Cede connotes formal transfer, as of rights or territory: a province ceded by treaty. Waive implies a voluntary decision to dispense with something, such as a claim or right: waived all privileges. To renounce is to relinquish something formally and usually as a matter of principle: renounced his claim to the estate.

rel·i·quar·y (rĕl'ĭ-kwĕr'ĕ) n. pl. rel-i-quar-ies. A receptacle, such as a coffer or shrine, for keeping or displaying sacred relics. [French reliquaire, from Old French relique, relic, from Late Latin reliquiae, sacred relics. See RELIC.]

rel·ique (rĕl'ĭk) n. Archaic. Variant of relic.

re·liq·ui·ae (rĭ-lĭk'wĕ-ĕ') pl.n. Remains, as of fossil organisms. [Latin, remains. See RELIC.]

rel·ish (rĕl'ĭsh) n. 1. An appetite for something; a strong appreciation or liking: a relish for luxury. 2. a. Hearty enjoyment; zest. See Synonyms at zest.

b. Something that lends pleasure or zest. 3. a. A spicy or savory condiment or appetizer, such as chutney or olives. b. A condiment of chopped sweet pickle.

4. The flavor of a food, especially when appetizing. See Synonyms at taste. 5. A trace or suggestion of a pleasurable quality. — v. rel-ished, rel-ish-ing, rel-ish-es. — v. tr. 1. To take keen or zestful pleasure in. See Synonyms at like¹. 2. To enjoy the flavor of. 3. To give spice or flavor to. — v. intr. To have a pleasing or distinctive taste. [Alteration of Middle English reles, taste, from Old French, something remaining, from relaissier, to leave behind. See RELEASE.]

re·live (rĕ-lĭv') v. re-lived, re-liv-ing, re-lives. — v. tr. To undergo or experience again, especially in the imagination. — v. intr. To live again.

re·lo·cate (rĕ-lō'kāt) v. re-lo-cat-ed, re-lo-cat-ing, re-lo-cates. — v. tr. intr. To move or be moved to a new place: relocated the business; plan to relocate in the suburbs. — re'lo-ca'tion n.

re·lu·cent (rĭ-lōō'sənt) adj. Reflecting light; shining. [Latin relūcēns, relūcent-present participle of relūcēre, to shine back : re-, re- + lūcēre, to shine; see leuk-in Appendix.]

re·luct (rĭ-lŭkt') v. intr. re-luct-ed, re-luct-ing, re-lucts. To show reluctance or repugnance. [Latin reluctāri : re-, re- + luctāri, to struggle.]

re·luc·tance (rĭ-lŭk'təns) also re·luc·tan·cy (-tən-sē) n. 1. The state of being reluctant; unwillingness. 2. Physics. A measure of the opposition to magnetic flux, analogous to electric resistance.

re·luc·tant (rĭ-lŭk'tənt) adj. 1. Unwilling; disinclined: reluctant to help.

2. Exhibiting or marked by unwillingness: a reluctant smile. 3. Offering resistance; opposing. [Latin reluctāns, reluctant-present participle of reluctāri, to reluct. See RELUCT.] — re-luc'tant-ly adv.

rel·uc·tiv·i·ty (rĕl'ək-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. Physics. A measure of the resistance of a material to the establishment of a magnetic field within it, equal to the ratio of the intensity of the magnetic field to the magnetic induction of the material.

[RELUCT(ANCE) + (CONDUCT)IVITY.]

re·lume (rī-lōōm') v. tr. re·lumed, re·lum·ing, re·lumes. To make bright or clear again; illuminate again. [RE- + (IL)LUME.]

re·ly (rī-lī') v. intr. re·lied, re·ly·ing, re·lies. 1. To be dependent for support, help, or supply: relies on her parents for tuition. 2. To place or have faith or confidence: relied on them to tell him the truth. [Middle English relien, to rally, from Old French relier, from Latin religāre, to bind fast : re-, re- + ligāre, to bind; see leig- in Appendix.] —re·li'er n.

SYNONYMS: rely, trust, depend, reckon. These verbs share the meaning “to place or have faith or confidence in someone or something.” Rely implies complete confidence: “You are the only woman I can rely on to be interested in her” (John Galsworthy). Trust stresses confidence arising from belief that is often based on inconclusive evidence: “We must try to trust one another. Stay and cooperate” (Jomo Kenyatta). “I don’t think I could trust myself to speak to him about it” (Booth Tarkington). Prepare yourself thoroughly for the performance; then trust in your talent to carry you through. Depend implies confidence in the help or support of another: Synthetic fuels should be developed; it is foolhardy to depend on Middle Eastern countries for our oil supplies. Reckon implies a sense of confident expectancy: “He reckons on finding a woman as big a fool as himself” (George Meredith).

rem (rēm) n. Physics. 1. The amount of ionizing radiation required to produce the same biological effect as one rad of high-penetration x-rays. 2. A unit for measuring absorbed doses of radiation, equivalent to one roentgen of x-rays or gamma rays. [r(oentgen) e(quivalent in) m(an).]

REM (rēm) n. The rapid, periodic, jerky movement of the eyes during certain stages of the sleep cycle when dreaming takes place. [R(APID) E(YE) M(OVEMENT).]

rem. abbr. Remittance.

re·made (rē-mād') v. Past tense and past participle of remake.

re·main (rī-mān') v. intr. re·main·ed, re·main·ing, re·main·s. 1. To continue in the same state or condition: These matters remain in doubt. 2. To continue to be in the same place; stay or stay behind: We are remaining at home. 3. To be left after the removal, loss, passage, or destruction of others: Only a few trees remain. See Synonyms at stay¹. 4. To be left as still to be dealt with: A cure remains to be found. 5. To endure or persist. [Middle English remainen, from Old French remainer, remaindre, from Latin remanēre : re-, re- + manēre, to remain; see men³ in Appendix.]

re·main·der (rī-mān'dər) n. 1. Something left over after other parts have been taken away. 2. Mathematics. a. The number left over when one integer is divided by another. The remainder plus the product of the quotient times the divisor equals the dividend. b. The number obtained when one number is subtracted from another; the difference. 3. Law. An estate in land that is conveyed only after the termination of a preceding estate created at the same time. 4. A book that remains with a publisher after sales have fallen off, usually sold at a reduced price. — v. tr. re-main-dered, re-main-der-ing, re-main-ders. To dispose of as a remainder. [Middle English, second party's right of ownership, from Anglo-Norman, from remeindre, to remain, variant of Old French remaindre, remainder. See REMAIN.]

SYNONYMS: remainder, rest, balance, residue, residuum, remnant, leavings, remains. These nouns are compared as they denote what is left after a part has been used or subtracted. Remainder and rest, used interchangeably, are the least specific: ate some of the candy and gave the remainder (or rest) away; will spend the remainder (or rest) of the day relaxing. Balance, which often specifically refers to an amount of money left in a bank account after withdrawals and to an unpaid amount due on a charge account, in its general sense is synonymous with remainder and rest: A few discriminating listeners heard the flaws in the performance; the balance of the audience cheered. Residue and residuum refer especially to what is left after something has undergone dissolution, depletion, or diminution: “The residue of the conquered people fled” (Daniel Defoe). “After elimination of all verbiage, this fact was the only residuum” (John Lothrop Motley). Remnant denotes a small piece or quantity remaining after the major part has been used: “The sum exceeded the remnant of his savings” (Samuel Butler). “I saw his brindled cow feeding on fish remnants” (Herman Melville). Leavings are the culls remaining after what is valuable has been taken away: The untouched leavings from the banquet made a fine meal for the kitchen staff. Although remains often specifically refers to a corpse, it also applies to remnants, fragments, and relics, as of times past: fossil remains; remains of an ancient Greek temple; dispose of the remains of dinner.

re-mains (rĭ-mānz') pl.n. 1. All that is left after other parts have been taken away, used up, or destroyed. See Synonyms at remainder. 2. A corpse. 3. The unpublished writings of a deceased author. 4. Ancient ruins or fossils.

re-make (rē-māk') v. tr. re-made (-mād'), re-mak-ing, re-makes. To make again or anew. — n. (rē'māk') 1. The act of remaking. 2. Something in remade form, especially a new version of an old movie.

re-man (rē-măn') v. tr. re-manned, re-man-ning, re-mans. 1. To supply with new personnel: reman a ship. 2. To imbue with new manliness or courage.

re-mand (rĭ-mänd') v. tr. re-mand-ed, re-mand-ing, re-mands. 1. To send or order back. 2. Law. a. To send back to custody. b. To send back (a case) to a lower court with instructions about further proceedings. [Middle English remaunden, from Old French remander, from Late Latin remandāre, to send back word : Latin re-, re- + Latin mandāre, to order; see man-² in Appendix.]

—re-mand' n. —re-mand'ment n.

rem-a-nence (rēm'ə-nəns) n. Physics. The magnetic induction that remains in a material after removal of the magnetizing force. [From Middle English remanent, remaining, from Latin remanēns, remanent- present participle of remanēre, to remain. See REMAIN.] —rem'a-nent adj.

re-mark (rī-märk') v. re-marked, re-mark-ing, re-marks. — v. tr. 1. To express briefly and casually as a comment. 2. To take notice of; observe. See Synonyms at see¹. — v. intr. To make a comment or an observation: remarked on her good taste. — n. 1. The act of noticing or observing: a place worthy of remark. 2. A casual or brief expression of opinion; a comment. See Synonyms at comment. [Alteration (influenced by MARK¹), of French remarquer : Old French re-, re- + Old French marquer, to mark (ultimately from merc, sign, from Old Norse merki, mark); see merg- in Appendix.] —re-mark'er n.

re-mark-a-ble (rī-mär'kə-bəl) adj. 1. Worthy of notice. 2. Attracting notice as being unusual or extraordinary. See Synonyms at noticeable.

—re-mark'a-ble-ness n. —re-mark'a-bly adv.

re-marque (rī-märk') n. 1. A small mark or sketch engraved in the margin of a plate to indicate its stage of development prior to completion. 2. A print or proof from a plate carrying such a mark. [French, from remarquer, to remark. See REMARK.]

Re-marque (rə-märk'), Erich Maria. 1898-1970. German-born American writer best known for All Quiet on the Western Front (1929), a novel based on his experiences in World War I.

re-match (rē-mäch', rē'mäch') n. A second contest between the same opponents.

Rem-brandt van Rijn or Rem-brandt van Ryn (rēm'bränt' vān rīn', -bränt'), 1606-1669. Dutch painter whose works are unmatched in their portrayal of subtle human emotions. His masterpieces include historical and religious scenes, group portraits, such as The Anatomy Lesson of Dr. Tulp (1632) and The Night Watch (1642), as well as a series of self-portraits.

re-me-di-a-ble (rī-mē'dē-ə-bəl) adj. Possible to remedy: remediable problems; a remediable setback. —re-me'di-a-ble-ness n. —re-me'di-a-bly adv.

re-me-di-al (rī-mē'dē-əl) adj. 1. Supplying a remedy. 2. Intended to correct or improve deficient skills in a specific subject: remedial reading. —re-me'di-al-ly adv.

re-me-di-a-tion (rī-mē'dē-ā'shən) n. The act or process of correcting a fault or deficiency: remediation of a learning disability. —re-me'di-ate' v.

rem-e-dy (rēm'ī-dē) n. pl. rem-e-dies. 1. Something, such as medicine or therapy, that relieves pain, cures disease, or corrects a disorder. 2. Something that corrects an evil, a fault, or an error. 3. Law. A legal order of preventing or redressing a wrong or enforcing a right. 4. The allowance by a mint for deviation from the standard weight or quality of coins. — v. tr. rem·e·died, rem·e·dy·ing, rem·e·dies. 1. To relieve or cure (a disease or disorder). 2. To set right; remove, rectify, or counteract. See Synonyms at correct. 3. See Synonyms at cure. [Middle English remedie, from Old French, from Latin remedium : re-, re- + medēri, to heal; see med- in Appendix.]

re·mem·ber (rĭ-mĕm' bər) v. re·mem·bered, re·mem·ber·ing, re·mem·bers. — v. tr. 1. To recall to the mind; think of again. 2. To recall to the mind with effort: finally remembered the address. 3. To retain in the memory: Remember your appointment. 4. To keep (someone) in mind as worthy of consideration or recognition. 5. To reward with a gift or tip. 6. To give greetings from: Remember me to your family. 7. Engineering. To return to (an original shape or form) after being deformed or altered. 8. Electronics. To carry out (a programmed or preset activity). 9. Archaic. To remind. — v. intr. To have or use the power of memory. [Middle English remembren, from Old French remembrer, from Latin rememorārī, to remember again : re-, re- + memor, mindful; see (s)mer⁻¹ in Appendix.] — re·mem'ber·a·bil'i·ty n. — re·mem'ber·a·ble adj. — re·mem'ber·er n.

SYNONYMS: remember, bethink, recall, recollect. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to bring an image or a thought back to the mind”: can't remember his name; bethought herself of her responsibilities; recalling her kindness; recollect how the accident happened.

ANTONYM: forget

re·mem·brance (rĭ-mĕm' brəns) n. 1. a. The act or process of remembering. See Synonyms at memory. b. The state of being remembered: holds him in fond remembrance. 2. Something serving to celebrate or honor the memory of a person or an event; a memorial. 3. The length of time over which one's memory extends. 4. Something remembered; a reminiscence. 5. A souvenir. 6. A greeting or token expressive of affection. [Middle English, from Old French, from remembrer, to remember. See REMEMBER.]

Re·mem·brance Day (rĭ-mĕm' brəns dā) n. The Sunday closest to November 11, observed in Canada and Great Britain in commemoration of those killed in the World Wars.

re·mem·branc·er (rĭ-mĕm' brən-sər) n. 1. One that causes another to remember something. 2. Remembrancer. a. An officer of the British judiciary responsible for collecting debts owed to the Crown. b. An official who represents the City of London, as on ceremonial occasions.

re·mex (rē'mĕks') n. pl. rem·i·ges (rĕm'ə-jĕz'). A quill or flight feather of a bird's wing. [Latin rēmex, rower : rēmus, oar; see erə- in Appendix + agere, ēg-, to drive; see ACT.] —re·mig'i·al (rĭ-mĭj'ē-əl) adj.

re·mil·i·ta·rize (rē-mĭl'ĭ-tə-rĭz') v. tr. re·mil·i·ta·rized, re·mil·i·ta·riz·ing, re·mil·i·ta·riz·es. To equip again for war. —re·mil'i·ta·ri·za'tion (-tər-ĭ-zā'shən) n.

re·mind (rĭ-mĭnd') v. tr. re·mind·ed, re·mind·ing, re·minds. To cause to remember; put in mind: must remind him to call; reminded her of college days. —re·mind'er n.

Rem·ing·ton (rĕm'ĭng-tən), Eliphalet. 1793-1861. American firearms manufacturer whose company was a major munitions supplier to the U.S. government and under his son Philo (1816-1889) an important manufacturer of sewing machines and typewriters.

Rem·ing·ton (rĕm'ĭng-tən), Frederic. 1861-1909. American artist and journalist best known for his sculptures and paintings of the American West.

rem·i·nisce (rĕm'ə-nĭs') v. intr. rem·i·nisc·ed, rem·i·nisc·ing, rem·i·nisc·es. To recollect and tell of past experiences or events. [Back-formation from REMINISCENCE.] —rem'i·nis'cer n.

rem·i·nis·cence (rĕm'ə-nĭs'əns) n. 1. The act or process of recollecting past experiences or events. 2. An experience or event recollected. See Synonyms at memory. 3. Often reminiscences. A narration of past experiences. 4. An event that brings to mind a similar, former event.

rem·i·nis·cent (rĕm'ə-nĭs'ənt) adj. 1. Having the quality of or containing reminiscence. 2. Inclined to engage in reminiscence. 3. Tending to recall or suggest something in the past: an evening reminiscent of happier times. [Latin reminiscēns, reminiscēt- present participle of reminiscī, to recollect. See men-¹ in Appendix.] —rem'i·nis'cent·ly adv.

re·mint (rē-mĭnt') v. tr. re·mint·ed, re·mint·ing, re·mints. To make into new coin by melting down and reprocessing.

re·mise (rĭ-mĭz') v. tr. re·mis·ed, re·mis·ing, re·mis·es. Law. To relinquish a claim to; surrender by deed. [Middle English remisen, from Old French remis, past participle of remettre, to remit, from Latin remittere. See REMIT.] re·miss (rĭ-mĭs') adj. 1. Lax in attending to duty; negligent. 2. Exhibiting carelessness or slackness. See Synonyms at negligent. [Middle English, from Latin remissus, past participle of remittere, to remit, slacken. See REMIT.] —re·miss'ly adv. —re·miss'ness n.

re·mis·si·ble (rĭ-mĭs'ə-bəl) adj. Being such that forgiveness is possible: a remissible sin. —re·mis'si·bil'i·ty n. —re·mis'si·bly adv.

re·mis·sion (rĭ-mĭsh'ən) n. 1. a. The act of remitting. b. A condition or period in which something is remitted. 2. A lessening of intensity or degree; abatement. 3. a. Medicine. Abatement or subsiding of the symptoms of a disease.

b. The period during which the symptoms of a disease abate or subside.

4. a. Release, as from a debt, a penalty, or an obligation. b. Forgiveness; pardon. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin remissō, remissōn-, from remissus, past participle of remittere, to let go. See REMIT.]

re-mit (rĭ-mĭt') v. re-mit-ted, re-mit-ting, re-mits. — v. tr. 1. To transmit (money) in payment. 2. a. To refrain from exacting (a tax or penalty, for example); cancel. b. To pardon; forgive: remitted their sins. 3. To restore to a former condition or position. 4. Law. a. To refer (a case) to another court for further consideration or action. b. To refer (a matter) to a committee or an authority for decision. 5. To allow to slacken: The storm remitted its fury. 6. To desist from; give up. 7. To put off; postpone. — v. intr. 1. To transmit money. 2. To diminish; abate. — n. (rĭ-mĭt', rē'mĭt) 1. The act of remitting, especially the referral of a case to another court. 2. A matter remitted for further consideration. [Middle English remitten, to send back, from Latin remittere: re-, re- + mittere, to send.] — re-mit/ment n. — re-mit/ta-ble adj. — re-mit/ter n.

re-mit-tal (rĭ-mĭt'l) n. Remission.

re-mit-tance (rĭ-mĭt'ns) n. Abbr. rem. 1. The sending of money to someone at a distance. 2. The sum of money sent.

re-mit-tent (rĭ-mĭt'nt) adj. Characterized by temporary abatement in severity. Used especially of diseases. — re-mit/tence, re-mit/ten-cy n.

— re-mit/tent-ly adv.

rem-nant (rĕm'nənt) n. 1. Something left over; a remainder. 2. A leftover piece of fabric remaining after the rest has been used or sold. 3. A surviving trace or vestige: a remnant of his past glory. See Synonyms at remainder. 4. Often remnants. A small surviving group of people. [Middle English remanant, remnant, from Old French remanant, from present participle of remaindre, to remain. See REMAIN.]

re-mod-el (rĕ-mōd'l) v. tr. re-mod-eled also re-mod-elled, re-mod-el-ing also re-mod-el-ling, re-mod-els also re-mod-els. To make over in structure or style; reconstruct. — re-mod/el-er n.

re-mon-e-tize (rĕ-mōn'ĭ-tīz', -mŭn'-) v. tr. re-mon-e-tized, re-mon-e-tiz-ing, re-mon-e-tiz-es. To restore to use as legal tender: remonetize silver. — re-mon'e-ti-za'tion (-tĭ-zā'shən) n.

re-mon-strance (rĭ-mōn'strəns) n. 1. The act of remonstrating. 2. An expression of protest, complaint, or reproof, especially a formal statement of grievances.

re-mon-strant (rĭ-mōn'strənt) adj. Characterized by remonstrance; expostulatory. — n. 1. One that remonstrates. 2. Remonstrant. One of the Dutch Arminians who, in 1610, formally stated the grounds of their dissent from strict Calvinism. — re-mon/strant-ly adv.

re·mon·strate (rĭ-mŏn/'strāt') v. re·mon·strat·ed, re·mon·strat·ing, re·mon·strates. — v. tr. To say or plead in protest, objection, or reproof. — v. intr. To reason or plead in protest; present an objection. See Synonyms at object. [Medieval Latin remōnstrāre, remōnstrāt-, to demonstrate : Latin re-, re- + Latin mōnstrāre, to show (from mōnstrum, portent); see MONSTER.] —re'·mon·stra'tion (rĕ'mŏn-strā/'shən, rĕm'ən-) n. —re·mon'stra·tive (rĭ-mŏn/'strə-tĭv) adj. —re·mon'stra·tive·ly adv. —re·mon'stra'tor n.

rem·o·ra (rĕm'ər-ə) n. Any of several marine fishes of the family Echeneidae, having on the head a sucking disk with which they attach themselves to sharks, whales, sea turtles, or the hulls of ships. Also called shark sucker, suckerfish, suckfish. [Latin, delay (from the belief that they could slow ships down), from remorārī, to delay : re-, re- + morārī, to delay (from mora, delay).]

re·morse (rĭ-mŏrs') n. 1. Moral anguish arising from repentance for past misdeeds; bitter regret. See Synonyms at penitence. 2. Obsolete. Compassion. [Middle English remors, from Old French, from Medieval Latin remorsum, from neuter past participle of Latin remordēre, to torment : re-, re- + mordēre, to bite; see mer- in Appendix.]

re·morse·ful (rĭ-mŏrs/'fəl) adj. Marked by or filled with remorse. —re·morse·ful·ly adv. —re·morse'ful·ness n.

re·morse·less (rĭ-mŏrs/'lĭs) adj. 1. Having no pity or compassion; merciless. 2. Unyielding; relentless. —re·morse/less·ly adv. —re·morse/less·ness n.

re·mote (rĭ-mŏt') adj. re·mot·er, re·mot·est. 1. a. Located far away; distant in space. b. Hidden away; secluded: a remote hamlet. 2. Distant in time: the remote past. See Synonyms at distant. 3. Faint; slight: a remote possibility; had not the remotest interest. 4. Far removed in connection or relevance: a cause remote from everyday concerns. 5. Distantly related by blood or marriage: a remote cousin. 6. Distant in manner; aloof. 7. Operating or controlled from a distance: remote sensors. 8. Computer Science. Of, relating to, or being a computer device or system situated at some distance from a central computer and communicating with it often by means of cables. — n. 1. A radio or television broadcast originating from a point outside a studio. 2. Remote control. [Middle English, from Old French remot, from Latin remŏtus, past participle of removĕre, to remove. See REMOVE.] —re·mote'ly adv. —re·mote'ness n.

remote control (rĭ-mŏt'kən-trŏl') n. 1. The control of an activity, a process, or a machine from a distance, as by radioed instructions or coded signals. 2. A device used to control an apparatus or a machine from a distance. —re·mote'·con·trol' (rĭ-mŏt'kən-trŏl'), re·mote'·con·trolled' (-trŏld') adj.

re·mo·tion (rĭ-mŏ/'shən) n. 1. The act of removing; removal. 2. The state of being remote. 3. Obsolete. Departure. [Middle English remocion, from Latin remŏtiō, remŏtiōn-, from remŏtus, past participle of removĕre, to remove. See REMOVE.]

ré·mou·lade (rā'mōō-lād') n. A piquant cold sauce made with mayonnaise, chopped pickles, capers, anchovies, and herbs. [French, from dialectal rémola, large black radish, from Latin armoracia, wild radish.]

re·mount (rē-mount') v. tr. re·mount·ed, re·mount·ing, re·mounts. 1. To mount again. 2. To supply with a fresh horse. — n. (rē'mount', rē-mount') A fresh horse.

re·mov·a·ble (rī-mōō'və-bəl) adj. That can be removed: a removable cord; removable plugs. — re·mov'a·bil'i·ty, re·mov'a·ble·ness n. — re·mov'a·bly adv.

re·mov·al (rī-mōō'vəl) n. 1. a. The act of removing. b. The fact of being removed. 2. Relocation, as of a residence or business. 3. Dismissal, as from office.

re·move (rī-mōōv') v. re·moved, re·mov·ing, re·moves. — v. tr. 1. To move from a place or position occupied: removed the dishes from the table. 2. To transfer or convey from one place to another: removed the family to the West Coast. 3. To take off: removed her jewelry. 4. To take away; withdraw: removed his name from consideration. 5. To do away with; eliminate: remove a stain. 6. To dismiss from office. — v. intr. 1. To change one's place of residence or business; move: "In 1751, I removed from the country to the town" (David Hume). 2. To go away; depart. 3. To be removable: paint that removes with water. — n. 1. The act of removing; removal. 2. Distance or degree of separation or remoteness: "to spill, though at a safe remove, the blood of brave men" (Anthony Burgess). [Middle English removen, from Old French remouvoir, from Latin removēre: re-, re- + movēre, to move; see MOVE.] — re·mov'er n.

re·moved (rī-mōōvd') adj. 1. Distant in space, time, or nature; remote. See Synonyms at distant. 2. Separated in relationship by a given degree of descent: A first cousin's child is one's first cousin once removed. — re·mov'ed·ly (-mōō'vid-lē) adv. — re·mov'ed·ness n.

Rem·scheid (rēm'shīt') A city of west-central Germany northeast of Cologne. It is a center of the German tool and hardware industry. Population, 121,830.

Rem·sen (rēm'sən), Ira. 1846-1927. American chemist who discovered the sweetening agent saccharin.

REM sleep (rēm slēp) n. A stage in the normal sleep cycle during which dreams occur and the body undergoes marked changes including rapid eye movement, loss of reflexes, and increased pulse rate and brain activity. Also called paradoxical sleep re·mu·da (rī-mōō'də) n. Southwestern U.S. A herd of horses from which ranch hands select their mounts. [American Spanish, change of horses, remuda, from Spanish, exchange, from remudar, to exchange: re-, in return (from Latin); see RE- + mudar, to change (from Latin mūtāre); see mei-¹ in Appendix.]

re·mu·ner·ate (rĭ-myōō'nə-rāt') v. tr. re·mu·ner·at·ed, re·mu·ner·at·ing, re·mu·ner·ates. 1. To pay (a person) a suitable equivalent in return for goods provided, services rendered, or losses incurred; recompense. 2. To compensate for; make payment for: remunerate his efforts. [Latin remūnerārī, remūnerāt-: re-, re- + mūnerārī, to give (from mūnus, mūner-, gift); see mei¹ in Appendix.] —re·mu·ner·a·bil·i·ty (-nər-ə-bĭl'ĭ-tē) n. —re·mu·ner·a·ble adj. —re·mu·ner·a·tor n.

re·mu·ner·a·tion (rĭ-myōō'nə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act of remunerating. 2. Something, such as a payment, that remunerates.

re·mu·ner·a·tive (rĭ-myōō'nər-ə-tĭv, -nə-rā'tĭv) adj. 1. Yielding suitable recompense; profitable. 2. Serving to remunerate. —re·mu·ner·a·tive·ly adv. —re·mu·ner·a·tive·ness n.

Re·mus (rē'məs) n. Roman Mythology. The twin brother of Romulus. [Latin.]

ren·ais·sance (rĕn'ĭ-sāns', -zāns', rĕn'ĭ-sāns', -zāns', rĭ-nā'səns) n. 1. A rebirth or revival. 2. Renaissance. a. The humanistic revival of classical art, architecture, literature, and learning that originated in Italy in the 14th century and later spread throughout Europe. b. The period of this revival, roughly the 14th through the 16th century, marking the transition from medieval to modern times. 3. Often Renaissance. a. A revival of intellectual or artistic achievement and vigor: the Celtic Renaissance. b. The period of such a revival. — adj. also Renaissance 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the Renaissance or its artistic and intellectual works and styles. 2. Of or being the neoclassic style of architecture and decoration that originated in Italy in the 15th century. [French, from Old French, from renaistre, to be born again, from Vulgar Latin renāscere*, from Latin renāscī: re-, re- + nāscī, to be born; see genə- in Appendix.]

Renaissance man (rĕn'ĭ-sāns' măn) n. A man who has broad intellectual interests and is accomplished in areas of both the arts and the sciences.

Renaissance woman (rĕn'ĭ-sāns' wōōm'ən) n. A woman who has broad intellectual interests and is accomplished in areas of both the arts and the sciences: "In an age of specialists and technocrats, [she] was a Renaissance woman. The incisiveness of her mind in which there was not room for cant, was matched by the generosity of her spirit and by the grace of her style" (Smith Hempstone).

re·nal (rē'nəl) adj. Of, relating to, or in the region of the kidneys. [Late Latin rēnālis, from Latin rēnēs, kidneys.]

renal clearance (rē'nəl klĭr'əns) n. Physiology. The volume of plasma completely cleared of a specific compound per unit time and measured as a test of kidney function.

renal corpuscle (rē'nəl kôr'pə-səl) n. Anatomy. See Malpighian corpuscle (n., sense 1).

renal pelvis (rē'nəl pĕl'vĭs) n. Anatomy. See pelvis (n., sense 2).

Re·nan (rə-nän'), Joseph Ernest. 1823-1892. French philologist, philosopher, and historian who wrote the series History of the Origins of Christianity (1863-1881).

re·nas·cence (rĭ-năs'əns, -nā'səns) n. 1. A new birth or life; a rebirth. 2. A cultural revival; a renaissance. 3. Renascence. Renaissance.

re·nas·cent (rĭ-năs'ənt, -nā'sənt) adj. Coming again into being; showing renewed growth or vigor. [Latin renāscēns, renāscēt- present participle of renāscī, to be born again. See RENAISSANCE.]

Re·nault (rə-nō'), Jean Louis. 1843-1918. French jurist who represented France at The Hague Conference of 1907. He shared the 1907 Nobel Peace Prize.

ren·coun·ter (rĕn-koun'tər) Archaic. n. 1. An unplanned meeting. 2. A hostile encounter or contest. — v. tr. intr. ren·coun·tered, ren·coun·ter·ing, ren·coun·ters. To meet unexpectedly or have an unexpected meeting. [French rencontre, from Old French, from rencontrer, to meet : re-, re- + encontrer, to meet; see ENCOUNTER.]

rend (rĕnd) v. rent (rĕnt) or rend·ed, rend·ing, rends. — v. tr. 1. To tear or split apart or into pieces violently. See Synonyms at tear¹. 2. To tear (one's garments or hair) in anguish or rage. 3. To tear away forcibly; wrest. 4. To pull, split, or divide as if by tearing: "Chip was rent between the impulse to laugh wildly and a bitterness that threatened hot tears" (Louis Auchincloss). 5. To pierce or disturb with sound: a scream rent the silence. 6. To cause pain or distress to: tales that rend the heart. — v. intr. To become torn or split; come apart. [Middle English renden, from Old English rendan.]

ren·der (rĕn'dər) v. tr. ren·dered, ren·der·ing, ren·ders. 1. To submit or present, as for consideration, approval, or payment: render a bill. 2. To give or make available; provide: render assistance. 3. To give what is due or owed: render thanks; rendered homage. 4. To give in return or retribution: He had to render an apology for his rudeness. 5. To surrender or relinquish; yield. 6. a. To represent in verbal form; depict: "Joyce has attempted... to render... what our participation in life is like" (Edmund Wilson). b. To represent in a drawing or painting, especially in perspective. 7. To perform an interpretation of (a musical piece, for example). 8. To express in another language or form; translate. 9. To deliver or pronounce formally: The jury has rendered its verdict. 10. To cause to become; make: The news rendered her speechless. 11. To reduce, convert, or melt down (fat) by heating. 12. To coat (brick, for example) with plaster or cement. — n. A payment in kind, services, or cash from a tenant to a feudal lord. [Middle English rendren, from Old French rendre, to give back, from Vulgar Latin rendere*, alteration of Latin reddere (influenced by prēndere, to grasp) : red-, re-, re- + dare, to give; see dō- in Appendix.] — ren'der·a·ble adj. — ren'der·er n.

ren·der·ing (rĕn'dər-ĭng) n. 1. A depiction or an interpretation, as in painting or music. 2. A drawing in perspective of a proposed structure. 3. A translation:

a rendering of Cicero's treatises into English. 4. A coat of plaster or cement applied to a masonry surface.

ren-dez-vous (răn'dā-vōō', -də-) n. pl. ren-dez-vous (-vōōz'). 1. A meeting at a prearranged time and place. See Synonyms at engagement. 2. A prearranged meeting place, especially an assembly point for troops or ships. 3. A popular gathering place: The café is a favorite rendezvous for artists. 4. Aerospace. The process of bringing two spacecraft together. — v. tr. intr. ren-dez-voused (-vōōd'), ren-dez-vous-ing (-vōō'ing), ren-dez-vous (-vōōz'). To cause to assemble or to assemble at a prearranged time and place. [French, from the phrase rendez vous, present yourselves, from Old French : rendez, second person pl. imperative of rendre, to present; see RENDER + vous, yourselves, you (from Latin vōs, you); see wōs in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: A word that refers to the process of bringing two spacecraft together and to a meeting between lovers might be thought to have a source having to do with connection. The history of rendezvous, however, had originally to do with the process of getting to a meeting place. The French word rendezvous, which English borrowed, is made up of the second person plural imperative of the verb rendre, meaning in this case “to present or betake,” and vous, the second person plural reflexive pronoun meaning “yourselves.” The word rendezvous in French denoted the place at which you were supposed to present yourselves or the meeting you were to attend. The first recorded use of the word in English (1591) is for a place where troops are to assemble.

ren-di-tion (rĕn-dīsh'ən) n. 1. The act of rendering. 2. An interpretation of a musical score or a dramatic piece. 3. A performance of a musical or dramatic work. 4. A translation, often interpretive. 5. A surrender. [Obsolete French, from Old French rendre, to give back. See RENDER.]

ren-dzi-na (rĕn-jĕ'nə) n. A dark soil that develops under grass on limestone and chalk. [Polish ŗędzina.]

ren-e-gade (rĕn'ĭ-gād') n. 1. One who rejects a religion, a cause, an allegiance, or a group for another; a deserter. 2. An outlaw; a rebel. — adj. Of, relating to, or resembling a renegade; traitorous. — v. intr. ren-e-gad-ed, ren-e-gad-ing, ren-e-gades. To become a deserter or an outlaw. [Spanish renegado, from Medieval Latin renegātus, past participle of renegāre, to deny : Latin re-, re- + Latin negāre, to deny; see ne in Appendix.]

re-nege (rĭ-nĕg', -nĕg', -nĕg') v. re-neged, re-neg-ing, re-neges. — v. intr. 1. To fail to carry out a promise or commitment: reneged on the contract at the last minute. 2. Games. To fail to follow suit in cards when able and required by the rules to do so. — v. tr. To renounce; disown. — n. The act of reneging. [Medieval Latin renegāre, to deny. See RENEGADE.] — re-neg'er n.

re·ne·go·ti·ate (rē'nī-gō'shē-āt') v. tr. re·ne·go·ti·at·ed, re·ne·go·ti·at·ing, re·ne·go·ti·ates. 1. To negotiate anew. 2. To revise the terms of (a contract) so as to limit or regain excess profits gained by the contractor. —re'ne-go'ti-a-ble (-shē-ə-bəl, -shə-bəl) adj. —re'ne-go-ti-a'tion n.

re·new (rī-nōō', -nyōō') v. re·newed, re·new·ing, re·news. — v. tr. 1. To make new or as if new again; restore: renewed the antique chair. 2. To take up again; resume: renew an old friendship; renewed the argument. 3. To repeat so as to reaffirm: renew a promise. 4. To regain or restore the physical or mental vigor of; revive: I renewed my spirits in the country air. 5. a. To arrange for the extension of: renew a contract; renew a magazine subscription. b. To arrange to extend the loan of: renewed the library books before they were overdue. 6. To replenish: renewed the water in the humidifier. 7. To bring into being again; reestablish. — v. intr. 1. To become new again. 2. To start over. [Middle English renewen : re-, re- + newen, to renew (from new, new); see NEW.] —re·new'er n.

re·new·a·ble (rī-nōō'ə-bəl, -nyōō'-) adj. 1. That can be renewed: a renewable membership; renewable subscriptions. 2. Designating a commodity or resource, such as solar energy or firewood, that is inexhaustible or replaceable by new growth. —re·new'a·bil'i·ty (-bīl'ī-tē) n. —re·new'a·bly adv.

re·new·al (rī-nōō'əl, -nyōō'-) n. 1. The act of renewing or the state of having been renewed. 2. Something renewed.

re·new·ed·ly (rī-nōō'id-lē, -nyōō'-) adv. Over again; anew.

Re·ni (rā'nē), Guido. 1575-1642. Italian painter whose lyrical, idealistic works include the Crucifixion of Saint Peter (1603) and the Aurora fresco (1613-1614).

ren·i·form (rĕn'ə-fōrm', rĕ'nə-) adj. Shaped like a kidney: a reniform leaf. [Latin rĕnēs, kidneys + -FORM.]

ren·in (rĕn'in) n. A protein-digesting enzyme that is released by the kidney and acts to raise blood pressure by activating angiotensin. [Latin rĕnēs, kidneys + -IN.]

ren·i·tent (rĕn'ī-tənt, rī-nīt'nt) adj. 1. Resistant to physical pressure; not pliant. 2. Reluctant to yield or be swayed; recalcitrant. [Latin renītēns, renītent- present participle of renītī, to resist : re-, re- + nītī, to press forward.]

—ren'i·tence, ren'i·ten·cy n.

Ren·ner (rĕn'ər), Karl. 1870-1950. Austrian politician who was chancellor of the Austrian Republic (1918-1920) and president of Austria from 1945 until his death.

Rennes (rĕn) A city of northwest France north of Nantes. It was an important Gallo-Roman town and became capital of Brittany in 1196. Population, 117,234.

ren·net (rĕn'it) n. 1. The inner lining of the fourth stomach of calves and other young ruminants. 2. A dried extract made from the stomach lining of a ruminant, used in cheesemaking to curdle milk. 3. See rennin. [Middle English, probably from Old English rynet*. See rei- in Appendix.]

ren·nin (rĕn'ĭn) n. A milk-coagulating enzyme found in the gastric juice of the fourth stomach of young ruminants, used in making cheeses and junkets. Also called chymosin, rennet. [RENN(ET) + -IN.]

ren·nin·o·gen (rĕ-nĭn'ə-jĕn) n. The zymogenic precursor of rennin.

Re·no (rĕ'nō') A city of western Nevada near the California border. Developed after the coming of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1868, it is a famous resort that was once noted primarily as a divorce center. Population, 133,850.

re·no·gram (rĕ'nə-grām') n. 1. A graphic record of the passage of radiation through the renal system after injection of a radioactive tracer. 2. A radiograph of a kidney. [Latin rĕnĕs, kidneys + -GRAM.] — re'nog'ra·phy (rĕ-nŏg'rə-fĕ) n.

Ren·oir (rĕn'wār', rĕn-wār'), Jean. 1894-1979. French filmmaker who won acclaim for the artistry of films such as La Grande Illusion (1937) and Rules of the Game (1939).

Ren·oir (rĕn'wār', rĕn-wār'), Pierre Auguste. 1841-1919. French impressionist painter whose warm, luminous works include Child with Watering Can (1876) and Luncheon of the Boating Party (1881).

re·nom·i·nate (rĕ-nŏm'ə-nāt') v. tr. re·nom·i·nat·ed, re·nom·i·nat·ing, re·nom·i·nates. To nominate again, especially for a subsequent term. — re'nom·i·na'tion n.

re·nor·mal·ize (rĕ-nŏr'mə-lĭz') v. tr. re·nor·mal·ized, re·nor·mal·iz·ing, re·nor·mal·iz·es. To bring into a normal or more normal state once again. — re·nor'mal·i·za'tion (-mə-lĭ-zā'shən) n.

re·nounce (rĭ-nouns') v. re·nounced, re·nounc·ing, re·nounc·es. — v. tr. 1. To give up (a title, for example), especially by formal announcement. See Synonyms at relinquish. 2. To reject; disown. — v. intr. Games. To revoke in cards. — n. Games. A revoke in cards. [Middle English renouncen, from Old French renoncer, from Latin renūntiāre, to report : re-, re- + nūntiāre, to announce (from nūntius, messenger); see neu- in Appendix.] — re·nounce'ment n. — re·nounc'er n.

ren·o·vate (rĕn'ə-vāt') v. tr. ren·o·vat·ed, ren·o·vat·ing, ren·o·vates. 1. To restore to an earlier condition, as by repairing or remodeling. 2. To impart new vigor to; revive. [Latin renovāre, renovāt- : re-, re- + novāre, to make new (from novus, new); see newo- in Appendix.] — ren'o·va'tion n. — ren'o·va'tor n.

re·nown (rĭ-noun') n. 1. The quality of being widely honored and acclaimed; fame. 2. Obsolete. Report; rumor. [Middle English renoun, from Anglo-Norman, from renomer, to make famous : re-, repeatedly (from Latin); see RE- + nomer, to name (from Latin nōmināre, from nōmen, nōmin-, name); see nŏmen- in Appendix.]

re·nowned (rĭ-nound') adj. Having renown; famous. See Synonyms at noted.

rent¹ (rěnt) n. 1. a. Payment, usually of an amount fixed by contract, made by a tenant at specified intervals in return for the right to occupy or use the property of another. b. A similar payment made for the use of a facility, equipment, or service provided by another. 2. The return derived from cultivated or improved land after deduction of all production costs. 3. The revenue yielded by a piece of land in excess of that yielded by the poorest or least favorably located land under equal market conditions. In this sense, also called economic rent — v. rent-ed, rent-ing, rents. — v. tr. 1. To obtain occupancy or use of (another's property) in return for regular payments. 2. To grant temporary occupancy or use of (one's own property or a service) in return for regular payments: rents out TV sets. — v. intr. To be for rent: The cottage rents for $200 a month. — idiom. for rent. Available for use or service in return for payment. [Middle English rente, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin rendita*, from feminine past participle of ·rendere, to yield, return. See RENDER.] — rent'a-bil'i-ty n. — rent'a-ble adj.

rent² (rěnt) v. A past tense and a past participle of rend. — n. 1. An opening made by rending; a rip. 2. A breach of relations between persons or groups; a rift.

rent-a-car (rěnt'ə-kär') n. 1. A rented car. 2. An agency that offers cars and vans for rent.

rent-al (rěnt'əl) n. 1. An amount paid out or taken in as rent. 2. Property available for renting: summer rentals by the beach. 3. The act of renting. 4. An agency that rents something. 5. A list of tenants and schedule of rents. In this sense, also called rent-roll — adj. Of, relating to, or available for rent: rental income; rental properties.

rent control (rěnt kən-trōl') n. Governmental control and regulation of the amounts charged for rented housing.

rent-er (rěnt'tər) n. 1. One that receives payment in exchange for the use of one's property by another. 2. One that pays rent for the use of another's property; a tenant.

rent-free (rěnt'frē') adj. Not being subject to rent. — adv. Not having to pay or not paying rent.

Ren-ton (rěnt'tən) A city of west-central Washington, a suburb of Seattle. It has an extensive aircraft industry. Population, 41,688.

rent-roll (rěnt'rōl') n. See rental (n., sense 5).

rent strike (rěnt strīk) n. An agreement among tenants to refuse to pay rent, often in protest of poor services.

re-num-ber (rē-nūm'bər) v. tr. re-num-bered, re-num-ber-ing, re-num-bers. To number again or in a different order.

re-nun-ci-a-tion (rī-nūn'sē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of renouncing: the renunciation of all earthly pleasures. 2. A declaration in which something is renounced. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman renunciacion, from Latin renūntiātīō, renūntiātīōn-, from renūntiātus, past participle of renūntiāre, to renounce. See RENOUNCE.] —re-nun'ci-a'tive, re-nun'ci-a-to'ry (-ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

Ren-wick (rĕn'wĭk), James. 1818-1895. American architect who designed the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. (1848), and Saint Patrick's Cathedral in New York City (1853).

re-o-pen (rĕ-ō'pən) v. tr. intr. re-o-pened, re-o-pen-ing, re-o-pens. 1. To open or be opened again: Officials reopened the airport after the snow was cleared. Schools reopen in September. 2. To take up again or be taken up again; resume.

re-or-der (rĕ-ôr'dər) v. re-or-dered, re-or-der-ing, re-or-ders. — v. tr. 1. To order (the same goods) again. 2. To straighten out or put in order again. 3. To rearrange. — v. intr. To order the same goods again. — n. A further order of goods from the same supplier.

re-or-gan-i-za-tion (rĕ-ôr'gə-nĭ-zā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of organizing again or differently. 2. A thorough alteration of the structure of a business corporation. —re-or'gan-i-za'tion-al adj.

re-or-gan-ize (rĕ-ôr'gə-nĭz') v. re-or-gan-ized, re-or-gan-iz-ing, re-or-gan-iz-es. — v. tr. To organize again or anew. — v. intr. To undergo or effect changes in organization. —re-or'gan-iz'er n.

re-o-vi-rus (rĕ'ō-vĭ'rəs) n. pl. re-o-vi-rus-es. Any of a group of viruses that contain double-stranded RNA and are associated with various diseases in animals, including human respiratory and gastrointestinal infections. [R(ESPIRATORY) + E(NTERIC) + O(RPHAN) + VIRUS.]

rep¹ also repp (rĕp) n. A ribbed or corded fabric of various materials, such as cotton, wool, or silk. [Alteration of French reps, from English ribs, pl. of RIB.]

rep² (rĕp) n. Informal. A representative.

rep³ (rĕp) n. Physics. A unit of absorbed radiation dose, equal to the amount of ionizing radiation that will transfer 93 ergs of energy to 1 gram of water or living tissue. [R(OENTGEN) + E(QUIVALENT) + P(HYSICAL).]

rep⁴ (rĕp) n. Informal. 1. A repertory company. 2. A repertory theater.

rep⁵ (rĕp) n. Informal. Reputation: "Modern British royalty began with Queen Victoria, who still has a bad rep for being stodgy, straitlaced and—well, Victorian" (Anthony Holden).

rep. abbr. 1. Repair. 2. Repetition. 3. Report. 4. Reporter. 5. Or Rep.. Representative. 6. Reprint. 7. Or Rep.. Republic.

Rep. abbr. Republican.

re-pack-age (rĕ-pāk'ij) v. tr. re-pack-aged, re-pack-ag-ing, re-pack-ag-es. To package again or anew, especially in a more attractive package. —re-pack-'ag-er n.

re-paid (rĭ-pād') v. Past tense and past participle of repay.

re·pair¹ (rĭ-pâr') v. re·paired, re·pair·ing, re·pairs. — v. tr. 1. To restore to sound condition after damage or injury; fix: repaired the broken watch. 2. To set right; remedy: repair an oversight. 3. To renew or revitalize. 4. To make up for or compensate for (a loss or wrong, for example). — v. intr. To make repairs.

— n. Abbr. rep. 1. a. The work, act, or process of repairing. b. An instance of repairing. 2. General condition after use or repairing: in good repair.

3. Something that has been repaired. [Middle English reparen, repairen, from Old French reparer, from Latin reparāre : re-, re- + parāre, to prepare, put in order; see perə⁻¹ in Appendix.] — re·pair'a·bil'i·ty n. — re·pair'a·ble adj.

— re·pair'a·bly adv. — re·pair'er n.

re·pair² (rĭ-pâr') v. intr. re·paired, re·pair·ing, re·pairs. 1. To betake oneself; go: repair to the dining room. 2. To go frequently or habitually: repairs to the restaurant every week. — n. 1. An act of going or sojourning: our annual repair to the mountains. 2. A place to which one goes frequently or habitually; a haunt. [Middle English reparen, to return, from Old French repairier, from Late Latin repatriāre, to return to one's country. See REPATRIATE.]

re·pair·man (rĭ-pâr'măn', -mən) n. A man whose occupation is making repairs.

re·pair·per·son (rĭ-pâr'pûr'sən) n. pl. re·pair·per·sons or re·pair·peo·ple (-pē'pəl). A repairman or repairwoman.

re·pair·wom·an (rĭ-pâr'wōm'ən) n. A woman whose occupation is making repairs.

re·pand (rĭ-pänd') adj. Botany. Having a somewhat wavy margin: a repand leaf. [Latin repandus, bent backward : re-, re- + pandus, past participle of pandere, to spread out; see petə- in Appendix.]

rep·a·ra·ble (rĕp'ər-ə-bəl) adj. Possible to repair: reparable damage to the car; reparable wrongs. [French réparable, from Latin reparābilis, from reparāre, to repair. See REPAIR¹.] — rep'a·ra·bil'i·ty n. — rep'a·ra·bly adv.

rep·a·ra·tion (rĕp'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of repairing or the condition of being repaired. 2. The act or process of making amends; expiation. 3. Something done or paid to compensate or make amends. 4. reparations. Compensation or remuneration required from a defeated nation as indemnity for damage or injury during a war. [Middle English reparacion, from Old French, from Late Latin reparātiō, reparātiōn-, restoration, from Latin reparātus, past participle of reparāre, to repair. See REPAIR¹.]

SYNONYMS: reparation, redress, amends, restitution, indemnity. All of these nouns refer to something given in compensation for loss, suffering, or damage. Reparation implies recompense given to one who has suffered injury, harm, or wrong at the hands of another: “reparation for our rights at home, and security against the like future violations” (William Pitt). Redress involves setting right what is wrong or providing relief from injustice; the term may imply retaliation or punishment: “The people, whose privileges he has invaded, call aloud for redress” (Jane Porter). “There is no grievance that is a fit object of redress by mob law” (Abraham Lincoln). Amends, less forceful than redress, usually implies the giving of satisfaction for a minor grievance or lesser injury: How can I make amends for losing my temper? Restitution is the restoration of something taken illegally or its equivalent: “He attempted to enforce the restitution of the Roman lands and cities” (George P.R. James). Indemnity implies reimbursement for loss or damage sustained: The innocent victims of the riot demanded indemnity for the lawless violence to which they had been subjected.

re·par·a·tive (rĭ-pär'ə-tĭv) also re·par·a·to·ry (-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Tending to repair. 2. Of, relating to, or of the nature of reparations.

rep·ar·tee (rĕp'ər-tē', -tā', -är-) n. 1. A swift, witty reply. 2. Conversation marked by the exchange of witty retorts. See Synonyms at wit¹. [French repartie, from feminine past participle of repartir, to retort, from Old French, to retort, to depart again : re-, re- + partir, to depart (from Latin partīre, to divide, from pars, part-, part); see per^{ə-2} in Appendix.]

re·par·ti·tion (rĕ'pär-tĭsh'ən) n. 1. Distribution; apportionment. 2. A partitioning again or in a different way. — v. tr. re·par·ti·tioned, re·par·ti·tion·ing, re·par·ti·tions. To partition again; redivide.

re·pass (rĕ-päs') v. re·passed, re·pass·ing, re·pass·es. — v. tr. 1. To pass (something) again. 2. To cause to pass again in the opposite direction. — v. intr. To pass again; go by again. — re·pas'sage (-ĭj) n.

re·past (rĭ-päst') n. A meal or the food eaten or provided at a meal. — v. re·past·ed, re·past·ing, re·pasts. — v. intr. To eat or feast. — v. tr. Obsolete. To give food to. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin repāstus, from past participle of repāscere, to feed : re-, re- + Latin pāscere, to feed; see pā- in Appendix.]

re·pa·tri·ate (rĕ-pā'trĕ-āt') v. tr. re·pat·ri·at·ed, re·pat·ri·at·ing, re·pat·ri·ates. To restore or return to the country of birth, citizenship, or origin: repatriate war refugees. — n. (-ĭt, -āt') One who has been repatriated. [Late Latin repatriāre, repatriāt-, to return to one's country : re-, re- + patria, native country; see EXPATRIATE.] — re·pa'tri·a'tion n.

re·pay (rĭ-pā') v. re·paid (-pād'), re·pay·ing, re·pays. — v. tr. 1. To pay back: repaid a debt. 2. To give back, either in return or in compensation: repay kindness with kindness. 3. To make a return or compensation for: a company that repays hard work with bonuses. 4. To make or do in return: repay a call. — v. intr. To make repayment or requital. — re·pay'a·ble adj. — re·pay·ment n.

re·peal (rĭ-pēl') v. tr. re·pealed, re·peal·ing, re·peals. 1. To revoke or rescind, especially by an official or formal act. 2. Obsolete. To summon back or recall, especially from exile. — n. The act or process of repealing. [Middle English repelen, repealen, from Anglo-Norman repeler, alteration of Old French rapeler : re-, re- + apeler, to appeal; see APPEAL.] — re·peal/a·ble adj.

—re·peal/er n.

re·peat (rĭ-pē't) v. re·peat·ed, re·peat·ing, re·peats. — v. tr. 1. To say again: repeat a question. 2. To utter in duplication of another's utterance. 3. To recite from memory. 4. To tell to another. 5. To do, experience, or produce again: repeat past successes. 6. To express (oneself) in the same way or words: repeats himself constantly. — v. intr. 1. To do or say something again. 2. To commit the fraudulent offense of voting more than once in a single election. — n. Abbr. rpt. 1. An act of repeating. 2. Something repeated: a repeat of a television program. 3. Music. a. A passage or section that is repeated. b. A sign usually consisting of two vertical dots, indicating a passage to be repeated. — adj. Of, relating to, or being something that repeats or is repeated: a repeat offender; a repeat performance of the play. [Middle English repeten, from Old French repeter, from Latin repetere, to seek again : re-, re- + petere, to seek; see pet- in Appendix.] —re·peat'a·bil/i·ty n. —re·peat'a·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: repeat, iterate, reiterate, restate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to state again”: repeated the warning; iterate a demand; reiterating a question; restated the obvious.

re·peat·ed (rĭ-pē'tĭd) adj. Said, done, or occurring again and again: We heard repeated knocks on the door.

re·peat·ed·ly (rĭ-pē'tĭd-lē) adv. More than once; again and again.

re·peat·er (rĭ-pē'tər) n. 1. One that repeats: “[The] tourists are mainly repeaters from the United States and Canada who come for the peace and quiet” (James Kerr). 2. A watch or clock with a pressure-activated mechanism that strikes the hour. 3. A repeating firearm. 4. A student who repeats a course, usually one that has been failed. 5. One who fraudulently votes more than once in a single election. 6. One who has been convicted of wrongdoing more than once, especially for the same offense.

re·peat·ing decimal (rĭ-pē'tĭŋ dēs'ə-məl) n. Mathematics. A decimal in which a pattern of one or more digits is repeated indefinitely, for example, 0.3333... Also called circulating decimal, recurring decimal.

repeating firearm (rĭ-pē'tĭŋ fir'ärm') n. A firearm capable of firing several times without being reloaded.

re·pel (rĭ-pē'l') v. re·pel·led, re·pel·ling, re·pels. — v. tr. 1. To ward off or keep away; drive back: repel insects. 2. To offer resistance to; fight against: repel an invasion. 3. To refuse to accept; reject: a company that was trying to repel a hostile takeover. 4. To turn away from; spurn. 5. To cause aversion or distaste in:

Her rudeness repels everyone. See Synonyms at disgust. See Usage Note at repulse. 6. To be resistant to; be incapable of absorbing or mixing with: Oil repels water. 7. Physics. To present an opposing force to; push back or away by a force: Electric charges of the same sign repel one another. — v. intr. 1. To offer a resistant force to something. 2. To cause aversion or distaste: behavior that repels. [Middle English repellen, from Old French repeller, from Latin repellere : re-, re- + pellere, to drive; see pel-⁵ in Appendix.] —re·pel/ler n.

re·pel·lent also re·pel·lant (rĭ-pĕl'ənt) adj. 1. a. Serving or tending to repel. b. Able to repel. 2. Inspiring aversion or distaste; repulsive. See Synonyms at hateful. See Synonyms at offensive. 3. Resistant or impervious to a substance. Often used in combination: a water-repellent fabric. — n. 1. One that repels. 2. a. A substance used to repel insects. b. A substance or treatment for making a fabric or surface impervious or resistant to something else. —re·pel/lence, re·pel/len·cy n. —re·pel/lent·ly adv.

re·pent¹ (rĭ-pĕnt') v. re·pent·ed, re·pent·ing, re·pents. — v. intr. 1. To feel remorse, contrition, or self-reproach for what one has done or failed to do; be contrite. 2. To feel such regret for past conduct as to change one's mind regarding it: repented of intemperate behavior. 3. To make a change for the better as a result of remorse or contrition for one's sins. — v. tr. 1. To feel regret or self-reproach for: repent one's sins. 2. To cause to feel remorse or regret. [Middle English repenten, from Old French repentir : re-, re- + pentir, to be sorry (from Vulgar Latin paenitire*, from Latin paenitēre).] —re·pent'er n.

re·pent² (rĕ'pənt) adj. Biology. Creeping along the ground; prostrate. [Latin rĕpĕns, rĕpĕnt- present participle of rĕpere, to creep.]

re·pen·tance (rĭ-pĕn'təns) n. 1. The act or process of repenting. 2. Remorse or contrition for past conduct or sin. See Synonyms at penitence.

re·pen·tant (rĭ-pĕn'tənt) adj. Characterized by or demonstrating repentance; penitent. —re·pen/tant·ly adv.

Re·pen·ti·gny (rə-pän-tē-nyē') A town of southern Quebec, Canada, a residential suburb of Montreal. Population, 34,419.

re·per·cus·sion (rĕ'pər-kūsh'ən, rĕ'pər-) n. 1. An often indirect effect, influence, or result that is produced by an event or action. See Synonyms at impact. 2. A recoil, rebounding, or reciprocal motion after impact. 3. A reflection, especially of sound. [Middle English repercussioun, from Old French repercussion, from Latin repercussio, repercussio-, from repercussus, past participle of repercutere, to cause to rebound : re-, re- + percutere, to strike; see PERCUSS.]

—re'per·cus/sive adj.

re·per·toire (rĕ'pər-twär') n. 1. The stock of songs, plays, operas, readings, or other pieces that a player or company is prepared to perform. 2. The range or number of skills, aptitudes, or special accomplishments of a particular person or group. [French répertoire, from Old French, from Late Latin repertōrium. See REPERTORY.]

rep-er-to-ry (rĕp'ər-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) n. pl. rep-er-to-ries. 1. A repertoire.

2. a. A theater in which a resident company presents works from a specified repertoire, usually in alternation. b. A repertory company. 3. a. A place, such as a storehouse, where a stock of things is kept; a repository. b. Something stored in or as if in such a place; a stock or collection. [Late Latin repertōrium, from Latin repertus, past participle of reperire, to find out : re-, re- + parire, to get, beget; see per-¹ in Appendix.] —rep'er-to'ri-al adj.

repertory company (rĕp'ər-tōr'ē kŭm'pə-nē) n. A company that presents and performs a number of different plays or other works during a season, usually in alternation.

rep-e-tend (rĕp'ĭ-tĕnd', rĕp'ĭ-tĕnd') n. 1. A word, sound, or phrase that is repeated; a refrain. 2. Mathematics. The digit or group of digits that repeats infinitely in a repeating decimal. [From Latin repetendum, neuter gerundive of repetere, to repeat. See REPEAT.]

rep-e-ti-tion (rĕp'ĭ-tĭsh'ən) n. Abbr. rep. 1. The act or process or an instance of repeating or being repeated. 2. A recitation or recital, especially of prepared or memorized material. [Middle English repeticioun, from Old French repeticion, from Latin repetitiō, repetitiōn-, from repetitus, past participle of repetere, to repeat. See REPEAT.] —rep'e-ti'tion-al adj.

rep-e-ti-tious (rĕp'ĭ-tĭsh'əs) adj. Filled with repetition, especially needless or tedious repetition. —rep'e-ti'tious-ly adv. —rep'e-ti'tious-ness n.

re-pet-i-tive (rĭ-pĕt'ĭ-tĭv) adj. Given to or characterized by repetition.

—re-pet'i-tive-ly adv. —re-pet'i-tive-ness n.

re-phrase (rĕ-frāz') v. tr. re-phrased, re-phras-ing, re-phras-es. To phrase again, especially to state in a new, clearer, or different way.

re-pine (rĭ-pĭn') v. intr. re-pined, re-pin-ing, re-pines. 1. To be discontented or low in spirits; complain or fret. 2. To yearn after something: Immigrants who repined for their homeland. [Middle English repinen, to be aggrieved : re-, re- + pinen, to yearn; see PINE².] —re-pin'er n.

repl. abbr. Replace; replacement.

re-place (rĭ-plās') v. tr. re-placed, re-plac-ing, re-plac-es. Abbr. repl. 1. To put back into a former position or place. 2. To take or fill the place of. 3. To be or provide a substitute for. 4. To pay back or return; refund. —re-place'a-ble adj. —re-plac'er n.

SYNONYMS: replace, supplant, supersede. These verbs are compared as they mean to turn someone or something out and place another in his, her, or its stead. To replace is to be or furnish an equivalent or a substitute in the place of another, especially another that has been lost, depleted, worn out, or discharged: "A conspiracy was carefully engineered to replace the Directory by three Consuls” (H.G. Wells). “I succeed him [Benjamin Franklin, as envoy to France]; no one could replace him” (Thomas Jefferson). Supplant often suggests the use of intrigue or underhanded tactics to take another’s place: “The rivaling poor Jones, and supplanting him in her affections, added another spur to his pursuit” (Henry Fielding). The term does not, however, invariably have this connotation: “The steam engine began to supplant the muscular power of men and animals” (James Harvey Robinson). To supersede is to replace one person or thing by another held to be superior, more valuable or useful, or less antiquated: “In our island the Latin appears never to have superseded the old Gaelic speech” (Macaulay). “Each of us carries his own life-form—an indeterminable form which cannot be superseded by any other” (Carl Jung).

re-place-ment (rĭ-plās'mənt) n. Abbr. repl. 1. The act or process of replacing or of being replaced; substitution. 2. One that replaces, especially a person assigned to a vacant military position.

replacement therapy (rĭ-plās'mənt thĕr'ə-pē) n. Administration of a body substance to compensate for the loss, as from disease or surgery, of a gland or tissue that would normally produce the substance.

re-plant (rē-plānt') v. tr. re-plant-ed, re-plant-ing, re-plants. 1. To plant (something) again or in a new place: separated and replanted the perennials. 2. To supply with new plants: replant a window box. 3. To reattach (an organ or limbs, for example) surgically to the original site. — n. (rē'plānt') Something replanted. —re'plan-ta'tion n.

re-play (rē-plā') v. tr. re-played, re-play-ing, re-plays. To play over again: replay a tennis match; replay a tape; replay history. — n. (rē'plā') 1. The act or process of replaying. 2. Something replayed. 3. An instant replay.

re-plen-ish (rĭ-plĕn'ish) v. re-plen-ish-ed, re-plen-ish-ing, re-plen-ish-es. — v. tr. 1. To fill or make complete again; add a new stock or supply to: replenish the larder. 2. To inspire or nourish: The music will replenish my weary soul. — v. intr. To become full again. [Middle English replenissen, from Old French replenir, repleniss- : re-, re- + plenir, to fill (from plein, full, from Latin plēnus); see pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.] —re-plen'ish-er n. —re-plen'ish-ment n.

re-plete (rĭ-plĕt') adj. 1. Abundantly supplied; abounding: a stream replete with trout; an apartment replete with Empire furniture. 2. Filled to satiation; gorged. 3. Usage Problem. Complete: a computer system replete with color monitor, printer, and software. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin replētus, past participle of replēre, to refill : re-, re- + plēre, to fill; see pelə⁻¹ in Appendix.] —re-plete'ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Replete means “abundantly supplied” and is not generally accepted as a synonym for complete.

re·ple·tion (rĭ-plĕ'shən) n. 1. The condition of being fully supplied or completely filled. 2. A state of excessive fullness.

re·plev·i·a·ble (rĭ-plĕv'ĕ-ə-bəl) adj. Law. Recoverable by replevin: repleviable property.

re·plev·in (rĭ-plĕv'in) Law. n. 1. An action to recover personal property said or claimed to be unlawfully taken. 2. The writ or procedure of such an action. — v. tr. re·plev·ined, re·plev·in·ing, re·plev·ines. To replevy. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman replevine, from replevir, to give as a security : re-, re- + plevir, to pledge (from Late Latin plebere, of Germanic origin).]

re·plev·y (rĭ-plĕv'ĕ) Law. v. tr. re·plev·ied, re·plev·y·ing, re·plev·ies. To regain possession of by a writ of replevin. — n. pl. re·plev·ies. A replevin. [Anglo-Norman replevir. See REPLEVIN.]

rep·li·ca (rĕp'li-kə) n. 1. A copy or reproduction of a work of art, especially one made by the original artist. 2. A copy or reproduction, especially one on a scale smaller than the original. [Italian, from replicare, to repeat, from Late Latin replicāre, from Latin, to fold back. See REPLICATE.]

rep·li·case (rĕp'li-kās', -kāz') n. An enzyme that promotes the synthesis of a complementary RNA molecule from an RNA template. [REPLIC(ATE) + -ASE.]

rep·li·cate (rĕp'li-kāt') v. rep·li·cat·ed, rep·li·cat·ing, rep·li·cates. — v. tr. 1. To duplicate, copy, reproduce, or repeat. 2. Biology. To reproduce or make an exact copy or copies of (genetic material, a cell, or an organism). 3. To fold over or bend back. — v. intr. To become replicated; undergo replication. — adj. also rep·li·cat·ed (-kā'tid; -kīt) Folded over or bent back upon itself: a replicate leaf. — n. (-kīt) A repetition of an experiment or a procedure. [Middle English replicaten, from Late Latin replicāre, replicāt-, to repeat, from Latin, to fold back : re-, re- + plicāre, to fold; see plek- in Appendix.] — rep·li·ca'tive adj.

rep·li·ca·tion (rĕp'li-kā'shən) n. 1. A fold or a folding back. 2. A reply to an answer; a rejoinder. 3. Law. The plaintiff's response to the defendant's answer or plea. 4. An echo or a reverberation. 5. A copy or reproduction. 6. The act or process of duplicating or reproducing something. 7. Biology. The act or process by which genetic material, a cell, or an organism reproduces or makes an exact copy of itself.

rep·li·con (rĕp'li-kōn') n. A genetic element that undergoes replication as an autonomous unit. [REPLIC(ATION) + -ON¹.]

re·ply (rĭ-plī') v. re·plied, re·ply·ing, re·plies. — v. intr. 1. To give an answer in speech or writing. 2. To respond by an action or a gesture. 3. To echo. 4. To return gunfire or an attack: The big guns replied. 5. Law. To respond to a defendant's plea. — v. tr. To say or give as an answer: I replied that I was unable to help them. See Synonyms at answer. — n. pl. re-plies. 1. A response in speech or writing. 2. A response by action or gesture. 3. Law. A plaintiff's formal response in answer to that of a defendant. [Middle English replien, from Old French replier, from Latin replicāre, to fold back. See REPLICATE.] —re-pli'er n. re-po¹ (rē'pō') n. pl. re-pos. Informal. A repurchase agreement. [Shortening and alteration of REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.]

re-po² (rē'pō') n. pl. re-pos. Informal. 1. Repossession of merchandise or property from a buyer who has defaulted on payment. 2. Repossessed merchandise or property.

re-po-lar-i-za-tion (rē-pō'lār-ĭ-zā'shən) n. The restoration of a polarized state across a membrane, as in a muscle fiber following contraction.

re-po-lar-ize (rē-pō'lār-rīz') v. intr. re-po-lar-ized, re-po-lar-iz-ing, re-po-lar-iz-es. To return to a polarized state; undergo repolarization.

re-port (rĭ-pôrt' -pôrt') n. Abbr. rep., rept., rpt. 1. An account presented usually in detail. 2. A formal account of the proceedings or transactions of a group. 3. Often reports. Law. A published collection of authoritative accounts of court cases or of judicial decisions. 4. Common talk; rumor or gossip: According to report, they eloped. 5. Reputation; repute: a person of bad report. 6. An explosive noise: the report of a rifle. — v. re-port-ed, re-port-ing, re-ports. — v. tr.

1. To make or present an often official, formal, or regular account of. 2. To relate or tell about; present: report one's findings. See Synonyms at describe. 3. To write or provide an account or a summation of for publication or broadcast: report the news. 4. To submit or relate the results of considerations concerning: The committee reported the bill. 5. To carry back and repeat to another: reported the rumor of a strike. 6. To complain about or denounce: reported them to the principal. — v. intr. 1. To make a report. 2. To serve as a reporter for a publication, broadcasting company, or other news media. 3. To present oneself: report for duty. 4. To be accountable: She reports directly to the board of directors.

—phrasal verb. report out. To return after deliberation to a legislative body for action: The committee reported the new tax bill out. —idiom. on report. Subject to disciplinary action. [Middle English report, from Old French, from reporter, to report, from Latin reportāre: re-, re- + portāre, to carry; see per⁻² in Appendix.] —re-port'a-ble adj.

re-port-age (rĕp'ər-tāzh', rĭ-pôrt'ĭj, -pôrt'-) n. 1. The reporting of news or information of general interest. 2. Something reported. [French, from reporter, to report, from Old French. See REPORT.]

report card (rĭ-pôrt' kărd) n. A report of a student's progress presented periodically to a parent or guardian.

re-port-ed-ly (rĭ-pôrt'ĭd-lē, -pôrt'-) adv. By report; supposedly.

re-port-er (rĭ-pôrt'tər, -pôrt'-) n. Abbr. rep. 1. A writer, an investigator, or a presenter of news stories. 2. Law. A person who is authorized to write and issue official accounts of judicial or legislative proceedings. —rep'or-to'ri-al

(rĕp'ər-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-, rĕ'pər-) adj. —rep'or-to'ri-al·ly adv.

re·pose¹ (rĭ-pōz') n. 1. The act of resting or the state of being at rest.

2. Freedom from worry; peace of mind. 3. Calmness; tranquillity. See Synonyms at rest¹. — v. re·posed, re·pos·ing, re·pos·es. — v. tr. 1. To lay (oneself) down. 2. To rest or relax (oneself). — v. intr. 1. To lie at rest. 2. To lie dead: repose in a grave. 3. To lie while being supported by something. [From Middle English reposen, to be at rest, from Old French reposer, from Late Latin repausāre, to cause to rest : Latin re-, re- + pausāre, to rest (from Latin pausa, rest); see PAUSE.] —re·pose'al n. —re·pose'er n.

re·pose² (rĭ-pōz') v. tr. re·posed, re·pos·ing, re·pos·es. To place (trust, for example) in: The nation had reposed its hopes in a single man. [Middle English reposen, to replace, from Latin repōnere, repos-, to put away. See REPOSIT.]

re·pose·ful (rĭ-pōz'fəl) adj. Marked by, conducive to, or expressing repose.

—re·pose'ful·ly adv. —re·pose'ful·ness n.

re·pos·it (rĭ-pōz'it) v. tr. re·pos·it·ed, re·pos·it·ing, re·pos·its. To put away; store. [Latin repōnere, reposit- : re-, re- + pōnere, to place; see apo- in Appendix.]

—re'po·si'tion (rĕ'pə-zĭsh'ən, rĕp'ə-) n.

re·pos·i·to·ry (rĭ-pōz'ĭ-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) n. pl. re·pos·i·to·ries. 1. A place where things may be put for safekeeping. 2. A warehouse. 3. A museum. 4. A burial vault; a tomb. 5. One that contains or is a store of something specified: "Bone marrow is also the repository for some leukemias and lymphomas" (Seth Rolbein). 6. One who is entrusted with secrets or confidential information.

re·pos·sess (rĕ'pə-zĕs') v. tr. re·pos·sess·ed, re·pos·sess·ing, re·pos·sess·es. 1. a. To regain possession of. b. To reclaim possession of for failure to pay installments due. 2. To give back possession to. —re'pos·ses'·sion (-zĕsh'ən) n.

re·pous·sé (rə-pōō-sā') adj. 1. Shaped or decorated with patterns in relief formed by hammering and pressing on the reverse side. Used especially of metal. 2. Raised in relief. — n. 1. A design in relief. 2. The technique of hammering and pressing designs in relief. [French, past participle of repousser, to push back, from Old French : re-, re- + pousser, to push (from Latin pulsāre, to beat, frequentative of pellere, to push); see REPEL.]

repp (rĕp) n. Variant of rep¹.

Rep·plier (rĕp'lĭr'), Agnes. 1855-1950. American essayist. A frequent contributor to Atlantic Monthly, she also published several volumes of essays, including Points of View (1891).

rep·re·hend (rĕp'rĭ-hĕnd') v. tr. rep·re·hend·ed, rep·re·hend·ing, rep·re·hends. To reprove; censure. See Synonyms at criticize. [Middle English reprehenden, from Latin reprehendere : re-, re- + prehendere, to seize; see ghend- in Appendix.]

rep·re·hen·si·ble (rĕp'ri-hĕn'sə-bəl) adj. Deserving rebuke or censure; blameworthy. See Synonyms at blameworthy. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin reprehēnsibilis, from Latin reprehēnsus, past participle of reprehendere, to reprehend. See REPREHEND.] —rep'·re·hen'si·bil'i·ty, rep'·re·hen'si·ble·ness n. —rep'·re·hen'si·bly adv.

rep·re·hen·sion (rĕp'ri-hĕn'shən) n. The act of rebuking or censuring; reproval.

rep·re·sent (rĕp'ri-zĕnt') v. tr. rep·re·sent·ed, rep·re·sent·ing, rep·re·sents. 1. a. To stand for; symbolize: The bald eagle represents the United States. b. To indicate or communicate by signs or symbols: Letters of the alphabet represent sounds. 2. a. To depict in art; portray. b. To describe or present in words; set forth. 3. To present clearly to the mind. 4. To draw attention to by way of remonstrance or protest: Our parents represented to us the need for greater caution. 5. To describe or put forward (a person or thing) as an embodiment of a specified quality. 6. a. To serve as the official and authorized delegate or agent for. b. To act as a spokesperson for. 7. To serve as an example of: The museum had several paintings representing the artist's early style. 8. To be the equivalent of. 9. a. To stage (a play, for example); produce. b. To act the part or role of. [Middle English representen, from Old French representer, from Latin praesentāre, to show : re-, re- + praesentāre, to present; see PRESENT².] —rep'·re·sent'a·bil'i·ty n. —rep'·re·sent'a·ble adj. —rep'·re·sent'er n.

SYNONYMS: represent, delineate, depict, limn, picture, portray. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to render or present a realistic image or likeness of”: a statue representing a king; cave paintings that delineate horses and hunters; a cartoon depicting a sea monster; the personality of a great leader limned in words; a country landscape pictured in soft colors; a book portraying life in the Middle Ages.

rep·re·sen·ta·tion (rĕp'ri-zĕn-tā'shən, -zən-) n. 1. The act of representing or the state of being represented. 2. Something that represents. 3. a. An account or a statement, as of facts, allegations, or arguments. b. An expostulation; a protest. 4. A presentation or production, as of a play. 5. The state or condition of serving as an official delegate, agent, or spokesperson. 6. The right or privilege of being represented by delegates having a voice in a legislative body. 7. Law. A statement of fact made by one party in order to induce another party to enter into a contract.

rep·re·sen·ta·tion·al (rĕp'ri-zĕn-tā'shə-nəl, -zən-) adj. Of or relating to representation, especially to realistic graphic representation. —rep'·re·sen·ta·tion·al·ism n.

rep·re·sen·ta·tive (rĕp'ri-zĕn'tə-tīv) n. Abbr. rep., Rep. 1. One that serves as an example or a type for others of the same classification. 2. One that serves as a delegate or an agent for another. 3. a. A member of a governmental body, usually legislative, chosen by popular vote. b. A member of the U.S. House of Representatives or of the lower house of a state legislature. — adj. 1. Representing, depicting, or portraying or able to do so. 2. Authorized to act as an official delegate or agent. 3. Of, relating to, or characteristic of government by representation. 4. Like or typical of others of the same class. See Usage Note at cross section. — rep're-sen'ta-tive-ly adv. — rep're-sen'ta-tive-ness n.

re-press (rĭ-prĕs') v. re-pressed, re-press-ing, re-press-es. — v. tr. 1. To hold back by an act of volition: couldn't repress a smirk. See Synonyms at sup-press. 2. To put down by force, usually before total control has been lost; quell: repress a rebellion. 3. Psychology. To exclude (painful or unpleasant memories, for example) from the conscious mind. — v. intr. To take repressive action. [Middle English repressen, from Latin reprimere, repress-: re-, re- + primere, to press; see per⁴ in Appendix.] — re-press'i-bil/i-ty n. — re-press'i-ble adj.

re-press-er (rĭ-prĕs'ər) n. Variant of repressor (n., sense 1).

re-pres-sion (rĭ-prĕsh'ən) n. 1. The act of repressing or the state of being repressed. 2. Psychology. The unconscious exclusion of painful impulses, desires, or fears from the conscious mind. — re-pres'sion-ist adj.

re-pres-sive (rĭ-prĕs'iv) adj. Causing or inclined to cause repression: a repressive dictatorship. — re-pres'sive-ly adv. — re-pres'sive-ness n.

re-pres-sor (rĭ-prĕs'ər) n. 1. Also re-press-er. One that represses. 2. Genetics. A protein that binds to an operator, blocking transcription of an operon and the enzymes for which the operon codes.

re-prieve (rĭ-prĕv') v. tr. re-prieved, re-priev-ing, re-prieves. 1. To postpone or cancel the punishment of. 2. To bring relief to. — n.

1. a. Postponement or cancellation of a punishment. b. A warrant for such an action. 2. Temporary relief, as from danger or pain. [Alteration (influenced by Middle English repreven, to contradict, variant of reproven, to rebuke); see REPROVE, of Middle English reprien, probably from Old French repris, past participle of reprendre, to take back, from Latin reprehendere, to hold back. See REPREHEND.] — re-priev'a-ble adj.

rep-ri-mand (rĕp'rĕ-mănd') v. tr. rep-ri-mand-ed, rep-ri-mand-ing, rep-ri-mands. To reprove severely, especially in a formal or official way. See Synonyms at admonish. — n. A severe, formal, or official rebuke or censure. [French réprimander, from réprimande, a reprimand, alteration (influenced by mander, to order), of obsolete reprimende, from Latin reprimenda (culpa), (fault) to be repressed, feminine gerundive of reprimere, to restrain. See REPRESS.]

re-print (rĕ'prĭnt') n. Abbr. rep. 1. Something that has been printed again, especially: a. A new printing that is identical to an original; a reimpression. b. A separately printed excerpt; an offprint. 2. A facsimile of a postage stamp printed after the original issue of the stamp has been discontinued. — v. tr.

re·print·ed, re·print·ing, re·prints (rē-prints'). To make a new copy or edition of; print again. —re·print'er n.

re·pri·sal (rī-prī'zəl) n. 1. Retaliation for an injury with the intent of inflicting at least as much injury in return. 2. Forcible seizure of an enemy's goods or subjects in retaliation for injuries inflicted. 3. The practice of using political or military force without actually resorting to war. [Middle English reprisail, from Old French reprisaille, from Old Italian ripresaglia, from ripreso, past participle of riprendere, to take back, from Latin reprehendere, reprehendere, to take hold of. See REPREHEND.]

re·prise (rī-prēz') n. 1. Music. a. A repetition of a phrase or verse. b. A return to an original theme. 2. A recurrence or resumption of an action. — v. tr.

re·prised, re·pris·ing, re·pris·es. To repeat or resume an action; make a reprise of. [Middle English, act of taking back, from Old French, from feminine past participle of reprendre, to take back. See REPRIEVE.]

re·pro (rē'prō) n. pl. re·pros. Printing. A reproduction proof.

re·proach (rī-prōch') v. tr. re·proached, re·proach·ing, re·proach·es.

1. To express disapproval of, criticism of, or disappointment in (someone). See Synonyms at admonish. 2. To bring shame upon; disgrace. — n. 1. Blame; rebuke. 2. One that causes rebuke or blame. 3. Disgrace; shame. —idiom.

beyond reproach. So good as to preclude any possibility of criticism. [Middle English reprochen, from Old French reprochier, from Vulgar Latin repropiāre*: Latin re-, re- + Latin prope, near; see per¹ in Appendix.] —re·proach'a·ble adj.

—re·proach'a·ble·ness n. —re·proach'a·bly adv. —re·proach'er n.

re·proach·ful (rī-prōch'fəl) adj. Expressing reproach or blame.

—re·proach'ful·ly adv. —re·proach'ful·ness n.

rep·ro·bate (rēp'rə-bāt') n. 1. A morally unprincipled person. 2. Theology.

One who is predestined to damnation. — adj. 1. Morally unprincipled; shameless. 2. Theology. Rejected by God and without hope of salvation. — v. tr.

rep·ro·bat·ed, rep·ro·bat·ing, rep·ro·bates. 1. To disapprove of; condemn. 2. Theology. To abandon to eternal damnation. [From Middle English, condemned, from Late Latin reprobātus, past participle of reprobāre, to reprove: Latin re-, opposite; see RE- + probāre, to approve; see PROVE.] —rep'ro·ba'tion n. —rep'ro·ba'tive adj.

re·proc·ess (rē-prōs'ēs', -prō'sēs') v. tr. re·proc·essed, re·proc·ess·ing, re·proc·ess·es. To cause to undergo special or additional processing before reuse.

re·pro·duce (rē'prə-dōōs', -dyōōs') v. re·pro·duced, re·pro·duc·ing, re·pro·duc·es. — v. tr. 1. To produce a counterpart, an image, or a copy of.

2. Biology. To generate (offspring) by sexual or asexual means. 3. To produce again or anew; re-create. 4. To bring (a memory, for example) to mind again.

— v. intr. 1. To generate offspring. 2. To undergo copying: graphics that repro- duce well. —re'pro-duc'er n. —re'pro-duc'i-bil'i-ty n. —re'pro-duc'i-ble adj.

re·pro·duc·tion (rē'prə-dŭk'shən) n. 1. The act of reproducing or the condition or process of being reproduced. 2. Something reproduced, especially in the faithfulness of its resemblance to the form and elements of the original: the realistic quality of the sound reproduction; a fine reproduction of an Adams mantel.

3. Biology. The sexual or asexual process by which organisms generate others of the same kind.

reproduction proof (rē'prə-dŭk'shən prōōf) n. Printing. A proof of typeset material made for reproduction through a photographic process such as photo-offset lithography.

re·pro·duc·tive (rē'prə-dŭk'tiv) adj. 1. Of or relating to reproduction: legal and political questions concerning reproductive rights. 2. Tending to reproduce.

— n. Zoology. A reproductive organism, especially a sexually mature social insect. —re'pro-duc'tive-ly adv. —re'pro-duc'tive-ness n.

re·pro·gram (rē-prō'grām') v. tr. re·pro·grammed or re·pro·gramed, re·pro·gram·ming or re·pro·gram·ing, re·pro·grams or re·pro·grams. To program again. —re'pro·gram'ma-bil'i-ty n. —re·pro·gram·ma-ble adj.

re·pro·graph·ics (rē'prə-grāf'iks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb.) The technique of reprography. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb.) The materials, equipment, and processes used in reprography.

re·prog·ra·phy (rī-prōg'rə-fē) n. The process of reproducing, reprinting, or copying graphic material especially by mechanical, photographic, or electronic means. [REPRO(DUCTION) + -GRAPHY.] —re·prog'ra·pher n.

—re'pro·graph'ic (rē'prə-grāf'ik, rēp'rə-) adj.

re·proof (rī-prōōf') n. The act, an instance, or an expression of reproving; a rebuke. [Middle English reprof, variant of reprove, repreve, from Old French repreueve, from reprover, to find fault with. See REPROVE.]

re·prove (rī-prōōv') v. tr. re·proved, re·prov·ing, re·proves. 1. To voice or convey disapproval of; rebuke. See Synonyms at admonish. 2. To find fault with. [Middle English reproven, from Anglo-Norman repruver, variant of Old French reprover, from Late Latin reprobāre, to disapprove. See REPROBATE.]

—re·prov'a·ble adj. —re·prov'er n. —re·prov'ing·ly adv.

rept. abbr. Report.

rep·tant (rēp'tənt) adj. Biology. Creeping or crawling; repent. [Latin rēptāns, rēptant- present participle of rēptāre, to creep frequentative of rēpere.]

rep·tile (rēp'til, -tīl') n. 1. Any of various cold-blooded, usually egg-laying vertebrates of the class Reptilia, such as a snake, lizard, crocodile, turtle, or dinosaur, having an external covering of scales or horny plates and breathing by means of lungs. 2. A person regarded as despicable or treacherous. [Middle English reptil, from Old French reptile, from Late Latin rēptile, from neuter of Latin rēptilis, creeping, from rēptus, past participle of rēpere, to creep.]

rep·til·i·an (rĕp-tĭl'ē-ən, -tĭl'yən) adj. 1. Of or relating to reptiles.

2. Resembling or characteristic of a reptile. 3. Despicable; treacherous. — n. A reptile.

rep·til·i·um (rĕp-tĭl'ē-əm) n. pl. rep·til·i·a (-ē-ə). A building or an enclosure housing reptiles for public display.

Repub. abbr. 1. Republic. 2. Republican.

re·pub·lic (rĭ-pŭb'lik) n. Abbr. rep., Rep., Repub. 1. a. A political order whose head of state is not a monarch and in modern times is usually a president.

b. A nation that has such a political order. 2. a. A political order in which the supreme power lies in a body of citizens who are entitled to vote for officers and representatives responsible to them. b. A nation that has such a political order.

3. Often Republic. A specific republican government of a nation: the Fourth Republic of France. 4. An autonomous or partially autonomous political and territorial unit belonging to a sovereign federation. 5. A group of people working as equals in the same sphere or field: the republic of letters. [French république, from Old French, from Latin rēspŭblica : rēs, thing; see rē- in Appendix + pŭblica, feminine of pŭblicus, of the people; see PUBLIC.]

re·pub·li·can (rĭ-pŭb'li-kən) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a republic. 2. Being in favor of a republic as the best form of government.

3. Republican. Abbr. R., Rep., Repub. Of, relating to, characteristic of, or belonging to the Republican Party of the United States. — n. 1. One who favors a republic as the best form of government. 2. Republican. Abbr. R., Rep., Repub. A member of the Republican Party of the United States.

—re·pub'li·can·ism n.

re·pub·li·can·ize (rĭ-pŭb'li-kə-nĭz') v. tr. re·pub·li·can·ized, re·pub·li·can·iz·ing, re·pub·li·can·iz·es. To make republican. —re·pub'li·can·i·za'tion (-kə-nĭ-zā'shən) n.

Republican Party (rĭ-pŭb'li-kən pär'tē) n. 1. One of the two primary political parties of the United States, organized in 1854 to oppose slavery. 2. The Democratic-Republican Party, a former political party of the United States, organized in 1792 by Thomas Jefferson.

Republican River (rĭ-pŭb'li-kən rĭv'ər) A river, about 676 km (420 mi) long, rising in eastern Colorado and flowing northeast and east across southern Nebraska then southeast through northeast-central Kansas, where it joins the Smoky Hill River to form the Kansas River.

re·pub·li·ca·tion (rĕ-pŭb'li-kā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of republishing.

2. Something republished.

re·pub·lish (rē-pŭb'lish) v. tr. re·pub·lished, re·pub·lish·ing, re·pub·lish·es. 1. To publish again. 2. Law. To revive (a libel or a canceled will).
—re·pub'lish·er n.

re·pu·di·ate (rĭ-pyōō'dē-āt') v. tr. re·pu·di·at·ed, re·pu·di·at·ing, re·pu·di·ates. 1. To reject the validity or authority of: "Chaucer... not only came to doubt the worth of his extraordinary body of work, but repudiated it" (Joyce Carol Oates). 2. To reject emphatically as unfounded, untrue, or unjust: repudiated the accusation. 3. To refuse to recognize or pay: repudiate a debt. 4. a. To disown (a child, for example). b. To refuse to have any dealings with. [Latin repudiāre, repudiāt-, from repudium, divorce.] —re·pu'di-a'tive adj.
—re·pu'di-a'tor n.

re·pu·di·a·tion (rĭ-pyōō'dē-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of repudiating or the state of being repudiated. 2. The refusal, especially by public authorities, to acknowledge a contract or debt. —re·pu'di-a'tion·ist n.

re·pugn (rĭ-pyōōn') v. re·pugned, re·pugn·ing, re·pugns. — v. tr. To oppose or contend against. — v. intr. Archaic. To be opposed; conflict. [Middle English repugnen, from Old French repugner, from Latin repugnāre, to fight against : re-, re- + pugnāre, to fight with the fist; see peuk- in Appendix.]

re·pug·nance (rĭ-pŭg'nəns) n. 1. Extreme dislike or aversion. 2. Logic. The relationship of contradictory terms; inconsistency.

re·pug·nan·cy (rĭ-pŭg'nən-sē) n. pl. re·pug·nan·cies. Repugnance.

re·pug·nant (rĭ-pŭg'nənt) adj. 1. Arousing disgust or aversion; offensive or repulsive: morally repugnant behavior. 2. Logic. Contradictory; inconsistent. [Middle English, antagonistic, from Old French, from Latin repugnāns, repugnant- present participle of repugnāre, to fight against. See REPUGN.] —re·pug'nant·ly adv.

re·pulse (rĭ-pŭls') v. tr. re·pulsed, re·puls·ing, re·puls·es. 1. To drive back; repel. 2. To rebuff or reject with rudeness, coldness, or denial. 3. Usage Problem. To cause repugnance or distaste in. — n. 1. The act of repulsing or the state of being repulsed. 2. Rejection; refusal. [Middle English repulsen, from Latin repellere, repuls-. See REPEL.] —re·puls'er n.

USAGE NOTE: A number of critics have maintained that repulse should only be used to mean "to drive away, spurn," as in He rudely repulsed their overtures, and not to mean "to cause repulsion in," as in Their hypocrisy repulsed me. In recent years, however, there has been an increasing tendency to use repulse in the sense "cause repulsion in." Reputable literary precedent exists for this usage, and the confusion is understandable, given that the stigmatized use of repulse is parallel to the unexceptionable uses of repulsion and repulsive. Still, writers who want to stay on the safe side may prefer to use only repel when the intended sense is re·pul·sion (rĭ-pŭl'shən) n. 1. The act of repulsing or the condition of being repulsed. 2. Extreme aversion. 3. Physics. The tendency of particles or bodies of the same electric charge or magnetic polarity to separate.

“cause repulsion in.”

re·pul·sive (rĭ-pŭl'siv) adj. 1. Causing repugnance or aversion; disgusting. See Synonyms at offensive. 2. Tending to repel or drive off. 3. Physics. Opposing in direction: a repulsive force. —re·pul'sive·ly adv. —re·pul'sive·ness n.

re·pur·chase agreement (rē-pûr'chĭs ə-grē'mənt) n. A contract giving the seller of an asset the right or obligation to buy back the asset at a specified price on a given date.

rep·u·ta·ble (rĕp'yə-tə-bəl) adj. Having a good reputation; honorable.
—rep'·u·ta·bil'i·ty n. —rep'·u·ta·bly adv.

rep·u·ta·tion (rĕp'yə-tā'shən) n. 1. The general estimation in which a person is held by the public. 2. The state or situation of being held in high esteem. 3. A specific characteristic or trait ascribed to a person or thing: a reputation for courtesy. [Middle English reputacioun, from Latin reputātiō, reputātiōn-, a reckoning, from reputātus, past participle of reputāre, to reckon, think over. See REPUTE.]

re·pute (rĭ-pyōōt') v. tr. re·put·ed, re·put·ing, re·put·es. 1. To ascribe a particular fact or characteristic to. 2. To consider; suppose. — n. 1. Reputation. 2. A good reputation. [Middle English reputen, from Old French reputer, from Latin reputāre, to think over : re-, re- + putāre, to think over; see peu- in Appendix.]

re·put·ed (rĭ-pyōō'tid) adj. Generally supposed to be such. See Synonyms at supposed. —re·put'ed·ly adv.

req. abbr. 1. Require; required. 2. Requisition.

reqd. abbr. Required.

re·quest (rĭ-kwĕst') v. tr. re·quest·ed, re·quest·ing, re·quest·es. 1. To express a desire for; ask for. 2. To ask (a person) to do something. — n. 1. The act of asking. 2. Something asked for. —idioms. by request. In response to an expressed desire: We are offering these scarves for sale again by request. in request. In great demand: a pianist in great request. on request (or upon request). When asked for: References are available on request. [From Middle English requeste, the act of requesting, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin *(rēs) requaesīta, (thing) requested, from Latin, feminine past participle of requīrere, to ask for. See REQUIRE.] —re·quest'er n.

req·ui·em (rĕk'wē-əm, rĕ'kwē-) n. 1. Requiem. Roman Catholic Church. a. A mass for a deceased person. b. A musical composition for such a mass. 2. A hymn, composition, or service for the dead. [Middle English, from Latin, accusative of requiēs, rest, the first word of the mass for the dead : re-, re- + quiēs, quiet; see k^weiə- in Appendix.]

req·ui·es·cat (rĕk'wē-ēs'kăt', -kăt') n. A prayer for the repose of the souls of the dead. [Latin, third person sing. present subjunctive of requiēscere, to rest. See k^weiə- in Appendix.]

re·quire (rĭ-kwĭr') v. tr. re·quired, re·quir·ing, re·quires. Abbr. req. 1. To have as a requisite; need: Most plants require sunlight. 2. To call for as obligatory or appropriate; demand. See Synonyms at demand. 3. To impose an obligation on; compel: Students are required to attend classes. [Middle English requiren, from Old French requerre, from Vulgar Latin requaerere*, alteration (influenced by quaerere, to seek), of Latin requĭrere: re-, re- + quaerere, to seek.]

—re·quir'able adj. —re·quir'er n.

re·quired (rĭ-kwĭrd') adj. Abbr. req., reqd. 1. Needed; essential.

2. Obligatory: required reading.

re·quire·ment (rĭ-kwĭr'mənt) n. 1. Something that is required; a necessity.

2. Something obligatory; a prerequisite.

req·ui·site (rĕk'wĭ-zĭt) adj. Required; essential. See Synonyms at indispensable. — n. Something that is indispensable; a requirement. See Synonyms at need. [Middle English, from Latin requĭsĭtus, past participle of requĭrere, to require. See REQUIRE.] —req'ui·site·ly adv. —req'ui·site·ness n.

req·ui·si·tion (rĕk'wĭ-zĭsh'ən) n. Abbr. req. 1. A formal written request for something needed. 2. A necessity; a requirement. 3. The state or condition of being needed or put into service. 4. Law. A formal request of one government to another demanding the return of a criminal or fugitive. — v. tr.

req·ui·si·tioned, req·ui·si·tion·ing, req·ui·si·tions. 1. To demand, as for military needs. 2. To make demands of.

re·quit·al (rĭ-kwĭt'l) n. 1. The act of requiting. 2. Return, as for an injury or a friendly act.

re·quite (rĭ-kwĭt') v. tr. re·quit·ed, re·quit·ing, re·quites. 1. To make repayment or return for: requite another's love. See Synonyms at reciprocate. 2. To avenge. [Middle English requiten: re-, re- + quiten, to pay; see QUIT.]

—re·quit'able adj. —re·quit'er n.

re·ra·di·ate (rē-rā'dē-ăt') v. tr. re·ra·di·at·ed, re·ra·di·at·ing, re·ra·di·ates. To emit (absorbed radiation) anew: "Different organic materials in the soil reradiate the sun's heat at different rates" (Lori Oliwenstein).

re·ra·di·a·tion (rē-rā'dē-ā'shən) n. Physics. Radiation emission following the absorption of incident radiation.

re·ran (rē-răn') v. Past tense and past participle of rerun.

rere·dos (rĭr'dōs', rĭr'ĭ-, rĕr'ĭ-) n. 1. A decorative screen or facing on the wall at the back of an altar; a retable. 2. The back of an open hearth of a fireplace. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from areredos: arere, behind (Latin ad-, ad- + retrō, backward); see re- in Appendix + dos, back (from Latin dorsum).]

re-re-lease (rē'ri-lēs') v. tr. re-re-leased, re-re-leas-ing, re-re-leas-es. To release (a movie, for example) again. — re're-lease' n.

re-run (rē'rūn') n. The act or an instance of repeating a recorded movie or a recorded television performance. — v. tr. re-ran (-rān'), re-run, re-run-ning, re-runs (rē-rūn'). To present a rerun of.

RES abbr. Reticuloendothelial system.

res. abbr. 1. Research. 2. Reservation. 3. Reserve. 4. Reservoir. 5. Residence; resident. 6. Resolution.

res ad-ju-di-ca-ta (rēz' ə-jōō'dī-kā'tə, rās') n. Law. Variant of res judicata.

re-sale (rē'sāl', rē-sāl') n. The act of selling again. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: resale value; resale potential. — re-sal/a-ble adj.

re-sched-ule (rē-skěj'ōōl) v. tr. re-sched-uled, re-sched-ul-ing, re-sched-ules. To schedule again or anew: rescheduled the meeting for the following week; rescheduled the debts of many developing nations.

re-scind (rī-sīnd') v. tr. re-scind-ed, re-scind-ing, re-scinds. To make void; repeal or annul. [Latin rescindere: re-, re- + scindere, to split; see skai- in Appendix.] — re-scind/a-ble adj. — re-scind'er n. — re-scind'ment n.

re-scis-sion (rī-sīzh'ən) n. The act of rescinding. [Latin rescissio, rescissio-, from rescissus, past participle of rescindere, to rescind. See RESCIND.]

re-scis-so-ry (rī-sīz'ə-rē, -sīs'-) adj. Of, relating to, or having the power of rescission.

re-script (rē'skrīpt') n. 1. a. The act of rewriting. b. Something that has been rewritten. 2. A formal decree or edict. 3. Roman Catholic Church. A response from the pope or another ecclesiastical superior to a question regarding discipline or doctrine. 4. A reply from a Roman emperor to a magistrate's query about a point of law. [Latin rescriptum, from neuter past participle of rescribere, to write back: re-, re- + scribere, to write; see skribh- in Appendix.]

res-cue (rēs'kyōō) v. tr. res-cued, res-cu-ing, res-cues. 1. To set free, as from danger or imprisonment; save. See Synonyms at save¹. 2. Law. To take from legal custody by force. — n. 1. An act of rescuing; a deliverance. 2. Law. Removal from legal custody by force. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a rescue team; a rescue mission. [Middle English rescouen, from Old French rescourre: re-, re- + escourre, to shake (from Latin escutere: ex-, ex- + quaterere, to shake); see kwēt- in Appendix.] — res/cu-a-ble adj. — res/cu-er n.

rescue grass (rēs'kyōō grās) n. A tall South American grass (Bromus unioloides) cultivated in warm regions for hay. [Probably alteration of FESCUE.]

re-search (rī-sūrč', rē'sūrč') n. Abbr. res. 1. Scholarly or scientific investigation or inquiry. See Synonyms at inquiry. 2. Close, careful study. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a research grant; research assistants. — v. re-searched, re-search-ing, re-search-es. — v. intr. To engage in or perform research. — v. tr. 1. To study (something) thoroughly so as to present in a detailed, accurate manner: researching the effects of acid rain. 2. To do research for: carefully researched the historical novel. [Obsolete French recherche, from rechercher, to search closely, from Old French : re-, re- + cerchier, to search; see SEARCH.] —re·search/a·ble adj. —re·search/er, re·search/ist n.

USAGE NOTE: Some critics have objected to the use of research as a transitive verb, but the usage has ample historical precedent and is common in reputable writing. In the most recent survey 81 percent of the Usage Panel accepted the sentence He spent a week at a funeral home researching mortuary procedures for his new novel, and 91 percent accepted The chapters on the internment are both readable and well researched.

re·search-in-ten-sive (rĭ-sûrch'ĭn-tĕn'sĭv, rĕ'sûrch-) adj. Having or requiring a relatively large expenditure on research and development in comparison to capital and labor: the research-intensive field of biotechnology.

re·seat (rĕ-sĕt') v. tr. re·seat-ed, re·seat-ing, re·seats. 1. To provide with a new or different seat. 2. To fit (a valve, for example) in a new seating.

ré·seau or re·seau (rā-zō', rĭ-) n. pl. ré·seaus or ré·seaux (-zōz', -zō'). 1. A net or mesh foundation for lace. 2. Astronomy. A reference grid of fine lines forming uniform squares on a photographic plate or print, used to aid in measurement. 3. A mosaic screen of fine lines of three colors, used in color photography. [French, from Old French reseuil, diminutive of raiz, net, from Latin rēte.]

re·sect (rĭ-sĕkt') v. tr. re·sect-ed, re·sect-ing, re·sects. To perform a resection on. [Latin resecāre, resect-, to cut back : re-, re- + secāre, to cut; see sek- in Appendix.] —re·sect/a·bil/i·ty n. —re·sect/a·ble adj.

re·sec-tion (rĭ-sĕk'shən) n. Surgical removal of part of an organ or a structure.

re·sec-to·scope (rĭ-sĕk'tə-skōp') n. A surgical instrument for performing a resection without an opening or incision other than that made by the instrument.

re·se·da (rĭ-sĕ'də, -sĕd'ə) n. 1. Any of various Mediterranean plants of the genus Reseda, including the mignonette, having densely flowered terminal racemes and divided petals. 2. Color. A grayish or dark green to yellow green or light olive. [New Latin Resēda, genus name, from Latin resēda, a kind of plant used to reduce tumors.] —re·se'da adj.

re·seg-re-ga-tion (rĕ-sĕg'rĭ-gā'shən) n. Renewal of segregation, as in a school system, after a period of desegregation.

re·sem·blance (rĭ-zĕm'bləns) n. 1. The state or quality of resembling, especially similarity in appearance or in external or superficial details. See Synonyms at likeness. 2. Something that resembles another.

re·sem·ble (rĭ-zĕm'bəl) v. tr. re·sem·bled, re·sem·bling, re·sem·bles. To exhibit similarity or likeness to. [Middle English resemblen, from Old French resembler : re-, re- + sembler, to appear (from Latin simulāre, to imitate, from similis, like); see sem-¹ in Appendix.] —re-sem'bler n.

re-sent (rĭ-zĕnt') v. tr. re-sent-ed, re-sent-ing, re-sents. To feel indignantly aggrieved at. [French ressentir, to be angry, from Old French resentir, to feel strongly : re-, re- + sentir, to feel (from Latin sentĭre); see sent- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: When we read the statement “Should we not be monstrously ingratefull if we did not deeply resent such kindness?” (from the Sermons of Isaac Barrow, written before 1677), we may be pardoned for momentarily thinking we are in never-never land. For a time ranging roughly from the last part of the 17th century to the second half of the 18th, the word resent did refer to gratefulness and appreciation as well as injury and insult. Resent has also been used in other senses that seem strange to us, such as “to feel pain” or “to perceive by smell.” The thread that ties the senses together is the notion of feeling or perceiving. The Old French source of our word, resentir, “to feel strongly,” is made up of the prefix re-, acting in this case as an intensive, and sentir, “to feel or perceive.” There is much that one can feel, but at least for now this word has narrowed its focus to a feeling of indignation.

re-sent·ful (rĭ-zĕnt'fəl) adj. Full of, characterized by, or inclined to feel indignant ill will. —re-sent'ful-ly adv. —re-sent'ful-ness n.

re-sent·ment (rĭ-zĕnt'mənt) n. Indignation or ill will felt as a result of a real or imagined grievance. See Synonyms at anger.

re-ser·pine (rĭ-sŭr'pĕn', -pĭn, rĕs'ər-pĭn, -pĕn', rĕz'-) n. A white to yellowish powder, C₃₃H₄₀N₂O₉, isolated from the roots of certain species of rauwolfia and used as a sedative and an antihypertensive. [German Reserpin, from alteration of New Latin Rauwolfia serpentina, species of snakeroot : RAUWOLFIA + Late Latin serpentina, feminine of serpentinus, serpentine; see SERPENTINE.]

res·er·va·tion (rĕz'ər-vā'shən) n. Abbr. res. 1. The act of reserving; a keeping back or withholding. 2. Something that is kept back or withheld. 3. A limiting qualification, condition, or exception: has reservations about the proposal. 4. A tract of land set apart by the federal government for a special purpose, especially one for the use of a Native American people. 5. a. An arrangement by which accommodations are secured in advance, as in a hotel or on an airplane. b. The accommodations so secured. c. The record or promise of such an arrangement. —res'er·va'tion-ist n.

re-serve (rĭ-zŭrv') v. tr. re-served, re-serv-ing, re-serves. 1. To keep back, as for future use or for a special purpose. 2. To set or cause to be set apart for a particular person or use. See Synonyms at book. 3. To keep or secure for oneself; retain: I reserve the right to disagree. See Synonyms at keep. — n. Abbr. res. 1. Something kept back or saved for future use or a special purpose. 2. The act of reserving. 3. The keeping of one's feelings, thoughts, or affairs to oneself.

4. Self-restraint in expression; reticence: "One feels it everywhere, a quality of reserve, something held back" (Rollene W. Saal). 5. Lack of enthusiasm; skeptical caution. 6. An amount of capital held back from investment in order to meet probable or possible demands. 7. A reservation of public land: a forest reserve.

8. An amount of a mineral, fossil fuel, or other resource known to exist in a particular location and to be exploitable: the discovery of large oil reserves. 9. Often reserves. a. A fighting force kept uncommitted until strategic need arises. b. The part of a country's armed forces not on active duty but subject to call in an emergency. — adj. Held in or forming a reserve: a reserve supply of food.

—idiom. in reserve. Kept back, set aside, or saved. [Middle English reserven, from Old French reserver, from Latin reservāre, to keep back : re-, re- + servāre, to keep; see ser¹ in Appendix.] —re-serv'a-ble adj. —re-serv'er n.

reserve bank (rĭ-zûrv' bāngk) n. 1. A central bank that holds the reserves of other banks. 2. One of the 12 main banks of the U.S. Federal Reserve System.

reserve currency (rĭ-zûrv' kûr'ən-sē) n. Currency kept in reserve by a government for the paying of international debts.

re-served (rĭ-zûrvd') adj. 1. Held in reserve; kept back or set aside. 2. Marked by self-restraint and reticence. See Synonyms at silent. —re-serv'ed-ly (-zûrv'vid-lē) adv. —re-serv'ed-ness n.

reserve price (rĭ-zûrv' prĭs) n. The price fixed and announced as the minimum at which property will be sold at an auction.

re-serv-ist (rĭ-zûrv'vist) n. A member of a military reserve.

res-er-voir (rĕz'ər-vwâr', -vwôr', -vôr') n. Abbr. res. 1. A natural or artificial pond or lake used for the storage and regulation of water. 2. A receptacle or chamber for storing a fluid. 3. An underground accumulation of petroleum or natural gas. 4. Anatomy. See cisterna (n., sense 1). 5. A large or extra supply; a reserve: a reservoir of gratitude. 6. Medicine. An organism or a population that directly or indirectly transmits a pathogen while being virtually immune to its effects. [French réservoir, from réserver, to reserve, from Old French reserver. See RESERVE.]

re-set (rĕ-sĕt') v. tr. re-set, re-set-ting, re-sets. 1. To set again: reset a broken bone. 2. To change the reading of: reset a clock. — n. (rĕ'sĕt') 1. The act of setting again. 2. Something set again. —re-set'ta-ble adj. —re-set'ter n.

res ges-tae (rās' gĕs'tī', rĕz' jĕs'tē) pl.n. 1. Things done; deeds. 2. Law. The facts that are admissible in evidence as the surrounding circumstances of the event to be proved. [Latin rēs gestae : rēs, pl. of rēs, thing + gestae, feminine pl. past participle of gerere, to carry, show.]

resh (rĕsh) n. The 20th letter of the Hebrew alphabet. [Aramaic rēš, head.]

re-shape (rē-shāp′) v. tr. re-shaped, re-shap·ing, re-shapes. To shape, form, or organize again or anew: “media consultants whose TV ads reshape candidates’ images to suit ephemeral public tastes” (New Republic). —re-shap′er n.

Resht (rēsht) See Rasht.

re-shuf·fle (rē-shūf′əl) v. tr. re-shuf·fled, re-shuf·fling, re-shuf·fles. 1. To shuffle again: reshuffle cards. 2. To arrange or organize anew: The president reshuffled the advisory committee. —re-shuf′fle n.

re-sid (rī-zīd′) n. Informal. Residual oil.

re-side (rī-zīd′) v. intr. re-sid·ed, re-sid·ing, re-sides. 1. To live in a place permanently or for an extended period. 2. To be inherently present; exist: the potential energy that resides in flowing water. 3. To be vested, as a power or right: The authority of governance resided in the monarchy. [Middle English residen, from Old French resider, from Latin residēre, to remain behind, reside : re-, re- + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.] —re-sid′er n.

res·i·dence (rēz′i-dəns, -dəns′) n. Abbr. res. 1. The place in which one lives; a dwelling. 2. The act or a period of residing in a place. 3. A medical residency. 4. The official home or location of a corporation. —idiom. in residence. Committed to live and work in a specific place, often for a certain length of time: an artist in residence at a college.

res·i·den·cy (rēz′i-dən-sē, -dən′-) n. pl. res·i·den·cies. 1. The period during which a physician receives specialized clinical training. 2. a. The house of a colonial resident. b. The sphere of authority of a colonial resident. 3. Residence.

res·i·dent (rēz′i-dənt, -dənt′) n. Abbr. res. 1. A physician serving a period of residency. 2. One who resides in a particular place permanently or for an extended period, as: a. A diplomatic official residing in a foreign seat of government. b. A colonial official acting as adviser to the ruler of a protected state, often having quasi-gubernatorial powers. c. A member of an intelligence-gathering or nonuniformed law enforcement agency who resides and oversees operations in a certain locale: the KGB resident in New York City; the FBI resident in Boston. 3. A nonmigratory bird or other animal. — adj. 1. Dwelling in a particular place; residing: resident aliens. 2. Living somewhere in connection with duty or work. 3. Inherently present: resident anxieties. 4. Nonmigratory: resident fauna.

res·i·den·tial (rēz′i-dən′shəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or having residence: a residential college. 2. Of, suitable for, or limited to residences: residential zoning. —res′i·den′tial·ly adv.

res·i·den·ti·ar·y (rēz′i-dən′shē-ēr′ē, -shə-rē) adj. 1. Having a residence, especially an official one. 2. Involving or requiring official residence. — n. pl.

res·i·den·ti·ar·ies. 1. One who resides in a certain place; a resident. 2. A member of the clergy required to live in an official residence.

re-sid·u·a (rī-zij′ōō-ə) n. Plural of residuum.

re·sid·u·al (rĭ-zĭj'ōō-əl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a residue.

2. Remaining as a residue. — n. 1. The quantity left over at the end of a process; a remainder. 2. Often residuals. A payment made to a performer, writer, or director for each repeat showing of a recorded television show or commercial.

—re·sid'·u·al·ly adv.

residual oil (rĭ-zĭj'ōō-əl oil) n. The low-grade oil products that remain after the distillation of petroleum, used in adhesives, roofing compounds, and asphalt manufacture.

re·sid·u·ar·y (rĭ-zĭj'ōō-ēr'ē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or constituting a residue.

2. Law. Entitled to the residue of an estate.

res·i·due (rĕz'ĭ-dōō', -dyōō') n. 1. The remainder of something after removal of parts or a part. See Synonyms at remainder. 2. Matter remaining after completion of an abstractive chemical or physical process, such as evaporation, combustion, distillation, or filtration; residuum. 3. Law. The remainder of a testator's estate after all claims, debts, and bequests are satisfied. In this sense, also called residuum [Middle English, from Old French residu, from Latin residuum, neuter of residuus, remaining, from residēre, to remain behind. See RESIDE.]

re·sid·u·um (rĭ-zĭj'ōō-əm) n. pl. re·sid·u·a (-ōō-ə). 1. Something remaining after removal of a part; a residue. See Synonyms at remainder. 2. Law. See residue (n., sense 3). [Latin, residue. See RESIDUE.]

re·sign (rĭ-zĭn') v. re·signed, re·sign·ing, re·signs. — v. tr. 1. To submit (oneself) passively; accept as inevitable: I resigned myself to a long wait in line.

2. To give up (a position, for example), especially by formal notification. 3. To relinquish (a privilege, right, or claim). See Synonyms at relinquish. — v. intr. To give up one's job or office; quit, especially by formal notification: resign from a board of directors. [Middle English resignen, from Old French resigner, from Latin resignāre, to unseal : re-, re- + signāre, to seal (from signum, mark, seal); see sek^{w-1} in Appendix.] —re·sign'er n.

re·sign (rĕ-sĭn') v. tr. re--signed, re--sign·ing, re--signs. To sign again: re-signed the lease.

res·ig·na·tion (rĕz'ĭg-nā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of resigning.

2. An oral or written statement that one is resigning a position or an office.

3. Unresisting acceptance of something as inescapable; submission. See Synonyms at patience.

re·signed (rĭ-zĭnd') adj. Feeling or marked by resignation; acquiescent: "I like trees because they seem more resigned to the way they have to live than other things do" (Willa Cather). —re·sign'ed·ly (-zĭ'nĭd-lē) adv. —re·sign'ed·ness n.

re·sile (rĭ-zĭl') v. intr. re·siled, re·sil·ing, re·siles. 1. To spring back, especially to resume a former position or structure after being stretched or compressed.

2. To draw back; recoil. [Obsolete French resilir, from Latin resilire, to leap back : re-, re- + salire, to leap; see sel- in Appendix.]

re-sil-i-ence (rĭ-zĭl'yəns) n. 1. The ability to recover quickly from illness, change, or misfortune; buoyancy. 2. The property of a material that enables it to resume its original shape or position after being bent, stretched, or compressed; elasticity.

re-sil-i-en-cy (rĭ-zĭl'yən-sē) n. Resilience.

re-sil-i-ent (rĭ-zĭl'yənt) adj. 1. Marked by the ability to recover readily, as from misfortune. 2. Capable of returning to an original shape or position, as after having been compressed. See Synonyms at flexible. [Latin resiliēns, resilient- present participle of resilīre, to leap back. See RESILE.] —re-sil'i-ent-ly adv.

res-i-lin (rĕz'ə-lĭn) n. An elastic substance consisting of cross-linked protein chains, found in the cuticles of many insects. [RESIL(E) + -IN.]

res-in (rĕz'in) n. 1. Any of numerous clear to translucent yellow or brown, solid or semisolid, viscous substances of plant origin, such as copal, rosin, and amber, used principally in lacquers, varnishes, inks, adhesives, synthetic plastics, and pharmaceuticals. 2. Any of numerous physically similar polymerized synthetics or chemically modified natural resins including thermoplastic materials such as polyvinyl, polystyrene, and polyethylene and thermosetting materials such as polyesters, epoxies, and silicones that are used with fillers, stabilizers, pigments, and other components to form plastics. — v. tr. res-in-ed, res-in-ing, res-ines. To treat or rub with resin. [Middle English, from Old French resine, from Latin rēsīna, from Greek dialectal rhēsina*, variant of Greek rhētīnē.] —res'in-ous (rĕz'ə-nəs) adj.

res-in-ate (rĕz'ə-nāt') v. tr. res-in-at-ed, res-in-at-ing, res-in-ates. To impregnate, permeate, or flavor with resin.

resin canal (rĕz'in kə-nāl') n. An intercellular tube lined with resin-secreting cells, found in the wood and leaves of many gymnosperms. Also called resin duct res-in-if-er-ous (rĕz'ə-nĭf'ər-əs) adj. Yielding resin.

res-in-oid (rĕz'ə-noid') adj. Relating to, resembling, or containing resin. — n. A synthetic resin, especially a thermosetting resin.

re-sist (rĭ-zĭst') v. re-sist-ed, re-sist-ing, re-sists. — v. tr. 1. To strive to fend off or offset the actions, effects, or force of. 2. To remain firm against the actions, effects, or force of; withstand: a bacterium that resisted the antibiotic. 3. To keep from giving in to or enjoying. — v. intr. To offer resistance. See Synonyms at oppose. — n. A substance that can cover and protect a surface, as from corrosion. [Middle English resisten, from Old French resister, from Latin resistere: re-, re- + sistere, to place; see stā- in Appendix.] —re-sist'er n.

re-sis-tance (rĭ-zĭs'təns) n. 1. The act or an instance of resisting or the capacity to resist. 2. A force that tends to oppose or retard motion. 3. Often Resis-tance. An underground organization engaged in a struggle for national liberation in a country under military or totalitarian occupation. 4. Psychology. A process in which the ego opposes the conscious recall of unpleasant experiences.

5. Biology. a. The capacity of an organism to defend itself against a disease.

b. The capacity of an organism or a tissue to withstand the effects of a harmful environmental agent. 6. Abbr. r, R Electricity. The opposition of a body or substance to current passing through it, resulting in a change of electrical energy into heat or another form of energy. —re-sis'tant adj.

resistance transfer factor (rĭ-zĭs'təns trāns-fūr' fāk'tər) n. R factor.

Re-sis·ten·cia (rēs'ĭ-stĕn'sē-ə, rĕ'sēs-tĕn'syā) A city of northeast Argentina on the Paraná River opposite Corrientes. It is a major trade and shipping center. Population, 220,104.

re-sist·i·ble (rĭ-zĭs'tə-bəl) adj. Possible to resist: resistible impulses.

—re-sist'i·bil'i·ty n. —re-sist'i·bly adv.

re-sis·tive (rĭ-zĭs'tĭv) adj. Of, tending toward, or marked by resistance: a person resistive to change. —re-sis'tive·ly adv. —re-sis'tive·ness n.

re-sis·tiv·i·ty (rĕ'zĭs-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. pl. re-sis-tiv·i·ties. 1. The capacity for or tendency toward resistance. 2. Electricity. The resistance per unit length of a substance with uniform cross section.

re-sist·less (rĭ-zĭst'lĭs) adj. 1. Impossible to resist; irresistible: resistless impulses. 2. Powerless to resist; unresisting: resistless hostages. —re-sist/less·ly adv. —re-sist/less·ness n.

re-sis·tor (rĭ-zĭs'tər) n. A device used to control current in an electric circuit by providing resistance.

Re-și·ta (rĕ'shē-tsā') A city of western Romania in the western Transylvanian Alps west-northwest of Bucharest. It has an important iron and steel industry. Population, 101,902.

res ju·di·ca·ta (rĕz' jōō'dĭ-kā'tə, rās') also res ad·ju·di·ca·ta (ə-jōō'-) n. Law. An adjudicated precedent. [Latin rēs iūdicāta, thing decided : rēs, thing + iūdicāta, feminine past participle of iūdicāre, to judge.]

re·sole (rĕ-sōl') v. tr. re-soled, re-sol·ing, re·soles. To put a new sole on (a shoe).

re·sol·u·ble (rĭ-zōl'γə-bəl) adj. Possible to resolve; resolvable: resoluble differences in opinion. [Late Latin resolūbilis, from Latin resolvere, to resolve. See RESOLVE.] —re-sol'u·bil'i·ty, re-sol'u·ble·ness n.

res·o·lute (rĕz'ə-lōōt') adj. Firm or determined; unwavering. [Middle English, dissolved, dissolute, from Latin resolūtus, relaxed, past participle of resolvere, to relax, untie. See RESOLVE.] —res'o·lute·ly adv. —res'o·lute·ness n.

res·o·lu·tion (rĕz'ə-lōō'shən) n. Abbr. res. 1. The state or quality of being resolute; firm determination. 2. A resolving to do something. 3. A course of action determined or decided on. 4. A formal statement of a decision or expression of opinion put before or adopted by an assembly such as the U.S. Congress.

5. Chemistry & Physics. The act or process of separating or reducing something into its constituent parts: the prismatic resolution of sunlight into its spectral colors.

6. The fineness of detail that can be distinguished in an image, as on a video display terminal. 7. Medicine. The subsiding or termination of an abnormal condition, such as a fever or an inflammation. 8. Law. A court decision. 9. a. An explanation, as of a problem or puzzle; a solution. b. The part of a literary work in which the complications of the plot are resolved or simplified. 10. Music. a. The progression of a dissonant tone or chord to a consonant tone or chord. b. The tone or chord to which such a progression is made. 11. The substitution of one metrical unit for another, especially the substitution of two short syllables for one long syllable in quantitative verse.

re-solve (rĭ-zōlv') v. re-solved, re-solv-ing, re-solves. — v. tr. 1. To make a firm decision about. 2. To cause (a person) to reach a decision. See Synonyms at decide. 3. To decide or express by formal vote. 4. To separate (something) into constituent parts. See Synonyms at analyze. 5. To change or convert: My resentment resolved itself into resignation. 6. To find a solution to; solve. See Synonyms at solve. 7. To remove or dispel (doubts). 8. To bring to a usually successful conclusion: resolve a conflict. 9. Medicine. To cause reduction of (an inflammation, for example). 10. Music. To cause (a tone or chord) to progress from dissonance to consonance. 11. Chemistry. To separate (an optically inactive compound or mixture) into its optically active constituents. 12. To render parts of (an image) visible and distinct. 13. Mathematics. To separate (a vector, for example) into coordinate components. 14. To melt or dissolve (something). — v. intr. 1. To reach a decision or make a determination: resolve on a course of action. 2. To become separated or reduced to constituents. 3. Music. To undergo resolution. — n. 1. Firmness of purpose; resolution. 2. A determination or decision; a fixed purpose. 3. A formal resolution made by a deliberative body. [Middle English resolven, to dissolve, from Old French resolver, from Latin resolvere, to untie : re-, re- + solvere, to untie; see leu- in Appendix.]

—re-solv/a-bil/i-ty, re-solv/a-ble-ness n. —re-solv/a-ble adj.

—re-solv/ed-ly (-zōl'vĭd-lē) adv. —re-solv'er n.

re-sol-vent (rĭ-zōl'vənt) adj. Causing or able to cause separation into constituents; solvent. — n. A resolvent substance, especially a medicine that reduces inflammation or swelling.

res-o-nance (rĕz'ə-nəns) n. 1. The quality or condition of being resonant: “It is home and family that give resonance... to life” (George Gilder). “Israel, gateway to Mecca, is of course a land of religious resonance and geopolitical significance” (James Wolcott). 2. Physics. The increase in amplitude of oscillation of an electric or mechanical system exposed to a periodic force whose frequency is equal or very close to the natural undamped frequency of the system. 3. Acoustics. Intensification and prolongation of sound, especially of a musical tone, produced by sympathetic vibration. 4. Linguistics. Intensification of vocal tones during articulation, as by the air cavities of the mouth and nasal passages. 5. Medicine. The sound produced by diagnostic percussion of the normal chest. 6. Chemistry. The property of a compound having simultaneously the characteristics of two or more structural forms that differ only in the distribution of electrons. Such compounds are highly stable and cannot be properly represented by a single structural formula.

res·o·nant (rĕz'ə-nənt) adj. 1. a. Strong and deep in tone; resounding: a resonant voice. b. Continuing to sound in the ears or memory; echoing: resonant words of exhortation. c. Having a prolonged, subtle, or stimulating effect beyond the initial impact: "While her husband... travels far less, they find her life on the run a resonant stress factor in her home" (Robert Berry). 2. Producing or exhibiting resonance: resonant frequency excitation. 3. Resulting from or as if from resonance: resonant amplification. [Latin resonāns, resonant- present participle of resonāre, to resound. See RESOUND.] —res'·o·nant·ly adv.

resonant circuit (rĕz'ə-nənt sŭr'kĭt) n. An electric circuit with inductance and capacitance chosen to allow the greatest flow of current at a certain frequency.

res·o·nate (rĕz'ə-nāt') v. res·o·nat·ed, res·o·nat·ing, res·o·nates. — v. intr. 1. To exhibit or produce resonance or resonant effects. 2. To resound: "It is a demonology [that] seems to resonate among secular and religious voters alike" (Tamar Jacoby). — v. tr. To cause to resound. [Latin resonāre, resonāt-. See RESOUND.] —res'·o·na'tion n.

res·o·na·tor (rĕz'ə-nā'tər) n. 1. A resonating system. 2. A hollow chamber or cavity with dimensions chosen to permit internal resonant oscillation of electromagnetic or acoustical waves of specific frequencies. 3. A resonant circuit.

re·sorb (rĕ-sôrb', -zôrb') v. re·sorbed, re·sorb·ing, re·sorbs. — v. tr. 1. To absorb again. 2. Biology. To dissolve and assimilate (bone tissue, for example). — v. intr. To undergo resorption. [Latin resorbĕre, to suck back : re-, re- + sorbĕre, to suck up.]

res·or·cin·ol (rĭ-zôr'sə-nôl', -nôl', -nôl') also res·or·cin (rĭ-zôr'sĭn) n. A white crystalline compound, C₆H₄(OH)₂, used to treat certain skin diseases and in dyes, resin adhesives, and pharmaceuticals. [RES(IN) + ORC(HIL) + -IN + -OL'.]

re·sorp·tion (rĕ-sôrp'shən, -zôrp'-) n. The act or process of resorbing.

re·sort (rĭ-zôrt') v. intr. re·sort·ed, re·sort·ing, re·sorts. 1. To have recourse: The government resorted to censorship of the press. 2. To go customarily or frequently; repair. — n. 1. A place frequented by people for relaxation or recreation: a tropical resort. 2. A customary or frequent going or gathering: a popular place of resort. 3. The act of turning to for aid or relief; recourse. 4. One turned to for aid or relief. [Middle English resorten, to return, from Old French resortir, to go out again : re-, re- + sortir, to go out.]

SYNONYMS: resort, apply, go, refer, turn. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to repair to or fall back on someone or something in time of need”: never resorted to corporal punishment; apply to a bank for a loan; went to her parents for comfort; referred to his notes to refresh his memory; has no friends to turn to. See also Synonyms at makeshift re-sort (rē-sôrt′) v. tr. re-sort-ed, re-sort-ing, re-sorts. To sort again.

re-sort-er (rī-zôrt′tər) n. One who frequents resorts for vacations or recreation.

re-sound (rī-zound′) v. re-sound-ed, re-sound-ing, re-sounds. — v. intr.

1. To be filled with sound; reverberate: The school yard resounded with the laughter of children. 2. To make a loud, long, or reverberating sound: Rolls of thunder resounded in the valley. 3. To sound loudly; ring. 4. To become famous, celebrated, or extolled: Picasso—a name to resound for ages in art history. — v. tr.

1. To send back (sound). See Synonyms at echo. 2. To utter or emit loudly.

3. To celebrate or praise, as in verse or song. [Alteration (influenced by SOUND¹), of Middle English resounen, from Old French resoner, from Latin resonāre: re-, re- + sonāre, to sound; see swen- in Appendix.] — re-sound′ing adj.

—re-sound′ing-ly adv.

re-source (rē’sôrs′, -sôrs′, -zôrs′, -zôrs′, rī-sôrs′, -sôrs′, -zôrs′, -zôrs′) n.

1. Something that can be used for support or help: The local library is a valuable resource. 2. Often resources. An available supply that can be drawn on when needed. 3. The ability to deal with a difficult or troublesome situation effectively; initiative: a person of resource. 4. Often resources. Means that can be used to cope with a difficult situation: needed all my intellectual resources for the exam. 5. a. resources. The total means available for economic and political development, such as mineral wealth, labor force, and armaments.

b. resources. The total means available to a company for increasing production or profit, including plant, labor, and raw material; assets. c. Such means considered individually. [Obsolete French, from Old French, from feminine past participle of resourdre, to rise again, from Latin resurgere: re-, re- + surgere, to rise; see SURGE.]

re-source-ful (rī-sôrs′fəl, -sôrs′-, -zôrs′-, -zôrs′-) adj. Able to act effectively or imaginatively, especially in difficult situations. — re-source′ful-ly adv.

—re-source′ful-ness n.

resp. abbr. 1. Respective; respectively. 2. Respiration.

re-spect (rī-spĕkt′) v. tr. re-spect-ed, re-spect-ing, re-spects. 1. To feel or show deferential regard for; esteem. 2. To avoid violation of or interference with:

respect the speed limit. 3. To relate or refer to; concern. — n. 1. A feeling of appreciative, often deferential regard; esteem. See Synonyms at regard. 2. The state of being regarded with honor or esteem. 3. Willingness to show consideration or appreciation. 4. respects. Polite expressions of consideration or deference: pay one’s respects. 5. A particular aspect, feature, or detail: In many respects this is an important decision. 6. Usage Problem. Relation; reference. See Usage Note at regard. [From Middle English, regard, from Old French, from Latin respectus, from past participle of respicere, to look back at, regard : re-, re- + specere, to look at; see spek- in Appendix.] —re-spect'er n.

re-spect-a-bil-i-ty (rī-spĕk'tə-bīl'i-tē) n. The quality, state, or characteristic of being respectable.

re-spect-a-ble (rī-spĕk'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Meriting respect or esteem; worthy.

2. Of or appropriate to good or proper behavior or conventional conduct. 3. Of moderately good quality: respectable work. 4. Considerable in amount, number, or size: a respectable sum of money. 5. Acceptable in appearance; presentable: a respectable hat. —re-spect'a-ble-ness n. —re-spect'a-bly adv.

re-spect-ful (rī-spĕkt'fəl) adj. Showing or marked by proper respect.

—re-spect'ful-ly adv. —re-spect'ful-ness n.

re-spect-ing (rī-spĕk'tɪŋ) prep. Usage Problem. With respect to; concerning.

See Usage Note at regard.

re-spec-tive (rī-spĕk'tiv) adj. Abbr. resp. Relating to two or more persons or things regarded individually; particular: successful in their respective fields.

—re-spec'tive-ness n.

re-spec-tive-ly (rī-spĕk'tiv-lē) adv. Abbr. resp. Singly in the order designated or mentioned: I'm referring to each of you respectively.

re-spell (rē-spĕl') v. tr. re-spelled or re-spelt (-spĕlt'), re-spell-ing, re-spells. To spell again or in a new way, especially by using a phonetic alphabet.

Re-spi-ghi (rĕ-spĕ'gĕ), Ottorino. 1879-1936. Italian composer known for his symphonic poems, such as The Fountains of Rome (1917) and Roman Festivals (1929).

res-pi-ra-ble (rĕs'pər-ə-bəl, rī-spīr'-) adj. 1. Fit for breathing: respirable air.

2. Capable of undergoing respiration: respirable organisms. —res'pi-ra-bil'i-ty n.

res-pi-ra-tion (rĕs'pə-rā'shən) n. Abbr. resp. 1. a. The act or process of inhaling and exhaling; breathing. b. The act or process by which an organism without lungs, such as a fish or plant, exchanges gases with its environment. 2. a. The oxidative process occurring within living cells by which the chemical energy of organic molecules is released in a series of metabolic steps involving the consumption of oxygen and the liberation of carbon dioxide and water. b. Any of various analogous metabolic processes by which certain organisms, such as fungi and anaerobic bacteria, obtain energy from organic molecules. —res'pi-ra-tion-al adj.

res-pi-ra-tor (rĕs'pə-rā'tər) n. 1. A device that supplies oxygen or a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide for breathing, used especially in artificial respiration. Also called inhalator

2. A screenlike device worn over the mouth or nose or both to protect the respiratory tract.

res·pi·ra·to·ry (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē, rĭ-spĭr'ə-) adj. Of, relating to, used in, or affecting respiration.

respiratory distress syndrome (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē dĭ-strĕs' sĭn'drôm') n.

A respiratory disease of newborn babies, especially premature babies, characterized by distressful breathing, cyanosis, and the formation of a glassy membrane over the alveoli of the lungs. Also called hyaline membrane disease respiratory enzyme (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē ĕn'zĭm) n. An enzyme, such as oxidase, that transfers electrons from its substrate to molecular oxygen during cellular respiration.

respiratory pigment (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē pĭg'mənt) n. Any of various colored conjugated proteins, such as hemoglobin, that occur in living organisms and function in oxygen transfer in cellular respiration.

respiratory quotient (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē kwō'shənt) n. Abbr. R.Q. The ratio of the volume of carbon dioxide released to the volume of oxygen consumed by a body tissue or an organism in a given period.

respiratory system (rĕs'pär-ə-tôr'ē sĭs'təm) n. The integrated system of organs involved in the intake and exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide between an organism and the environment.

re·spire (rĭ-spĭr') v. re·spired, re·spir·ing, re·spires. — v. intr. 1. To breathe in and out; inhale and exhale. 2. To undergo the metabolic process of respiration. 3. To breathe easily again, as after a period of exertion or trouble. — v. tr. To inhale and exhale (air); breathe. [Middle English respiren, to breathe again, from Latin respīrāre : re-, re- + spīrāre, to breathe.]

res·pi·rom·e·ter (rĕs'pə-rōm'ĭ-tər) n. An instrument for measuring the degree and nature of respiration. — res'pi-ro-met'ric (-rō-mĕt'rik) adj. — res'pi-rom'e-try n.

res·pite (rĕs'pĭt) n. 1. A usually short interval of rest or relief. See Synonyms at pause. 2. Law. Temporary suspension of a death sentence; a reprieve. — v. tr.

res·pit·ed, res·pit·ing, res·pites. To delay; postpone. [Middle English, from Old French respit, from Latin respectus, refuge, looking back. See RESPECT.]

re·splen·dent (rĭ-splĕn'dənt) adj. Splendid or dazzling in appearance; brilliant. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin resplendēns, resplendent-present participle of resplendĕre, to shine brightly : re-, re- + splendĕre, to shine.]

— re·splen'dence, re·splen'den·cy n. — re·splen'dent·ly adv.

re·spond (rĭ-spōnd') v. re·spond·ed, re·spond·ing, re·sponds. — v. intr.

1. To make a reply; answer. See Synonyms at answer. 2. To act in return or in answer. 3. To react positively or favorably: The patient has responded rapidly to the treatment. — v. tr. To give as a reply; answer. — n. Architecture. A pilaster supporting an arch. [Middle English responden, from Old French respondre, from Latin respondĕre : re-, re- + spondĕre, to promise; see spend- in Appendix.]

— re·spond'er n.

re·spon·dent (rĭ-spŏn/'dænt) adj. 1. Giving or given as an answer; responsive.

2. Law. Being a defendant. — n. 1. One who responds. 2. Law. A defendant, especially in a divorce or equity case. —re·spon/'dence, re·spon/'den·cy n.

re·sponse (rĭ-spŏns') n. 1. The act of responding. 2. A reply or an answer.

3. A reaction, as that of an organism or a mechanism, to a specific stimulus.

4. a. Abbr. R Ecclesiastical. Something that is spoken or sung by a congregation or choir in answer to the officiating minister or priest. b. A responsory. [Middle English respons, from Old French, from Latin respŏnsum, from neuter past participle of respondĕre, to respond. See RESPOND.]

re·spon·si·bil·i·ty (rĭ-spŏn/'sə-bĭl/'i-tē) n. pl. re·spon·si·bil·i·ties. 1. The state, quality, or fact of being responsible. See Synonyms at obligation.

2. Something for which one is responsible; a duty, an obligation, or a burden.

re·spon·si·ble (rĭ-spŏn/'sə-bəl) adj. 1. Liable to be required to give account, as of one's actions or of the discharge of a duty or trust. 2. Involving personal accountability or ability to act without guidance or superior authority: a responsible position within the company. 3. Being a source or cause. 4. Able to make moral or rational decisions on one's own and therefore answerable for one's behavior. 5. Able to be trusted or depended upon; reliable. 6. Based on or characterized by good judgment or sound thinking: responsible journalism. 7. Having the means to pay debts or fulfill obligations. 8. Required to render account; answerable: The cabinet is responsible to the parliament. [Obsolete French, corresponding to, from Latin respŏnsus, past participle of respondĕre, to respond. See RESPOND.] —re·spon/'si·ble·ness n. —re·spon/'si·bly adv.

SYNONYMS: responsible, answerable, liable, accountable, amenable. These adjectives share the meaning obliged to answer, as for one's actions, to an authority that may impose a penalty for failure. Responsible often implies the satisfactory performance of duties, the adequate discharge of obligations, or the trustworthy care for or disposition of possessions: "I am responsible for the ship's safety" (Robert Louis Stevenson). "The people had given him his command, and to the people alone he was responsible" (J.A. Froude). Answerable suggests a moral or legal responsibility subject to review by a higher authority: The court held the parents answerable for their minor child's acts of vandalism. Liable may refer to a legal obligation, as to pay damages, or to a responsibility to do something, as to perform jury duty, if called on: Wage earners are liable to income tax. During the war men between the ages of 18 and 35 were liable for military conscription. Accountable especially emphasizes the requirement to give an account of one's discharge of a responsibility entrusted to one: "The liberal philosophy holds that enduring governments must be accountable to someone beside themselves; that a government responsible only to its own conscience is not for long tolerable" (Walter Lippmann). Amenable implies the condition of being subject to the control of an authority and therefore the absence of complete autonomy: “The sovereign of this country is not amenable to any form of trial” (Letters of Junius). See also Synonyms at reliable USAGE NOTE: Some critics have maintained that responsible should not be used to describe things, since only persons can be held accountable. The application to things is justifiable, however, when responsible is used to mean “being the source or cause of.” In an earlier survey, a majority of the Usage Panel accepted the sentence Faulty construction was responsible for the crash. • In recent years, many people have objected to the use of the phrase claim responsibility with reference to the authors of terrorist acts, as in A small separatist group claimed responsibility for the explosion, in which 30 passengers were killed. It is true that the phrase is not entirely felicitous, inasmuch as it does not convey the speaker’s conviction that the action is deplorable. But alternatives such as admit or take the blame cannot be recommended either, since they would imply misleadingly that the instigators had themselves acknowledged that the action was wrongful.

re·spon·sive (rĭ-spŏn’sĭv) adj. 1. Answering or replying; responding.

2. Readily reacting to suggestions, influences, appeals, or efforts: a responsive student. 3. Containing or using responses: responsive reading; responsive liturgy.

—re·spon’sive·ly adv. —re·spon’sive·ness n.

re·spon·so·ry (rĭ-spŏn’sə-rĕ) n. pl. re·spon·so·ries. Ecclesiastical. A chant or an anthem recited or sung after a reading in a church service. [Middle English responsorie, from Late Latin respōnsōrium, from Latin respōnsus, past participle of respondēre, to respond. See RESPOND.] —re·spon·so’ri·al (-sŏr’ĕ-əl, -sŏr’-) adj.

res pub·li·ca (rĕz pŭb’lĭ-kə, rās pŏŏ’blĕ-kä’) n. pl. pub·li·cae (-kā, -kĭ) 1. A state, republic, or commonwealth. 2. The general public good or welfare. [Latin rēs pŭblica. See REPUBLIC.]

res·sen·ti·ment (rə-sän’tĕ-män’) n. A generalized feeling of resentment and often hostility harbored by one individual or group against another, especially chronically and with no means of direct expression. [French, resentment, from Old French ressentement, from resentir, to feel strongly. See RESENT.]

rest¹ (rĕst) n. 1. Cessation of work, exertion, or activity. 2. Peace, ease, or refreshment resulting from sleep or the cessation of an activity. 3. Sleep or quiet relaxation. 4. The repose of death: eternal rest. 5. Relief or freedom from disquiet or disturbance. 6. Mental or emotional tranquillity. 7. Termination or absence of motion. 8. Music. a. An interval of silence corresponding to one of the possible time values within a measure. b. The mark or symbol indicating such a pause and its length. 9. A short pause in a line of poetry; a caesura. 10. A device used as a support: a back rest. 11. Games. See bridge¹ (n., sense 7a). — v. rest·ed, rest·ing, rests. — v. intr. 1. To cease motion, work, or activity. 2. To lie down, especially to sleep. 3. To be at peace or ease; be tranquil. 4. To be, become, or remain temporarily still, quiet, or inactive: Let the issue rest here.

5. To be supported or based; lie, lean, or sit: The ladder rests firmly against the tree. 6. To be imposed or vested, as a responsibility or burden: The final decision rests with the chairperson. 7. To depend or rely: That argument rests on a false assumption. 8. To be located or be in a specified place: The original manuscript rests in the museum. 9. To be fixed or directed on something: “His brown eyes rested on her for a moment” (John le Carré). 10. To remain; linger. 11. Law. To cease voluntarily the presentation of evidence in a case: The defense rests. — v. tr. 1. To give rest or repose to: rested my eyes. 2. To place, lay, or lean for ease, support, or repose. 3. To base or ground: I rested my conclusion on that fact. 4. To fix or direct (the gaze, for example). 5. To bring to rest; halt. 6. Law. To cease voluntarily the introduction of evidence in (a case). — idioms. at rest. 1. a. Asleep. b. Dead. 2. Motionless; inactive. 3. Free from anxiety or distress. lay to rest (or put to rest). 4. To bury (a dead body); inter. 5. To settle (an issue, for example), especially so as to be free of it: The judge’s ruling put to rest the dispute between the neighbors. [Middle English, from Old English.] — rest’er n.

SYNONYMS: rest, relaxation, repose, leisure, ease, comfort. All of these nouns mean freedom or relief from labor, responsibility, or strain. Rest, the least specific, suggests mental or physical recuperation: Try to get a good night’s rest. “Absence of occupation is not rest” (William Cowper). Relaxation implies release from tension or fatigue: “We hold the period of youth sacred to education, and the period of maturity, when the physical forces begin to flag, equally sacred to ease and agreeable relaxation” (Edward Bellamy). Repose connotes rest and peace of mind: “when you’re lying awake with a dismal headache, and repose is tabooed by anxiety” (W.S. Gilbert). Leisure implies freedom from work or duty and latitude in choosing a pastime or an activity: “Do you know that conversation is one of the greatest pleasures in life? But it wants leisure” (W. Somerset Maugham). Ease connotes freedom from toil or worry, absence of constraint, and a relaxed frame of mind: “It is the interest of every man to live as much at his ease as he can” (Adam Smith). Comfort suggests ease, well-being, and contentment: “They knew luxury; they knew beggary; but they never knew comfort” (Macaulay).

rest² (rĕst) n. 1. The part that is left over after something has been removed; remainder. See Synonyms at remainder. 2. That or those remaining: The beginning was boring, but the rest was interesting. The rest are arriving later. — v. intr. rest·ed, rest·ing, rests. 1. To be or continue to be; remain: Rest assured that we will finish on time. 2. To remain or be left over. [Middle English, from Old French reste, from rester, to remain, from Latin restāre, to stay behind : re-, re- + stāre, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.]

rest³ (rĕst) n. A support for a lance on the side of the breastplate of medieval armor. [Middle English reste, short for areste, a stopping, holding, from Old French, from arester, to stop. See ARREST.]

rest area (rĕst âr'ĕ-ə) n. A designated area, usually along a major highway, where motorists can pause to relax. Also called rest stop re-start (rĕ-stärt') v. re-start-ed, re-start-ing, re-starts. — v. tr. To start again or anew: restarted the engine after it stalled. — v. intr. To begin operation again. — re/start' n. — re-start/a-ble adj.

re-state (rĕ-stāt') v. tr. re-stat-ed, re-stat-ing, re-states. To state again or in a new form. See Synonyms at repeat. — re-state/ment n.

res-tau-rant (rĕs'tər-ənt, -tə-ränt') n. A place where meals are served to the public. [French, from present participle of restaurer, to restore, from Old French restorer. See RESTORE.]

res-tau-ra-teur (rĕs'tər-ə-tûr') also res-tau-ran-teur (-tə-rän-tûr') n. The manager or owner of a restaurant. [French, from restaurer, to restore. See RESTAURANT.]

rest energy (rĕst ĕn'ər-jĕ) n. The energy equivalent of the rest mass of a body, equal to the rest mass multiplied by the speed of light squared.

rest-ful (rĕst'fəl) adj. 1. Affording, marked by, or suggesting rest; tranquil. See Synonyms at comfortable. 2. Being at rest; quiet. — rest/ful-ly adv. — rest-ful-ness n.

rest-har-row (rĕst'här'ō) n. Any of several Old World plants of the genus Ononis, having woody stems, axillary pink or purplish flowers, and trifoliate leaves with dentate leaflets. [Obsolete rest, to check (short for Middle English arosten); see ARREST + HARROW¹.]

rest home (rĕst hōm) n. An establishment where the elderly or frail are housed and cared for.

res-ti-form body (rĕs'tə-fōrm' bōd'ĕ) n. A large cordlike bundle of nerve fibers lying on either side of the medulla oblongata and connecting it with the cerebellum. [Latin restis, rope + -FORM.]

rest-ing (rĕs'tĭng) adj. 1. a. In a state of inactivity or rest. b. Dead. 2. Botany. Dormant. Used especially of spores that germinate after a prolonged period.

resting cell (rĕs'tĭng sĕl) n. A cell that is not actively in the process of dividing.

res-ti-tute (rĕs'tĭ-tōōt', -tyōōt') v. res-ti-tut-ed, res-ti-tut-ing, res-ti-tutes. — v. tr. 1. To bring back to a former condition; restore. 2. To refund. — v. intr. To undergo restitution. [Latin restituere, restitūt- : re-, re- + statuere, to set up (from stāre, to stand); see stā- in Appendix.]

res-ti-tu-tion (rĕs'tĭ-tōō'shən, -tyōō'-) n. 1. The act of restoring to the rightful owner something that has been taken away, lost, or surrendered. See Synonyms at reparation. 2. The act of making good or compensating for loss, damage, or injury; indemnification. 3. A return to or restoration of a previous state or position.

res·tive (rēs'tiv) adj. 1. Uneasily impatient under restriction, opposition, criticism, or delay. 2. Resisting control; difficult to control. 3. Refusing to move. Used of a horse or other animal. [Middle English restif, stationary, from Old French, from rester, to remain, from Latin restāre, to keep back : re-, re- + stāre, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.] —res'tive-ly adv. —res'tive-ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Restive is properly applied to the impatience or uneasiness induced by external coercion or restriction and is not a general synonym for restless: The government has done nothing to ease export restrictions, and domestic manufacturers are growing restive (not restless). The atmosphere in the office was congenial, but after five years she began to grow restless (not restive).

rest·less (rĕst'lis) adj. 1. Marked by a lack of quiet, repose, or rest: spent a restless night. 2. Not able to rest, relax, or be still: a restless child. 3. Never still or motionless: the restless sea. See Usage Note at restive. —rest'less-ly adv. —rest'less-ness n.

rest mass (rĕst mās) n. The physical mass of a body when it is regarded as being at rest.

re·stock (rē-stōk') v. tr. re-stocked, re-stock-ing, re-stocks. To furnish new stock for; stock again.

Res·ton (rēs'tən) A community of northeast Virginia, a suburb of the Washington, D.C.-Alexandria, Virginia, area. Population, 48,556.

Res·ton (rēs'tən), James Barrett. Known as "Scotty." 1909-1995. Scottish-born American journalist. Associated with the New York Times since 1939, he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1945 and in 1957 for his reporting.

res·to·ra·tion (rēs'tə-rā'shən) n. 1. a. An act of restoring: damage too great for restoration. b. An instance of restoring or of being restored: Restoration of the sculpture was expensive. c. The state of being restored. 2. Something, such as a renovated building, that has been restored. 3. Restoration. a. The return of a constitutional monarchy to Great Britain in 1660 under Charles II. b. The period between the crowning of Charles II and the Revolution of 1688.

re·stor·a·tive (rĭ-stōr'ə-tiv, -stōr'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to restoration. 2. Tending or having the power to restore: a restorative tonic. — n.

1. Something that restores. 2. A medicine or other agent that helps to restore health, strength, or consciousness. —re-stor'a-tive-ly adv.

—re-stor'a-tive-ness n.

re·store (rĭ-stōr', -stōr') v. tr. re-stored, re-stor-ing, re-stores. 1. To bring back into existence or use; reestablish: restore law and order. 2. To bring back to an original condition: restore a building. See Synonyms at revive. 3. To put (someone) back in a former position: restore the emperor to the throne. 4. To make restitution of; give back: restore the stolen funds. [Middle English restoren, from Old French restorer, from Latin restaurāre. See stā- in Appendix.]

—re·stor'er n.

re·strain (rĭ-strān') v. tr. re·strained, re·strain·ing, re·strains. 1. a. To hold back or keep in check; control: couldn't restrain the tears. b. To hold (a person) back; prevent: restrained them from going. 2. To deprive of freedom or liberty. 3. To limit or restrict. [Middle English restreinen, from Old French restraintre, restreign-, from Latin restringere, to bind back. See RESTRICT.] —re·strain'a·ble adj. —re·strain'ed·ly (-strā'nĭd-lē) adv. —re·strain'er n.

SYNONYMS: restrain, curb, check, bridle, inhibit. These verbs are compared as they mean to hold back or keep under control. Restrain implies restriction or limitation, as on one's freedom of action: "a wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another" (Thomas Jefferson). He had difficulty restraining his curiosity. To curb is to restrain as if with reins: "You might curb your magnanimity" (John Keats). Check implies arresting or stopping, often suddenly or forcibly: "a light to guide, a rod/To check the erring" (William Wordsworth). To bridle is often to hold in or govern one's emotions or passions: She tried with all her might to bridle her resentment. Inhibit usually connotes a check, either self-imposed or involuntary, on one's actions, desires, thoughts, or emotions: For the compliant child parental disapproval is as strong an inhibiting force as the threat of punishment.

re·straint (rĭ-strānt') n. 1. The act of restraining or the condition of being restrained. 2. Loss or abridgment of freedom. 3. An influence that inhibits or restrains; a limitation. 4. An instrument or a means of restraining. 5. Control or repression of feelings; constraint. [Middle English restreinte, from Old French restreinte, from feminine past participle of restraintre, to restrain. See RESTRAIN.] restraint of trade (rĭ-strānt' ūv trād) n. pl. restraints of trade. An action or a condition that tends to prevent free competition in business, as the creation of a monopoly or the limiting of a market.

re·strict (rĭ-strĭkt') v. tr. re·strict·ed, re·strict·ing, re·stricts. To keep or confine within limits. See Synonyms at limit. [Latin restringere, restrict- : re-, re- + stringere, to draw tight; see streig- in Appendix.] —re·stric'tor, re·strict'er n.

re·strict·ed (rĭ-strĭkt'ĭd) adj. 1. Kept within certain limits; limited: on a restricted diet. 2. Excluding or unavailable to certain groups: a restricted area.

3. Of, relating to, or being information available only to authorized persons.

—re·strict'ed·ly adv.

re·stric·tion (rĭ-strĭk'tshən) n. 1. a. The act of restricting. b. The state of being restricted. 2. Something that restricts; a regulation or limitation.

restriction enzyme (rĭ-strĭk'shən ěn'zĭm) n. Any of a group of enzymes that cleave DNA at specific sites to produce discrete fragments, used especially in gene-splicing. Also called restriction endonuclease re·stric·tion·ism (rĭ-strĭk'shə-nĭz'əm) n. A viewpoint or policy approving the imposing of restrictions, as on immigration or trade. —re·stric'tion·ist n.

re·stric·tive (rĭ-strĭk'tĭv) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to restriction. b. Tending or serving to restrict; limiting. 2. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a subordinate clause or phrase that identifies the noun, phrase, or clause it modifies and limits or restricts its meaning, as the clause who live in glass houses in People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. —re·stric'tive·ly adv. —re·stric'tive·ness n.

re·strike (rĕ'strĭk') n. A coin or medal freshly minted from an original die at a time after the first issue. —re'strike' v.

rest·room (rĕst'rōōm', -rōōm') n. A room equipped with toilets and lavatories for public use.

re·struc·ture (rĕ-strŭk'chər) v. re·struc·tured, re·struc·tur·ing, re·struc·tures. — v. tr. 1. To alter the makeup or pattern of: "serious efforts to restructure third world debt" (Felix Rohatyn). 2. To make a basic change in (an organization or a system, for example). — v. intr. To alter the structure of something.

rest stop (rĕst stɔp) n. See rest area.

re·sult (rĭ-zŭlt') v. intr. re·sult·ed, re·sult·ing, re·sults. 1. To come about as a consequence. See Synonyms at follow. 2. To end in a particular way: Their profligate lifestyle resulted in bankruptcy. — n. 1. a. The consequence of a particular action, operation, or course; an outcome. See Synonyms at effect. b. Often results. A favorable or concrete outcome or effect: started studying and got immediate results. 2. Mathematics. The quantity or expression obtained by calculation. [Middle English resulten, from Medieval Latin resultāre, from Latin, to leap back, frequentative of resilire: re-, re- + salire, to leap; see sel- in Appendix.] —re·sult'ful adj. —re·sult'ful·ness n. —re·sult'less adj.

re·sul·tant (rĭ-zŭl'tənt) adj. Issuing or following as a consequence or result. — n. 1. Something that results; an outcome. 2. Mathematics. A single vector that is the equivalent of a set of vectors. —re·sul'tant·ly adv.

re·sume (rĭ-zōōm') v. re·sumed, re·sum·ing, re·sumes. — v. tr. 1. To begin or take up again after interruption: resumed our dinner. 2. To assume, take, or occupy again: The dog resumed its post by the door. 3. To take on or take back again: resumed my original name. — v. intr. To begin again or continue after interruption. [Middle English resumen, from Old French resumer, from Latin resumere: re-, re- + sumere, to take; see em- in Appendix.] —re·sum'a·ble adj. —re·sum'er n.

ré-su·mé or re-su·me or re-su·mé (rĕz'ōō-mā', rĕz'ōō-mā') n. 1. A brief account of one's professional or work experience and qualifications, often submitted with an employment application. 2. A summary: a résumé of the facts of the case. [French, from past participle of résumer, to summarize, from Old French resumer, to resume. See RESUME.]

re-sump·tion (rĭ-zŭmp'shən) n. The act or an instance of resuming; a beginning again: resumption of negotiations. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin resumptiō, resumptiōn-, recovery, from Latin resumptus, past participle of resumere, to resume. See RESUME.]

re-su·pi·nate (rĭ-sōō'pə-nāt', -nĭt) adj. Biology. Inverted or seemingly turned upside down, as the flowers of most orchids. [Latin resupīnātus, past participle of resupīnāre, to bend back : re-, re- + supīnus, supine; see SUPINE.] —re-su'pi-na'tion n.

re-su·pine (rĕs'ə-pĭn') adj. Lying on the back; supine. [Latin resupīnus : re-, re- + supīnus, supine; see SUPINE.]

re-sup·ply (rĕ'sə-plĭ') v. tr. re-sup·plied, re-sup·ply·ing, re-sup·plies. To provide with fresh supplies, as of weapons and ammunition. —re'sup·ply' n.

re-sur·face (rĕ-sŭr'fəs) v. re-sur·faced, re-sur·fac·ing, re-sur·fac·es. — v. tr. To cover with a new surface: resurfacing a road; resurfaced the floor. — v. intr. To come to the surface again; reappear: The rumor has resurfaced.

—re-sur'fac·er n.

re-surge (rĭ-sŭrj') v. intr. re-surged, re-surg·ing, re-surg·es. 1. To rise again; experience resurgence. 2. To sweep or surge back again. [Latin resurgere : re-, re- + surgere, to rise; see SURGE.]

re-sur·gence (rĭ-sŭr'jəns) n. 1. A continuing after interruption; a renewal. 2. A restoration to use, acceptance, activity, or vigor; a revival.

re-sur·gent (rĭ-sŭr'jənt) adj. 1. Experiencing or tending to bring about renewal or revival. 2. Sweeping or surging back again.

res·ur·rect (rĕz'ə-rĕkt') v. res·ur·rect·ed, res·ur·rect·ing, res·ur·rects. — v. tr. 1. To bring back to life; raise from the dead. 2. To bring back into practice, notice, or use. — v. intr. Theology. To rise from the dead; return to life. [Back-formation from RESURRECTION.] —res'ur·rec'tor n.

res·ur·rec·tion (rĕz'ə-rĕk'shən) n. 1. The act of rising from the dead or returning to life. 2. The state of one who has returned to life. 3. The act of bringing back to practice, notice, or use; revival. 4. Resurrection. Theology. a. The rising again of Jesus on the third day after the Crucifixion. b. The rising again of the dead at the Last Judgment. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin resurrēctiō, resurrēctiōn-, from Latin resurrēctus, past participle of resurgere, to rise again. See RESURGE.] —res'ur·rec'tion·al adj.

resurrection fern (rĕz'ə-rĕk'shən fûrn) n. An epiphytic, creeping American fern (Polypodium polypodioides) of warm regions, having fronds that curl up and appear dead in prolonged dry weather and expand under moist conditions.

res·ur·rec·tion·ist (rĕz'ə-rĕk'shə-nĭst) n. 1. One who steals bodies from graves in order to sell them for dissection; a body snatcher. 2. One who brings something back into use or notice again.

resurrection plant (rĕz'ə-rĕk'shən plănt) n. See rose of Jericho.

re·sur·vey (rĕ'sər-vā', rĕ-sûr'vā) v. tr. re·sur·veyed, re·sur·vey·ing, re·sur·veys. To survey or study anew. — n. (rĕ-sûr'vā) A new survey or study.

re·sus·ci·tate (rĭ-sŭs'ĭ-tāt') v. re·sus·ci·tat·ed, re·sus·ci·tat·ing, re·sus·ci·tates. — v. tr. To restore consciousness, vigor, or life to. See Synonyms at revive. — v. intr. To regain consciousness. [Latin resuscitāre, resuscitāt- : re-, re- + suscitāre, to stir up (sub-, sub- + citāre, to move violently, frequentative of ciĕre, to set in motion); see kei⁻² in Appendix.] — re·sus·ci·ta·ble (-tə-bəl) adj. — re·sus·ci·ta'tion n. — re·sus·ci·ta'tive adj.

re·sus·ci·ta·tor (rĭ-sŭs'ĭ-tā'tər) n. One that resuscitates, as an apparatus that forces oxygen or a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide into the lungs of a person who has undergone partial asphyxiation.

ret (rĕt) v. ret·ted, ret·ting, rets. — v. tr. To moisten or soak (flax, for example) in order to soften and separate the fibers by partial rotting. — v. intr. To become so moistened or soaked. [Middle English reten, probably from Middle Dutch reeten.]

ret. abbr. 1. Retain. 2. Retired. 3. Return.

re·ta·ble (rĕ'tā'bəl, rĕt'ə-) n. A structure forming the back of an altar, especially: a. An overhanging shelf for lights and ornaments. b. A frame enclosing painted panels. [French, from Spanish retablo : Latin retro-, retro- + tabula, tablet, board.]

re·tail (rĕ'tāl') n. The sale of goods or commodities in small quantities directly to consumers. — adj. Of, relating to, or engaged in the sale of goods or commodities at retail. — adv. 1. In retail quantities. 2. At a retail price. — v. re·tailed, re·tail·ing, re·tails. — v. tr. 1. To sell in small quantities directly to consumers. 2. (also rĭ-tāl') To tell or repeat (gossip or stories, for example) to others. — v. intr. To sell at retail. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, variant of Old French, piece cut off, from retailier, to cut up : re-, re- + tailer, to cut; see TAILOR.] — re'tail'er n.

re·tail·ing (rĕ'tāl'ĭng) n. The functions and activities involved in the selling of commodities directly to consumers.

re·tain (rĭ-tān') v. tr. re·tained, re·tain·ing, re·tains. Abbr. ret. 1. To maintain possession of. See Synonyms at keep. 2. To keep or hold in a particular place, condition, or position. 3. To keep in mind; remember. 4. To hire (an attorney, for example) by the payment of a fee. 5. To keep in one's service or pay.

[Middle English retainen, from Old French retenir, from Latin retinēre : re-, re- + tenēre, to hold; see ten- in Appendix.] —re·tain'·a·bil'i·ty n. —re·tain'·a·ble adj. —re·tain'·ment n.

re·tained object (rĭ-tānd' ōb'jĭkt) n. Grammar. An object in a passive construction that is identical to the object in the corresponding active construction, as story in Susan was told the story by John.

re·tain·er¹ (rĭ-tā'nər) n. 1. One that retains, as a device, frame, or groove that restrains or guides. 2. Dentistry. An appliance used to hold teeth in position after orthodontic treatment. 3. a. An employee, typically a long-term employee. b. A servant or an attendant, especially one in the household of a person of high rank.

re·tain·er² (rĭ-tā'nər) n. 1. The act of engaging the services of a professional adviser, such as an attorney, a counselor, or a consultant. 2. The fee paid to retain a professional adviser.

re·tain·ing wall (rĭ-tā'nĭng wōl) n. A wall built to support or prevent the advance of a mass of earth or water.

re·take (rē-tāk') v. tr. re·took (-tōök'), re·tak·en (-tā'kən), re·tak·ing, re·takes. 1. To take back or again. 2. To recapture. 3. To photograph, film, or record again. — n. (rē'tāk') 1. A taking again. 2. The act or an instance of photographing, filming, or recording again.

re·tal·i·ate (rĭ-tāl'ē-āt') v. re·tal·i·at·ed, re·tal·i·at·ing, re·tal·i·ates. — v. intr. To return like for like, especially evil for evil. — v. tr. To pay back (an injury) in kind. [Late Latin retaliāre, retaliāt- : Latin re-, re- + Latin taliō, punishment in kind; see telō- in Appendix.] —re·tal'i·a'tion n. —re·tal'i·a'tive, re·tal'i·a-to'ry (-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. —re·tal'i·a'tor n.

re·tard (rĭ-tārd') v. re·tard·ed, re·tard·ing, re·tards. — v. tr. To cause to move or proceed slowly; delay or impede. — v. intr. To be delayed. See Synonyms at delay. — n. 1. A slowing down or hindering of progress; a delay. 2. Music. A slackening of tempo. 3. (rē'tārd') Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a mentally retarded person. [Middle English retarden, from Old French retarder, from Latin retardāre : re-, re- + tardāre, to delay (from tardus, slow).] —re·tard'er n.

re·tar·dant (rĭ-tār'dnt) adj. Acting or tending to retard. Often used in combination: flame-retardant pajamas for children; a fire-retardant security chest. —re·tar'dant n.

re·tar·date (rĭ-tār'dāt', -dīt) n. A mentally retarded person.

re·tar·da·tion (rē'tār-dā'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of retarding. b. The condition of being retarded. 2. The extent to which something is held back or delayed. 3. Something that retards; a delay or hindrance. 4. Mental retardation. 5. Music. A diminishing of tempo; a retard.

re·tard·ed (rĭ-tār'dĭd) Offensive. adj. 1. Affected with mental retardation. 2. Relatively slow in mental, emotional, or physical development. — n. (used with a pl. verb). Persons affected with mental retardation considered as a group. Often used with the.

re-tar-get (rē-tār'gĭt) v. tr. re-tar-get-ed, re-tar-get-ing, re-tar-gets. 1. To direct toward a different target: retargeting strategic missiles. 2. To change the target or goal of: federal monies retargeted for youth job training.

retch (rĕch) v. retched, retch-ing, retch-es. — v. intr. To try to vomit. — v. tr. To vomit. [Alteration of Middle English rechen, from Old English hræcan.] —retch n.

re-te (rē'tē) n. pl. re-ti-a (rē'tē-ə, rē'shə). An anatomical mesh or network, as of veins, arteries, or nerves. [Latin rēte, net.]

re-tell (rē-tĕl') v. tr. re-told (-tōld'), re-tell-ing, re-tells. 1. To relate or tell again or in a different form. 2. To count again.

re-tell-ing (rē-tĕl'ĭng) n. A new account or an adaptation of a story: a retelling of a Roman myth.

re-tene (rē'tēn', rĕt'ĕn') n. A crystalline compound, C₁₈H₁₈, derived from pine tar, fossil resins, and tar oils. [From Greek rhētīnē, resin.]

re-ten-tion (rĭ-tĕn'shən) n. 1. a. The act of retaining. b. The condition of being retained. 2. Capacity or power of retaining. 3. An ability to recall or recognize what has been learned or experienced; memory. 4. Something retained. 5. Medicine. Involuntary withholding of wastes or secretions that are normally eliminated. [Middle English retencioun, from Old French retention, from Latin retentiō, retentiōn-, from retentus, past participle of retinēre, to retain. See RETAIN.]

re-ten-tive (rĭ-tĕn'tĭv) adj. 1. Having the quality, power, or capacity of retaining. 2. Having the ability or capacity to retain knowledge or information with ease: a retentive memory. —re-ten'tive-ly adv. —re-ten'tive-ness n.

re-ten-tiv-i-ty (rĕ'tĕn-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. 1. a. The quality or state of being retentive. b. Capacity or power of retaining. 2. Physics. The capacity for remaining magnetized after cessation of the magnetizing force.

re-test (rē'tĕst') v. tr. re-test-ed, re-test-ing, re-tests. To test again. — n. A second or repeated test.

re-think (rē-thĭngk') v. tr. intr. re-thought (-thōt'), re-think-ing, re-thinks. To reconsider (something) or to involve oneself in reconsideration. —re'think' n. —re-think'er n.

Re-thondes (rə-tōnd') A village of northern France west-northwest of Rheims. The armistice ending World War I was signed here on November 11, 1918.

re-ti-a (rē'tē-ə, rē'shə) n. Plural of rete.

re-ti-ar-y (rē'shĕ-ĕr'ē) adj. Of, resembling, or forming a net or web. [From Latin rēte, net.]

ret-i-cence (rĕt'ĭ-səns) n. 1. The state or quality of being reticent; reserve. 2. The state or quality of being reluctant; unwillingness. 3. An instance of being reticent.

ret·i·cent (rĕt'ī-sənt) adj. 1. Inclined to keep one's thoughts, feelings, and personal affairs to oneself. See Synonyms at silent. 2. Restrained or reserved in style. 3. Reluctant; unwilling. [Latin reticēns, reticent- present participle of reticēre, to keep silent : re-, re- + tacēre, to be silent.] —ret'·i·cent·ly adv.

ret·i·cle (rĕt'ī-kəl) n. A grid or pattern placed in the eyepiece of an optical instrument, used to establish scale or position. [Latin rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.]

re·tic·u·la (rĭ-tĭk'yə-lə) n. Plural of reticulum.

re·tic·u·lar (rĭ-tĭk'yə-lər) adj. 1. Resembling a net in form; netlike: reticular tissue. 2. Marked by complexity; intricate. [From Latin rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.]

reticular formation (rĭ-tĭk'yə-lər fôr-mā'shən) n. A diffuse network of nerve fibers and cells in parts of the brainstem, important in regulating consciousness or wakefulness.

re·tic·u·late (rĭ-tĭk'yə-līt, -lāt') adj. Resembling or forming a net or network: reticulate veins of a leaf. — v. re·tic·u·lat·ed, re·tic·u·lat·ing, re·tic·u·lates (-lāt'). — v. tr. 1. To make a net or network of. 2. To mark with lines resembling a network. — v. intr. To form a net or network. [Latin rĕticulātus, from rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.] —re·tic'·u·late·ly adv. —re·tic'·u·la'tion n.

ret·i·cule (rĕt'ī-kyōōl') n. 1. A woman's drawstring handbag or purse. 2. A reticle. [French rĕticule, from Latin rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.]

re·tic·u·lo·cyte (rĭ-tĭk'yə-lō-sīt') n. An immature red blood cell that contains a network of basophilic filaments. [RETICUL(UM) + -CYTE.] —re·tic'·u·lo·cyt'ic (-sīt'īk) adj.

re·tic·u·lo·en·do·the·li·al (rĭ-tĭk'yə-lō-ĕn'də-thĕ'lĕ-əl) n. Of, relating to, or being the widely diffused bodily system constituting all phagocytic cells except certain white blood cells. [RETICUL(UM) + ENDOTHELIAL.]

re·tic·u·lum (rĭ-tĭk'yə-ləm) n. pl. re·tic·u·la (-lə). 1. A netlike formation or structure; a network. 2. Zoology. The second compartment of the stomach of ruminant mammals, lined with a membrane having honeycombed ridges. [Latin rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.]

Re·tic·u·lum (rĭ-tĭk'yə-ləm) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near Dorado and Horologium. [Latin rĕticulum, diminutive of rĕte, net.]

re·ti·form (rĕ'tə-fôr·m', rĕt'ə-) adj. Arranged like a net; reticulate. [Latin rĕte, net + -FORM.]

retin- pref. Variant of retino-.

ret·i·na (rĕt'n-ə) n. pl. ret·i·nas or ret·i·nae (rĕt'n-ĕ'). A delicate, multilayered, light-sensitive membrane lining the inner eyeball and connected by the optic nerve to the brain. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin rĕtina, from Latin rĕte, net.] —ret'·i·nal adj.

ret·i·nac·u·lum (rĕt'n-āk'yə-ləm) n. pl. ret·i·nac·u·la (-lə). Biology. A band or bandlike structure that holds an organ or a part in place. [Latin retināculum, band, tether : retinĕre, to restrain; see RETAIN + -culum, suff. denoting instruments.] —ret'i·nac'u·lar (-lər) adj.

ret·i·nae (rĕt'n-ē') n. A plural of retina.

ret·i·nal (rĕt'n-əl', -ôl') n. See retinene.

ret·i·nene (rĕt'n-ĕn') n. Either of two yellow to red retinal pigments, formed by oxidation of vitamin A alcohols. Also called retinal ret·i·ni·tis (rĕt'n-ī'tīs) n. Inflammation of the retina.

retinitis pig·men·to·sa (rĕt'n-ī'tīs pĭg'mĕn-tō'sə, -mən-) n. A hereditary degenerative disease of the retina, characterized by night blindness, pigmentary changes within the retina, a narrowing of the visual field, and eventual loss of vision. [New Latin pigmentōsa, feminine of pigmentōsus, pigmented.]

retino- or retin- pref. Retina: retinoscopy. [From RETINA.]

ret·i·no·blas·to·ma (rĕt'n-ō-blă-stō'mə) n. pl. ret·i·no·blas·to·mas or ret·i·no·blas·to·ma·ta (-mə-tə). A hereditary malignant tumor of the retina, transmitted as a dominant trait and occurring chiefly among infants.

ret·i·nol (rĕt'n-ôl', -ôl', -ôl') n. See vitamin A.

ret·i·nop·a·thy (rĕt'n-ôp'ə-thĕ) n. pl. ret·i·nop·a·thies. A pathological disorder of the retina. —ret'i·no·path'ic (-ô-păth'ĭk) adj.

ret·i·no·scope (rĕt'n-ə-skōp') n. An optical instrument for examining refraction of light in the eye. Also called skiascope ret·i·nos·co·py (rĕt'n-ôs'kə-pĕ) n. pl. ret·i·nos·co·pies. Medical examination and analysis of the refractive properties of the eye. Also called skiascopy —ret'i·no·scop'ic (-ə-skōp'ĭk) adj.

ret·i·nue (rĕt'n-ōō', -yōō') n. The retainers or attendants accompanying a high-ranking person. [Middle English retenue, from Old French, from feminine past participle of retenir, to retain. See RETAIN.]

re·tin·u·la (rĭ-tĭn'yə-lə) n. pl. re·tin·u·lae (-lē). A cluster of pigmented sensory cells in the compound eye of an arthropod. [New Latin rĕtinula, diminutive of Medieval Latin rĕtina, retina. See RETINA.] —re·tin'u·lar adj.

re·tire (rĭ-tĭr') v. re·tired, re·tir·ing, re·tires. — v. intr. 1. To withdraw, as for rest or seclusion. 2. To go to bed. 3. To withdraw from one's occupation, business, or office; stop working. 4. To fall back or retreat, as from battle. 5. To move back or away; recede. — v. tr. 1. To cause to withdraw from one's usual field of activity: retired all executives at 55. 2. To lead (troops, for example) away from action; withdraw. 3. To take out of circulation: retired the bonds. 4. To withdraw from use or active service: retiring an old battleship. 5. Baseball. a. To put out (a batter). b. To cause (the opposing team) to end a turn at bat. [French retirer, to retreat, from Old French, to take back : re-, re- + tirer, to draw; see TIER¹.]

WORD HISTORY: Despite the upbeat books written about retiring and the fact that it is a well-earned time of relaxation from the daily rigors of work, many people do not find it a particularly pleasant prospect. Perhaps the etymology of retire may hint at why. The ultimate source of our word is the Old French word retirer, made up of the prefix re-, meaning in this case “back,” and the verb tirer, “to draw,” together meaning “to take back or withdraw.” The first use of the English word retire is recorded in 1533 in reference to a military force that withdraws. It is not until 1667 that we find the word used to mean “to withdraw from a position for more leisure.” In regard to the sting in all this we need to look at the source of tirer, “to draw, draw out, endure,” which ultimately may be from Old French martir, “a martyr,” probably reflecting the fact that martyrs had to endure the torture of being stretched up to and beyond the point of dislocating their bones.

re-tired (rĭ-tĭrd′) adj. Abbr. ret., r. 1. Withdrawn from one’s occupation, business, or office; having finished one’s active working life. 2. Received by a person in retirement: retired pay. 3. Withdrawn; secluded. — n. (used with a pl. verb). Retired people considered as a group. Used with the. —re-tired-ly adv.

—re-tired’ness n.

re-tir-ee (rĭ-tĭr’ē′) n. One who has retired from active working life.

re-tire-ment (rĭ-tĭr’mənt) n. 1. The act of retiring. 2. The state of being retired. 3. Withdrawal from one’s occupation, business, or office. 4. Withdrawal into privacy or seclusion. 5. A place of privacy or seclusion; a retreat. See Synonyms at solitude. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a retirement program; a retirement community.

re-tir-ing (rĭ-tĭr’ing) adj. Shy and reserved; modest. —re-tir’ing-ly adv.

—re-tir’ing-ness n.

re-told (rē-tōld′) v. Past tense and past participle of retell.

re-took (rē-tōok′) v. Past tense of retake.

re-tool (rē-tōol′) v. tr. re-tooled, re-tool-ing, re-tools. 1. To fit out (a factory, for example) with a new set of machinery and tools for making a different product. 2. To revise and reorganize, especially for the purpose of updating or improving: had to retool the city’s economy. — v. intr. To fit out a factory with a new set of machinery and tools.

re-tor-sion or re-tor-tion (rĭ-tôr’shən) n. Law. An act perpetrated by one nation upon another in retaliation or reprisal for a similar act perpetrated by the other nation. [Probably French rétorsion, from Latin retortus (influenced by Late Latin torsiō, a twisting, wringing); see TORSION, past participle of retorquēre, to cast back. See RETORT¹.]

re·tort¹ (rĭ-tôrt') v. re·tort·ed, re·tort·ing, re·torts. — v. tr. 1. a. To reply, especially to answer in a quick, caustic, or witty manner. See Synonyms at answer. b. To present a counterargument to. 2. To return in kind; pay back. — v. intr. 1. To make a reply, especially a quick, caustic, or witty one. 2. To present a counterargument. 3. To return like for like; retaliate. — n. 1. A quick, incisive reply, especially one that turns the first speaker's words to his or her own disadvantage. 2. The act or an instance of retorting. [Latin retorquere, retort-, to bend back, retort : re-, re- + torquere, to bend, twist; see terk^w- in Appendix.] —re·tort'er n.

re·tort² (rĭ-tôrt', rē'tôrt') n. A closed laboratory vessel with an outlet tube, used for distillation, sublimation, or decomposition by heat. [French retorte, from Medieval Latin retorta, from feminine of Latin retortus, past participle of retorquere, to bend back. See RETORT¹.]

re·tor·tion (rĭ-tôr'shən) n. Law. Variant of retorsion.

re·touch (rē-tŭch') v. re·touched, re·touch·ing, re·touch·es. — v. tr. 1. To add new details or touches to for correction or improvement. 2. To improve or change (a photographic negative or print), as by adding details or removing flaws. 3. To color (recent growth of hair) to match hair that was tinted, dyed, or bleached at an earlier date. — v. intr. To give or make retouches. — n. (rē'tŭch', rē-tŭch') The act, process, or an instance of retouching. —re·touch'er n.

re·trace (rē-trās') v. tr. re·traced, re·trac·ing, re·trac·es. To trace again or back: retraced their steps. —re·trace'a·ble adj. —re·trace'ment n. —re·trac'er n.

re·tract (rĭ-trăkt') v. re·tract·ed, re·tract·ing, re·tracts. — v. tr. 1. To take back; disavow: refused to retract the statement. 2. To draw back or in: a plane retracting its landing gear. See Synonyms at recede. 3. Linguistics. a. To utter (a sound) with the tongue drawn back. b. To draw back (the tongue). — v. intr. 1. To take something back or disavow it. 2. To draw back. [Latin retractāre, retract-, to revoke, frequentative of retrahere, to draw back : re-, re- + trahere, to draw. V., tr., senses 2 and 3, and v., intr., sense 2, Middle English retracten from Old French retracter, from Latin retractus, past participle of retrahere, to draw back.] —re·tract'a·bil'i·ty, re·tract'i·bil'i·ty n. —re·tract'a·ble, re·tract'i·ble adj. —re'trac-ta'tion (rē'trăk-tā'shən) n.

re·trac·tile (rĭ-trăkt'tĭl, -tĭl') adj. That can be drawn back or in: the retractile claws of a cat. —re'trac-til'i·ty (rē'trăk-tĭl'ĭ-tē) n.

re·trac·tion (rĭ-trăk'shən) n. 1. The act of retracting or the state of being retracted. 2. a. The act of recanting or disavowing a previously held statement or belief. b. A formal statement of disavowal. c. Something recanted or disavowed. 3. The power of drawing back or of being drawn back.

re·trac·tive (rĭ-trăk'tĭv) adj. Tending or serving to retract. —re·trac'tive·ly adv. —re·trac'tive·ness n.

re·trac·tor (rĭ-trăk'tər) n. One that retracts, as: a. Anatomy. A muscle, such as a flexor, that retracts an organ or a part. b. Medicine. A surgical instrument used to hold back organs or the edges of an incision.

re·train (rē-trān') v. tr. intr. re·trained, re·train·ing, re·trains. To train or undergo training again. —re·train'a·ble adj.

re·train·ee (rē'trā-nē') n. One who is being or has been retrained.

re·tral (rē'trəl, rēt'rəl) adj. 1. Situated at, located close to, or directed toward the back. 2. Backward; reverse. [From Latin retrō, back. See re- in Appendix.] —re'tral·ly adv.

re·trans·late (rē'trans-lāt', -trānz-, rē-trāns'lāt', -trānz'-) v. tr.

re·trans·lat·ed, re·trans·lat·ing, re·trans·lates. 1. To translate (something already translated) into a different language. 2. To change the form of (something) into something new. — v. intr. To retranslate material. —re'trans·la'tion n.

re·tread (rē-trēd') v. tr. re·tread·ed, re·tread·ing, re·treads. 1. To fit (a worn automotive tire) with a new tread. 2. To make or do over again, especially with minimal revision; rehash: retreading a familiar story line. — n. (rē'trēd') 1. A tire that has been fitted with a new tread. 2. A revision or reworking; a remake or rehash: a trite retread of an old musical. 3. Informal. A person who has been retrained for work.

re·tread (rē-trēd') v. tr. intr. re·trod (-trōd'), re·trod·den (-trōd'n) or re·trod, re·tread·ing, re·treads. To tread upon or engage in treading again.

re·treat (rĭ-trēt') n. 1. a. The act or process of withdrawing, especially from something hazardous, formidable, or unpleasant. b. The process of going backward or receding from a position or condition gained. 2. A place affording peace, quiet, privacy, or security. See Synonyms at shelter. 3. a. A period of seclusion, retirement, or solitude. b. A period of group withdrawal for prayer, meditation, and study: a religious retreat. 4. a. Withdrawal of a military force from a dangerous position or from an enemy attack. b. The signal for such withdrawal. c. A bugle call or drumbeat signaling the lowering of the flag at sunset, as on a military base. d. The military ceremony of lowering the flag. — v.

re·treat·ed, re·treat·ing, re·treats. — v. intr. 1. To fall or draw back; withdraw or retire. See Synonyms at recede. 2. To slope backward. — v. tr.

Games. To move (a chess piece) back. [Middle English retret, from Old French retrait, retret, from past participle of retraire, retrere, to draw back, from Latin retrahere. See RETRACT.] —re·treat'er n.

re·treat·ant (rĭ-trēt'nt) n. One who participates in a religious retreat.

re·trench (rĭ-trēnch') v. re·trenched, re·trench·ing, re·trench·es. — v. tr. 1. To cut down; reduce. 2. To remove, delete, or omit. — v. intr. To curtail expenses; economize. [Obsolete French retrencher, from Old French retrenchier : re-, re- + trenchier, to cut; see TRENCH.] —re-trench'er n.

re-trench-ment (rĭ-trĕnch'mənt) n. 1. A cutting down or back; reduction.
2. A curtailment of expenses.

re-tri-al (rē-trī'əl, -trīl', rē'trī'əl, -trīl') n. A second trial, as of a legal case.

ret-ri-bu-tion (rĕt'rə-byōō'shən) n. 1. Something justly deserved; recompense. 2. Something given or demanded in repayment, especially punishment.
3. Theology. Punishment or reward distributed in a future life based on performance in this one. [Middle English retribucion, from Old French retribution, from Latin retribūtiō, retribūtiōn-, from retribūtus, past participle of retribuere, to pay back : re-, re- + tribuere, to grant; see TRIBE.]

re-trib-u-tive (rĭ-trĭb'yə-tĭv) adj. Of, involving, or characterized by retribution; retributory. —re-trib'u-tive-ly adv.

re-trib-u-to-ry (rĭ-trĭb'yə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Retributive.

re-trie-d (rē-trīd') v. Past tense and past participle of retry.

re-tries (rē-trīz') v. Third person singular present tense of retry.

re-triev-al (rĭ-trē'vəl) n. 1. The act or process of retrieving. 2. Computer Science. The process of accessing information from memory or other storage devices. 3. The possibility of being retrieved or restored: lost possessions beyond retrieval.

re-trieve (rĭ-trēv') v. re-trieved, re-triev-ing, re-trieves. — v. tr. 1. To get back; regain. 2. a. To rescue or save. b. Sports. To make a difficult but successful return of (a ball or shuttlecock, as in tennis or badminton). 3. To bring back again; revive or restore. 4. To rectify the unfavorable consequences of; remedy. See Synonyms at recover. 5. To recall to mind; remember. 6. To find and carry back; fetch. — v. intr. To find and bring back game: a dog trained to retrieve. — n. 1. The act of retrieving; retrieval. 2. Sports. A difficult but successful return of a ball or shuttlecock. [Middle English retreven, from Old French retrover, retruv- : re-, re- + trover, to find; see TROVER.] —re-triev'a-bil'i-ty n. —re-triev'a-ble adj. —re-triev'a-bly adv.

re-triev-er (rĭ-trē'vər) n. One that retrieves, especially any one of several breeds of dog that were developed and trained to retrieve game.

ret-ro (rĕt'rō) adj. 1. Retroactive: retro pay. 2. Involving, relating to, or reminiscent of things past; retrospective: "As is often the case in retro fashion, historical accuracy is somewhat beside the point" (New York Times). — n. pl. ret-ros. A fashion, decor, design, or style reminiscent of things past.

retro- pref. 1. Backward; back: retrorocket. 2. Situated behind: retrolental. [Latin retrō-, from retrō, backward, behind. See re- in Appendix.]

ret-ro-ac-tion (rĕt'rō-āk'shən) n. 1. An action, as of a law, that influences or applies to a prior time. 2. An opposing or reciprocal action; a reaction.

—ret'ro-act' v.

ret-ro-ac-tive (rĕt'rō-āk'tiv) adj. Influencing or applying to a period prior to enactment: a retroactive pay increase. [French rétroactif, from Latin retroactus, past participle of retroagere, to drive back : retro-, retro- + agere, to drive; see ag- in Appendix.] —ret'ro-ac'tive-ly adv. —ret'ro-ac-tiv'i-ty n.

ret-ro-cede (rĕt'rō-sĕd') v. ret-ro-ced-ed, ret-ro-ced-ing, ret-ro-cedes. — v. intr. To go back; recede. — v. tr. To cede or give back (a territory, for example); return. [Latin retrōcēdere : retro-, retro- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.] —ret'ro-ces'sion (-sĕsh'ən) n.

re-trod (rĕ-trōd') v. Past tense and a past participle of re-tread.

re-trod-den (rĕ-trōd'n) v. A past participle of re-tread.

ret-ro-fire (rĕt'rō-fīr') v. ret-ro-fired, ret-ro-fir-ing, ret-ro-fires. — v. tr. To ignite or fire (a retrorocket). — v. intr. To become ignited or fired. Used of a retrorocket.

ret-ro-fit (rĕt'rō-fit') v. ret-ro-fit-ted, ret-ro-fit-ting, ret-ro-fits. — v. tr.

1. To provide (a jet, an automobile, a computer, or a factory, for example) with parts, devices, or equipment not in existence or available at the time of original manufacture. 2. To install or fit (a device or system, for example) for use in or on an existing structure, especially an older dwelling. — v. intr. 1. To fit into or onto equipment already in existence or service. 2. To substitute new or modernized parts or systems for older equipment: an industrial plant that was retrofitting to meet new safety regulations. — n. 1. Something that has been retrofitted or that has undergone retrofitting. 2. An instance of modernizing or expanding with new or modified parts, devices, systems, or equipment: a retrofit for the heating system. — adj. Relating to or being a retrofit: a retrofit kit for the homeowner; an energy-saving retrofit program; a large retrofit market.

—ret'ro-fit'ta-ble adj. —ret'ro-fit'ter n.

ret-ro-flex (rĕt'rō-flĕks') adj. also ret-ro-flexed (-flĕkst') 1. Bent, curved, or turned backward. 2. Linguistics. Pronounced with the tip of the tongue turned back against the roof of the mouth. — n. Linguistics. A sound pronounced with the tongue in retroflex position, as the sound (r) in some varieties of English.

[Latin retrōflexus*, past participle of retrōflectere, to bend back : retro-, retro- + flectere, to bend.] —ret'ro-flex'ion, ret'ro-flec'tion n.

ret-ro-grade (rĕt'rō-grād') adj. 1. Moving or tending backward. 2. Opposite to the usual order; inverted or reversed. 3. Reverting to an earlier or inferior condition. 4. Astronomy. a. Of or relating to the orbital revolution or axial rotation of a planetary or other celestial body that moves clockwise from east to west, in the direction opposite to most celestial bodies. b. Of or relating to the brief, regularly occurring, apparently backward movement of a planetary body in its orbit as viewed against the fixed stars, caused by the differing orbital velocities of Earth and the body observed. 5. Archaic. Opposed; contrary. — v. intr.

ret-ro-grad-ed, ret-ro-grad-ing, ret-ro-grades. 1. To move or seem to move backward. See Synonyms at recede. 2. To decline to an inferior state; degenerate. [Middle English, from Latin retrōgradus, from retrōgradī, to go back : retrō-, retro- + -gradus, walking (from gradī, to go); see ghredh- in Appendix.]

—ret'ro-gra-da'tion (-rō-grā-dā'shən) n. —ret'ro-grade'ly adv.

ret-ro-gress (rĕt'rə-grĕs', rĕt'rə-grĕs') v. intr. ret-ro-gressed, ret-ro-gress-ing, ret-ro-gress-es. 1. To return to an earlier, inferior, or less complex condition. 2. To go or move backward. [Latin retrōgradī, retrōgress- : retrō-, retro- + gradī, to go; see ghredh- in Appendix.] —ret'ro-gres'sive adj.

—re'tro-gres'sive-ly adv.

ret-ro-gres-sion (rĕt'rə-grĕsh'ən) n. 1. The act or process of deteriorating or declining. 2. Biology. A return to a less complex or more primitive state or stage.

ret-ro-len-tal (rĕt'rō-lĕn'tl) adj. Situated or occurring behind a lens, as of the eye. [RETRO- + New Latin lĕns, lent-, lens; see LENS + -AL¹.]

ret-ro-oc-u-lar (rĕt'rō-ŏk'yə-lər) adj. Situated behind the eye.

ret-ro-per-i-to-ne-al (rĕt'rō-pĕr'ī-tn-ĕ'əl) adj. Situated behind the peritoneum.

ret-ro-pha-ryn-ge-al (rĕt'rō-fə-rĭn'jĕ-əl, -jəl, -fār'ĭn-jĕ'əl) adj. Situated or occurring behind the pharynx.

ret-ro-rock-et (rĕt'rō-rŏk'ĭt) n. A rocket engine used to retard, arrest, or reverse the motion of a vehicle, such as an aircraft, a missile, or a spacecraft.

re-trorse (rĭ-trŏrs', rĕ'trŏrs') adj. Directed or turned backward or downward. [Latin retrŏrsus, from retrŏversus : retrō-, retro- + versus, past participle of vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.] —re-trorse'ly adv.

ret-ro-spect (rĕt'rə-spĕkt') n. A review, survey, or contemplation of things in the past. — v. ret-ro-spect-ed, ret-ro-spect-ing, ret-ro-spects. — v. intr. 1. To contemplate the past. 2. To refer back. — v. tr. To look back on or contemplate (things past). —idiom. in retrospect. Looking backward or reviewing the past. [From Latin retrŏspectus*, past participle of retrŏspicere, to look back at : retrō-, retro- + specere, to look at; see spek- in Appendix.] —ret'ro-spec-tion n.

ret-ro-spec-tive (rĕt'rə-spĕk'tĭv) adj. 1. Looking back on, contemplating, or directed to the past. 2. Looking or directed backward. 3. Applying to or influencing the past; retroactive. 4. Of, relating to, or being a retrospective: a retrospective art exhibition. — n. An extensive exhibition or performance of the work of an artist over a period of years. —ret'ro-spec-tive-ly adv.

re-trous-sé (rə-trōō-sā', rĕt'rōō-) adj. Turned up at the end. Used of the nose. [French, past participle of retrousser, to turn back, from Old French : re-, re- + trouser, trousser, to tie in a bundle (probably from Vulgar Latin torsāre*, from torsus*, twisted, variant of Latin tortus, past participle of torquēre, to twist); see TORQUE¹.]

ret-ro-ver-sion (rĕt' rō-vûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. A turning or tilting backward.

2. The state of being turned or tilted back. [From Latin retrōversus, retrorse. See RETRORSE.]

ret-ro-vi-rus (rĕt' rō-vī'rəs, rĕt'rə-vī'-) n. pl. ret-ro-vi-rus-es. Any of a group of viruses, many of which produce tumors, that contain RNA and reverse transcriptase, including the virus that causes AIDS. — ret'ro-vi'ral adj.

re-try (rē-trī') v. tr. re-tried (-trīd'), re-try-ing, re-tries (-trīz'). To try again.

ret-si-na (rĕt'sī-nə, rĕt-sē'nə) n. A Greek wine flavored with pine resin. [Modern Greek, probably from Italian resina, resin, from Latin rēsina. See RESIN.]

re-turn (rĭ-tûrn') v. re-turned, re-turn-ing, re-turns. — v. intr. 1. To go or come back, as to an earlier condition or place. 2. To revert in speech, thought, or practice. 3. To revert to a former owner. 4. To answer or respond. — v. tr.

1. To send, put, or carry back: We return bottles to the store. 2. a. To give or send back in reciprocation: She returned his praise. b. To give back to the owner: He returned her book. c. To reflect or send back: The echo was returned by the canyon wall. 3. To produce or yield (profit or interest) as a payment for labor, investment, or expenditure. 4. Law. a. To submit (an official report, for example) to a judge or other person in authority. b. To render or deliver (a writ or verdict, for example) to the proper officer or court of law. 5. To elect or reelect, as to a legislative body. 6. Games. To respond to (a partner's lead) by leading the same suit in cards. 7. Architecture. To turn away from or place at an angle to the previous line of direction. 8. a. Sports. To send back (a tennis ball, for example) to one's opponent. b. Football. To run with (the ball) after a kickoff, a punt, an interception, or a fumble. — n. Abbr. ret. 1. a. The act or condition of going, coming, bringing, or sending back. b. The act of bringing or sending something back to a previous place, condition, or owner. 2. a. Something brought or sent back.

b. returns. Merchandise returned, as to a retailer by a consumer or to a wholesaler by a retailer. c. Something that goes or comes back. 3. A recurrence, as of a periodic occasion or event: the return of spring. 4. Something exchanged for that received; repayment. 5. A reply; a response. 6. a. The profit made on an exchange of goods. b. Often returns. A profit or yield, as from labor or investments. c. Output or yield per unit rather than cost per unit, as in the manufacturing of a particular product. 7. a. A report, list, or set of statistics, especially one that is formal or official. b. Often returns. A report on the vote in an election. c. Chiefly British. An election. 8. Games. A lead in certain card games that responds to the lead of one's partner. 9. Sports. In tennis and certain other sports:

a. The act of sending the ball back to one's opponent. b. The ball thus sent back.

10. Football. a. The act of running back the ball after a kickoff, a punt, an interception, or a fumble. b. The yardage so gained. 11. Architecture. a. The extension of a molding, projection, or other part at an angle (usually 90°) to the main part. b. A part of a building set at an angle to the façade. 12. a. A turn, bend, or

10. Football. a. The act of running back the ball after a kickoff, a punt, an interception, or a fumble. b. The yardage so gained. 11. Architecture. a. The extension of a molding, projection, or other part at an angle (usually 90°) to the main part. b. A part of a building set at an angle to the façade. 12. a. A turn, bend, or

10. Football. a. The act of running back the ball after a kickoff, a punt, an interception, or a fumble. b. The yardage so gained. 11. Architecture. a. The extension of a molding, projection, or other part at an angle (usually 90°) to the main part. b. A part of a building set at an angle to the façade. 12. a. A turn, bend, or

10. Football. a. The act of running back the ball after a kickoff, a punt, an interception, or a fumble. b. The yardage so gained. 11. Architecture. a. The extension of a molding, projection, or other part at an angle (usually 90°) to the main part. b. A part of a building set at an angle to the façade. 12. a. A turn, bend, or similar reversal of direction, as in a stream or road. b. A pipe or conduit for carrying something, especially water, back to its starting point. 13. The key or mechanism on a machine, such as a typewriter or computer, that positions the carriage, cursor, or printing element at the beginning of a new line. 14. Chiefly British. A roundtrip ticket. 15. Law. a. The bringing or sending back of a writ, subpoena, or other document, generally with a short written report on it, by a sheriff or other officer to the court from which it was issued. b. A certified report by an assessor, an election officer, a collector, or another official. 16. A formal tax statement on the required official form indicating taxable income, allowed deductions, exemptions, and the computed tax that is due. In this sense, also called income tax return, tax return. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or bringing about a going or coming back to a place or situation: the return voyage; a return envelope. 2. Given, sent, or done in reciprocation or exchange: a return volley; a return invitation. 3. Performed, presented, or taking place again: a return engagement of the ballet; a return tennis match. 4. Used on or for returning: a return route. 5. Returning or affording return or recirculation: a return plumbing pipe; a return valve. 6. Relating to or being a roundtrip ticket. 7. a. Reversing or changing direction. b. Having or formed by a reversal or change in direction; returning on itself, as a bend in a road or stream. — idiom. in return. In repayment or reciprocation. [Middle English retornen, from Old French retourner, from Vulgar Latin retornāre*: Latin re-, re- + Latin tornāre, to turn in a lathe; see TURN.] — re-turn'er n.

SYNONYMS: return, revert, recur, recrudescence. These verbs refer to coming or going back, as to a place, position, or condition. Return is the least specific: “Thus with the year/Seasons return” (John Milton). “Not the poem which we have read, but that to which we return... possesses the genuine power, and claims the name of essential poetry” (Samuel Taylor Coleridge). “I shall return” (Douglas MacArthur). Revert refers to returning to an earlier, often less desirable condition, practice, subject, or belief: “Part of them... reverted to their former prejudices in regard to Lincoln” (Baron Charnwood). Recur means to occur or come up again, often repeatedly: We thought we had disposed of the problem, but it kept recurring. To recrudescence is to come into renewed activity after a period of quiescence: “It [a visual art genre] has wilted in latter decades, but recrudesced in recent years” (Earl W. Count). See also Synonyms at reciprocate re-turn-a-ble (rĭ-tûr'nə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be returned or brought back: returnable bottles and cans; returnable merchandise. 2. Law. Required to be returned within a specified time: a returnable writ. — n. An empty beverage container that may be returned for refund of a deposit.

re·turn·ee (rĭ-tŭr'nē') n. 1. One who returns, as from a journey or to school after a long absence. 2. A person returning from military duty overseas. See Usage Note at -ee¹.

re·tuse (rĭ-tōōs', -tyōōs') adj. Botany. Having a rounded or obtuse apex with a central shallow notch: a retuse leaf. [Latin retusus, past participle of retundere, to beat back : re-, re- + tundere, to beat.]

Retz (rĕts), Cardinal de Title of Jean François Paul de Gondi. 1614-1679. French politician, prelate, and writer who was active in the Fronde, a French civil war (1648-1653) that ultimately strengthened the monarchy.

Reu·ben¹ (rōō'bən) In the Old Testament, a son of Jacob and Leah and the forebear of one of the tribes of Israel.

Reu·ben² (rōō'bən) n. A hot sandwich consisting of corned beef, Swiss cheese, and sauerkraut usually served on rye bread. [From the name Reuben.]

Reuch·lin (roik'lən, roIKH'lĕn, roIKH-lĕn'), Johann. 1455-1522. German humanist and scholar who wrote On the Fundamentals of Hebrew (1506), a classic text on Hebrew grammar and language.

re·u·ni·fy (rē-yōō'nə-fī') v. tr. re·u·ni·fied, re·u·ni·fy·ing, re·u·ni·fies. To cause (a group, party, state, or sect) to become unified again after being divided. —re·u·ni·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n.

re·un·ion (rē-yōōn'yən) n. 1. a. The act of reuniting. b. The state of being reunited. 2. A gathering of the members of a group who have been separated: a high school reunion.

Ré·un·ion (rē-yōōn'yən, rā-ÿ-nyŏn') An island of France in the western Indian Ocean southwest of Mauritius. Visited by the Portuguese in the early 16th century, it was first colonized by the French in the mid-1600's as the Isle de Bourbon. Renamed Réunion in 1793, it became an overseas department in 1946.

re·un·ion·ist (rē-yōōn'yə-nĭst) n. One who advocates reunion, as of divided parties or sects, especially an advocate of the reunion of the Anglican Church with the Roman Catholic Church. —re·un·ion·ism n. —re·un·ion·is'tic adj.

re·u·nite (rē'yōō-nīt') v. tr. intr. re·u·nit·ed, re·u·nit·ing, re·u·nites. To bring or come together again.

re·up (rē-ŭp') v. intr. re·up·ped, re·up·ping, re·ups. Informal. 1. To enlist again for military service. 2. To sign a renewed contract for employment or service.

Reus (rĕ'ōōs) A city of northeast Spain near the Mediterranean Sea west of Barcelona. Founded c. 13th century, it is a trade and industrial center. Population, 82,354.

re·use (rē-yōōz') v. tr. re·used, re·us·ing, re·us·es. To use again, especially after salvaging or special treatment or processing. —re·us'a·bil'i·ty n. —re·us'a·ble adj., n. —re·use' (-yōōs') n.

Reu-ter (roi'tər), Baron Paul Julius von. 1816-1899. German-born British journalist who founded (1848) Reuter's, one of the first international news agencies.

Reu-ther (rōō'thər), Walter Philip. 1907-1970. American labor leader who was president of the United Auto Workers (1946-1970) and of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (1952-1955).

Reut-ling-en (roit'ling-ən) A city of southwest Germany south of Stuttgart. It was a free imperial city from 1240 to 1802 and is now a manufacturing center with an important textile industry. Population, 96,337.

rev (rěv) Informal. n. A revolution, as of a motor. — v. revved, rev-ving, revs. — v. tr. 1. a. To increase the speed of (a motor, for example): revved the engine. b. To accelerate or increase: orders to rev up factory output. 2. To make livelier or more productive: revving ourselves up for the game; efforts to rev the economy. — v. intr. 1. To operate at an increased speed: heard the motors rev-ving. 2. To accelerate in quantity or activity.

rev. abbr. 1. Revenue. 2. Reverse. 3. Reversed. 4. Review. 5. Reviewed. 6. Revise; revision. 7. Revolution.

Rev. abbr. 1. Bible. Revelation. 2. Reverend.

re-val-i-date (rē-vāl'i-dāt') v. tr. re-val-i-dat-ed, re-val-i-dat-ing, re-val-i-dates. To declare valid again. — re-val'i-da'tion n.

re-val-u-ate (rē-vāl'yōō-āt') v. tr. re-val-u-at-ed, re-val-u-at-ing, re-val-u-ates. 1. To make a new valuation of. 2. To increase the exchange value of (a nation's currency). — re-val'u-a'tion n.

re-val-ue (rē-vāl'yōō) v. tr. re-val-ued, re-val-u-ing, re-val-ues. 1. To revise the value of (a nation's currency). 2. To evaluate anew; reappraise.

re-vamp (rē-vämp') v. tr. re-vamped, re-vamp-ing, re-vamps. 1. To patch up or restore; renovate. 2. To revise or reconstruct (a manuscript, for example). 3. To vamp (a shoe) anew. — n. The act or an instance of revamping; a complete reorganization or revision. — re-vamp'ment n.

re-vanche (rə-vänch', -vānsh') n. 1. The act of retaliating; revenge. 2. A usually political policy, as of a nation or an ethnic group, intended to regain lost territory or standing. [French, from Old French revancher, to revenge : re-, re- + vengier, vencher, to avenge; see REVENGE.] — re-vanch'ism (-vān'chīz-əm, -vān'shīz-) n. — re-vanch'ist adj., n. — re-vanch-is'tic adj.

re-veal¹ (rī-vēl') v. tr. re-vealed, re-veal-ing, re-veals. 1. a. To make known (something concealed or secret): revealed a confidence. b. To bring to view; show. 2. To make known by supernatural or divine means: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven" (Romans 1:18). [Middle English revelen, from Old French reveler, from Latin revēlāre : re-, re- + vēlāre, to cover (from vēlum, veil).] — re-veal'a-ble adj. — re-veal'er n. — re-veal'ment n.

SYNONYMS: reveal, expose, disclose, divulge, betray. These verbs signify to make known what has been or ought to be kept from the knowledge of others. Reveal suggests uncovering what has been concealed: “He was glad it was to him she had revealed her secret” (Edith Wharton). To expose is to lay bare to public scrutiny: In a slip of the tongue the schemer exposed his true motivation. Disclose means to make known as if by removing a cover: The journalist refused to disclose the source of her information. Divulge often implies the improper revelation of something private or secret: “And whatsoever I shall see or hear in the course of my profession... if it be what should not be published abroad, I will never divulge, holding such things to be holy secrets” (Hippocratic Oath). To betray is to make known in a breach of trust or confidence: “A servant... betrayed their presence... to the Germans” (William Styron). The term can also mean to reveal against one’s desire or will: Her comment betrayed annoyance.

re-veal² (rĭ-vēl') n. 1. a. The part of the side of a window or door opening that is between the outer surface of a wall and the window or door frame. b. The whole side of such an opening; the jamb. 2. The framework of a motor vehicle window. [From Middle English revalen, to lower, from Old French revaler : re-, re- + avaler, to lower (from a val, down : a, to from Latin ad; see ad- + val, valley); see VALE¹.] re-vealed religion (rĭ-vēld' rĭ-lĭj'ən) n. A religion founded primarily on the revelations of God to humankind.

re-veal-ing (rĭ-vē'lĭng) adj. Permitting an elucidating glimpse or a perception of something intimate or concealed: a very revealing biography; a revealing gown.

—re-veal'ing-ly adv.

re-veg-e-tate (rē-věj'ĭ-tāt') v. re-veg-e-tat-ed, re-veg-e-tat-ing, re-veg-e-tates. — v. tr. To cause (eroded land, for example) to bear a new cover of vegetation. — v. intr. To bear a new cover of vegetation.

—re-veg'e-ta'tion n.

rev-eil-le (rĕv'ə-lē) n. 1. a. The sounding of a bugle early in the morning to awaken and summon people in a camp or garrison. b. This bugle call or its equivalent. c. The first military formation of the day. 2. A signal to get up out of bed. [Alteration of French réveillez, second person imperative pl. of réveiller, to wake, from Old French resveiller : re-, re- + esveiller, to awake from Vulgar Latin exvigilāre* (Latin ex-, ex- + Latin vigilāre, to stay awake), from vigil, awake. See weg- in Appendix.]

rev-el (rĕv'əl) v. intr. rev-eled also rev-elled, rev-el-ing also rev-el-ling, rev-els also rev-els. 1. To take great pleasure or delight: She reveled in her unaccustomed leisure. 2. To engage in uproarious festivities; make merry. — n. A boisterous festivity or celebration; merrymaking. Often used in the plural. [Middle English revelen, to carouse, from Old French reveler, to rebel, carouse, from Latin rebellāre, to rebel. See REBEL.] —rev/el-ler, rev/el-er n.

rev·e·la·tion (rĕv'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of revealing or disclosing.

b. Something revealed, especially a dramatic disclosure of something not previously known or realized. 2. Theology. A manifestation of divine will or truth.

3. Revelation. Abbr. Rev., Rv. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Middle English revelacion, from Old French revelation, from Latin revēlātiō, revēlātiōn-, from revēlātus, past participle of revēlāre, to reveal. See REVEAL¹.]

rev·e·la·tor (rĕv'ə-lā'tər) n. One who reveals, especially one who reveals divine will.

rev·e·la·to·ry (rĕv'ə-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē, rĭ-vĕl'ə-) adj. Of, relating to, or containing a revelation: “the distinction between Mrs. and Miss and its concomitant revelatory features” (Mario Pei).

rev·el·ry (rĕv'əl-rĕ) n. pl. rev·el·ries. Boisterous merrymaking.

—rev/el-rous (-rəs) adj.

rev·e·nant (rĕv'ə-nənt) n. 1. One that returns after a lengthy absence. 2. One who returns after death. [French, from present participle of revenir, to return, from Old French, from Latin revenire : re-, re- + venire, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

re·venge (rĭ-vĕnj') v. tr. re·venged, re·veng·ing, re·veng·es. 1. To inflict punishment in return for (injury or insult). 2. To seek or take vengeance for (oneself or another person); avenge. — n. 1. The act of taking vengeance for injuries or wrongs; retaliation. 2. Something done in vengeance; a retaliatory measure. 3. A desire for revenge; spite or vindictiveness. 4. An opportunity to retaliate, as by a return sports match after a defeat. [Middle English revengen, from Old French revengier : re-, re- + vengier, to take revenge (from Latin vindicāre, to avenge, from vindex, vindic-, avenger); see deik- in Appendix.]

—re·veng'er n.

re·venge·ful (rĭ-vĕnj'fəl) adj. Full of or given to revenge. See Synonyms at vindictive. —re·venge/ful·ly adv. —re·venge/ful·ness n.

rev·e·nue (rĕv'ə-nōō, -nyōō) n. Abbr. rev. 1. The income of a government from all sources appropriated for the payment of the public expenses. 2. Yield from property or investment; income. 3. All the income produced by a particular source. 4. A governmental department set up to collect public funds. [Middle English, from Old French, from feminine past participle of revenir, to return, from Latin revenire : re-, re- + venire, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

revenue bond (rĕv'ə-nōō bönd) n. A bond issued by an agency commissioned to finance the building or improving of a public property, such as a bridge or toll road, the revenue from which will pay for the bond.

rev·e·nu·er (rĕv'ə-nōō'ər, -nyōō'-) n. Informal. 1. A government agent in charge of collecting revenue, especially one responsible for halting the unlawful distilling or bootlegging of alcohol. 2. Nautical. A lightly armed motorboat used by revenueurs.

revenue shar·ing (rĕv'ə-nōō shâr'ing) n. Distribution of a portion of federal tax revenues to state and municipal governments. —rev'e-nue-shar'ing (rĕv'ə-nōō-shâr'ing, -nyōō-) adj.

revenue stamp (rĕv'ə-nōō stämp) n. A stamp affixed to an item as proof that a government tax has been paid.

revenue tariff (rĕv'ə-nōō tăr'if) n. A tariff imposed chiefly to generate public revenue.

re·verb (rĭ-vûrb') Informal. n. 1. A reverberative effect produced in recorded music by electronic means. 2. A device used for producing this effect. — v. intr. tr. re·verbed, re·verb·ing, re·verbs. To reverberate or cause to reverberate.

re·ver·ber·ant (rĭ-vûr'bər-ənt) adj. 1. Having a tendency to reverberate.

2. Characterized by reverberation; resounding. —re·ver'ber·ant·ly adv.

re·ver·ber·ate (rĭ-vûr'bə-rāt') v. re·ver·ber·at·ed, re·ver·ber·at·ing, re·ver·ber·ates. — v. intr. 1. To resound in or as if in a succession of echoes; reecho. 2. To be repeatedly reflected, as sound waves, heat, or light. 3. To be forced or driven back; recoil or rebound. — v. tr. 1. To reecho (a sound). See Synonyms at echo. 2. To reflect (heat or light) repeatedly. 3. To drive or force back; repel. 4. To subject (a metal, for example) to treatment in a reverberatory furnace. [Latin reverberāre, reverberāt-, to repel : re-, re- + verberāre, to beat (from verber, whip); see wer² in Appendix.] —re·ver'ber·a·tor n.

re·ver·ber·a·tion (rĭ-vûr'bə-rā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of reverberating. b. The condition of being reverberated. 2. a. Something reverberated. b. An echolike force or effect; a repercussion: Reverberations from the stock market crash were still being felt months later.

reverberation pedal (rĭ-vûr'bə-rā'shən pĕd'l) n. Music. See sustaining pedal.

re·ver·ber·a·tive (rĭ-vûr'bə-rā'tĭv, -bər-ə-) adj. 1. Having the nature of reverberation. 2. Tending to reverberate; reverberant. —re·ver'ber·a·tive·ly adv.

re·ver·ber·a·to·ry (rĭ-vûr'bər-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. 1. Produced or operating by reverberation; deflected or diverted, as flame or heat, onto material being treated. 2. Of, relating to, or being a reverberatory furnace. — n. pl.

re·ver·ber·a·tor·ies. A reverberatory furnace.

reverberatory furnace (rĭ-vûr'bər-ə-tōr'ē fûr'nĭs) n. A furnace or kiln in which the material under treatment is heated indirectly by means of a flame deflected downward from the roof.

re·vere¹ (rĭ-vîr') v. tr. re·vered, re·ver·ing, re·veres. To regard with awe, deference, and devotion. [French révérer, from Old French reverer, from Latin reverēri: re-, re- + verēri, to respect; see wer-³ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: revere, worship, venerate, adore, idolize. These verbs all mean to regard with the deepest respect, deference, and esteem. Revere suggests awe coupled with profound honor: “At least one third of the population... reveres every sort of holy man” (Rudyard Kipling). Worship implies reverent love and homage rendered to God or a god: The ancient Egyptians, who were polytheists, worshiped a number of gods and sacred animals. In a more general sense worship connotes an often uncritical but always very admiring regard: “She had worshiped intellect” (Charles Kingsley). Venerate connotes reverence accorded by virtue especially of dignity, character, or age: “I venerate the memory of my grandfather” (Horace Walpole). To adore is to worship with deep, often rapturous love: “O come, let us adore him, Christ the Lord!” (“Adeste Fideles”). A number of the students detested the subject but adored the teacher. Idolize implies worship like that accorded an object of religious devotion: He idolizes his wife and doesn't care who knows it.

re·vere² (rĭ-vîr', -vâr') n. Variant of revers.

Re·vere (rĭ-vîr') A city of eastern Massachusetts, a mainly residential suburb of Boston on Massachusetts Bay. Population, 42,786.

Re·vere (rĭ-vîr'), Paul. 1735-1818. American silversmith, engraver, and Revolutionary hero. On April 18, 1775, he made his famous ride, celebrated in a poem by Longfellow, to warn of the British advance on Lexington and Concord, Massachusetts.

rev·er·ence (rĕv'ər-əns) n. 1. A feeling of profound awe and respect and often love; veneration. See Synonyms at honor. 2. An act showing respect, especially a bow or curtsy. 3. The state of being revered. 4. Reverence. Used as a form of address for certain members of the Christian clergy: Your Reverence. — v. tr. rev·er·enced, rev·er·enc·ing, rev·er·enc·es. To consider or treat with profound awe and respect; venerate. —rev'·er·enc·er n.

rev·er·end (rĕv'ər-ənd) adj. 1. Deserving reverence. 2. Relating to or characteristic of the clergy; clerical. 3. Reverend. Abbr. Rev. Used as a title and form of address for certain clerics in many Christian churches. In formal usage, preceded by the: the Reverend Jane Doe; Reverend John Jones. — n. Informal. A cleric or minister. Used with the. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin reverendus, gerundive of reverēri, to revere. See REVERE¹.]

rev·er·ent (rĕv'ər-ənt) adj. Marked by, feeling, or expressing reverence. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin reverēns, reverent- present participle of reverēri, to revere. See REVERE¹.] —rev'·er·ent·ly adv.

rev·er·en·tial (rĕv'ə-rĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Expressing reverence; reverent.

2. Inspiring reverence. —rev'er-en'tial-ly adv.

rev·er·ie (rĕv'ə-rĕ) n. 1. A state of abstracted musing; daydreaming. 2. A day-dream: "I felt caught up in a reverie of years long past" (William Styron). [Middle English, revelry, from Old French, from rever, to dream, rave.]

re·vers also re·vere (rĭ-vîr', -vâr') n. pl. revers also re·veres (-vîrz', -vârz').

A part of a garment, such as a lapel, turned back to show the reverse side.

[French, from Old French, reverse. See REVERSE.]

re·ver·sal (rĭ-vîr'səl) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of reversing. b. The state of being reversed. 2. A usually adverse change in fortune: financial reversals.

3. Law. The act or an instance of changing or setting aside a lower court's decision by a higher court.

re·verse (rĭ-vûrs') adj. Abbr. rev. 1. a. Turned backward in position, direction, or order. b. Having the back showing or in view of the observer. 2. Moving, acting, or organized in a manner contrary to the usual. 3. Causing backward movement: a reverse gear. 4. Printing. Printed in such a way that the normally colored part appears white against a colored or black background. — n. Abbr. rev.

1. The opposite or contrary: All along we thought Sue was older than Bill, but just the reverse was true. 2. a. The back or rear part. b. The side of a coin or medal that does not carry the principal design; the verso. 3. A change to an opposite position, condition, or direction. 4. A change in fortune from better to worse; a setback: suffered financial reverses. 5. a. A mechanism, such as a gear in a motor vehicle, that is used to reverse movement. b. The position or operating condition of such a mechanism. c. Movement in an opposite direction. 6. Football. An offensive play in which a back running in one direction executes a handoff to a back running in the opposite direction. — v. re·versed, re·vers·ing, re·vers·es. — v. tr. 1. To turn around to the opposite direction. 2. To turn inside out or upside down. 3. To exchange the positions of; transpose. 4. Law. To revoke or annul (a decision or decree, for example). 5. a. To cause to adopt a contrary viewpoint. b. To change to the opposite: reversed their planned course of action. 6. To cause (an engine or a mechanism) to function in reverse. — v. intr.

1. To turn or move in the opposite direction. 2. To reverse the action of an engine. —idiom. reverse (one's) field. To turn and proceed in the opposite direction. [Middle English revers, from Old French, from Latin reversus, past participle of revertere, to turn back. See REVERT.] —re·verse/ly adv.

—re·vers'er n.

SYNONYMS: reverse, invert, transpose. These verbs are compared as they mean to change to the opposite position, direction, or course. Reverse implies a complete turning about to a contrary position: reversed the paintings for a more satisfying effect. To invert is basically to turn something upside down or inside out, but the term may imply placing something in a reverse order: inverted and aired the mattress; inverting subject and verb to form an interrogative. Transpose applies to altering position in a sequence by reversing or changing the order: often misspells receive by transposing the e and the i.

reverse discrimination (rĭ-vûrs' dĭ-skrĭm'ə-nā'shən) n. Discrimination against members of a dominant group, especially such discrimination resulting from policies established to correct discrimination against members of minority groups.

reverse osmosis (rĭ-vûrs' ōz-mō'sĭs) n. A method of producing pure water by forcing saline or waste water through a semipermeable membrane through which the salts or waste products cannot pass.

reverse transcriptase (rĭ-vûrs' trăn-skrĭp'tās) n. A polymerase that catalyzes the formation of DNA on an RNA template, found in oncogenic viruses containing RNA, especially the retroviruses.

re-vers-i-ble (rĭ-vûr'sə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be reversed, as: a. Finished so that either side can be used: a reversible fabric. b. Wearable with either side turned outward: a reversible skirt; a reversible vest. 2. Chemistry & Physics. Capable of successively assuming or producing either of two states: a reversible cell; a reversible reaction. — n. A reversible fabric or item of clothing. — re-vers'i-bil'i-ty, re-vers'i-ble-ness n. — re-vers'i-bly adv.

re-ver-sion (rĭ-vûr'zhən) n. 1. A return to a former condition, belief, or interest. 2. A turning away or in the opposite direction; a reversal. 3. Genetics. A return to the normal phenotype, usually by a second mutation. 4. Law. a. The return of an estate to the grantor or to the grantor's heirs or successor after the grant has expired. b. The estate thus returned. c. The right to succeed to an estate.

re-ver-sion-ar-y (rĭ-vûr'zhə-nĕr'ē) also re-ver-sion-al (-zhə-nəl) adj. Law. Of or connected with the reversion of an estate.

re-ver-sion-er (rĭ-vûr'zhə-nĕr) n. Law. A party entitled to receive an estate in reversion.

re-vert (rĭ-vûrt') v. intr. re-vert-ed, re-vert-ing, re-verts. 1. To return to a former condition, practice, subject, or belief. See Synonyms at return. See Usage Note at redundancy. 2. Law. To return to the former owner or to the former owner's heirs. Used of money or property. 3. Genetics. To undergo reversion. [Middle English reverten, from Old French revertir, from Vulgar Latin revertire*, variant of Latin revertere: re-, re- + vertere, to turn; see wer⁻² in Appendix.] — re-vert'er n. — re-vert'i-ble adj. — re-ver'tive adj.

re-ver-tant (rĭ-vûr'tnt) Genetics. adj. Having reverted to the normal phenotype, usually by a second mutation: a revertant mutant; revertant cells. — n. A revertant organism, cell, or strain.

re-vest (rē-vĕstʹ) v. tr. re-vest-ed, re-vest-ing, re-vests. 1. To invest (someone) again with power or ownership; reinstate. 2. To vest (power, for example) once again in a person or an agency.

re-vet (rĭ-vĕtʹ) v. re-vet-ted, re-vet-ting, re-vests. — v. tr. To retain (an embankment, for example) with a layer of stone, concrete, or other supporting material; provide with a revetment. — v. intr. To construct a revetment. [French revêtir, from Old French revestir, to clothe again, from Latin revestire: re-, re- + vestire, to clothe (from vestis, garment); see wes-² in Appendix.]

re-vet-ment (rĭ-vĕtʹmĕnt) n. 1. A facing, as of masonry, used to support an embankment. 2. A barricade against explosives.

re-view (rĭ-vyŏŏʹ) v. re-viewed, re-view-ing, re-views. — v. tr. 1. To look over, study, or examine again. 2. To consider retrospectively; look back on. 3. To examine with an eye to criticism or correction: reviewed the research findings. 4. To write or give a critical report on (a new work or performance, for example). 5. Law. To reexamine (an action or a determination) judicially, especially in a higher court, in order to correct possible errors. 6. To subject to a formal inspection, especially a military inspection. — v. intr. 1. To go over or restudy material: reviewing for a final exam. 2. To write critical reviews, especially for a newspaper or magazine. — n. Abbr. rev. 1. A reexamination or reconsideration. 2. A retrospective view or survey. 3. a. A restudying of subject matter. b. An exercise for use in restudying material. 4. An inspection or examination for the purpose of evaluation. 5. a. A report or an essay giving a critical estimate of a work or performance. b. A periodical devoted to articles and essays on current affairs, literature, or art. 6. a. A formal military inspection. b. A formal military ceremony held in honor of a person or an occasion. 7. Law. A judicial reexamination, especially by a higher court, of an action or a determination. 8. A musical show consisting of often satirical skits, songs, and dances; a revue. [Probably from Middle English, inspection of military forces, from Old French revue, review, from feminine past participle of reveoir, to see again, from Latin revidĕre: re-, re- + vidĕre, to see; see weid- in Appendix.] — re-view/a-ble adj.

re-view-er (rĭ-vyŏŏʹĕr) n. One who reviews, especially one who writes critical reviews, as for a newspaper or magazine.

re-vile (rĭ-vĭlʹ) v. re-viled, re-vil-ing, re-viles. — v. tr. To assail with abusive language; vituperate. See Synonyms at scold. — v. intr. To use abusive language. [Middle English revilen, from Old French reviler: re-, re- + vil, vile; see VILE.] — re-vile/ment n. — re-vil'er n. — re-vil'ing-ly adv.

Re-vil-la-gi-ge-do Islands also Re-vil-la Gi-ge-do Islands (rĭ-vĕʹĕ-hĭ-hĕʹdŏ ĭʹlĕndz, rĕ-vĕʹyĕ-hĕ-hĕʹthŏ) An island group of Mexico in the Pacific Ocean south of Baja California. The rocky islands are surrounded by good fishing grounds.

re-vis-al (rĭ-vĭʹzəl) n. The act or an instance of revising; a revision.

re·vise (rĭ-vīz') v. tr. re·vised, re·vis·ing, re·vis·es. 1. To prepare a newly edited version of (a text). 2. To reconsider and change or modify: I have revised my opinion of him. See Synonyms at correct. — n. (rĕ'vīz', rĭ-vīz') Abbr. rev. Printing. A proof made from an earlier proof on which corrections have been made. [Latin revīsere, to visit again, look at again : re-, re- + vīsere, frequentative of vidēre, to see; see REVIEW.] —re·vis'able adj. —re·vis'er, re·vi'sor n.

Re·vised Standard Version (rĭ-vīzd' stān'dərd vûr'zhən) n. Abbr. RSV, R.S.V. A modern American version of the English Bible, a revision of the American Standard Version, completed in 1952.

Revised Version (rĭ-vīzd' vûr'zhən) n. Abbr. Rev. Ver., RV, R.V. A British and American revision of the King James Version of the Bible, completed in 1885.

re·vi·sion (rĭ-vīzh'ən) n. Abbr. rev. 1. The act or process of revising. 2. A revised or new version, as of a book or other written material. —re·vi'-sion·ar'y adj.

re·vi·sion·ism (rĭ-vīzh'ə-nīz'əm) n. 1. Advocacy of the revision of an accepted, usually long-standing view, theory, or doctrine, especially a revision of historical events and movements. 2. A recurrent tendency within the Communist movement to revise Marxist theory in such a way as to provide justification for a retreat from the revolutionary to the reformist position. —re·vi'sion·ist adj. & n.

re·vis·it (rĕ-vīz'it) v. tr. re·vis·it·ed, re·vis·it·ing, re·vis·its. To visit again. — n. A second or repeated visit. —re'vis·i·ta'tion n.

re·vi·so·ry (rĭ-vī'zə-rĕ) adj. Of, relating to, effecting, or having the power of revision.

re·vi·tal·ize (rĕ-vīt'l-īz') v. tr. re·vi·tal·ized, re·vi·tal·iz·ing, re·vi·tal·iz·es. To impart new life or vigor to: plans to revitalize inner-city neighborhoods; tried to revitalize a flagging economy. —re·vi'tal·i·za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

re·viv·al (rĭ-vī'vəl) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of reviving. b. The condition of being revived. 2. A restoration to use, acceptance, activity, or vigor after a period of obscurity or quiescence. 3. A new presentation of an old play, movie, opera, ballet, or similar vehicle. 4. a. A time of reawakened interest in religion. b. A meeting or series of meetings for the purpose of reawakening religious faith, often characterized by impassioned preaching and public testimony. 5. Law. Renewal of validity or effect, as of a contract or judicial decision.

re·viv·al·ism (rĭ-vī'və-līz'əm) n. 1. The spirit or activities characteristic of religious revivals. 2. A desire or an inclination to revive what belongs to an earlier time.

re·viv·al·ist (rĭ-vī'və-līst) n. 1. One who promotes or leads religious revivals. 2. One who revives practices or ideas of an earlier time. —re·viv'al·ist adj. —re·viv'al·is'tic adj.

re-vive (rĭ-vĭv') v. re-vived, re-viv-ing, re-vives. — v. tr. 1. To bring back to life or consciousness; resuscitate. 2. To impart new health, vigor, or spirit to. 3. To restore to use, currency, activity, or notice. 4. To restore the validity or effectiveness of. 5. To renew in the mind; recall. 6. To present (an old play, for example) again. — v. intr. 1. To return to life or consciousness. 2. To regain health, vigor, or good spirits. 3. To return to use, currency, or notice. 4. To return to validity, effectiveness, or operative condition. [Middle English reviven, from Old French revivre, from Latin revĭvere, to live again : re-, re- + vĭvere, to live; see g^wei- in Appendix.] — re-viv'a-ble adj. — re-viv'er n.

SYNONYMS: revive, restore, resuscitate, revivify. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to give renewed well-being, vitality, or strength to”: rains that revive lawns and flowers; an invalid restored by quiet and fresh air; resuscitating old hopes and aspirations; a celebration that revivified our spirits.

re-viv-i-fy (rĕ-vĭv'ə-fĭ') v. tr. re-viv-i-fied, re-viv-i-fy-ing, re-viv-i-fies. To impart new life, energy, or spirit to. See Synonyms at revive. [French revivifier, from Old French, to come back to life, from Latin revĭvificāre*, to revivify : Latin re-, re- + Latin vĭvificāre, to vivify; see VIVIFY.] — re-viv'i-fi-ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n.

rev-o-ca-ble (rĕv'ə-kə-bəl) also re-vok-a-ble (rĭ-vō'-) adj. That can be revoked: a revocable order; a revocable vote.

rev-o-ca-tion (rĕv'ə-kā'shən) n. The act or an instance of revoking. [Middle English revocacion, from Old French, from Latin revocātiō, revocātiōn-, from revocātus, past participle of revocāre, to call back. See REVOKE.] — rev'o-ca-to'ry (rĕv'ə-kə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

re-vok-a-ble (rĭ-vō'kə-bəl) adj. Variant of revocable.

re-voke (rĭ-vōk') v. re-voked, re-vok-ing, re-vokes. — v. tr. To void or annul by recalling, withdrawing, or reversing: Her license was revoked. — v. intr. Games. To fail to follow suit in cards when required and able to do so. — n. Games. Failure to follow suit in a card game. [Middle English revoken, from Old French revoquer, from Latin revocāre : re-, re- + vocāre, to call; see wek^w- in Appendix.] — re-vok'er n.

re-volt (rĭ-vōlt') v. re-volt-ed, re-volt-ing, re-volts. — v. intr. 1. To attempt to overthrow the authority of the state; rebel. 2. To oppose or refuse to accept something: revolting against high taxes. 3. a. To feel disgust or repugnance: to revolt at a public display of cruelty. b. To turn away in revulsion or abhorrence: They revolted from the sight. — v. tr. To fill with disgust or abhorrence; repel. See Synonyms at disgust. — n. 1. An uprising, especially against state authority; a rebellion. See Synonyms at rebellion. 2. An act of protest or rejection. 3. The state of a person or persons in rebellion: students in revolt over administrative policies. [French revolter, from Italian rivoltare, to turn round, from Vulgar Latin revolvitāre*, frequentative of Latin revolvere, to turn over. See REVOLVE.] —re-volt'er n.

re-volt-ing (rĭ-vōl'tĭng) adj. Causing abhorrence or disgust. See Synonyms at offensive. —re-volt'ing-ly adv.

rev-o-lute (rĕv'ə-lōōt') adj. Botany. Rolled backward from the tip or margins to the undersurface: a revolute leaf. [Latin revolūtus, past participle of revolvere, to roll back. See REVOLVE.]

rev-o-lu-tion (rĕv'ə-lōō'shən) n. Abbr. rev. 1. a. Orbital motion about a point, especially as distinguished from axial rotation: the planetary revolution about the sun. b. A turning or rotational motion about an axis. c. A single complete cycle of such orbital or axial motion. 2. The overthrow of one government and its replacement with another. See Synonyms at rebellion. 3. A sudden or momentous change in a situation: the revolution in computer technology.

4. Geology. A time of major crustal deformation, when folds and faults are formed. [Middle English revolucioun, from Old French revolution, from Late Latin revolūtiō, revolūtiōn-, from Latin revolūtus, past participle of revolvere, to turn over. See REVOLVE.]

rev-o-lu-tion-ar-y (rĕv'ə-lōō'shə-nĕr'ē) adj. 1. a. Often Revolutionary. Of, relating to, or being a revolution: revolutionary war; a museum of the Revolutionary era. b. Bringing about or supporting a political or social revolution: revolutionary pamphlets. 2. Characterized by or resulting in radical change: a revolutionary discovery. — n. pl. rev-o-lu-tion-ar-ies. 1. A militant in the struggle for revolution. 2. A supporter of revolutionary principles.

—rev'o-lu'tion-ar'i-ly adv. —rev'o-lu'tion-ar'i-ness n.

rev-o-lu-tion-ist (rĕv'ə-lōō'shə-nĭst) n. One who favors or is engaged in a revolution. —rev'o-lu'tion-ist adj.

rev-o-lu-tion-ize (rĕv'ə-lōō'shə-nĭz') v. tr. rev-o-lu-tion-ized, rev-o-lu-tion-iz-ing, rev-o-lu-tion-iz-es. 1. To bring about a radical change in: Television has revolutionized news coverage. 2. To subject to a political or social revolution. 3. To fill with revolutionary principles. —rev'o-lu'tion-iz'er n.

re-volve (rĭ-vōlv') v. re-volved, re-volv-ing, re-volves. — v. intr. 1. To orbit a central point. 2. To turn on an axis; rotate. See Synonyms at turn. 3. To recur in cycles or at periodic intervals. 4. To be held in the mind and considered in turn. 5. To be centered: Their troubles revolve around money management.

— v. tr. 1. To cause to revolve. 2. To ponder or reflect on. [Middle English revolven, to change direction, from Old French revolver, to reflect upon, from Latin revolvere, to turn over, roll back, reflect upon : re-, re- + volvere, to roll; see wel-² in Appendix.] —re-volv'a-ble adj.

re·volv·er (rĭ-vŏl'vər) n. 1. A pistol having a revolving cylinder with several cartridge chambers that may be fired in succession. 2. One that revolves, as a part of a mechanism.

re·volv·ing (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng) adj. 1. Tending to revolve or happen repeatedly. 2. Available at regular intervals.

revolving charge account (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng chärj ə-kount') n. A charge account that features revolving credit, monthly repayments, and a carrying charge.

revolving credit (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng krĕd'ĭt) n. Credit repeatedly available up to a specified amount as periodic repayments are made.

revolving door (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng dŏr) n. 1. A door, as in the entrance of an office or apartment building, usually consisting of four rigid upright sections interconnected at right angles and rotating about a central, upright pivot. 2. Informal. An organization, an institution, or a place whose members, personnel, or population remain only a short time before going elsewhere. —re·volv'ing-door' (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng-dŏr', -dŏr') adj.

revolving fund (rĭ-vŏl'vĭng fünd) n. A fund established for a certain purpose, such as making loans, with the stipulation that repayments to the fund may be used anew for the same purpose.

re·vue (rĭ-vyŏŏ') n. A musical show consisting of skits, songs, and dances, often satirizing current events, trends, and personalities. [French, from Old French, review. See REVIEW.]

re·vulsed (rĭ-vŭlst') adj. Affected with or having experienced revulsion.

re·vul·sion (rĭ-vŭl'shən) n. 1. A sudden, strong change or reaction in feeling, especially a feeling of violent disgust or loathing. 2. A withdrawing or turning away from something. 3. Medicine. Counterirritation used to reduce inflammation or increase the blood supply to the affected area. [Latin revulsiō, revulsiōn-, from revulsus, past participle of revellere, to tear back : re-, re- + vellere, to tear.] —re·vul'sive adj.

Rev. Ver. abbr. Bible. Revised Version.

re·wake (rĕ-wāk') v. re·woke (-wŏk') or re·waked, re·waked or re·wok·en (-wŏ'kən), re·wak·ing, re·wakes. — v. tr. To waken again. — v. intr. To become awake again.

re·wak·en (rĕ-wā'kən) v. tr. intr. re·wak·ened, re·wak·en·ing, re·wak·ens. To rouse (another) or to become awake again.

re·ward (rĭ-wŏrd') n. 1. Something given or received in recompense for worthy behavior or in retribution for evil acts. 2. Money offered or given for some special service, such as the return of a lost article or the capture of a criminal. See Synonyms at bonus. 3. A satisfying return or result; profit. 4. Psychology. The return for performance of a desired behavior; positive reinforcement. — v. tr. re·ward·ed, re·ward·ing, re·wards. 1. To give a reward to or for. 2. To satisfy or gratify; recompense. [Middle English reward, from Anglo-Norman, reward, from rewarder, to take notice of : re-, intensive pref. (from Latin; see re- + warder, to guard, watch over of Germanic origin); see wer-³ in Appendix.]

—re·ward/'a·ble adj. —re·ward/'er n.

re·ward·ing (rĭ-wôr'dĭng) adj. 1. Offering or likely to offer satisfaction or gratification: a very rewarding career as a paramedic. 2. Affording profit; remunerative: a rewarding business venture. 3. Constituting a reward: a rewarding hug. —re·ward/'ing·ly adv.

re·wind (rē-wĭnd') v. tr. re·wound (-wound'), re·wind·ing, re·winds.

1. To wind again or anew. 2. To reverse the winding of (recording tape or camera film). — n. (rē'wĭnd', rē-wĭnd') 1. The act or process of rewinding.

2. Something that rewinds or is rewound. 3. A control mechanism for rewinding (tape or film). —re·wind/'er n.

re·wire (rē-wĭr') v. re·wired, re·wir·ing, re·wires. — v. tr. To provide with new wiring: rewired the old house. — v. intr. To install new wiring.

re·woke (rē-wōk') v. A past tense of rewake.

re·wok·en (rē-wō'kən) v. A past participle of rewake.

re·word (rē-wŭrd') v. tr. re·word·ed, re·word·ing, re·words. 1. a. To change the wording of. b. To state or express again in different words. 2. To state or express again in the same words; repeat.

re·work (rē-wŭrk') v. tr. re·worked, re·work·ing, re·works. 1. To work over again; revise. 2. To subject to a repeated or new process. — n. (rē'wŭrk') Something reworked: just a rework of an old speech.

re·wound (rē-wound') v. Past tense and past participle of rewind.

re·write (rē-rĭt') v. re·wrote (-rōt'), re·writ·ten (-rĭt'n), re·writ·ing, re·writes. — v. tr. 1. To write again, especially in a different or improved form; revise. 2. To put (material submitted to a newspaper or magazine) in a form suitable for publishing. — v. intr. To make revisions in written material. — n. (rē'rĭt') 1. The act or an instance of rewriting. 2. Something rewritten. —re·writ/'er n.

Rex·roth (rĕks'rōth'), Kenneth. 1905-1982. American writer and translator known especially for his poetry, collected in volumes such as The Phoenix and the Tortoise (1944) and In Defense of Earth (1956).

Reyes (rāz), Point. A promontory on the central California coast northwest of San Francisco. It is reported to be the windiest and foggiest place on the western coast of the continental United States, with an average of 137 foggy days a year.

Reye's syndrome (rĭz sĭn'drōm', rāz) n. An acute encephalopathy characterized by fever, vomiting, fatty infiltration of the liver, disorientation, and coma, occurring mainly in children and usually following a viral infection, such as chicken pox or influenza. [After Ralph Douglas Kenneth Reye (1912-1978), Australian pediatrician.]

Rey·kja·vík (rā'kyə-vēk', -vīk') The capital and largest city of Iceland, in the southwest part of the island. Traditionally founded in 874, it became capital of the country in 1918 after Denmark recognized Iceland's sovereignty. Population, 88,745.

Rey·mont (rā'mönt', -mônt'), Wladyslaw Stanislaw. 1867-1925. Polish writer whose novels include The Comedienne (1896) and The Peasants (1904-1909). He won the 1924 Nobel Prize for literature.

Rey·nard or rey·nard (rā'nərd, -nərd', rēn'ərd) n. A fox. [Middle English Renard, Reynard, from Old French Renart, and Middle Dutch Reynaert, the name of the fox in the beast epic Roman de Renart.]

Rey·naud (rā-nō'), Paul. 1878-1966. French politician who served briefly as premier (1940) but was replaced by Philippe Pétain, who surrendered to the Germans. Imprisoned by the Vichy government, Reynaud later served as finance minister (1948) and vice premier (1953).

Reyn·olds (rēn'əldz), Sir Joshua. 1723-1792. British portrait painter and critic considered one of the most important figures in the history of English painting.

Rey·nolds·burg (rēn'əldz-bûrg') A city of central Ohio, a suburb of Columbus in an agricultural area. Population, 25,748.

Rey·no·sa (rā-nō'sə) A city of eastern Mexico on the Rio Grande east-northeast of Monterrey. It is a processing and shipping center in an agricultural region. Population, 194,693.

re·zone (rē-zōn') v. tr. re-zoned, re-zon·ing, re-zones. To change the zoning classification of (a neighborhood or property, for example). —re'zone' n.

RF abbr. 1. Radio frequency. 2. Baseball. Right field; right fielder.

rf. abbr. 1. Reef. 2. Refund.

R factor (är' fāk'tər) n. A genetic factor of bacteria that transmits resistance to antibiotics from one bacterium to another by conjugation. [R(ESISTANCE).]

RFD also R.F.D. abbr. Rural free delivery.

Rh¹ (är'āch') adj. Of or relating to the Rh factor: an Rh antigen; the Rh blood group; Rh incompatibility.

Rh² The symbol for the element rhodium.

r.h. abbr. 1. Relative humidity. 2. Also RH. Right-hand.

rhab·dom (răb'dəm, -döm') n. A transparent rod in the center of each ommatidium in the compound eye of an arthropod. [From Greek rhabdōma, bundle of rods, from Greek rhabdos, rod. See RHABDOMANCY.]

rhab·do·man·cy (răb'də-măn'sē) n. Divination by means of a wand or rod, especially for discovering underground water or ores. [Late Greek rhabdomanteia: Greek rhabdos, rod; see wer-² in Appendix + Greek -manteia, -mancy.] —rhab'do·man'cer n.

rhab·do·my·o·ma (răb'dō-mī-ō'mə) n. pl. rhab·do·my·o·mas or rhab·do·my·o·ma·ta (-mə-tə). Pathology. A tumor in striated muscle fibers.

[Greek rhabdos, rod; see RHABDOMANCY + MYOMA.]

rhab·do·vi·rus (răb'də-vī'rəs) n. pl. rhab·do·vi·rus·es. Any of a group of RNA-containing plant and animal viruses, which includes the rabies virus.

[Greek rhabdos, rod; see wer² in Appendix + VIRUS.]

Rhad·a·man·thine (răd'ə-măn'thīn, -thīn') adj. Strictly and uncompromisingly just. [From RHADAMANTHUS.]

Rhad·a·man·thus also Rhad·a·man·thys (răd'ə-măn'thəs) n. Greek Mythology. A son of Zeus and Europa who, in reward for his exemplary sense of justice, was made a judge of the underworld after his death. [Latin, from Greek Rhadamanthos.]

Rhae·ti·a (rē'shē-ə, -shə) An ancient Roman province that included present-day eastern Switzerland and western Austria. It was added to the Roman Empire during the reign of Augustus. —Rhae'tian adj. & n.

Rhaetian Alps (rē'shē-ən əlps) A range of the central Alps primarily in eastern Switzerland and along the Italian and Austrian borders. It rises to Piz Bernina, 4,051.6 m (13,284 ft) high, in the Bernina section of the range on the Italian border.

Rhae·to·Ro·mance (rē'tō-rō-məns') n. A group of three Romance dialects, including Romansch, spoken in southern Switzerland, northern Italy, and the Tyrol. [Latin Rhaetus, of Rhaetia, a Roman province + ROMANCE.]

Rha·gae (ră'jē) An ancient city of Media southeast of modern Tehran in north-central Iran. One of the greatest cities of ancient times, it was traditionally founded in 3000 B.C. and flourished until the Middle Ages. The city was finally destroyed by Tartars in the 12th century A.D.

rha·phe (ră'fē) n. Variant of raphe.

rhap·sod·ic (răp-səd'ik) also rhap·sod·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. 1. Of, resembling, or characteristic of a rhapsody. 2. Immoderately impassioned or enthusiastic; ecstatic. —rhap·sod'i·cal·ly adv.

rhap·so·dist (răp'sə-dīst) n. 1. One who uses extravagantly enthusiastic or impassioned language. 2. One who recited epic and other poetry, especially professionally, in ancient Greece.

rhap·so·dize (răp'sə-dīz') v. rhap·so·dized, rhap·so·diz·ing, rhap·so·diz·es. — v. intr. To express oneself in an immoderately enthusiastic manner. — v. tr. To recite (something) in the manner of a rhapsody.

rhap·so·dy (răp'sə-dē) n. pl. rhap·so·dies. 1. Exalted or excessively enthusiastic expression of feeling in speech or writing. 2. A literary work written in an impassioned or exalted style. 3. A state of elated bliss; ecstasy. 4. Music. A composition of irregular form and often improvisatory character. 5. An ancient Greek epic poem or a portion of one suitable for uninterrupted recitation. [Latin rhapsōdia, section of an epic poem, from Greek rhapsōidia, from rhapsōidein, to recite poems : rhaptein, rhaps-, to sew; see wer-2 in Appendix + ōidē, song; see wed-2 in Appendix.]

rhat·a·ny (răt'n-ē) n. pl. rhat·a·nies. 1. Either of two South American shrubs (Krameria lappacea or K. argentea) having bilaterally symmetrical flowers, spiny globose fruits, and thick roots. 2. The dried root of either of these plants, formerly used as an astringent and now used in various dental preparations, such as toothpaste and mouthwash. [American Spanish ratania, possibly from Quechua ratana, to thin, unite.]

rhbdr. abbr. Rhombohedron.

rhe·a (rē'ə) n. Any of several flightless South American birds of the genus Rhea, resembling the ostrich but somewhat smaller and having three toes instead of two. [New Latin Rhea, genus name, probably from Latin, the wife of Cronus. See RHEA.]

Rhe·a (rē'ə) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The sister and wife of Cronus and the mother of Demeter, Hades, Hera, Hestia, Poseidon, and Zeus. 2. Astronomy. The satellite of Saturn that is 13th in distance from the planet. [Latin, from Greek.]

Rhee (rē), Syngman. 1875-1965. Korean politician who became president of South Korea in 1948. His dictatorial rule ended in 1960, when he was forced out of office and into exile.

Rheims or Reims (rēmz, răns) A city of northeast France east-northeast of Paris. One of the most important cities of Roman Gaul, it was long the site of the coronation of French kings. In World War II the unconditional German surrender was signed at Allied headquarters here on May 7, 1945. Population, 194,656.

Rhei·ne (rī'nə) A city of northwest Germany on the Ems River north of Münster. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 70,685.

Rhen·ish (rēn'ish) adj. Of or relating to the Rhine River or the lands bordering on it. — n. See Rhine wine (n., sense 1). [Ultimately from Latin Rhēnus, the Rhine.]

rhe·ni·um (rē'nē-əm) n. Symbol Re A rare, dense, silvery-white metallic element with a very high melting point used for electrical contacts and with tungsten for high-temperature thermocouples. Atomic number 75; atomic weight 186.2; melting point 3,180°C; boiling point 5,627°C; specific gravity 21.02; valence 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7. [From Latin Rhēnus, the Rhine.]

rheo. abbr. Rheostat.

rheo- pref. Current; flow: rheotaxis. [From Greek rheos, stream, from rhein, to flow. See sreu- in Appendix.]

rhe·ol·o·gy (rē-ōl'ə-jē) n. The study of the deformation and flow of matter.

—rhe'o·log'i·cal (rē'ə-lōj'i-kəl) adj. —rhe'o·log'i·cal·ly adv.

—rhe·ol'o·gist n.

rhe-om-e-ter (rē-ōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument for measuring the flow of viscous liquids, such as blood.

rhe-o-stat (rē'ə-stāt') n. Abbr. rheo. A continuously variable electrical resistor used to regulate current. —rhe'o-stat'ic adj.

rhe-o-tax-is (rē'ə-tāk'sīs) n. Movement of an organism in response to a current of water or air. —rhe'o-tac'tic (-tāk'tik) adj.

rhe-sus (rē'səs) n. A rhesus monkey. [Latin Rhēsus, a mythical king of Thrace, from Greek Rhēsos.]

Rhe-sus factor (rē'səs fāk'tər) n. Rh factor.

rhesus monkey (rē'səs mŭng'kē) n. A brownish monkey (Macaca mulatta) of India, used extensively in biological and medical research.

rhet. abbr. Rhetoric.

rhe-tor (rē'tôr', -tər) n. 1. A teacher of rhetoric. 2. An orator. [Middle English rether, from Latin rhētor, from Greek rhētōr. See wer⁻⁵ in Appendix.]

rhet-o-ric (rēt'ər-ik) n. Abbr. rhet. 1. a. The art or study of using language effectively and persuasively. b. A treatise or book discussing this art. 2. Skill in using language effectively and persuasively. 3. a. A style of speaking or writing, especially the language of a particular subject: fiery political rhetoric. b. Language that is elaborate, pretentious, insincere, or intellectually vacuous: His offers of compromise were mere rhetoric. 4. Verbal communication; discourse. [Middle English rethorik, from Old French rethorique, from Latin rhētoricē, rhētorica, from Greek rhētorikē (tekhnē), rhetorical (art), feminine of rhētorikos, rhetorical, from rhētōr, rhētor-, rhetor. See RHETOR.]

USAGE NOTE: The word rhetoric was once primarily the name of an important branch of philosophy and an art deserving of serious study. In recent years the word has come to be used chiefly in a pejorative sense to refer to inflated language and pomposity. Deprecation of the term may result from a modern linguistic puritanism, which holds that language used in legitimate persuasion should be plain and free of artifice—itself a tendentious rhetorical doctrine, though not often recognized as such. But many writers still prefer to bear in mind the traditional meanings of the word. Thus, according to the newer use of the term, the phrase empty rhetoric, as in The politicians talk about solutions, but they usually offer only empty rhetoric, might be construed as redundant. But in fact only 35 percent of the Usage Panel judged this example to be redundant. Presumably, it can be maintained that rhetoric can be other than empty.

rhe-tor-i-cal (rī-tôr'ī-kəl, -tôr'-) adj. 1. Of or relating to rhetoric.

2. Characterized by overelaborate or bombastic rhetoric. 3. Used for persuasive effect: a speech punctuated by rhetorical pauses. —rhe-tor'i-cal-ly adv.

rhetorical question (rĭ-tôr'ĭ-kəl kwēs'chən) n. A question to which no answer is expected, often used for rhetorical effect.

rhet-o-ri-cian (rĕt'ə-rĭsh'ən) n. 1. An expert in or teacher of rhetoric. 2. An eloquent speaker or writer. 3. A person given to verbal extravagance.

rheum (rōom) n. A watery or thin mucous discharge from the eyes or nose. [Middle English reume, from Old French, from Late Latin rheuma, from Greek, a flowing, rheum. See sreu- in Appendix.] —rheum'y adj.

rheu-mat-ic (rōo-măt'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or suffering from rheumatism. — n. 1. One who is affected by rheumatism. 2. rheumatics. Informal. Pains caused by rheumatism. [Middle English reumatik, of rheum, from Old French reumatique, from Latin rheumaticus, suffering from rheum, from Greek rheumatikos, from rheuma, rheumat-, stream. See RHEUM.]

rheumatic fever (rōo-măt'ĭk fē'vər) n. A severe infectious disease occurring chiefly in children, characterized by fever and painful inflammation of the joints and frequently resulting in permanent damage to the valves of the heart.

rheumatic heart disease (rōo-măt'ĭk härt dĭ-zēz') n. Permanent damage to the valves of the heart caused especially by repeated attacks of rheumatic fever.

rheu-ma-tism (rōo'mə-tĭz'əm) n. 1. Any of several pathological conditions of the muscles, tendons, joints, bones, or nerves, characterized by discomfort and disability. 2. Rheumatoid arthritis. [Latin rheumatismus, rheum, from Greek rheumatismos, from rheumatizesthai, to suffer from rheum, from rheuma, rheumat-, rheum. See RHEUM.]

rheu-ma-toid (rōo'mə-toid') also rheu-ma-toi-dal (rōo'mə-toid'l) adj.

1. Of or resembling rheumatism. 2. Suffering from rheumatism.

—rheu'ma-toi'dal-ly adv.

rheumatoid arthritis (rōo'mə-toid' är-thrĭ'tĭs) n. A chronic disease marked by stiffness and inflammation of the joints, weakness, loss of mobility, and deformity.

rheumatoid factor (rōo'mə-toid' fāk'tər) n. An immunoglobulin present in the blood serum of many individuals affected by rheumatoid arthritis, used as a means of diagnosing the disease.

rheu-ma-tol-o-gy (rōo'mə-tōl'ə-jē) n. The medical science that deals with the study and treatment of rheumatic diseases. —rheu'ma-tol'o-gist n.

Rh factor (är'äch' fāk'tər) n. Any of several substances on the surface of red blood cells that induce a strong antigenic response in individuals lacking the substance. [From RH(ESUS MONKEY), from its being first detected in the blood of this animal.]

rhin- pref. Variant of rhino-.

rhi-nal (rĭ'nəl) adj. Of or relating to the nose; nasal.

Rhine (rĭn) A river of western Europe formed by the confluence of two tributaries in eastern Switzerland and flowing about 1,319 km (820 mi) north and northwest through Germany and the Netherlands to its two-pronged outlet on the North Sea. It is a major commercial shipping waterway linked by canals to other important European rivers and passes through a number of scenic valleys.

Rhine (rīn), Joseph Banks. 1895-1980. American psychologist noted for his pioneering work in parapsychology.

Rhine-land (rīn'länd', -lənd) A region along the Rhine River in western Germany. It includes noted vineyards and highly industrial sections north of Bonn and Cologne.

rhi-nen-ceph-a-lon (rī'nĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏn', -lən) n. pl. rhi-nen-ceph-a-la (-lə). The olfactory region of the brain, located in the cerebrum.

—rhi-nen-ce-phal'ic (-sə-fäl'ik) adj.

rhine-stone (rīn'stŏn') n. A colorless artificial gem of paste or glass, often with facets that sparkle in imitation of a diamond. [After the Rhine (translation of French caillou du Rhin : caillou, pebble + du, of the + Rhin, Rhine).] —rhine-stoned' adj.

WORD HISTORY: Although rhinestones are inseparably associated with the costumes of country and western singers and Las Vegas showgirls, the word originally had European associations. The Rhine in rhinestone is the Rhine River, and rhinestone is a translation into English of the French phrase caillou du Rhin. Originally a rhinestone was a kind of rock crystal that was found in or near the Rhine and given a fancy name, as have other types of rock crystal such as Cornish diamond. Such stones could be made to imitate diamonds; hence the name rhinestone was applied to artificial gems made from paste, glass, or gem quartz. Rhinestones have spread far beyond the Rhine, becoming a central ingredient of certain aspects of Americana. Cornish diamonds have not shared the same fate.

Rhine wine (rīn wīn) n. 1. Any of several dry white wines produced in the Rhine Valley. Also called Rhenish 2. A similar light, dry wine.

rhi-ni-tis (rī-nī'tis) n. Inflammation of the nasal mucous membranes.

rhi-no¹ (rī'nŏ) n. pl. rhi-nos. Informal. A rhinoceros.

rhi-no² (rī'nŏ) n. pl. rhino. Chiefly British. Money; cash. [Origin unknown.]

rhino- or rhin- pref. Nose; nasal: rhinitis. [Greek, from rhis, rhin-, nose.]

rhi-noc-er-os (rī-nŏs'ər-əs) n. pl. rhinoceros or rhi-noc-er-os-es. Any of several large, thick-skinned, herbivorous mammals of the family Rhinocerotidae, of Africa and Asia, having one or two upright horns on the snout. [Middle English rinoceros, from Latin rhīnocerŏs, from Greek rhīnokerŏs : rhino-, rhino- + keras, horn; see ker-¹ in Appendix.]

rhinoceros beetle (rī-nŏs'ər-əs bĕt'l) n. Any of various large scarabaeid beetles of the genus Dynastes and related genera, characterized by horns on the head and thorax and found in tropical regions.

rhi·nol·o·gy (rī-nōl'ə-jē) n. The anatomy, physiology, and pathology of the nose. —rhi·nol'·o·gist n.

rhi·no·phar·yn·gi·tis (rī'nō-fār'īn-jī'tis) n. Inflammation of the nasal and pharyngeal mucous membranes.

rhi·no·plas·ty (rī'nō-plās'tē, -nə-) n. pl. rhi·no·plas·ties. Plastic surgery of the nose. —rhi'no·plas'tic adj.

rhi·nos·co·py (rī-nōs'kə-pē) n. pl. rhi·nos·co·pies. Examination of the nasal passages by means of a speculum or similar instrument.

rhi·no·vi·rus (rī'nō-vī'rəs) n. pl. rhi·no·vi·rus·es. Any of a group of picornaviruses that are causative agents of disorders of the respiratory tract, such as the common cold.

rhiz- pref. Variant of rhizo-.

rhi·zan·thous (rī-zăn'thəs) adj. Botany. Bearing flowers directly from the root.

rhizo- or rhiz- pref. Root: rhizogenic. [Greek, from rhiza, root. See wrād- in Appendix.]

rhi·zo·bi·um (rī-zō'bē-əm) n. pl. rhi·zo·bi·a (-bē-ə). Any of various nitrogen-fixing bacteria of the genus Rhizobium that form nodules on the roots of leguminous plants, such as clover and beans. [New Latin Rhizobium, genus name : RHIZO- + Greek bios, life; see g^wei- in Appendix.]

rhi·zo·ceph·a·lan (rī'zō-séf'ə-lən) n. Any of various small aquatic crustaceans of the order Rhizocephala that are parasitic on other crustaceans. [From New Latin Rhizocephala, order name : RHIZO- + Greek kephalē, head; see CEPHALO-.] —rhi'zo·ceph'a·lous (-ləs) adj.

rhi·zo·gen·ic (rī'zō-jěn'ik) also rhi·zo·ge·net·ic (-jə-nēt'ik) adj. Botany. Giving rise to or producing roots: rhizogenic tissue.

rhi·zoid (rī'zoid') n. 1. A slender rootlike filament by which mosses, liverworts, and fern gametophytes attach to the substratum and absorb nourishment. 2. A rootlike extension of the thallus of a fungus. —rhi'zoid', rhi·zoi'dal (-zoid'l) adj.

rhi·zome (rī'zōm') n. A horizontal, usually underground stem that often sends out roots and shoots from its nodes. Also called rootstalk, rootstock. [Greek rhizōma, mass of roots, from rhizoun, to cause to take root, from rhiza, root. See wrād- in Appendix.] —rhi·zom'a·tous (-zōm'ə-təs, -zō'mə-) adj. —rhi·zom'ic adj.

rhi·zoph·a·gous (rī-zōf'ə-gəs) adj. Feeding on roots.

rhi·zo·pod (rī'zō-pōd', -zə-) n. A protozoan of the phylum Rhizopoda, such as an amoeba or a radiolarian, characteristically moving and taking in food by means of pseudopods. [From New Latin Rhizopoda, phylum name : RHIZO- + New Latin -poda, -pod.] —rhi·zop'o·dan (-zōp'ə-dən) adj. , n.

—rhi·zop'o·dous adj.

rhi-zo-pus (rī'zō-pəs, -zə-) n. Any of various rot-causing fungi of the genus Rhizopus, such as R. nigricans, the common bread mold. [New Latin Rhizopus, genus name : RHIZO- + Greek pous, pod-, foot; see -POD.]

rhi-zo-sphere (rī'zə-sfīr') n. The soil zone that surrounds and is influenced by the roots of plants.

rhi-zot-o-my (rī-zōt'ə-mē) n. pl. rhi-zot-o-mies. Surgical severance of spinal nerve roots to relieve pain or hypertension.

Rh-neg-a-tive (är'äch-nĕg'ə-tīv) adj. Lacking an Rh factor.

rho (rō) n. The 17th letter of the Greek alphabet. [Greek rhō, of Phoenician origin; akin to Hebrew rēsh.]

Rho (rō) A city of northern Italy, an industrial suburb of Milan. Population, 50,740.

rhod- pref. Variant of rhodo-.

rho-da-mine (rō'də-mĕn') n. Any of several synthetic red to pink dyes having brilliant fluorescent qualities.

Rhode Island¹ (rōd ī'lənd) An island of Rhode Island at the entrance to Narragansett Bay. Originally known as Aquidneck Island, it was renamed Rhode Island in 1644, probably after the isle of Rhodes.

Rhode Island² (rōd ī'lənd) Abbr. RI, R.I. A state of the northeast United States on the Atlantic Ocean. It was admitted as one of the original Thirteen Colonies in 1790. Rhode Island was settled by religious exiles from Massachusetts, including Roger Williams, who founded Providence in 1636. It was granted a royal charter in 1663 and after the American Revolution began the industrialization that is still a major part of the state's economy. Providence is the capital and the largest city. Population, 1,005,984. —Rhode Is'land-er n.

Rhode Island Red (rōd ī'lənd rĕd) n. Any of an American breed of domestic fowls having dark reddish-brown feathers.

Rhodes (rōdz) An island of southeast Greece in the Aegean Sea off southwest Turkey. It is the largest of the Dodecanese Islands and was colonized by Dorians from Argos before 1000 B.C. and strongly influenced by the Minoan culture of Crete. The ancient city of Rhodes, on the northeast end of the island near the present-day city of Rhodes, was founded c. 408 B.C. Its harbor was the site of the Colossus of Rhodes, a bronze statue erected 292-280 B.C. that was one of the Seven Wonders of the World. The modern city has a population of 40,392.

Rhodes (rōdz), Cecil John. 1853-1902. British financier and colonizer who became prime minister of Cape Colony in 1890 but was forced to resign in 1896 after attempting to overthrow the Boer regime in the Transvaal. He later helped colonize the territory now called Zimbabwe.

Rhodes (rōdz), James Ford. 1848-1927. American historian known for his seven-volume History of the United States from the Compromise of 1850 (1893-1906).

Rho-de-sia (rō-dē'zhə) 1. A region of south-central Africa south of Zaire and comprising modern-day Zambia and Zimbabwe. Probably inhabited since ancient times, it was formerly administered by the British South Africa Company.

2. See Zimbabwe². —Rho-de'sian adj. & n.

Rhodesia and Ny-as-a-land (rō-dē'zhə ənd nī-ās'ə-länd', nyä'sä-) A former colonial federation (1953-1963) of south-central Africa that included the present-day countries of Zimbabwe, Zambia, and Malawi.

Rhodesian man (rō-dē'zhən mǎn) n. A fossil human (Homo rhodesiensis or Cyphanthropus rhodesiensis) found in south-central Africa, having a large low skull with massive brow ridges and skeletal bones like those of modern human beings.

Rhodesian ridgeback (rō-dē'zhən rīj'bǎk') n. Any of a breed of large dog developed in Africa, having short, yellowish-tan hair that forms a ridge along the back.

Rhodes scholar (rōdz sköl'ər) n. A student who holds a scholarship established by the will of Cecil J. Rhodes that permits attendance at Oxford University for a period of two or three years. —Rhodes scholarship n.

rho-di-um (rō'dē-əm) n. Symbol Rh A hard, durable, silvery-white metallic element that is used to form high-temperature alloys with platinum and is plated on other metals to produce a durable corrosion-resistant coating. Atomic number 45; atomic weight 102.905; melting point 1,966°C; boiling point 3,727°C; specific gravity 12.41; valence 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. [Greek rhodo-, rhodo- + -IUM.]

rhodo- or rhod- pref. Rose; rosy; red: rhodolite. [Greek, from rhodon, rose.]

rho-do-chro-site (rō'də-krō'sīt') n. A mineral consisting mainly of manganese carbonate, $MnCO_3$, light pink to rose-red in color with a pearly or vitreous luster, used as a manganese ore. [From German Rhodochrosit, from Greek rhodokhrōs, rose-colored : rhodo-, rhodo- + khros, color.]

rho-do-den-dron (rō'də-dēn'drən) n. Any of numerous usually evergreen ornamental shrubs of the genus Rhododendron of the North Temperate Zone, having clusters of variously colored, often bell-shaped flowers. [Latin, oleander, from Greek : rhodo-, rhodo- + dendron, tree; see deru- in Appendix.]

rho-do-lite (rōd'l-īt') n. A rose-red or pink variety of garnet, a silicate mineral used as a gem.

rho-do-mon-tade (rōd'ə-mōn-tād', -tād', rō'də-) n. Variant of rodomontade.

rho-do-nite (rōd'n-īt') n. A pink to rose-red mineral, essentially a glassy crystalline manganese silicate, $MnSiO_3$, used as an ornamental stone. [From Greek rhodon, rose.]

Rhod-o-pe Mountains (rōd'ə-pē moun'tənz, rō-dō'-) A range in the Balkan Peninsula of southeast Europe extending southeast from southwest Bulgaria to northeast Greece and rising to 2,926.8 m (9,596 ft). In Roman times the range marked the boundary between Thrace and Macedonia.

rho·dop·sin (rō-dōp'sīn) n. The pigment sensitive to red light in the retinal rods of the eyes, consisting of opsin and retinene. Also called visual purple [RHOD(O)- + Greek opsis, sight; see -OPSIS + -IN.]

rho·do·ra (rō-dōr'ə, -dōr'ə) n. A deciduous shrub (Rhododendron canadense) of northeast North America, having rose-purple, two-lipped flowers that bloom before the leaves appear. [Latin rhodōra, variant of rōdarum, a kind of plant, of Gaulish origin.]

rhomb. abbr. Rhombic.

rhomb- pref. Variant of rhombo-.

rhom·ben·ceph·a·lon (rōm'bēn-sēf'ə-lōn', -lōn) n. The portion of the embryonic brain from which the metencephalon and myelencephalon develop. Also called hindbrain —rhom'ben·ce·phal'ic (-sə-fāl'ik) adj.

rhom·bi (rōm'bī) n. A plural of rhombus.

rhom·bic (rōm'bik) adj. Abbr. rhomb. 1. Shaped like a rhombus.

2. Orthorhombic.

rhombo- or rhomb- pref. Rhombus: rhombohedron. [Greek, from rhombos. See RHOMBUS.]

rhom·bo·he·dron (rōm'bō-hē'drən) n. pl. rhom·bo·he·drons or rhom·bo·he·dra (-drə). Abbr. rhbdr. A prism with six faces, each a rhombus. —rhom'bo·he'dral (-drəl) adj.

rhom·boid (rōm'boid') n. A parallelogram with unequal adjacent sides. — adj. also rhom·boi·dal (-boid'l) Shaped like a rhombus or rhomboid.

rhom·bus (rōm'bəs) n. pl. rhomb·bus·es or rhomb·bi (-bī). An equilateral parallelogram. [Late Latin, from Latin, flatfish, magician's circle, from Greek rhombos, rhombus. See wer-² in Appendix.]

rhon·chus (rōng'kəs) n. pl. rhon·chi (-kī). A coarse rattling sound somewhat like snoring, usually caused by secretion in a bronchial tube. [Latin, a snoring, from Greek rhonkhos*, variant of rhenkos, rhenkhos, from rhenkein, to snore.] —rhon'chal (-kəl), rhon'chi·al (-kē-əl) adj.

Rhon·dda (rōn'də, hrōn'thā) A municipal borough of southern Wales northwest of Cardiff. Coal mining was particularly important to its economy in the 1920's and 1930's. Population, 81,700.

Rhone or Rhône (rōn) A river rising in the Alps of south-central Switzerland and flowing about 813 km (505 mi) west-southwest and northwest to Lake Geneva then into eastern France, where it joins the Saône River at Lyons and continues southward to the Mediterranean Sea.

rhp or r.h.p. abbr. Rated horsepower.

Rh·pos·i·tive (är'äch-pōz'ī-tiv) adj. Containing an Rh factor.

rhu·barb (rōō'bärb') n. 1. Any of several plants of the genus Rheum, especially R. rhubarbarum, having long, green or reddish acidic leafstalks that are edible when sweetened and cooked. Also called pie plant 2. The dried, bitter-tasting rhizome and roots of Rheum palmatum or R. officinale of eastern Asia, used as a laxative. 3. Informal. A quarrel, fight, or heated discussion. [Middle English rubarbe, from Old French, from Late Latin reubarbarum, probably alteration (influenced by Greek rhēon), of rhabarbarum : rha, rhubarb (from Greek, perhaps from Rha, the Volga River) + Latin barbarum, neuter of barbarus, barbarian, foreign; see BARBAROUS.]

WORD HISTORY: The word rhubarb may contain two hidden references to its origins. The first of these is in the rhu- part of the word, which can be traced back to the Greek word rha, meaning “rhubarb.” According to the Late Latin historian Ammianus Marcellinus, rhubarb was named rha because it grew near the river named Rha, which we know as the Volga. The -barb part of rhubarb was actually added first to Late Latin rha, descended from Greek rha, in the form rhabarbarum, barbarum being the neuter form of barbarus, “foreign.” Another Greek word for rhubarb, rhēon, influenced the Late Latin word rhabarbarum, giving us reubarbarum, which yielded Old French reubarbe. The Old French form gave us Middle English rubarbe, first recorded in a work written around 1390. In imitation of the way the Greek word rha is spelled, an h was added, completing the long journey of this word into English from the banks of the Volga in classical times.

rhumb (rüm, rümb) n. Nautical. 1. A rhumb line. 2. One of the points of the mariner’s compass. [Possibly from Spanish, or Portuguese rumbo, course, direction ultimately from Latin rhombus, rhombus. See RHOMBUS.]

rhum·ba (rüm'bə, rōōm'-, rōōm'-) n. Variant of rumba.

rhumb line (rüm līn) n. Nautical. The path of a ship that maintains a fixed compass direction, shown on a map as a line crossing all meridians at the same angle. Also called loxodromic curve rhyme also rime (rīm) n. 1. Correspondence of terminal sounds of words or of lines of verse. 2. a. A poem or verse having a regular correspondence of sounds, especially at the ends of lines. b. Poetry or verse of this kind. 3. A word that corresponds with another in terminal sound, as behold and cold. — v. rhymed also rimed, rhym-ing also rim-ing, rhymes also rimes. — v. intr. 1. To form a rhyme. 2. To compose rhymes or verse. 3. To make use of rhymes in composing verse. — v. tr. 1. To put into rhyme or compose with rhymes. 2. To use (a word or words) as a rhyme. [Alteration (influenced by RHYTHM), of Middle English rime, from Old French, of Germanic origin. See ar- in Appendix.]

rhym-er also rim-er (rī'mər) n. One who composes rhymes. See Synonyms at poet.

rhyme royal (rīm roi'əl) n. 1. A form of verse having stanzas with seven lines in iambic pentameter rhyming ababbcc. 2. One of these stanzas.

rhyme scheme (rīm skēm) n. The arrangement of rhymes in a poem or stanza.

rhyme-ster also rime-ster (rīm'stər) n. 1. One who composes light verse. 2. A minor or inferior poet. See Synonyms at poet.

rhy-ming slang (rī'mɪŋ slǎŋ) n. Slang in which a word is replaced by a word or phrase that rhymes with it, as kiss by hit or miss.

rhy-n-cho-ce-pha-lian (rɪŋ'kō-sə-fāl'yən) adj. Of or belonging to the Rhynchocephalia, an order of mostly extinct lizardlike reptiles. — n. A rhynchocephalian reptile. [From New Latin Rhynchocephalia, order name : Greek rhunkhos, beak + Greek kephalē, head; see CEPHALIC.]

rhy-o-lite (rī'ə-līt') n. A fine-grained extrusive volcanic rock, similar to granite in composition and usually exhibiting flow lines. [Greek rhuax, stream (from rhein, to flow); see sreu- in Appendix + -LITE.]

Rhys (rēs), Jean. 1894-1979. West Indian-born British writer known for Wide Sargasso Sea (1966), a novel based on the character of the first Mrs. Rochester in Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre.

rhythm (rɪθ'əm) n. 1. Movement or variation characterized by the regular recurrence or alternation of different quantities or conditions: the rhythm of the tides. 2. The patterned, recurring alternations of contrasting elements of sound or speech. 3. Music. a. A regular pattern formed by a series of notes of differing duration and stress. b. A specific kind of such a pattern: a waltz rhythm. c. A group of instruments supplying the rhythm in a band. 4. a. The pattern or flow of sound created by the arrangement of stressed and unstressed syllables in accented verse or of long and short syllables in quantitative verse. b. The similar but less formal sequence of sounds in prose. c. A specific kind of metrical pattern or flow: iambic rhythm. 5. a. The sense of temporal development created in a work of literature or a film by the arrangement of formal elements such as the length of scenes, the nature and amount of dialogue, or the repetition of motifs. b. A regular or harmonious pattern created by lines, forms, and colors in painting, sculpture, and other visual arts. 6. The pattern of development produced in a literary or dramatic work by repetition of elements such as words, phrases, incidents, themes, images, and symbols. 7. Procedure or routine characterized by regularly recurring elements, activities, or factors: the rhythm of civilization; the rhythm of the lengthy negotiations. [Latin rhythmus, from Greek rhuthmos. See sreu- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: rhythm, meter, cadence. These nouns are compared as they denote the regular patterned ebb and rise of accented and unaccented sounds, especially in music, speech, or verse. Rhythm, the most comprehensive, suggests the recurring flow of alternating elements: the rhythm of the seasons; the rhythms of life. “Rhythm was described by Schopenhauer as melody deprived of its pitch” (Edith Sitwell). Meter applies in poetry to any of various measured rhythmic patterns (elegiac meter) and in music to the combining of rhythmic pulses into measures of equal time value (duple meter). Cadence refers especially to the fall of the voice in speech (end a sentence with a cadence) and to balanced rhythmic flow, as in poetry (the cadence of the sea).

rhythm and blues (rĭth'əm ənd blōʊz) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb).

Abbr. r & b, R & B Music. A kind of music developed by Black Americans that combines blues and jazz, characterized by a strong backbeat and repeated variations on syncopated instrumental phrases.

rhyth·mic (rĭth'mĭk) also rhyth·mi·cal (-mĭ-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or having rhythm; recurring with measured regularity. —rhyth'mi·cal·ly adv.

rhyth·mics (rĭth'mĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Music. The study of rhythm.

rhyth·mist (rĭth'mĭst) n. 1. One who is an expert in or has a keen sense of rhythm. 2. Music. One who studies or produces rhythm.

rhythm method (rĭth'əm mĕth'əd) n. A birth-control method dependent on abstinence during the period of ovulation.

rhy·ti·dec·to·my (rĭt'ĭ-dĕk'tō-mĕ) n. pl. rhy·ti·dec·to·mies. See face-lift (n., sense 1). [Greek rhutis, rhutid-, wrinkle + -ECTOMY.]

RI or R.I. abbr. Rhode Island.

RIA abbr. Radioimmunoassay.

ri·al¹ (rĕ-ôl', -ăl') n. A unit of currency in Iran. See Table at currency. [Persian, from Arabic riyāl, from Spanish real. See REAL².]

ri·al² (rĕ-ôl', -ăl') n. Variant of riyal.

ri·al·to (rĕ-ăl'tō, rā-ăl'-) n. pl. ri·al·tos. 1. A theatrical district. 2. A marketplace. [After Rialto, an island of Venice where a market was situated.]

Ri·al·to (rĕ-ăl'tō) A city of southern California, a residential suburb of San Bernardino. Population, 72,388.

ri·a·ta also re·a·ta (rĕ-ă'tə) n. A lariat; a lasso. [Spanish reata, lasso, lariat. See LARIAT.]

Ri·au Archipelago (rĕ'ou ār'kə-pĕl'ə-gō') An island group of western Indonesia off the southeast end of the Malay Peninsula. It is separated from Singapore by Singapore Strait.

rib (rĭb) n. 1. Anatomy. a. One of a series of long, curved bones occurring in 12 pairs in human beings and extending from the spine to or toward the sternum.

b. A similar bone in most vertebrates. 2. A part or piece similar to a rib and serving to shape or support: the rib of an umbrella. 3. A cut of meat enclosing one or more rib bones. 4. Nautical. One of many curved members attached to a boat or ship's keel and extending upward and outward to form the framework of the hull. 5. One of many transverse pieces that provide an airplane wing with shape and strength. 6. Architecture. a. An arch or a projecting arched member of a vault. b. One of the curved pieces of an arch. 7. A raised ridge or wale in knitted material or in cloth. 8. Botany. The main vein or any of the prominent veins of a leaf or other plant organ. 9. Slang. A teasing remark or action; a joke. — v. tr. ribbed, rib-bing, ribs. 1. To shape, support, or provide with a rib or ribs. 2. To make with ridges or raised markings. 3. Informal. To tease or make fun of. See Synonyms at banter. [Middle English, from Old English ribb.]

rib-ald (rĭb'æld, rĭ'bôld') adj. Characterized by or indulging in vulgar, lewd humor. See Synonyms at coarse. — n. A vulgar, lewdly funny person. [From Middle English ribauid, ribald person, from Old French, from riber, to be wanton, of Germanic origin. See wer-2 in Appendix.]

rib-ald-ry (rĭb'əl-drē, rĭ'-) n. pl. rib-ald-ries. Vulgar, lewdly humorous language or joking or an instance of it.

rib-and (rĭb'ænd) n. A ribbon, especially one used as a decoration. [Middle English, variant of riban. See RIBBON.]

ri-ba-vi-rin (rĭ'bə-vī'rĭn) n. A synthetic, antiviral ribonucleoside, C₈H₁₂N₄O₅, that inhibits the replication of DNA and RNA. [Probably RIB(ONUCLEIC) A(CID) + VIR(US) + -IN.]

rib-band (rĭb'ænd, -ænd, -ən) n. Nautical. A length of flexible wood or metal used to hold the ribs of a ship in place while the exterior planking or plating is being applied. [RIB + BAND¹.]

Rib-ben-trop (rĭb'ən-tröp', -trô'), Joachim von. 1893-1946. German diplomat who as minister of foreign affairs (1938-1945) helped negotiate the German-Soviet Nonaggression Pact of 1939. He was convicted of war crimes at Nuremberg and hanged.

rib-bing (rĭb'ĭng) n. 1. Ribs considered as a group. 2. An arrangement of ribs, as in a boat. 3. Informal. The act or an instance of joking or teasing.

rib-bon (rĭb'ən) n. 1. A narrow strip or band of fine fabric, such as satin or velvet, finished at the edges and used for trimming, tying, or finishing.

2. a. Something, such as a tape measure, that resembles a ribbon. b. A long, thin strip: a ribbon of land along the shore. 3. ribbons. Tattered or ragged strips: a dress torn to ribbons. 4. An inked strip of cloth used for making an impression, as in a typewriter. 5. a. A band of colored cloth signifying membership in an order or the award of a prize. b. A strip of colored cloth worn on the left breast of a uniform to indicate the award of a medal or decoration. 6. ribbons. Informal. Reins for driving horses. 7. See ledger board (n., sense 2). — v. tr.

rib-boned, rib-bon-ing, rib-bons. 1. To decorate or tie with ribbons. 2. To tear into ribbons or shreds. [Middle English ribban, riban, from Old French ruban, probably of Germanic origin. See bhendh- in Appendix.] —rib'bon-y adj.

rib·bon·fish (rĭb'ən-fĭsh') n. pl. ribbonfish or rib·bon·fish·es. Any of several marine fishes, chiefly of the genus Trachipterus, having long, narrow, compressed bodies.

ribbon grass (rĭb'ən grās) n. A grass (Phalaris arundinacea var. picta) of the Northern Hemisphere that has leaf blades striped with white and is cultivated for ornament.

ribbon snake (rĭb'ən snāk) n. A nonvenomous North American snake (Thamnophis sauritus) having yellow or reddish stripes along the body.

ribbon worm (rĭb'ən wûrm) n. See nemertean.

rib cage (rĭb kāj) n. The enclosing structure formed by the ribs and the bones to which they are attached.

Ri·bei·rão Prê·to (rē'bā-rouN' prĕ'tōō) A city of southeast Brazil north-northwest of São Paulo. It is a processing center in an agricultural region. Population, 300,828.

Ri·be·ra (rē-bĕr'ə, -bĕ'rā), José or Jusepe de. 1588-1652. Spanish baroque painter whose works include Martyrdom of Saint Bartholomew (1630) and The Immaculate Conception (1635).

rib eye (rĭb ī) n. A cut of meat taken from the outside of the rib.

rib·grass (rĭb'grās') n. A weedy Eurasian plant (Plantago lanceolata) having lance-shaped, ribbed leaves and a dense spike of small whitish flowers. Also called English plantain, ripplegrass.

rib·let (rĭb'lĭt) n. 1. A cut of meat from a rib end of veal or lamb. 2. One of a series of microscopic grooves, each a few thousandths of an inch wide, inscribed on the surface of an adhesive-backed tape and used on airplanes and boat hulls to reduce drag.

ri·bo·fla·vin (rĭ'bō-flā'vĭn, -bə-) n. An orange-yellow crystalline compound, C₁₇H₂₀N₄O₆, the principal growth-promoting factor in the vitamin B complex, naturally occurring in milk, leafy vegetables, fresh meat, and egg yolks. Also called lactoflavin, vitamin B₂. [RIBO(SE) + FLAVIN.]

ri·bo·nu·cle·ase (rĭ'bō-nōō'klē-ās', -āz', -nyōō'-) n. Any of various enzymes that break down RNA. Also called RNase ri·bo·nu·cle·ic acid (rĭ'bō-nōō-klē'ĭk əs'ĭd, -klā'-, -nyōō-) n. See RNA. [RIBO(SE) + NUCLEIC ACID.]

ri·bo·nu·cle·o·pro·tein (rĭ'bō-nōō'klē-ō-prō'tĕn, -tē-ĭn, -nyōō'-) n. Abbr.

RNP A nucleoprotein that contains RNA. [RIBO(NUCLEIC ACID) + NUCLEOPROTEIN.]

ri·bo·nu·cle·o·side (rĭ'bō-nōō'klē-ə-sĭd', -nyōō'-) n. A nucleoside that contains ribose as its sugar component. [RIBO(SE) + NUCLEOSIDE.]

ri-bo-nu-cle-o-tide (rī'bō-nōōklē-ə-tīd', -nyōō'-) n. A nucleotide that contains ribose as its sugar and is an immediate component of RNA. [RIBO(SE) + NUCLEOTIDE.]

ri-bose (rī'bōs') n. A pentose sugar, C₅H₁₀O₅, occurring as a component of riboflavin, nucleotides, and nucleic acids. [German, alteration of English arabinnuse, a kind of sugar : (GUM) ARAB(IC) + -IN + -OSE².]

ribosomal RNA (rī'bə-sō'məl är'ën-ā') n. Abbr. rRNA The RNA that is a permanent structural part of a ribosome.

ri-bo-some (rī'bə-sōm') n. A minute, round particle composed of RNA and protein found in the cytoplasm of living cells and active in the synthesis of proteins. [RIBO(SE) + -SOME³.] — ri-bo-so'mal (-sō'məl) adj.

rib roast (rīb rōst) n. A cut of red meat, such as beef or venison, containing the sizable piece located along the outside of the rib.

rib-wort (rīb'wûrt', -wôrt') n. See plantain¹.

Ri-car-do (rī-kär'dō), David. 1772-1823. British economist whose major work, Principles of Political Economy and Taxation (1817), supported the laws of supply and demand in a free market.

rice (rīs) n. 1. A cereal grass (Oryza sativa) that is cultivated extensively in warm climates and is a staple food throughout the world. 2. The starchy edible seed of this plant. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: rice paddies; rice pudding. — v. tr. riced, ric-ing, ric-es. To sieve (food) to the consistency of rice. [Middle English, from Old French ris, from Old Italian riso, from Latin oryza, from Greek oruza, of Indo-Iranian origin.]

Rice (rīs), Elmer Leopold. 1892-1967. American playwright noted for The Adding Machine (1923) and Street Scene (1929).

rice-bird (rīs'bûrd') n. 1. Chiefly Southern U.S. See bobolink. 2. Any of various birds that frequent rice fields.

rice paper (rīs pā'pər) n. A thin paper made chiefly from the pith of the rice-paper plant.

rice-pa-per plant (rīs'pā'pər plānt) n. A Chinese shrub or small tree (Tetrapanax papyriferus) grown as a source of fiber for rice paper. Also called rice-paper tree ric-er (rī'sər) n. A kitchen utensil used for ricing soft foods by extrusion through small holes.

rice rat (rīs răt) n. A hardy, agile rat of the genus Oryzomys, found in rice fields and marshy areas of Mexico and the southern United States.

rice weevil (rīs wē'vəl) n. A small destructive insect (Sitophilus oryzae) that infests stored grain and cereal products.

rich (rīch) adj. rich-er, rich-est. 1. Possessing great material wealth: "Now that he was rich he was not thought ignorant any more, but simply eccentric" (Mavis Gallant). 2. Having great worth or value: a rich harvest of grain. 3. Magnificent;

sumptuous: a rich brocade. 4. a. Having an abundant supply: rich in ideas. b. Abounding, especially in natural resources: rich land. 5. Meaningful and significant: “a rich sense of the transaction between writer and reader” (William Zinsser). 6. Very productive and therefore financially profitable: rich seams of coal. 7. a. Containing a large amount of choice ingredients, such as butter, sugar, or eggs, and therefore unusually heavy or sweet: a rich dessert. b. Having or exuding a strong or pungent aroma: “Texas air is so rich you can nourish off it like it was food” (Edna Ferber). 8. a. Pleasantly full and mellow: a rich tenor voice. b. Warm and strong in color: a rich brown velvet. 9. Containing a large proportion of fuel to air: a rich gas mixture. 10. Informal. Highly amusing. — n. (used with a pl. verb). Wealthy people considered as a group. Often used with the: “Were there, indeed, a sure appeal to the mercies of the rich, the calamities of the poor might be less intolerable” (Charlotte Smith). [Middle English riche, from Old French (of Germanic origin), and from Old English rīce, strong, powerful; see reg- in Appendix.] —rich/ly adv. —rich/ness n.

SYNONYMS: rich, affluent, flush, loaded, moneyed, wealthy. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “having an abundant supply of money, property, or possessions of value”: a rich philanthropist; an affluent banker; a speculator flush with cash; not merely rich but loaded; moneyed aristocrats; wealthy corporations.

ANTONYM: poor

- Rich-ard I (rĭch'ərd), Known as “Coeur de Lion” or “the Lion-Hearted.” 1157-1199. King of England (1189-1199). A leader of the Third Crusade (1190-1192), he was captured in Austria (1192) and held as a prisoner by Holy Roman Emperor Henry VI until England ransomed him in 1194.
- Rich-ard II (rĭch'ərd), 1367-1400. King of England (1377-1399). He quelled the Peasants' Revolt in 1381 but spent the rest of his reign at odds with the baronial opposition in Parliament.
- Rich-ard III (rĭch'ərd), 1452-1485. King of England (1483-1485) who claimed the throne after imprisoning the sons of his deceased brother Edward IV. Richard's death at the Battle of Bosworth Field brought an end to the Wars of the Roses.
- Rich-ard Roe (rĭch'ərd rō') n. A name used in legal proceedings to designate a fictitious or unidentified person.
- Rich-ards (rĭch'ərdz), Dickinson Woodruff. 1895-1973. American physician. He shared a 1956 Nobel Prize for developing new techniques for treating heart disease.
- Rich-ards (rĭch'ərdz), I(vor) A(rmstrong). 1893-1979. British literary critic who helped Charles Ogden develop Basic English and was a founder of the New Criticism movement.

Rich-ards (rĭch'ərdz), Theodore William. 1868-1928. American chemist. He won a 1914 Nobel Prize for determining the atomic weight of more than 50 elements.

Rich-ard-son (rĭch'ərd-sən) A city of northeast Texas, a residential and agricultural suburb of Dallas. Population, 74,840.

Rich-ard-son (rĭch'ərd-sən), Henry Hobson. 1838-1886. American architect whose Romanesque designs include Trinity Church in Boston (1872-1877) and the Marshall Field Warehouse in Chicago (1885-1887).

Rich-ard-son (rĭch'ərd-sən), Sir Owen Willans. 1879-1959. British physicist. He won a 1928 Nobel Prize for research on thermionic phenomena.

Rich-ard-son (rĭch'ərd-sən), Sir Ralph David. 1902-1983. British actor noted for his strong characterizations in classic roles as well as in contemporary works, such as Pinter's No Man's Land (1975).

Rich-ard-son (rĭch'ərd-sən), Samuel. 1689-1761. English writer whose epistolary novels include Pamela (1740), often considered the first modern English novel, and Clarissa Harlowe (1747-1748).

Rich-ard-son's ground squirrel (rĭch'ərd-sənz ground skwŭr'əl) n. A ground squirrel (Citellus richardsoni) of the northwest United States and Canada. Also called flickertail [After Sir John Richardson (1787-1865), Scottish naturalist.]

Ri-che-lieu (rĭsh'ə-lōō') A river of southern Quebec, Canada, flowing about 121 km (75 mi) north from Lake Champlain to the St. Lawrence River. Discovered by Samuel de Champlain in 1609, it was an important waterway for early explorers.

Ri-che-lieu (rĭsh'ə-lōō', rē-shə-lyœ'), Duc de Title of Armand Jean du Plessis. 1585-1642. French prelate and politician. As chief minister of Louis XIII he worked to strengthen the authority of the monarchy and directed France during the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648).

rich-en (rĭch'ən) v. tr. rich-ened, rich-en-ing, rich-ens. To make rich.

rich-es (rĭch'ĭz) pl.n. 1. Abundant wealth: "the impassable gulf that lies between riches and poverty" (Elizabeth Cady Stanton). 2. Valuable or precious possessions. [Middle English richesse, wealth, from Old French, from riche, wealthy. See RICH.]

Ri-chet (rĭ-shā', rē-shě'), Charles Robert. 1850-1935. French physiologist. He won a 1913 Nobel Prize for work on anaphylaxis.

Rich-field (rĭch'fēld') A city of southeast Minnesota, a residential suburb of Minneapolis. Population, 35,710.

Rich-land (rĭch'lənd) A city of southeast Washington on the Columbia River west-northwest of Walla Walla. It was developed in 1943-1945 to house employees of the nearby Hanford Atomic Works. Federal management of the city was relinquished in 1958. Population, 32,315.

Rich-ler (rĭch'ləɾ), Mordecai. Born 1931. Canadian writer whose novels, based on his working-class Jewish background, include The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz (1959) and Saint Urbain's Horseman (1971).

Rich-mond (rĭch'mənd) 1. A community of southwest British Columbia, Canada, a suburb of Vancouver on the Strait of Georgia. Population, 96,154. 2. A city of western California on an inlet of San Francisco Bay north-northwest of Oakland. It is a port and industrial center. Population, 87,425. 3. A city of eastern Indiana east of Indianapolis. Settled in 1806 by Quakers, it is primarily an industrial center. Population, 38,705. 4. A city of east-central Kentucky south-southeast of Lexington. It is a tobacco and livestock market in the Bluegrass. Population, 21,155. 5. The capital of Virginia, in the east-central part of the state on the James River north of Petersburg. Settled in the 17th century, it became the capital of Virginia in 1779 and was strategically important in the American Revolution and the Civil War, during which it was the capital of the Confederacy. The evacuation of Richmond by Confederate troops on April 3, 1865, led to Gen. Robert E. Lee's surrender to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant on April 9. Population, 203,056. 6. See Staten Island.

Richmond High-lands (rĭch'mənd hĭ'ləndz) A community of west-central Washington, a residential suburb of Seattle. Population, 26,037.

Richmond Hill (rĭch'mənd hĭl) A city of southeast Ontario, Canada, north of Toronto. It is mainly residential. Population, 37,778.

Rich-ter (rĭk'tər), Burton. Born 1931. American physicist. He shared a 1976 Nobel Prize for discovering a subatomic particle.

Rich-ter (rĭk'tər, rĭkH'-), Jean Paul Friedrich. Pen name Jean Paul. 1763-1825. German writer whose humorous and sentimental novels include Titan (1800-1803) and Years of Indiscretion (1804-1805).

Rich-ter scale (rĭk'tər skāl) n. A logarithmic scale ranging from 1 to 10, used to express the total amount of energy released by an earthquake. In this scale an increase of 1 represents a 32-fold increase in released energy. [After Charles Francis Richter (1900-1985), American seismologist.]

rich-weed (rĭch'wēd') n. See clearweed.

ri-cin (rĭ'sĭn, rĭs'ĭn) n. A poisonous protein extracted from the castor bean and used as a biochemical reagent. [From Latin ricinus, castor-oil plant.]

ric-in-o-le-ic acid (rĭs'ĭn-ō-lē'ĭk əs'ĭd) n. An unsaturated fatty acid, C₁₈H₃₄O₃, prepared from castor oil and used in making soaps and in textile finishing. [Latin ricinus, castor-oil plant + OLEIC.]

rick (rĭk) n. A stack of hay, straw, or similar material, especially when covered or thatched for protection from the weather. — v. tr. ricked, rick-ing, ricks. To pile into ricks. [Middle English reke, from Old English hrēac.]

Rick-en-back-er (rĭk'ĭn-băk'ər), Edward Vernon. Known as “Eddie.” 1890-1973. American aviator who was the most decorated combat pilot of World War I and later became president (1938-1963) of Eastern Airlines.

rick-ets (rĭk'ĭts) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A deficiency disease resulting from a lack of vitamin D or calcium and from insufficient exposure to sunlight, characterized by defective bone growth and occurring chiefly in children. Also called rachitis [Origin unknown.]

rick-ett-si-a (rĭ-kĕt'sĕ-ə) n. pl. rick-ett-si-ae (-sĕ-ĕ'). Any of various bacteria of the genus Rickettsia, carried as parasites by many ticks, fleas, and lice, that cause diseases such as typhus, scrub typhus, and Rocky Mountain spotted fever in human beings. [New Latin Rickettsia, genus name, after Howard Taylor Ricketts (1871-1910), American pathologist.] —rick-ett-si-al adj.

rick-ett-si-o-sis (rĭ-kĕt'sĕ-ō'sĭs) n. pl. rick-ett-si-o-ses (-sĕz). Infection with or disease caused by rickettsiae.

rick-et-y (rĭk'ĭ-tĕ) adj. rick-et-i-er, rick-et-i-est. 1. Likely to break or fall apart; shaky. 2. Feeble with age; infirm. 3. Of, having, or resembling rickets. [From RICKETS.] —rick'et-i-ness n.

rick-ey (rĭk'ĕ) n. pl. rick-eyes. A drink of soda water, lime or lemon juice, sugar, and usually gin. [Probably from the name Rickey.]

Rick-o-ver (rĭk'ō'vər), Hyman George. 1900-1986. American admiral who advocated and greatly contributed to the development of nuclear submarines and ships. He was also an outspoken critic of the American educational system.

rick-rack (rĭk'răk') n. A flat, narrow braid woven in zigzag form, used as a trimming for clothing or curtains. [Reduplication of RACK¹.]

rick-sha or rick-shaw (rĭk'shō) n. A jinriksha. [Short for JINRIKSHA.]

RICO abbr. Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act of 1970.

ric-o-chet (rĭk'ə-shā', rĭk'ə-shā') v. intr. ric-co-cheted (-shād'), ric-co-chet-ing (-shā'ĭng), ric-co-chets (-shāz'). To rebound at least once from a surface. — n. The act or an instance of ricocheting. [French, from Old French, give-and-take.]

ri-cot-ta (rĭ-kōt'ə, rĕ-kōt'tā) n. 1. A soft Italian cheese that resembles cottage cheese. 2. A similar soft cheese made in the United States. [Italian, from Latin recocta, feminine past participle of recoquere, to cook again : re-, re- + coquere, to cook; see pek^w- in Appendix.]

ric-tus (rĭk'təs) n. pl. rictus or ric-tus-es. 1. The expanse of an open mouth, a bird's beak, or similar structure. 2. A gaping grimace: “his mouth gaping in a kind of rictus of startled alarm” (Richard Adams). [Latin, from past participle of ringĕre, to gape.] —ric'tal adj.

rid (rĭd) v. tr. rid or rid-ded, rid-ding, rids. To free from: He was finally able to rid himself of all financial worries. [Middle English ridden, from Old Norse rydhja, to clear land, from hrjōdha, to strip, clear.] —rid'der n.

rid-dance (rĭdʹns) n. 1. A deliverance from or removal of something unwanted or undesirable: “Compeyson took it easy as a good riddance for both sides” (Charles Dickens). 2. The act of ridding: riddance of household pests.

rid-den (rĭdʹn) v. Past participle of ride. — adj. Dominated, harassed, or obsessed by. Often used in combination: disease-ridden; grief-ridden.

rid-dle¹ (rĭdʹl) v. tr. rid-dled, rid-dling, rid-dles. 1. To pierce with numerous holes; perforate: riddle a target with bullets. 2. To spread throughout: “Election campaigns have always been riddled with demagoguery and worse” (New Republic). 3. To put (gravel, for example) through a coarse sieve. — n. A coarse sieve, as for gravel. [Middle English riddlen, to sift, from riddil, sieve, alteration of Old English hriddel. See krei- in Appendix.] —ridʹdler n.

rid-dle² (rĭdʹl) n. 1. A question or statement requiring thought to answer or understand; a conundrum. 2. One that is perplexing; an enigma. — v.

rid-dled, rid-dling, rid-dles. — v. tr. To solve or explain. — v. intr. 1. To propound or solve riddles. 2. To speak in riddles. [Middle English redels, from Old English rædels. See ar- in Appendix.] —ridʹdler n.

ride (rĭd) v. rode (rōd), rid-den (rĭdʹn), rid-ing, rides. — v. intr. 1. To be carried or conveyed, as in a vehicle or on horseback. 2. To travel over a surface: This car rides well. 3. To move by way of an intangible force or impetus; move as if on water: The President rode into office on a tide of discontent. 4. Nautical. To lie at anchor: battleships riding at the mouth of the estuary. 5. To seem to float: The moon was riding among the clouds. 6. To be sustained or supported on a pivot, an axle, or another point. 7. To be contingent; depend: The final outcome rides on the results of the election. 8. To continue without interference: Let the matter ride. 9. To work or move from the proper place, especially on the body: pants that ride up. — v. tr. 1. To sit on and move in a given direction: rode a motorcycle to town; ride a horse to the village. 2. To travel over, along, or through: ride the highways. 3. To be supported or carried on: a swimmer riding the waves. 4. To take part in or do by riding: He rode his last race. 5. To cause to ride, especially to cause to be carried. 6. Nautical. To keep (a vessel) at anchor.

7. Informal. a. To tease or ridicule. b. To harass with persistent carping and criticism. 8. To keep partially engaged by slightly depressing a pedal with the foot: Don't ride the clutch or the brakes. — n. 1. The act or an instance of riding, as in a vehicle or on an animal. 2. A path made for riding on horseback, especially through woodlands. 3. A device, such as one at an amusement park, that one rides for pleasure or excitement. 4. A means of transportation: waiting for her ride to come. —phrasal verb. ride out. To survive or outlast: rode out the storm. —idioms. ride for a fall. To court danger or disaster. ride herd on. To keep watch or control over. ride high. To experience success. ride roughshod over. To take a course of action without regard for the feelings, opinions, or welfare of others. ride shotgun. 5. To guard a person or thing while in transit.

- 6. Slang. To ride in the front passenger seat of a car or truck. take for a ride.
Slang. 7. To deceive or swindle: an author who tried to take his publisher for a ride.
8. To transport to a place and kill. [Middle English riden, from Old English rīdan. See reidh- in Appendix.]

Ride (rīd), Sally. Born 1951. American astronaut who in 1983 became the first U.S. woman to enter outer space.

Ri-deau Canal (rī-dō' kə-nāl') A waterway, about 203 km (126 mi) long, of southeast Ontario, Canada, connecting the Ottawa River at Ottawa with Lake Ontario at Kingston. It follows the course of the Rideau River for much of its length and was constructed in 1826 to 1832.

rid-er (rī'dər) n. 1. One that rides, especially one who rides horses. 2. a. A clause, usually having little relevance to the main issue, that is added to a legislative bill. b. An amendment or addition to a document or record. 3. Something, such as the top rail of a fence, that rests on or is supported by something else.

rid-er-ship (rī'dər-shīp') n. The number of passengers who ride a public transport system.

ride-shar-ing (rīd'shâr'ing) n. The act or an instance of sharing motor vehicle transportation with another or others, especially among commuters.

—ride'shar'ing adj.

ridge (rij) n. 1. A long narrow upper section or crest: the ridge of a wave. 2. A long narrow chain of hills or mountains. Also called ridgeline 3. A long narrow elevation on the ocean floor. 4. Meteorology. An elongated zone of relatively high atmospheric pressure. Also called wedge 5. A long, narrow, or crested part of the body: the ridge of the nose. 6. The horizontal line formed by the juncture of two sloping planes, especially the line formed by the surfaces at the top of a roof. 7. A narrow, raised strip, as in cloth or on plowed ground. — v. ridged, ridg-ing, ridg-es. — v. tr. To mark with, form into, or provide with ridges. — v. intr. To form ridges. [Middle English rigge, from Old English hrycg. See sker-² in Appendix.]

ridge-back (rij'băk') n. A Rhodesian ridgeback.

Ridge-crest (rij'krĕst') A city of south-central California east-northeast of Bakersfield. Population, 27,725.

Ridge-field (rij'fĕld') A town of southwest Connecticut near the New York border north-northeast of Stamford. It is mainly residential. Population, 20,919.

ridge-line (rij'līn') n. See ridge (n., sense 2).

ridge-ling also ridg-ling (rij'līng) n. A male animal with one or two undescended testicles. [From obsolete ridgel, perhaps from RIDGE (from the belief that the undescended testicles remained near the animal's back).]

ridge-pole (rij'pōl') n. 1. A horizontal beam at the ridge of a roof to which the rafters are attached. 2. The horizontal pole at the top of a tent.

Ridge-wood (rĭj'wōōd') A village of northeast New Jersey north-northeast of Paterson. Both British and American troops had encampments here during the Revolution. Population, 24,152.

ridg-ling (rĭj'ling) n. Variant of ridgeling.

Ridg-way (rĭj'wā'), Matthew Bunker. 1895-1993. American army officer who commanded airborne divisions in Europe during World War II. He was supreme commander of United Nations forces in Korea (1951-1952) and of NATO forces in Europe (1951-1953) and served as chief of staff of the U.S. Army (1953-1955).

ridg-y (rĭj'ē) adj. ridg-i-er, ridg-i-est. Having or forming ridges.

rid-i-cule (rĭd'i-kyōōl') n. Words or actions intended to evoke contemptuous laughter at or feelings toward a person or thing: “I know that ridicule may be a shield, but it is not a weapon” (Dorothy Parker). — v. tr. rid-i-culed, rid-i-cul-ing, rid-i-cules. To expose to ridicule; make fun of. [French, from Latin ridiculum, joke, from neuter of ridiculus, laughable. See RIDICULOUS.]

—rid'i-cul'er n.

SYNONYMS: ridicule, mock, taunt, twit, deride, gibe. These verbs refer to making another the butt of amusement or mirth. Ridicule implies purposeful disparagement: “My father discouraged me by ridiculing my performances” (Benjamin Franklin). To mock is to poke fun at someone, often by mimicking and caricaturing his or her speech or actions: “Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort/As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit” (Shakespeare). Taunt suggests mocking, insulting, or scornful reproach: “taunting him with want of courage to leap into the great pit” (Daniel Defoe). To twit is to taunt by calling attention to something embarrassing: “The schoolmaster was twitted about the lady who threw him over” (J.M. Barrie). Deride implies scorn and contempt: Musical snobs often deride the harmonica as a serious instrument. To gibe is to make taunting, heckling, or jeering remarks: The child's classmates gibed at him for his timidity.

ri-dic-u-lous (rĭ-dĭk'yə-ləs) adj. Deserving or inspiring ridicule; absurd, preposterous, or silly. See Synonyms at foolish. [Latin ridiculus, laughable, from ridēre, to laugh.] —ri-dic'u-lous-ly adv. —ri-dic'u-lous-ness n.

rid-ing¹ (rĭ'ding) n. 1. The act of riding. 2. Horseback riding.

rid-ing² (rĭ'ding) n. 1. An administrative division or electoral division in Canada. 2. Any one of three former administrative divisions of Yorkshire, England. [Middle English, alteration of trithing, from Old English thrithing*, from Old Norse thridhjungr, third part, from thridhi, third. See trei- in Appendix.]

riding habit (rĭ'ding hăb'it) n. The outfit typically worn by a horseback rider.

- rid·ley (rĭd'lē) n. pl. rid·leys. 1. A marine turtle (Lepidochelys kempii) of the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic coastal waters. 2. A related species (Lepidochelys olivacea) of the Pacific and Indian oceans. [Origin unknown.]
- Rid·ley (rĭd'lē), Nicholas. 1500?-1555. English prelate who was executed for refusing to renounce his Protestantism after the accession of the Roman Catholic Mary I.
- ri·el (rē-ēl') n. A basic unit of currency in Cambodia. See Table at currency. [Origin unknown.]
- Ri·el (rē-ēl'), Louis. 1844-1885. Canadian insurrectionist who organized the métis settlers of the Red River valley in a rebellion over their land rights (1869). After leading a similar uprising in Saskatchewan (1884-1885), he was captured and executed by Canadian authorities.
- Rie·mann (rē'mən, -män'), Georg Friedrich Bernhard. 1826-1866. German mathematician who was a pioneer of non-Euclidean geometry.
- Rie·mann·ian geometry (rē-män'ē-ən jē-ōm'ī-trē) n. Mathematics. A non-Euclidean system of geometry based on the postulate that within a plane every pair of lines intersects. [After Georg Friedrich Bernhard RIEMANN.]
- Ri·en·zi (rē-ən'zē) or Ri·en·zo (-zō), Cola di. 1313?-1354. Italian revolutionary leader who installed himself as dictator of Rome (1347) but was quickly ousted at the bidding of the pope. In his second attempt to rule (1354), he was killed by a mob.
- Rie·sa (rē'zə, -zä) A city of east-central Germany on the Eibe River east of Leipzig. Chartered in 1623, it is a port and an industrial center. Population, 51,285.
- Ries·ling (rēs'lĭng, rēz'-) n. A dry to sweet white wine similar to Rhine wine. [German, alteration of obsolete Rüssling.]
- Ries·man (rēs'mən), David, Jr. Born 1909. American sociologist whose best-known work is The Lonely Crowd (1950).
- Rif (rĭf) See Er Rif.
- ri·fam·pin (rĭ-făm'pĭn) also ri·fam·pi·cin (-pĭ-sĭn) n. A semisynthetic antibiotic derived from a form of rifamycin that interferes with the synthesis of RNA and is used to treat bacterial and viral diseases. [Blend of rifam(yc)in and P(IPERAZINE).]
- rif·a·my·cin (rĭf'ə-mī'sĭn) n. Any of a group of antibiotics originally isolated from a strain of the soil microorganism Streptomyces mediterranei, used in the treatment of leprosy, tuberculosis, and other bacterial diseases. [Alteration of rifomycin, probably from : Italian riformare, to reform (ri-, again, from Latin re-; see re- + formare, to form from Latin formāre); see REFORM + -MYCIN.]
- rife (rĭf) adj. rif·er, rif·est. 1. In widespread existence, practice, or use; increasingly prevalent. 2. Abundant or numerous. See Synonyms at prevailing. [Middle English, from Old English rȳfe.]

riff (rif) n. 1. Music. A short rhythmic phrase, especially one that is repeated in improvisation. 2. Rapid, clever, often rhythmic speech, as by a disc jockey: “Those little riffs that had seemed to have such sparkle over drinks by the... pool look all too embarrassing in cold print” (John Richardson). — v. intr. riffed, riff-ing, riffs. Music. To play riffs. [Origin unknown.]

Riff or Rif (rif) n. pl. Riff or Riffs also Rif-fi (rif'ē) or Rif or Rifs. 1. A member of any of several Berber peoples inhabiting Er Rif. 2. The Berber language of this people. — Rif'fi-an adj. & n.

rif-fle (rif'əl) n. 1. a. A rocky shoal or sandbar lying just below the surface of a waterway. b. A stretch of choppy water caused by such a shoal or sandbar; a rapid. 2. a. In mining, the sectional stone or wood bottom lining of a sluice, arranged for trapping mineral particles, as of gold. b. A groove or block in such a lining. 3. Games. The act or an instance of shuffling cards. — v. rif-fled, rif-pling, rif-fles. — v. tr. 1. Games. To shuffle (playing cards) by holding part of a deck in each hand and raising up the edges before releasing them to fall alternately in one stack. 2. To thumb through (the pages of a book, for example). — v. intr. 1. Games. To shuffle cards. 2. To become choppy, as water. [Possibly blend of RIPPLE¹, and RUFFLE¹.]

riff-raff (rif'räf') n. 1. People regarded as disreputable or worthless. 2. Rubbish; trash. [Middle English riffe raffe, from rif and raf, one and all, from Anglo-Norman rif et raf, rifle et rafle: Old French rifler, to rifle; see RIFLE² + Old French raffler, to carry off (from raffle, act of seizing); see RAFFLE¹.]

ri-fle¹ (ri'fəl) n. 1. a. A firearm with a rifled bore, designed to be fired from the shoulder. b. An artillery piece or naval gun with such spiral grooves. 2. rifles. Troops armed with rifles. — v. tr. ri-fled, ri-pling, ri-fles. To cut spiral grooves within (a gun barrel, for example). [From rifle, to cut spiral grooves in, from French rifler, from Old French, to plunder, scratch. See RIFLE².]

ri-fle² (ri'fəl) v. ri-fled, ri-pling, ri-fles. — v. tr. 1. To search with intent to steal. 2. To ransack or plunder; pillage. 3. To rob: rifle a safe. — v. intr. To search vigorously: rifling through my drawers to find matching socks. [Middle English riflen, to plunder, from Old French rifler, probably of Germanic origin.] — ri'fler n.

ri-fle·bird (ri'fəl-bûrd') n. Any of several birds of paradise of the genera Craspedophora and Ptiloris of Australia and New Guinea.

ri-fle·man (ri'fəl-mən) n. 1. A soldier equipped with a rifle. 2. A man who shoots a rifle skillfully.

ri-fle·ry (ri'fəl-rē) n. 1. The skill and practice of shooting a gun. 2. Rifle fire: the sound of distant riflery.

ri-fle·scope (ri'fəl-sköp') n. A telescopic sight for a rifle.

ri-pling (ri'fling) n. 1. The process or operation of cutting spiral grooves in a rifle barrel. 2. Grooves cut in a rifle barrel.

rift¹ (rɪft) n. 1. A narrow fissure in rock. 2. A break in friendly relations: a rift between siblings. — v. rift-ed, rift-ing, rifts. — v. intr. To split open; break. — v. tr. To cause to split open or break. [Middle English, of Scandinavian origin.]

rift² (rɪft) n. 1. A shallow area in a waterway. 2. The backwash of a wave that has broken upon a beach. [Probably alteration of dialectal riff, reef, from Dutch rif, riffe. See REEF¹.]

rift valley (rɪft vāl'ē) n. A deep fracture or break, about 25-50 km (15-30 miles) wide, extending along the crest of a mid-ocean ridge.

rift zone (rɪft zōn) n. A large area of the earth in which plates of the earth's crust are moving away from each other, forming an extensive system of fractures and faults.

rig (rɪg) v. tr. rigged, rig-ging, rigs. 1. To provide with a harness or equipment; fit out. 2. Nautical. a. To equip (a ship) with sails, shrouds, and yards. b. To fit (sails or shrouds, for example) to masts and yards. 3. Informal. To dress, clothe, or adorn: They rigged out their daughter in her best dress. 4. To make or construct in haste or in a makeshift manner: rig up a tent for the night. 5. To manipulate dishonestly for personal gain: rig a prizefight; rig stock prices. — n. 1. Nautical. The arrangement of masts, spars, and sails on a sailing vessel. 2. Special equipment or gear used for a particular purpose. See Synonyms at equipment. 3. a. A truck or tractor. b. A tractor-trailer. c. A vehicle with one or more horses harnessed to it. 4. The special apparatus used for drilling oil wells. 5. Western U.S. See saddle (n., sense 1a). 6. Informal. A costume or an outfit: wore an outlandish rig to the office. 7. Fishing tackle. [Middle English riggen, probably of Scandinavian origin; akin to Norwegian rigga, to bind.]

Ri-ga (rē'gə) The capital and largest city of Latvia, in the central part on the Gulf of Riga, an inlet of the Baltic Sea bordering on Latvia and Estonia. Founded as a trading post on a site originally inhabited by Baltic tribes, the city became a member of the Hanseatic League in 1282 and later passed to Poland (1581), Sweden (1621), and Russia (1710). Population, 883,000.

rig-a·doon (rɪg'ə-dōn') n. 1. A lively jumping quickstep for one couple. 2. Music for this dance, usually in rapid duple meter. [French rigaudon, possibly from the name Rigaud.]

rig-a·ma·role (rɪg'ə-mə-rōl') n. Variant of rigmarole.

rig-a-to-ni (rɪg'ə-tō'nē) n. Large, ribbed macaroni, slightly curved and cut into short lengths. [Italian, from rigato, past participle of rigare, to draw a line, from riga, line, of Germanic origin.]

Ri-gel (rī'jəl) n. A bright double star in the constellation Orion. [Arabic rijl, foot.]

rig-ger (rɪg'ər) n. 1. One that rigs: oil and gas riggers. 2. Nautical. A ship with a specific kind of rigging.

rig-ging (rĭg'ĭng) n. 1. Nautical. The system of ropes, chains, and tackle used to support and control the masts, sails, and yards of a sailing vessel. 2. The supporting material for construction work.

Riggs' disease (rĭgz dĭ-zēz') n. Inflammation of the tissues surrounding and supporting the teeth. [After John Mankey Riggs (1810-1885), American dentist.]

right (rĭt) adj. right-er, right-est. Abbr. r., R., rt. 1. Conforming with or conformable to justice, law, or morality: do the right thing and confess. 2. In accordance with fact, reason, or truth; correct: the right answer. 3. Fitting, proper, or appropriate: It is not right to leave the party without saying goodbye. 4. Most favorable, desirable, or convenient: the right time to act. 5. In or into a satisfactory state or condition: put things right. 6. In good mental or physical health or order. 7. Intended to be worn or positioned facing outward or toward an observer: the right side of the dress; made sure that the right side of the fabric was visible. 8. a. Of, belonging to, located on, or being the side of the body to the south when the subject is facing east. b. Of, relating to, directed toward, or located on the right side. c. Located on the right side of a person facing downstream: the right bank of a river. 9. Often Right. Of or belonging to the political or intellectual Right. 10. Mathematics. a. Formed by or in reference to a line or plane that is perpendicular to another line or plane. b. Having the axis perpendicular to the base: right cone. 11. Straight; uncurved; direct: a right line. 12. Archaic. Not spurious; genuine. — n. 1. That which is just, morally good, legal, proper, or fitting. 2. a. The direction or position on the right side. b. The right side. c. The right hand. d. A turn in the direction of the right hand or side. 3. Often Right. a. The people and groups who advocate the adoption of conservative or reactionary measures, especially in government and politics. Also called right wing b. The opinion of those advocating such measures. 4. Sports. A blow delivered by a boxer's right hand. 5. Baseball. Right field. 6. Something that is due to a person or governmental body by law, tradition, or nature: "Certain rights can never be granted to the government, but must be kept in the hands of the people" (Eleanor Roosevelt). 7. A just or legal claim or title. 8. a. A stockholder's privilege of buying additional stock in a corporation at a special price, usually at par or at a price below the current market value. b. The negotiable certificate on which this privilege is indicated. c. Often rights. A privilege of subscribing for a particular stock or bond. — adv. 1. Toward or on the right. 2. In a straight line; directly: went right to school. 3. In the proper or desired manner; well: The jacket doesn't fit right. 4. Exactly; just: The accident happened right over there. 5. Immediately: called me right after dinner. 6. Completely; quite: The icy wind blew right through me. 7. According to law, morality, or justice. 8. Accurately; correctly: answered the question right. 9. Chiefly Southern U.S. Considerably; very: They have a right nice place. 10. Used as an intensive: kept right on going. 11. Used in titles: The Right Reverend Jane Smith. — v. right-ed, right-ing, rights. — v. tr. 1. To put in or restore to an upright or proper position: They righted their boat. 2. To put in order or set right; correct: measures designed to right generations of unfair labor practices. 3. To make reparation or amends for; redress: right a wrong. — v. intr. To regain an upright or proper position.

—idioms. by rights. In a just or proper manner; justly. in (one's) own right. Through the force of one's own skills or qualifications. right and left. From all directions or on every side: criticism coming right and left; questions raised from right and left. to rights. In a satisfactory or orderly condition: set the place to rights. [Middle English, from Old English riht. See reg- in Appendix.] —right'er n.

SYNONYMS: right, privilege, prerogative, perquisite, birthright. These nouns apply to something, such as a power or possession, to which one has an established claim. Right refers to a legally, morally, or traditionally just claim: “I’m a champion for the Rights of Woman” (Maria Edgeworth). “An unconditional right to say what one pleases about public affairs is what I consider to be the minimum guarantee of the First Amendment” (Hugo L. Black). “Our children are not individuals whose rights and tastes are casually respected from infancy, as they are in some primitive societies” (Ruth Benedict). Privilege usually suggests a right not enjoyed by everyone: “When the laws undertake to... grant... exclusive privileges, to make the rich richer and the potent more powerful, the humble members of society... have a right to complain of the injustice of their government” (Andrew Jackson). Prerogative denotes an exclusive right or privilege, as one based on custom, law, office, or recognition of precedence: It is my prerogative to change my mind. A perquisite is a privilege or advantage accorded to one by virtue of one's position or the needs of one's employment: “The wardrobe of her niece was the perquisite of her [maid]” (Tobias Smollett). A birthright is a right to which one is entitled by birth: Many view gainful employment as a birthright.

right angle (rīt äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. An angle formed by the perpendicular intersection of two straight lines; an angle of 90°.

right-an-gled (rīt'äng'gəld) adj. Forming or containing one or more right angles: a right-angled bend.

right ascension (rīt ə-sĕn'shən) n. Abbr. R.A. Astronomy. The angular distance of a celestial body or point on the celestial sphere, measured eastward from the vernal equinox along the celestial equator to the hour circle of the body or point and expressed in degrees or hours.

right away (rīt ə-wā') adv. Without delay; at once.

Right Bank (rīt băngk) A district of Paris on the northern, or right, bank of the Seine River. The Arc de Triomphe, the Elysée Palace, the Louvre, fashionable shopping boulevards, and the picturesque area of Montmartre are on the Right Bank.

right brain (rīt brān) n. The cerebral hemisphere to the right of the corpus callosum, controlling the left side of the body.

right circular cone (rīt sūr'kyə-lər kōn) n. Mathematics. The surface generated by a generator passing through a vertex that lies on the perpendicular axis of a circular directrix.

righteous (rī'chəs) adj. 1. Morally upright; without guilt or sin: a righteous woman. 2. In accordance with virtue or morality: a righteous judgment.

3. Morally justifiable: righteous anger. See Synonyms at moral. — n. Righteous people considered as a group. [Middle English ryghtuous, alteration of riht-wise, from Old English rihtwīs: riht, right; see RIGHT + -wīse, -wise.]

—righteous-ly adv. —righteous-ness n.

right face (rīt fās) n. A military command to turn 90 degrees to the right.

right field (rīt fēld) n. Abbr. RF Baseball. a. The third of the outfield that is to the right, looking from home plate. b. The position played by the right fielder.

right fielder (rīt fēl'dər) n. Abbr. RF Baseball. The player who defends right field.

right-ful (rīt'fəl) adj. 1. Right or proper; just. 2. Having a just or proper claim: Return this dog to its rightful owner. 3. Held or owned by just or proper claim: This land is my rightful property. —rightful-ly adv. —rightful-ness n.

right-hand (rīt'händ') adj. Abbr. r.h., RH 1. Of, relating to, or located on the right. 2. Relating to, designed for, or done with the right hand. 3. Most helpful or reliable: my right-hand assistant.

right-handed (rīt'hänn'dīd) adj. 1. a. Using the right hand more skillfully or easily than the left. b. Sports. Swinging from the right to the left: a right-handed batter. 2. a. Done with the right hand. b. Intended for wear on or use by the right hand: a right-handed pair of scissors. 3. Turning or spiraling from left to right; clockwise. — adv. 1. With the right hand. 2. Sports. From left to right: swings right-handed. —right-hand-ed-ly adv. —right-hand-ed-ness n.

right-hand-er (rīt'hänn'dər) n. One who is right-handed.

right-ish (rīt'tīsh) adj. Tending toward the political right.

right-ism also Right-ism (rīt'tīz'əm) n. 1. The ideology of the political right. 2. Belief in or support of the tenets of the political right. —right-ist n.

right-ly (rīt'lē) adv. 1. In a correct manner; properly: act rightly. 2. With honesty; justly. 3. Informal. Really: I don't rightly know.

right-mind-ed (rīt'mīn'dīd) adj. Having ideas and views based on what is right or intended to be right. —right-mind-ed-ness n.

right-most (rīt'mōst') adj. Farthest to the right: in the rightmost lane of the highway.

right-ness (rīt'nīs) n. The state or quality of being right.

right of asylum (rīt ūv ə-sī'ləm) n. pl. rights of asylum. Law. The right of receiving protection within a foreign embassy or other place recognized by custom, law, or treaty.

right off (rīt ôf) adv. Right away; immediately.

right of search (rīt ūv sûrch) n. pl. rights of search. Law. The right of a warring nation to stop a neutral vessel on the high seas and search it for contraband.

right of way also right-of-way (rīt'əv-wā') n. pl. rights of way or right of ways also rights-of-way (rīts'-) or right-of-ways (-wāz'). 1. Law.

a. The right to pass over property owned by another party. b. The path or thoroughfare on which such passage is made. 2. The strip of land over which facilities such as highways, railroads, or power lines are built. 3. The customary or legal right of a person, vessel, or vehicle to pass in front of another.

right on (rīt ɔn) interj. Slang. Used as an exclamation of encouragement, support, or enthusiastic agreement.

right-on (rīt'ɔn', -ɔn') adj. Slang. 1. Up-to-date and sophisticated.

2. Absolutely right; perfectly true.

right-out (rīt'out') adj. Chiefly Southern U.S. Outright. See Regional note at everwhere.

right-side up (rīt'sīd' ūp) adv. & adj. 1. a. With the top facing upward: Keep this box right-side up. b. In or into the correct orientation: Turn the slides right-side up in the projector. 2. In or into a condition of order: Get this house right-side up before any guests arrive. The President wants to put the economy right-side up.

right stuff (rīt stūf) n. Informal. Essential or requisite qualities, such as self-confidence, courage, stability, dependability, organizational skills, and technical knowledge, appropriate for application in a given field or situation: "Passengers as well as pilots need the right stuff" (Jonathan Dahl). "We have the right stuff—a liberal arts, undergraduate, teaching-centered institution of higher education" (Robert A. Spivey).

right-to-die (rīt'tə-dī') adj. Advocating or expressing, as in a living will, a person's right to refuse extraordinary life-sustaining measures intended to prolong life artificially when the person is deemed by his or her physicians to be terminally or incurably ill.

right-to-know (rīt'tə-nō') adj. Of or relating to policies and laws that make some governmental records and other information available to a person who can demonstrate a right or need to know the contents.

right-to-life (rīt'tə-līf') adj. Pro-life.

right-to-lif-er (rīt'tə-lī'fər) n. One whose beliefs or actions are informed by a pro-life philosophy.

right-to-work law (rīt'tə-wûrk' lô) n. A state law that prohibits required union membership of workers.

right triangle (rīt trī'äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. A triangle containing an angle of 90°.

right-ward (rīt'wərd) adv. & adj. To or on the right.

right whale (rīt hwāl) n. Any of several whales of the family Balaenidae, characterized by a large head, whalebone plates in the mouth, and absence of a dorsal fin.

right wing (rīt wīng) n. 1. The conservative or reactionary faction of a group.

2. See right (n., sense 3a). —right'-wing' (rīt'wīng') adj. —right'-wing'er n.

right-y (rīt'tē) Informal. n. pl. right-ies. 1. A right-handed person. 2. An advocate or a member of the political right. — adv. With the right hand or in a right-handed manner: throws righty; eats righty.

rig-id (rīj'id) adj. 1. Not flexible or pliant; stiff. 2. Not moving; fixed.

3. Marked by a lack of flexibility; rigorous and exacting: “We have watered down a rigid training... until we now have an educational diet in many of our public high schools that nourishes neither the classes nor the masses” (Agnes Meyer).

4. Scrupulously maintained or performed: rigid discipline. See Synonyms at stiff. [Middle English rigide, from Latin rigidus, from rigēre, to be stiff. See reig- in Appendix.] —rig'id-ly adv. —rig'id-ness n.

ri-gid-i-ty (rī-jīd'ī-tē) n. pl. ri-gid-i-ties. 1. The quality or state of being rigid.

2. An instance of being rigid.

rig-ma-role (rīg'mə-rōl') also rig-a-ma-role (-ə-mə-rōl') n. 1. Confused, rambling, or incoherent discourse; nonsense. 2. A complicated, petty set of procedures. [Alteration of obsolete ragman roll, catalog, from Middle English rag-mane rolle, scroll used in Ragman, a game of chance, perhaps from : Anglo-Norman Ragemon le bon, Ragemon the Good, title of a set of verses about a character of this name + Middle English rolle, list (from Old French, from Latin rotula, wheel); see ROLL.]

rig-or (rīg'ər) n. 1. Strictness or severity, as in temperament, action, or judgment. 2. A harsh or trying circumstance; hardship. See Synonyms at difficulty.

3. A harsh or cruel act. 4. Medicine. Shivering or trembling, as caused by a chill.

5. Physiology. A state of rigidity in living tissues or organs that prevents response to stimuli. 6. Obsolete. Stiffness or rigidity. [Middle English rigour, from Old French, from Latin rigor, from rigēre, to be stiff. See reig- in Appendix.]

rig-or-ism (rīg'ə-rīz'əm) n. Harshness or strictness in conduct, judgment, or practice. —rig'or-ist n. —rig'or-is'tic adj.

rigor mor-tis (rīg'ər mōr'tis) n. Muscular stiffening following death. [Latin : rigor, stiffness + mortis, genitive of mors, death.]

rig-or-ous (rĭg'ər-əs) adj. 1. Characterized by or acting with rigor: a rigorous program to restore physical fitness. 2. Full of rigors; harsh: a rigorous climate. 3. Rigidly accurate; precise. See Synonyms at burdensome. —rig'or-ous-ly adv. —rig'or-ous-ness n.

rig-our (rĭg'ər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of rigor.

Rig-Ve-da (rĭg-vā'də, -vĕ'də) n. The most ancient collection of Hindu sacred verses. [Sanskrit ṛgvedaḥ : ṛk, verse, sacred text + vedaḥ, knowledge, veda; see weid- in Appendix.]

Riis (rēs), Jacob August. 1849-1914. Danish-born American journalist and reformer whose reports on living conditions in city slums led to improvements in housing and education.

Ri-je-ka (rē-yĕk'ə) Formerly Fi-u-me (fyōō'mā, -mĕ). A city on the Adriatic Sea west-southwest of Zagreb. Held at various times by Austria, Croatia, France, and Hungary, it was seized by Italian irregulars in 1919. The Treaty of Rapallo between Italy and Yugoslavia (1920) guaranteed its status as an independent city, although it was formally annexed by Italy four years later. In 1947 the city was officially transferred to Yugoslavia. Population, 160,300.

rijst-taf-fel also rijs-ta-fel or rijs-taf-fel (rĭs'tä'fəl) n. A dish originating in Indonesia in which a wide variety of foods and sauces are served with rice. [Dutch : Middle Dutch rijs (from Old French ris); see RICE + Dutch tafel, table (from Middle Dutch tafele, from Vulgar Latin tavola*, from Latin tabula, tablet, board).]

Rijs-wijk (rĭs'vĭk) also Rys-wick (rĭz'wĭk) A city of western Netherlands, a suburb of The Hague. The Treaty of Ryswick (1697) ended the War of the Grand Alliance between England and France and acknowledged William of Orange as William III of England. Population, 49,790.

Riks-mål (rĭks'môl', rĕks'-) n. See Dano-Norwegian. [Norwegian : riks, genitive of rik, realm (from Old Norse rīki); see reg- in Appendix + mål, speech (from Old Norse māl).]

rile (rĭl) v. tr. riled, ril-ing, riles. 1. To stir to anger. See Synonyms at annoy. 2. To stir up (liquid); roil. [Variant of ROIL.]

rile-y (rĭ'lĕ) adj. 1. Stirred up emotionally; upset. 2. Roiled; turbid.

Ri-ley (rĭ'lĕ), James Whitcomb. 1849-1916. American poet whose most famous works, "Little Orphant Annie" (1885) and "The Raggedy Man" (1890), were written in an Indiana dialect.

Ril-ke (rĭl'kə), Rainer Maria. 1875-1926. German poet whose verse, often marked by a mystic lyricism and precise imagery, profoundly influenced 20th-century German literature. His collections include The Book of Hours (1905) and The Duino Elegies (1923).

rill also rille (rĭl) n. 1. A small brook; a rivulet. 2. A long, narrow, straight valley on the moon's surface. [Low German rille, or Dutch ril, running stream; see rei- in Appendix.]

rill-et (rĭl'it) n. A small rill.

rim (rĭm) n. 1. The border, edge, or margin of an object. See Synonyms at border. 2. The circular outer part of a wheel, furthest from the axle. 3. A circular metal structure around which a wheel tire is fitted. — v. tr. rimmed, rim-ming, rims. 1. To furnish with a rim. 2. Sports. To roll around the rim of (a basket or golf cup, for example) without falling in. [Middle English, from Old English rima.]

Rim-baud (rām-bō', rāN-), Jean Nicholas Arthur. 1854-1891. French poet whose hallucinatory work had a strong influence on the surrealists.

rime¹ (rĭm) n. 1. A coating of ice, as on grass and trees, formed when extremely cold water droplets freeze almost instantly on a cold surface. 2. A coating, as of mud or slime, likened to a frosty film: "A meal couldn't leave us feeling really full unless it laid down a rime of fat globules in our mouths and stomachs" (James Fallows). — v. tr. rimed, rim-ing, rimes. To cover with or as if with frost or ice: "had identical shoes, heavy and rimed with mud and cement, because they had come from the building site" (Seamus Deane). [Middle English rim, from Old English hrīm.] — rim'y adj.

rime² (rĭm) n. & v. Variant of rhyme.

rim-er (rĭ'mər) n. Variant of rhym-er.

rime riche (rēm rēsh') n. pl. rimes riches (rēm rēsh'). Rhyme using words or parts of words that are pronounced identically but have different meanings, for example, write-right or port-deport. Also called identical rhyme [French : rime, rhyme + riche, rich.]

rime-ster (rĭm'stər) n. Variant of rhym-ester.

Ri-mi-ni (rĭm'ə-nē) A city of northern Italy on the Adriatic Sea south-southeast of Ravenna. Founded by Umbrians, it became a strategic Roman military base after the third century B.C. Rimini was ruled as part of the Papal States from 1509 to 1860. Population, 126,949.

Rim-i-ni (rĭm'ĭ-nē, rē'mē-), Francesca da. See Francesca da Rimini.

ri-mose (rĭ'mōs', rī-mōs') adj. Full of chinks, cracks, or crevices. [Latin rīmōsus, from rīma, fissure.] — ri'mose-ly adv. — ri-mos'i-ty (-mōs'ĭ-tē) n.

Ri-mous-ki (rĭ-mōō'skē) A city of southern Quebec, Canada, on the St. Lawrence River northeast of Quebec. It is a port and processing center. Population, 29,120.

rim-ple (rĭm'pəl) n. A fold; a wrinkle. — v. tr. intr. rim-pled, rim-pling, rim-ples. To wrinkle or form wrinkles. [Middle English rimpil, from Old English hrympel.]

Rim-ski-Kor-sa-kov or Rim-sky-Kor-sa-kov (rĭm'skĕ-kôr'să-kôf'), Nikolai Andreyevich. 1844-1908. Russian composer whose operas and orchestral works were heavily influenced by traditional folk music.

rind (rĭnd) n. A tough outer covering such as bark, the skin of some fruits, or the coating on cheese or bacon. [Middle English, from Old English.]

rin-der-pest (rĭn'dər-pĕst') n. An acute, often fatal, contagious viral disease, chiefly of cattle, characterized by ulceration of the alimentary tract and resulting in diarrhea. [German : Rinder, genitive pl. of Rind, head of cattle, ox (from Middle High German rint, from Old High German hrind); see ker-¹ in Appendix + Pest, plague (from Latin pestis).]

Rine-hart (rĭn'härt'), Mary Roberts. 1876-1958. American writer known for her mysteries, including The Circular Staircase (1908) and The Door (1930).

rin-for-zan-do (rĕn'fôr-tsăn'dō) adj. Music. With a sudden increase of emphasis. Used chiefly as a direction. [Italian, present participle of rinforzare, to reinforce, strengthen : ri-, again (from Latin re-); see RE- + inforzare, to enforce, make strong (from Old French enforcier); see ENFORCE.]

ring¹ (rĭng) n. 1. A circular object, form, or arrangement with a vacant circular center. 2. A small circular band, generally made of precious metal and often set with jewels, worn on the finger. 3. A circular band used for carrying, holding, or containing something: a napkin ring. 4. A circular movement or course, as in dancing. 5. An enclosed, usually circular area in which exhibitions, sports, or contests take place: a circus ring. 6. Sports. a. A rectangular arena set off by stakes and ropes in which boxing or wrestling events are held. b. The sport of boxing. 7. Games. a. An enclosed area in which bets are placed at a racetrack. b. Bookmakers considered as a group. 8. An exclusive group of people acting privately or illegally to advance their own interests: a drug ring. 9. A political contest; a race. 10. Botany. An annual ring. 11. Mathematics. The area between two concentric circles; annulus. 12. Mathematics. A set of elements subject to the operations of addition and multiplication, in which the set is commutative under addition and associative under multiplication and in which the two operations are related by distributive laws. 13. Any of the turns constituting a spiral or helix. 14. Chemistry. A group of atoms linked by bonds that may be represented graphically in circular or triangular form. In this sense, also called closed chain — v. ringed, ring-ing, rings. — v. tr. 1. To surround with or as if with a ring; encircle. See Synonyms at surround. 2. To form into a ring or rings. 3. To ornament or supply with a ring or rings: ringed the door knocker with a wreath of holly. 4. To remove a circular strip of bark around the circumference of (a tree trunk or branch); girdle. 5. To put a ring in the nose of (an animal). 6. To hem in (animals) by riding in a circle around them. 7. Games. To toss a ring over (a peg), as in horseshoes. — v. intr. 1. To form a ring or rings: Spectators ringed the intersection. 2. To move, run, or fly in a spiral or circular course. [Middle English, from Old English hring. See sker² in Appendix.]

ring² (rĭng) v. rang (rǎng), rung (rŭng), ring-ing, rings. — v. intr. 1. To give forth a clear, resonant sound. 2. To cause something to ring. 3. To sound a bell in order to summon someone: I'll ring for the maid. 4. To have a sound or character suggestive of a particular quality: a story that rings true. 5. To be filled with sound; resound: The room rang with the laughter of happy children. 6. To hear a persistent humming or buzzing: My ears were ringing from the sound of the blast. 7. To be filled with talk or rumor: The whole town rang with the bad news. — v. tr. 1. To cause (a bell, for example) to ring. 2. To produce (a sound) by or as if by ringing. 3. To announce, proclaim, or signal by or as if by ringing: a clock that rings the hour. 4. To call (someone) on the telephone: She rang me at noon. 5. To test (a coin, for example) for quality by the sound it produces when struck against something. — n. 1. The sound created by a bell or another sonorous, vibrating object. 2. A loud sound, especially one that is repeated or continued. 3. A telephone call: Give me a ring when you have time. 4. A suggestion of a particular quality: His offer has a suspicious ring. 5. A set of bells. 6. The act or an instance of sounding a bell. — phrasal verb. ring up. 1. To record, especially by means of a cash register: ring up a sale. 2. To accomplish or achieve; win: rang up several consecutive victories. — idioms. ring a bell. Informal. To arouse an often indistinct memory. ring down the curtain. To end a performance, an event, or an action. ring (someone's) chimes (or ring (someone's) bells). Slang. To knock (an opponent) out by physical or other force. ring up the curtain. To begin a performance, an event, or an action. [Middle English ringen, from Old English hringan.]

ring-bill (rĭng'bĭl') n. See ring-necked duck.

ring-billed gull (rĭng'bĭld' gŭl) n. A North American gull (Larus delawarensis) having a black ring around its bill.

ring-bolt (rĭng'bŏlt') n. A bolt having a ring fitted through its eye.

ring-bone (rĭng'bŏn') n. A bony growth on the fetlock, pastern, or coffin bone of a horse's foot, usually causing lameness.

ring buoy (rĭng bŏŏ'ē) n. Nautical. A life preserver in the shape of a ring.

ring-dove (rĭng'dŭv') n. 1. An Old World pigeon (Streptopelia risoria) having black markings forming a half circle on the neck. 2. See wood pigeon.

ringed (rĭngd) adj. 1. Wearing or marked with a ring or rings. 2. Encircled or surrounded by bands or rings. 3. Zoology. Formed from segmented rings; annulate.

ringed plover (rĭngd plŭv'ər) n. A plump species of plover (Charadrius hiaticula) that breeds in northern regions of the world.

ringed seal (rĭngd sēl) n. An Arctic seal (Phoca hispida) having white, ring-shaped markings on the sides of the body.

- rin·gent (rĭn'jənt) adj. Biology. Having gaping liplike parts, as the corolla of some flowers or the shells of certain bivalves. [Latin ringēns, ringent- present participle of ringĭ, to open the mouth wide.]
- ring·er¹ (rĭng'ər) n. Games. A horseshoe or quoit thrown so that it encircles the peg.
- ring·er² (rĭng'ər) n. 1. One that rings, especially one that sounds a bell or chime. 2. Slang. A contestant entered dishonestly into a competition. 3. Slang. One who bears a striking resemblance to another: a ringer for his father.
- Ring·er's solution (rĭng'ərz sə-lōō'shən) also Ring·er solution (-ər) n. An aqueous solution of the chlorides of sodium, potassium, and calcium that is isotonic to animal tissue and is used topically as a physiological saline and, in experiments, to bathe animal tissues. [After Sydney Ringer (1835-1910), British physician.]
- ring finger (rĭng fĭng'gər) n. The third finger of the left hand.
- ring·git (rĭng'gĭt) n. A basic unit of currency in Malaysia. See Table at currency. [Malay.]
- ring·hals (rĭng'häls') n. pl. ring·hals-es. An African snake (Hemachatus haemachatus) that spits venom at the eyes of an attacker, sometimes causing blindness. Also called spitting cobra [Obsolete Afrikaans : ring, ring (from Middle Dutch ring); see sker-² in Appendix + hals, neck (from Middle Dutch); see k^wel-¹ in Appendix.]
- ring knocker (rĭng nŏk'ər) n. Slang. A commissioned, nonreservist officer, especially in the U.S. Army, who is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point.
- ring·lead·er (rĭng'lē'dər) n. A person who leads others, especially in illicit or informal activities.
- ring·let (rĭng'lĭt) n. 1. A long, spirally curled lock of hair. 2. A small circle or ring. —ring·let·ed adj.
- Ring·ling (rĭng'lĭng), Charles. 1863-1926. American circus owner. With his brothers he formed (1882) a song-and-dance troop that evolved into the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus (1907).
- ring·mas·ter (rĭng'mäs'tər) n. A person, especially a man, in charge of the performances in a circus ring.
- Ring Nebula (rĭng nĕb'yə-lə) n. A planetary nebula in the constellation Lyra.
- ring-necked duck (rĭng'nĕkt' dŭk) n. A North American duck (Aythya collaris) having a distinctive light ring behind the tip of the bill and, in the male, a light chestnut ring around the neck. Also called ring-bill
- ring-necked pheasant (rĭng'nĕkt' fĕz'ənt) n. A widely distributed bird (Phasianus colchicus) native to the Old World, the male of which has a long pointed tail, brightly colored plumage, and a white ring around the neck.

ring-neck snake (rɪŋg'nek' snāk) also ring-necked snake (-nēkt') n. Any of several small nonvenomous snakes of the genus Diadophis, having a bright reddish or yellowish underside and a yellow or orange ring around the neck, widespread in the United States and Central America.

Ring of Fire (rɪŋ ũv fɪr) n. An extensive zone of volcanic and seismic activity that coincides roughly with the borders of the Pacific Ocean.

ring-side (rɪŋ'sɪd') n. 1. Sports. The area or seats immediately outside an arena or a ring, as at a prizefight. 2. A place providing a close view of a spectacle. — n. attributive. Often used as an attributive: ringside tickets; a ringside seat.

ring-tail (rɪŋ'tāl') n. A ring-tailed animal, such as the cacomistle and the raccoon.

ring-tailed (rɪŋ'tāld') adj. 1. Having a tail with ringlike markings. 2. Having a tail that curls to form a ring.

ring-worm (rɪŋg'wūrm') n. Any of a number of contagious skin diseases caused by several related fungi, characterized by ring-shaped, scaly, itching patches on the skin.

